Inez N. M. Nosed Out Goodland In Tenth Inning 13 to 12

In a fast slugging match Inez took the long end of a hard fought game on their home ground last Saturday.

Each team collected 13 hits, both pitchers were wild and pitched a ragged game. Errors were as numerous almost as runs. Goodland getting 5, Inez 4. Robinson and Allen each poked out a home run. Robinson and Locke hitting for Goodland was a feature of the game. Robinson getting a single, double and home run Biggs for Inez, got 3 safeties.

Batteries for Inez, Musick and Allen, for Goodland, Walker and Maxwell.

Wm. S. F. Matthiesen Out for Commissioner

Wm. S. F. Matthiesen announces his candidacy for Commissioner Precinct No. 1 in this week's issue of the Muleshoe Journal. "Bill," as he is familiarly known to his friends, is now serving Bailey County in general, and Precinct No. 1 in particular, in this capacity and is familiar with the duties and responsibilities of that office. He says a Commissioner is a County officer and his duty does not cease at precinct lines. He believes in a conservative, economic, constructive administration of Bailey County affairs, county wide, and if elected, pledges his best judgment and past experience to such a program for the next two years. The recent report of the auditors show this to be the policy of the Court at the present time and he says prudence dictates the continuation of such a policy. He believes in placing every road in Bailey county, in so far as the Court is able to do so, under the 7 per cent system which means State Maintenance for such roads, thus leaving the county road monies in tact for construction and maintenance of county lateral roads.

Opening Game of Season Lost To The Earth Nine Saturday

Base ball season has opened up in Muleshoe now. The Muleshoe "Donkeys" made their initiative bow on last Saturday afternoon to Earth but went down in defeat. Folks you must not form your opinion of our team as a bad one just because we lost our first game. A bad beginning makes a good ending. Our boys had never had the chance to practice at all before this encounter with Earth and they did fine under the circumstances. The game finally came to 14 to 1 in favor of Earth. The boys went to Earth to return this game last Sunday and you will find the results of it in another place in the paper. (Sport Editor)

Henry George and George L. Seaver, both of Portales, N. M., passed through our city last Saturday on their return trip from Fort Worth, where they have been to attend the Undertakers State Convention. These men attend all meetings for the betterment of themselves to render the people of Muleshoe and Portales better service.

Muleshoe Had A Hot Contest With Earth Sunday

On last Sunday afternoon the Muleshoe nine went to Earth to try to even up things a mite and would have succeeded had it not have been for an error or two which of course might have been the result of any League player. We must say that our boys did fine work in the Sunday game and is nothing but our duty to commend them for their playing. The game started off just like some Universal players had hold of the old apple. No one on either team went to first until after the second inning and then they were scarce and far between. In the last half of the third inning Earth run in one score, and in the fourth inning Earth run in another score. Then the scoring stopped until the eighth inning and then Earth run in one more score. Alas, here is where Muleshoe popped off and run in two scores in the first half of the ninth which put the score 2 to 3 in favor of our opponents. Muleshoe base ball club made a fine showing and it was alright.

Both the Saturday and Sunday games were well played and we all have the "bee in our bonnets" now. We only hope that we will confine ourselves to local talent over the country this season. Imported players make the game too expensive, and besides it's much more interesting to see the homlings perform. And there is no reason why local talent from the various towns would not make all teams pretty evenly matched, with Muleshoe just a shake ahead.

We understand that Muleshoe nine will go to Amherst next Sunday to play those boys over there and it would be mighty nice for about one hundred per cent of the base ball fans to drive over and help our team win by being there to see it well done. Let's support our home town team next Sunday on the battle field. (Sport Editor)

E. R. Hart Buys Out Panhandle Lbr. Co.

Will Build Big Brick Store Building On Main Street Right Away

E. R. Hart has purchased the Panhandle Lumber Company Yard, stock and real estate. The force at the Hart Yard assisted by Mr. Hood and Mr. Naylor, of the Panhandle Company, are busy this week taking stock preparatory to making the change. Since the fire in January which destroyed the Hart Lumber Company office and store room they have had temporary quarters in their warehouse next to the Bailey County Elevator. However, now, as soon as can be arranged Hart intends to build a brick retail hardware store room and office on the present Panhandle location, and also enlarge the Lumber Sheds, doubling the present facilities for handling business on that location. As soon as this building can be completed the Hart Hardware stock and office will be moved to the present Panhandle location. It is the intention to install scales at the Trackage Warehouse, and a department will be maintained there to handle the coal and warehouse business.

Mr. Hart purchased the Bennett Lumber Co., Stock some time ago, and the Panhandle, Bennett and Hart Lumber stocks will all be consolidated.

Mr. Hart states that their stock and facilities for handling the business in all their lines will be increased and amplified as conditions justify. Temporarily of course the moving and arranging of these stocks will cause some confusion, however, every effort will be made to get business to running smoothly by the time the fall business starts.

In addition to the various lines the Hart Yard has hitherto been carrying this purchase of the Panhandle will add Furniture to their line. It is also the intention to carry a complete stock of high grade long leaf yellow pine and white pine and fir lumber, and also a stock of short leaf lumber, so that the trade may find in this one yard a full assortment of grades as suited to their various needs.

Robt. A. Sone Is New County Attorney

Due to the fact that our former County Attorney, Levi Pressly resigned his position in this above named office the County has employed Robt. A. Sone to complete the unexpired term. Mr. Sone is from Plainview and comes to us with a mighty good record behind him, he is a graduate of the State University, from the Department of Law. We are proud to have such a fine man with us to fill this important office and believe he will make a success here, also. We are also aware of the fact that Mr. Pressly has been very efficient in this office and wish him much success in his future undertakings as private attorney and are glad to know that he intends to stay in our city to practice law in the future.

Muleshoe Tailor Shop Gets New Machinery

H. C. Edmonds has his new electrical machinery in now and is all fixed up in up-town style. He lets the Texas Utilities Co., do his machinery twisting now and is saving that 'said elbow grease. The Muleshoe Tailor Shop is as good as the best and we can now boast of one of the keenest plants on the Plains. Mr. Edmonds has the machinery and the experience so why not say we can surpass the best for a Tailor Shop. We think that H. C. should be commended for the pride that he has taken in fixing up his shop and deserves the patronage of all this trade territory.

County Nurse Busy With Preschool Kids

Last week was a busy one for Miss Wentland the county Nurse. She has been hard at work visiting preschool children who are in need of medical attention before the next term of school, so now is the ideal time for the children to have all defects corrected and to see that they will be in the best of physical trim for the forth coming year.

There are a great many children in the various communities that are in need of corrections. We think it is the duty of every parent to see that their child is kept well and happy and they can not do that if they are not taken care of.

Miss Wentland is ready at all times to help you take care of the necessary corrections that may be needed, just come and talk it over if she has not already visited your home she will in a short time when she makes her home visits in the community.

Mrs. E. J. Vance is having her house on the corner of Main and Broadway remodeled inside and says they will make their home there soon. This house was formerly occupied by the City Bakery.

Pola Broadway Dancer In Latest Film

"The Charmer," a screen version of Henry Baerlein's novel, "Mariposa," brings Pola Negri to the screen at the Brooks Theatre to-night and Saturday in the role of a Spanish dancing girl, who wins success on the Broadway stage.

The story, written for the screen by Sada Cowan, was produced by Sidney Olcott, director of the "Humming Bird," "Little Old New York," "The Green Goddess" and many others just as successful. Robert Frazer, Wallace MacDonald, Trixie Friganza and others appear in the cast.

As Mariposa, Pola is brought to America by a kindly theatrical agent and achieves instant recognition on Broadway with her Spanish dances. Men in general fall in love with her—two, in particular, —Frazer and MacDonald. The latter is a wealthy young ladies' man, the other his chauffeur. It's a battle of wits between the two through out the entire length of the picture. Remember May 28 and 29th at Brooks Theatre.

To The Patrons of School District No. 1 Bailey County, Texas

I want every, full blooded American citizen of this district to read this letter and consider it. Ask yourself "am I a Protestant or a Catholic?" If you are a Protestant, do you want a Catholic emblem over your public school? The word Alamo is a Catholic name. I am a full blooded Protestant and do not stand for anything else in our school, if you are, you won't.

The school in our neighborhood is just what we make it. If you are a Protestant "Lets have a Protestant school, not Catholic." Do you want your children to meet, in what is supposed to be a Protestant school and have their worship and get their education under a Catholic name?

By force, by order of State Board of Education and by order of district court the Hurley School was discontinued and rebuilt at Progress. W. A. Millegan, the president of the school board, started to put the name Hurley in the stone over the door. He was interferred with and stopped. It was agreed upon, that this stone be placed in the building, blank and it was. Later after this building was completed, W. A. Millegan cut the name "Alamo," a Catholic name, in the stone with a chisel. Now if you are a Protestant, how can you stand for this? I will not stand for it. If you are, you won't.

I am only one of the patrons of this school and I ask the patrons to join me and let us destroy this name Alamo. Now is the time to show your children, who you are and what you are. I understand that this name was put on this school just for fun, so just for fun let us take it off. Do you think this school building was built for fun, if so, how do you expect to have a school? Now is the time for you to show your color. If you are a coward let this word Alamo stay on this building. If you are a Protestant let us take it off and have a Protestant school. We have had to much fun and expense just for fun now, so let us cut out the fun and expense and all come together and have a good school. You should understand by this time, that the patrons have to step in and take some school interest in this school to make it what it should be. Why not do this? Let us not talk but put our shoulders to the wheel and roll.

We have had rows enough, let us not start any row but come together and make a Protestant school out of this school. We cannot do it with a Catholic name over the door. I do not mean to go to law, spend money, stir up a row and have a law suit over this name, Alamo. I mean to come together as Protestant's and take it off, just like it was put on there.

If the patrons of this district do not want this stone blank, let us get together, vote a name for this school and put it on. We cannot allow no one man, with no children, or no school interest to run such as this over the patrons of this school.

If you are a Protestant not a coward you will charge of this matter, at once. I am ready to act, if you are. Let's go.

I am yours for a good school.
R. P. Griffin.

Afterwards, as he was taking a shower, they asked him how he liked the course. "It's not so bad," the Scotchman said. "I lost three balls, but I found eight."

Wives and Husbands

In "Wives," by Gamaliel Bradford, the author discusses seven famous women made famous only by famous husbands. The women are Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, Mrs. Benedict Arnold, Theodosia Burr, Mrs. James Blaine, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, Mrs. Benjamin Franklin, Mrs. James Madison. The author contends that each of these wives was the intellectual superior of her husband. What's the answer? Women prefer to submerge self in mate even if they can outshine him?

CONVICT COLONIES STILL MAINTAINED

Located in Loneliest Places in World.

Washington.—Le Marinere, said to be the last French convict ship, sailed out of La Rochelle recently with 340 convicts destined for incarceration on Devil's island, French Guiana.

Recently, also, Mexico dispatched a noted criminal to its lonely convict island, Maria Madre.

Russia has started air service between Kem and Solovetski island in the White sea to transport prisoners. The famous monastery on the island has been converted into a prison.

"These three incidents show that the practice of maintaining convict colonies in the world's loneliest places has not entirely been given up," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters at Washington.

Famous Penal Colonies.

"Devil's island, Maria Madre and Solovetski island are in very mixed company historically. Virginia, St. Helena, Funchal, Monte Christo, St. Helena, the Seychelles, Australia, New Caledonia, Andaman islands, Tasmania and Sakhalin have all been penal colonies for more or less distinguished prisoners.

"St. Helena, Funchal and the Seychelles are royal prison islands. The others in their time served for common criminals or unlucky politicians. When Elba failed to hold Napoleon he was placed on St. Helena, well toward the middle of the South Atlantic, out of harm and out of the shipping lanes. That was in 1815. He died in 1821.

"Funchal in the Azores and the Seychelles on the east coast of Africa north of Madagascar are more recent prison stations. In Africa the British occasionally find it expedient to absent certain native rulers from their subjects. So, when Premph, king of the Ashanti on the Gold coast, spilled too much blood, they sent him to sojourn in the soothing climate of the Seychelles. Premph, after twenty years, returned to his people, so apparently he did not like the asylum. But the English did, so they sent Mwanga, deposed ruler of Uganda, to join him and then Kabarega of Unyoro, Sayyid Khalid of Zanzibar and Saad Zaghal of Egypt. The Seychelles detention was not nearly so effective in the case of Zaghal, who is now the leader of a popular party in Egypt. To Funchal was sent the deposed emperor of Austria-Hungary immediately following the end of the World war. He died in exile. His wife and children are now in Spain.

Tourists Visit Chateau d'If.

"Chateau d'If, the castle in which the hero of Dumas' novel, 'The Count of Monte Christo,' was confined for 14 years, now receives tourists from Marseilles. Curiously, Monte Christo, where Morel went after his escape, was also a penal colony island for many years. Monte Christo is owned by Italy. It lies off the coast from Leghorn and about 25 miles north of Elba.

"Czarist Russia, for a time, sent 18,000 prisoners to Siberia annually. Much of the famous Trans-Siberian railway was built with prison labor. The chief horror of Siberian exile was the knout. By it, or by terror of it, guards kept prisoners docile. The handle of the knout is a heavy wood stick, 18 inches long. Fastened to it is a thong of rawhide. About eight feet from the handle the thong is split into three parts. These streamers are three feet long. The ends are tied into hard knots, although lead or iron hooks sometimes were used.

"Preparatory to administering the knout the victim was tied face downward on a rough table. Close to the knout wielder stood a clerk with a book in which he checked the number of strokes as that worthy swung them and called them. For the first 25 strokes the skin was marked white by the lash as a chalk mark were drawn on the flesh. After that the things began to cut through. When a knout sentence called for 100 strokes the last one was usually omitted as a token of imperial magnanimity."

Georgia Refuses Pay on War-Looted Bond

Atlanta, Ga.—A man in California, who holds a state bond of 1854, will find he holds a joker, State Treasurer William J. Spencer has announced. The seventy-two-year old bond was presented at the capitol, with claim for payment. The treasurer will not pay, and will demand the return of the document as stolen property which, he asserted, was taken by the troops of General Sherman in the famous march through Georgia. Also, it is not a real bond, inasmuch as it was not issued, the treasurer said.

ROSE POND STILL MECCA OF CURIOUS

Believed to Be Crater of Extinct Volcano.

Evening Shade, Ark.—Each summer, with its crop of tourists, sees a renewed interest in "Rose pond," near here, which is thought to be the filled-in crater of an extinct volcano and is pointed out to all newcomers as a natural curiosity.

"Rose Pond" is about twelve acres in extent. It is literally as "level as a floor." It takes its name from the fact that when white settlers first came here it was a marshy place, covered thickly with the wild rose that is native to this section. One odd-timer says he has yet to see a more beautiful sight than was Rose pond in those days, with the early morning dew on the pink and white blossoms.

But the roses have disappeared now. The first owners found it impossible to clear the pond, so thickly did the rose brambles grow, and water stood in rock-bound courses over the marsh. But Joseph Schales, from Germany, acquired the pond.

Hay meant more than roses to Schales. So with a prodigious amount of labor he cut the brambles and rooted them out of the mud, dug out the rocks and drained the pond.

Wild hay flourished for him and later owners, but such prosaic crops as corn and cotton will not grow in the pond with any degree of success. It is as if the spot resents giving up its ancient wild heritage.

Students of geology say there is no other soil in the state just like that of Rose pond. It resembles, so it is said, ashes or lava reduced to powder and mixed with vegetable matter brought in by erosion and water from the slightly higher ground.

Woman's Will Directs Search for Lost Son

Omaha, Neb.—Provision for the continuance of her futile search for her only child, Harold, was made in the will of Mrs. Emma Haviland, fifty-three, teacher for twenty-five years in Omaha schools, who died recently. After completing his law course in the University of Michigan young Haviland was associated with a law firm here for a short time. Several years ago he left, going, presumably, to California. Although his mother searched relentlessly for him, his whereabouts are unknown.

Several weeks prior to her death Mrs. Haviland made arrangements with an undertaker for the cremation of her body. She requested Boyd Labele, Omaha, and Miss Geraldine Loch, Chicago, intimate friends, to scatter her ashes to the winds. This request was complied with.

The disposition of her $7,500 estate provides for a five-year search for her son. If he is not found within that period the residue of the estate is to be divided between Mr. Labele and Miss Loch.

Short Skirts End Use of Teacher's High Chair

New York.—Modern short skirts may have a direct bearing upon classroom procedure. The brevity of skirts is threatening to do away with the teacher's "high chair."

A number of principals readily agreed that the modernly-attired teacher, perched before the class on the high chair, bears a remarkable resemblance to a silk advertisement. The effect, these educators agreed, while not necessarily evil, might well be regarded as a trifle disturbing.

For a great many years the high chair has been standard equipment in every classroom, but the new policy here came to light when the requisitions of several junior high school principals for high chairs were denied. Investigation showed that the "powers that be" decreed that high chairs, short skirts and rolled stockings cannot all remain together in the same classroom. Since the teachers demand the right to keep up to the minute in style, the high chair must go.

COLLEGE BOYS WORK WAY AROUND WORLD

Answer to Challenge of Their "Prexy."

Bombay.—Two young American stowaways arrived in Bombay on a liner from Port Said the other day, their only baggage being two raincoats, a camera, shaving set, sewing kit and a Bible. They were allowed to land and go free because their passports were in order and because the shipping company did not care to take the case to court. Incidentally the youths had worked well as deck hands and had won the friendship of the officers and crew.

Questioned in Bombay the stowaways said they were college graduates taking a year off to work their way around the world without receiving a cent from home. Their journey is an answer to a challenge made by their college president, Dr. P. R. Kolbe, who in a speech before the student body of Akron university wondered why American students no longer worked their way to and around Europe during summer vacations. He even hinted that fear of the hard knocks might be the cause of this lack of wanderlust. The two students, Adib Karam, twenty-three years old, and James W. Matz, twenty-two, in answer to the president's challenge, not only have worked their way to and around Europe, but are going around the world. Already they have been through England, France, Switzerland, Italy, Syria, Palestine and Egypt.

Start on Leviathan.

In New York on June 30, 1925, two weeks after receiving their diplomas, the young men got jobs on the United States liner Leviathan, plying between New York and Southampton. "We learned a little what Doctor Kolbe meant by hard knocks when we were put to work peeling onions and potatoes. It wasn't easy to become scullions so soon after our graduation from college." Karam remarked reminiscently. After working three months on this boat and then leaving it in England, they saw Canterbury, with its historic cathedral; London and Wembley, and "hiked" through Kent. Four days after arriving in Paris they obtained jobs. They saved money, saw Paris and learned some French.

Geneva, their next important stop, was reached by walking through the picturesque French and Swiss alps. After riding around Lake Geneva and through the Simplon tunnel, they visited the famous places of Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome and Naples and inspected Mount Vesuvius and Pompeii.

Work Way to Syria.

The two wanderers next went to Marseilles, France, from which port they worked their way to Beyrouth, Syria, in the stokehole of the Pytheas, a French military transport. In Syria they went inland, saw something of the war. They passed two weeks in Palestine. The next leg of their tour was from Jerusalem to Egypt. Walking to the desert and then stealing a ride, they arrived in Kantara, Egypt, after four days of travel. Because of the dirt and grime of these hard four days and their unshaven appearances, the Egyptian passport officials permitted them to enter only after a thorough questioning. Cairo, with its pyramids, the Sphinx and the River Nile, was the next city of interest. After spending five days there the wanderers began a 150-mile walk to Port Said.

After failing to find jobs on a boat that would take them to Bombay they stowed away. So far their wanderings have cost only $220. Of this amount $56.50 was used for visas, leaving only $163.50 actually spent in living and travel for the eight months in which they have been away from home.

Papal Bull of 1758 Found by Chicagoan
Chicago.—Two documents of historical value, one of them a papal bull of 1758, are being translated by University of Chicago scientists for a Chicago into whose possession they recently came. Both are written in highly ornamental style on pigskin and the ink is well preserved. They were purchased in Graz, Austria.

The papal bull was issued in the first year of the pontificate of Clement XIII, granting a pension to a priest. It is in Latin. The other document bears the signature of Marie Theresa, Queen of Austria, and is a receipt for war supplies in the war of the Austrian succession, the translators have discovered. It is in German.

Men and Sparrows Like Yellow Flowers

London.—Men and sparrows both favor yellow flowers. It was declared by exhibitors at the Royal Horticultural society's show. Members were discussing the revival of the "button-hole" posy habit, and it was agreed the favorite colors for men were scarlet, cerise and yellow.

Women were said to favor pale shades, such as salmon pink, pale heliotrope and mauve. The business woman preferred dark colored flowers, the dressy woman pale tones, and the artistic woman a blend of two or three colors.

I. Jacob's Flight to Haran.
He fled from an outraged brother. His deceit and cunning got him into trouble. His long exile from home was the result of his selfish ambition. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Rebekah made her plea before Isaac for sending Jacob away, stating her fear of Jacob's probable marriage with a daughter of Canaan, when in reality she feared that Esau would kill him, Isaac at once recognized the wisdom of her suggestion. He knew that the success or failure of one's life is largely determined by his marriage. It was clear that if Jacob were to continue in the line of the covenant blessing care must be exercised in his marriage. Besides, it is a parental duty to see that children are well married. Among Christians only marriage in the Lord is allowable (1 Cor. 7:39). Isaac, alive to Jacob's destiny, issued his command and bestowed upon him the covenant blessing which had come from God Almighty to Abraham (Gen. 17:1). The elements embraced in this blessing are:

- (1) A numerous offspring (v. 3).
- (2) Possession of the promised land (v. 4).
- (3) And everything that is included in the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:1-3 and Gen. 15:1-8).

We should learn from the experience of Jacob.

1. Be sure your sin will find you out.
- Jacob deceived his father. He in turn was deceived by his children.
2. That wrong home life has its perils.

Isaac knew that the blessing was to be Jacob's, yet he planned for Esau to have the place of prominence. He was willing for the sake of a little venison to give to Esau that which God had planned for Jacob.

11. Jacob at Bethel.
- (1) The Lord meets Jacob at Bethel (vv. 10-15).

With a spirit clouded by homesickness on the one hand and by fear on the other, he had a dream that night in which God appeared to him. In this dream Jacob beheld a ladder or stair reaching from earth to heaven, upon which angels were ascending and descending. Above the ladder stood the Lord who spoke to him. This ladder suggests a means of communication between earth and heaven, between man and God. Jesus Christ is the ladder which provides us a means of communication with heaven (John 1:51; 14:6; Heb. 10:19-20). Jesus became a real ladder to us, bridging the chasm between earth and heaven. He was a real man that He might identify himself with the race. He is very God, really divine, that He might lift us up to God and secure a reconciliation with Him, Earth and heaven, man and God, were separated by the introduction of sin, but through Christ a means of intercourse is re-established. This vision suggested to Jacob that the only approach to God was through a mediator. The angels ascending and descending are heavenly messengers which are sent to minister to man through the mediatory work of Christ (Heb. 1:14). God spoke to him from the top of the ladder and assured him that He is the God who entered into covenant with Abraham and renewed the same unto his father Isaac (v. 13). This assurance embraced the following:

- (1) The possession of the land (v. 13).
 - (2) A numerous offspring (v. 14).
 - (3) The promise of His personal presence and preservation (v. 15).
- This promise was fulfilled in a marvelous way with Jacob and is still being fulfilled with his seed.

III. Jacob's Vow to the Lord (vv. 16-22).
He set up as a monument the stone which he had had for a pillow. He named the place Bethel, which means the house of God. Jacob now vowed that since God had so graciously obligated himself to perform all this for him, he would enthrone God as the Lord of his life and give back to Him one-tenth of all that was given to him.

THE MUD EEL

"They take pity on me, they do," said the Mud Eel.
Some of the insects stopped twisting and crawling about, looking from their little homes to the little home of the Mud Eel, and said, in insect language:

"Why do they take pity on you?"
"And who are 'they'?"
"They," said the Mud Eel, "are people."

"Children, too?" asked the insects.
"Children, too," the Mud Eel agreed.

"Well, now that 'they' have been explained to us you can go on with your story."

"But 'they' haven't been explained to you, for I don't understand them myself."

"How can I explain what I don't understand? People and children are a puzzle to me," the Mud Eel continued.

"I don't understand them at all. They talk queerly, they walk queerly, they eat strange food."

"They talk and giggle. They have funny ideas. Children go to places called schools—where they learn to spell and read and write."

"How can I explain all that?"
"I can't."

"For the life of me I don't see why they want to know how to read and spell and write."

"What good are such things going to do them? They aren't given meals for writing things down on a slate."

"I know we never, never would be."

"Well," said the insects and snakes, "we meant that we knew who you meant by 'they.'"

"We can't understand people ourselves."
"Certainly their ways are beyond our understanding. We don't know why they eat the food they do, why children go to school, why they walk instead of crawl and talk instead of hiss and whisper, and sing."

"We don't know why they wear clothes and talk as they do and walk sometimes with their arms entwined with each other as they do."

"We don't understand people ourselves."
"But now tell us why the people pity you. None of us can really understand people it would seem."

"So you might as well go on with your story as best you can, leaving out such things neither or none of us can understand—such as people and their ways."

"And that includes children and their ways."
"So go on with your story, Mud Eel."

"Pray continue."
"I am put near the insects," said the Mud Eel, "and yet I belong to the snake family."

"I am a younger cousin, or distant relative of the Congo Snake, but I have no hind legs."

"And that is what bothers the people."
"The keeper tells them I have gills outside my body and they smile politely but are not much interested."

"Then he tells them that I have no hind legs, only a pair of front legs, and they say to each other:
"How very queer. Isn't that odd! How very queer! Isn't that odd!"

"Yes, they pity me and I don't want their pity."
"No, I don't want it."
"I don't need it. I am not here to be pitied."

"Ah, how often I wish I could speak people's language instead of the language of the Mud Eel and I would say to them:
"Oh, children and people, why do you think it is so queer, and pity me, because I only have one pair of legs?"

"You only have one pair of legs yourselves—and we think yours are queer."
"I think that would quiet them all right. Yes, that would make them stop thinking we were so odd."
"At least I hope it would," the Mud Eel ended.

Jean Would Walk
Little three-year-old Jean went out for a walk with her father one day. As they started to return her father asked, "Shall we walk back, Jean, or take the street car?"

"Oh, I ruzzer walk, daddy," she replied, "if ou' will tarry me."

Great Personages of the Bible
By REV. LEONARD A. BARRETT

Naboth

A HAB was the name of a wealthy king of Samaria, whose palace was built upon land which adjoined the property belonging to one named Naboth. Upon this property there was a very wonderful vineyard which the King Ahab greatly desired. He endeavored to negotiate with Naboth for the sale of the vineyard. Naboth refused to sell it because he prized it very highly, having come into its possession through an inheritance from his father. The refusal of Naboth to sell the vineyard greatly angered the king. He was so angry that he would neither eat nor sleep. Jezebel, his wife, thinking the condition of the king rather serious, and wishing to please him, promised that she would secure the vineyard for him. She secretly sent messengers to the men in positions of political authority, requesting that a fast day be proclaimed, on which occasion Naboth was to be highly honored by having a place near the front line of march. But there were also two messengers especially engaged for the purpose, who were to go before Naboth and at the appointed time were to bear false witness against him. The charge was to be that he cursed the king; therefore had committed treason. Further instructions were given that as a punishment for his crime he was to be stoned to death. The plan of Jezebel was carried through exactly as she had commanded, for the communications she sent were signed in her husband's name and were sealed with the royal seal. Having succeeded in her vicious scheme she hastened to make known to the king that Naboth was dead and that the way was clear for him to take the vineyard he so much desired.

Convinced of the death of Naboth, Ahab, in the spirit of triumph, went to the vineyard to claim it. As he neared the garden gate he met a man he had not seen for many years. He was a man strange in appearance, ascetic in bearing, and possessed a wonderful power and peace, which was expressed in his face. It was the prophet Elijah. Looking into the face of Ahab, Elijah spoke: "In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine." This was too much for Ahab. His conscience smote him as with a sword at his heart. He lifted up his hands and cried in despair to the aged prophet: "Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?" Ahab thought he could take possession of the vineyard, but instead he met at the gate of the vineyard an incarnate conscience, which, pointing its finger of condemnation at him, cried: "Thou art a murderer, thou canst not take the vineyard with murderous hands."

There is a story related of a certain king who wore a very valuable ring which gave his finger a sharp prick whenever he was tempted to do something wrong. For a long time he heeded the warning given by the ring, but one day when he desired to commit a very great crime the ring gave him an unusually sharp prick which drew blood to the finger. This so enraged the king that he drew the ring from his finger and threw it away.

It is an easy matter to throw away a mere ring, but it is not so easy to cast aside the warnings and convictions of conscience. Conscience, which George Washington called "A little spark of celestial fire," burns inside the human heart. It is a great beacon light which no one can escape and from which it is impossible for any person to run away. The inner voice of conscience will give us no rest until we have heeded its warning or made amends, to the best of our ability, for our misdeeds. No person can forgive himself.

Expressive Slang Not Found in Dictionary

Picture the kindly Boswell quizzing the Sage of Fleet Street in this wise:

"What sir, may a finale hopper be?"

"Sir, a finale hopper is, not may be, one of the most despised of men. He it is who arrives to partake of an entertainment after all the expenses of the entertainment have been paid."

Such is the definition taken from the vocabulary of the flapperocracy of the day. Here are a few more: Alre-dale, commonly known as a breed of dog, is to the sophisticated young miss of flapperdom an ugly, unprepossessing man, and an alarm clock is a chaperon; a dimbox, one who patches up quarrels or tries to remove friction; a shifter, one given to grafting; a smuggle-pup, one who frequents petting parties.

What are we to do with such "idiomatic phrases" as the cuckoo's chin, the bullfrog's beard, the butterfly's boots and the pig's wings? There are people simple enough to think that these and more should find place in the dictionary.

Well, who knows but they may some day. Yet, so far we cannot take it seriously. So, in common with hundreds of other words, terms like these are kept on file, and as the years roll on note is taken of the frequency or recurrence of use, and these notes of usage determine whether or not the word shall be admitted to the dictionary.—F. H. Vizetelly in American Speech.

School at Gettysburg Was Battle Hospital

The building that housed the first classical school west of the Susquehanna river is still standing in Gettysburg, Pa., says the Baltimore Sun. The ivy-covered stone building known as the Dobbin house, was erected in 1774 by Rev. Alexander Dobbin, a native of Ireland, who came to this country in 1773.

For more than thirty years, Mr. Dobbin conducted his school and many men, who later became prominent public citizens, were scholars. Early in the Nineteenth century the Dobbin school failed for some reason not recorded.

During the battle of Gettysburg the Dobbin house was used as an emergency field hospital, being at the edge of the fighting area. Men of both sides were cured for in the building. A spring of water in the basement was the mecca for hundreds of soldiers while the battle raged. Several families now occupy the property.

Tablet Throws Light on Noah and the Ark

In 1872 George Smith of the British Museum found an interesting tablet in Nineveh. The inscriptions were deciphered by Assyriologists soon afterward, but Paul Haupt, professor of Assyriology at Johns Hopkins university, has recently rendered a more complete translation. He first restored the tablet to make it legible. Professor Haupt told the American Oriental society at Philadelphia that the inscriptions relate the story of Noah and the ark. According to this account, Noah cut trees down in the jungle and made an ark consisting of six decks which were divided into seven compartments. Two-thirds of the ark was under water when it was afloat. Part of the translation reads: "For our food I slaughtered oxen and killed sheep—day by day. With beer and brandy, oil and wine, I filled large jars, as with water of a river."—Pathfinder Magazine.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary. To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

"By gar! You not down een de Fryng Pan, Daveed? We t'ot you dead men. By dam! I glad to see you, Daveed, and you, m'sieu, all right, bot' you two, beeg an' strong jes de same?" The delighted Michel repeatedly wrung the hands of his agitated, but perplexed friends. Then St. Onge reached Steele.

"Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu! Monsieur Steele! Welcome to Walling River," he exclaimed in a voice, strained—unnatural. "Doubly welcome, my dear Steele! We thought we looked at the dead when you entered that door—Michel and I. An Indian brought word that you were lost in the Jackfish rapids, last month. We were hopeless—and now we are overjoyed."

"Thank you, sir, I am glad to be back. We ran the rapids—it's a long tale, colonel."

St. Onge suddenly started, turning in bewilderment from Steele to Michel.

"What was that?"

David doubled with laughter at the surprise of the Iroquois. Again, to the bewilderment of the Frenchman and his head-man, the bloodhound, outside, raised a deep-throated protest at the cold and his empty stomach, which initiated a tedium of howls from the huskies.

"Why, that's Windigo; he's hungry!" laughed Steele. "You'd better look after them, David, before the home dogs start to fight."

"That, a dog? It sounded more like a lion."

"I've brought a bloodhound to track the Windigo; also to give him a bit of his own medicine. His name is Pete, but David and I call him 'Windigo.' If we'd had him last fall, it might have been different. But Mademoiselle St. Onge? Is she well?" Steele hastened to ask.

The face of the older man sobered. "She has not been well," he said, pointedly, "since the news came from Ogoke."

"You mean?"

"The news of your drowning in the Fryng Pan, monsieur."

Steele thrilled at the words. Then the realization of what it had meant to Denise St. Onge—this blow to her hopes—swiftly saddened him.

"I will go to her at once," said St. Onge. "The shock would be too great—and the joy," he added, "if you will follow shortly, you will find your old room, such as it is, ready."

In the living room of the factor's quarters Denise St. Onge waited for the man returned from the dead.

Entering, Steele went to her and took both her hands.

"I have come back, Denise St. Onge, as I promised," he said, as her dark eyes bravely met his, but the convulsive movement of her lips betrayed the imminence of tears.

"We are—so glad—so glad you are here!" But the strain was too great and she turned from him to hide her emotion.

"It is a happy night for Walling River, monsieur," broke in St. Onge, as Steele turned to the factor to permit his daughter to regain her self-control.

"A happier one for me, colonel!" replied the man who yearned to take the girl, who had walked to the end of the room, in his arms and comfort her—promise her that all should be right in the end.

At supper St. Onge insisted on hearing of Steele's trip home.

"Before I begin, tell me if Lafamme has shown his hand?"

"No, we have heard nothing. One of his Indians on the way to Albany with a letter told Michel you had been drowned. That is all."

"When I met him," continued Steele, "he acted cold and suspicious, wanted to know my business, but warmed later, asking me to dine with him and the woman who passes as Rose Lafamme. He became so polite that I was under the impression that he believed my story. After dinner he was suddenly called to the trade-house, one of his men had started to bother David, who, of course, had his eyes open, which they evidently resented, and David broke some of his fingers. This worried me considerably; it meant leaving on the jump in the morning before there was trouble."

"And this Rose Lafamme, what is she like?" asked Denise.

Steele felt the blood in his face. In spite of the legitimate ends for which he had worked, the episode with Rose had left an unenviable taste.

"She is a striking-looking woman, with, I am confident, a strain of Indian blood. It was very evident that she and Lafamme were not on good terms—that she desired to leave Ogoke; in fact, she asked if we would take her to the railroad."

"She asked you, a stranger?" demanded Denise.

"You mean she is held there against her will?" broke in St. Onge.

"Absolutely! But Lafamme, from what she told me, fears she would tell what she knows—inform the authorities."

"What a situation for a woman!" deprecated Denise.

"Yes, she evidently hates him—hinted vaguely at many things, when Lafamme was absent at the trade-house. But the only information I succeeded in getting was that Pierre, the Indian, who came here in September, was sent down river partly to spread Windigo rumors."

"He talked with Tete-Boule, and left shortly after," nodded St. Onge.

"Oh, by the way, is Tete-Boule, the great sorcerer, still here?"

"Yes, although something happened when Michel came back. They had a long talk one night in Tete-Boule's shack. I heard the trouble from the beach and found Michel threatening to cut his throat."

"Why did you interfere?" laughed Steele.

"He's been useful as a hunter, and I'm so short-handed. But I am interested to hear how you left Ogoke, monsieur, and why you were so reckless as to attempt to run the Fryng Pan."

"When I returned to the shack where we had left our bags, I found David repacking some of the stuff. Lafamme had had our baggage searched."

"Did you accuse him of it?"

"I never had the opportunity. Rose Lafamme came to the shack and offered to tell all she knew about Lafamme's activities if I would take her that night to the railroad." Steele boldly answered, ignoring the inferences which might be drawn from the statement.

"And you refused, monsieur, to aid a beautiful woman in distress? Ah, that was not gallant." Although the smile was facetious, the eyes of Denise St. Onge were grave. Steele felt that he had been put on the defensive.

"I told her that we needed flour—would starve if we left that night. At that moment David knocked a man down outside, who proved to be Lafamme. What he had come for I do not know."

"Was it not clear to you what he came for, monsieur? Learning she was not in the house, he went to the shack of the gallant American, to find it guarded by his faithful Indian?" The girl smiled disconcertingly. Steele was puzzled at her mood.

"Denise!" protested her father. "Will you permit Monsieur Steele to tell his story? You are not fair!"

Could it be possible that she did not believe him, Steele asked himself. But the seeming composure of Denise St. Onge disarmed him and he went on.

"David had choked Lafamme into unconsciousness, and of course we had to leave without our flour. We paddled all night, pushed up the Rouge and over to the Jackfish. We also discovered that they had taken all our rifle shells. I was sure we had distanced pursuit but at the Fryng Pan two Indians who had traveled overland were waiting for us. Thinking we were helpless and would come ashore, they didn't fire on us until they saw we intended to run the rapids. Then one raised his rifle, but was shot by David, who had found a cartridge which Lafamme's men had overlooked."

St. Onge listened to Steele's story in amazement.

"He sent his men to kill you—keep you from getting out of the country?"

"He rightly saw that after what had happened he couldn't afford to have us leave the bush. You see, notwithstanding my two bags of Indian stuff, he suspected me of spying on his place—and probably chose the Fryng Pan as a safe means of getting rid of us.

"He wouldn't anticipate our running them voluntarily, but evidently had ordered his Indians to capture and throw us in. Then, if our bodies or canoe were ever found, it would appear like a straight case of drowning. But David's shot stampeded the survivor into firing at us."

"And you went through that white-water they say has never been run?"

"Yes, somehow we got through, with a foot of water in her and a few leaks where we scraped some sharp ones."

"They had left the supper table and were in the living room, and as Steele finished he realized that Denise, who sat with eyes on the rug at her feet, had been listening. Was it the old depression, he wondered, or—

"And without shells for your guns, you traveled clear to the Nepigon on short rations?" broke in St. Onge.

"Worse than that. We got but few fish and before we reached Nepigon House, were down to one meal a day."

Denise looked up. "I am very tired, monsieur. You will pardon me? Good night!" And she left the room.

That day Steele had traveled forty miles to avoid camping another night on the snow before seeing Denise St. Onge. He was tired from the hard day on the river ice, and disturbed and mystified by the mood of the factor's daughter.

Once he knew beyond all peradventure that this harassed girl cared for him; bound though she was, once she unreservedly placed her future in his hands and rent the veil of her former reticence—her strange aloofness, then the fight for the fortunes of Walling River would be a battle of joy; and at last, when they met, it seemed that his dream had come true—that he had won. But her air of incredulity, the irony of her comment on his story of that night at Ogoke, sent him to his bed mortified, troubled, stung with the injustice of her attitude. Was it jealousy? He had held Denise St. Onge on too high a plane for such a descent. Had she been merely facetious, or had she, without benefit of the doubt, drawn a sinister inference from the coming to the shack of Rose, and their surprise by Lafamme? But he had frankly told the full details, he argued. That, of itself, was proof enough of the single-mindedness of his actions at Ogoke. It seemed so foreign to his conception of the character of Denise St. Onge, that, when his tired body finally drew him into the oblivion of sleep, he had attributed her manner and her silence to the strain of overtaken nerves.

CHAPTER XII

The following morning the council of war met in the shack of Michel where, as the Iroquois was unmarried, there would be no interruption.

"Now, Michel," said Steele, "I've kept my word and come back on the first snow and I've brought a hound that will help us if we have the luck to hear that Windigo again. I've also brought these."

The speaker stripped the lashings from a canvas-covered bundle, which David had carried in from the sled the night previous, to reveal to the curious eyes of Michel two massive engines of torture, their steel jaws bristling with teeth.

"By gar! Bear trap!" exclaimed the Iroquois, black eyes glittering.

"Beauties, aren't they? God help the brute they close on!"

Then Steele lifted six smaller but no less wicked-looking devices, designed to snap on and hold in vise-like grip the paw of the unwary prowler which stepped in them.

"These are the strongest wolf-traps made, and I doubt if any Windigo could get out of one, unless he gnawed his leg off."

"Now, Michel, before making any plans, I am ready to hear what you promised to tell me when I returned—what you told David and feared to have me know."

"Dat wes an' cum back to fight wid us, Leesten!"

Michel filled his pipe, lit it, and hastily opening the door, crept the cabin to assure himself of absolute privacy. Then he began.

"You t'ink de tam you meet ma'm'selle below at de rapids det she was alone?"

"When David and I were packing up to the post?"

"Ah-hah! Wal, Michel was dere."

"What d'you mean?" asked Steele, puzzled. "You were taking care of her?"

"Yes."

"Did she know it?"

The Iroquois shook his head. "She not know."

"What were you afraid of, so near the post?"

"Beeg Antoine!"

Expected Gifts Listed

In China, a betrothal takes the form of a bridal contract, and a category of expected wedding presents is solemnly inserted in the contract that binds the engagement; but the Chinese would very much resent having this stipulation considered a "price." In Japan, it is the custom for the bride to give gifts to the bridegroom's family—and there are many other interesting forms of intra-marital exchange of presents.

FOR TRAVEL AND SPORTS; NEW HEADWEAR ATTRACTS

AN ATTRACTIVE company of summer coats, the latest (and last) offerings of the current season, are making their entry. These new arrivals have "travel," "pastimes" and "vacation" expressed in their designing as plainly as if they bore placards with the printed words and they include some novel, semiformal types that are unusually interesting.

For midsummer there are unlined cape-coats of light-colored flannels and similar coats of crepe-satin in light colors. A little heavier than these are the sleeveless coats, with capes that wrap about the arms at the front. These are made of lightweight mate-traveling now away from uniform and uninteresting headwear in the direction of individual and more complicated style in hats that express personality as well as cover heads. It is remarkable that the most important item in the costume should ever have been so neglected, and when we finally arrived at the place where women of all types and ages wore exactly the same kinds of hats we woke to the meaninglessness of our headwear.

In the group of five hats pictured here we have examples of real millinery art as it flourishes today. Each hat differs from the others and each reveals the work of an artist—rials and lined with thin silk; polka-dot silks or other printed patterns, used for lining, also serve to make a long scarf to be wrapped about the throat. These may be classed as semi-sports styles and are all attractive and practical. But cheerful colors are not confined to pastime coats; they appear, in deeper tones, in tweeds and homespuns, among the usual mixtures and neutral colors. This innovation in color, with short detachable capes that are buttoned about small, high collars, on some models, and hoods attached at the back on others, are outstanding new features in midseason styles.

Tweeds in fancy weaves, sometimes introducing lively colors, appeared in French artist of acknowledged genius for designing. From them we can gather the high-lights of the new modes—the higher crowns, the introduction of wide brims, the combinations of straw braid and millinery fabrics in the construction of shapes, the revival of flower and feather trimmings. This millinery is worthy to be worn by women of importance.

The group does not include some prominent additional shapes and styles brought out for midsummer. Among these the square-crowned Spanish sailor, with either straight or drooping brim, narrower at the back, seems destined to be a great favorite. Wide-brimmed milan hats, ballbuntings, bangkoks and hair braids are shown coats and suits early in the season and have been well received. A coat made of this new type of tweed mixture is shown at the right of the two models illustrated and is a smart garment for travel and general wear. It has emplacements of smooth-surfaced cloth on the collar, pockets and sleeves. For those who like mannish types the coat at the left is shown. It is a swagger affair, in blue and gray, or other mixtures, and is as plain as possible.

The pendulum of fashion which finally swung to the extreme of simple and unimportant styles in winter millinery started in an opposite direction this spring. It is rapidly in quantities and in varied shapes. Crocheted straw hats in the smaller, close-fitting shapes are favorites for the street and for traveling and combinations of straw and silk, so soft that they can be conveniently carried in a suitcase are in a class by themselves and are called "luggage hats." The two more important developments of the modes in millinery are the increased demand for straw hats and hair braids and the ever widening brims. In the latter particular indications are that fashion will go to extremes by the time midsummer arrives.

Read of Other Women Who Found Health

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 35 Central Ave., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them. The Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., will gladly furnish other women with these names upon request.

All announcements and political advertising shall be cash with the copy. All printing will be cash when delivered. Do not ask us to break this rule as it is final.

In some of the communities the citizens are not complying with the law in keeping up their cows, bulls and calves. This is a county law that no stock shall run at large. Cattle are running up and down the lanes, bothering the neighbors, endangering the women and children. A word to the wise should be a plenty. As we understand this law, if your cattle should get in our garden or hen houses, we are to put them up, and you are to pay damages and trouble for same. Let's do unto our neighbor like we would like for him to do for us.

The day is not far distant until this country is going to be net worked with electric lines, so that the farmers can get cheap power with which to irrigate their crops. The Muleshoe country is overlaid with an inexhaustible supply of pure water for irrigation purposes, and there has never been a well drilled that a decrease in the supply of water could be detected from pumping. Irrigation wells all pump from a thousand to three thousand gallons of water per minute, and the cost of installation is all that keeps practically every farm in the county from having an equipped irrigation pumping plant. The day is not far distant when there will be a farmer on every forty to eighty acres of land in the Muleshoe country, and a program of diversification on irrigated farms will be carried out, and this section of the country will be supplying the east and north with a large per cent of their fresh vegetable and other truck farming crops. Today the California and Florida booms are giving way and the men of the north and east are centering their eyes on West Texas, and they claim that West Texas is due at an early date for the biggest development program that has ever been heard of in the entire United States. The Plains of Texas is now demanding the attention of the world, and people from every part of the country are writing for information and literature in regard to this special section of the country. Intensified farming will soon be considered, cheap power will be in demand, and irrigation on the Plains will come into its own.

The eyes of the world are on the Muleshoe country today. People are beginning to realize that this country above the cap rock offers the best inducements for the farmer, as this is a country where wheat and cotton overlap, and a failure in feed crops is practically unheard of. Farmers are becoming educated to the fact that a country where several crops can be raised each year is the place to live. Here in the Muleshoe country if we fail to make one crop we can plant and make another crop, for wheat, cotton, alfalfa, hay crops, sorghums and all kinds of truck farming is a success, and the seasons are such that if you fail to make a good wheat or small grain crop, you have plenty of time to plant and harvest a good cotton and sorghum grain crop after the harvest season for wheat and other small grain is past. The richness of the soil and the long period that it will hold the moisture makes it undoubtedly the best farming section of the entire southwest.

STAR PARASITE REMOVER
A GREAT POULTRY REMEDY
Given fowls in drinking water or mixed in feed thoroughly rid them of all blood-sucking insects, such as ticks, lice, mites, fleas and blue bugs, destroys in them all intestinal worms and parasites. Its formula is sulphur and other ingredients known remedies for improving the appetite, purifying the blood, toning the system and preventing disease. Better prevent than try to cure. Contains no alcohol or poison. Can be given to all ages of chicks, old fowls and turkeys, any kind of weather with good results.
Its cost is very small—a one dollar bottle will last 100 fowls more than 120 days. The manufacturers are anxious for all poultry raisers to try it 60 days at their risk on the following conditions: After using 60 days if your flock has not improved in health, produced more eggs—eggs that hatch stronger and thrifter young chicks—come back to your dealer—he is authorized to refund your money.

for Economical Transportation

Everybody says "It costs so little to Own and to Operate"

Although it is bigger, and more rugged than other low-priced cars, Chevrolet has a world-wide reputation of costing less to own and to operate. This reputation has been won, first, by the longer life, slower depreciation, and freedom from repair that result from Chevrolet's modern design—and, second, by the oil and gas economy of Chevrolet's powerful valve-in-head motor. Hundreds of thousands of Chevrolet owners will tell you that this car is not only powerful, speedy, comfortable and smart appearing—but that you can enjoy its exclusive advantages at a cost which is lower than you imagine. Get a demonstration and let us show you why this is true.

Laws You Don't Want

Laws requiring the Santa Fe and other railroads to spend money needlessly, tend to keep freight rates up. Limiting length of trains and saying how many men shall be employed to run a train, to that extent prevent lowering costs. This is your problem, too. Think it over.

In a manufacturing business the greater the output the lower the cost per unit. Therefore all progressive manufacturing concerns try to increase volume of output.

The railroads of this country are in the manufacturing business. They make and sell transportation.

Obviously it is to their interest to sell their product at as low a price as possible, in order to increase volume of business handled.

To sell at a lower price they must get their costs down to as low a figure as possible consistent with good service.

They cannot lower prices for materials and supplies, or wages, the latter being fixed by agreements with the men and by the Labor Board established by law.

The only other way left is by more efficient operation—that means handling more freight per man employed. To handle more freight economically means larger locomotives, better track and longer trains.

Laws limiting the number of cars in a train, or saying how many men shall be employed on a train, are laws which to that extent prevent lowering costs and keep up rates.

Any laws that require the railroads to spend money needlessly have a tendency to keep up rates.

While primarily this is a railroad problem, in the end it affects your own business as well. That is why your attention is called to it in this way. Think it over.
