DALLAS TRADE EXCURSIONISTS INVADE CISCO, LAYING BARRAGE OF ENTHUSIASM, SPIRIT AND PEPS

Arrive on Special Train Monday Evening and Stay an Hour.

PARADE MAIN WITH BAND

Cisco Responds With a Snappy Ovation to the Visitors.

Fresh and full of pep, on their first day's outing, and under an ideal Texas spring sun—neither too hot nor too cold—the members of the 19th annual trade tour of the Chamber of Commerce & Manufacturers' Association of Dallas swooped down on Cisco at 6 o'clock Monday evening.

Their special train was slightly off schedule, and they caught Cisco's last little unwarmed and were on the city's great business thoroughfare parading with their band before the busy Ciscoans had gotten themselves into reception order.

But this bunch of representative business boosters from Dallas were soon met and mingled with Cisco's enthusiastic citizenship.

Their stay here was brief, being only an hour, hardly enough for them to get a glimpse of the business section of the city.

The march was up Avenue D to Broadway, headed by their own band.

Arriving at the intersection of Eighth and Avenue D they disbanded and the commanding with Cisco officials, business-men, and boosters followed.

At Avenue D and Seventh Grand C. Wild, in behalf of Cisco, mounted an improvised platform and addressed the visitors to the liveliest and best city of Central West Texas. Charles Saville, secretary of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce, responded in a very snappy hoister talk.

The remainder of their short hour here was spent in visiting the Main street business houses and institutions and making inquiries of the developing concerns of the area—all of which have their homes in Cisco.

Their regret was that they did not have time to visit the new homes in the refineries, the gas wells and other big industries that are coming in the city.

The Dallas boosters had heard of the wonderful Sandy Canyon, just three miles northwest of Cisco, which holds a beauty in scenic grandeur equal to the Royal Gorge, the Canyon of the Grand, and other wonder spots in Colorado and the Rockies.

They expressed a desire to go out and see this Texas canyon, where Cisco's seven billion gallon water reservoir is to be constructed—a damsite pronounced by eminent engineers as the equal of anything in the north or east.

But, of course, they did not have time on this trip.

Cisco would like to have shown them many points of interest and feats of development, could the visitors from the big city of Dallas have remained the guests of Cisco for even a few additional hours. But they had to hurry on, promising to come again.

Say Cisco Talked of Everywhere.

Many compliments were passed on the three Matland county cities, but these big business boosters were exceedingly pleased with the thrift and building of the permanent character, which was noted in Cisco, and which city, they say, is now more talked of than any other city in the oil fields.

The trade excursionists represent every character of the many great industries of Dallas, which is now competing with the markets of the United States with her more than four hundred exclusive jobbing houses, carrying stocks that sold during 1919 approximately $415,000,000 worth of goods, according to their literature.

The purpose of this trade excursion is to cultivate acquaintance and bring Dallas and this great west in closer touch, both socially and from a business viewpoint.

Their costumes consisted of white linen hats with yellow bands bearing the names of the institutions which they represented, a bright yellow Dallas pennant suspended from the right shoulder, a large purple pennant on their backs telling of the great Dallas Fair for 1920, the date of which is October 8 to 24. Each wore a large white button on the left coat lapel bearing the individual's name. These dress decorations gave them a very showy appearance and marked them distinctively as boosters.

There were about 125 in the party.

Following is the personnel, including the businesses that each represents:

TEACHERS TO ATTEND HOME ECONOMICS WEEK EARLY IN MONTH JUNE

AUSTIN, Texas, May 15.—Miss Mary Clearing, professor of home economics at the University of Texas, has received many letters from home economics teachers from all parts of Texas signifying their intention of attending Home Economics Week, which will be held under the auspices of the university and the state department of education June 1 to 5, inclusive.

"Realizing the great educational value of the program, some school boards are sending teachers at the expense of the schools, others, when this is not possible, are giving them the time to attend," said Miss Clearing.

"Post-war conditions have probably brought more serious problems to the teacher of home economics than to any other branch of the teaching profession. The rapid increase in cost of the physical necessities of life, food, clothing and shelter, necessitate an entire re-adjustment of the family budget, and makes it of primal importance that intelligent choice, rather than false social standards or blind imitation, should direct family expenditures.

"The high cost of clothing and the difficulty of getting suitable ready-made garments is forcing back into the home the larger portion of the family sewing. The scarcity and prohibitive cost of domestic service is causing an increasing number of home-makers to do not only the family house work, including cooking, but the laundry as well. Under these and other circumstances, stress of work, a time budget is as essential as a financial budget. Few housekeepers know how to budget their income so that it may be used to the best advantage, and even fewer their time.

"These are some of the problems which will be discussed during Home Economics Week by the best authorities obtainable on the subject."

Mothers of Texas Urged to Put State In Registration Area

AUSTIN, Texas, May 15.—It is largely up to the mothers of Texas to put the state in the registration area; the state board of health fully recognizes that if Texas as a state is to ever get into what is known as the registration area or the United States vital statistics bureau and become recognized as being on a par with those states which now enjoy this great advantage that this will come about largely through the co-operation of the mothers themselves. There are almost daily evidences of the fact that mothers are becoming more and more aware of the vital importance of having their children's births recorded which is important not only from a legal, social and industrial standpoint, but is absolutely necessary for the accurate and scientific study of disease and its proper prevention.

While it is the duty of the mother to know that her child's birth is recorded, it should, at the same time, be a great pleasure and a source of satisfaction to her to know that she has performed this important piece of business for her helpless child and there is no one thing requiring so little time and effort on her part that will be so much appreciated by the child when it has grown to realize the value of this forethought on the part of its own mother. During 1919, probably more than 10,000 children were born in the state of Texas whose births were not recorded.

"What's behind Us - Living singer or NEW EDISON?"

Don't you want to try this fascinating test of the New Edison's realism,—which caused distinguished psychologists to ask in amazement: "What's behind us, living singer or New Edison?"

Come in and hear Mr. Edison's Realism Test. See what sensations you'll get,—and determine for yourself whether listening to the New Edison produces the same emotions as listening to the living singer.

The three distinguished men of art and science in the picture are Dr. W. V. Bingham, Director of the Department of Applied Psychology, Carnegie Institute of Technology; Prof. C. H. Farnsworth, Director of the Department of Music, Teachers' College, Columbia University, and Wilson Follett, Esq., noted author and music critic. They tried the Realism Test at the Edison Shop, New York. They found that it brought into play their whole capacity to feel and to enjoy. They got sensations that were vivid and unique.

The REALISM TEST

proved in this vital demonstration, before scientists of international repute, that it is an ideal way for you to judge the New Edison.

It tells you precisely how effective is the New Edison's realism,—and what this realism means in terms of your own musical enjoyment.

Please feel free to come in at any time, and make this unique experiment for yourself.

(THE BUDGET PLAN regulates your "pleasure" expenditures so that you can buy your New Edison without spending your income. Ask about it.)

ad forgotten to number his chapters and had mixed the pages. It remains for the film editor to patch these bits of film together into connected story. For instance: When the Turkish Sheik in Priscilla Dean's picture looks off into the distance and appears to see something that startles him the film editor must run through the thousands of feet of film until he finds that part where the Black Horse Troop races over the desert. He must then patch the picture of the Sheik into the strip of film that it becomes immediately apparent to the players that he is seeing the advancing cavalry when he is at the horizon. He must then take the thousand or so feet of titles patch them into the film in such a way that the title fills up any doubt in the mind of the spectator as to the reason for any particular bit of action, and assembling of a photograph several weeks. The finished picture is Studio Theater, a picture which the studio watches a picture on its worthiness. It has been seen and it is sent to the theaters. Color pictures are reviewed in the cabinet. The original film is sent to the laboratories, where approximately 100 additional copies are made from the original. These copies are made from a negative, a kodak print is made from a negative, and the copies are sent to the exchanges throughout the country. A certain number are sent to the studios from where they are distributed to the fringes of civilization. That is the cost of producing a picture. Such a picture as you will probably see at for 35 cents? The cost varies greatly with the picture, the star, the pictures, the attention and the cost of the picture at the time. In the picture business, the industry in the world, is built up by the nickels, dimes, quarters of those thousands of copies that were taken at first, and possible and today less.

the Star "Balls Up"

do players prepare their eyes for the camera? On the speaking stage the grease paint to accentuate the features. The footlights are ordinary incandescent lights that upon the coloring of the stage. The motion-picture, however, plays a strange role and the players must overcome the distaste of certain colors and its unpleasantness for other hues. Distance-red photographs allow impressions the photo slightly and is consequently in the picture, while the film profoundly and is unnaturally light in the top layer that covers his face. Under this he builds up the eyes over around them. Then he by other tricks with his face particular role may require.

no press story after all that she in the Hollywood High graduating class of 1919, prettiest of Her Babyhood, at this petticoat. It is one I, I was a little baby. Mother lace—all of it!" was a continued search in all sorts of books and papers, treasure chest the trunk proved Bessie's delight was keenly prevailing moment. The luncheon bell called us to the upstairs region where Mrs. reprimanded Bessie just a wee having revealed the untidiness cellar to me. The little girl who applied work at the Griffith studio about years ago. She could get no salary and was about to go away tragically when she met a man at studio entrance. She asked him if he couldn't get the man at the head of the studio to put her in a picture. How was she to know that it was to D. W. Griffith himself she was speaking? That wholesome face and two wonderful eyes were seen at once by the producer, who knew a screen type when he saw it.

Schlitz Is Not a 2-Day Drink—It Is Aged

In these days of "rapid-transit" beverages—turned out in a trifle over 24 hours, Schlitz purity is a matter of interest to your stomach. We admit to being over particular about the purity of Schlitz. Some people call us finical.

Where Schlitz is made, time is a matter of no importance, in comparison with aging and purity. Vessels are both chemically and mechanically cleaned. Every receptacle into which the pure yeast culture enters is sterile. Every tub, keg, barrel—every pipe and pump—is scalded every time it is used.

Schlitz is thoroughly aged, to save you biliousness. We believe that fermentation should be concluded before Schlitz reaches your stomach. Then Schlitz is filtered through white wood pulp. It is put into sterilized bottles. Every bottle is washed four times by machinery. And these bottles are Brown Glass, to protect the drink from subsequent deterioration by ultra-violet rays of light.

When we say that Schlitz is pure—we mean free from germs; free from bacilli. Schlitz cannot ferment in your stomach. Its effect is as good as its taste. Test it today.

Schlitz in Brown Bottles. On sale wherever drinks are sold. Or, order a case for your home from H. O. Wooten Greer Company. The Drink That Made Milwaukee Famous.

Female Screen Stars Have a Host of Critics

MOTION-PICTURE actresses have a host of critics that are unknown to the male members of the profession. To most women among the motion-picture public it is just as important that the actress is a good dresser as it is that she is an accomplished artist. On the other hand, little attention is paid to the clothes of the male members of the motion-picture profession, by the men in the audiences.

The motion-picture actress is conceded to be the best-dressed woman in the country. This is not the result of an ambition on the part of the actress to be a leader in fashions. It is rather the demand of her following who insist that she wear clothes that not only fit her character and personality, but that are up to the minute.

The female screen play is subjected to a great amount of criticism by severe critics—several thousand of them—who demand that the actress be not only an accomplished artist, but that she wear clothes that are beyond criticism. Most women in the audience watch with almost as great a degree of interest the clothes worn by the actress on the screen as they do her acting. Here the men on the screen have the advantage over the women, for male members of the audience pay little attention to the clothes of the hero or the villain and if they are good actors and real men, that is sufficient.

It is human nature for the feminine mind to criticize the clothes of others. We see examples of this every day on the street when young ladies will turn round and remark favorably or otherwise on the dress of the passer-by. The wardrobe of the actor is extremely limited as to variety of styles. The actress has no end of new styles which come out every week. A new trimming on a hat or a gown, a trifle, indeed, but yet important; a new cut of a coat, a new belt effect and a thousand other little items with which men players do not contend, are coming up daily in the life of the screen actress.

It is for this reason that motion-picture actresses spend such a great amount of their time with the dressmaker. It is not to satisfy personal vanity, but the demand of the public. When we hear of thousands of dollars being spent by a screen star for a new wardrobe it is usually so because the audience demands it of her. This is no slight problem and is plenty of cause for worry on the part of the actress.

To purchase modern clothes is no great achievement. But to get the proper clothes, dresses, hats and gowns that bring out one's charm, that is a real art as every woman will admit. To the motion-picture actress it is an art that must be accomplished to the fifth degree.

Making the Feature That 'Goes Over'

TOD BROWNING recently said that a director would be helpless without the army of workers who "standby" during the making of every scene.

After the setting has been designed by architects, built by carpenters, decorated by scenic artists and approved by technical assistants, native of the country in which the action is supposed to take place, there remains the electrical staff. The electricians are not done until the last scene has been filmed. They constantly called upon to turn on and off the lights, to change the location of the giant "spots" and to carry out the ideas of the director and his cameraman in the art of modeling in light and shadow.

The electricians are in truth a light brigade. Their's not to reason why; their's but to keep the carbons glowing and the best side of the star's face properly illumined.

Next to the director the most important man in the production end of the game is the cameraman. He wears neither a velvet jacket nor a Windsor tie, but for artistic ideas he has the portrait genius of twenty years ago faded to a frayed frazzle. He is the modern exponent of the artistic; a confirmation of the theory that a beautiful thought could exist under a derby just as easily as it can mature under a Tam o'Shanter.

The motion-picture camera records the activity of the players on rolls of film 400 feet long. The motion picture is not a continuous photograph, but a series of photographs, each picture being approximately one inch wide and three-quarters of an inch in length. These individual pictures when thrown on the screen as rapidly as a person would ordinarily move, give the illusion of continuous motion.

When the day's work is done each cameraman turns into the laboratory his total film for that day. Every bit of action on the part of every player, the star's best dramatic effort, the time, care, expense and inspiration of the entire day is on that film. When the director, the star, the players and the cameraman go to their homes, or go to the theater to see what other producers have to offer, the unceasing burden is taken up by the laboratory workers.

Under the direction of a chief chemist the film is handled much as the amateur photographer's snapshots are manipulated in the corner drug store. The film is developed, fixed and washed in trays. Then it is conigned to immense vats. Instead of being hung up to dry it is wound on drums, miniature Ferris wheels, and subjected to slow and gentle heat.

But there is a difference.

The corner drug store will foolzie a kodak film and say:

"It didn't come out; try again," and the amateur photographer assumes that there was insufficient sun on the baby in question.

"When a motion-picture film 'don't come out,' it means the scuttling of tens of thousands of dollars. The hundreds of players must be recalled for another day, the setting, if it has been destroyed, must be rebuilt, the production is delayed for weeks, the theaters are thrown behind in their schedules, the director borders on hydrophobia and the camera man throws himself jauntily in front of the California limited. It is a sad day at a motion-picture studio when something happens to the film.

In this day of scientific precision, however, accidents are rare and production is inspired by every scientific and artistic achievement that is tested and proved practical.

Assuming that the actual filming of that photodrama is over, the battle is only half won. The director was commissioned to make a connected story that would eventually be just five reels in length. The film that he has turned into the laboratory measures perhaps nine reels in length. The first story that would eventually be just five 2,000 or 3,000 feet filmed may have been the climax of the story. The next had forgotten to number his chapters and had mixed the pages.

It remains for the film editor to patch these bits of film together into a connected story. For instance:

When the Turkish Sheik in Priscilla Dean's picture looks off into the distance and appears to see something that startles him the film editor must run through the thousands of feet of film until he finds that part where the Black Horse Troop races over the desert. He must then patch the picture of the Sheik into the strip of film so that it becomes immediately apparent to the playgoers that he is seeing the advancing cavalry when he peers at the horizon. He must then take the thousand or so feet of titles and patch them into the film in such a way that the title fills up any doubt in the mind of the spectator as to the reason for any particular bit of action.

The editing and assembling of a photo-drama consumes several weeks. When it is done the finished picture is shown first at the Studio Theater, a miniature theater in which the studio executives gather to watch a picture and to comment upon its worthiness.

When the photodrama has been seen and pronounced good it is sent to the executive offices. Here it is reviewed by the administrative cabinet.

From the executive offices the original film goes to the laboratories, where approximately 100 additional films are made from the one. These replicas of the original, made much as a kodak print is made from a negative, are sent to the exchanges throughout the country. A certain number are sent to Edison and others are sent to the Oris, from where they are distributed to the fringes of civilization.

What is the cost of producing a photo-drama such as you will probably see tonight for 35 cents?

The cost varies greatly with the company, the star, the attractiveness of the presentation and the cost of the materials used at the time.

The motion-picture business, the fifth greatest industry in the world, has been built up by the nickels, dimes and quarters of those thousands to whom the spoken drama was at first, financially impossible and today less desirable.

How the Star 'Dolls Up'

HOW do players prepare their faces for the camera?

On the speaking stage the players use grease paint to accentuate natural features. The footlights are not unlike ordinary incandescent lights in their effect upon the coloring of the people on the stage. The motion-picture film, however, plays strange tricks with color and the players must use paint to overcome the distaste of the film for certain colors and its unnatural fondness for other hues.

For instance—red photographs black, yellow impresses the photographic film slightly and is consequently dark in the picture, while blue effects the film profoundly and is therefore unnaturally light in the printing.

The photographer first covers his face with a foundation of 'pinkish grease paint. Over this he builds up the eyes by shading around them. Then he plays any other tricks with his face that his particular role may require.

Fremont's Service Ended in Movies

SEVENTY years ago, in a Philadelphia shipyard, the barkentine Fremont was built, which from the time of its launching has had a varied and romantic career. If the title of "soldier of fortune" could be applied to ships, she would deserve that term, for she has been in every port of the world and engaged in all sorts of callings, some of them not altogether creditable.

There seems to be very little doubt that she was a slave ship in her early days, and made various trips to Africa for human cargo. She was a blockade runner in the civil war, and reports have it she was also a pirate at some time in her career. The log of the old ship, at least of her earlier years, has been lost, so that only tradition and the stories of seamen can be relied on to account for some years of her activity.

For a little while she was engaged in callings less picturesque, being in the service of a canning company of Alaska. From the fishing business to becoming a "star" in the movies was a distinct advance for the old boat. She was first owned by the Triangle Film Company, of New York, and later became the property of the Maurice Tourneur Company, of Culver City, California.

While starring in the movies, she went from place to place, finally coming to anchor in a tranquil bay on the Southern California coast, where she fitted into the scenery as if she belonged there. Her tall masts etched themselves against the clear California skies like an old painting. Here she received a "Spanishing" at the hands of the movie folks, and was rechristened the Hispanola, so she could star in Stevenson's famous "Treasure Island." The fancy scroll work added to stern and bow heightened the effect of antiquity, and when her great sails were spread she was an object of beauty and nobility that lent grace to all the surrounding landscape.

Like other stars, she commanded a large salary. From $100 to $800 per day, and even more than that, were the prices paid by the different film companies for the use of her; for there was no other boat just like her in all Southern California, which is the land of moviedom. And she was in almost constant use.

The months slipped peacefully over her head as she lay in the snug harbor, until one day a heartbreaking event ended her career.

The captain had taken her outside the bay for pictures, and in bringing her in she went aground in the narrow channel, endangering the lives of the 45 people on board. All night she was buffeted by the waves and it was impossible to rescue even the film folks until the next day.

When it became clear that the old sea rover was too deeply imbedded in the sand to be gotten clear, she was dynamited, going up in a blaze of glory and dying as adventurously as she had lived; with her boots on, so to speak.

The graceful bearing that distinguishes Claire DuBrey in her screen roles is due in large part to the fact that she is a pupil of Ruth St. Denis, the foremost classic dancer of America. Miss DuBrey pursues her studies along this line for sheer love of the art, but they also serve to keep her in fine physical condition.

Sydney Olcott is said to have been the first man to take an American picture company abroad.

No Place Like Home for Bessie

BESSIE LOVE, Star! Not only that, but star of her very own company! Quite a lot for a girl of 19, weighing many pounds less than a hundred, and measuring in height under the five feet mark, to have achieved.

Bessie is the sort of girl every girl would like to resemble. The sort of girl every mother would want her boy to escort to his fraternity party, and marry when that time came. Bright and winsome, with the tiniest hands and the smallest feet and the most glorious wide open, brown eyes in the world.

I was invited to luncheon with Bessie at her home in Laurel Canyon. This littlest girl lives in a big white house on a great tall hill, with giant pines surrounding the place. There are Mother Horton and Father Horton and Bessie (whose really true name before she came into pictures was Juanita Horton).

Bessie a Frontier Girl. Her attention was next attracted to a bit of parchment, paper rolled up. She opened it and "here is my high school diploma."

All the college boys and girls and where parties were given for her and where she did nothing but play.

We talked about the time when she lived in Texas and then in Arizona and New Mexico and how she finally came here.

Her father is a doctor and her mother was a school teacher before her marriage.

We discussed art and Bessie confessed that she dabbled in it a bit herself. Quite suddenly she remembered a drawing she had made of Mt. Salsuma in charcoal when she was a little girl. "Would I like to see it? Would I mind going into the basement with her while she got it out of an old trunk?"

That trunk, or rather contents, was a revelation to me.

"Look, here is the doll I called my 'bestest' one," she said, exhibiting a member of the mannikin family. "Its wig is made from my very own hair. I have clothes galore for it."

Her attention was next attracted to a bit of parchment, paper rolled up. She opened it and "here is my high school diploma."

That was no press story after all that had Bessie in the Hollywood High School graduating class of 1919.

A Petticoat of Her Babyhood. "Look at this petticoat. It is one I wore when I was a little baby. Mother made the lace—all of it."

There was a continued search through all sorts of books and papers. A real treasure chest the trunk proved and Bessie's delight was keenly prevalent every moment.

Only the luncheon bell called us back to the upstairs region where Mrs. Horton reprimanded Bessie just a wee bit for having revealed the untidiness of the cellar to me.

Bessie is the little girl who applied for work at the Griffith studio about four years ago. She could get no satisfaction and was about to go away despairingly when she met a man at the studio entrance. She asked him if he couldn't get the man at the head of the studio to put her in a picture. How was she to know that it was to D. W. Griffith himself she was speaking?

That wholesome face and two wonderful eyes were seen at once by the producer, who knew a screen type when he saw it.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS ASK INDIA GOVERNOR TO CRUSH DRUG EVIL

Next Meeting to Be Held at Chattanooga; Deplore Housing Facilities of Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The date of the 1921 meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention was advanced from Wednesday, May 11, to Thursday, May 12, late today by the convention in session here upon the suggestion of Dr. W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman University, Greenville, S. C., in order that messengers coming from a distance will not be compelled to travel on Sunday. Otherwise the report of the committee on arrangements which chose Chattanooga, Tennessee, as the meeting place, was unchanged.

Disapproval by the convention of the statement made by Vice President Marshall to the Virginia Bar association, that had the prohibition amendment been considered by the senate behind closed doors it would not have received 20 votes, was voted by the adoption of a resolution presented by Dr. H. W. Battle of Charlottesville, Virginia.

Prohibition of the drug and liquor traffic in India was endorsed by the convention in a resolution calling upon the governor of India to "prohibit the import, manufacture and sale in India of alcoholic liquors and drugs, particularly of the cultivation of the poppy and the manufacture and sale of opium for other than medical purposes."

Charging that the British government supports the opium trade in India by lending money, free of interest, to the poppy growers, Taranath Das of India, a Christian Hindu, pleaded with the messengers to help remove the drug curse from his country.

Disapproval at the convention facilities afforded by Washington was recorded by the messengers in the passage of a resolution asking congress and the commissioners of the District of Columbia to provide "a convention hall in our capital city adequate in size and design to the needs of such a building."

Registration of messengers today reached $225 and great disappointment has been expressed by those who have been unable to get into the hall at the various meetings. Numerous overflow meetings have been necessary to accommodate the messengers and the crowd of visitors estimated by convention officials to number another 8000.

Additions to the permanent $75,000,000 fund commission were announced late today at the convention naming J. P. Hendricks of Knoxville, Tenn., O. L. Lasky of Nashville, Tenn., J. H. Anderson of Knoxville, Tenn., and George E. Hayes of Louisiana.

Reading of the report on chaplains provoked a lively discussion this afternoon as to the propriety of a Baptist minister receiving pay from the government as a chaplain in the army or navy. Arguments were advanced that accepting pay from the government was contrary to the Baptist principle of the absolute separation of the church and state, but the report which provides for the entrance of Baptist preachers into the service was approved.

Dedicator services on the site of a church to be erected here as a national Baptist memorial to religious liberty were attended by the messengers this afternoon. Secretary of the Navy Daniel R. Brandegee presided at the convention, and Dr. McGlothlin.

GOVERNMENT ASKED TO TAKE WAR ACTION ON FREIGHT CONGESTION

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The government was asked today to take "emergency action similar to that taken when this country entered the war" to help dig the railroads out from under the worst freight congestion since 1917.

A joint appeal to the interstate commerce commission by the Association of Railway Executives and the American Railway Association deplares the freight jam to be such as to "warrant and require" immediate use of that body's broad powers under the transportation act in checking a "menace that had assumed threatening proportions."

Common use equipment and embargoes, priorities and diversions of such shipments were urged by the railroads as means which the commission could employ to remedy the situation. The roads ask, also, that they be allowed to curtail passenger service where necessary, but indicated this would be done only in extreme cases.

The railroad officials represented to the commission that there was no immediate hope of obtaining ample equipment, and that the volume of commodities being offered for transportation permitted no time for proper repairs. The labor situation has augmented the difficulties and does not promise immediate improvement, they say.

DOG WAKES THREE IN FIRE DESTROYING THE HENDRICKS HOME HERE

Midnight Blaze of Unknown Origin Does Damage Approximated at More Than $4,000.00

The barking and whining of a dog as it scratched at a bedroom door is probably responsible for having saved the lives of three people here, when the home of E. O. Hendricks at 14 Avenue C was burned to the ground late Sunday evening. The origin of the fire is not known.

The house was occupied at the time by Mr. and Mrs. Hendricks and Mrs. J. R. Noble, mother of Mrs. Hendricks. All escaped narrowly and without injury.

"I believe the dog saved our lives," said Mrs. Hendricks. "We were awakened about midnight by his barking, growling and scratching at the door. He had been left in the kitchen and was either trying to warn us or attempting to get out. The entire house was in flames and we barely got out of it in time."

The fire alarm was turned in at a quarter of 12. There was an immediate response on the part of the fire department, but upon arrival it was found that the house was too far gone for any hope of saving it.

Neighbors in night-dresses lined the front porches of nearby homes and watched the flames mount into the sky. The fire could be seen for miles. Men who were first on the scene attempted to save furniture and other household possessions but were waved back by Mrs. Hendricks, who remained unusually cool and refused to permit them to imperil themselves at this task.

The fire department had some difficulty in running its hose and was later compelled to battle the flames with a low water pressure, said to have been due to the fact that a new filtration plant at the lake is in the course of construction.

Wires were burned from nearby telephone poles and sputtered on the ground. Three men were severely shocked in stepping on them unaware. The fire department did excellent work and succeeded in extinguishing the flames in a comparatively short time.

The house was a four-room bungalow and was practically new. It was owned by the Hendricks, who built it a year ago. The damage is unofficially approximated at something more than $4000.

This is partly covered by insurance. Mr. Hendricks is the local agent for the Pearce Oil corporation.

SAVING MONEY WITH ELECTRICITY

HOW ONE HOTEL KEEPER REDUCED A BIG ITEM OF EXPENSE.

With the increased interest in farming and farm living from the efficiency standpoint, there is a great tendency on the part of the farmer to ask whether a proposed improvement will pay. Unquestionably most of the modern improvements offered to the farm home do pay in increased comfort of living and hence in increased ability to produce profit bearing crops. And the keen farmer of today realizes this. But it is also interesting to note that some of the modern improvements do pay directly through the dollars and cents savings they effect.

Take for instance the matter of the electric vacuum sweeper. A certain hotel keeper in a middle western state found that the carpet, in the hotel reception room, which was cleaned by hand sweeping and an occasional beating, had to be removed every three years. He installed vacuum sweepers and found that his next carpet lasted for seven years instead of three. The reason was that hand sweeping removed merely the surface dirt and that the dust and fine grit left in the web of the carpet and beneath it, and ground into it by people walking on it, had been slowly cutting the carpet to pieces.

When vacuum sweeping was installed, the shaking effect of the sweeper brushes and the suction of the fan drew all of this dirt and grit out, and left the carpet to stand merely the much easier wear of walking. The hotel keeper found that this saving through making his carpets last twice as long more than paid for the vacuum cleaning system.

And the same thing will appeal to the farmer's wife. She knows that a large amount of sand and dirt is brought into her house daily and that any system which will help her to keep her carpets free of it will be well worth while. Fortunately, the electric sweeper is at her service today through the development of the small electric light and power plants for farms. She's enjoying to the full the comfort and convenience of electric light, and in electric power she's finding a servant to do the washing, ironing, separating, churning and pumping, as well as the sweeping.

The coming observance of the 100th anniversary of the death of Daniel Boone, September 28, serves to recall the fact that some years before his end, the famous Kentucky pioneer purchased a coffin, which he kept under his bed, ready for immediate use when his body was called for.

Pleas of Guilty and Convictions In Eastland Courts

EASTLAND, May 17. — Lester Ogg was convicted on pleas of guilty on three indictments, each charging forgery. The defendant was charged with forging checks on the First State bank of Eastland by signing the name of the Allers Oil company, the total amounts being $9,236.94.

These forgeries occurred on the 2nd, 3rd and 7th days of last January. When the cases were placed on trial the county attorney announced that it was agreed that if the defendant would plead guilty to each indictment the state would agree to a sentence of two years in the penitentiary in each case, not cumulative. That result will enable the defendant to finish his term of imprisonment by serving his two years, less the time given for good behavior.

C. J. Cunningham plead guilty to an indictment for theft of over $50 and was given a suspended sentence of four years in the penitentiary.

J. W. White pleaded guilty to burglary of a box car and received a suspended sentence of two years in the penitentiary.

Lucas Mientras was convicted on a charge of theft and given a two-year suspended sentence.

Joe Gonzales pleaded guilty to burglary of a box car and asked for a suspended sentence. But the jury gave him a two-year sentence in the penitentiary and refused to suspend his time.

TO SEEK VIOLATORS OF GARBAGE CAN ORDINANCE

Dr. J. W. Gregory, city health officer, and J. A. Smith, deputy fire marshal, say they have planned to make a survey, together, of both the business and residential sections of Cisco in search of violators of the city ordinance 222, which says that all refuse and inflammable materials must be put into closely covered metal containers.

Dr. Gregory says that ample time has been given every one to comply with this regulation, and that violators of this ordinance will be carefully searched out and dealt with accordingly.

Why a Majority of the Smaller Cars Come on Goodyear Tires

Last year more cars using 30x3-, 30x3½-, or 31x4-inch tires were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

This is plainly a result of the high relative value produced in these tires for the smaller cars by Goodyear's enormous resources and scrupulous care.

They represent the same intense endeavor to supply utmost satisfaction in tires that has laid the basis for the marked preference which exists everywhere for Goodyear Tires in the larger sizes.

This real Goodyear value in tires is available for your Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell, or other car using one of these sizes, at our nearest Service Station. Go there for these tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

30 x 3 1/2 Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread.....	$21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes are thick, strong, tubes that reinforce casings properly. Why risk a good casing with a cheap tube? Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost little more than tubes of less merit, 30x3½ size in water. $4.50 proof bag.
