Star and about two miles southeast of the Hilburn discovery well. The oil was encountered unexpectedly. At that depth. the McBride well on the McCoy farm nearby has found gas, as had also some of the other wells in the vicinity of the Hilburn. There is much fear that the well will be lost on account of so much water coming from above the oil. Not expecting oil at that depth no preparation was made for it.

Through twelve feet of water, with a strong pressure, the gas has pushed up about 800 feet of oil in the hole during the first 24 hours. It is the opinion of experienced oil men that if the water had been cased off before the oil sand was punctured it would be a good well. The well is now shut down to await orders from the Prairie officials.
