FEE SAYS HIS COLLEAGUES WERE CRITICIZING SELVES

Referring to the statement by Commissioners J. R. Burnett and Joe Clements published recently in the Cisco Daily News, Commissioner George D. Fee today made the following statement for publication:

"I do not want to enter any newspaper controversy with other members of the city commission but it appears to me that I should make public some statement with respect to part of an article that appeared recently in the Cisco Daily News over the names of Mr. J. R. Burnett and Mr. Joe Clements. The statement referred to my appointment by the commission as delinquent tax collector and criticized that appointment on the ground that the work could have been done by regular city employees without the expense of employing a collector."

"First, let me say that I do not see any reason why the two commissioners should have brought this matter up because it has been a standing custom with the city to make a contract with a citizen for the collection of these delinquent taxes and because, further, that no expense is incurred by the city in paying the collector. A penalty is added to all delinquent taxes due to the city for the sole purpose of paying the expense of collecting them, while interest is charged on all delinquent taxes to pay the city for carrying them. As collector I am paid for my services out of the taxes assessed and get none of the taxes or the interest thereon."

"Second, Mr. Burnett and Mr. Clements in criticizing my appointment as delinquent tax collector, were criticizing their own action. A section of the minutes of the meeting of the city commission on August 26, 1931, reads:

"Moved by Mr. Donovan, seconded by Mr. Clements that Commissioner George D. Fee be appointed to collect delinquent taxes. Carried."

"Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Burnett, that the compensation of Commissioner Fee as delin-

THREE U. S. JUDGES SIT AT HOUSTON

HOUSTON, Jan. 6.—Martial law was declared in the east Texas oil field not for the purpose of keeping peace as Governor Sterling and Brig.-Gen. Jacob F. Wolters have testified but to regulate the production of oil, a federal judge remarked from the bench today.

Circuit Judge Joe C. Hutchison, Jr., and District Judges Randolph Bryant and W. I. Grubb are hearing a case which will determine the validity of martial law in the oil field.

"I want to say that to my mind martial law is nothing more nor less than an attempt to regulate the production of oil and that there is no equivocation about it," Judge Bryant said.

POLICE OF HOUSTON TO GET REWARD

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 6.—Prosecutor Dan Nee was convicted today of killing two men—Harry and Jennings Young, dead by their own guns in Houston, Texas—were in the barricaded farm house near here when six Springfield peace officers were slain.

Previously it was believed that at least four men, poured forth the deadly fire which killed Sheriff Marcell Hendrix and five others and wounded three more last Saturday.

Nee planned to press charges against six relatives of the dead brothers.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

WENT ABOUT DOING GOOD:—And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.—Matthews 4: 23.

DITCH IT FOR THE TIME.

Democratic National Chairman Raskob is having a pretty trying time getting his political horses to pulling in the same harness. With the way nicely paved for a democratic victory in 1932, the crafty chairman is faced with the problem of balancing two wings of the party on the delicate prohibition issue. The southern wing is generally pro and the northern wing anti and between the two some happy balance must be struck that will prevent the party splitting off into separate organizations that would be just what the harassed administration faction is hoping for. There are plenty of democrats who would be only too glad to pay Mr. Raskob off and be rid of him but Mr. Raskob knows the value of his mortgage and it takes lots of money to run a campaign, particularly a national campaign. So the clumsy, unwieldy old wagon must be jockeyed about over a great deal of rough territory in an effort to get it, altogether, into a favorable position for dashing down the national racetrack ahead of the sadly crippled elephant.

Mr. Raskob comes forward with another effort to amalgamate divergent party opinion on the prohibition question and unify the organization for the campaign this year. He proposes a "home rule" amendment to the national constitution as a substitute for the eighteenth amendment and urges the party to adopt this as a plank in a platform upon which all the principal elements can find common footing.

Mr. Raskob must have his prohibition question. The country is in the throes of a depression, the national treasury deficit is already a billion and a quarter dollars and rising like the mercury in a laundry drying room, millions upon millions are being raised to feed jobless who have lost staggering billions in payrolls, the oil business is in a mess, wheat, cotton and corn are selling for less than the cost of production and piling up rotting mountains of surplus, taxation is crushing out the initiative and making draft horses out of the American people but Mr. Raskob is terribly concerned about the prohibition question. There never was a better time than now to drop this controversial issue and get down to the brass tacks of a common sense program that will give the party a chance to place itself in power and initiate a legislative program of relief and reconstruction. The American public is not so much interested in what it is going to drink today as it is interested in what it is going to eat and wear.

The national budget is over four billions of dollars and the estimated income is only about half that sum. The deficit at the end of the current fiscal year will total upwards of two and one-quarter billions. Just to prevent its increasing above that vast sum additional taxes must be levied upon the already over-burdened public. The democratic party can think of a lot of things more important to the interests of the country than this prohibition question which, no matter how earnestly Mr. Raskob and his cohorts attempt to sugar-coat, is going to disrupt the organization and likely ruin whatever excellent chances the party has to install itself in the seats of power under the big dome.

THE INEVITABLE END.

Two more desperadoes who dared law and order have come to a gruesome and infamous end. Harry and Jennings Young, brothers in blood and in crime, murdered six Missouri officers who sought to arrest them in an isolated farm house, traced a fugitive trail across the southwest to a hiding place in Houston and there, rather than face the consequences of their deeds or give the guns of the law the satisfaction of accounting for them, stood face to face as they confronted arrest and shot each other to death.

Crime, no matter how well organized, sooner or later will succumb to justice. Al Capone's hoodlum gangs ruled the Chicago underworld with blood and iron and even dominated the Chicago municipal machinery to a large extent. So well organized was his underworld machinery, so efficiently did it operate as a law beneath and beyond the law that Capone and his henchmen strutted in open defiance of the government. Now he is preparing to serve a long term in Leavenworth, there to join others of his disillusioned gangs, while the organization he built up is tottering on the brink of disruption.

There may be instances where a man or a woman can get by with a crime but if he or she makes crime a business the end is inevitably the same. The criminal can't beat the public.

OTHER OPINIONS

TO MAKE MONEY SERVE FAIRLY

The scatter money seems the more attention people pay to its part in human affairs. Is there a solid shortage? Is money doing its work? Has something gone wrong with finance and credit? Is the money system responsible for economic cycles, unemployment and wide fluctuations of buying power? These and similar questions are asked with a crescendo of interest when business falls into prolonged stagnation.

Nations today are inquiring more deeply than ever to find what connection exists between the institution of money and the wellbeing of their citizens. Finally, the question usually crystallizes into some such form as: "Can an ordered control of the financial system—particularly of the volume of money and credit—smooth out the business cycle so as to stabilize employment business and the value of money?" A letter from a Monitor reader in Australia, printed on this page, indicates the extent and earnestness of these questionings.

Those who offer panaceas in this field usually proceed upon what is called the quantity theory of money, namely, that the general level of prices will go up or down more or less in proportion with the volume of money and credit in cir-ulation. From this it is supposed that the governments of the principal nations, through the mints and the large central banks of those nations, could keep price levels, and consequently business, fairly well stabilized by pumping money and credit out into the channels of trade to counteract a tendency toward business recession, and by drawing it back into their vaults to take the wind out of the sails of an incipient boom.

The theory is simple. The trouble is that it is too simple. It assumes that the volume of money and credit in use—and the velocity at which they circulate—determine the level of prices and correspondingly stimulate or retard business. But it is almost certainly true, on the contrary, that the activity of business—of production and buying—affects the level of prices and determines to some extent the volume and velocity of money and credit circulation. Which is the cause and which the effect is a tangled question of action and interaction.

Nevertheless, it is fairly well established that within certain limits the banking system in general, led by the central banks, such as the Federal Reserve Bank, Bank of England, Bank of France, and so on—can—if they will cooperate properly—encourage business enterprise by a freer credit policy or discourage business recklessnes by more conservative action. But there are limits to this influence. In the midst of deflation, when credit support is needed, the banks can make no more loan than business men wish to take, and they must keep funds doubly liquid to withstand possible runs in boom, when credit should be constricted, the bank cannot easily prevent private interests from making loans where they refuse, and Federal Reserve or other central bank officials—on account of criticism if they counsel moderation.

In fact, the mental characteristics of boom times include not only an over-confidence based on monetary prosperity, but also an absorption in material wealth-getting and in material enjoyments. Frequently there is among the hyperprosperous at such times an obliviousness to the still existing hardships of others outside the midas circle. Finally an undue reliance is placed on the physical processes of business and industry to supply all human wants—when the greatest of these wants are intellectual and spiritual.

Consequently, when this structure tumbles into confusion, there is a breakdown not merely of business but also of a certain degree of faith. That is the worst of what men call depression. It is comparatively easy now to look back and say that too much elation over the prospects of early 1929 led to the disintegration of 1930 and 1931. But it is just as true—and should be emphasized—that by unreasoning dejection over present disappointments many today are missing themselves more susceptible to the handshaking of a future inflation. To lose sight of the enduring values inherent in men and their surroundings is equally a mistake, whether because the eyes are fastened on a material bubble or because they are filled with futile tears at its bursting.

Fundamentally, the hope of establishing a fairer system of money, a medium of exchange which will embody a more stable unit of value, rests upon the achievement in individual and public thought of a more stable sense of values—paradoxically enough, a sense of values not measured by money. Only upon such a basis can an improvement of the mere mechanics of the money system accomplish substantial benefits. But with such a foundation the necessary improvement in the nation's fiscal organization may rightly be expected.

In short, the question how far a revised organization of money and credit might be able to stabilize the economic affairs of men bears in close analogy to the question how far governments can actually govern. Abraham Lincoln said, "Public sentiment is everything. With public sentiment, nothing can fail; without it, nothing can succeed." Forms of administration and forms of finance are but means to certain ends. There is merit in choosing means best suited to the end. But in achieving stable money, as in achieving stable government, the force that impels and completes the accomplishment is a stable public sense of values.—Christian Science Monitor

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

The building of permanent roads is not only a matter of convenience, but a matter of straight economy.

Good roads are essential to the development of any community. A growing community must have good roads radiating in every direction or lapse back to where it was in the beginning. Many sections stand between good roads and ruin. On account of poor roads, many rural sections are practically isolated from their natural trading points. Good roads mean better business, better markets, a better relationship between the city and rural sections, and a growing community.

Poor roads hold back production, immigration, development of schools and churches. In sections where good roads are not first in the thoughts of the business farmers and city business men means that the lack of energy, intelligence, progressiveness and far-sightedness of these men are holding back from the community things that would prove of incalculable benefit to its social and commercial life.

Live community builders, through clouds and sunshine, depression and prosperity, stand fast in the faith of better things for the home community.

Every citizen is either for or against his community. If he is for it, he should boost and work for it.

SOUTHWESTERN CAGE SCRAMBLE IS BEGINNING

By IRVING ISRAEL.

AUSTIN, Jan. 6.—The hectic scramble for basketball honors in the 1932 Southwest Conference cage auspiciously begins this week with six member quintets prepared to shoot their repertoire of basketball tricks against each other and never before in the conference history of this popular winter sport has the question of "favorite to cop the title" so bewildered sport followers as this year.

Although the Texas Christian university Horned Toad are defending champions and have practically the same crop of basketballers this year, the Arkansas Razorbacks and the Southern Methodist Mustangs have powerful teams. On top of this, the Baylor Bears have assumed the dark horse role, and the Texas Longhorns, the Rice Owls, and the Texas Aggies have teams of the calibre which so generally creates that minor catastrophe of sport known as upsetting the dope.

After one week of constant play in which they won four and lost one pre-game, our Longhorns train for Fayetteville and meet the Arkansas Razorbacks this week to inaugurate the conference season on Friday night. The two teams again battle it out Saturday, the following night. In these two frayings the Longhorns' capabilities of playing under heavy fire will be tested to the straining point, for the Arkansas club is determined to regain the laurels lost last year to T. C. U. after an undisputed reign of six years. Coach Ed Olle will in all likelihood rely upon Captain "Bull" Elkins, John Tullis, Ed Price, Bill Kubricht, and Benay Rundell to make his conference debut a successful one. Wyatt Taylor, Glenn Thompson, Paul Wittman, Floyd Garrett and Ronald Fagan will also give some material aid to the Steers.

Four more conference basketball clubs swing into action for the initial time Saturday night. Texas A. & M. and Rice university tangle up at Houston in a game that will help decide the conference champion. This possibilities of each. The third member, and one considered by many to be the most important of the three bring together the current champions, T. C. U. and the conference's dark one, Baylor university. This game, played at Waco, will also shape the course of these two teams in the race.

The Southern Methodist Mustangs do not mix up with any conference foe until next week when our Steers play host to them.

STEERS START CAGE SEASON WITH PORKERS

AUSTIN, Jan. 6.—A long trip and a pair of strenuous basketball games are in store for Coach Ed Olle's University of Texas cagers this week. The Steers leave Austin Wednesday for Fayetteville, Ark. where they meet the Arkansas Porkers Friday and Saturday nights. Friday's game will open the 1932 Southwest Conference campaign.

The Razorbacks are heavy favorites to take both games, from the Longhorns, who have not yet indicated that they are ready to climb out of the conference cellar, into which last years race plunged them. Although Coach Olle has developed a neat ball club, featuring a man-for-man defense and a swift-moving attack, lack of experienced material, it is believed, puts the Longhorns out of the class of T. C. U., Baylor, S. M. U., and Arkansas. The long trip and the disadvantage of playing on a foreign court are other factors which will work against the Steers.

Texas fared well during the Christmas holidays, taking four of the five games played. Showing their best form of the year, the Steers earned a split with the strong Weatherford Teachers of Oklahoma, dropping the second game, 27-26, after having eked out a 31-29 win in the opener. Texas Chiropractors of San Antonio, and Nu ley and Dr. Pepper, local city league teams, were other victims.

Olle's first-string lineup, which has remained intact since the opening of the season, seems definitely settled, with Captain Bull Elkins and John Tullis at forwards, Bill Kubricht at center, and Ed Price and Bennie Rundell, guards, all except the sophomore Rundell are lettermen.

WILLED COMPANION.

MUSGEGON, Mich., Jan. 6.—Henry L. Wierengo, 24, of Musgegon, met Cap. John Robert Freberg for the first time last summer. A close friendship followed and recently, Wierengo, a law student at Northwestern University, was informed that he was sole heir to Freberg's $45,000 estate. Freberg died at Chicago.

TIN CAN TOURISTS.

SARASOTA, Fla., Jan. 6.—Five thousand persons are expected here in February for the annual Tin Can Tourists of America assembly, and will put up at the new municipal tourist camp, where camping and cottage space for 1,500 parties has been arranged.

DETROIT WON BATTLE WITH GANGS IN 1931

DETROIT, Jan. 6. — Detroit, reputedly the second city of the underworld took its gangland "fringe" for a "ride" during 1931.

The city double-crossed its three major gangs. Hard-boiled burlesque convicts, so-called important gangsters, breaking the power of the Purple, Sicilian East Side and Dewurrier Sicilian "organizations."

The convictions, on murder and habitual criminal charges, carried life terms at Michigan State Prison.

Michigan began with the conviction of two defiant young Purple for the murder of a negro boy, slain when his curiosity led him to peek in on an alcohol cutting plant.

The Bern-tein clan, all Purple known in the underworld as "the Burns boys," vanished from their haunts to take up residence at Marquette Branch Prison.

Civic leaders attribute the city's success in "erasing" its gangs to police trigger men and the activities of County Prosecutor Harry S. Toy. The prosecutor had a batting average of 750 for major criminal cases.

Three major crimes, marked gangland defiance to law and order. The first, Jimmy Buckley's death in a downtown hotel, is as yet unrevealed by the city. The other two were triple-murders. Three Purple are paying at Marquette for the first, known as the Collinwood Manor slaying. Police have put the finger of the law on six Sicilians for the second massacre, a triple murder for control of a suburban liquor trade.

Famed Charlot Plans to Return

LONDON, Jan. 6. — In a small cheap room near the fine theater which once blazoned his name in electric lights, Andrew Charlot is planning his comeback.

Charlot, until a few years ago, was the Flo Ziegfeld of Europe. He had spent 25 years building up the reputation that enabled him to pack houses on both sides of the Atlantic with "Charlot's Revue."

Ten years ago he pledged his personal assets to a syndicate with which he was connected. It ran into difficulties, but no sooner was this trouble overcome than Charlot suffered other financial losses. He put himself into the hands of his creditors and worked for them. Finally all he had left was the lease on a valuable theater, and the theater robbed that of most of its value. Charlot became a bankrupt.

"Now I hope to be a free man in another three months," he said after his discharge from bankruptcy, subject to the usual term of suspension. "I mean to come back. After all, 49 is not very old. And I have a few ideas."

BRITONS ARE DEPRESSED BY HIGHER TAX

LONDON, Jan. 6. — The quietest and most depressing New Year's Day since the war will be observed rather than celebrated throughout Britain from midnight tonight.

Hotels, restaurants and night clubs are offering their usual attractive programs, but distinct falling off in bookings is noticeable. Hanging over the heads of those who will attempt to celebrate the birth of 1932 will be the cloud of the government's demand for three-quarters of the whole year's income tax, due on Jan. 1.

The majority of Britons managed to forget the country's financial worries long enough to enjoy their Christmas celebration, but during the few days of recuperation they have found time to wonder how they are going to pay their taxes.

Preparations have been made for the "watch night" services in churches throughout the country to include special prayers for Divine guidance in the nation's economic problems.

The great hope of many tonight will be that the recently imposed tariffs on foreign imports will result in the long-awaited British trade revival and thus reduce the ranks of the unemployed.

In spite of all the gloom, however, preparations have been made for many "ushering in" parties.

A number of these parties will be held in London tonight by Scots and northerners resident here, but the main celebration will be outside St. Paul's Cathedral. Year after year the precincts of the cathedral are the scene of an amazing demonstration. With Scots predominating, men and women of all nationalities and all classes will gather there around 11:30. Everybody is regarded as a friend and the whisky will flow freely. When the Cathedral clock has chimed in the New Year the milling thousands will attempt to link hands all around and sing "Auld Lang Syne." A number of patriotic songs will be followed by "God Save the King," and the gathering will break up into small parties, some proceeding to night clubs and restaurants and others to their homes.

Gov. Pinchot Host To Jobless Army

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 6. — Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, today told an army of 12,000 unemployed that civilized government is a failure as men willing to work cannot get the opportunity.

The governor welcomed the marchers who traveled in 1,000 motor vehicles, to the state capitol where they were to have lunch and invited them to free coffee in the capitol basement restaurant.

FOUR PEOPLE INJURED BY BOMB BLAST

CHICAGO, Jan. 6. — Four persons, including a woman, were injured today when a powerful bomb was exploded in the street outside an undertaking establishment in the heart of the up-town shopping district.

The bomb rocked the neighborhood and threw pedestrians to the street. The most seriously injured were Mrs. George Kinser, wife of the owner of the funeral parlor, thrown from her sick bed by the blast, and Clinton Rarick, whose ear drums were shattered and who suffered severe cuts from flying glass.

Decrease Shown By Lea Lions

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 6. — The sea lion, long an attraction for visitors to the Pacific coast, is in a fair way to be exterminated.

That is the belief of local students of marine life, who point to recent alien census data as proof.

A 1928 sea lion census last year in California found but 968 of the California species which seldom range farther north than the Farallone Islands. This was a decrease of 25 per cent over the total two years previously.

The sea lions, common along the Oregon and Washington coast-line, however, showed a gain of 6,360 last year.

Hunters, however, have been making great inroads into the herds of cows and bulls, which a few years ago were numbered by hundreds.

The sea lion virtually has been cleared of salmon destruction, which brought a ten-year warfare against him along the Oregon coast. Exhaustive tests of the stomachs of slain animals revealed that the steller sea lion and the hair seal, for which bounty were offered — devour a god many skates, squid, octopus, starfish and crustaceans and only an occasional salmon.
