Land Of More For More People

Labor Day is an important American holiday, not only for those in the ranks of labor, but for every citizen in this land.

In Europe, the great day of labor is May 1, May Day. It has often been observed with demonstrations and many times it is marked by riots. But in our country we have another way of celebrating a holiday dedicated to the men and women of labor.

Americans celebrate by simply enjoying the fruits of their labors. And what are those fruits of labor developed in? A climate of free enterprise.

Among the fruits of American labor are leisure and the means with which to enjoy it. Life is becoming more full and meaningful for more and more people. The greatest productivity rate in the world has produced the highest standard of living the world has ever known. And there seems to be no end in sight for the continuous expansion of opportunity for every American.

The late Russell Davenport, a famed editor, in seeking a phrase to describe this dynamic condition of our society, called it "the permanent revolution." That is to say, things are ever and constantly improved for the average man and woman.

All of us know many individual instances of people who have dramatically taken advantage of the marvelous opportunities America affords. Still even now there are typical American "success stories" being written by men and women every day. While the novels of Horatio Alger are no longer read by young people, still there is no dearth of inspired and motivated people who work hard and get ahead nowadays as well as in the past.

That the hard work theme is still valid explains the continuing influence of Horatio Alger. As one of the first and perhaps most famous of American motivational writers, his name is perpetuated in the annual Horatio Alger awards given each year to individuals who have conquered manifold difficulties to rise to positions of eminence in their fields.

As chairman of a recent awards celebration, I had the privilege of presenting the Horatio Alger award among others to a Jewish realtor in Chicago, my inspiring long term friend Arthur Rubloff. As a boy, Arthur was forced to leave school at the age of 12. He worked as a galley boy on a Great Lakes freighter. Today he heads a $40-million real estate company and is active in other businesses; he is a leader in Chicago civic improvement activities.

When Arthur Rubloff received his award he was asked to name the quality to which he attributed his success — in other words, from humble beginnings how he had reached his goal. His answer was one word, "Persistence."

Labor Day is good for America for it reminds us of how we became what we are — the most creative nation in history.

Heavy Rains Tapering Off

The heavy rains of the past three days tapered off Saturday to mainly showers in North Central and Northeast Texas.

Forecasts indicated little rain is in the immediate future. In South Texas particularly, west of San Antonio, residents were mopping up after severe rainfall and some flooding in that region Friday.

The floods took at least one life, drowning Juan Aguirre at a low water crossing in Sonora.

U.S. 90, the main highway link between San Antonio and Del Rio, was closed for a time Friday, as were lesser roads in the region.

Tall City weather was hot, dry and humid Saturday with more of the same forecast for today and Monday. Skies remained cloudy to partly cloudy throughout the day but refused to let any more moisture fall on the city after heavy August rains.

Midland's high temperature Saturday hit 91 degrees after a nighttime low of 69 was recorded. National Weather Service (See WEATHER Page 5A)

Sniper Kills Three; Suspect Is Arrested

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A sniper terrorized motorists on a lonely stretch of desert for almost six hours before dawn Saturday, killing three persons, injuring six others and riddling several autos with bullets.

A car matching the description provided by witnesses was pulled over about 25 miles west of Blythe, a city on the California-Arizona border, and the driver was arrested without a struggle, Riverside County Undersheriff Robert Presley said.

Presley identified the man as Richard Harold Hicks, 34, of Tucson, Ariz. He was booked for investigation of murder and assault with intent to commit murder.

Sheriff's Capt. Cois Byrd said a .22-caliber sawed-off rifle and some expended cartridges were found in Hicks' car.

Officers said the sniper apparently chose his victims — many of them on Labor Day weekend outings — at random, pulled alongside them on Interstate 10 and fired from his moving car. Nine separate shooting incidents were reported, they said.

All of the dead were men who had been shot in the head while driving along a desolate stretch of Interstate 10, the main artery between Los Angeles and Phoenix, Ariz.

Most of the injured also had been driving, officers said, indicating that the sniper fired out the passenger's window while speeding past the victim's car to his right.

They said four of the six wounded were shot and the others were slashed with glass which shattered when bullets burst their car windows.

Presley and Byrd reconstructed the 150-mile trail of terror this way:

About 12:25 a.m., a car driven by Martin B. Esquivel was hit by three bullets while traveling east on Interstate 10. The shooting occurred near Banning, about 90 miles east of Los Angeles.

No one was injured on that occasion but the sniper continued east on Interstate 10 and apparently didn't miss again.

The first shooting death occurred at Indio, about 35 miles east of Banning, when the sniper got off the highway long enough to fatally wound Jose B. Romero, 50, of Pasadena, at the first intersection. Then he returned to the highway.

Here deputies lost track of the time sequence but they said Billy Gene Tegarden, 41, of Bell Gardens, was killed in his pickup truck about 15 miles east of Indio. Further east, about 15 miles east of Desert City, the sniper fatally wounded Herman R. Edge, 25, of Long Beach.

Presley said two truck drivers witnessed the shooting of Edge and began trailing the sniper, attempting unsuccessfully at one point to force him off the road. They used a citizen's band radio in the truck to get the license and description of the vehicle to authorities.

Police officer Larry Bright, one of the first to respond to a trouble call, was shot through the right lung as he approached the house. He was in fair condition after surgery.

Also wounded were a neighbor, Melvin Douthett, and his four-year-old grandson, Michael Tomelina, of Mesquite. They were transferred to a Dallas hospital but were not seriously hurt.

Man Arrested For Helping Smuggle Guns To Carrasco

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Authorities Saturday arrested a man they say helped smuggle the pistols used by inmates who held over a dozen persons hostage for 11 days in an attempted breakout from the Texas prison here.

A prison official also said that another man, now an inmate at the prison, was the man who actually smuggled into the prison three pistols used by Fred Gomez Carrasco and two other inmates in the incident, which ended in four deaths.

Police in San Antonio Saturday arrested Benito Gonzalez Alonzo, 39, a former inmate of the prison, then flew him to Huntsville. He was charged Friday in Huntsville with capital murder.

Prison officials say Alonzo has served a prison sentence for theft.

A prison official, who asked that he not be named, said they have evidence that Alonzo delivered the three pistols to another inmate, Lawrence J. Hall.

Hall had been questioned about a possible role in the escape.

Shortly after his questioning, he escaped from the prison but was captured Monday in San Antonio at his home.

Hall was a trusty who worked outside the prison unit during the day. He has not been named.

150 More Hurt; Engineer, His Assistant Held

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — An express train carrying homeward-bound vacationers sped through a red light at the Zagreb station and flipped over, killing an estimated 150 persons and injuring 150 more.

Almost 24 hours after the train crashed Friday night, rescue workers were still digging through the tangle of overturned railroad cars, scattered luggage and dismembered bodies. The acrid smell of smoke, burnt rubber and death hung heavy in Zagreb station.

The morgue at Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second largest city with a metropolitan area population of more than half a million, was unable to cope with all the dead. Ambulances carried scores of bodies to morgues in other cities.

The train's engineer and his assistant were arrested on suspicion that neglect had caused the accident, the worst rail disaster in Yugoslavia's history, officials said.

An investigating commission said the train had been traveling at more than 55 miles an hour when it jumped off the rails, instead of the maximum permitted speed of 31 m.p.h.

Witnesses said the locomotive snapped loose and roared into the station.

"The crash felt like an earthquake," one of the survivors recalled. "There was a child in my compartment crying. I grabbed his hand and pulled him out alive with me."

Another passenger said three of the six persons in his compartment were killed when the train derailed.

Prime Minister Of New Zealand Dies At Age 51

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister Norman E. Kirk, an opponent of U.S. policy in Vietnam and an advocate of new forms of Asian and Pacific regional cooperation, died Saturday. He was 51.

A government announcement said he died peacefully in a hospital where he was being treated for gastric influenza. He had been in poor health for months with pleurisy.

Deputy Prime Minister Hugh Watt took over the government until the Labor party caucus meets to elect a new leader. Labor has a 55-32 seat majority in Parliament.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Jerald F. Horst said President Ford "obviously is deeply sorry" and has sent a private message of condolence to the Kirk family.

The 6-foot, 250-pound "Big Norm" Kirk, a former welder and rail engineer, was elected in November 1972 in a personal triumph that returned the Labor party to power, ending 12 years of rule by the National party.

He reversed some long-standing government policies. He pulled the remaining New Zealand troops out of South Vietnam shortly after his election recognized Communist China and backed the Association of Southeast Asian Nations' proposal for an end to foreign intervention in Southeast Asia.

The son of a poor cabinet maker, Kirk began his career as a ferry engineer in Auckland harbor.

Everywhere you go in this lovely port occupied by the Turks you hear tales of pillage and destruction by the invaders, of cars being loaded aboard ships and taken to the Turkish mainland, of hotels being dismantled room by room and carried down to the docks, of donkey caravans winding up the hills to Turkish villages, laden with refrigerators, bedding, bicycles.

But drive to Paphos, another picturesque post card port on the Greek-held southern side of the island, and you hear stories of carpets and grandfather clocks carried off from the mosque, of Greeks loading up their cars and trucks with television sets and washing machines from the hundreds of abandoned Turkish homes along the coast that separate the two warring communities, of unarmed Turks being ordered to the football field for mass questioning while platoons of Greek looters move block by block through the Turkish quarter.

LATE NEWS FLASHES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavy holiday traffic and in some cases rain-dampened roads combined to bring the nation's traffic death count to 150 late Saturday night.

STRATFORD (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms struck the Texas Panhandle Saturday night, spawning at least one tornado, although most of the state spent the day drying out. The twister was reported by the sheriff's office here.

Prison Reform Panel Told To Keep Out Of Huntsville Probe

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The House Administration Committee voted more money Saturday for the Joint Legislative Committee on Prison Reform, but with strict orders for the group to stay out of the Huntsville prison incident investigation.

The House committee action followed that of the Senate Administration Committee in slashing the committee's financing request about in half. Each house will contribute $9,752.

Another "stinger" in the House committee vote was a requirement that Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Houston, vice chairman of the joint committee, appear before the House administrators and "explain" some of his recent public statements.

"We'll terminate the money if he doesn't appear," said Rep. George Preston, D-Paris.

Leland issued a statement Friday accusing L. Gov. Bill Hobby with "delaying, harassing and interfering" with the work of the prison reform group. He said there were reports that Hobby had a "personal vendetta" against the committee.

At one time the joint committee announced it would investigate the Aug. 3 Huntsville prison escape attempt in which two convicts and two of their women hostages were killed.

Later, Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said that any information the committee received would be turned over to the Walker County grand jury.

John Albach, administrative aide for the Prison Reform Committee, appeared before the House Administration group, saying Leland was unable to attend.

Albach said the joint committee was "an overall study on prison conditions and operations. We are not an investigative committee," he said.

He said any information received by the committee would be turned over to the Walker County district attorney.

"Why don't you just refer such information to the grand jury?" asked Preston.

"That's essentially what we do," Albach said.

"This committee ought to stay out of law enforcement period," said Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline.

"That's what we are trying to do," Albach said.

Preston made a motion that the committee turn down the appropriation request until Leland made a personal appearance before the committee.

Rep. R. B. McAllister, D-Lubbock, offered a compromise that the House appropriation be made with the understanding that it would be spent strictly as originally approved, for a prison reform study with recommended legislative changes.

Preston and Rep. Bill Hilliard, D-Fort Worth, agreed to go along if McAllister would attach the "stinger" that Leland appear before the committee. The record vote was 7-9 in favor.

GOOD NEWS STORY— Hamlet Of 29 Has A Lot Going On

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

HARPER, Ill. (AP) — At an intersection of gravel roads, engulfed by cornfields in northwestern Illinois, nestles the happy hamlet of Harper, population 29, where nothing ever happens.

Oh, yeah? — Several thousand hens are producing eggs in a huge Quonset-type hut ventilated by loud, humming fans.

—Nine trucks a day go to a grain elevator.

—A dozen bleating sheep graze on a corner plot.

—Dogs chase cats.

Children, who make up nearly one-third of the population, play baseball and soccer on a cleared field and tennis on a patch of ground with an imaginary net.

They have weekly contests rolling big empty cable spools down the road and they meet in a little clubhouse where they vowed to keep a secret of who put up signs on the edge of town reading: "Harper Jaycees Welcome You" and "Harper Jaycees Say Come Again."

Two children belong to Richard DeVries, 35. He lives in Harper because his parents are nearby. He has a lot of stories to tell because three days a week he is a copilot for United Airlines on Washington, D.C., and New York City runs.

Sun Ju, 16, is in the James Wignall family. Wignall is a master sergeant in the Army and is home only weekends because he commutes to Fort Sheridan near Chicago, about 125 miles away.

Wignall and his Korean wife will make Harper's population rise to 30. After two years of waiting, an adopted 6-year-old Korean girl will join the family in December.

Barbara Mathlott, 31, operates a beauty shop in her home and has 45 regular customers from the area, three from Harper. Pilot DeVries is her brother.

Framed on the wall of her shop is her proudest possession. "It's a big hair wreath," she said. "It was finished in 1881 and is made of hair collected from the head of my great-grandmother."

The hamlet's youngest couple is Rita and Paul Jones, both 28, with a 6-year-old son, Matthew. Jones drives 24 miles a day to and from a factory job in Freeport.

"We were looking around for an older home we could afford and found one in Harper," he said. "You might say we just stumbled onto Harper. We think it has a lot going for it."

'SKIPPER' THOMAS AND GRANDDAUGHTER — J. W. "Skipper" Thomas, long-time Midland resident, and his granddaughter, Ann Thomas, a senior at Southwestern University, celebrated their birthdays Friday at the Thomas residence, 2000 W. Holloway St. The Skipper, retired Humble Pipeline Co. superintendent, was 90 years young, and Ann was 21. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Thomas Jr. At noon Friday, 11 of Skipper's close friends, members of the "club," joined him for a special birthday lunch, as they have for a number of years. Skipper was the recipient of a "very special" gift. He came to Midland in 1938.

Early Morning Hours Pretty Frustrating To Man On Bridge

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The officers pitched one across the walkway to him and he left his perch long enough to grab them and scurry back.

More frustration. His lighter wouldn't work.

The officers said they would throw him some matches. But they didn't throw them as far as they had the cigarettes.

They threw them halfway across the walkway. He climbed down and cautiously reached for the fire sticks. But the officers were faster and caught him.

He was taken to a hospital for observation.

But, said the man, he might be willing to negotiate his plans for a wee sip of liquor. Something like a whole bottle.

A policeman headed for some place or other as if he were going for the liquor, although policemen are not supposed to know any liquor stores open at the illegal hour of 3 or 4 a.m.

The man also decided he would smoke a cigarette. Wouldn't you know his pack was empty.

Woman Uses Pickup To Chase Burglars Who Stole Tv Set

NORTHGLENN, Colo. (AP) — A 27-year-old woman used her pickup truck to chase down three burglars who stole her television set.

The burglars, apparently unnerved by the derring-do, drove their truck into a drainage ditch and were captured by police.

"Anyone who deprives a woman of her soap operas is asking for trouble," Linda A. Miller of Thornton said after the 3½-mile chase.

Mrs. Miller, a slim, 5-foot-2 mother of a 19-month-old son, arrived home on Wednesday to find a van truck pulling away from the curb with the back door open. She saw two men run from the rear of the house.

Finding her television set missing, she chased the truck through suburban Denver streets.

"They turned toward me, and I turned toward them," she said. "I crossed over to their side of the street and headed straight for them. I was mad. I wasn't going to let them rip me off. It was a bluffing match."

The van swerved to avoid a head-on collision. "I had to think of some way to stop them or attract attention," Mrs. Miller said. "I was running out of gas, so I just held the horn on continuously" for a mile.

The truck pulled over. "The driver said, 'Okay, lady, we'll give you back your television,'" she said. Mrs. Miller blocked the truck's exit by hitting its bumper.

She said she jumped out of her truck and shouted at the burglars "using words I wouldn't repeat now."

The burglars unloaded her television from their truck to her pickup and tried to escape. The truck, however, became stuck in an irrigation ditch and Mrs. Miller called police from a nearby house.

Booked on second-degree burglary charges were Tony J. Anya, 31, Donald R. Valdez, 23, and Tony A. Gonzales, 22, all of Denver.

Klan Burning Fewer Crosses, But Recruiting More

after dark," shrugged state grand dragon John W. King, a Winfield lawyer. "They don't care to be seen at a Klan rally."

He said that's because the Klan is famed for clandestine terrorism, murder, whippings and fire to impose its version of law and order—and word hasn't gotten around that times have changed.

The bloody image often repels potential members whose politics may lie just south of Atlanta the Hun's but who balk at violence — it appeals to what King calls the "nitwits, wild men and radicals."

"But the haters pass right on through," King added. "They don't stay long."

This peaceful dragon is state commander of the United Klans of America, Inc. (UKA).

—Two large and luxurious motor homes, one for King, the other for Robert Shelton of Tuscaloosa, Ala., the UKA's imperial wizard.

Keeping tabs on the UKA and other Klans used to involve millions of FBI dollars and hundreds of agents and informers. But except for a militant klavern here and there, FBI spokesmen say things have been routine since 1971.

The FBI says membership in the Klans has declined considerably since 1971 but numbers of Klan organizations continue to be involved in atrocities denying others their constitutional rights. The FBI estimates that United Klans of America, the largest group, has a membership of 1,700. In 1972, they estimated it at 3,200.

Actually, Klans were never very secret to the FBI or interesting to police.

By dark nearly 200 cars and pickups were parked on the field but over half left when the small cross flamed near the fence gate, beside the floodlit welcome sign.

—An 18-wheel flatbed truck as a platform for musicians and speakers. Microphones stood on it, flanked by American and confederate flags. Strings of electric light bulbs dangled from temporary poles.

—An old Army tent to shelter a concession stand, where Klan women sold soft drinks, sandwiches and slivers of cake; two smaller tents for rank and file workers.

—Two portable outhouses.

"The Jews are the anti-Christ!" cried Shelton. "People say Christ was a Jew. He was not. Show me anywhere in the old King James Bible where it says Jesus Christ was a Jew!"

Our country was founded by men with names like Hamilton, Adams and Washington, said Shelton, and he mourned today's "Kissingers, Schlesingers and Goldsteins."

At the end, 23 hooded klansmen in white satin robes waved torches in a ritual, then lit the big cross. It was not particularly spectacular; rain had diluted the diesel fuel.

Not many hooded King's pleas to stick around and sign on.

"If you're interested in talking to us about the Klan, we're here to do it and we're not in any hurry to leave," he called.

But it was around midnight. The exodus continued.

"We are planning to change our style," King told a newsman while unplugging his public address system. "We're going to hold meetings in motel banquet halls, places like that, instead of out in fields."

Blind Cyclist Plans To Take Tour Of Kenya's Wild Country

By GEOFFREY MILLER

LONDON (AP) — Mike Tetley, who was blinded during army service in Kenya, plans to return there and cycle 500 miles through wild country.

Not alone. He will be on the back seat of a tandem, with a partner who can see to steer the way.

Tetley, 44, lost his sight while serving in the Kenya Regiment and fighting the Mau-Mau rebels in the '50s.

As he lay in hospital in Nairobi, a Salvation Army officer visited him and gave him a Braille watch.

He came home to England and trained as a physiotherapist at St. Dunstan's, a rehabilitation center for the blind. At the same time he took up tandem cycling.

Now he is going back to Kenya to repay his debt to the Salvation Army. He plans to visit a Salvation Army school for the blind at Thika and demonstrate some of the things a blind man can do — including tandem cycling with a seeing partner.

"I enjoy tandem riding," Tetley said. "I've been doing it for several years now, and wherever I go on my tandem we attract attention."

"I thought that if we attracted notice in Africa, and it got around to the blind boys at the Salvation Army's school, it could do a lot of good."

Tandem cycling has a long tradition among sports for the war-blinded at St. Dunstan's. But this will be the first time anyone trained at the center has embarked on such a long ride.

Tetley has a regular cycling partner in Britain, Dennis Bray. But in Kenya he will be partnered by Edwin Rodriguez, a 25-year-old teacher, who will meet him on arrival in Nairobi.

They plan to pedal out from Nairobi and ride 75 miles a day, making their way via Mombasa to Malindi in about six days. The route lies through Tsavo, notorious for man-eating lions.

"The lions stopped the construction of a railway for two years by gobbling up the workers," Tetley said.

"We should run across every form of big game, so I am taking some 'fire crackers' to frighten them off."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Sept. 1, the 244th day of 1974. There are 121 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this day in 1939, Germany invaded Poland. It was the beginning of World War II.

On this date — In 1662, 100 English Quakers led by William Penn sailed for America.

In 1807, a court in Richmond, Va., acquitted former Vice President Aaron Burr of charges of treason.

In 1862, liquor rations were abolished in the U.S. Navy.

In 1923, the Japanese cities of Tokyo and Yokohama were devastated by an earthquake.

In 1945, Japan surrendered aboard the U.S. battleship Missouri at the end of World War II.

In 1946, the people of Greece voted in a plebiscite to recall King George II to the throne.

Ten years ago: A county grand jury held that New York city police Lt. Thomas Gilligan was not criminally liable in the killing of a 15-year-old black boy whose death had touched off widespread racial violence.

Five years ago: The military seized power in oil-rich Libya and proclaimed that Arab country a socialist republic.

One year ago: President Nixon and Vice President Agnew met for two hours and discussed the allegations that Agnew had received kickbacks from Maryland contractors. Former Defense Secretary Melvin Laird is 52. Songwriter Harold Arlen is 74.

Thought for today: It is better to have looked and lost than never to have looked at all — humorist James Thurber, 1894-1961.

Youth Council Sees Ordered Phase-Out Of Reform Schools

GATESVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Although an appeal is almost certain, Smith pointed out that the council is in an uncertain position because its budget will be considered for renewal by the 1975 legislature.

The budget request submitted by the council includes $64 million allocated to the rural institutions—two thirds of the total amount.

Meanwhile the state auditor has reported that the number of boys held at the Gatesville State School has been cut in half as discharges surpassed new commitments.

State Auditor George McNeil reported in his annual audit of the school's operations ended August 31, 1973, that there were 858 new commitments while 1,548 boys were discharged.

McNeil quoted Texas Youth Council officials attributing the decline to a new law giving 18-year-olds adult rights and to a federal court order placing restrictions on disciplinary actions at the school.

He said the officials also cited a reluctance of juvenile courts to commit delinquents to the Texas Youth Council facilities because of the federal court order.

The chairman of the Texas Youth Council says he expects a federal court order within a week to order a phasing out of the state's rural reform schools.

U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler has been considering a suit challenging the council's effectiveness in rehabilitating juvenile delinquents.

Youth Council chairman Forrest Smith said Friday he expects Justice's ruling to be a "very, very stringent order" following along the lines proposed by the Justice Department.

That proposal would result in "an almost complete phasing out of all our institutions," Smith said, because it suggests that juvenile offenders be treated within 100 miles of their homes.

Smith spoke to the council's 24-member advisory committee and advocated a gradual shift from the rural institutions to urban treatment programs. This proposal has been recommended by Sam Houston State University correctional experts.

Flow From Other States Hikes Texas Population

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Immigrants from other states are swelling Texas' population by almost 30,000 persons a year, the editor of the Texas Business Review said Saturday.

Robert Ryan also said the most important factor in the growth or decline of cities is not their birth rates but the job opportunities they provide or fail to provide.

The Review is published by The University of Texas at Austin's Bureau of Business Research.

Ryan said that during the 1960s, the number of persons moving into Houston exceeded the number moving out by 310,000, while the natural increase from births was 257,000. Dallas grew by 243,000 through migration and 193,000 through natural increase.

"On the other hand, El Paso, a city with a high birth rate but limited expansion of its job market lost 33,000 through migration; more families moved out than in. The increase in the El Paso population was due entirely to the birth of 99,000 new El Pasoans," he said.

He said 185 counties had a net loss due to migration during the 1960s, and in many of them the total population fell.

"With striking consistency, the rural counties that have lost population through migration have lost proportionately far more Negroes than whites," Ryan said.

But, statewide, the Negro population increased during the 1960s at a 56 per cent higher rate than the white population, he said.

"More than a third of Texas' total migration gain was due to an influx of Negroes, a dramatic contrast with the black flight from the Southeast. Second, the Negro birth rate has been very substantially higher than the white birth rate. The Negro death rate is also higher, but not by so wide a margin," he said.

New California Law Helps Rape Victims

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Harassing questions about a rape victim's prior sex life will no longer be permitted in California trials under a new state law.

Calling the measure a landmark change in the state's 100-year-old rape statutes, Gov. Ronald Reagan signed the legislation Friday.

It strictly limits courtroom interrogation of victims.

Supporters said the bill would reduce the embarrassment and intimidation that keeps many rape victims from reporting the crimes.

"The jury tears her apart if she's had a boyfriend or has had sex in the past. We contend that's not relevant to whether she's been raped," said Geraldine Greenwood, a lobbyist for the National Organization for Women.

"The man's sexual history is not considered relevant to the trial, so the woman's shouldn't be."

Under the law effective Jan. 1, testimony about an alleged rape victim's prior sexual conduct cannot be introduced in a trial until a special hearing is held.

The jury may hear the evidence only if the judge finds it is relevant to the credibility of the victim as a witness. It could not be used if it dealt with whether the victim consented to the act.

Testimony is also permitted about the victim's prior sexual relationship, if any, with the defendant.

"This keeps the victim of a rape from becoming the victim of the trial," said state Sen. Alan Robbins of North Hollywood, author of the bill. "The rape laws have gone almost a century with no change. This is a first step."

Ford Stay In Fe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford asked Congress to delay a vote on a $4.5 billion federal plan to cut 40,000 government jobs.

In a memo, Ford said the plan would hurt the economy and that the federal government should hold down the cost of the current fiscal year.

The President's move is a fight against the federal government's plan to cut 40,000 jobs.

Ford Asks 90-Day Stay For Increases In Federal Salaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford asked Congress Saturday to defer for 90 days an October pay increase for 3.5 million federal employees and said he will push ahead with a plan to cut 40,000 jobs from the government payroll.

In a message to Congress, Ford said the two moves taken together would lop about $1 billion from the federal budget for the current fiscal year that began July 1.

The President billed his announcements as part of the fight against inflation, saying: "The federal government is taking an essential first step in holding down the federal budget and showing the way of restraint by all Americans."

Congress has 30 days in which to disapprove Ford's plan to postpone automatic Oct. 1 pay hikes for 1.4 million civilian workers and 2.1 million military personnel. In the absence of a vote to disapprove, the higher wage rates would go into effect Jan. 1.

The increases, to be paid under an automatic formula for federal salary levels comparable with those in private employment, are expected to average about 5.5 per cent.

Ford also announced he is accepting a plan by former President Richard M. Nixon to reduce the federal civilian payroll by 40,000 jobs below the total budgeted for the current fiscal year.

changed in the Carrasco escape attempt.

The prison official said Alonzo obtained the guns from George Cisneros, 30, of San Antonio, who obtained them from three other men who have been charged with buying the guns for Carrasco.

Cisneros has been charged with capital murder in the case and is still at large.

Also charged with capital murder are two San Antonio brothers, Don Michael Colsten and William Henley Colsten and Jimmy Dan Brown. The Colsten's and Brown are in jail in Huntsville.

Carrasco's wife, Rosa, has been charged with aiding and abetting his escape. She is at large.

Hostages Elizabeth Yvonne Beseda and Julia Standley, workers in the prison library where the hostages were held 11 days, were shot to death in the escape attempt Aug. 3.

Carrasco and a confederate, Rodolfo Dominguez, also died in the gunfire while the third inmate involved in the escape attempt, Ignacio Cuevas, was not injured. He also is charged with capital murder, which carries the death penalty.

A Walker County grand jury who has been investigating the escape attempt and Gov. Dolph Briscoe has promised a public court of inquiry after they complete their work.

Hurricane Bears Down

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Carmen bore down on the tiny Swan Islands in the northwestern Caribbean late Saturday. Forecasters said the storm should be lashing the isolated islands with 85 mile-per-hour winds and heavy rains Sunday.

Squalls and gale-force winds from Carmen, the season's third named storm and second hurricane, were expected to hit the Cayman Islands south of Cuba late Saturday, said the forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

The storm posed no immediate threat to the United States and appeared to be following a course that would take it across the Caribbean to Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula, the forecasters said.

At 6 p.m. EDT, Carmen's center was reported at latitude 17.1 north and longitude 79.9 west, or about 150 miles southwest of Kingston, Jamaica, and 300 miles east of the Swan Islands.

It was expected to maintain a westerly course with a forward speed of 20 to 25 m.p.h., gradually increasing in size and strength through Sunday morning, the forecasters said.

UTPB Enrollment Hits 1,122 Mark

University of Texas of the Permian Basin enrollment hit 1,122 at the end of registration Saturday, exceeding last year's total registration figures.

The unofficial count, taken at the end of regular registration at noon Saturday, represents an approximate 10 per cent increase over the 1,012 students who had signed up at the close of regular registration for the 1973 fall semester.

Late registration, set for Sept. 3-17, is expected to bring in more than 100 additional students for an estimated total of 1,250 according to university officials.

Classes begin at the upper-level university Tuesday.

Turk Tanks, Infantry Seize 15 Greek Cypriot Hostages

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Turkish tanks and infantry entered the Greek-Cypriot village of Akheriyou Saturday and seized 15 Greek Cypriot hostages, the Cyprus government charged.

A government statement said that a few hours after the Turkish raid, blindfolded and bullet-riddled bodies of a 68-year-old Greek Cypriot villager and a 60-year-old woman were discovered 500 yards from Akheriyou.

Three nearby villages were abandoned by Greek Cypriots on Saturday.

A spokesman for the United Nations peacekeeping force had no immediate comment on the reported Akheriyou incident, which came 15 days after a cease-fire took effect on the island.

In Nicosia, Dr. Vassos Lyssarides, leader of the Cyprus Socialist party, warned of bloodshed between Greek Cypriots unless the government disarms the EOKA-B underground.

In Salonica, Greece, Premier Constantine Caramanlis blamed the U.S. government, the Western alliance and the former ruling military junta for aggravating the Cyprus crisis, and said their attitude led to "savage" territorial expansion by Turkey in Cyprus.

But at the funeral of Doros Loizou, a poet and leader of the Socialist party youth section, Lyssarides said that "unless President Glafkos Clerides takes steps to disarm the rightists 'the volcano will erupt for it will not be possible to hold the people back'."

The 30-year-old Loizou was shot to death Friday in an attempt on the life of Lyssarides, who was slightly wounded.

Lyssarides blamed the attack on EOKA-B, the extreme right-wing Greek Cypriot underground which took part in the Greek-led coup against Makarios six weeks ago.

A new U.S. envoy to Cyprus, William R. Crawford, presented his credentials to Clerides Saturday. Crawford replaces Rodger P. Davies, who was slain 12 days ago in an anti-American riot at the embassy.

Crawford met with Clerides as hundreds of Lyssarides' pro-Makarios supporters marched silently in a funeral procession for Loizou carrying placards saying: "Democracy lives."

"Makarios—the guarantee of freedom and 'CIA-murders'— Lyssarides claims the CIA was behind both the EOKA-B attempt on his life and the ouster of Makarios.

Loizou's father, walking in the funeral procession with tears running down his face, said: "Stop the bloodshed, we've had enough, we can't take any more. I hope Doros is the last to die."

Holiday Death Toll At 11 Late Saturday

By The Associated Press

The Texas violent death toll rose Saturday in the long Labor Day weekend count.

At a late hour, the death count had reached 11, with nine persons dying in traffic accidents.

The department of Public Safety forecast a toll of 34 in traffic alone during the holiday which ends at midnight Monday. The death count began at 6 p.m. Friday.

Latest reported deaths included:

- Michael A. Demario and Robert James White, both Ft. Hood soldiers, suffered fatal injuries at 1:05 a.m. Saturday on Interstate 35 within Temple's city limits.
- Thomas Eugene Williams, 66, of Newcastle was killed in a two-car, head-on collision at 11 a.m. Saturday a mile east of Crosbyton.
- Martha Jane Tahamont, 21, of Sheppard Air Force Base at Wichita Falls, was killed in a car-truck collision at 11:10 p.m. Friday, 1.5 miles north of Alvord in Wise County.
- Jackie Lynn Hamlett, 17, of Lechard died in a one-vehicle accident when her car ran off the highway at 10:20 p.m. Friday, 1.3 miles south of Fentress in Guadalupe County.

- Manuel Escobedo, 36, of El Paso was killed in a one-truck rollover on Interstate 10 in El Paso at 11 p.m. Friday.
- Charles Ford Barnes, 58, of Childress, was killed when his motorcycle struck a cow on U.S. 287 at 2:22 a.m. Saturday 6.8 miles west of Childress.
- Virginia W. Thiede, 48, of Lewisville was killed when her car struck a stalled truck-trailer on Texas 121 near the entrance to the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport at 11:05 p.m. Friday.
- Margaret Henderson, 31, of Dallas was killed Friday night in an old-fashioned shootout with another woman. Police said the two argued earlier in the day and the victim shot at Mrs. Henderson, who got a 12-gauge shotgun and blasted her opponent.
- Billy McLemore, 32, was shot to death in his Waco home Friday night. Officers took one person into custody.
- Silvester Justice, 46, of Lubbock, died early Saturday when a tractor-trailer rig collided with the rear of his pickup in Lubbock.
- Two men died in a head-on collision one mile east of Rio Grande City on U.S. 83 Saturday. Dead at the scene were Raphael Garcia 33, and Ricardo Rosalez, 36, both of Rio Grande City. Officials said each was traveling alone at the time of the mishap.
- Marvin Hale, 23, of Stephenville, died in a two-car collision early Saturday in Haltom City, a Fort Worth suburb, on Loop 300. Also killed in the other car was Mary Glover Brackney, 27, of Smithfield. Two persons were injured. Officers said one of the cars was traveling in the wrong lane.

Pillage --

for looters. But mass theft is strange to Cyprus, where until the war many people left their keys in their cars and never bothered to lock their doors at night.

Now, the estimated 50,000 homes and thousands of shops and factories abandoned on Cyprus provide ripe pickings for looters on both sides of the Attile line dividing the Turkish and Greek areas.

A spokesman for the Cyprus government estimated that looting and destruction of Kyrenia's shops and homes—aside from direct war damage—has passed $5 million.

A government press release says "600 cars belonging to foreign residents and Greek Cypriots have disappeared from Kyrenia."

"Thirty-one of those cars belonged to me—they have been taken to Turkey on a ship," says Chris, the new doorman at the Cyprus Hilton. Last month he ran a big travel agency and car rental company near Nicosia's Turkish quarter. Now his business has gone bust like the windows and doors of his shop.

Employees living in the American compound of the big copper mines at Xeros, near the western end of the Turkish held area, had their houses looted by the Turks.

Greek Cypriots fleeing the Turkish advance looted shops and homes in the nearby Turkish villages and, Turkish reports said, carried away 281 men from the villages.

Driving out of Lefka, east of the copper works, AP correspondent David Lancaster reported "dozens of Turks were driving in what appeared to be abandoned Greek Cypriot cars, their license plates ripped off. One enterprising peasant family had three donkeys piled high with stolen chairs, mattresses and even a pair of underwater swimming fins."

Captured Deserter Gives Others Advice

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Ronald James Anderson says he hopes other United States armed forces deserters in Canada will learn something from his experience and will be cautious in visiting the United States.

The 31-year-old U.S. Army deserter was captured by American authorities Aug. 24, as he, his wife Marion, and her 11-year-old son attempted to enter the United States on a visit to his mother.

"I hope others in my position will take it as a lesson and be cautious," said Anderson.

He was asked in a telephone interview Saturday whether he had any advice for someone attempting to outrun American authorities.

"I don't know whether I'm any position to counsel any-

Two Arrested In Abduction

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two Philadelphia men have been arrested in the Aug. 22 abduction of a business executive who was held for 36 hours by captors who demanded $250,000 ransom, the FBI said Saturday.

Joseph J. Baxter, 37, surrendered Saturday morning at FBI headquarters here, officials said. Emmett V. Ware, 37, was arrested at his home Friday night.

Both men were charged with conspiracy to obstruct, delay or affect interstate business by actual or threatened force against Edward B. Patterson, vice president of the Arthur H. Thomas Co., a scientific equipment firm engaged in interstate commerce.

Neither man was specifically charged with kidnap, the FBI said. They were scheduled to appear before a U.S. magistrate later.

Patterson, 45, who is from Haddonfield, N.J., was abducted at gunpoint, tied up and blindfolded after he drove into the parking lot of his firm, authorities said. He was released unharmed 36 hours later in suburban Philadelphia.

President Ford Visits Camp David

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Ford played 18 holes of golf Saturday at the swank Burning Tree Club and then came here for a family holiday.

Ford had visited Camp David briefly when he was House Republican leader but never spent the night and was never here as vice president.

Psychologist Says 'Risky-Shift' Led To Acquiescence By Nixon's Aides

By MARY GANZ
NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP) — A type of group pressure called the "risky-shift" often led aides of former President Nixon to acquiesce to questionable actions, a psychologist said Saturday.

"In the Nixon group, the norm was to be tough and strong, take risks, be uninhibited in dealing with the enemies, the press, the intellectuals," said Bertram H. Raven, of UCLA in an address to the American Psychological Association convention.

"The group pressures on the individual were to adopt a position which was riskier, bolder, stronger, less inhibited than that taken by the other members of the group."

Raven said he based his analysis on testimony before the Senate Watergate committee and on transcripts made public of taped White House conversations.

Raven former White House counsel John W. Dean III, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and aide Jeb Stuart Magruder all expressed profound shock in retrospect, at G. Gordon Liddy's plan to use high-paid prostitutes, kidnappings, blackmail and burglaries to help destroy the Democrats.

"When Liddy presented his plan, however, 'none said anything more than suggesting that that was not exactly what they had in mind,' Raven said.

"Why not? One answer might be that Liddy was one of (Charles) Colson's men, the superhard fighter. A strong display of disapproval would have been conveyed as indicating weakness, of not being a good team member," he said.

Presidential adviser John D. Ehrlichman reacted similarly in 1971, Raven said, when he discovered the White House plumbers had "gone far beyond their basic mission in plugging information leaks. They had burglarized the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist."

"Had Ehrlichman taken a strong position, admonished the plumbers, fired them and reported them for illegal acts, the entire Watergate scandal might never have occurred," Raven said.

But Ehrlichman "merely indicated that he did not agree with this method of investigation" and suggested that they not do it again.

Raven said the importance of toughness was apparent to members of the President's circle, from "falling stars" like Daniel P. Moynihan, who had been "too contemplative and too apologetic for liberal causes," and from the rise of men like Colson, who once said he would "walk over my own grandmother if necessary" to help Nixon's re-election campaign.

"The lessons were clear for all who wished to see: To be a rising member of the (inner circle) you had to be loyal to the chief, steadfast, strong, hard-hitting, merciless to your enemies, and not get wound up worrying too much about the methods that you used."

Burn Victims Remaining In Hospital

ODESSA — Three of four burn victims who were injured when a pipeline exploded Friday morning remained in guarded condition Saturday at Medical Center Hospital here.

The fourth victim, Lee R. Anselby of Odessa was treated and released Friday morning with burns over less than 20 per cent of his body.

Remaining in guarded condition Saturday were Johnny Ellen, 49, and John Dotson, both of Odessa and Charlie Nunn, Jr. of Monahans.

Ellen suffered burns over 60 per cent of his body and Nunn over 40 per cent of his.

The men were burned when a pipeline exploded on the Roy J. Parks Jr. oil lease at East Loop 338 and Interstate 20.

Saturday it had not been definitely decided if Ellen and Nunn were going to be transferred to Brooke Army Hospital burn center at San Antonio.

crash overturned the car they were in. He said he managed to climb out, his clothes soaked with blood.

"I'm alive. I'm alive — that's all I know," he said.

Most of the more than 600 persons aboard the Belgrade-to-Dortmund train were vacationing Yugoslav workers returning to their jobs in West Germany, railroad sources said.

Bodies and luggage littered the tracks, cranes lifted chunks of debris and rescue workers frantically cut through the tangled steel with torches in their search for more victims.

The Yugoslav government proclaimed a day of mourning.

Medical experts sped to Zagreb from other Yugoslav cities to help local doctors identify the bodies.

The investigating commission said the first signal at the entrance to the station was out of order, but that the main signal was working and showed red. It said the engineer went through the red light and entered the switches at too high a speed.

The train left Belgrade on Friday afternoon and was to make a scheduled stop in Zagreb en route to Dortmund.

Officials said it was 10 minutes behind schedule when it approached Zagreb, Yugoslavia's second largest city 300 miles northwest of Belgrade, the capital.

Midland Youths Held By Police

Two Midland youths, 10 and 12, were in custody late Saturday after being apprehended by juvenile authorities following a break-in of a service station at 501 W. Wall St.

Police said one of the youths had $19 in change on his person that was believed to have been taken in the burglary. Entry to the service station was gained through a window.

Employees at the station estimated that $500 damage was received by a cash register in the burglary.

Girl Is Treated After Beating

ODESSA — A 15-year-old Oklahoma City, Okla., girl was in satisfactory condition in Medical Center Hospital here Saturday after being taken there in critical condition Friday from injuries received during a beating.

Teresa Casey, daughter of Carl Casey of Oklahoma City, Okla., was found lying in the street Friday night in the 5300 block of North Golder St.

The girl told emergency room attendants she was beaten by a 17-year-old man who was driving an old-model white sedan.

Weather--

ice forecasts call for little change in temperatures through Monday with highs in the mid 60s and lows near 70.

Floods on the Llano River washed away some livestock and ranch equipment and telephones and lights were out of order in Kimble County for a time because of the rising waters.

In early afternoon, the Weather Service issued tornado warnings for the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area in far Southwest Texas as thunderstorm clouds boiled up.

Numerous funnel clouds were seen by police and the public near Corpus and in the Sabine Pass area. The Weather Service said, however, that the danger had passed, at midnight.

Ford had visited Camp David briefly when he was House Republican leader but never spent the night and was never here as vice president.

... And I Am A Boy

Unsigned letters usually don't get too much attention in most newspaper offices. The Reporter-Telegram is no exception, but a letter written by a 14-year-old student at Edison Freshman School attracted the editor's attention.

"I went to the show Friday night," the student wrote. "It was a good show if only one could have seen it, which I did not because of my generation."

"There were a lot of adults there too, but they could not see the show either because of some of the childish things a three-year-old would have better sense than to do. They were climbing over the seats, throwing things, talking loud, and just giving the ushers a hard time."

"The reason I'm writing this is because I want the people of Midland to know that all 14- and 15-year-olds are not the same."

The letter-writer went on to state that the picture showing that particular night at a leading theater "was a fantastic show... if only people could enjoy it without punks and childish teen-agers crawling over the chairs and making noise."

"Now I see why the adults are so worried about my generation," the letter continued.

"I knew some kids there were not from the south side. They were mostly the middle class and high classed kids. My family is a middle class family, and I am a boy."

He wondered also about their home training and where their parents "went wrong."

"But that is sure pitiful when you can't even go to a movie theater and get away from your troubles and be entertained..."

"I was always taught to respect other people's property," he wrote. "And it makes me sick to see other teen-agers destroying property, like the kids were doing that night at the movies..."

This is quite a letter. Perhaps you have had a similar experience at the cinema at one time or another and considered writing such a letter or doing something else, but just never did get around to it. This lad got involved, so to speak.

Midland theater operators on previous occasions have cited the tremendous damage done to theater furniture and equipment by youths running rampant throughout the house, supporting the letter-writer's comments.

The boy's letter has a meaningful message not only for youths but for adults as well. Mothers and fathers are singled out as having a responsibility in the training of their children. Discipline also is involved.

Hopefully the freshman student's letter will be an influence for good in the community... and elsewhere.

From The Phone Booth Comes . . .

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Jack Anderson and Les Whitten Say: Anti-Castroites threaten guerrilla warfare here.
WASHINGTON — If the United States starts doing business with Fidel Castro's Cuba, as is expected within the next six months, CIA-trained, anti-Castro commandos will turn their deadly skills against the United States.

This is the vow of commando leaders, who have threatened to launch a campaign of terror in the United States such as the Irish militants have been waging against the British. For 13 years, these commandos have risked their lives raiding Cuba. They have lost comrades who have been killed and captured by Castro's militia. Now they see the United States preparing to embrace the hated dictator they have been fighting.

We spent a week in Miami talking to Cuban leaders and checking into the terrorism that already has erupted in the Cuban community.

"If the U.S. recognizes Castro," said one leader grimly, "we will look upon the U.S. as our enemy."

Another threatened: "If the U.S. won't let us fight Castro in Cuba, we will fight Castro here."

Others predicted assassinations, bombings and sabotage against American congressmen and businessmen who support a Cuban-American thaw. "One described the coming terror campaign menacingly as 'civil war.'"

Cuban commandos boasted that they already have shot up the door of the FBI's Miami office, have blown up the car of an FBI informant and have tried to run down an FBI agent.

U.S. authorities discount most of the talk as bravado. They acknowledge that the Cuban community has been hit by a dozen or more bombings, including the car of an alleged FBI informant. But the explosions have been small, with no casualties.

Cubans who are considered soft on Castro also have received threats on their lives. For example, storekeepers who sell a controversial Cuban news magazine have been threatened.

Although the commandos told us they shot up the FBI entrance with a .45 revolver, the authorities claim the weapon couldn't have been larger than a .22 pistol. It is even possible, they say, that the damage was caused by teen-agers throwing rocks.

There is no denying, however, that the FBI's Cuban intelligence specialist had to dive over bushes to avoid being run down by an automobile that whipped around a corner and speeded straight for him.

The FBI, contacted in Miami, had no comment on these incidents.

Miami's quietly competent Mayor Maurice Ferre acknowledged that a terror campaign is "definitely possible" in case the United States should restore official ties with Castro.

"Feelings run deep enough," he said, to cause Cuban militants to take desperate measures. "It could be like Ireland," he agreed. But he also said Cuban leaders have a tendency to overdramatize.

This personal animosity dated back to an audience that Nixon, as vice president, granted Castro in 1958.

Castro came away from the visit, he confided afterwards, feeling it had been friendly. But Nixon told friends afterwards that the interview had solidified his hatred for the Cuban dictator. Nixon reportedly also was influenced by his best friend, Bebe Rebozo, an American-born Cuban who is strongly anti-Castro.

With Ford now in charge of the White House, Kissinger is believed to have a better chance to work his way. The secretary of State already has sent signals to Havana through intermediaries that he would like to improve relations. Castro responded favorably. Commenting on the official U.S. attitude toward Cuba, Castro told a Kissinger friend, Frank Mankiewicz, recently: "Cuba is the only country in the world where John Foster Dulles is still secretary of State."

The cold war has ended, Castro pointed out, everywhere except between the United States and Cuba. But now, in response to Kissinger's overtures, the newspapers and radio stations in Cuba have toned down their attacks on the United States.

Footnote: Mankiewicz, spent several days with Castro, filming his daily activities for a TV documentary. Mankiewicz found the Cuban leader to be immensely popular with his people. Castro drives his own jeep through the Havana traffic, acknowledging the friendly greetings of his fellow motorists.

Sources close to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger say he has wanted to normalize relations with Cuba ever since he began practicing detente diplomacy. It made no sense to him to seek friendship with Russia and China on the opposite side of the globe and remain hostile to Cuba only 90 miles from our shores.

Kissinger was blocked from improving relations with Havana, our sources claim by former President Nixon who had an abiding hatred for Castro.

RAY CROMLEY
Rockefeller Moves In On Teddy Kennedy's Turf

WASHINGTON (NEA) — President Ford has stolen the ground from Ted Kennedy for 1976. The partial amnesty proposal was a starter. The nomination of Nelson Rockefeller for vice president was the coup de grace.

Theodore White in his 1968 book on "The Making of the President" recalls that some of Robert Kennedy's most ardent supporters, including a major Kennedy California organizer, moved into the Rockefeller camp when Kennedy was assassinated. White relates in detail the way in which the ex-Kennedy youth mobbed Rockefeller with their cheers and banners — "Rocky is Zap," "Go, Go Go with Rocky" and "Rock, Rock, Rock, with Rocky." Other reporters noted that some of Rockefeller's speeches at that time echoed Bobby, using virtually the same phrases.

Some careful political analysts (perhaps prejudiced) believe Rockefeller could have defeated John Kennedy in 1960 if he could have been nominated. Now for the Kennedy issues.

Nelson Rockefeller's great grandfather ran an Ohio station in the underground before the Civil War, helping runaway slaves escape to Canada. The Rockefeller family has donated heavily to Martin Luther King and his Southern Leadership Christian Conference and secured low-cost loans for the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. They have over the years been major donors to black colleges.

Nelson Rockefeller has carried on the family tradition. There is no suspicion here as with Kennedy, that this concern for civil rights may be political. For it was a part of Rockefeller's life long before he ran for office. So much for Robert Kennedy's hold on the black vote.

Rockefeller has staked out a record in urban renewal, transportation, pollution control, medical assistance, aid for education and scholarships that will win a Ford-Rockefeller team votes with traditional Kennedy issues and in the heart of traditional Kennedy strongholds in the big cities. He has pushed for gun control and compulsory health insurance. It is powerful political medicine when you can say as governor you put these concepts into effect rather than lobbied for them as a legislator.

Kennedy was counting on a hefty percentage of labor. Rockefeller has AFL-CIO chief George Meany as a friend. He has won the approval of most major unions in New York. And so it goes with the Spanish speaking, the youth, independents, the poor. His works in Latin America are legion. He has argued with strength the poor should have a greater voice in welfare, else these programs are doomed to fail.

Worse yet for Kennedy (and any other opponent for that matter) he is a dangerous campaigner. His managers are the best that money and a skilled judge of men can employ. He loves to pin his opponent on issues, leaving him explaining for days, weeks and months after. He is willing to spend millions on research to make points that will stick in battle he presses so vigorously that even those who defeat him find more often than not that they have been mortally wounded in the process. Goldwater and Nixon will attest to this.

There is, perhaps, one fly in the ointment. Larry King in Harpers Magazine for February 1968 quotes Rockefeller, standing on the White House grounds, as saying: "I think there are a lot of things I want to do here, a lot of things I could do here, but I just don't have the drive anymore."

DAVID POLING, D.D.
Clergyman Says Amnesty
Is All In The Family

NEW YORK (NEA) — Those delegates attending the convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago must have thought they were in the wrong assembly when President Ford outlined his ideas on amnesty.

Indeed, the gathered troops must have considered this address by the new President to have been prepared for a university convocation at Berkeley or the Five Year Meeting of the Quakers — not the drill instructors for veterans' rights and concerns. But this is not only a new administration, but also a new day and era where progress in human affairs is the chief goal of every diplomat and every seeker of high office.

No one expected the Ford statement on amnesty. Actually, it was a nonstatement: The President noted his opposition to a general amnesty to the 50,000 draft dodgers and deserters who said no to Vietnam, and by necessity, no to America. (Many political scientists indicate that the total number may be closer to 100,000 since you must include those who went underground in the United States.)

What President Ford did suggest, and order the Justice Department to study, was a formula for individual amnesty that would consider each case and offer a means of service to those returning to full participation in American society.

White denounced promptly by veterans' groups and professional military voices, and put down by the most self-righteous of the defectors, the Ford overture is strongly supported by the major religious groups in this Republic. Said Dr. Robert Lamar, moderator of the United Presbyterian Church, "Amnesty is the only position that Christians can support. It is the heart of the Gospel."

While the concept of amnesty may anger those who are tender over the failure of Vietnam adventures, it is not new to national policy and was considered a vital program in the projections of Abraham Lincoln toward the South. Amnesty is a technical term, the action taken by civil authorities toward legal offenders. The larger work is reconciliation and it touches deeply upon forgiveness. Both are great words and greatly needed in this society.

Ford Calls For Closer Links Between Scholars, Employers

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — President Ford said Friday that better use should be made of the talent and energy of America's college graduates so they can find jobs "that make sense and money."

He drew applause from an Ohio State University commencement audience when he cited the plight of students who find there is no longer a demand for their specialty after college graduation. When they go on to earn higher degrees and qualifications, he said, they are told "you're overqualified."

Ford said society has been playing a shell game with "our greatest natural energy source." And he promised to create "an atmosphere in which universities turn scholars out and employers turn them on."

Joking occasionally about football, but sticking mainly to an educational theme, Ford received a warm reception at his first appearance as President on a college campus.

About 10,000 persons, including about 2,500 graduates, attended the commencement at St. John's basketball arena, which can seat more than 13,000.

Ford, the first President ever to appear at Ohio State, was given the school's highest honorary degree, the doctor of laws.

University President Harold L. Enarson called Ford a "skilled conciliator of conflict." He said the President was cited "for the first steps in restoring to the people of these United States confidence in leadership, hope in the political process, and the promise that once again all of us can begin to believe. You have revived that which is most basic to a free society: a belief in the value of belief itself."

There was a small demonstration outside the gates of the building, protesting U.S. Cyprus policy with such signs as "Divided Cyprus, another Vietnam."

But Ford's motorcade was hardly in view of it.

Ford flew back to Washington directly to keep some afternoon appointments at the White House. But he met briefly at the Columbus airport with some state Republican candidates, who are running in the fall election.

Border Patrolmen Catch 32 Aliens, Alleged Smugglers

DEL RIO, Tex. (AP) — Border patrolmen caught 32 aliens being smuggled into the United States from Mexico Saturday and caught two men who were called smugglers of aliens by Border Patrol spokesmen.

Jack Richardson, deputy chief patrol agent, said all available evidence points to a large alien-smuggling ring and arrests are expected as far north as Fort Worth.

The smuggling took place by boat across gigantic Lake Amistad which has shores on United States and Mexican soil.

Richardson said the boat was followed by electronic devices and by patrolmen and the aliens and the man accused of smuggling them were surrounded and arrested as they started to enter land vehicles.

ATMOSPHERIC STUDY—Project Da Vinci Set In October

HOUSTON (AP) — Project Da Vinci, a scientific effort to help man understand the behavior of the atmosphere at altitudes between 4,000 and 14,000 feet, is to be launched Oct. 12, weather permitting, near Las Cruces, N.M.

A 70-foot balloon carrying a crew of four and more than a ton of scientific equipment is expected to remain in the air about 36 hours before landing in the vicinity of Lubbock, Tex.

The project is jointly financed by the Atomic Energy Commission, the National Geographic Society, and the Department of the Army's Atmospheric Sciences Laboratory.

About 15 other organizations are providing experiments, support services or equipment.

They include the Institute for Storm Research at Houston's University of St. Thomas and the Sandia Laboratories at Albuquerque, N.M.

The Institute is providing wind and balloon flight direction forecasts, while Sandia is installing the scientific, support, navigation, and radio equipment aboard a special gondola designed and constructed by the Grumman Houston Corp.

A spokesman for the Institute said altitudes of 4,000 to 14,000 feet provide the layer of atmosphere most critical to man's activities.

"It is the layer which controls how much and how far pollution is carried from its source, where inversions which trap pollution at breathing level are created, and where regional air circulation takes place," the spokesman said.

One of the objectives of Project Da Vinci is to determine the usefulness of multi-experiment, manned balloon flights as a fundamental tool for lower atmospheric research.

The spokesman said such flights have several potential advantages in that the slow moving, stable flights permit experiments and measurements to be carried out over a prolonged time without noise or electrical interference from engines.

Jimmie Craig, a Navy civilian employee, is to be the pilot for the flight. Others in the crew include Vera Simons of

Dairy Members Vote To Attempt Recoup Of Political Campaign Funds

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Members of the nation's largest dairy cooperative have voted to try to recoup corporate money illegally spent for political campaigns.

Delegates also voted to ask federal regulations to slow the import of dairy products. The 800 dairy farmer delegates at the annual meeting of the Associated Milk Producers, Inc. (AMPI) voted almost unanimously in Minneapolis Saturday to go ahead with a board of directors plan to recover money that was allegedly given by former AMPI employees to some political campaigns in 1968.

Part of the plan is a lawsuit to recover $100,000 allegedly held by the Committee to Re-elect the President CREEP. The dairy cooperative was fined $35,000 on Aug. 1 for making illegal corporate contributions to political campaigns. The dairymen ordered that recovery suits be filed against Harold S. Nelson, former general manager of AMPI; David L. Parr, former associate general manager; Valentine, Sherman & Associates, computer service, Bloomington, Minn.; Joe Nigrelle, former AMPI attorney, San Antonio, Tex.; Jake Jacobsen, attorney, Austin, Tex.; Oklahoma Congressman James Jones, former AMPI employee; Lennen — Newell, law firm, Austin; Richard Maguire and Frank Masters, former AMPI attorneys; McGregor & Werner, public relations firm, Washington, D.C.; W. DeVier Pierson, D.C.; Van Dyke, public relations, Washington.

One cooper member, John Ertel, San Antonio, told the assembly he believed there are still persons on the board of directors and within AMPI management who were involved with the illegal contributions. Ertel, an attorney, called for replacement of General Manager George L. Mehren and establishment of a committee of the 18 new directors to investigate the old board members and corporate managers.

As Ertel finished his presentation, a half-dozen other delegates stood and voiced support for the board's resolutions and managers. It was then that the vote was called and the members responded almost unanimously.

One dairyman said, "These accusations against the board are untrue... it has laid the cards on the table for us to see." The delegates also voted to abstain from joining a class action suit initiated by Mrs. J.D. Van Huss, Wichita Falls, Tex., charging the board of directors with negligence for not intervening and halting the illegal political contributions.

The dairymen voted for federal regulation of dairy imports and labeling of imported dairy products. The resolutions asked that import quotas be used to prevent damage to the price support program and impairment of the domestic productive capacity and that a duty tax or countervailing tax should be applied to all dairy imports.

The dairymen's resolution also expressed opposition to the ill-timed action former President Nixon has taken in abolishing the restrictions of dairy and beef product imports. The resolution characterized Nixon's action as "devious" and said it caused "a deleterious economic effect on the dairy farmer and on the nation as a whole."

The labeling resolution asked Saudi Arabia, Algeria Won't Cut Oil Prices

ALGIERS (AP) — Algeria and Saudi Arabia have agreed that international oil prices should not be lowered now, the Algerian news agency reported Saturday. It quoted informed sources here as saying the agreement was reached after recent contacts between the two countries, but gave no details. The report could indicate that Saudi Arabia has abandoned its campaign to lower oil prices. The Saudis have been trying to reduce the world price of oil since the Arabs lifted their oil embargo against the United States last March. The chief Saudi proponent for lower prices has been Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, but a faction in the Saudi leadership is known to oppose such a move.

that all dairy products be labeled as to the country of origin and place of manufacture and stamped "produced and manufactured in USA" or "imported" stating the percent of foreign dairy product used. AMPI said the federal government does not require imported dairy products to be labeled as such now. Delegates also discussed AMPI's new vehicle for political contributions, dubbed the committee for Thorough Agricultural Political Education (TAPE), which presently has about $1.5 million in its coffers.

The TAPE program allows dairymen to voluntarily have contributions withheld from their milk checks. AMPI President John E. Butterbrodt

While House sources said Ford is expected to announce a conditional amnesty program next week. Press Secretary Gerald F. TerHorst cautioned that the recommendations are "not necessarily what is going to come out."

He said Ford "has some ideas of his own that amend the recommendation." Ford intends to put his program into effect through executive action, said TerHorst, declaring that "no congressional action would be required."

In response to questions, he said the Ford program would aim at dealing fairly not only with those now abroad or in hiding at home, but also with others who already received have dishonorable discharges or have been convicted and serving prison terms.

Schlesinger and Saxbe preferred to call the program "earned re-entry" and "reconciliation" rather than amnesty. "This program is designed as a unique act of mercy, intended to heal the nation's wounds," their joint six-page memorandum said.

"In no way is it intended to condone acts of evasion or desertion," they said. Spokesmen for draft dodgers and deserters living in Canada and relatives of such men have rejected conditional amnesty or any acknowledgment of wrongdoing. They have insisted on unconditional amnesty, contending that the Vietnam war resisters acted out of conscience.

Schlesinger and Saxbe presented their proposals to Ford at a nearly two-hour White House meeting 12 days after the new President made a surprise announcement opening the way to conditional amnesty.

Ford, who had requested the report, took the recommendations under study. Sources said he asked for additional information. In a memorandum, Schlesinger and Saxbe said there are about 15,500 draft evaders and 12,838 deserters potentially eligible for the program. About 3,000 of the draft dodgers and some 1,500 deserters are living in Canada, they said.

The Cabinet officers suggested that applications should be accepted starting 30 days from the date Ford formally proclaims the program and that deserters and draft dodgers be given 120 days from that time to make their move. There have been suggestions in Congress that amnesty legislation would be revived now that Ford has indicated he might accept some form of amnesty. However, some congressmen have suggested only the President can offer amnesty. The report said more money might be needed, however, to administer parts of the program. Saxbe and Schlesinger recommended limiting eligibility to those "who committed offenses" between Aug. 4, 1964, when Congress enacted the Tonkin Gulf resolution, and the withdrawal of the last U.S. forces from Vietnam on March 28, 1973.

The draft evader would remain subject to indictment until he finishes his assigned period of alternate service. Upon completion of that service successfully, the draft evader would receive a certificate and the U.S. attorney involved would then drop evasion charges. Things would appear to go harder for returning deserters.

They reported to Ford that about 8,700 draft evaders have been convicted and 8,610 are under indictment or investigation. "Only a handful of those convicted of draft evasion are incarcerated today," they said. As for deserters, Saxbe and Schlesinger reported that 12,478 are "at large" and another 300 are current serving sentences or awaiting trial based on Vietnam-era "absence offenses."

They recommended that a three-member clemency board be established under the President's pardon power to review the records of convicted draft evaders or deserters who apply "and recommend clemency consistent with the program for unconvicted evaders and deserters."

Before the 1972 strike, members of Local 1112 had filed 6,000 grievances over work standards, discipline, health and safety conditions and other matters covered by their contract. There were 16,000 grievances on file when they struck this July.

There were more motorcycles than Vegas in the parking lot when, this August, Local 1112 members came in to pick up their weekly strike benefit checks — $40 maximum for a married worker with two children.

Bob Hunt got $30. He is 24 and single and wore white double knit slacks and dark glasses. He is a relief operator on the Vega line and insists on working exactly according to the contract.

"I've been tossed out of the plant umpteen times just because I stick by the book, 100 per cent by the book," he explained. "I just want people to stick up for what they believe is right."

Meadows filed the suit in Federal Court in Propria Person, meaning that he drew up the document himself. Among the accusations, Meadows claims his rights were violated when the defendants caused false and adverse publicity by the radio, press and television media; that he was threatened and harassed, forced to admit to murder by administration of drugs, and that his former wife conspired with law officials against him while he was being held in both the Ector County and Tarrant County jails.

In the suit, which includes 10 separate charges against the four defendants, Meadows claims that his civil rights and constitutional rights were violated in 1971 and 1972. He does not contest his conviction in the civil action but claims that the constitutional civil rights changes led to his unlawful conviction for the offense of murder.

TO BE EARNED BY CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

New Amnesty Proposal Made By Cabinet Officers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Cabinet officers Saturday recommended that, as "a unique act of mercy," more than 28,000 Vietnam era military deserters and draft dodgers be allowed to earn their way back by spending up to 18 months in civilian public service. Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and Atty. Gen. William Saxbe also told President Ford that returning deserters and draft evaders should be required to "execute a formal pledge of alternate service including a form of re-affirmation of allegiance to the United States."

They suggested that the term spent working in hospitals, schools, environmental work and other community or charitable organizations could be reduced "in consideration of the circumstances of individual cases."

EDITOR'S NOTE — Among live with his job. There are petty harassments to put up with, but the pay and benefits are good, and that seems the major consideration to most. Assembly line workers make $5.50 an hour, maybe $12,000 a year with a little overtime.

"As far as the boredom and monotony thing, I don't think that will ever change," Dearing said. "I don't have that problem, not on my job. The rest of the people, maybe they just resigned themselves to it."

Lordstown is near the eastern end of the Cleveland-Youngstown industrial axis in north-eastern Ohio. Its GM complex spreads over 975 acres next to the Ohio Turnpike. The workers are largely second generation industrial workers — sons and daughters of Mahoning Valley steel workers — or first generation out of the farm. There are 550 women and about 1,100 minority employees, mostly black — about the same percentages as in 1972.

The trouble at Lordstown began after a high speed Vega assembly line was installed 1970. It was the assembly line of the future: 100 cars an hour, 40 more than other lines. It was designed to make work easier. It moved up and down to reduce bending and stretching. Automatic welders and other machines took over some of the more difficult or delicate jobs. But because it was fast, the average worker had — and still has — 35 seconds to perform his task as the line moved inexorably forward.

The workers on the line were young, mod and militant, long-haired and little afraid of management, the work ethic or its discipline. In October, 1971, GM removed the Chevrolet Division and Fisher Body management that had run the plant. The General Motors Assembly Division — the G-MADs — to the workers — was sent in. The new management ordered reductions in the work force.

Too much work per man, said the union. Some cars began coming down the line with internal engine parts stacked on top of the motor block. Other cars came through with slashed electrical cables and cracked instrument panels. Sabotage, said management.

Murder Suspect Held By Police

AUSTIN (AP) — A man sought in connection with gangland style murders in Louisiana and Mississippi was in the Travis County jail Saturday following his arrest by Austin police.

A sheriff's office spokesman said Walter Burnett, 32, from the New Orleans area, was arrested Friday night as he left Brackenridge Hospital here.

"We have been looking for him for several months but he hasn't been in this area," a sheriff's sergeant said. Burnett was held on warrants issued by the FBI charging him with flight to avoid prosecution. An FBI spokesman in San Antonio said the warrants were based on state murder charges in Louisiana.

A spokesman for the Covington Parish, La., Sheriff's office, said "We only have one murder warrant out for him, but I know Hancock County, (Miss.) has one out and there may be some other places that want him too. We want him in connection with a couple of bodies found in Hancock County about a year ago."

Police had left a picture of Burnett with the hospital in case the man came in for medical treatment. Hospital officials tipped police he was there and Burnett was arrested several miles away in a car about five minutes after leaving the hospital. He was armed with a .38 caliber pistol but offered no resistance.

Police said he gave them an alias but one of the arresting officers recognized him. In Mississippi Hancock County Sheriff Silvan Ladner of Bay St. Louis said Burnett is wanted in connection with the Dec. 8, 1972 slaying of William Mulvey, 50, who was shot several times in the head near McCall, La., and Billie Tracey Johnson, 35, shot three times in the head near Pearllington, Miss. Both were dumped in a ditch beside a rural Hancock County road. Authorities said at the time that the double slaying was a "gangland style" murder.

Burnett and two others were indicted for those slayings May 28, 1974, along with James M. Granger, 32, of Ponchartraine, La., and Larry Salzman. Granger is currently serving 21 years for a manslaughter conviction at the Louisiana State Penitentiary in Angola and Salzman is serving five years for burglary at Angola.

Burnett is also charged in the June, 1974, wounding of Pat O'Brien, of Covington, La., across the lake from New Orleans. O'Brien, 78, is connected with the New Orleans nightspot which bears his name. He is recovering from his gunshot wounds.

Capt. Jack Hudgeons of the Covington Parish Sheriff's Department said Burnett is "a vicious person and he definitely has been connected with organized crime."

Death Penalty Return Seen In Colorado

By KENNETH T. WALSH
DENVER, Colo. (AP) — The Texas and New Mexico crime spree of three Colorado State Penitentiary inmates has all but assured restoration of the death penalty in Colorado, say sponsors and opponents of a November referendum on capital punishment.

"People will feel the death penalty will cure this sort of thing," said Roger Cisneros, a Democratic state senator and lawyer from Denver.

"I always said if something emotional happened, the proposal would pass. People want something done but this won't solve anything."

Cisneros was among the most outspoken critics of the death penalty in the legislature. But the lawmakers overwhelmingly approved a measure on capital punishment and referred it to the voters in the November election.

The measure lists aggravating circumstances in various categories of crime, such as murder committed during an escape from prison. Conviction of any listed offense, without mitigating circumstances, would be an automatic death sentence.

Richard Mangum, 22, of Denver, Dalton Williams, 29, Snyder, Tex., and Jerry Ben Ulmer, 22, Garland, Tex., escaped from the state prison Aug. 22.

Officers said the three were hunting down witnesses who testified against two of them.

Mangum was killed by police near Stephenville, Tex., Monday night. Williams and Ulmer have been charged with the murder of Mrs. Ray Ott, an Erath County, Tex., resident, who died Saturday.

Officers said the three escapees also killed Rotan, Tex., rancher T. L. Baker Aug. 24.

wounded five other persons and raped two New Mexico women during a three-day crime spree.

Richard Plock, a Republican state senator and lawyer from Denver who was primary sponsor of the death penalty bill, said the measure stands a better chance than ever of passage.

"This is a classic demonstration of what this bill is designed to do—to get persons incapable of living in society," Plock said.

"The incident will help the bill's passage especially if anybody's sitting on the fence," Plock added.

John Buechner, a state representative from Boulder and political science professor at the University of Colorado, said, "People never think this sort of thing is going to happen. But it was real life."

Buechner was a major sponsor of the bill in the House of Representatives.

"People will naturally react as human beings," Buechner said. "These are dramatic and horrifying facts of apparent revenge. I think they've reinforced a lot of people's thinking."

Parking Chiselers Beat Portion Of Airport Fees

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas City Councilman Charles Terrell said Friday he plans to ask the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport board to take steps to close off roads that reportedly have allowed persons to park free at the financially-troubled facility.

Apparently, Terrell says, a number of airport-goers have mastered the service roads at the huge facility and are bypassing toll booths at the north and south entrances.

Terrell, who frequently uses the airport, said the system of beating the parking rates is a standard topic on the flights he has taken recently.

The councilman said many people are parking in the short term lots close to the individual terminals and then paying long term rates through yet another deception.

"It has become a simple matter for them to get their tickets stamped for long term and then get back in their cars and drive to short term parking," Terrell said. "I think it is just as important to correct this situation."

Meeting On Water Stated At Lubbock

ALISTIN — Gen. James M. Rose, the man in Texas government who has carried the brunt of the load for Gov. Briscoe through the energy crisis and is now deeply involved in directing the course the governor will follow in efforts to solve the state's water problems, will meet with the directors of Water, Inc., in Lubbock Wednesday. The meeting is slated at 1:30 p.m. in the Fifth Floor Meeting Room of the First National-Pioneer building.

Gov. Briscoe named Rose, his director of planning coordination, to head up the Water Conservation and Development Task Force late last year. In the ensuing months, Rose has handled the state's top professionals dealing with water and molded them into an advisory group to the governor. The Task Force presently has under consideration for adoption in early September a recommended five-year action program which includes importation of water to West Texas.

Kissinger, Saudi Complete Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saudi Arabian Foreign Minister Omar Sakhif and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger have ended two days of talks on the future of Middle East peace negotiations in a spirit of optimism.

In all our discussions everything went smoothly, and I think we are in agreement on all the problems we touched on," Sakhif told reporters after a 45-minute wrap-up session Friday.

Kissinger said, "From the U.S. point of view we considered the meetings very constructive." He added that "even further progress" was made in improving U.S.-Saudi Arabian relations, but he declined to be specific.

ON PLEA OF GUILTY— Baseball Mogul Fined For Campaign Giving

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — George M. Steinbrenner III, majority owner of baseball's New York Yankees, has been fined $15,000 for illegally contributing to former President Richard M. Nixon's re-election campaign and trying to cover it up.

Steinbrenner is also chairman of the board of the American Ship Building Co. The firm was fined $20,000 for conspiracy to violate federal campaign contribution laws and for arranging illegal contributions.

The sentences were handed down by U.S. District Judge Leroy J. Contie Jr. Steinbrenner, 43, said there would be no appeal of the judgment. He could have been sentenced to up to six years in prison.

He pleaded guilty Aug. 23 to conspiring to violate federal election campaign contribution laws and devising a false and misleading explanation for a $25,000 contribution by the company to the Committee to Re-elect the President.

Steinbrenner is also majority owner of the Chicago Bulls basketball team and has interests in horse racing tracks. As a felon, he could be required to sell his shares of the Yankees and Bulls.

Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said in a statement that Williams had requested a meeting and that there would be no action on Steinbrenner before that meeting.

Steinbrenner became the 13th U.S. corporate executive to be fined for making an illegal campaign contribution.

Rabin Declares Israel Will Halt All Withdrawals

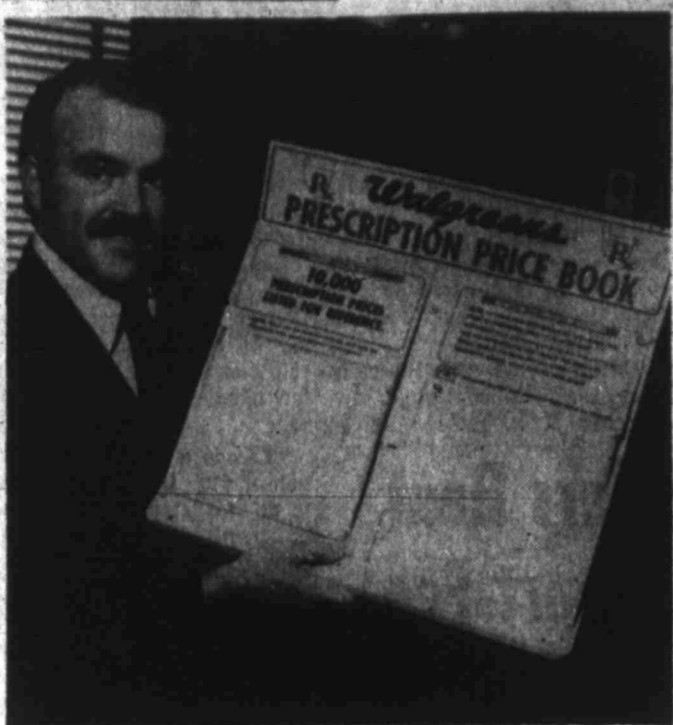

TEL AVIV (AP) — Premier Yitzhak Rabin said Saturday there will be no further Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories "without . . . significant progress toward peace."

He said if Israel were to withdraw from the territories and set up a Palestinian state it would be "the beginning of the end of the Jewish state."

Rabin told an audience of new immigrants the position of the Israeli government is "no withdrawal" from the 1967 cease-fire lines "no establishment" of a Palestinian state — "but a confrontation from a position of strength in the quest for peace."

He said this could be accomplished either through negotiations with each one of the Arab countries or through a transition in stages.

Rabin said Israel would honor the cease-fire and disengagement agreements but it could not ignore "voices from the northeast" — the direction of Syria — urging that part of the accord not be extended when they expire.

First Well Dry On $212 Million Tract In Gulf

HOUSTON (AP) — The first oil well drilled on a $212 million offshore tract in the Gulf of Mexico off Panama City, Fla., was a dry hole, Exxon Co. U.S.A. said Saturday.

The company said it plans immediate drilling of a second well three miles to the north on another tract.

Exxon, Mobile Oil Co. and Champion Petroleum Co., a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp., drilled the well-40 miles southwest of Panama City on a tract which they leased in December of 1973 from the federal government. They paid the government $212 million in bonus money for the tract.

Exxon said the well was drilled to a depth of 10,930 feet before it was plugged and abandoned after non-commercial shows of oil and natural gas were found.

The company said it plans additional wells in six tracts in the same area they won in the 1973 sale.

Pan Am Airways Says Higher Operating Expenses Causing Big Revenue Losses

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Pan American World Airways isn't the only airline having trouble coping with soaring fuel prices, tight money and declining international travel.

But it holds special prominence as the biggest American international air carrier. It has also been losing money since 1969 and all signs this past week pointed to another bad year.

Pan Am said as of the end of July, it had lost $32.4 million in July alone it made only $446,000 on its 90,000 miles of air routes, a decline of 65 per cent from the previous July.

In that year, said Pan Am, fuel prices had rocketed 153 per cent and general operating expenses were up 15 per cent.

All in all, it was another indication the airline was headed for its worst year since 1971, when it lost $45 million.

The day the July figures were announced, a New York mutual fund sold 1.5 million shares of Pan Am at $1.75 a share. The fund had paid some $37 million for the stock when it acquired it from 1968 through 1970. It sold for a total of $3.63 million.

During all this, Pan Am was still awaiting word from the government on its request for a temporary subsidy of $10.2 million a month for mail carrying.

Without government aid, the airline contends, it could face a cash shortage which in turn would endanger credit arrangements with banks.

The airline's chief executive said at week's end he was confident the government would grant the subsidy, but predicted it would be "several weeks" before a government decision is made.

Pan Am's troubles are generally traced back to 1964, when it announced it was ordering 25 Boeing 747s at a total cost of $535 million. That year was a good one for Pan Am and other airlines and Pan Am earned almost $110 million in the next two years.

By the time the jumbo jets went into service in 1969, vastly increasing the number of available seats and touching off tight competition for passengers to fill them, passenger growth had fallen to only 3 per cent.

In that first jumbo jet year, Pan Am lost more than $25 million. It has lost money every year since then: $26 million more in 1970, $45 million in 1971, $28 million in 1972 and $18 million in 1973.

Museum To Stage '74 Septemberfest

"Willkommen zum Septemberfest" (translated as "Welcome to Septemberfest") is the theme of a German festival being planned by the Museum of the Southwest for 6 to 11 p.m. Saturday at the museum. The sixth annual event will feature a Kinderfest for children for the first time.

More than 4,000 persons attended last year's Septemberfest, which again this year will feature pretzels, sausage-on-a-stick, dark beer, gala costumes, band and dancing.

Septemberfest was originated in 1968 by Las Manos, the "helping hands" volunteer organization of the museum. The event has become the largest money-making project for the museum.

Food booths will feature sausage-on-a-stick, complete "Wurstplate" with Brotwurst, weinkraut, German potato salad, pickles and pumpernickel bread; "Wurstbasket" with beef sticks, smoked sausage, all-beef summer sausage, mustard cheese, pickles and pumpernickel bread. There also will be a "Wurstwurf" of German bologna, Beerwurst, cooked salami, Schinkenwurst and pumpernickel.

Costumed hawkers will sell raised pretzels, 6-inch pickles and strudel served from a handcrafted strudel cart. John Brause, 13th generation German baker, will bake koloches, and Sonny Grobe of Fredericksburg, P. E. Pearce, bands and fifth generation sausage maker, assisted by Mrs. Grobe, will make sausage, using antique equipment. The sausage will be available for sale.

The Pehl Band of Fredericksburg will be the feature attraction. The City of Midland will loan its Showmobile to be used to stage German dance lessons for interested persons. There also will be a variety of entertainment during the evening, ranging from a magician to tap dancers to German lauder singers. The band also will teach German songs.

The Polka Club of Wall has been invited to add a special touch to the varied entertainment. The streets around the museum will be closed to provide a place for square dancing, and round dancing with the Tall City Twirlers.

The Lions Club "Big Name Band" will play on the front porch of Turner Gallery for dancing in the driveway.

Inside the museum, 15 top artists from Texas and New Mexico will be creating their specialties in the Invitational Showcase. There will be jewelry making, painting, metal sculpture, glass blowing and charcoal portraiture, all of which will be for sale. The showcase will be open through Sunday.

The Planetarium in Haley Park will have a 30-minute program on folk music at intervals during the evening.

Children's activities will include pony-drawn cart rides led by adults, a clown, games, face-painting, puppet show, Pickwick Players, art for children, sing-along and sitter service.

The Shop of the Southwest in the Museum will have an unusual assortment of Indian jewelry, pottery, books, toys and six-way German puzzles. A first for the shop will be a trunk showing in the museum library by Calvin Hildebrand of Santa Fe, N.M., well-known Indian trader. Authentic Indian wares will be for sale. He also will present a second showing Sunday afternoon.

All museum facilities will be open to the public. There will be a flower show in Lancaster Garden Center and a display by the Midland Camera Club.

The Museum of the Southwest opened in 1966, and, in eight years, has grown to a cultural center. Almost 25,000 guests registered at Turner Memorial Gallery last year to view 28 candelabra entwined with cathedral candles flanked the altar area.

The Rev. Billy Wilkinson officiated for the double ring ceremony. Ruth Dickson, organist, provided music for the service.

Pam Parker of Odessa was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Cheryl Hooks and Becky Ellis.

Best man was Don Williams and Brian Lee Drake and Tony Kirk Drake of San Angelo, brothers of the bridegroom, were ushers. Serving as groomsmen were Tony Henson and John Blus.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white angel skin peau de soie and re-embroidered lace fashioned with a pinaflore effect bodice of re-embroidered lace, bishop sleeves with cuffs of lace.

Deana Carroll Riley, Drake Wed In Church Ceremony

Deana Carroll Riley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Riley, 3230 Camarie St., and Steven Kent Drake, son of Mrs. Roger Starkey of San Angelo and Ralph Drake of Speedway, Ind., exchanged wedding vows at 7 p.m. Wednesday in St. Luke's United Methodist Church. Twin candelabra entwined with greenery, and holding white cathedral candles flanked the altar area.

The Rev. Billy Wilkinson officiated for the double ring ceremony. Ruth Dickson, organist, provided music for the service.

Prevents Dribbling
A washcloth wrapped around your wrist and secured with a rubber band will keep water from running down your arm when you clean a high window or wall. Also it will prevent paint from dribbling down your arm as you paint.

Try Lemon Juice
To brighten dull aluminum, rub with a soft cloth that has been dipped into lemon juice.

Mr. Landureth presented his daughter in marriage. She wore a gown of imported pure silk organza and Chantilly lace over peau de soie. An overlay of Chantilly lace and clusters of seed pearls created a sculptured modified Empire bodice and formed a Victorian neckline and petal point sleeves. A paneled chapel-length train outlined with scalloped lace draped from the bodice back. Her elbow-length veil of silk illusion fell from a cluster of seed pearls in a floral design. She carried a cascade of pink Sweetheart roses on a white Bible, which also was carried by her mother at her wedding.

WEDDING DATE SET — Mr. and Mrs. William Ernest Nance, 3707 Stanolind St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Cecelia Kay, to Thomas Alan Linn, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Linn of Scottsdale, Ariz. The marriage is set for 4 p.m. Nov. 16 in Austin's Good Shepherd Episcopal Church. The bride-elect, a graduate of The University of Texas-Austin, is a legal secretary for Prud'homme and Turman, Austin attorneys-at-law. Her fiancé attended Texas Tech University and is advertising consultant for KOKE Radio, Austin.

Gifts For The Bride Show New Lifestyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's avant garde bride may wear blue jeans and carry field flowers. Most brides, however, still float down the aisle in yards of silk and lace, since tradition seems to hold sway when a girl marries. Whatever the ceremony, the contemporary bride is a different woman from her mother, with a whole new life-style.

Bridal registries and gift-giving services are noting trends that reflect these differences. The '70s wedding gifts, they report, are compact, mobile and easy to care for. Small electrical appliances, audio-visual equipment and linens are high on the list of preferences. Silver seems to be the one link to tradition.

According to a recent Modern Bride Magazine report, 38 per cent of today's brides have completed college. This same survey shows that 66 per cent are employed and their median age is 20.8 years. These statistics profile a better educated, career-oriented, more mature young woman whose lifestyle requires more time away from home.

The gift for the '70s bride must also fit into a shrinking environment. E. B. Weiss, "Advertising Age" social survey expert, reports that 80 per cent of America's young adults will be living in apartments by 1980. With fewer rooms, living space must be flexible, converting from sleeping to eating to entertaining and study with the push of a button.

And not only is the newlywed nest growing smaller, it is also being moved more often. Young marrieds are motivated to move for business, the second home and pleasure. Their second home may even be in a foreign country. Their possessions must be as mobile as they are.

So how to choose a bridal gift for this educated, employed new Mrs. with tuned up tastes and a yen to travel?

Tish Baldrige, social secretary to the White House during the Kennedy administration, now consultant to GIRAmerica, says, "First, you must do a little research on how the future bride intends to live. Will she do any formal entertaining or is it going to be all bare feet back-to-nature?"

Nurse-Midwife Gives New Fathers A Hand

By MICHAEL W. MILLIGAN

STORRS Conn. (AP) — When his wife delivered their baby, John Collins played an unusual role: the father.

With his beard and chest poking out above his hospital smock, Collins, 31, is the only man in the nation certified to be a nurse-midwife.

"I'm used as a model role to show the father how to pick up the baby. The new father can learn how to treat or act around his baby by watching me." But his job is much broader.

As a nurse-midwife, Collins is qualified to treat a woman with a normal pregnancy, deliver her child and teach the parents how to care for it at least six months after birth. He always works under a doctor's supervision.

"I guess my interest in midwifery stems from being a fraternal twin, which got me interested in the development of the fetus," Collins said in an interview.

Collins doesn't resemble the traditional midwife, usually a woman trained only by experience who helped women give birth in their home. He has a master's degree from Yale University and teaches at the University of Connecticut School of Nursing.

He hasn't been the victim of jokes about his sex and job. But most women assume he's an obstetrician. They're surprised to learn otherwise as he makes his rounds at Backus Hospital in Norwich.

who refused care from me," he said. "And I've had some former patients ask me to deliver their next baby."

Collins said his sex helps him involve both husband and wife in the process of having and caring for a child.

"If everything's normal there's no need to see a physician," said Collins, who could deliver the baby in a hospital or clinic.

Professional nurse-midwifery began in 1955 to help doctors in maternal and newborn health care, he said.

"There are about 1,400 nurse-midwives in the country now and the ranks are swelling." Until a few years ago colleges wouldn't let men train in maternal nursing, he said. But now the field is more open.

Norma Pilegard, executive secretary of the American College of Nurse-Midwives, a professional society, said about a dozen colleges now have programs in nurse-midwifery. She confirmed that Collins was the sole man certified by her organization.

Collins got another perspective on his profession when his wife gave birth to their first child. "I just played the father in that one. It would have been an ego trip to deliver my own baby."

Mrs. U. V. Jones III

Couple Married Recently; Will Reside In Midland

VICKSBURG, Miss. — Ettie Cowans Bullard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Bullard, and U. V. Jones III, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. V. Jones II of Lubbock, Tex., were married here recently in the First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. William F. Mansell officiated for the double ring ceremony. An interlude of special music preceded the ceremony. Clarrisa Behr was soloist.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a classical Renaissance dress. The gown was fashioned of fine white satiness with folded cowl collar and long slim sleeves closing with a row of satin buttons. The gored skirt, which was lightly gathered at the waist, was caught with a crushed cummerbund and flared, ending in a formal cathedral train. The bride's headpiece was a white chiffon hood with an attached cape held at the shoulders and a cloud of chiffon extended the length of her train. She carried a prayer book, topped by a sculptured arrangement of orchids, which her mother carried at her wedding.

Serving as the bride's attendants were her sisters. Mrs. Richard Quantz was matron of honor, Allison Bullard was maid of honor, Sally Bullard was bridesmaid and Emy Bullard was flower girl. They wore off-the-shoulder gowns of muted flowered silk organza sashed in moss green velvet and carried melon pink carnations in a crescent design loosely tied with moss green velvet ribbon matching the dresses. The flower girl wore delicate pink and carried a small basket of melon pink carnations.

A chapel-length train of Chantilly lace was attached at the back of the bodice. Her waist-length mantilla was of Chantilly lace. The gown and headress were creations of the bride's mother and grandmother. She carried a cascade of yellow roses and Hahn's Ivy.

The bride's attendants had dresses in blue miramist over blue taffeta. The Empire bodices, accented at the waistlines by cotton lace trim, had scoop necklines and sheer puff sleeves. Their headpieces were blue flowered picture hats trimmed with a blue miramist ruffle and lace. Each carried a nosegay of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath.

A reception was held in the church parlor. Mrs. Michael Jay Cunningham of Lubbock, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Patsy Kennedy of Amarillo; Mrs. Booker McDearmon; Mrs. Chester Brown and Mrs. Robert Stringer were in the house party.

Hairdressers Meet Tuesday

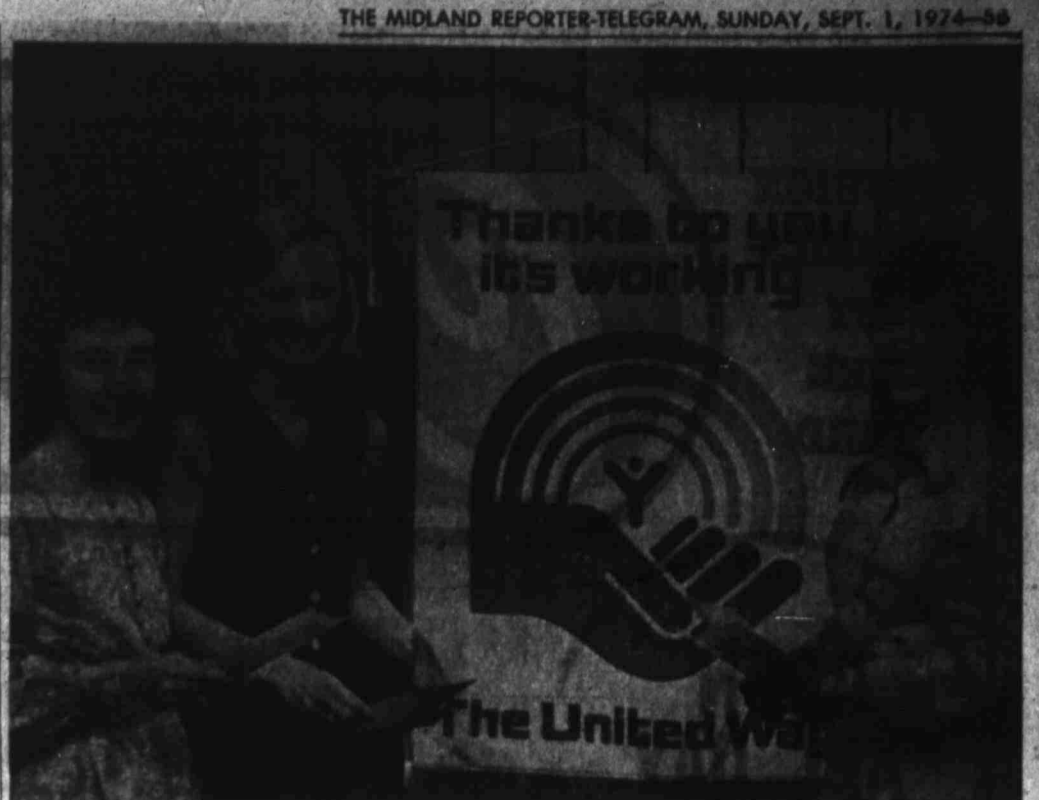

Midland Affiliate No. 33 of the Texas Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association will have its first fall meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Midland High School Annex.

"Encore," publication of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association, Inc., has presented a forecast for hair fashions for the fall and winter of 1974.

According to an article in the most recent issue, hair coloring for 1974 is still the natural look, with natural looking colors featuring tone-on-tone blending in blondes, browns, hennas and reds. The length, according to the article, is just above the shoulders to very short.

Curls and waves are popular and are created by permanents, finger waving, set waving, air blowing and hot ironing. The article also states controlled permanent waves on the upswing, because this method of providing long lasting waves to only portions of the head allows for more individuality.

Also important to hair this fall and winter is softness and freeness. Hair should appear full and soft, and should be shiny and move naturally.

Miss McCubbin Becomes Bride Of O'Shaughnessy

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Michael Webster O'Shaughnessy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. O'Shaughnessy of 2011 Bedford Drive, Midland, Tex., married Barbara Lee McCubbin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. McCubbin of Oklahoma City, at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

The double ring ceremony was held in St. Luke's United Methodist Church, with the Rev. Joe Shackford of Oklahoma City and the Rev. Jack Franco, O.M.I. of San Antonio, Tex. Mrs. Ray Bitche Jr. of Norman, Okla., was the matron of honor. Diane Alper of Dallas, Tex., was the maid of honor and Peggy O'Shaughnessy and Kaki O'Shaughnessy of Midland, sisters of the bridegroom; Debbie Jones of Houston, Tex., cousin of the bride, and Nancy Clark and Terry Furlow of Norman were the bridesmaids.

Mr. McCubbin presented his daughter in marriage. She wore an ivory satin organza gown with duchess neckline, high rise waistline, cap sleeves and A-line skirt ending in a chapel-train. Cluny lace circled the neckline and covered the sleeves in softly gathered ruffles. Two vertical rows of lace extended from the waistline to within six inches of the hem and encircled the skirt and train in a picture-frame effect. Her cathedral-length mantilla was of ivory illusion edged and appliqued with lace to match the gown and fell from a Camelot cap.

The bride carried a cascade of white roses, stephanotis with baby's breath and ivy.

A reception was held in Discoveries, Inc. After a trip to Colorado Springs, Colo., the couple will reside at 2009 S. Williams St. in Denver. The bride is a graduate of the WASHINGTON (AP) — Janet Harley was given a surprise birthday party by 11 of her friends recently — an elegant breakfast at dawn by the reflecting pool in the midst of the Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial.

Miss Harley, a 28-year-old Department of Health, Education and Welfare employee, was brought to the scene at 7:10 a.m. in a horse-drawn carriage. The men wore morning suits and top hats, and carried canes, and the women wore long dresses. The breakfast, accompanied by a quartet, consisted of strawberries, sliced smoked salmon, oysters, Beluga caviar, champagne, crepes of cream chicken au gratin, and pastry.

Men from the caterer brought chairs, tables, china, food and other necessities in a truck. They said the meal cost about $50 each.

Belated Baptism Surprises Pastor

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — The Rev. Harold Billmeyer was shocked recently when a 90-year-old woman approached him and said, "You may not remember me, but you baptized me."

The shock diminished as she added, "It was 18 years ago. I was to undergo surgery the following morning and I asked to be baptized. You were the chaplain at the hospital and you baptized me. I was 76 years old then."

The woman, Mrs. Pearl Strith, produced the baptismal certificate.

Toastmistress Club Installs New Officers

The Articuladies Toastmistress Club met recently in the home of Mrs. Ray L. Chappelle Jr., 2303 Sinclair St., for an ice cream party and installation of new officers.

Officers installed were Mrs. Beth Wilson, president; Mrs. Elsie Magee, vice president; Mrs. Katherine Marlowe, secretary; Mrs. John Ponder, treasurer, and Mrs. Chappelle, council representative.

Guests for the evening included Mrs. William H. Maitland, Mrs. Mattie Morett, Mrs. George Vardos, Mrs. Frank Looper, Mrs. Larry McAdams and Mrs. H. R. Langley.

First Male Gets Economics Degree

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Tommy Taylor has become the first male to receive a degree in vocational home economics from Texas Christian University.

Because the home economics curriculum was geared almost entirely toward women, Taylor said, he tried his best to initiate the restructuring of the system so it would be a lot easier for other males to follow. All first teachers didn't know quite how to react to having a man in the classroom, he said. Even the textbooks constantly used the word "she."

Now all teachers use the word "person" instead, as does any written material used in the class.

Dipping Mixture — An egg beaten with one-third cup milk or light cream makes an excellent dipping mixture for French-toasted sandwiches.

Dear Abby

—By Abigail van Buren

She's 71 And Still Yearns For The Real Thing

DEAR ABBY: This is my second letter to you. Please answer me. I am beginning to think that maybe you thought I must be joking. I wrote to ask where a 71-year-old woman could go to get silicone implants in her breasts. I hope you won't think I am crazy. I assure you I am not.

I have a very nice figure, but have worn a padded bra for 30 years and I am yearning to have the real thing. I have the money, and don't see what I have to lose. I am vain, I admit it, but what is wrong with a woman my age wanting to fulfill a lifelong dream?

I don't have a husband to boss me around, so there's no problem there.

Please answer soon, and don't wait until I'm 80 years old. I think 71 is about as old as one should wait for an operation like that. I live in a small town in Georgia, but it would be no trouble to get to Atlanta.

SERIOUS IN GEORGIA

serious problem? I am married to a man who wants me to tie him up, spank him, humiliate him, and treat him like a "slave" when it comes to love-making.

We have fought, argued and even separated over this several times because I refuse to go along with his crazy ways. It seems abnormal to me. Or am I just not with it?

Otherwise he is a good husband. He doesn't run around, drink or curse. And he is an elder in the church.

I don't want to talk to a doctor about this because I'm afraid he might have my husband locked up.

Have you ever heard of anything like this before?

END OF ROPE

DEAR END: Yes, I've heard of it. The cardinal rule in love-making is: "Anything that goes on in the privacy of one's bedroom is all right as long as it's agreeable to both parties."

Some notes will agree to participate in such bizarre games. But if you don't want to, your wishes should be respected.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive 69-year-old widow. Although I'm in comfortable circumstances and have never had to work, I am far from rich.

I am seeing a very nice man who has started to talk marriage. He is 64 and divorced. All he says about his circumstances is that he is "retired and quite well off," and judging from the way he lives and spends money he probably is, but how can I be sure? Don't get me wrong, Abby, I am no gold-digger, but I don't want to marry anybody unless I am sure that I'm bettering myself.

How do I get the facts without giving him the impression that I am interested in his money?

LAKE FOREST LADY

DEAR SERIOUS: Talk to your physician and ask him to recommend a plastic surgeon. Or, write to the Georgia State Medical Society in Atlanta and ask them for a list of board-certified plastic surgeons. And lots of luck, lady.

DEAR ABBY: Is this a Quick Soup

To make a quick soup, combine one can of condensed tomato soup and one can of condensed vegetable bean soup and 1 1/2 soup cans of water. Heat. Stir often. Makes four servings.

DEAR LADY: What's wrong with asking the gentlemen to lay all his cards on the table, and offering to do the same?

If you're still not satisfied, ask your lawyer or financial advisor to check him out. (P.S. And if he's trying to "better" himself, doesn't he deserve the same right?)

DEAR ABBY: Can't resist commenting on the letter from "Serious about him."

A long time ago I heard this saying regarding the search for perfection: "For years I searched for the perfect woman. Finally I found her... but she had only one fault. She was searching for the perfect man."

NOBODY'S PERFECT

DEAR NOBODY'S: It couldn't have been love; if it were, each would have thought the other was perfect, for perfection (like beauty) lies in the eye of the beholder.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Atlanta Woman, Rarity In Field

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Anna Gunkel is a rarity in the field of sports. She is a wrestling promoter, one of two in town.

Mrs. Gunkel admitted that it was difficult at the beginning to herself. The late Ray Gunkel, Mrs. Gunkel's husband, was part of the promoter's operation. But after Gunkel died from a freakish injury in the ring, Mrs. Gunkel said, the promoter "restructured the organization leaving me out." So she went into combat.

She set up a wrestling amphitheater on the other side of the street and landed 27 of the top grapplers. "Only one stayed in the other outfit and he was it."

You will not be bothered with cake sticking to the plate on which you have frosted it if you will first sprinkle the bottom of the plate with cane sugar. This absorbs the moisture and prevents the cake from crumbling and sticking when you cut it.

80,000 Iraqi Kurds Now Middle East's New Refugees

By JONATHAN BRODER along the central Iraqi-Iranian frontier. Hundreds more slip across the border every day, according to relief officials. "The Iraqi soldiers can't win against our guerrillas, so they are destroying the Kurdish villages," said an elderly Kurd at the refugee camp near Paveh, Iran (AP) — The west are the Kurds, fleeing by thousands into western Iran to escape what some call a systematic Iraqi campaign to eradicate the Kurdish minority. About 80,000 Kurds already are in a dozen squalid camps.

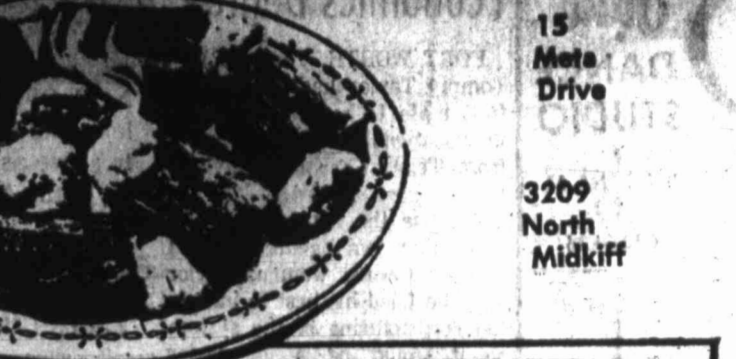

The 70-acre tent complex on the slopes of Mt. Sartaak holds 13,000 refugees, mostly children, old people and women. There are few men of fighting age, and the women say their men stayed behind to battle Iraqi soldiers and jets. Heavy fighting has been reported between the Iraqi military and the Kurdish Pesh Merga guerrillas since negotiations on an autonomous Kurdish state within Iraq broke down last March. About 2 million of Iraq's 10 million people are Kurds, a militant ethnic group concentrated in northern Iraq. At the camp hospital here, several Kurdish guerrillas lay recovering from wounds suffered across the border. Lt. Hassan Ali, a guerrilla commander, said he was wounded but escaped with three other guerrillas after an Iraqi division captured his village. He vowed to return to fight. Almost all those in the camp, however, are civilians who made it to the border by foot or on donkeys. Some fled in carts or battered old cars. One group told how they fled their homes in northeastern Iraq at night to escape Iraqi air attacks. They said they trekked 10 nights in darkness over jagged granite mountains to sanctuary in Iran, leaving behind almost everything they own. Scores of their companions were caught by Iraqi army patrols and killed, they said, while others died of exposure in the mountains or drowned trying to cross fast flowing rivers. Many who made it have smashed bones and scorched flesh. They now face new problems typical to refugees, including dysentery, exhaustion, exposure and the possibility of cholera. "The Red Lion and Sun (Iran's Red Cross) is trying to keep the camp as clean as possible."

LONG HAIR, PROVOCATIVE POSES DON'T UPSET HIM—

THE MIDLAND REPORTER-TELEGRAM, SUNDAY, SEPT. 1, 1974—9B

Blind Justice Holds Appearances Against Nobody

NAPLES, Fla. (AP) — Judge Louis Corbin says some persons coming before him have an advantage.

"Some judges, being human, might hold appearances against somebody. I don't even get upset over long hair," says Florida's only blind judge.

Women who try to influence Corbin by striking a mildly provocative pose soon discover their effort is futile.

"It is a bit humorous," Corbin said in an interview Friday. "My wife sometimes sits in court and tells me about some of the ladies, but I can't appreciate it."

Many persons don't realize that Corbin, 35 and blind since a shotgun accident at the age of 6, can't see them.

"Once a boy, the freaky type, finally realized I was blind and was upset because he had cut his hair to come to court," the judge said.

If there are any particular problems to being a blind judge, Corbin said he isn't aware of them, but he adds, "Every time I picked up that dried up bun, the alleged bug fell out. We had to solve the dilemma of trying to put insect legs back together."

In one case, Corbin had to examine a year-old, partially-eaten bun with half a bug in it.

"The defense left it up to the judge to decide if, in fact, it really was a bug," he said.

"I could have transferred the this Gulf Coast town, won his cases, which is done for several reasons and wouldn't have been a cop-out," he said. "But my legged pornographic movies creates a bit of trouble, but Corbin has attorneys stipulate a solution."

Corbin, a visiting judge in post as a county judge in Jacksonville in a runoff election in 1972. A lawyer since 1964, Corbin said he has little trouble keeping abreast of legal literature.

"You don't have to see to think," he said. "Any high school student can learn the mechanics of legal research. The trick is in interpreting."

U.S. Returns Army Deserter To Adopted Canadian Refuge

PEACE ARCH INTERNATIONAL PARK (AP) — Ronald J. Anderson is back on his adopted Canadian soil and the American Army deserter vows never to return to the United States "until I'm sure there's amnesty."

"It's a great thing to know that a nation of 20 million people is behind you," Anderson said after crossing the border into the land he now calls home and the arms of his wife, Marion.

He was released late Friday after spending a week in the stockade at Ft. Lewis, Wash., a waiting court-martial on charges of being absent without official leave. His freedom came after a formal protest and a request for his return by the Canadian government.

Anderson had been arrested last Saturday by U.S. border guards at this heavily traveled crossing in an incident American officials later admitted occurred "a few yards over the Canadian border."

After that admission on Thursday, Canada asked for Anderson's return. On Friday, the U.S. State Department said it had granted Canada's request.

Anderson, 31, said he learned about 2 p.m. he would be released. Less than five hours later he was free in Canada, where he has landed-immigrant status. He plans to apply for Canadian citizenship in another month.

"I'll never go back until I know it's safe," Anderson said. "Even though the attitude in the United States might be softening, you know the military is going to continue to enforce the law the way it sees it."

Asked if an amnesty declaration would bring many American deserters or draft-evaders back, he said, "I don't think so. I think it would be used mainly for visits. I wouldn't go back to live. Anyway, President Ford will probably declare unconditional amnesty for everyone except Ronald Anderson."

Anderson was driven the 150 miles from Ft. Lewis to the U.S.-Canadian border by Ray Anderson, the Canadian consul-general in Seattle, who said he was informed he had to pick up his man only an hour before taking custody.

"The U.S. reaction was actually extremely rapid," he said.

Consul-General Anderson called the arrest a "inappropriate apprehension" and a violation of Canadian sovereignty.

"What happened was that a number of people felt they had found someone and were going to apprehend him," the consul said.

He said he was sure U.S. guards hadn't intended to violate Canadian territory.

Anderson, a carpenter in Mission, B.C., said he had learned while being held at Ft. Lewis that members of his union local had collected money to help gain his release.

An Army report to the State Department said Anderson had been absent without leave for 10 months when he was captured and court-martialed in October 1968.

Fled To Canada
Anderson escaped from the Ft. Lewis stockade again that November and fled to Canada. He said he had crossed back into the United States several times to visit his mother, Betty Peterson of Poudre, Wash.

On Saturday, however, customs officials checked his Canadian license plate through the U.S. National Crime Information computer system.

"I was detained at the border," Anderson said. "They opened the trunk. They told me to come into the building."

"They asked for identification. I produced my B.C. drivers license. A U.S. customs officer said, 'Give me your wallet.' I said I didn't have to give up my wallet. I told him I retained some rights. He said, 'I'll read you your rights.'"

"I jumped up and ran for the Peace Arch. I thought I had crossed the border, but they caught me. I heard someone say, 'Don't take any pictures.' I hollered, 'Take all the pictures you want. These men are not arresting me legally.'"

It apparently was a picture showing the arrest north of the Peace Arch which straddles the border that helped convince the State Department to release him.

MC Adult Education Courses Set

Midland College's Department of Community Services this week will begin three of its adult education courses including automotive tune up, advanced conversation in Spanish and welding.

The automotive tuneup class will be held at 9 a.m. until noon Saturdays in the college automotive shop, 4807 Andrews Hwy. Classes will meet for six Saturdays, at a cost of $20.

The course is planned to familiarize students with general testing equipment and to allow them experience in performing both minor and major engine tuneups.

Advanced conversation in Spanish is designed for students who have completed three to four semesters of the regular Spanish course and wish to practice in a conversation group.

Classes, which will continue 12 weeks, are set for 7-9 p.m. Thursdays in room 443 at Lee High School. The fee is $24.

Welding, a basic course in fundamentals of arc and gas welding, will begin Saturday in the college welding shop.

The course, slated for 9 a.m. until noon Saturdays, will include 13 weeks of instruction for $48.

Persons interested in taking any of the courses should contact Midland College at 694-1686.

Then Kissinger and his wife, Nancy, boarded a boat for the Rockefeller-owned Caneel Bay resort on the neighboring island of St. John's, about 30 minutes away.

Authorities would not say how long Kissinger planned to stay.

Rising Livestock Prices Mean Higher Food Costs

By DON KENDALL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm prices of cattle and hogs, which provide about 30 per cent of what consumers eat, are climbing again, while beans, potatoes and vegetables have declined from mid-year.

The Agriculture Department reported Friday that overall the price index for raw farm products rose 3 per cent from July 15 to Aug. 15. The boost followed a 6 per cent increase from June to July.

The department's Crop Reporting Board said higher prices for animals, corn, soybeans, wheat and eggs led the advance. However, the index was still 13 per cent below the record set on Aug. 15 last year, officials said.

A week ago, the department predicted retail food prices would continue to rise in the last half of 1974 but not as rapidly as they did early in the year.

Even so, officials said retail food prices for all of 1974 may average at least 15 per cent above last year, compared with a 12 per cent gain predicted a few months ago, when super-large grain crops seemed likely. Summer drought reduced those prospects and has helped fuel another spurt in food prices.

The price index of meat animals as a group rose 4 per cent from July to August, but the average was still 33 per cent below the record peak set a year ago when government food price controls were eased. Cattle, for example, averaged $36.60 per 100 pounds on the hoof, and hogs $36.10 per 100 pounds, each up $1.60 from July 15. But a year earlier cattle were $51.70 and hogs $56.30 per hundredweight.

Corn brought farmers $3.37 per bushel, a record, compared with $2.91 in July and $2.68 in August last year.

Put another way, 100 pounds of live steer would buy about ten bushels of corn this Aug. 15, compared with almost 20 bushels a year ago.

That, basically, is why consumers will see much less grain-fattened beef on store counters and more produced from animals grazed in pastures. It also shows why hog, poultry and dairy products are skeptical about increasing output. It costs much more to feed livestock.

Wheat was $4.24 per bushel at the farm on Aug. 15, up from $4.04 in July but below the $4.45 mark set a year earlier. Wheat rose to a record $5.52 per bushel last February.

The farm price of potatoes was $4.97 per 100-pound bag in August, down from $6.34 in July and from much higher peaks last winter.

A 100-pound bag of dry beans brought farmers $28.30 in August, compared with $30.50 in July. But a year ago they were $17.90 per bag.

The department's farm price index for vegetables was down 16 per cent from July, including lower prices for lettuce, celery, cabbage, tomatoes, cantaloupe and sweet corn. The index, however, was 4 per cent higher than a year ago.

LABOR DAY
MONDAY, SEPT. 2ND

... as a salute to the proud men and women who work throughout the year to meet the daily needs of our lives.

... a tribute to labor, America's Power-for-Peace and the great contributions of the workers, business leaders and professionals that have been made to our Nation's strength.

... such a tribute is small indeed, but not to recognize these achievements is at its best a selfish act. We invite all citizens and merchants of the Permian Basin to join us in the observance of this traditional holiday, Monday, September 2nd.

Ringing The Bell

By BOB TIEUCL

The Black Experience: The ideas underlying the gains of (civil rights) seem to have penetrated neither the hearts of men nor the seats of power. Norman Dorsen, an honor graduate of Harvard Law School, is the author of several important books on civil liberties and a frequent advocate before the United States Supreme Court. In his introduction to one of his latest books, "The Rights of Americans in 1972," he wrote not too optimistically that "hate, rancor, suspicion and violence pervade the American nation. Even more ominously, the mood avoid the term—repressive."

"We have witnessed official threats to the mass media; prosecutions under statutes infringing the right of free speech; accelerating invasions of privacy through wiretapping, electronic eavesdropping and the new menaces of computer data banks and indiscriminate government dossiering; bills to authorize preventive detention; retrenchment in respect of the rights of black people, and failure to satisfy the minimum economic needs of poor people."

Now in the fall of 1974, with the resignation of Richard Nixon as chief executive officer of the United States, there are many libertarians who would say that a new era in civil liberties may be in the offing. Only time will tell.

Universal Interest
Dorsen continues: "There is a universal interest in certain rights—the privacy of one's home, and relief against Comstockian sex laws and Draconian drug laws. Finally, widely disparate groups—for instance, women, students and servicemen—now are rebelling against ancient discriminations and seeking the full protection of the law. In short, the security of individual rights is, or should be, of universal concern. As John Donne recognized long ago, no man's freedom may be diminished without reducing the freedom of all."

Dorsen concludes: "The courts and the Congress include many men determined to resist encroachments on liberty. There are highly motivated lawyers, indefatigable civil liberties organizations and brave clients ready for battle; above all there are millions of Americans, dedicated to a free society, who fear repression and are determined to oppose it. These favorable omens are reflected in the uninhibited protest that exists all around us."

The Black Press: The Black Dispatch, Eddie Jackson, columnist, writes: "The twin problems of inflation and uneven opportunity are still with us, but the incessant anxiety, suspiciousness, aloofness and anti-black aroma of the Nixon administration, has been replaced by something very plain, natural and straightforward. The tone is different, and it is possible to hope again."

The black-oriented Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority was founded in 1908 at Howard University in Washington, D.C. to "foster scholastic excellence, high ethical standards and service to others." Meeting recently in a national convention in Miami Beach, Fla., members heard Publisher John Johnson of Ebony declare:

"Blacks are not taking full advantage of their economic opportunities. . . . There should be a national movement for economic progress, starting NOW. . . . In the last four years, the gap has widened between median income of white families and that earned by blacks. This relative decline reversed a 20 year trend of gains by blacks, and during which time the number of black elected officials doubled from 1,500 to 3,000." He made a special plea for registering blacks and a "get out the vote" campaign in 1974. It was reported that the NAACP, the A. Phillip Randolph Institute—headed by Bayard Rustin—and the Voter Education Project, whose director is John Lewis of Atlanta, have announced the formation of "Operation 74 Registration, in a joint effort."

Dirt, Squirt & Quirt
 - FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS -

Showers continued their spotted pattern in the West Texas area last week. While no general rains developed, some areas to the south, west and east of Midland did finally receive some moisture. The milder weather and the moisture have coupled to result in greening up of native ranges. Hay crops, cotton, and sorghums are responding to the moisture also. The ultimate benefit to these crops will depend on the fall weather according to Charles Green, county agent.

If moisture received has been sufficient, now is a good time to plant small grains for winter forage. For best results, the proper varieties must be selected. Research workers with the Texas agricultural experiment stations recently released recommendations for the 1974-75 season. Those recommended for District 5, the West area, are as follows:

Oats - Alamo-X, Ora, Bronco, Moregrain, New Nortex, Norco and Cimarron.
 Wheat - Caddo, Tascosa, Sturdy, Caprock, Scout 66, Kaw 61, Improved Triumph, Triumph 64 and Crockett.
 Barley - Will Rogers, Cordova, Era, Tambar 401, New Mexico Winter and Tokak (two-row).

Rye - Elbon, Bonel, Synthetic varieties.
 Triticales - FasGro 385.
 Best results in using small grains for winter forage is based on getting the crop in early, getting growth before the cold of winter sets in and rationing the grazing through the winter months. Small grains will produce little growth when temperatures drop below 40 degrees.

The fed cattle market has improved some, but pressure is still on feeder calves. Feedlot losses, lack of equity capital and a withdrawal of many "feeding funds" from the business have left the demand for replacement cattle quite weak. According to Ed Uvacek, livestock marketing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the number of cattle placed on feed during the April-June period was down 29 per cent from a year ago. This means some very low levels of feedlot cattle marketings by the fourth quarter of the year, about 15 per cent lower than a year ago. The low supply of fed cattle could possibly be offset somewhat by large quantities of grass fat stock. Many heavier feeders with sufficient finish will be bought by packers. Some of these will yield U.S. Good grade carcasses and, therefore, are competitive with Choice feedlot cattle. Watch for price differentials between Good and Choice to widen.

The remaining beef will move into the manufacturing meat trade and this should affect cow prices more directly. This, plus some cow liquidation by fall could push cow prices down substantially. Fed cattle could show some weakness this month as the non-feds increase in quantity. Price during the fourth quarter should move upward as we move into the new year, Uvacek concluded.

The cattle and meat situation is a new ball game for both producers and consumers. The present situation means that calves born in the fall would be excellent buys for people who like baby beef. Look at a comparison between prices of choice fed heavy beef and choice baby beef (using August prices): Prices vary over the state, but choice steers and heifers sold averaged about $46 per hundred pounds. Choice calves 450-550 pounds sold for about $36 per hundred. Assuming a dressing percentage of 60 for heavy steers and 58 per cent for choice calves, the carcass cost for heavy beef would be $77 per hundred and for baby beef of the same grade the price would be $62. This is a saving of 5 cents per pound or about 20 per cent less for baby beef.

It has been so long since baby beef has been available at an economical price that some younger consumers have never used it and some of the older ones who formerly ate it have become accustomed to heavy beef. U.S. Choice grade calf does not have as much marbling as U.S. Choice grade heavy beef. For any other type cooking the baby beef will be highly satisfactory. For pan frying it cannot be surpassed. Since baby beef will be lighter on kidney and outside fat, there will be a greater percentage of edible meat produced from a baby beef carcass.

Price Tags Up On Ford Top Models

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Six 1975 luxury car models that Ford Motor Co. is allowing dealers to sell a month early are carrying 10 to 18 per cent price increases over current models, the company says.

Ford said Friday that the move was taken so its dealers could meet competition from General Motors, which opened sales of 1975 models last week, also a month early, because of 1974 car shortages.

Ford Vice President John B. Naughton said that at the request of dealers, 1975 models of the Ford Elite and Thunderbird, Mercury Marquis and Cougar XR7 and Lincoln Continental and Mark IV may be sold immediately.

Ford said a two-door Continental coupe tentatively is going up $1,433, or 17.8 per cent, to $9,486. The Mark IV will carry a tentative increase of $1,134, or 11.1 per cent, raising the sticker price to $11,328.

Advance billings list a $481, or 10.2 per cent, hike for the Cougar model, which now will cost $5,187. The lowest-priced Mercury, which this year was the Monterey, will be the Marquis in 1975. The Marquis will cost roughly $5,082, up $715, or 16.3 per cent, from the Monterey.

The intermediate Ford Torino Elite will be priced at $4,873, a $436 increase, or 9.8 per cent, and the Thunderbird is carrying a tentative price of $8,035, up $705, or 9.6 per cent.

Commissioners In Ector Seek Funds For Elderly

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners met in special session Friday with representatives of the Senior Center and agreed to seek a Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) grant to finance a "Meals on Wheels" program for senior citizens.

The meals would be catered to elderly persons too poor to buy adequate foods or those not physically able to shop for food and prepare their meals.

In other action, the commissioners voted to ask the county auditor to try to locate funds needed to finance the first phase of the expansion and renovation of the Senior Center.

They also agreed to try to find money to begin paving of the center's parking area in early 1975 rather than wait for funding in the next fiscal year.

Dawson Arthritis Unit To Sponsor Forum At Lamesa

LAMESA — Mrs. Troy Howard, chairman, has announced that the Dawson County unit of the West Texas Chapter, Plains Division, of the Arthritis Foundation, will sponsor a Public Forum to be held in the Community Center here at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Panelists will be Dr. Bruce Bartholomew, head of the Department of Rheumatology, Texas Tech University School of Medicine; Dr. Kenneth Scholz, orthopedic surgeon and associate clinical professor at TTU; and Doug Langley, registered Physical Therapist, of Lubbock.

Dr. Bartholomew, a specialist in rheumatology, came to Texas Tech's Medical School from the University of Colorado Medical Center, where he had been assistant professor of Medicine and director of the arthritis laboratories since 1966. He is head of the research laboratory at Texas Tech School of Medicine which is sponsored by the West Texas Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation and by Texas Tech University.

Following the panel discussion, a question and answer period will be held. Refreshments will be served, and free literature, printed both in English and the Spanish language, will be distributed.

Officers for the Dawson County unit, in addition to Mrs. Howard, are Mrs. Jesus Galindo, Mrs. "Today" Morris, Mrs. Glendine Holman, Hap Bratcher, and Frank Liddell.

Moisture Cause Varies
If there is moisture around your water heater tank, it may be condensation or spillover from the pressure relief valve rather than an actual leak.

Brewers Edge M-Cubs

By TED BATTLES

It was one of those games where you write your lead in the third inning and then just wait to see how bad it's going to get before filling in the final tally.

After three innings, the Cubs were down 3-1 and were looking like a baseball team that couldn't wait for the football season to start. That's when things started happening.

The Cubs didn't win, but they gave the crowd of 1,616 Texas League fans at Cubs Stadium a run for their money Saturday night before losing, 3-7.

Midland made it close with a five-run fifth, highlighted by Jose Ortiz' 10th homer, as the Cubs knocked starter Ron Salyer out of the box with a procession of nine batters.

Bill Haseman doubled to left to start things and Wayne Tyrone's second double produced a run. Ortiz blasted a towering fly down the left field line for two more and Ken Pape tripled, his third hit of the night.

A walk to Mike Sember brought in Joe Weese and his wild pitch let Pape score. Before the inning ended an error and two passed balls resulted in a fifth run.

Left-hander Tom Badcock, Midland's third pitcher, threw hitless ball for four innings after relieving to start the fifth and wound up with five scoreless innings. Unhappily, Weese was equally as stingy after rescuing Salyer, yielding just one hit in 4 2/3 innings of relief to earn the victory.

Maybe the outcome was poetic justice. After all, Midland had done more to keep the Brewers from catching first place El Paso than anyone else.

At one time this year, San Antonio held the Cubs' in a 10-2 hammerlock. Going into Saturday's game, however, Midland held a 14-13 edge, which meant the Cubs had a 13-0 edge since May 27.

In tonight's 7-30 PM, Dan Carter, 3-5, goes for Midland and Tom Linnet, 3-5, will lead for the Brewers. It will be Back-to-School and Broken Bat Night.

The season concludes Monday with Chamber of Commerce and Kruger Jewelry Night, the highlight will be the announcement of the Cubs' Most Popular Player.

Statistically, Tyrone righting a lead hit for his 10th win, fell behind 2-1 in the second when a walk to Ken Haseman League home run led, but was claimed the title for his own with a bank by Gary Radtke's 10th.

San Antonio's first-inning run came on David Oliver's triple that slipped over the first base bag and rolled to the fence, followed by Orlando Gonzalez single up the middle.

A two-out walk to Bill Duggan and Tyrone's double, which took a bad bounce over WE Aaron's head to left, tied it 2-2 in the last of the first.

Left-hander Dave Golitz, who gave a lead hit for his 10th win, fell behind 2-1 in the second when a walk to Ken Haseman League home run led, but was claimed the title for his own with a bank by Gary Radtke's 10th.

Left-hander Dave Golitz, who gave a lead hit for his 10th win, fell behind 2-1 in the second when a walk to Ken Haseman League home run led, but was claimed the title for his own with a bank by Gary Radtke's 10th.

In the fourth, Sember beat out a slow roller to third and back third on the two-run throwing error, from where he scored on Steve Hugg's sacrifice fly to center.

The game was only temporary. In the third, a walk and Haseman's sixth straight hit, to left, made it 2-1. And then in the fourth, the Brewers apparently put it on ice with three more runs. WE Aaron beat out an infield hit, stole second and scored on David Oliver's single to center. Then a single by Gonzalez, an error and infield out produced two more runs.

A Chamber spokesman noted that, while many Midlanders will be out of town for the Labor Day weekend, for others the Cubs' game would make a nice evening to conclude the long weekend.

Chamber Of Commerce Night Set For Monday

Monday, will be "Midland Chamber of Commerce Night" at Cubs Stadium. The Cubs will be playing the San Antonio Brewers in the final game of the 1974 season. Game time is 7:45 p.m.

"The Cubs have provided fine entertainment for Midland and the area during the past three years," noted Harrell Felt, chairman of the Chamber's Sports Committee. "We hope to have a large crowd out for the game to show the Cubs how much we appreciate their efforts."

will be presented to each player at the game.

"We think one of the finest tributes we could give the Cubs would be a capacity crowd," stated Chamber president K. M. Justice. "I feel that every resident of this community should go out to a game, particularly if they haven't been out this season."

Cowboys Post Win

DALLAS (AP) — The clutch passing of underrated rookie quarterback Clint Longley and a costly 40-yard interference penalty ignited the Dallas Cowboys to a 25-16 National Exhibition victory Saturday night over the Kansas City Chiefs.

Longley, who was the national small college passing leader in 1973 at Abilene Christian, a number one draft choice Charles Young of North Carolina State, and yet another rookie, Dennis Morgan of Western Illinois, played the hero's roles as Dallas extended its preseason mark to 3-2.

Longley was pressed into service in the second half with Dallas behind 13-16. Morgan returned a kickoff 77 yards to set up a 17-yard touchdown run by Young to make it 16-13.

Jon Stenerud kicked his third field goal to tie the score 16-16. Kansas City's Jim Marshall was flagged for interfering with Bob Hayes on a long bomb from Longley. The 49-yard penalty put Dallas in position for Calvin Hill's one-yard touchdown run.

The ice-cool Longley then completed passes of 20 and 22 yards on Dallas' next possession. Marvin Bateman then kicked a game-tying 39-yard field goal.

Dallas starting quarterback Craig Morton suffered a bruised hand in the second quarter. Roger Staubach, the number one Cowboy quarterback did not see action because of cracked ribs.

Besides field goals of 24, 42 and 36 yards, the Chiefs also tallied on a 20-yard screen pass from Len Dawson to Willie Nelson.

One of the game's more spectacular plays occurred on the last play of the first half. Kansas City's Willie Lanier intercepted a Marion pass and returned it 98 yards before he was knocked out of bounds by the Cowboys' Jim Arneson. Time ended on the play and the Chiefs could not take advantage of the big play.

Spiker, Wheeler Cop Hogan Lead

Ed Spiker and Moose Wheeler finished a seven under par 64 Saturday to take the opening day lead in the annual Labor Day Partnership Golf Tournament at Hogan Park.

The three-day affair continues today and ends Monday. The teams will be fought after today's second round. Despite Wheeler and Spiker's 64 Saturday, the team remains close with Len Opheim and Ed Hixon tied two-strokes off the pace with a 68. Stan Loper and Tom Cunningham own a 69 for the day while five teams are tied at 71.

Odessa Permian 5-4A Pick Again

Midland Lee Picked Fourth; Bulldogs To Finish In 6th

SAN ANGELO — The Odessa Permian Panthers who have won or shared the District 5-4A football title six out of the last nine years, is the slim pick to win again in 1974, according to the coaches and sports scribes.

Bob Milburn, San Angelo Standard Times Sports Editor, conducted the pre-season poll with the Panthers favored by five points over the Central Bobcats from San Angelo. Abilene Cooper is picked third followed by Midland Lee, Odessa, Midland, Abilene and Big Spring, in that order.

Eight coaches and five sports writers cast their ballots with Milburn adding up the points. Permian won the title outright in 1970 and 1972 while sharing the crown with Cooper in 1971 and San Angelo last year. Other titles came in 1965 and 1968. The Black Cats won the championship outright in '65 and shared it with the Bobcats in 1968.

Permian racked up a total of 63½ points to San Angelo's 78½; Cooper had 67 while Lee wound up with 45½ followed by Odessa's 43½, Midland 43, Abilene 27 and Big Spring's 18.

In a breakdown between the coaches, Permian received 45½ points, San Angelo 43½, Cooper 37, Lee 26½, Odessa 24½, Midland 24, Abilene 15 and Big Spring eight.

The writers were also close with Permian getting 38, San Angelo 35, Cooper 30, Lee, OHS and MHS 19 each, Abilene 12 and Big Spring eight.

Coach John Reddell's Purple Pack opens the season in Amarillo Friday against Tascosa while Coach Jim Acree's Rebels entertain Lubbock High in Memorial Stadium.

BLOOMINGTON (AP) — The Twins handed the American League East leaders their fifth loss in the last seven games. Eric Soderholm's seventh hit in his last eight times at bat, a two-out single in the first inning, drove in Minnesota's first run and Olivia's 209-foot homer made it 2-0 in the first.

Minnesota knocked out Boston starter Dick Drago, 6-4, in the sixth. Soderholm led off with a walk and Brian followed with his home run, a 289-foot line drive into the right field bleachers. Drago retired the next two batters, but after Glenn Borgman singled, Drago was hit for Diego Segui, who got Steve Brye to ground out on his first pitch.

Boston's first run came in the fourth when the Red Sox reached Golitz for three consecutive singles. But after Carl Yastrzemski's RBI, Golitz avoided further trouble by getting Rico Petrocelli to hit into a double play and striking out Jim Rice.

Yastrzemski homered to lead off the ninth for Boston's other run. After Rico Petrocelli doubled, Burgmeier replaced Golitz and finished up.

Falcons Down Baltimore, 23-7

ATLANTA Ga. (AP) — Quarterback Pat Sullivan passed for 294 yards and led the Atlanta Falcons to a 23-7 victory Saturday over the Baltimore Colts. Sullivan completed 14 of 25, including a 20-yard touchdown pass to Ken Burrow. Tony Bertozzi raced 46 yards with an intercepted pass to account for the only Baltimore score.

Tiny's Gay Seeking Win

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — Tiny's Gay, the undefeated star of the Quarter Horse world, faces the challenge Monday of becoming the first winner of the sport's Triple Crown.

Tiny's Gay and nine other 2-year-olds will be running at Ruidoso Downs in the 16th All-American Futurity, billed as the world's richest horse race.

The 440-yard All-American is the third leg of the Triple Crown of Quarter Horse racing and carries a total purse of $1.85 million. The final actually is worth a gross of $296,000, with the rest of the money making up the purses for three consolation races.

Of the $795,000, $300,000 goes to the winner, with prize money scaled down to $27,000 for the last horse across the finish line. The race will be televised live from coast to coast by more than 100 stations at 8 p.m. CDT. Tiny's Gay won the the Kansas Futurity June 23 and the Rainbow Futurity Aug. 4 and a victory in the All-American would give the colt the honor of being the only horse to ever sweep all three races. A win also would keep the colt's perfect record intact.

Tiny's Gay has won all 12 of his starts and has earned $306,720. A triumph Monday would push the money Tiny's Gay has returned to owner John Colville of Paramount, Calif., to $696,720. Colville purchased Tiny's Gay as a yearling for only $3,000.

The horses with the 10 fastest times over 440 yards in 21 trials, which featured 209 hopefuls, Aug. 23, moved into the All-American.

Although Tiny's Gay won his heat in 21.74 seconds, it was only the third best qualifying time. Easy Six, owned by the S. B. Burnett Estate of Fort Worth, Tex., covered the 440 yards in with his trial in the day's top time of 21.69. The colt sports a 5-3 log in eight races and has earned $77,455.

Easy Date, owned by Walter F. Merrick of Sayre, Okla., turned the second best time with a 21.67 clocking. The filly has won five of the six races and finished second in the other.

Maskee Lad, owned by Billy G. Underwood Sr., of Dallas, qualified with the fourth best time at 21.67. Next was David Capri, owned by Frank J. Hilden, of Houston, at 21.63. Rounding out the field are Chautos, Eldon and Lois Black and Roy A. Forlmer, Quamado, Tex., 21.52; Hens Charger, Ronald G. Houseman and Alvaro F. Stanley Jr., Madill, Okla., 21.50; I Can Go, Ethel W. and Charles Bird, Midland, Tex., 21.50; Little Blue Sheep, L.R. French Jr., Odessa, Tex., 22.00; and Sheswright, W.L. Edwards, Ruidoso, N.M., 22.07.

Tyler AAAA Power Again

By The Associated Press

Defending state champion John Tyler in Class AAAA and Big Sandy in B will start out No. 1 in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football poll along with Brazosport in Class AAA, Newton in AA and Falls City in A.

Tyler, which followed the bulldozer charges of Earl Campbell to a perfect 15-0 season and a 21-14 victory over Austin Reagan in the title game, garnered 10 of the 15 first place votes in the AP's pre-season poll.

Fort Worth Arlington Heights, which was a quarterfinals victim of Tyler last year, was a strong second in the Class AAAA balloting by sports writers across the state. Conroe, Corpus Christi Moody and Brazoswood rounded out the top five.

Campbell has moved on to The University of Texas but he left behind two younger brothers, Steve and Tim, to carry the Tyler banner in 1974.

Thirteen starters, including all-state returnees tight end Ronnie Lee and nose-guard Gary Johnson, should help Tyler along, too.

Brazosport, which drops down from Class AAAA this year, got strong competition from Beaumont South Park for the top position in Class AAA. The Exporters also will get competition in their district race this year from Friendswood, the 1973 Class AA champion which has moved into AAA.

Beaumont South Park, which made it to the playoffs in Class AAAA last year, made a strong run at the Class AAA top spot trailing Brazosport by a 127-121 margin.

South Park will play this season without super running back Darrell Hebert, who will miss the season with a knee injury.

Newton has proper credentials for the No. 1 ranking in Class AA including 15 returning starters from a 10-2 1973 team that lost in the playoffs to eventual champion Friendswood.

Sned Captures Lead In Atlanta

By TOM SALADINO

ATLANTA (AP) — J.C. Sned, having his best golfing year ever although a non-winner in more than two years, climaxed his 67 Saturday with an eagle on the final hole for a 202 total and a three-stroke edge over Jack Nicklaus after three rounds of the inaugural $250,000 Tournament Players Championship.

Nicklaus, the fourth leading money winner this year, but victorious in only the Hawaiian Open, also shot an eagle in his round. It came on the par-five, 542-yard eighth hole when he dropped in a 65-yarder.

He stayed close to Sned with birdies on three of his final five holes, including the 18th.

At 2:07 were Honero Blancas and second-day leader Lou Graham. Graham, who blasted consecutive 6fs the first two days, struggled to a 73 Saturday.

Blancas had a 69.

Rain Halts Ladies Play

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Rain halted play Saturday after nine holes in the 35-thousand-dollar Southgate women's golf tournament. Officials have let the nine-hole scores stand. And they scheduled a 27-hole final round to complete the Kansas City tournament. Jane Bialock is the leader after 27 holes. Miss Bialock scored a one under 35 for the front nine. Sue Roberts had a 35 for nine holes and is one stroke behind. Two strokes off the lead is Kathy Whitworth. She came up with a two over 38.

Warren In Lead

Johnny Warren is still alive in his quest for a repeat title in the Midland Country Club Championship Golf Tournament, but it took him 20-hole Saturday in the second round to down a game Ted Ferguson, who lost by a narrow stroke on a two-hole playoff.

Warren won his first round match much easier Friday with a 4-3 victory over Gordon Marcum.

Saturday, Bill Yost pulled off a 1-up victory over George Tucker when his mid-air ball struck the 18th green pin to fall two-feet from the hole. Yost then sunk his putt while Tucker missed a two-footer to keep the match from going any farther.

Richard Patton edged out Bill Hightower, 1-up and Andy Shapira defeated Walt Locker in other championship flight matches Saturday.

Sooners Picked No. 1 In Nation

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer

The Oklahoma Sooners, who finished third last season, have been tapped to unseat Notre Dame as college football's national champion.

In nationwide balloting by the 58 members of The Associated Press panel of sports writers and broadcasters, Oklahoma received 23 first-place votes and 976 of a possible 1,160 points.

Trailing the Sooners in the preseason voting were Ohio State, Notre Dame and Alabama. The rest of the Top Ten consisted of Southern California, Michigan, Nebraska, Penn State, Louisiana State and Texas.

"I think it's great to be No. 1, but it puts a lot of pressure on us," said Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, who compiled a 10-0-1 mark last season in his debut as a head coach. "When Playbook picks you No. 1 you don't feel the pressure, but when the writers and broadcasters pick you No. 1 the pressure is really on."

The Sooners are winding up a two-year probation levied by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for recruiting violations and cannot go to a bowl game this season.

Ohio State, which finished second in last year's final AP poll after a convincing 42-21 Rose Bowl rout of Southern Cal, received 14 first-place votes and 907 points.

"Notre Dame won the 1973 national championship by eking out a 24-23 victory over Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, but the Fighting Irish were rated third in the preseason poll with 13 first-place votes and 864 points.

Alabama was fourth, just as it was in the final 1973 AP poll, with six first-place votes and 859 points. Southern Cal, the 1972 champion, received one first-place ballot and 752 points. The other first-place vote went to Michigan, which had 566 points.

Southern Cal was No. 1 in last year's preseason poll, while Notre Dame, the eventual champion, was eighth. Oklahoma was 11th.

This year's preseason Second Ten consisted of Houston, UCLA, Pitt, Maryland, Arizona State, Tennessee, Arizona, North Carolina State, Arkansas and Texas A&M.

The final 1973 poll: Notre Dame, Ohio State, Oklahoma, Alabama, Penn State, Michigan, Nebraska, Southern California, Arizona State and Houston tied for ninth, Texas Tech, UCLA, Louisiana State, Texas, Miami of Ohio, North Carolina State, Missouri, Kansas and Tennessee, with Maryland and Tulane tied for 20th.

Carlen Likes MTC Action In Finals

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — "We're getting down to the ones you want to play," said Texas Tech Coach Jim Carlen as two-a-day workouts ended for the Red Raiders Saturday with a two-and-a-half hour scrimmage.

"Our execution is good," Carlen said, "so it's just a matter of finding out who wants to play."

Tech opens at home against Iowa State Sept. 14.

Fumbles and the play of the second offensive line disturbed Carlen in Saturday's scrimmage, "our second set of linemen was bad," he said.

The bright spot of the scrimmage was the play of the Red Raider defense, especially the secondary.

The running of last year's Southwest Conference "Freshman of the Year" Larry Isaac and incoming freshman Billy Taylor from San Antonio (Jays) was exceptional. Isaac gained 45 yards on seven carries and Taylor 29 on five jaunts.

Mets Post Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Rusty Staub's two-run single in the eighth inning lifted the New York Mets to a 6-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

Staub, who earlier had tripled to drive in a run, connected off reliever Tom House with two outs to drive home Ken Boswell and Bud Harrelson. Boswell had opened the inning with a pinch-hit single and Harrelson had followed with a single to left.

REDELL PLEASED WITH HARD HITTING

Pack, Snyder Deadlock

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

The Midland High Bulldogs carried the momentum into the latter stages of the two and one half hour scrimmage.

It is no secret that Snyder, who has already had one scrimmage under his belt, was stronger in the early stages of the scrimmage, but seemed to tire late in the affair as the Bulldogs gained strength.

Before a half-time break, Snyder had scored twice and moved inside the 10 on another occasion while the Pack scored once and failed on another drive inside the 10.

Snyder scored the first time they held the ball in 11 plays when Ricky Howell scored from the one after Snyder's fabulous Welton Cobb, an all-star, set up the score with a 25-yard scamper.

Midland came right back with a 14-play march which saw Kim Madden covering the last eight yards on a sweep. A 12-yard aerial from John Webb to Rufus Johnson set up the score.

Snyder struck again when Greg Gafford hit Kenny Thompson with a 41-yard TD strike. That was the first of three times that the Tigers got behind the Midland defense for a score, and those three plays were probably the biggest disappointment of the scrimmage for the Pack.

After the break, Snyder scored quickly when Win Bunch connected with Chester Cobb for a 20-yard scoring aerial, but the momentum then shifted to the Bulldogs for the rest of the night as the defense hardened.

On the next series, Midland failed to score again from inside the 10, but on the next series quarterback Dusty Hicks guided the Pack to a score in 12 plays. Ron Hill got the score from the one, but the drive was set up with 14, 11- and 38-yard tosses from Hicks to Terry Copeland. Those three passes came in succession.

The Bulldogs quickly untraced in the next series when the teams went to a punt situation instead of the 15-play series. Mike Hudspeth and Mike Gaddy made runs of 16 and 21 yards respectively before Hudspeth cracked over from the three. Ron Hill then recovered a Cobb fumble to open the Snyder series and the Bulldogs were off to a 20-yard drive for a score which saw Gaddy crashing in from the one.

Snyder ended the scrimmage with a 35-yard TD pass from Bunch to Cobb to produce the scoring deadlock.

BULLDOG BITES

Steve Campbell, David Hamilton, Scott Poillard, James Wortham and Bill Sutton all came up with big defensive plays during the scrimmage.

Coach Roy Blair's sophomore crew had a good outing against the Snyder sophs, but the junior varsity took some lumps in a brief scrimmage. The junior varsity squad was quickly put together, according to Redell.

The Bulldogs open the 1974 grid season Friday night when they travel to Amarillo to do battle with the Tascosa Rebels. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Dove Season Opens Today Across State

AUSTIN — A last-minute check with Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists, wardens and information officers across the state indicates that this summer's drought will have its affect on dove hunting today.

The drought made its presence most known in the Trans-Pecos region of far West Texas. There, T.P.&W.D. information officer Rodger McKown of El Paso describes dove hunting prospects as "excellent to non-existent."

"The best hunting will be found in the irrigated farmland along the Rio Grande and near Pecos and Balmorhea," said McKown.

El Paso, Hudspeth and Reeves Counties offer the best prospects. East of the Pecos River, parts of Crane, Midland and Ector counties should have good hunting.

Much the same holds true for North Central Texas — biologist and game warden field reports say: "the hunting will be poor with occasional hot spots."

"Dove hunters in this part of the state will have to work a little harder and drive a little farther to the remaining irrigated grain and weed patches," according to information officer Tate Pittman in Wichita Falls.

One of the best areas for dove concentrations seems to be from Wichita Falls to south of Paducah. Hall storms beat down maize crops and birds have been attracted to the unharvestable grain.

Recent heavy rains in the Panhandle will make hunting more difficult, according to reports received by information officer J. D. Peer in Lubbock.

West of the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolis, the outlook is better than last year but to the east of the sprawling urban center birds appear to be scattered.

Farther to the east, in Tyler, area biologists there are talking about a better-than-average hunt, some 15 to 20 percent better than last year.

In southeast Texas, around Beaumont and Port Arthur, biologist Bill Borden has been collecting data in the area for the state-wide mourning dove program and says the population looks extremely good.

Regional wildlife supervisor C. K. Winkler in Rockport is pessimistic about dove hunting in South Texas. Although most of the area doesn't open until Sept. 21, alternate drought and flood conditions have dimmed the picture.

In the Rio Grande Valley, biologists making white-winged dove counts report many mourning doves mixed with whitewing flights. Both mourning and whitewings are legal game Sept. 1-3 and 7-3 in the counties along the Rio Grande.

The TP&W.D.'s banding program indicates an average to above-average hatch for the year.

Nebraska Has Talent

By ERIC KRAMER

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Most football coaches would give their alumni association for Tom Osborne's Nebraska Cornhuskers, but as Osborne goes into his second year as head coach he says he is feeling intense pressure to win.

After finishing last season with a 9-2-1 season, a No. 7 national rating and a Cotton Bowl victory, Osborne said his team did not see "wild unrestrained joy" coming from the red-clad legion of Nebraska fans.

The fans want an 11-0 season every year, and to do that Osborne will have to defeat the Oklahoma Sooners, whom he says deserve to be ranked No. 1.

But with the talent he has, other coaches and fans would be happy. Dave Humm will be back, aiming for several Big Eight passing records in his third season at quarterback. Last year he completed 114 of his 209 passes for 1,661 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Osborne says Humm will do it. The other big weakness, cornerback Tom Odoms, will be at middle guard, the key position in the 5-3 defensive front. Osborne has tried several men in the position, but well into fall practice he is still not happy.

Linebackers Bob Nelson and Tom Rouse are expected to be two of the defensive strengths. Osborne says monster man Wonder Monds has the tools to be excellent.

more running this year. But if he gets hurt, the Cornhuskers are in trouble. They have several quarterbacks in the wings, but none with any significant amount of experience.

The coaching staff is high on split end Dave Shamblin and tight end Larry Mushinski.

Tony Davis, last year's star fullback, will be running from the fullback position this year.

Wingback Ritch Babe is also high on the team's list of strengths, but Osborne says he has no "big explosive player" in the tradition of Johnny Rodgers.

Injuries could hurt the Huskers. Besides Humm, Osborne cannot afford to do without standout center Rik Bonness, defensive tackle Ron Pruitt and defensive end Bob Martin.

The Husker offensive line features Bonness and right tackle Marvin Greshaw. Osborne says it will be solid, but possibly not as solid as Oklahoma's.

Though the team is strong through most of the offensive positions, kicking could be a problem. Nebraska will have experienced men doing the punting and kicking.

The other big weakness, punting, Osborne will be at middle guard, the key position in the 5-3 defensive front. Osborne has tried several men in the position, but well into fall practice he is still not happy.

Osborne says monster man Wonder Monds has the tools to be excellent.

"Breaks, penalties, the kicking game and injuries could make the difference" between an 11-1 season and a 7-5 mark, Osborne says.

To play 12 games, he will have to get to a bowl — and he sounds like he plans to play 12 games. Nebraska fans have had a bowl game since 1969; they have come to expect it.

LOSERS BLOW CHANCES

El Paso Downs M-Cubs By 5-4

EL PASO — The El Paso Diablos maled down the Western Division pennant Friday night before 3,734 screaming fans in Dudley Field, as they toppled the Midland Cubs, 5-4.

Midland had chances in the eighth and ninth innings to tie or pull out the victory, but relief pitcher Don Kirkwood was tough when he had to be.

In the eighth with one out, first baseman Wayne Tyrone doubled into left and Bill Bright walked, bringing in Kirkwood in relief of starter and winner Frank Parrick. Kirkwood used two pitches to get Jose Ortiz and Ken Pape on routine fly balls to center.

In the ninth, with one out, Steve Clancy and Brock Davis rapped back-to-back singles, but once again, Kirkwood got Bill Huisman and Bill Droegge on popups to first and second base to leave Clancy and Davis stranded.

The Cubs took a 1-0 lead in the first inning off Parrick when Davis singled, stole second, went to third when catcher Rocky Jordan threw the ball into center and scored when Droegge grounded out to first.

El Paso came up with a single run in the second and three more in the third with the key hit being a two-run single by Ron Jackson.

Trailing 5-1, going into the fifth, Midland erupted for three runs to make things interesting. Pape singled into left, Mike Sember walked and with one out, Davis singled into right, scoring Pape. Sember went to third and Davis to second and Huisman singled in Sember to make it 5-3. Tyrone scored Davis after Droegge walked to fill the bases.

Golden Tors Rebuilding

Robinson Heads Lamesa Attack

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
ST Sports Writer

LAMESA — The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes have ruled the District 3-AAA football world the last two years with such devastation that people are beginning to believe in their nickname, but some are predicting that the fall winds won't be as strong in 1974.

Those making such predictions are not writing the Tornadoes off as a bad debt, however, they just can't see how they can be as strong as in 1973 when the Wind Machine rolled to a 12-1 season mark before falling to Mount Pleasant in the AAA semifinals. That was the most successful squad in Lamesa history and 3-AAA foes are hoping that the winds will subside this time around.

One reason for optimism among the other league members is that Lamesa returns only one offensive and four defensive members from last year's brutal Tornado.

That lone offensive returnee, however, happens to be Melvin Robinson, a 185-pound senior fullback who most believe is a can't miss blue-chipper when all is finally said and done in 1974. Robinson rushed for more than 1,000 yards in 1973 as a sophomore and racked up more than 1,400 yards last year to become West Texas' most prolific ground gobbler.

Here lies the heart of the Lamesa attack in 1974, and the year he has could ultimately spell out the fortunes of the Lamesa crew, and if it is good enough, Lamesa will own their third straight conference crown.

Robinson is intent on doing better than he did a year ago despite losing all-state linemen Bob Kilgore and Trip Chastain, who made it all possible last year.

Coach Tom Koger, in his debut as head football coach after replacing the departed Robert James, is one of Robinson's greatest fans. "He would like to carry the ball 40 times a game if we would let him. He just doesn't know when to quit."

"We also know that our opponents are going to gang up on him this year, but we are blessed with six running backs that will give a lot of people trouble," Koger added.

Koger realizes that following a 12-1 act is hard to do, but he is pleased with his squad's size and quickness. The backfield should be strong again despite the loss of West Texas' leading scorer, Kent McCurley, who graduated.

Mark Mays (163, Sr.) will step in at quarterback and has some experience. Alan Robinett (180, Sr.) appears to be a shoe-in for one halfback slot while a heated battle is being waged for the other position with Andy Hackney (155, Jr.), Eddy Pearson (160, Jr.) and Remy Laughlin (155, Jr.).

Add those to the 1,000 yard capability of Robinson and the scoreboard should not lack for points.

The offensive line appears to be stronger than most would believe possible after graduation losses. Richard Archer (185, Jr.) and Joe Puckett (185, Sr.) give a lot of class at tackle while James Garza (185, Sr.) and Rudy Garcia (195, Jr.) have good size for guards. Jerry Williams (165, Sr.) will be the center.

Lester Smith (160, Jr.), a split end, promises to make a good target for Mays when Koger elects to go to the air from his run oriented Wishbone attack and Jay Cox (150, Sr.) is a good blocker at the tight end slot.

Still the Tors figure to be stronger on defense where four return from last year's eleven. Nose guard Bruce Beck (210, Sr.), who came along strong at the end of last year, cornerback Robinson, end Garza and tackle Billy Mayfield (230, Sr.) will be the heart of the defense.

Mike Moore (195, Jr.) will join Mayfield at the tackle slot for a strong combination while David Hardage (165, Sr.) will anchor an end position with Garza. Hackney will be with Robinett at the line-backer posts while Cox will join Robinson at the corner.

Steve Price (150, Sr.) will be the strong safety while Danny Finniken (155, Jr.) is slated to share time with Mays at the free safety. Finniken is also the backup quarterback.

Most of the pre-season polls are saying that Snyder's return to AAA ball will be successful and that Lamesa's domination will end. It could be true since Snyder has a talented back in their own right with Melvin Cobb. The drama will not last long, however, since Lamesa and Snyder tangled on the first week of district play Oct. 4.

Koger says that Lake View and Lubbock Estacado also have to be rated as contenders and thinks the eventual winner may have a loss of two under their belts when the playoffs come. "The time for winning this district undefeated may have come to an end," Koger says.

PREDICTION: As far as this writer can determine, Snyder and Lamesa rate as a toss up. Since Snyder will have the home field advantage in their game with Lamesa, the nod goes to the Tigers, but don't put any money on it.

Expos Bomb Reds, Dodgers Lose

Bucs Drop Leaders By 4-3

By ALEX SACHARE

Bob Bailey is getting his second wind.

The 31-year-old outfielder, a $135,000 bonus baby back in 1961 who is now in his 13th major league season, says he's not getting older, he's getting better.

Bailey blasted two home runs as the Expos erupted for a club-record five homers in pounding out an 11-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday night.

In 1970, Bailey's second year with the Expos, he batted .287 with 26 homers. He dropped to .251 and .233 the next two years, but bounced back to .273 with 26 homers in 1973.

This year he's, batting .277 with 19 homers and 66 RBIs.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles 4-3, Houston edged Philadelphia 3-2, New York beat Atlanta 4-2, San Francisco defeated St. Louis 8-2 and Chicago swept a pair from San Diego 5-1 in 12 innings and 4-3 in 10.

CALIFORNIA ACE HAS 304 STRIKEOUTS— Ryan, Blyleven Star

By HERSCHEL NISSENBOUN
AP Sports Writer

California's Nolan Ryan set another strikeout record Friday night but it was overshadowed by the pitching of Minnesota's Bert Blyleven and the hitting of Oakland's Claudio Washington.

The freewheeling Ryan fanned nine in pitching the Angels to a 9-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. That gave him 204 for the season and made him the first pitcher in modern baseball to post three consecutive 200-strikeout campaigns.

Meanwhile, Blyleven whiffed 14 Boston batters — a career high — and hurled a four-hitter as the Twins edged the Red Sox 3-2 while rookie Washington celebrated his 20th birthday a day early with three singles, an RBI double and a two-run triple and was given a $2,000 raise as the A's whipped the Detroit Tigers 10-4.

Elsewhere in the American League, the New York Yankees downed the Chicago White Sox 6-4 and climbed within four games of Boston in the AL East, the Baltimore Orioles trounced the Kansas City Royals 9-2 and the Cleveland Indians turned back the Texas Rangers 7-3.

Twins 2, Red Sox 2
Bert Blyleven, whose fourth-inning error let in both Boston runs, drove in the winner with a sacrifice fly in the ninth following a leadoff walk to Glenn Borgmann and Steve Brye's double.

Soderholm's drive to the left field fence was dropped by Boston's Bernie Carbo as he leaped against the fence. Carbo threw the ball wildly past third, catcher Tim Blackwell retrieved it and threw to the uncovered plate, and the ball went into right field while Soderholm trotted home.

Second base umpire George Maloney said Carbo caught the ball, and Minnesota manager Frank Quilici raced from the dugout before Soderholm crossed the plate. The umpires finally ruled that the ball had not been caught but Quilici's appearance negated the run and ordered Soderholm back to third, where he was stranded.

Orlando 9, Royals 2
Baltimore's Mike Cuellar scattered eight hits, including John Mayberry's 21st home run, for his 16th victory. Kansas City starter Bruce Dal Canton walked three men and threw two wild pitches in 1 2/3 innings while catcher Fran Healy committed a passed ball and two throwing errors.

Yankees 3, White Sox 5
The Yankees scored four unearned runs in the seventh inning on one single, three consecutive throwing errors and a sacrifice fly and went on to beat the White Sox for their third consecutive triumph.

Indians 7, Rangers 3
Rusty Torres' first home run of the season, a two-run shot, and Rico Carty's three-run double powered the Indians to victory.

Giant Player Wounded One Dead In Nightclub Shooting Incident

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A fistfight early Friday in a nightclub resulted in the death of one man and wounding of two members of the Texas League Amarillo Giants baseball club.

Dead was John Louis Guerra, 26, of San Antonio, a former all-district high school baseball player who had remained active in local amateur sports. He was an accountant for the municipally-owned utility here.

Authorities said Guerra's brother, Richard Guerra, 22, of San Antonio and David Heavner, 24, of Moses Lake, Wash., were wounded.

Police said the men and several other Amarillo players were at the Comic Strip Club when John Guerra and another man became involved in a fistfight.

Officers said a man, 22, surrendered to homicide detectives Friday at police headquarters.

Paul Aguirre, 25, manager of the night spot, told police that the younger Guerra and Heavner tried to break up the fight. The second man ran out the front door.

Aguirre said the shots that killed John Guerra were fired through the open door.

The Amarillo team was in town for a doubleheader Thursday night against the San Antonio Brewers but both games were rained out.

Alfonso Guerra Jr., father of the Guerra brothers, said he was concerned Richard's wound might end his baseball career. The bullet lodged in the shoulder.

Rangers To Hold Aaron Night During Big Oakland Series

ANAHEIM — A special salute to Hank Aaron will highlight the Texas Rangers big weekend series against the defending World Series Champion Oakland A's on September 13-14-15.

On Saturday, September 14, the Rangers will hold a special night to salute the accomplishments of Hank Aaron, baseball's all-time leading home run hitter who is concluding his 21-year career this October.

The first 20,000 fans entering the park for the September 14 game against the defending World Series Champion Oakland A's will receive a specially designed Hank Aaron poster. The poster is a true collector's item. The front side features an artist's rendition of Hank in pursuit of Babe Ruth's famous records, a picture of Hank hitting his 715th home run, and a brief year-by-year history of Hank's 21-year career. The back side has a complete chronicle of Hank's march to fame, including a listing of the date, inning, men-on-base, position, and opposing pitcher for each of his first 715 home runs. This poster is printed on 18" x 30" parchment-type paper, and either side is suitable for framing. Every baseball fan will want one for his collection.

To further acknowledge Hank's slugging accomplishments, a home-run hitting contest featuring two of the American League's leading power hitters will be held at 7:20 p.m. prior to the Rangers vs. A's game. Jeff Burroughs and Toby Harrah of the Rangers will square off against Reggie

Independents Tv Industry Goliaths

EDITOR'S NOTE: Independent producers are fast becoming the backbone of the television industry. Nearly half of the fall's television series will come from the independents. The big reason: major studios like MGM and Columbia are burdened with more overhead.

By JERRY BUCK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It sounds like a mixture of Horatio Alger and Charlie Chaplin: little guy makes good.

The independent production company is the cottage industry of television. A mom and pop operation.

But this fall 25 series — nearly half of those on the air — will be from independents. The rest come from major studios such as MGM, Columbia and Universal.

Ratings leader "All in the Family" comes from Norman Lear and Bud Yorkin's Tandem Productions. Its huge success spawned other Tandem shows, "Sanford and Son," "Maude" and "Good Times."

"The Waltons" and "Apple's Way" comes from Lee Rich's Lorimar Productions.

The Mary Tyler Moore and Bob Newhart shows are out of MTM Enterprises, run by Miss Moore's husband, Grant Tinker. In the fall MTM will have five shows on the air and a sixth in production.

Quinn Martin has "Cannon,"

"Barnaby Jones" and "The Streets of San Francisco" and will have "Manhunter" this fall as "The FBI" leaves the air.

Almost every tv movie and special come not from the television networks or major film studios but from independents. "I think the independents have emerged because the networks like what they're getting," says Aaron Spelling of Spelling-Goldberg Productions, makers of "The Bookies."

"The independents deliver some big, high-rated shows," John McMahon, an NBC programming executive, said. "The independents have proven in the movies of the week and in series that they can produce well. I think they're here to stay."

No Studio Ties

An independent producer has no ties to a major studio, such as MGM or Universal, except perhaps to rent space there. But shows such as "Cannon" and "Barnaby Jones" are made almost entirely on location. Tomorrow Entertainment, makers of such television movies as "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" and "Tell Me Where It Hurts," has never filmed in a studio.

Many creators who once worked under the aegis of the studios are now associating with independents. "We're able to tie up people on an exclusive basis because they know they'll make money," Rich said. "They never see a dime of profit after the studios get through with the bookkeeping."

Small Overhead Key
Creators who work at studios find themselves charged for a share of every studio expense, from security to music to the copyright department.

Rich said, "I think what we have found is that what we operate with a very tiny overhead. Which means we're able to get more on the screen."

Tinker said, "In my opinion there's no question that dollar for dollar more quality gets on the screen in the hands of the independent than with a major studio. For obvious reasons. The major studio has more overhead."

NBC's McMahon disagreed. "I don't think that's valid. Take a look at what we get from Universal Studios. Take a look at 'Police Story' from Columbia Pictures Television. You can see the quality on the screen." "The majors may have more overhead, but they're going into deficit financing to get it on the screen."

CBS Pioneered Trend
CBS pioneered in the care and feeding of the independent producer, but the torch has since been picked up by ABC and NBC.

Barry Diller, ABC vice president for programming, said, "We do everything conceivable to encourage independent producers. ABC feels that it is better off with the broadest possible arena of suppliers."

"If we have 20 rather than 10 we are that much better able to offer diversified programming."

Diller said ABC regularly supplies seed money to put people into independent production and to keep their companies going. He estimated the network spends several hundred thousand dollars a year. Perry Lafferty, a CBS programming executive, traces the new role of the independent producers to the change in network financing of pilots.

"It was customary for a studio to deficit finance a pilot," said Lafferty. "If a network put up $200,000, the studio would put another $100,000."

The practice effectively kept most independents from making pilots because they lacked the capital. And no pilot, no series. But it was also becoming a drain on the studios, who found themselves each season with a handful of unsold pilots and no way to recover their investment.

"Then the television market came along and it became a new way of making pilots," Lafferty said. "When deficit financing of a pilot was no longer necessary the independent producers began to emerge."

'KINDERFEST' FUN RIDE—Children's activities—or "Kinderfest"—planned for Septemberfest '74 include a pony-drawn cart ride. Shown giving a happy group of children a preview ride is Mrs. John Chandler. Septemberfest Family Affair Now

Septemberfest at the Museum of the Southwest has become a family affair with many delightful treats in store for youngsters when the fun-fest unfolds at 6 p.m. Saturday.

"Kinderfest," as the children's activities are called, will offer pony-drawn cart rides, led by adults of course; face-painting; Pickwick Players; Art for Kids; a clown; a magician; sing-along, games and even sit-down service. This new feature of Septemberfest is certain to be popular with the young people, as well as with mom and dad.

By all means, make plans to dine at one of the four large food booths. Profiting from experience of the two previous years, the food committee has set up four serving places rather than one and diners will have a complete German dinner; "Wurstbasket," smaller dinner; "Wurstwich," make-it-yourself sandwich of assorted meats, sausage-on-a-stick and strudel. There'll be beverages, too.

And, as for entertainment—you name it! The famous Felix Pehl German ompah band from Fredericksburg; Midland's own well-known Lions Club "Big Name Band;" the Polka Dance Club from Wall; the Tall City Twirlers; strolling bands; instrumentalists, folk music in the Planetarium with several professional musicians on the program and many illustrious performers. They'll all be there. There will be dancing on the drive—and in the street.

Top artists and craftsmen from Texas and New Mexico will present an Invitational Showcase. There will be a trunk showing of authentic Indian goods; Lancaster Garden Center flower show, Camera Club displays and Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair Exhibit. All museum facilities will be open to the public.

John Braue will bake his famous kolaches and Sonny Grobe will make sausage. Much is on tap for everyone at Septemberfest. Don't miss it!

Broadway's 'New' Season Mostly Not

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway's new season will be mostly shows from other places, other years.

Producers seem intent there on halting the dire box office trend of recent gloom. For as the old wheeze goes, there's nothing like a few successes to cure all theater ills.

Of 22 items slated for premiere during the first half of the stage semester, traditionally September through December, just seven qualify as Main Stem originals.

The rest include seven London imports; four scripts marketed in regional playhouses; two classics, and a pair of venerable musicals.

The latter, along with one of the British bundles, not incidentally get here after long, long grass-roots jaunts designed to cut the financial risks for wary angels.

Newcomer in the performing spotlight will be Stephanie Mills, just turned 15, out to repeat Judy Garland's triumph as Dorothy in an all-black version of "The Wizard of Oz." Eldest creative talent will be E.Y. Harburg, 76, prime supplier of a half-century musical cavalcade. Franco Zeffirelli of film fame will be in the director ranks along with such eminents as Gower Champion, Garson Kanin, Ellis Rabb and Alan Schneider.

Worthy of note, too, is the return of David Merrick, after an absence of one season, as producer of three and maybe five shows.

In the order of arrival, always subject to change, this is the first half lineup:

"Gypsy," Sept. 23 at the Winter Garden; Miss Lansbury in a far-traveled reincarnation of

Psychiatrist Freed From Jail

HOUSTON (AP) — A psychiatrist has been released after spending four days in the Harris County jail on contempt of court charges.

Dr. Gary Jefferson Byrd was released Friday after being jailed Monday when he refused to answer a question about the psychiatric status of a 16-year-old girl.

He refused because he said he was not getting paid for expert testimony.

At a hearing Friday before Juvenile Court Judge Wallace H. Miller the girl was released to the custody of her mother and the case was settled without Byrd's testimony.

Thomas Stults, Byrd's attorney, asked Miller for a stay in Byrd's case since the doctor had many patients to see. Miller gave him until Sept. 13 to file the necessary papers to appeal the contempt order on constitutional grounds.

Byrd said Stults plans to appeal the case either to state district court or the Texas Supreme Court.

the Styne-Laurents-Sondheim musical.

"Mack & Mabel," Oct. 2, Majestic; Robert Preston and Bernadette Peters in a tuner about Mack Sennett and Mabel Normand of silent flicker fame.

"Absurd Person Singular," Oct. 9, Music Box; hit London marital comedy now starring Sandy Dennis, Richard Kiley, Geraldine Page, Carole Shelly, Tony Roberts and Larry Blyden.

"The National Health," Oct. 10, Circle in the Square; Levine; lauded version of Peter Nichols' English comedy, performed by the Long Wharf mummerys of New Haven, Conn.

"The Tuba," Oct. 15, theater to be announced; Terrence McNally comedy, of mistaken identity in a steam bath, also from the tryout circuit.

"Dreyfus," Oct. 16, theater to be announced; Ruth Gordon, Sam Levene as amateur actors in 1930 Poland re-enacting France's Dreyfus case.

"Equus," Oct. 23, Plymouth; Peter Kafka's "psychiatric detective drama" that was a big National Theater of Great Britain hit, now with Marian Seldes and Michael Higgins.

"Mert & Phil," Oct. 30, Beaumont; Estelle Parsons and chum to be chosen in two-roles Anne Bancroft study of American sex-romance myths.

Also due for arrival sometime during October are: "The Madness of God," about Jewish life in the USSR, previously done at Washington's Arena Stage; Eugene O'Neill's "Hughie" with Ben Gazzara after cross-country success; and "Saturday Sunday Monday," Italian marital drama directed by Zeffirelli that was another National Theater of Great Britain success.

"Good News," Nov. 3, St. James; Abe Burrows version of the melody ancient with Miss Faye and Payne.

"Love For Love," Nov. 11, Hayes; William Congreve's 17th century romp, starts the Phoenix Theater Company's season with Mary Ure and John McMartin.

Also in November, "I Got a Song," theater to be announced; Harburg's look at Americana through 50 years as seen through the songs composed by such collaborators as Harold Arlen, Burton Lane, Vernon Duke, Sammy Fain and Ira Gershwin.

"Who's Who in Hell," Dec. 3, Lunt-Fontanne; Peter Ustinov stars in his own whimsy about an assassin who later meets his victims, the leaders of the USA and the USSR.

"London Assurance," Dec. 4, Palace; a Royal Shakespeare Company cast on visit with Dion Boucicault's 1841 marital intrigue.

"In Praise of Love," also Dec. 10, Morosco; two plays by Terrence Rattigan previously tested in London, with Rex Harrison and Julie Harris.

"The Rules of the Game," Dec. 12, Hayes; the Phoenix group, does a Luigi Pirandello with Miss Ure and McMartin.

"The Wiz," Dec. 17, Winter Garden; all-black musical based on "The Wizard of Oz."

"Look Homeward Angel," Dec. 19, Circle in the Square; Levine; Ketti Frings' adaptation of her prize play based on Thomas Wolfe novel, tentative leads Leif Erickson and Joseph Bottoms.

Debut dates by December are yet to be set for the touring all-male "As You Like It," performed by a National Theater of Great Britain squad, at the Biltmore; Moliere's "The Misanthrope" in a 1968 concept devised to acclaim by the selfsame National and now to headline Diana Rigg and Alec McCowen with domestic colleagues.

Ten other shows in earlier stages of preparation are less surely hoping to be on tap here New Year's Day.

Despite increase in activity from last year's pace, the management of one of Broadway's newest theaters, the Uris, has switched entirely from drama bookings for a series of concert engagements by such pop artists as Andy Williams, Bill Cosby and The Fifth Dimension.

Nets Help Choose Emmy Judges

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — It seems a strange way to empanel a jury, but the three tv networks and the Public Broadcasting Service this year helped choose some of the Emmy awards judges of network and PBS news efforts.

In past years, the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences handled all the selection of judges, an academy official said.

This time, it asked the networks and PBS to each submit the names of 15 current, former and retired members of the "television news and documentary industry" to help judge national news and documentary shows.

The rest of the 118-member jury — by critics from various publications, and graduate students and teachers from journalism and telecommunications schools — was chosen by the academy, the official said.

Last year, Emmy awards judges all were tv critics. Why the change that let the networks and PBS in on the act?

"Well, in hammering this out with all the network news people, this is what they wanted this year," said the academy's national chairman, John Cannon. He said he included PBS in his reference to networks.

After 1973's all-critics ballot, the gymnasium of the Central YMCA will be closed Tuesday and Wednesday for the completion of repairs. All gym activities and gymnastics classes will begin Thursday.

Swim classes will begin Tuesday as scheduled.

Out of the 15-name list each network and PBS submitted, he said, about six per network were able to serve as judges in the voting two weeks ago in Chicago.

Academy officials refuse to say whom the networks offered as jurors, adding that they never made public the names of their judges.

The jury's decisions, now tightly-guarded secrets, will be made public next Wednesday night on ABC-TV in the second annual separate Emmy awards show for television news efforts.

Children's and religious programming, voted on earlier by different panels, also will be honored on the show.

Fords To Visit Kennedy Center

WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Ford will make their first appearance in the presidential box at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts Wednesday night.

The Fords will attend a reception for past and present members of the National Council on the Arts and stay on to see David Merrick's new musical, "Mack and Mabel," a White House spokesman said on Friday.

Special Art Exhibit Set

As a special feature of Septemberfest, a collection of more than 30 exceptional Texas art and craft items, an outgrowth of the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair, will be on view at the Museum of the Southwest Wednesday through Sunday.

From a special display of the work of more than 100 of Texas' top artists and craftsmen, 32 pieces were selected for this exhibit's nine-month tour of the state.

With a wide variety of media represented, from pottery and jewelry to musical instruments and even a missile-launching rifle, it promises to be one of the most diverse and exciting collections of art and crafts ever assembled.

Largest Apple Peel
The largest single unbroken apple peel on record is one of 150 feet 8 1/2 inches peeled by Frank Freer in 8 hours at Wolcott, N.Y., on Oct. 17, 1971. The apple was 15 inches in circumference.

The Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair was originated and produced by the Texas Tourist Development Agency for three years.

Now it is produced by a private organization, the Texas Arts and Crafts Foundation. This exhibit is the first of the new foundation's programs.

Dave Sansom, coordinator for the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair says of the exhibit, "I see the touring exhibit primarily as an aid to communication. Many people have no concept of who the artists and craftsmen of Texas are or what they're like, but using these 32 pieces as a springboard, we can begin to acquaint Texans with their creative neighbors."

Sansom will be in Midland with the exhibit and will be available for special talks with school art classes and other interested groups. More information may be obtained by telephoning the museum office at 683-3682.

The exhibit will be on view from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, again during Septemberfest (Saturday) from 6 to 11 p.m., and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. There will be no admission charge.

Senator Spilled As Horse Shies

PATAGONIA, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater took a spill from a horse-drawn surrey and the wagon's woman driver fell out on top of the Arizona Republican.

"I'd do this any day if she'd fall on top of me," commented Goldwater, who was only scratched on the arm and went ahead on Friday with a scheduled speech in this town near the Mexican border.

A witness said the horse shied at a car and tipped over the surrey, spilling the four occupants onto "the only paved street in town."

Regional Meeting On Arts, Humanities Slated At Tech

AUSTIN — The Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities (TCAH), a state agency, has announced the first in a planned series of public meetings to be held across the state on a regional basis.

Designated to allow private citizens a chance to present their views primarily on government support of the arts and humanities, the "Cultural Assembly" will be held at 1:30 p.m. Thursday in the University Theatre on the campus of Texas Tech, Lubbock. Following the meeting, there will be a reception at the Arts and Architecture Building. Tech will provide buses from the parking lot east of Jones Stadium between 1 and 2 p.m.

Maurice D. Coats, executive director of TCAH, said, "This will be an open meeting with all the people in the West Texas area invited to participate. We will listen to all comments regarding the arts and humanities that anyone wishes to make. The commission hopes that, when these meetings are completed, it will have a great deal of excellent information on which to base future planning."

In addition to the verbal statements, written statements of any length will be accepted. These may be submitted in advance, at the meeting, or in the two weeks following.

"The assembly is not intended to be a question-and-answer session, as such," Coats said. "What we wish is to provide a forum to hear the views of civic and governmental leaders, community groups and individuals interested in the arts and humanities."

Individuals or groups wishing to make statements are asked to address themselves to one or more of the following points:

1. The importance of the arts and humanities to the community or region.
2. Feelings about what has been done — or not done — regarding the arts and humanities in each community or region, and what kinds of assistance are desired.
3. The potential for programs in the arts and humanities in each community and the region and what West Texans would like to see accomplished.

4. How the arts relate to tourism and economic development in each community and the region.

5. What could or should be done at the local level to expand participation in and exposure to the arts and humanities.

6. What should be done at the state level.

7. What could be done to foster a closer working relationship on cultural concerns between the communities and the state.

Individuals and organizations intending to present statements at the meeting are asked to notify Ana Lofley, TCAH, Post Office Box 13406, Austin 78711.

Patterson Clinic Scheduled Here

The Midland Chamber of Commerce and Midland College have announced sponsorship of the Patterson Public, Customer and Employee Relations and Sales Clinic to be held on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 here.

The event will be held on Monday and Tuesday at Lee High School Auditorium from 7:30-10 p.m.

K. M. Jastrow, chamber president, and Dr. Al Langford, president of Midland College, said this will be the fourth time that Frank A. "Pat" Patterson will present his internationally famous clinic in Midland.

The clinic is designed for business, firms, factories and individuals who want to improve public, customer and employee relations. Topics the first evening will include star employees achieve success, approaching people, customer buying motives, organizing your thinking, presenting ideas effectively, telephone techniques and quoting prices. The second evening will continue with overcoming resistance and objections, how to put ideas across, closing the sale, suggestive selling, remembering names, effective speaking, public and human relations and Pat Patterson's greatest discovery for getting things done.

The clinic is open to both men and women from sales, parts, service and credit departments; secretaries, bookkeepers, office staff members, tellers, officers, executives, supervisors and shop or factory workers.

Gene McMeen, Patterson representative, is in Midland now and will be visiting area businesses and firms during the next few weeks to tell them more about the clinic. Firms may contact the chamber of commerce at 683-3381 for more information or to schedule a visit with McMeen.

Hirsute Teacher To Be Reinstated

SAN BENITO, Tex. (AP) — Daniel Greenbaum will be back in the classroom at Los Indios elementary school Monday, his moustache and sideburns intact.

Greenbaum had been suspended earlier in the week for violating the San Benito school system's hair code. School board members agreed Friday to reinstate Greenbaum after the school's lawyer said Greenbaum should have been given a hearing before he was suspended.

Retired Broker Dies In Florida

NEW YORK (AP) — Norman Proctor Smith, a retired partner in Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, is dead at 74. A spokesman for the giant brokerage house said Smith died Friday at the Venice, Fla., hospital. Smith had lived in retirement at Boca Grande, Fla.

Hill Concedes Some Problems In Proposed Court Of Inquiry

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — There could be some problems on calling a public court of inquiry into the alleged Aug. 3 escape at the Huntsville state prison, Atty. Gen. John Hill says, especially if a grand jury investigating the affair returns any indictments.

Hill told a news conference Friday such a court of inquiry might possibly impair a fair trial for anyone indicted due to pre-trial publicity.

"That's a possibility," Hill said when asked, "We'll have to evaluate it...at no point should a court of inquiry put itself in the position of impairing the right to a fair trial."

The attorney general spoke with reporters after returning from Huntsville, where he went Friday to explain the intent of a court of inquiry to grand jurors probing the breakout attempt. Gov. Dolph Briscoe had asked Hill Thursday to initiate a court of inquiry.

Meanwhile, in Huntsville, Texas Ranger Capt. G. W. Burks says his men fired no shots which killed hostages during an interrupted prison break earlier this month. He did not know who shot to death two escaping convicts in the gun-battle, he said.

Two convicts, Fred G. Carrasco and Rudolfo Dominguez, died along with two hostages, Julia Standley and Elizabeth Beseda, in the attempt to escape the main downtown prison unit.

Burks said he didn't know who killed the two inmates but he felt sure none of the Rangers or prison guards killed the two hostages.

There have been second and third-hand accounts that officers knocked protective helmets off the convicts and shot them.

Hill told Dist. Atty. Jerry Sandel that Briscoe wants a court of inquiry to investigate the entire affair even though the Walker County grand jury is currently conducting such an inquiry.

The main difference in the two probes, Hill said, is that the district court hearings will be public. "There is no reason to believe the grand jury is not doing a good and thorough job," he said but added the court of inquiry will convene as soon as the grand jury session ends.

Walker County Justice of the Peace J. W. Beeler ruled the deaths of Carrasco and Dominguez were suicides but he emphasized that didn't necessarily mean they actually killed themselves.

Later, a pathologist at Houston ruled their deaths were homicides.

The state police laboratory at Austin is studying bullets taken from the bodies in an effort to learn who killed whom.

Extortion Plot Principal Draws Two-Year Term

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Robert Hill sentenced William Wade Fulfer for two years in prison Friday for conspiring to extort $127,000 from Braniff International President C. E. Acker last March 24.

Fulfer, who pleaded guilty to a charge that he wrote a letter threatening to destroy the control tower at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, could have been sentenced up to 14 years and fined $11,000.

Judge Hill specified that Fulfer be sent to a federal penitentiary where he can receive treatment for what his lawyer called "a long drinking history."

Price-Controlled Oil Allocation Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration has proposed a proportional allocation of price-controlled crude oil to eliminate big cost differences among refiners.

The FEA also proposed Friday a cost standard for purchases of foreign oil by U.S. companies from foreign subsidiaries, to avoid excessive prices to U.S. consumers.

The FEA scheduled public hearings on both proposals and said it could be ready to move on them within a few months.

Federal Energy Administrator John Sawhill said the new regulations will narrow the nationwide price spread at gas stations, "very significantly" and predicted the price of gas would level out nationwide at about 55 cents a gallon.

Sawhill said at a news conference in San Francisco that differences in crude oil prices paid by refiners are the "most significant cause" of wide retail price variations.

By eliminating crude oil cost differentials, the plan would cause the present price spread at retail gas stations to "narrow very significantly," he said.

Crude-oil controls kept a ceiling price only on so-called "old oil," about 60 per cent of U.S. production, which already was in production during the corresponding month of 1972.

The ceiling price on old oil is $8.25 per barrel. Other oil is sold at market prices ranging from $10 to $13 per barrel, the FEA said.

The FEA said this two-tier system has imposed hardships on independent refiners, who must purchase oil from major producers but may find only high-priced new oil available while the majors themselves refine the old oil.

To keep independent refiners competitive, the FEA proposed a regulation to require proportional allocation of old oil at the controlled price among all refiners.

The second FEA proposal was aimed at preventing international oil companies from making excessive profits on oil transferred from their foreign subsidiaries to their U.S. affiliates.

Political Donations By Phillips Probed

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — The government is trying to determine if Phillips Petroleum Co. owes taxes on at least $1.4 million funneled from overseas transactions into a special fund used for political contributions in the United States.

A 1925 federal law makes it illegal for corporations to contribute to candidates for federal office.

Phillips disclosed the existence of the fund Friday night and said it had contributed approximately $685,000 to candidates during the past 10 years.

The $784,000 that remained in the special fund was transferred to a company bank account, Phillips spokesman said.

George Durham said in a lengthy statement.

Durham refused to disclose who received the contributions.

The company said it appeared that when the money was transferred to the United States it might have been subject to taxation but no tax was paid.

The company and former Chief Executive Officer W. W. Keeler pleaded guilty in December 1973 to contributing $100,000 to former President Richard M. Nixon's Finance Committee to Re-elect the President in 1972.

Phillips' statement did not say where the remaining $685,000 was disbursed.

Atlantic Phase Of Offshore Legal Battle Nearing Climax

By MAX B. SKELTON
HOUSTON (AP) — The Atlantic Coast phase of a 30-year state-federal legal battle over submerged offshore areas may be approaching a climax.

Potential oil and gas deposits ignited the long dispute and oilmen believe unexplored areas of the East Coast hold billions of barrels of oil and trillions of cubic feet of gas. They contend Atlantic offshore areas, if developed, could ease the nation's long-term energy supply problem.

When the Supreme Court returns to work in October, one of the matters awaiting action will be a special master's recommendation that the federal domain off 12 Atlantic Coast states be fixed as extending from three miles seaward to the edge of the Continental Shelf.

The recommendation, in general, is in line with 1947 and 1960 Supreme Court decisions on submerged lands off California and offshore from states along the Gulf of Mexico.

Oilmen have not expressed too much concern over the Atlantic dispute.

Frank N. Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said recently it may be possible to begin Atlantic explorations within a year. Other obstacles must be overcome, but Ikard said lease sale revenues from disputed areas could be placed in escrow until the legal snarls are resolved, as was the case in other areas, particularly Louisiana.

The legal battle dates back to 1945 and includes three congressional efforts to divide the offshore areas between the states and the federal government and a presidential effort to establish them as a Naval Reserve.

In 1945, Louisiana began leasing for oil and gas development acts well beyond the three-mile limit.

WASHINGTON OIL— Ford Pushes Domestic Oil Production

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent
WASHINGTON — President Ford made it quite clear last week that he feels the only real solution to the energy supply problem is for the United States to get cracking on developing domestic resources.

The views he expressed during his first formal news conference were not surprising. So the real impact stemmed for the positive, nonsense manner in which he expressed himself on the subject.

Texas DynoChem Acquires Division Of Texas Research

Texas DynoChem Inc., a Midland-based company, has announced the acquisition of the retail production chemical division of Specialty Research and Sales.

Bill Bright and Harold Stewart, president and vice president of Texas DynoChem, both Midland residents and former employees of Specialty Research, have a combined total of more than 20 years of experience in the production chemical business in the Permian Basin.

Texas DynoChem offers a complete line of production chemicals and services to the petroleum industry.

Tom Enoch, president of Specialty Research, emphasized that only the retail production division is included in the transaction, and that Specialty Research will continue to serve the petroleum industry with drilling chemicals, mud and wholesale production chemicals.

The President ignored the invitation to lambaste ARAMCO or some other company and, instead, addressed himself to what he considers the gut issue of adequate supply.

"I think it highlights the need and necessity for us to proceed with more oil and gas drilling, a greater supply domestically."

"I believe it points up the requirement that we expedite the licensing processes for new nuclear reactors. I think it points up very dramatically the need that we expand our geothermal, our solar research and development."

The President conceded that actions to develop more domestic supply will take time. And he said short-term action by consumer nations will be required to conserve supplies and, to deal with the producing nations.

He emphasized that any adverse economic repercussions stemming from high oil prices and poor investment policy "could create serious economic problems throughout the industrial world."

Replies he gave to other questions during the press conference further indicated his basic view that there are few magic solutions to the problems of the nation or of the world. For instance, he flatly rejected impo-

Basin Rotary Tally Stands At 249 Rigs

The rig count for the Permian Basin Empire of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, according to Reed Drilling Equipment's weekly survey, was 249. This is an increase of 27 units over the 222 active rigs reported working in the two-state area two weeks ago.

It is also an increase of 53 rotaries over the 196 rigs reported in a comparable week one year ago.

Eddy County, N.M., again is leading in the rig count, with 34 active rotaries.

Lea County, N.M., had 29 rigs in that area; Ward 17; Pecos 15 and Reeves had 13 units.

Bengal Announces Results Of Tests

Bengal Oil & Gas Corp., a Midland-based firm, has announced that its No. 1 Kunselman & Bankhead in Forest County, Pa., flowed 15 barrels of 42-gravity oil and an estimated 200,000 cubic feet of gas per day, on production tests in the Cooper sand.

The flow was through 1-inch tubing at a depth of 2,056 feet. The new producer is about 55 miles east of Bradford, on a drilling block on which an offset to the well No. 1-17 Kunselman & Bankhead is drilling below 400 feet.

Bengal and its associates own a 75 per cent interest in the two projects and approximately 10,500 acres in the immediate area.

Gulf Hikes Price Of All Gasolines

HOUSTON (AP) — Gulf Oil Co.-U.S. upped its prices of all grades of its gasoline by 2.7 cents a gallon Saturday and the price of its No. 2 distillate fuels by half-a-cent a gallon.

The company said the price hikes reflected higher costs of crude oil.

On that date, Truman signed an executive order setting aside submerged offshore lands as a Naval Reserve. Truman, in announcing his order, said a shortage of petroleum products was developing in the nation.

Truman said domestic consumption of petroleum products averaged 7.3 million barrels a day but domestic production averaged only 6.8 million barrels.

"It will be seen, therefore, that the production of petroleum in the United States during 1952 fell far short of meeting the consumption of petroleum products," Truman said. "This deficit is expected to grow larger year by year."

But Congress struck back quickly. Just four months after taking office, Eisenhower signed submerged lands and outer continental shelf, acts aimed at settling the dispute.

Congress failed, however, to spell out specific boundaries.

This set off another round of suits and it was not until May 31, 1960, that the Supreme Court held that the rights of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama to oil in submerged lands extend just three miles and that the rights of Texas and Florida extend to three leagues or about 10.45 miles.

Bunnie Aids Midlanders

"To work for the betterment of our country and our town is the aim of Bunnie Kent Realtor and her Associates." Bunnie Kent, of Bunnie Kent Realtor, 1906 W. Illinois St., said, "Midland is growing and we are doing all we can do to help the people of Midland to adjust to the ever changing housing market. "We are aware that it is not as easy to own a home as it once was." She said. "We stay on top of the money market and know where to go to get financing, both first lien and second lien money. "We are no longer a sleepy community. We are a hustling, forward moving city. Our new college will make us even more so." She added.

Bunnie Kent and Associates are studying all the time to stay abreast of what is new in their field and in Midland.

"We keep as good a list of available properties as any office in town," she stressed. "And we sell most of our own listings as well as many of those to our multiple listing service."

There are 15 associates at Bunnie Kents to assist you anytime of the day or night that you need help.

"Money is tight everywhere," Bunnie Kent said. "But we in Midland have been more fortunate than most places. Our fine lending institutions have been most cooperative and this has lessened our load and yours. Our great Chamber of Commerce is working day and night to help our city to be the best there is. Our banks and schools are the finest. Our churches and people are wonderful.

"In fact," she stressed, "we at Bunnie Kent feel that there is no better place to live than Midland, Texas.

"Call us any time at 684-6363," she said. "Or better still, come by 1906 W. Illinois St. and have a cup of coffee and visit with us. We would love to have you."

(Continued From Page 1E) sition of wage and price controls. He explained one fact of the reason for this stance: Congress isn't about to pass such legislation this year. Another: both business and labor are opposed, so there's little hope that such a program would work.

Regarding oil supply and prices, it is becoming more and more apparent that the Arab nations have no intentions of letting oil prices drop substantially in the near future even though there currently is a surplus of oil on the world market.

Rather than reduce prices, they would prefer to reduce production, as some already are doing. That leaves the consuming nations with few viable alternatives. They can emphasize conservation in energy usage, thereby easing the pressure of demand. They can take some regulatory action regarding goods going to the Arab nations, or, conceivably, two or more of the major world powers could give the producing nations an "or else" ultimatum to maintain adequate supplies.

The other possibility is that increased drilling at various points around the globe could result in enough new finds that, collectively, there would be increasing competition in world crude oil markets.

An increase in oil supplies from various areas, lessening dependence on Middle East resources, would be a move toward a position long held by U.S. producers: It's all right to obtain oil from the Middle East countries (or any other source) as long as you don't have to obtain that oil.

The tilt came, of course, when nations outside the Middle East found they could not get along without that source of supply. Even the U.S., which is better off than many other countries regarding energy resources, has learned the hard way that there is a big difference between importing oil because you want to, and importing oil because you have no other immediate recourse.

Even though President Ford indicated that perhaps the consuming nations might be able to accomplish something if they got together on some approach, this would be only a short-term solution at best. The only real solution, as he emphasized, is for the U.S. to develop its own energy resources.

BOYS TIDY UP NIXON'S ESTATE—Boy Scouts Jay Wright, left, and Jeff Orr stack bags of litter they and other boys collected from a two-block stretch of flower border outside the wall at former President Nixon's "La Casa Pacifica" estate at San Clemente, Calif. Ford To Campaign In Four States

By FRANCES LEWINE
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford plans to campaign for Republicans this fall in Vermont, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Kentucky. And he may add more trips later.

The decision for Ford to get out and do some campaigning as the titular leader of the Republican party came after he conferred with White House counselor Dean Burch and other political leaders last week.

While Ford will campaign only for Republicans, he will urge voters to choose both Democrats and Republicans who support his fiscal policies, Press Secretary Jerald F. terHorst said Friday.

"He is going to campaign for government, restrain federal fiscal responsibility and for candidates who will help him bring the budget under control," terHorst said. The President's campaign is going to be "on issues, not on personalities," terHorst said. "He is not going to campaign against anyone."

The press secretary explained that the President will reinforce what he told a joint session of Congress and the nation August 12:

"The first specific request by the Ford administration is not to Congress but to the voters in the upcoming November elections. It is this: Support your candidates, congressmen and senators, Democrats or Republicans, conservative or liberal, who consistently vote for tough decisions to cut the cost of government, restrain federal spending and bring inflation under control."

Ford expects Congress to be adjourned by the time of his first campaign speaking date, Oct. 7, when he will address a big Republican event in Barre, Vt., in honor of retiring GOP Sen. George D. Aiken.

If the legislators are still in session, terHorst said, Ford will have to determine whether his presence is required in Washington.

After the salute to Aiken, Ford is scheduled to speak at Republican fund-raising events Oct. 9 in Philadelphia, Oct. 16 in Indianapolis, and Oct. 19 in Louisville.

A White House aide said September and October will be packed with short trips like the ones Ford has taken to Chicago and Columbus, Ohio, since taking office.

He predicted that Ford will have a tough schedule and may resume a pace he followed as vice president.

Petroleum Museum Book Describes Policy On Gifts

The Permian Basin Petroleum Museum has published a booklet describing the museum's new policy on recognizing gifts and on memorial gifts.

Titled "In Honor," the booklet tells how individuals, companies and foundations can pay tribute to relatives, founders, business associates or others through museum gifts.

While donors can decline recognition for their gifts if they wish, the museum plans to mention all others in a "book of honor" kept in the entryway of the new building, now under construction on Interstate 20 in Midland. In addition, various plaque arrangements providing for recognition or memorial inscriptions will be offered.

The museum presently is conducting its "Decision-74" fund-raising drive, aimed at paying off the remaining capital cost of its building, exhibits, and other needs.

Commenting on the policy, Joseph I. O'Neill Jr., chairman of the drive, said: "There are many in the Basin and elsewhere who would like to help the museum and at the same time keep alive the memory of a husband, wife, parent, business associate, or friend. We want them to investigate the very fine and appropriate methods open to them."

Daughters of the Byerleys are Tonybell Harmon, Midland; Lillie Dell Byerley and Mrs. Allie Thorpe, both of Big Spring; and Mrs. Donnie Harris of San Antonio. Fifty-one relatives and 23 friends attended from Big Spring, Houston, Bryan, Lubbock, Arlington, San Angelo, Monahan, Midland, Kermit, Stanton and Garden City.

Copies of the booklet are available free on request to the museum office, P.O. Box 1316, Midland, 79701.

Connecticut Prisons Using New Breed Of Guards: Ex-Convicts Gone Straight

EDITOR'S NOTE — About 20 Connecticut ex-cons have gone straight — to jobs on state prisons and jail staffs. Only two have lost their jobs. Neither business involved anything like a jailbreak. But a guard's union says hiring ex-cons at prisons threatens security.

By DAN HALL
HARTFORD CONN. (AP) — Ruben Jimenez, Age: 36. Background: heroin addict in Spanish Harlem at 14; convicted "27 or 28 times;" imprisoned 12 years. Occupation: correctional officer.

Jimenez is one of a small, controversial new breed of guards and counselors in Connecticut prisons and jails.

A former addict with a 16-year history of heroin use interrupted only by prison terms, he broke the habit after his last arrest. Only a few months later, at the maximum-security prison in Somers, he founded the state prison system's first autonomous drug rehabilitation center.

Since 1969, about 25 former inmates have followed similar paths to Correction Department jobs in what Commissioner John R. Manson calls a unique step from behind bars directly into positions of authority.

Only two have lost their jobs. Jimenez says one was fired because his job performance worsened consistently. The other suddenly stopped reporting to work.

Another two dozen of the 1,000 department employees have conviction records but came from other jobs.

The list of ex-cons on prison and jail staffs includes a deputy warden, correctional officers and counselors to addicts, inmates and parolees. Among them are:

—Dennis Guay, a computer programmer with a college degree who beat his wife's sister to death with a bowling pin in 1963. His life sentence was commuted to eight years after he set up two educational programs for fellow inmates. Now he's a deputy jail warden.

—Warren Kimbro, a former Black Panther lieutenant charged in 1969, along with National Chairman Bobby G. Seale, with murder in the death of a Panther underling. Kimbro admitted firing the first of several shots into the victim. Seale denied complicity in the crime and his trial ended in a hung jury. Kimbro went on to create several inmate programs and now runs a halfway house for former addicts.

—Joseph Falso, also a heroin addict with a 12-year prison record. He learned institutional cooking while in the Somers prison, and with the help of his prison teacher won a job as food supervisor and counselor at a drug-rehabilitation center.

The hiring of ex-cons coincided with the opening of new educational and drug programs in the department, many of them shaped by inmates themselves.

"We had so few dollars we were forced to spread the budget as well as we could for staff, then beat the bushes for inmates," Manson recalled. First the inmates worked as volunteers, then they became paid employees.

The commissioner emphasized that he never set a goal of hiring former inmates. Each one proved his qualifications while in prison.

"He hasn't just served time, but he's been part of the (rehabilitation) service," he said. "I don't think we've ever hired an ex-con just because he was an ex-con."

One result of the program, however, was that both inmates and employers saw proof that criminals "can make it," he added.

Both Manson and the ex-cons working for him agree a background in crime and imprisonment are of little if any benefit to former inmates dealing with other criminals. One exception is the ability of former addicts to help others shake the habit.

Jimenez, a dynamic, dedicated and disarming man, shows how a toughened criminal can make the conversion, Manson said.

Born into a Spanish-speaking ghetto on New York's West Side, where heroin was a household word, the young addict was caught during a burglary at age 16 and imprisoned at Riker's Island for three years.

Jimenez said the term did little for him except to keep him temporarily off heroin. He later was arrested 32 times, all for nonviolent crimes to obtain more narcotics.

His marriage was a failure, ending in separation six years ago, he said.

Following his last conviction, he and other addicts in the sprawling Somers Prison were allowed to set up inmate-run Empathy House inside the walls.

New Law May End Era Of Unkept Pension Promises

By CARL C. CRAFT

WASHINGTON (AP) — For millions of American workers, an era of frequently unkept pension promises and uncertainty over private industry's retirement program rights is ending at last.

The 1974 Employee Retirement Income Security Act, which President Ford is to sign Monday, climaxes several years of congressional efforts to guarantee that workers get what they have coming when they retire.

All sides agree this is a true compromise, not fully satisfactory to any special-interest group, but it is widely recognized as a landmark government attempt to combat various factors that have cheated workers out of what they earned, or thought they had, over many years on the job.

Here, in question and answer form based on information from the law's authors and its critics, is what the new measure means to the average American worker and family:

Q: Are companies required to provide pension plans?
A: The law does not force them to provide pension plans. It sets rules for the existing plans and any new ones.

Q: Can my employer fire me to avoid paying the pension I have earned?

A: That would be illegal if you can prove he fired you for that purpose.

Q: How old must I be to begin building my pension?

A: Generally, your company plan must cover you if you are at least 25 years old and have worked for the firm one year. Previously, no fixed age or service rules applied.

Q: Will I be cheated of all the time I worked before I reached 25?

A: No. If you started working there at 22, or younger, and you meet the age requirement for participation by serving until you are 25, then you'll get credit for three years of back service for purposes of determining the percentage of your benefits that are vested.

Q: What does "vested" mean?

A: It means guaranteeing a share of our company's pension fund, giving you a nonforfeitable right to some benefits even if you leave that job before you retire.

Q: I'd like to get my vesting as soon as I can. How can I?

A: The law is flexible on this point because there are 300,000 to 400,000 pension plans. Your situation may not be the same as that of your neighbor. There are three minimum methods of vesting. Your employer must pick one of these options.

Under one option, you would get at least 25 per cent of your benefits vested after five years on the job. This would gradually rise to 100 per cent at the end of 15 years.

The second option would give you total rights to your accumulated benefits after 10 years with the company, but nothing before then. If you quit before finishing 10 years of service, you would lose everything.

The third alternative is called the "rule of 45," because you would get 50 per cent vesting when your age and your years of service equal 45, with the final 50 per cent coming in the next five years.

Q: What does this accomplish?

A: It lets a company give faster vesting to its older workers than to its younger employees. But you would need at least five years on the job to get it. Under this option, anyone completing 10 years of service must get a vested right to at least half the benefits.

Q: When are the participation and vesting rules effective?

A: Rules for new plans take effect immediately. But they apply to existing plans after Dec. 31, 1975. This will allow time to make necessary changes to conform with the new rules. The vesting date of some collectively bargained plans with special benefits is delayed until the end of the present contract but no later than Dec. 31, 1980.

Q: What if there's not enough money in the pension fund for vesting?

A: There are minimum funding standards aimed at helping guarantee that your plan will accumulate sufficient money to pay your pension. Generally, funding provisions apply to plans where it is specified that you'll get a designated amount of benefits.

Q: Is this the first such guarantee?

A: Yes. Employers were previously forced by tax laws to contribute costs and interest due on liabilities that have accumulated but for which money was not set aside. They were not forced to pay toward the actual liability. The new law gives the employer between 30 and 40 years to catch up.

Q: How can I be sure he's really doing that?

A: The law protects you. Actuarial assumptions of each plan must be certified by an actuary at least every three years. Your employer must pay an excise tax to match the amounts contributed to the fund if the fund falls short.

Q: What happens if the plan folds?

A: The new law provides termination insurance. It creates a Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. in the Labor Department, directed by the secretaries of labor, commerce, and the treasury.

Q: How much will I get from this new corporation if my pension plan folds?

A: You'd get up to 100 per cent of your average wage during your highest-paid five years, but no more than $750 a month.

Q: Where does the money come from?

A: The new corporation can borrow $100 million from the U.S. Treasury. Your employer is liable for benefits paid under the insurance program up to 30 per cent of his net worth. Annual premiums paid by the employers would cost 50 cents or $1 per covered worker, depending on the plan.

Q: When do the benefits of the insurance protection begin?

A: For single-employer plans, benefit coverage and employer's liability begin immediately. But under multi-employer plans, in which various firms in the same industry offer a common plan, coverage generally starts Jan. 1, 1980. However, the new insurance agency can come to the rescue right away.

Q: Is my spouse protected?

A: Yes. Pension plans must give the covered individual what amounts to an option to receive the retirement benefits in the form of a joint and survivor annuity, paying the spouse at death at least half of the amount provided while both husband and wife were alive.

Q: If I change jobs, can I keep my pension rights?

A: Benefits may transfer from one company to another under a voluntary arrangement known as the Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Its goal is to help persons who are not covered by a company pension plan.

Starting next year, you can set up your own plan by using IRA. It gives you a limited tax deduction. You can take the deduction by contributing to IRA up to 16 per cent of your earned income or $1,500, whichever is less.

Q: Where do I put this money?

A: You may invest it in such forms as special types of U.S. Treasury bonds, mutual funds, credit unions, banks, corporate securities and life insurance endowment contracts.

Q: What about self-employed person?

A: They can get a tax deduction by putting up to $7,500 a year in personal retirement plans, effective this year, compared to the old limit of $2,500 annually.

Q: How many persons are covered by pension plans?

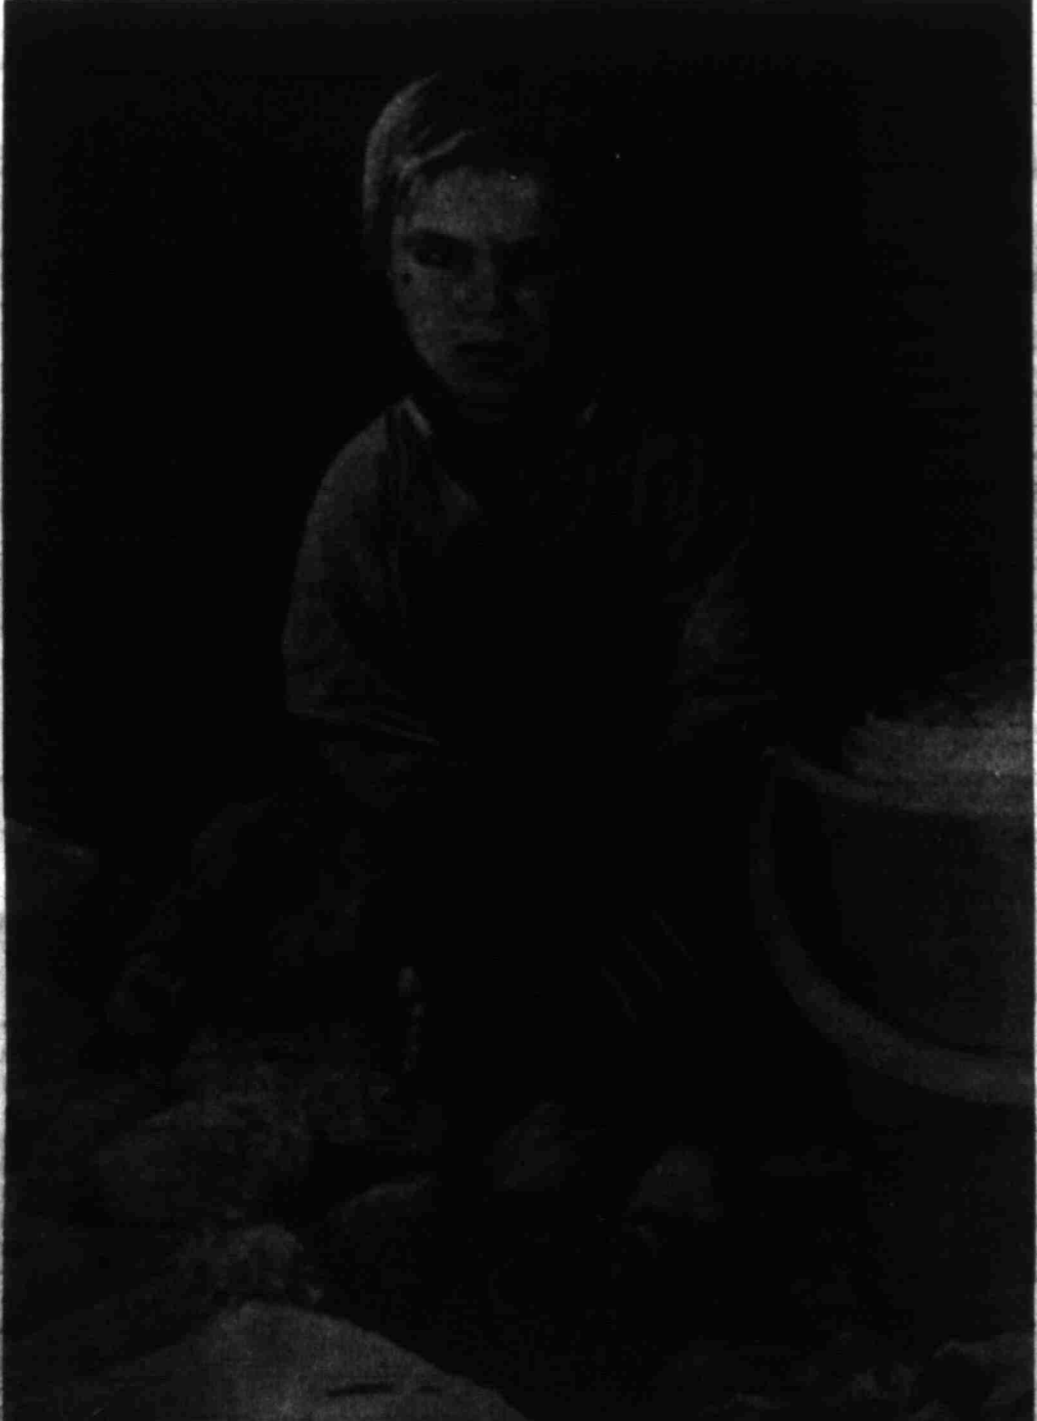

A: Roughly 30 million workers are covered by private plans. This is about half of the private non-farm work force. Pension programs have more than $150 billion in assets.

Q: What does the law do to make sure I know what my plan does for me?

A: It forces each pension plan to give each participant certain information and to publish comprehensive financial material so you will know what your rights are and what rights have been accumulated, whether they are vested and what to do when retirement age arrives.

Q: How does the law effect the "super rich"?

A: It fixes a pension plan limit intended to fight any future abuses of very large retirement benefits being financed for high-paid officials partially at the expense of the taxpayers. The ceiling on the amount of tax-deductible contributions for these executives is fixed by the law.

Folk Medicine Due Study In October

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Folk medicine can coexist with scientific medicine, declares Dr. George Meyer, a psychiatrist with extensive experience in working with Indian medicine men and their cures.

The whole question will be studied here Oct. 3-5 in what is billed by The University of Texas Health Science Center as "International Film Festival on Culture and Psychiatry."

Dr. Meyer notes that folk medicine is prevalent in the Southwest among all ethnic groups. Physicians often are called to deal with conflicts which can occur when folk beliefs and scientific medicine collide.

"Patients feel guilty" about using folk medicine, Meyer commented in advance of the festival. "Only the physician who realized that folk beliefs are not inappropriate can reassure the patient and help him utilize the best of both approaches."

Meyer says nearly everyone resorts to some kind of folk medicine at one time or another, if nothing more than eating chicken soup to cure a variety of ailments.

Under stress, he said, "People anxiously look for answers and directions. Folk medicine offers tradition, certainty and a reassurance that the problem is not new and consequently can be solved."

Dr. Meyer noted that some "healers" in all cultures are outright fakirs.

"But among the Mexican and Mexican-American curanderos, most are deeply religious, talented and committed," he said.

Western medicine, with its emphasis on technology, has forgotten religion and philosophy, Meyer said, "yet people feel a deep need for this and expect their doctor to be adviser-therapist-priest. They seek a sympathetic generalist, not a coldly clinical specialist."

Meyer added that the Indian medicine man is "the most sophisticated, the most clearly professional of this generalist category."

Grandmother Flight Instructor

RAYTOWN, Mo. (AP)—Mrs. Theda Beningfield, a 57-year-old grandmother of six, is a full-time housewife, part-time receptionist and also a church worker, but she says she spends more time than anything else as a flight instructor.

Mrs. Beningfield learned to fly when she was 46, and now she logs as many as 500 flying hours a year.

"I do feel sometimes that I neglect my grandmotherly duties because often I'm flying when I think I should be baby-sitting," she said.
