RARE OPERATION SAVES GIRL'S LIFE

Food Enters Her Stomach Through a Tube.

Indianapolis, Ind .- A long fight for the life of thirteen-year-old Beatrice McCrary of Rushville, 1rd., has been won and the girl will live and thrive, as the result of a daring and unusual Food is taken into the girl's stomach through a tube through the chest connected with the stomach. The child, ten years ago, swallowed a quantity of lye and the scars in the passageway from her mouth had become so constricted that it was impossible for solid foods to pass.

To keep her from starving, a severe operation dilating the passageway from the mouth was performed fortythree times, records show.

This operation was so painful that a general anesthesia was necessary each time. Following the operations the girl would be able to take food for a time until the burn scars again would close the passage. The child had suffered the pangs of hunger many times and she had learned to know the horror of a painful siege on the operating table.

The name of the surgeon to whom the operation was intrusted was not made public. The operation was carried out by making an incision through the chest wall and stitching an opening in the stomach wall to the borders of this incision, leaving an opening to the stomach from the ex-

For several days after the operation the life of the little patient hung in the balance, but with the healing of the wound, and the introduction of food through the new route, recovery was rapid. During the last few days before leaving the hospital, Beatrice gained weight at the rate of a pound married. Twenty-four years ago Mrs. Brice lost her first husband. Mr. Winning's wife died 12 years ago. Two years ago he returned to Scotland and discovered that his boyhood sweetheart no longer was married. He took the first train to Wishaw to resume courting. After some delay the banns were proclaimed, Mrs. Brice refused, however, to agree to an early marriage. Also there was the matter of the Scotch quota with which to contend. So it was two years before Jimmie saw his bride-to-be walking down the gangplank.

MANY STATES HAVE ACQUIRED NEW PARKS

New Areas Invite Vacationists This Summer.

Washington .- "Within a few years state parks have become one of the major recreation resources of the United States and a survey just completed shows that new areas invite the vacationist this summer," says a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

'The sixth national conference on state parks, at Hot Springs, Ark., June 14-16, will hear reports showing that during the short life time of this organization, formed in 1921, which coordinates the advance of such preserves, the number of states maintaining state parks has doubled. The survey shows that 43 of the 48 states now have state parks, state forests with more or less recreational use, or other preserves under state agencies of equivalent value and use.

"Hot Springs was chosen for this year's meeting, in recognition of the remarkable progress in the establishment of state parks and forests, or in legislative means for their acquisition, which has been made during the last few years by the states of the South and Southwest.

South Joins in Progress.

"When the conference is called to order by Chairman John Barton Payne, who is chairman of the American Red Cross, he will greet many new faces among the delegates, representatives of southern and southwestern states which have lately entered this field of public service. When the honor roll of the states is called, on the second day of the meeting, the recent achievements of southern states will be an interesting feature, because gains in the South have been especially notable.

"Since the last conference, Tennes see and Virginia have created conservation commissions with state powers, Florida has passed a state park law, Georgia and Mississippi have created forestry departments with recreational provisions, Alabama has acquired a state park committee, Louisiana will add a state park division to its conservation commission. Arkansas is acquiring a comprehensive state park system; Oklahoma is working to the same end through its forestry and game commissions; and Texas, which last year reported its record of 52 state park sites received by gift, is improving them for public recreation.

"Some state parks rival national parks in size and scenic beauty; Adirondack park in New York, with 850, 000 acres owned by the state, is exceeded only by Yellowstone; Custer State park, in South Dakota, of 107, 000 acres, is of national park standard. Other large state parks are the Catskill, of 150,000 acres; the Allegheny, of 60,000 acres and the Palisades Interstate park, 45,000 acres, in New York: the Northern Forest park, in Wisconsin, of 98,000 acres, and Itasca Lake State park, in Minnesota, inclosing the sources of the Mississippi, of earning his education by washing number of preserves allied under a central state agency, the council of prize of $1,000 in a national essay parks, with a total of 90; Michigan has 56 state parks; Texas, 52; Iowa, Foundation, Inc., of New York. So 38; Minnesota, 18; Washington, 17. Pennsylvania leads in state forests, all and will use the $1,000 to complete of which serve for varied outdoor recreation, with a total of 1,131,000 acres. Several Rocky mountain and Pacific coast states have lately acquired large state forests with great actual and potential recreationl values by exchange of school sections for national forest tracts.

Notable Additions.

"Among the notable additions to the more than five hundred state parks throughout the country, during the past year, are the preservation of part of the famous Indiana Dunes on Lake Michigan, as an Indiana State park; conservation of the forest surroundings of the Great Stone Face, of Hawthorne's tale, the marvelous profile in Franconia Notch, as a New Hampshire State forest, establishment of entirely new state park systems in Missouri and Kentucky; acquisition of Tongue mountain, between the arms of Lake George in New York, as part of the state forest preserve; and of notable caves and gorges in southeastern Ohio by the state forestry department. Historic sites, which are preserved in many state parks, have been increased by recent additions.

"State parks and forests give an intermediate recreational resource between the city park, near at hand but limited, by its nature, in development, and the magnificent national parks of the West unsurpassed in attraction, but remote from many people. State preserves give spaces for camping, plenicking, hiking, climbing, bathing, boating, hunting, fishing, winter sports, nature study, within a few hours of large populations, often near immense metropolitan centers, to which they are a great contributor to human happiness. As overnight stopping places for motor tourists along the great transcontinental highways of the country, in which one may find some new delight every morning, they are realizing the slogan of the national conference on state parks: 'A State Park Every Hundred Miles,' They are breathing spaces for congested industrial districts, sanctuaries for birds and animals and trees and flowers, fields for the study of nature un-adorned; shrines of history and patriotism, and outlets for the pieneer

SCIENTISTS TOLD OF WONDERFUL FIND

Ancient Ruins Yield Astronom ical Observatory.

New York .- The oldest astronomical observatory in the Western hemisphere, dating back centuries before the coming of the white man, may have asen unearthed from the ruing of the ancient Maya city of Copan, In Guatemala, according to information laid before the National Academy of Sciences recently by Dr. John C. Merriam, president of the Carnegie institution of Washington.

Although the institution is not yet ready to designate it definitely as such, Doctor Merriam told the members of the academy that the institution's archeological expedition to Yucatan and Guatemala had partially excavated a structure, which, from construction and position, gave every indication of having been used by the Maya priests for astronomical obser-

Considerable data had previously been obtained showing that these Indians, who set up the greatest aboriginal culture in the Western hemisphere, were probably accomplished astronomers. They developed a remarkably accurate calendar, and it is hoped that the discovery of their observatory may now assist in more accurate correlation of the Maya and Christian calendars.

Another important discovery this season, Doctor Merriam told the academy, was that of a much older and much more beautiful temple buried beneath another temple at Chichen Itza, where the Maya had their religious capital, in Yucatan. This new temple has just been found beneath the Temple of the Warriors, now almost completely excavated, and it may push the date of the first founding the Chichen Itza back many more years.

The only theory yet advanced to explain the presence of the new buried temple, Doctor Merriam said, is that some high priests, jealous of the artistic achievements of a predecessor, determined to efface the results of his hardiwork and built the larger Temple of the Warriors squarely over the earlier one. Modern civilization, however, has not only uncovered his deceit, but it has found that his art was inferior to that of his predecessor.

New Bullet Increases Range of Machine Gun

Cheyenne, Wyo.-The machine gun of 1925 vintage, a 50-caliber Browning type, appears as a challenge to the effectiveness of the Seixante-Quinze, famous artillery piece of the World

Experiments and maneuvers executed by the Seventy-sixth field artillery stationed at Fort D. A. Russell, disclosed that the improved machine gun has an effective range of 4,000 and 5,000 yards and a maximum range of 7,000 yards. The use of a streamlined base, instead of the forsponsible for the increased range.

The gun shoots at a rate of 500 bullets a minute and falls on a 45degree angle on a battery redoubt, thus being a possible factor in wiping out an entire battery crew.

Geese Eat Farmer's

Entire Wheat Crop Hankinson, N. D. - August Bladow, a farmer living near Hankinson, saw his entire 1926 wheat crop disappear down the throats of an immense flock of wild geese the other day.

Jumping into his automobile, Bladow hurried to Hankinson and appealed to F. H. Peitz, game warden, to assist him in saving the 160-acre field, "There are thousands and thousands of geese there," said Bladow. "They're so thick that a man couldn't walk on the field without stepping on them. I have tried to chase them away, but they're so tame they'll fly a few feet, and come right back again.'

Bladow said a neighbor set his dog on the geese to drive them from the field, but without suc-

When wardens arrived with Bladow they found that the geese had cleaned out the 160acre tract. High winds had uncovered the grain Bladow planted as seed. Migrating geese learned of the situation and came by thousands for the feast.

OUTH GEORGIAN DRIVES OUT ENORMOUS QUANTITY SOUR BILE WITH DODSON'S LIVER TONE.

After a long period of the worst form of weakness and the terrible feeling of sickness that comes from a system loaded with sour bile, Mr. Sam Puckett says: "When I kept getting those billous attacks reckon I took enough calomel to kill a mule. Got worse all the time. Finally I turned saffron color all over. My wife happened to read about Dodson's Liver Tone in the Weekly Constitution, so we drove to town and got a bottle. It was like magic. It drove quarts of sour bile out of me as black as ink. From that day I have felt as if I had a new liver, and whenever I begin to feel weary and bilious, with no appetite, a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone puts me to rights.'

This wonderful, quick-action, liver starter ought to be in every household, if for no other reason than to stop the use of dangerous calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is pleasant to take, even for children, and never makes you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

ROM SOUR BILE What Radio Means to the Farmer

WHERE RADIO MEANS BUSINESS

By A. ATWATER KENT

ICKING dollars out of the air was one trick of the old-time sleight-of-hand artist that never failed to give his audience a thrill. While it was recognized as a trick, the mere suggestion that dollars might, somehow, be plucked from the ether stirred the interest of the average spectator more than many other feats of legerdemain requiring much greater skill. It touched his money senseand the "pocket nerve" has long been recognized as one of the most sensitive in the human makeup. Today, however, government experts hold that the illusion of the magician has been changed into the fact of actual accomplishment. Dollars are being taken from the air. Official investigation, in fact, reveals the air as a potential source of wealth for the farmers of this country to an extent rivaled only by the productivity of the soil itself.

This transformation is being brought about by the development and extension of radio facilities and services to fit the special needs of agriculture. For it is in agriculture that radio seems certain to find its greatest development as a utility with a direct dollar and cents value to its users.

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, who has given much study to the use or radio as an aid to agriculture, recently said:

"Radio is already a vital factor in the economic and intellectual life of the farmer. It is easy to foresee millions upon millions of dollars added to the value of agriculture through services provided the farmer by radio."

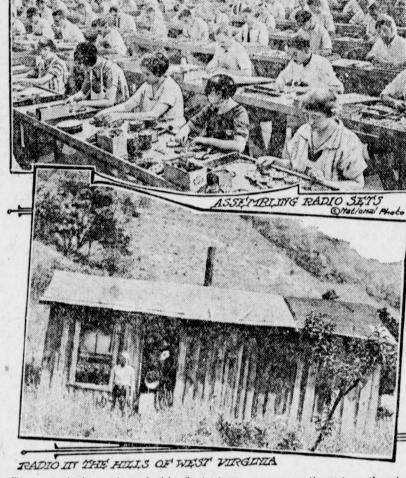

Folks on the farms and in the country towns where general prosperity depends on the prosperity of agriculture are particularly favored by radio. To the city man or woman, the use of radio is limited to recreation and the graph through a chain of stations reception of general information. They reaching from coast to coast. enjoy the concerts, the dance pro grams, the lectures and other features that come to them by day and night over the air, but their pleasure and enjoyment is the principal recompense for their investment in radio equipment.

The same programs that entertain the city listener are received also by listeners-in on the farm, where they are received with equal pleasure and satisfaction. But in addition to the programs of entertainment and general information, of interest alike to city and country, radio is being used more and more to carry to the farmer special information of direct assistance to him in the production and marketing of his crops, the breeding and care of his live stock and the prevention of loss and damage from storms, pests and other emergency conditions.

It is this service that raises radio. for the farmer, out of the class of a mere instrumentality for pleasure and utility as helpful in the business of farming as the stock ticker and the telephone are to the broker or business man in the city.

The greater emphasis on radio as a practical dollars-and-cents investment for the farmer does not come, from radio manufacturers or broadcasters or from any group primarily interested in the radio industry. It comes, instead, from the United States Department of Agriculture, whose prime interest is in the progress and prosperity of the American farmer.

The department began an experimental radio market news service in December, 1920. A laboratory transmitter at the United States bureau of standards was used to broadcast, on a 400-meter wave length, by radio telegraph from Washington, a radio marketgram and turn it over to the newscopies to the banks or stores to be posted on bulletin boards.

The practical results of this first | tures were recently put on the air by ernment authorities to broaden the arrangements with the Post Office dedozen different cities. By January. 1922, these market reports were being relayed and broadcast by radio tele-

Then came the era of radio phone broadcasting and with it the government's radio service for farmers grew by leaps and bounds. Wellestablished schedules of weather, crop reau of home economics and similar and market reports are now broadcast from more than 100 stations in all parts of the country and no agricultural community is out of reach of Uncle Sam's farm radio service.

A recent study by the department. through its 2,500 county agents, of the extent to which farmers are finding this service of direct help in their business brought what the government experts regard as convincing proof that a radio receiving set is now definitely recognized as a part of the agricultural plant of the up-to-date farmer. Typical of this view, as expressed by these farm experts, is one have seen from Earl S. Miles, county agent for Washington county, Indiana.

"Farmers in this county," Mr. Miles reported, "now think of radio in terms of an investment that will return a recreation alone, and makes of it a profit through more intelligent selling of live stock. The most encouraging thing today is to see farmers, located 15 or 20 miles from a railroad. equipped with a radio and a truck. The radio keeps them informed as to the market, and when prices are right they can put their stock on the market within two or three hours. Before the day of farm radio they had to take chances on what the market would be when they reached the yards."

Gardner C. Norcross, county agent for Plymouth county, Mass., reported still another angle of advantage for the farmer equipped with radio. "Radio," he says, "has proved one of the most effective methods of teaching better farm practices and thereby appreciably increasing farm profits.

As a result of the thorough endorsement by county agents of the benefits papers in their own towns, or give being bestowed by radio and the appreciation voiced directly by the farmers themselves, four new farm fea- value to him.

experiment, I am told, encouraged gov- the Department of Agriculture all designed to be of direct material adservice, and in April, 1921, through vantage to the farm family. These are: A farm news digest, consisting partment, wireless market reports of short items of agricultural news were broadcast several times a day not accessible to the average farm from air mail radio stations in half a reader; "Fifty Farm Flashes," a daily service of 50 timely, practical questions put by farmers and answered by agricultural authorities; the housekeeper's half hour, an informal program designed to supply both information and inspiration to housewives, putting at their disposal the great fund of facts interesting to homemakers which are developed by the government buresearch agencies and the Radio Order of Junior Gardeners, a program especially for boys and girls but helpful also to grown-ups.

The latter, it seems to me, gives an authoritative discussion of timely gardening subjects. Boys and girls who enroll in the order are later furnished the talks and supplementary gardening material in printed form.

In addition to these programs, broadcast by the government for the direct benefit of farmers, I am told that agricultural information of a sort that returns dividends in dollars and cents is being distributed by radio through more than a score of state agricultural colleges. Many of these colleges are now using radio in broadcasting their college extension courses. One fine thing about this is that boys and girls financially unable to attend college are, through radio, enabled to enroll for these courses, take their examinations and receive college credit therefor. Radio owes a great deal to Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, formerly head of the Kansas State Agricultural college at Manhattan, Kan., who was the pioneer in the broadcasting of college extension courses. As a result of the extensive use by this institution of radio as an aid to agriculture, under Mr. Jardine's direction, Kansas claims a larger percentage of farms radio equipped than any other large agricultural state.

Of necessity, the dollars-and-cents side of radio on the farm is often the deciding factor as to whether or not a farmer can afford to equip his home with a radio. But, despite any direct financial return, it is to be goubted, after all, whether the money profit that the farmer receives through his radio, however great, respresents its greatest of Steele as he turned to David. "David," he said, "I owe you an apology. When we had that snake in our hands we should have finished the job. It would have been held self-defense by any decent jury." David lifted his wide shoulders.

"We feenish dat job sometam, boss."

As Steele had foreseen, the running down of a beast patrolling a country of the size of the Wailing River valley was clearly a matter of chance.

It was decided that Steele and David, with the bloodhound, which they were anxious to test on the snow at once, should work over to the Medicine hills and Phantom lakes district with the purpose of quieting the Indians, if possible, and holding them in the country, as well as of waiting the possible reappearance of the night wailer. Michel, with Little Jacques, a French-Cree, sent from Albany to work at the post after the loss of the fur canoe, and the sole Indian to volunteer for such dread duty. were to patrol the Portage Lake country as far as the traplines on the Little Current and the Drowning. Both parties were to report back at Wailing River in two weeks. In the meantime, a jack pine at the junction of the Stooping with the main stream was chosen as the message center to which a man from each party was to return in a week for news of the other, and whither St. Onge would send any information from the post down river. In this manner they could cover a great area of the lower Wail-

If the beast, imitating that terror of the northern trapper, the wolverine, continued robbing the trap-lines, some night relentless jaws would yawn under the snow for his unwary feet-Jaws, which, if once shut, would hold their victim in grip of steel until the freezing death brought swift relief.

Before he started, Steele teturned to the house. At breakfast Denise had at a dark object moving up the white been gracions, affable, but impersonal. and Steele felt that the mood of the trail, then exclaimed: previous evening still possessed her the dogs for all there's in them. cried the excited Ojibway. "Here ees de word from Michel!" And he thrust into Steele's hands a roll of birch bark on which, in the syllable writing of the woods Indian, was burned the message from Michel, in Ojibway, left at the jack pine by Little Jacques. "Come to Portage lak', fas'," read David over Steele's shoulder. "Plen-tee work for de dog! Michel."

In his delight, Steele slapped the heavy caribou-skin capote of his friend. "The Windigo's loose over in the valley!" he cried. "When can we get there, if the snow holds off?"

"We camp at Portage lak' een t'ree sleep-mebbe two. De dogs ees tired. I leeve Wailin' Riviere onlee one sleep back," replied the Ojibway, making the bags fast with the sled lashings.

Through the day the team hurried past the silent spruce-clad hills of the valley of the Little Medicine. Through detection by the alertness of his the day the men cast anxious looks at watch-dog, David. Thus the situation | the black cloud-banks hovering in the north, for no snow had fallen in a week and it was overdue. To his delight, Steele had already learned that the dog could easily hold to a fresh trail over the ice or hard snow, packed whose turden was already sufficiently by the wind. But a fall of new snow on a trail was another matter, and But her welfare demanded his early the Windigo might not stay in the country.

That night they camped on the Wailing, and in the morning pushed on up the Stooping river trail to Portage lake, following the sled tracks of once, mademoiselle. I want you to Little Jacques. Still the snow held off, but Portage lake and Michel were fifty miles away.

In the early afternoon of the second day from the Wailing, when the narrowing of the river and the break wistful. She started as if to speak, in the hills ahead indicated their nearwatched the blood surge to her throat, ness to their goal, the snow they feared began to fall. Shortly Little Jacques' sled trail grew fainter and fainter on the wind-packed snow, and ranished. And by the time the team turned into Portage lake and sought camping place in the thick scrub back from the shore, men and dogs were sheeted in white.

"Well, we've lost again!" said Steele, bitter with disappointment. "We know bettair wen we see Michel." replied the philosophic Indian. Soon, as the early November night shut down, like a blanket, on the white lake, the birch logs blazed high before the shed-tent and the tea pail and the kettle of moose stew were simmering over red coals.

"If the old boy is loose now, he'll appear and sing again somewhere. There's some consolation in that," dropped Steele, as he filled his pipe.

"We strike hees trail yet, you nevaire-" David broke short off, to rise and peer suddenly into the wall of murk hemming in the fire in the scrub, then walked swiftly into the blackness beyond the circle of light from the fire. "What is it, David?" called the man at the fire. But there was no response from the other who had faded into the night.

The excited dogs broke into a chorus of howls to the accompaniment of the bass of the hound. There was something out there in the snow-curtained gloom. Steele rose to his feet Then a voice called: "Bo'-jo! Dareed!" And he knew that Michel had Seated with his friends by the his story.

When he and Jacques reached the Little Current, he had found all but a few of the most timid hunters on their trap-lines. There had been rumors afloat in the valley of the howling of the beast at Big Feather, but the Portage lake hunters had refused to listen to an Indian who claimed that he had heard the Windigo, in September, on the ridge across from Wailing River post.

"Dat Pierre, he try do good job." "It was Pierre, was it?"

"Yes, he try hard to scare dem on de Little Curren', too." But to the surprise of Michel, he returned to Portage lake to find a camp of hunters he had left but two days before, wild with fear and preparing to leave the country. For, in his absence, the Windigo had filled the night with horror from a neighboring ridge. Michel had lost no time in finding the trail and following it down to a creek where he lost it on the ice, and although he followed the stream for miles, falled again to pick it up. Then he sent Little Jacques with the message which David found at the rendezvous.

"Well, he's in this country and we'll keep after him," said Steele, when the headman had finished his story.

There was nothing to do but patrol the country, following the trappers' camps, in the hope that some night luck would strike them, and they should wake from their warm robes to hear the voice.

As Steele rolled himself in his blankets under the shed-tent by the fire he wondered if the girl at Walling River, who had so lightly weighed him and found him wanting, had paused to consider whether the choice of a winter of toil with the dogs, on the snow of the Hudson's Bay watershed, rather than the alternative of the soft life of the city, bore any indication of the singleness of his heart.

By REV. LEONARD A. BARRETT

John the Baptist

WE HAVE little information re garding the boyhood of John the Baptist. We first discover him living in the solitude of the desert, a strong, courageous, but lonely man. The garments which he wore were made of camel's hair, and for food he ate locusts and wild honey.

This man of the desert had a great message. It was not a political message addressed especially to the Roman government; nor was it a message destined to revolutionize, in a short space of time, its immoral life. John the Baptist addressed his message to the common people. It was simple, direct, and forceful. The substance of his message can be expressed in a single word, "Repent." Large crowds gathered to hear what he had to say. He taught them the value of honesty, righteousness, and fair play. He struck hard at the root of sin. He told the people that they should repent and begin to live their lives all over again. He not only spoke in public assemblies, but also baptized those who came under the conviction of his message. He was called "John the Baptist" because he baptized people. His method of baptism was unquestionably immersion. So powerful and influential was his message that many persons thought he was Jesas Christ. Those who were under this impression soon had their ideas corrected, for one day Jesus Himself came out of the crowd to John the Baptist, with the request that he baptize Him.

Any man who speaks out so convincingly and boldly as did John the Baptist, is bound to have his enemies. During the exceedingly brief period of John the Baptist's career, he unscathingly criticized those who committed crime in high places. Especially did he denounce Herod, tetrarch of Galilee, because he had divorced his wife in order that he might marry Herodias, the wife of his brother.

John the Baptist was a sort of man who would have died for the truth. While he was not afraid of what Herod said, yet he was under his control. Herod had him arrested and imprisoned as a punishment for his public criticism. While John was in the prison he became very discouraged and began to question whether or not Jesus whom he baptized was really the promised Messiah. So he sent a message to Jesus, which read, "Art thou He that should come or must we look for someone else?" The reply which Jesus sent to John was not a rebuke for his doubt, but a word of encouragement. He told him all that was being accomplished, that the good work was prospering, and that he should not doubt, but have faith and courage. Addressing the crowd of people around Him, Jesus told them how great was his estimation of John the Baptist.

The career of John the Baptist, though brief, was of great value. He was the greatest man of his age.

While John the Baptist was in prison, Herod celebrated the anniversary of his birthday by giving one of his lavish and extravagant banquets. Upon this occasion the daughter of Herodias, whose name was Salome. danced before Herod. He was so pleased with her dancing that he promised to give her whatever she should ask. After consulting with her mother, she returned and asked flaming birch logs, the headman told | not for money, power, or position, but for the head of John the Baptist. Herod was not pleased with the request, but he had made his promise to the dancing girl in the presence of many of his guests, and pride urged him to grant it. He was afraid of the taunt and jeer of those about him should he refuse the request. False pride has been the undoing of many persons. For his oath's sake, therefore, although he knew it was wrong and inwardly resented it, he commanded that John the Baptist be killed in the prison and the request of Salome granted

Herod and his kingdom have long ago crumbled to dust, but the influence of the personality of John the Baptist abides with us still.

following yarn: Edward Justus Mayer, author of "The Firebrand," takes delight now in recounting the story of his first meeting with Mrs. Elinor Glyn, whose one-time startling "Three Weeks" is by way of being Victorian in comparison with the modern novels. It was when Mr. Mayer was only too glad to interview certain celebrities for a moving-picture magazine and fifty dollars. Lady Glyn was indicated by the editor as one whose say would be interesting to his readers. The Lady Elinor received Mr. Mayer's first question with a sigh, gazing at the orange draperies of the hotel room's windows, and whispered: "Orange, orange; that is the color of love!" Mr. Mayer tried another question, but Lady Elinor was as in a trance. "Orange, orange," she breathed: "that is the color of love." He made further overtures toward conversation. but each time he was stunned by the irrelevancy, "Orange; that is the color of love!" Finally Mr. Mayer picked his hat off the table, "Mrs. Glyn," he concluded the interview, "I think you are a d-n fool!"

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC-Brotherly Love and Forgiveness.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-A Lesson in Reconciliation.

I. Their Birth (25:21-26).

In answer to Isaac's prayer, seed was given unto him. Before the children were born God revealed unto Rebekah the fact that the elder should serve the younger. God reversed the ordinary law concerning the position of the elder son.

II. Esau Sells His Birthright (25:

27-33). 1. It was right that Jacob should have the birthright and the blessing, for it was according to God's plan which had been preannounced, but his scheme to get them is to be condemned. He took advantage of a brother's weakness to drive a sharp bargain.

2. Esau the profane (Heb. 12:16, 17)

Many think that profanity is only swearing, but swearing is not the most common profanity. To be under the sway of appetite is to be a profane person. Esau was a supreme example. He sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage. This birthright was the right of being at the head of the patriarchal family, a position of honor and influence, as well as being the inheritor of a double portion of the father's estate. This being a gift of God, it should not be despised. In the moment of his distress he thought only of that which would bring him some carnal satisfaction. He was willing to relinquish all claims on the future if only his present desire could be gratified. A profane person, therefore, is one who for the enjoyment of the present will forfeit all claims upon the future.

III. Jacob Secures the Blessing (Gen. 27).

1. Esau requested to get venison for his father (vv. 1-4).

Isaac loved Esau because of his venison (Gen. 25:28). He ought to have loved him because he was his son. It is a sad commentary upon a father that his love for his son had such a sordid basis as that of his stomach.

2. Rebekah's scheme (vv. 5-33). God had said to her that the elder should serve the younger. It was His plan that Jacob should be at the head, but God was able to bring His own

3. Esau's remorseful cry (vv. 34-36), When he came to realize that he had not only lost his birthright but the blessing, his conscience smote him and he earnestly begged for a blessing, even seeking it with bitter tears.

IV. Jacob Meets Esau (Gen. 33:1-

11). 1. As a result of Jacob's cunning and deceit he was obliged to flee from home to save his life. In spite of his selfishness and sin God appeared to him at Bethel.

2. Prayer for deliverance from Esau's wrath (32:9-12).

He was about to meet his brother, whom he had wronged some twenty years before.

(1) He made his plea on the basis of God's covenant. Jacob came in line with the Abrahamic covenant, so he had a right to plead that relationship. (2) He plead that he was in God's way. We should assure ourselves that we are going according to God's will, then make our pleas before Him on that ground. (3) He made a definite plea. He told God plainly of his danger. He said, "Deliver me from the hand of my brother." 3. The angel wrestles with Jacob, (32:22-36).

Observe that it was not Jacob wrestling with the angel, but the angel wrestling with Jacob. Jacob did not get the blessing because he wrestled. but he was not blessed until he had been crippled and in his helplessness clung to God.

4. Jacob gets a new name (32:27-

This experience at the ford of Jabbok wrought a mighty change in Jacob. "Jacob" with his cunning and deceit was left behind and "Israel," "a prince with God," entered the land. V. Esau and Jacob Reconciled (83:

At Jabbok Jacob got right with God. so now he easily got right with Esau. It is easy to get right with our brother after getting right with God.
