At length, by a supreme effort, the under man reached the knife beneath his back with the hand of a pinioned arm. With a heave the hand was free and the blade turned into the body above him. But in a flash the right hand of the Iroquois shifted from the throat to the menacing wrist. There was a wrench-a groan as the bone snapped, and the knife slipped to the

Again, like the fangs of a wolf, the long fingers of Michel clamped on the throat of the man in whose bulging eyes shone the fear of the death which neared.

"Dis ees for her!" snarled the headman, as he struck with his free hand the purpled face. "Dees ees for me!" and he struck again.

Slowly the bloodshot eyes of the assassin, who had so confidently shot from the ambush, filmed; for the last time his mouth gaped wide for the air denied him by the vise on his throat-with a quiver he relaxed on the snow.

Picking up his rifle and slipping his hands into the rabbit-skin mittens which hung from his neck by thongs, Michel bent and closely scrutinized the knotted feature of his enemy. Satisfied with his work, he rasped: "Bo'-jo'! Tete-Boule! You are poor shot! You mak' no more trouble een dis valley!" and started for camp.

He found his friends at breakfast. Silently he accepted the dipper of steaming tea and the heaped plate of fried moose and beans, and began to

"Well, what luck, Michel? Are they still leaving?" asked Steele, when his eyes suddenly focused on the shoulder of Michel's capote. "Where'd you get that tear?"

The face of the Iroquois was wooden. "I meet old frien' een de bush. Ah-hah ."

Curious, Steele rose and examined his friend's shoulder, "Why, there's caked blood here! You have been shot at!" he cried. "Take off that coat!"

"W'en I feenish de moose and bean," laughed the stoic. "Hees gun shake w'en he fire!"

To his relief Steele found that the bullet had grazed the shoulder blade of his friend, barely breaking the skin. When the scratch was dressed, Michel gave him the story of the am-

Sprawled on his face, a knee drawn up to give purchase for a lunge, he had waited for the man in ambush to approach within reach. Had there been two, it would have been a knife fight, with the odds heavily against the man compelled to start from the soft snow.

"Good old Michel!" applauded Steele, as the Iroquois finished. "They can't beat you! He was scared when he fired. Had you ever seen this Indian before?" Michel's black eves snapped tan-talizingly, as he played on his chief's curiosity.

'Wal, he look lak' man I see one tam." "Traded once at Wailing River, you

"Tomorrow night we go to de pos'." "Yes," agreed Steele, his eyes resecting the joy of victory, hard won. "Send one of the boys for David at

Behind the slab counter in the traderoom at Ogoke a man sat at a table. On the table stood a glass and two bottles-one empty. For hours the man had not moved, except to fill and drain the glas. Although it was barely three o'clock, candle lanterns dimly lit the room, for the sun had died in cloud banks and the light had failed early. In the air outside there was snow and the night would be flamme, chin on chest. "It's no good, I tell you," whined Antoine, his voice vibrant with panic. "That makes nine-nine who have gone out. It'll be our turn next. Tonight I leave for the Rouge."

The hard eyes of the trader, lined by worry and red from drink, lit with contempt. "You've gone like the rest. Why didn't you run away with Rose? Want to desert sixty thousand dollars' worth of fur, do you?"

The heavy features of the other filled with blood at the taunt. He leaned and struck the table with his fist, overturning the bottles.

"Soft, am I?" he snarled, "because I leave this hell before they close in and take us-hang us from the rafters here or cut our throats, you call me soft! I tell you we're done! They caught Pierre and the whole valley's after us. They're out there now, waiting." He pointed a shaking finger toward the forest. "It may be tonight-

Ruined by the mystery-the menace of the inscrutable forest from which no man returned, which for weeks had ringed the post, sapping the nerve of his people until they fled in the night, Laflamme sat, numb with despair. Slowly the whisky from the overturned bottle dripped to the floor. Then he said: "That tale Tete-Boule brought from down-river was true. The men we sent to the Jackfish to stop him

Antoine nodded.

"Steele got through and came back on the snow," continued the trader. "The police are not in this. They'd come straight here."

"This Steele caught Pierre himself," added the other. "When the Indians learned how we had fooled them, they took the trail. The whole valley was ours-until he got the Windigo." Suddenly the speaker faced the door, listening. "What's that?"

As the two watched the door apprehensively, it opened to admit a half-breed with drink-sodden face.

"What you eat tonight, m'sleu?" The dull eves of the cook shifted uneasily from Antoine to his chief.

"You here still, Philippe?" sneered Laflamme. "I thought you and Jean would hit the Rouge river trail when it got dark. All the rats have left." "They'll hang on while the whisky lasts," muttered Antoine. "You find Tete-Boule?" The face of the cook, mottled-gray in the half light, turned to the man who had gone out that morning on the trail over which none had returned.

"He found him-with his tongue Laflamme laughed bitterly. out." You'd make a pretty picture, Philippe, hanging from that hook, with your throat cut. You'd bleed straight

"Two left, out of the lot; and they stay for the whisky!" commented Laflamme, filling a glass and shoving the jug across the table. "My friend, I'll give you a toast," he added, as the nerve-shattered Antoine gulped down his drink. "May that d-d American rot in h-1!"

Laflamme's glass was at his lips when a chorus of howls rose from the clearing.

The startled eyes of the men met across the table. "What's that?" demanded the trader, slowly lowering his glass, untouched.

"The dogs-hear something-out there!" The hoarse voice of the other quavered as he went to the door. From the murk, the whimpering of the awed huskies reached the straining ears of the two at the door, who stood, nerves strung with suspenseone thought in their brains. Then from the invisible forest beyond rose a wail-demon-like, bloodfreezing, the voice of no clawed creature of the night-to die away, into silence. "They have come!" warned Antoine, seizing the arm of his chief.

"Ouick! Harness the dogs while I get the fur and the grub!" was the low answer. The nerve of Laflamme had snapped. Racing desperately against the closing in of a ring of ruthless foes, Antoine caught and harnessed the dogs. At the trade-house door, grub-bag, robes, and the precious pack of black fox were thrown on the sled. The whip cracked at the head of the lead-"Marche, Pete!" rasped the Frenchman, and the team plunged into their collars at a gallop. Then the voice of a dog-driver out on the lake

From the blackness of the clearing at Ogoke rose a low whistle, which was answered from the gloom behind the trader's quarters, where the kitchen windows shone, yellow patches in the thick dark night

The whistle was repeated and, simultaneously, swart faces appeared at the windows of both buildings. Eyes, glittering with hate and the pent excitement of the stalk, searched the rooms for signs of life. But they looked on emptiness-on a table splashed with spilled liquor, a jug, an untouched glass of whisky; on a stove from which smoked a frying pan with its burning bacon.

"I knew you would stampede them, Michel," said Steele, looking quizzically at the happy Iroquois. "They got out just ahead of us. You did that for L'avid, you rascal!"

The hour of the man from Nepigon had struck. Like a hound at leash he yearned for the Rouge river trailand the man who traveled it.

Steele gripped the hard hand of his friend in silence. There was nothing to say-no turning the Ojibway from his heart's desire. With a word to Michel, David left them to get his

"Give eet to de Indian. Dey trade eet at Wailing Riviere." "Yes, he got most of it with his whisky-ty fraud. It ought to go back to them." To the surprise of the men as they reached the fur-storing loft, the candles lighted row on row of otter and mink lynx and fox, marten and fisher pelts, hanging from the rafters.

"Here's his whole last year's trade!" ried Steele. "He's never shipped it!" The yellow light of his candle lit eyes snapping with delight, as Michel looked at his chief. "Much fur here for M'sleu St. Onge! He be happy

"Ah-hah! He not get her-now!" The grave eyes of the Iroquois questioned Steele's.

"Not if I can belp it!" Satisfied, the Indian turned to examine the fur. Steele began counting the rows of rich pelts, in an endeavor to make a rough estimate of their value. He had reached the far end of the loft when the dim light of the candle fell on some bulky shapes on the floor in a corner. Curious, he bent over the lashed bundles. On the canvas covering of the nearest there was lettering. He lowered his candle to read it.

"R-F," he said aloud; then, with a gasp, "Wailing River!"

"M'sieu St. Onge be happy man dis night, eef he know dis."

"He'll know it as soon as one of the boys can reach him," replied Steels jubilantly. "We'll send him this present in the morning." After the gray days the sun was indeed breaking through. She seemed nearer-more possible of attainment, there in the dark fur-loft at Ogoke, than she had been for weeks, to the man who toiled for her.

In the morning Steele gathered his red henchmen together in the traderoom and talked to them, through

ATLANTIC'S GREAT "FLOATING ISLANDS"

Monster Liners Have All Shore Comforts.

Washington.-"Crossing the Atlantic has become different from what it was when the first steamship made the passage barely three generations ago. or even when men and women not yet old made their first transit," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society. "The larger ships have come to be called 'ocean ferries,' and the name is in many ways appropriate. You do not expect to be tossed about much on a ferry; and you needn't be shaken up much now in crossing the Atlantic, unless you choose the stormiest seasons. Ferries run on close schedules; and when you go aboard a crack trans-Atlantic liner nowadays you know pretty well within a few hours when you will step ashore 3,200 miles away.

"The two biggest of them are practically great wandering steel islands that, defying the usual rules of geography, make themselves now a part of the Eastern hemisphere, now a part of the Western. Their length approaches 1,000 feet, almost a fifth of a mile; their beams are 100 feet, as wide as a boulevard. Many a proud building, housing the population of a town, rises from a land area smaller than the hulls of these great ships.

Populations of Towns.

"The ships are themselves practically great buildings, whose 'land' as well as their superstructures was fashioned by man; and they, too, house the population of a town. When you cross to Europe on such a boat it is no longer a matter of being marooned for a week or ten days with a small group of people. It is as though you spent six fleeting days (they are days of 23 hours) in a town whose population was far above the average in culture, prosperity, and intelligence; whose government functioned perfectly; and which maintained numerous attendants to look after your comfort.

"There are few shore comforts that you cannot have on such a ship. You sleep in beds, not bunks. There is running water in your stateroom. You dine as you would at a great land hostlery; and you will feel uncomfortable if you are not prepared to dress the part of a metropolitan diner. There are good orchestras which play for tea and for dances in a great ballroom each evening. The promenade deck on which you take your walks is nearly a quarter mile in circuit. There are numerous deck games, including two sorts of deck tennis, and even golf tournaments for the championship of the boat. On the lowest deck is a large swimming pool. There is a card room for votaries of bridge; a well-stocked library; and a smoking room that surpasses in comfort that of many an exclusive club. There is a barber, a hair-dresser, a tailor, a doctor and dispensary, of course. Whether you are well or ill, and whether you crave mental diversion, athletic sports, or luxurious ease, you can find what you wish.

'Operating a ship of this sort is a tremendous enterprise. In the linen closets and in use are close to 200,000 pieces of linen. On the trip from New York to Cherbourg the biggest liners might throw overboard a piece of linen every three seconds, leaving a 'hare and hound' trail of towels, sheets, stewards' aprons, and the like entirely across the Atlantic, no two pleces many feet part. And the ship would arrive on the other side with several thousand pieces left. "Far down in the hull of such a ship, in the section seen by few passengers and well below the water line, is the tremendous, complicated machinery that shifts these 'islands' from hemisphere to hemisphere; in effect, huge power houses. "Four great shafts 161/2 inches through and more than 100 feet long are spinning around at 180 revolutions per minute, nakedly between their bearings and the turbines that turn them. Toward the rear of the hull you see them disappear through the steel wall. Just outside, fixed rigidly to the shafts, the big propellers are churning, pushing nearly 60,000 tons of steel and humanity through the ocean at 25 miles an hour. The briny ocean trickles in about these final shaft bearings in sturdy streams. You ask the chief engineer about it with some nervousness. He laughs reassurance above the din. It is necessary that the packing be not too tight. And the pumps are always busy. They suck up these rills and many more like them and spew the water back into the sea. "As a matter of fact the machinery reaches out into the ocean and sucks the sea into the ships in Gargantuan gulps. A pipe three feet through is the intake. Through it are pumped 22,000 tons of sea water per hour to condense the steam. As soon as it has served its purpose out it is pushed on the other side. "The hull has a double bottom. Between the two floors are pumped before each voyage 6,000 tons of fresh water to serve machinery and passen-

TORNADO REVIVES LEGEND OF INDIANS

Junction of Rivers Believed Protection From Gales.

Fort Wayne, Ind.-Indian superstitions, many of which have gone with the red man, often reappear and their return sometimes is strongely linked with scientific phenomena.

Centuries ago when tornadoes swept through the forests and erased Indian villages a belief grew up among the Indians that certain areas were protected from the dread destroyer.

Indians held to a belief that tornadoes were powerless against territories immediately surrounding the junction of rivers; that the river gods protected these spots.

The legend was revived among old settlers here in 1920 when a tornado swept through Allen county, destroying two small towns and doing millions of dollars of damage. Thirteen persons were killed by the twister and thirty-four injured. The revival of the egend came when the tornado, sweeping on a straight line toward Fort Wayne, suddenly lifted, passing over the city, only to drop to earth again 15 miles away to destroy a village. Fort Wayne stands at the junction of the St. Joseph's and St. Mary's rivers, which together flow into the Maumee. Patrick McDonough, government meteorologist at Fort Wayne, said that any influence that rivers would have upon a tornado would be atmospheric. and discounted the Indian legend that rivers ward off heavy winds.

"There are tornadoes in the spring and early summer every year," he said, "and Indiana has had several which took many lives and razed much property. In every tornado there is a freak or series of freaks. As a matter of fact, the tornado itself is a freak, of which we know little. If there is anything to the legend it is due to atmospheric conditions existing in those localities which the storm missed."

But the old-timers who saw the black funnel bearing down on Fort Wayne, saw it lift and sweep over the city, to dive earthward beyond the city, still believe in the Indian legend.

Wholesale Destruction of Trout Caused by Storm

Cumberland, Md. - Wholesale destruction of trout in a mountain stream near the headwaters of the south branch of the Potomac, in Pendleton county, W. Va., is reported by local anglers who had motored to the stream for an outing. A cloudburst robbed them of the pleasure an hour before they arrived on the scene. The cloudburst made the stream a small river of thick mud and sediment in an instant, and the trout were literally choked to death. Thousands of trout, the anglers said, lined the bank, dead, while others, their dis-lying on the surface of the water. The floods of March and May, 1926, fishermen say, killed all the bass in the north branch of the Potomac, which was rapidly being restocked.

Town Shuns Pillar "Cursed" 46 Years Ago

Augusta, Ga.-For 46 years people have walked around an old pillar projecting out of a sidewalk here because no one had the nerve to move it.

In 1878 an itinerant preacher pronounced a curse on the old market house. He said it would be destroyed and anyone who disturbed the pillars would be struck by lightning.

Next day a tornado razed the building and left one pillar. When workmen clearing away the debris started on the lone pillar there was a terrific explosion and no one would go near the spot again, even after it was learned that a joker had touched off a giant firecracker.

LONE GRAVE MARKED BY WOMAN'S CLUB

Resting Place of "Mystery Belle" Revered.

Lexington, Ky.-Under the auspices of the Woman's club a simple marker has just been erected over what is known as the "lone grave." in Graham Springs City park, at Harrodsburg, Ky., 25 miles southwest of here, telling briefly the history of the grave and requesting the public to treat it with respect and reverence.

This "lone grave" is one of the interesting historic spots at Harrodsburg, the oldest town in Kentucky, and the tragic story of its occupant has just come to light as a result of the activities of the Woman's club to memorialize the spot.

Years before the Civil war, when Graham Springs, then the Saratoga of the South, was at the height of its fame and popularity as a health and social resort, a beautiful woman with every evidence of wealth and culture came there as a guest.

Belle of Ball; Found Dead.

One day while wandering in the grounds she came upon a spot of such scenic loveliness that she exclaimed that when she died she would wish to be buried there. That night she was the belle of a brilliant ball at the Springs hotel and the next morning was found dead in her room.

There were no railroads then, no telegraph or telephones in Kentucky, so the hotel management could not communicate readily with the town she had given as her home on the hotel register, and she was buried in the spot she had designated the day

Letters of inquiry to the faraway town she had given as her home brought back the information that no such person had ever lived there. A fictitious name and a fictitious address apparently had been given by the beautiful stranger, who had "danced herself to death," so the oldtimers said. The identity of the unknown lady is still a mystery.

Sarcophagus Never Marked The stone sarcophagus in which she was buried was never marked with a name or date. Years ago the stone pillars fell and some were broken and the flat stone was later raised on a concrete support by order of the city officials.

The box-like tomb is often mistaken by tourists in the park for a seat or a table and has been considerably marred by vandals. So the Woman's club has erected a temporary marker, notifying visitors to the park that it is "the last resting place of the dead." A permanent marker with a suitable epitaph is to be erected by the club

Cylindrical Homes Used in Saxon Housing Plan

Dresden, Germany-Standard houses are built in cylindrical form at Greiz, Saxony, from plans of a civil engineer with a view to solving the housing problem.

All sections of the houses are interchangeable. The walls, made of sheets of nonconducting material, are lined with spacious cunboards. Rooms are on two floors, which may be occupied by separate families. A cupola, for storage, surmounts the house with a colonnaded veranda around it. The new homes are said to be both comfortable and cheap.

Violin Traded for Auto,

Ranch and Live Stock Sheridan, Wyo .- The trade of a vio-In for a 320-acre ranch, an automobile, a tractor, seven head of horses and 150 chickens has been recorded here. The violin, said to be a twohundred-year-old "Bergonzi," and valued at between $8,000 and $10,000, was owned by R. H. Williams, who made the trade with O. P. Biley, a rancher, here.

Williams acquired the violin recent ly from N. P. Nye of Sheridan.

to have a proving ground

Three years ago General Motors purchased an 1125-acre tract, 40 miles from Detroit and accessible to all its car and truck divisions.

This was transformed into a great Proving Ground, with every kind of road and grade over which an automobile is called upon to travel.

Here the collective experience and brains of the whole General Motors family are brought to bear upon the problems of each member; and here each make of General Motors car must prove itself against the best that American or European genius has developed.

The Proving Ground marks a forward step in the guarantee of motor car satisfaction. It is your final assurance that you are investing when you buy a General Motors car.

Clever Police Work Credited to Italian

For a moth to be convicted of murder seems incredible, but this actually happened. After giving a dinner party the Princess Caravella of Naples went to lie down in order to refresh herself for a dance, and later was found shot through the heart. Suspicion pointed to her husband, who was known to be of a jealous disposition, and he was arrested. The fact that the pistol was found lying near the dead woman seemed incongruous, but convicted but for the shrewdness of a Naples police officer.

Churches in Business

An old Jewish synagogue in Maiden lane, London, is now used as a theater for rehearsals, and a Methodist chapel in Southwark, where Wesley preached, is used as a paper warehouse.

The famous Surrey chapel, where Rowland Hill preached, is today the great boxing rendezvous known as the Ring. At Willesden an old chapel has been converted into a draper's establishment, the pulpit being used as the cash desk; another, in the Hampstead road, has been turned into a picture palace.

The Union Jack club, opposite Waterioo station, stands on the site of a Methodist chapel which had lost its worshipers, while St. Andrew's, Tavistock place, was once a fashlonable church, but has been in turn a cycle store and a club.—London Answers.

Grenade Duel Fails

In Germany two university students, each seeking the hand of a comely girl la marriage, decided they would have to fight it out in a duel. They chose hand grenades as weapons, paced off the required distance and when the referee dropped the hand-terchief they each threw. The gre-nades went saling through the air but nothing happened. Two other grenades were offered them and these exploded, but only spattered mud the duelists. They then decided to allow the girl to choose.

Lesson for July 18

THE CALL OF MOSES

LESSON TEXT-Exodus 3:1; 4:12. GOLDEN TEXT-Certainly I will be ith thee.—Ex. 3:12.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Moses at the Burning Bush. JUNIOR TOPIC-Moses, the Shep-

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Facing a Great Opportunity.

I. The Lord Speaks to Moses From the Burning Bush (3-1-6). It was while keeping the flock of his father-in-law in the desert that the Lord appeared to Moses in the vision of the burning bush. Moses stepped aside to behold this strange sight and was taught the essential lesson of the proper approach to God. The Lord leave him long in suspense.

that He was the God of ms fathers, the covenant God. As soon as he knew that it was God that was speaking to him, he hid his face. II. Moses' Commission as the Deliverer of His People (3:7-10).

Observe: 1. God's active interest in His peopla (v. 7).

In a preamble of this commission God declared:

(1) "I have seen the affliction of my people." So keenly conscious is God of all that goes on in the world that not one of His chosen ones can be touched without His notice.

(2) "I have heard their cries." We sometimes feel that God does not hear, but no cry ever goes up from the heart of his covenant child unheard. (3) "I know their sorrows."

Many indeed are the sorrows of God's children. They are so diverse, but He knows all about them and will adapt himself in grace to their need. 2. God's gracious obligation to His people (vv. 8, 9)). (1) To deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians.

(2) "To bring them up out of the land.

(3) "To bring them into a good land and large-unto a land flowing with milk and honey."

3. God's commission to Moses (v.

"Come now, therefore, and I will send thee unto Pharaoh that thou mayest bring forth my people, the children of Israel out of Egypt." III. Moses' Objections Patiently Heard and Removed (3:11-4:10).

1. His personal unworthiness v. 11). He said, "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh?" He realized his insufficiency for this task. Moses did not refuse to go, but laid his difficulty before the Lord. God answered this difficulty by assuring him that He would be with him.

2. The difficulty of the people to understand Moses' relationship to God (vv. 13, 14).

Moses knew how unwilling they were to acknowledge him as their deliverer forty years before. Since God changes his name as he assumes a new relationship to his people, Moses inquired as to what that new relationship would be and his corresponding name. The Lord promptly met this difficulty by showing a name differing in many respects from all others previously given. This new name is "I am." This name is from the Hebrew "to be." It indicates:

1. God's self-existence.

It sets forth the idea that God is the self-existent one and the source of all existence. There is no existence apart from Him. (2) His self-sufficiency.

He said, "I am that I am." God is the unique one. He is not dependent upon any other existence.

(3) His unchangeableness.

"I am that I am" may be expanded to mean, I am what I always was. What I always was and am I always will be. The "I AM" of this passage is the Jesus Christ of the New Testament. Therefore the apostle could say, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today and forever."

3. Unbelief on the part of the people (4:1).

This difficulty the Lord met by supplying him with credentials which could not be gainsaid. He was given the power to perform supernatural wonders (4:2).

4. Lack of eloquence (4:10). He confessed that he was slow of speech and of a slow tongue. His ability to speak had not been improved by the Lord's message to him. The Lord's reply (v. 11) carried a real rebuke. He assured him that the God who had made man's mouth could give man the ability to use it. This difficulty the Lord in His infinite patience met by providing an assistant in the person of his brother Aaron.

The Truth

Next to the Crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ there is no truth that you and I need more to lay hold of than the truth of the living Christ-alive today, and personally present with all who trust in Him .-- C. A. R. Janvier.

Need of Prayer

Deep than the need of men, deepir than the need of money, aye, deep down within this spiritless life of ours is the need of world-wide prevailing prayer.-Robert E. Speer.

Great Personages of the Bible

REV. LEONARD A. BARRETT

Job

OB was one of the wealthlest men of his time. He possessed 7,000 sheep, 3,000 camels, 500 yoke of oxen, and 500 she asses. He was the greatest of all the men of the East. He was also greatly blessed in his home life, having seven sons and three daughters. He has been described as a righteous, rich, and happy man. The story of Job's career reveals many of the ideas believed by the people of his time. Among them was the belief that prosperity was indicat've of Divine approval and the reward for righteousness.

The biography of Job begins with the visit of Satan to the heavenly council, where Satan is asked by the Lord, "Whence comest thou?" Satan replies, "From going to and fro in the earth." The Lord inquires of Satan If he had ever set his heart on Job and whether he had ever tempted him, to which Satan answered that if Job's property were taken from him he would curse God. The result of the debate in the heavenly council was that Satan gained permission from the Lord to test the integrity and faithfulness of Job in any way he liked, only he was not to put his hand upon him. A series of misfortunes are now visited upon Job. The Sabeans and the Chaldeans fell upon his cattle and took them away, and all his servants were slain. His sons were also slain. Then Job arose and rent his mantle and shaved his head and fell down upon the ground and worshiped, saying, 'The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Having failed in his venture, Satan seeks another interview of the second heavenly council and secures the privilege of attacking Job's life. "Permit me, O Lord, to put forth my hand and touch his bone and his flesh and then he will curse Thee to Thy ace," to which the Lord replied, "Behold he is in thy hand but save his Ife."

Sore bolls now come upon Job. He scraped himself with a potsherd and sat down among the ashes, which in the ancient days was a symbol of suffering. When his sufferings were most ntense three friends came to visit him with the purpose of expressing their sympathy. Their names were E'iphaz, Bildad, and Zophar. These friends sat with him upon the ground seven days and seven nights. The friends did not speak a word during all that time, for hey saw that his suffering was very great. Job shared the bellef of his 1me, that prosperity was a reward for righteorsness. Now that all his postessions were taken from him, many persons thought that Job must have committed a great sin. Only such an act could explain so great a calamity. The friends urge Job to confess the sin he committed and then God could forgive and 'ess him again. The dilemma which confronted Job was the difficulty of confessing a sin he had not committed. He finally replies to his fr' ads, "When it comes to an interpretation of God I am not inferior to you. Who knows not in all these things that the hand of Jehovah bath wrought this? Hold your peace and let me alone. Though He slav me. yet will I trust in Him." Thus Job triumphed over his friends, Satan returned baffled and Job arrived at a peace of soul born of vision and faith. A terrific thunderstorm takes place and a voice is heard out of the whirlwind, which to Job is indicative of a divine intervention. Job is full of anticipation for the hour of his vindication had come. In the far distance a voice out of the storm is heard saying to Job, "I will demand of thee and declare thou unto Me." In other words, what finally have you to say, Job? This question Job answers in a sublime confession of faith. "I had heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear, but now mine eye seeth Thee." After this humble confession, there was returned to Job t ice as much as he had before, and he lived 140 years and saw his children and grandchildren even to four generations.

All is well though faith and form Be sundered in the night of fear, Well fares the storm to those who hear A deeper voice across the storm.

Regret is dead, but love is more Than in the summers that are blown, For I myself with these have grown something stronger than before. "And I saw that there was an ocean of darkness and death, but an infinite ocean of light and love flowed over the ocean of darkness, and in thought I saw the infinite love of God." (©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

A tasty salad is always in season and now with fresh green things in abundance on e may have a variety of summer salads. Try slicing small green onions very thin, adding half of a green pepper, more or less as one likes the fla-

Cottage cheese served on lettuce with a spoonful of crushed fresh currants, sweetened very sweet, is another well-liked combination. When the fruit is not in season open a can that has been crushed with sugar and canned without cooking.

Combination Salad.-Shred a small head of early cabbage and cover with cold water to crisp. Arrange tender leaves of lettuce on salad plates and heap on the following combination well mixed with good mayonnaise: one finely cubed apple, one-half of a green pepper finely shredded, one banana sliced and chopped fine; add the cabbage; a bit of pineapple will not spoil the combination.

Strawberry Whip.-Mix one cupful of crushed strawberries with one-third of a cupful of powdered sugar. Beat the whites of three eggs, add one-third of a cupful of sugar and one-quarter of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, beat again. Combine the mixtures and serve in sherbet cups or as a sauce on sponge cake.

Baked Beans With Sausage.-Parboil one quart of navy beans after soaking them over night. When the skins crack, place them in a bean pot, adding three tablespoonfuls of molasses and salt to taste. Bake all day. One hour before serving place link sausages over the top and allow them to bake.

Creole Soup .- Chop one small turnip, one onion and one carrot. Cook these with two tablespoonfuls of rice, a pint of tomato, two teaspoonfuls of salt and two cupfuls of water. When the vegetables are tender, rub through a colander. Add a tablespoonful of butter and serve hot.

Rhubarb Baked With Figs.-Cover well-washed figs with bolling water and cook until the water is nearly evaporated. Cut a pound of unpeeled rhubarb into inch pieces, put a layer into a baking dish, sprinkle with sugar, then add a few figs; repeat until the dish is full. Add a few tablespoonfuls of water and bake covered in a slow oven until the fruit is ten-

Until Dodson's Liver Tone Drove Out Quarts of Sour Bile and Other Poisons.

There are entire sections where everyone seems to think they have malaria. Others believe they never fully got the malarial poison out of their systems.

Arnold Whiteson says: "For years I took calomel for the aches, biliousness, headache, constipation and the deathly feeling associated with what we believed to be malaria.

"Last year I heard about Dodson's Liver Tone and bought a bottle for a few cents. Man, man, what a Godsend, In the morning it drove out quarts of black, sour bile. I got back my appetite for food, braced right up and haven't had a sick spell since. Whenever I feel a little bilious or the stomach gets sour, one dose of Dodson's Liver Tone is all I need. It is surely a blessing."

Hundreds of others tell the same experience.

Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and you will wake up feeling great. No more binousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting

If it is true what all of the candidates say about each other we certainly must have some very unworthy people aspiring for some of the envirous offices.

Here of late some mighty weighty problems have been threshed out daily on the main drag of this city. Governors have been elected and impeached, oil wells have been spudded in, wheat has been threshed, truck patches have been irrigated and harvested and many other weighty matters have close attention and discussion.

Now is the time to cut the weeds. Many vacant lots streets and allies in this city are taking on the looks of deserted fields. It will only take a few minutes to cut the weeds from your business house or the vacant lot next to you and it will add so much to the appearance of the city. Hundreds of tourists are passing thru the city now, lets make a favorable impression as they go thru.

Less than a year ago the City of Muleshoe did not have any modern conveniences. Now we have the best electric service in the southwest and bonds have been voted for the water works. The new High School building and the Court house, a row of fine brick business houses has been added. Muleshoe is bound to make a city in spite of all you can do. Better line up and lets and wife. make it come to pass at once.
