Some Interesting Sweet Tater Facts

Some idea of why Portales is entitled to the slogan or rather the nickname, "Sweet potato Town, U.S. A." can be realized from the following Sweet potato Facts. It is impossible at this time to obtain anything like official statistics on the sweet potato production in the county, so a composite estimate, obtained from figures of several authorities on the subject, is used Roosevelt county will produce this year approximately 700 car loads of sweet potatoes.

Storage capacity in Portales is estimated at between 400 and 500 car loads. Today this is rapidly filling, while hundreds of bushels are being shipped.

This is one crop for which there is, with but few exceptions, a steady market and at good prices.

The flavor of the Portales Valley Sweet Potato cannot be equalled. The quality is the best in the land and the quantity-Oh, Boy!-Portales Valley News.

The reason we re-printed the above article is to show the people of the Muleshoe country just what our neighbor city is doing Wentland-Sone In with her irrigation projects. There is no reason why we can't do the very same thing. All we need is for someone to take the lead and then all the farmers that want to irrigate will fall in line.

The land around Portales is Why? Just because they make the stuff and sell it. It has been proven beyond a doubt that sweet potatoes and peanuts can be grown here as well as Portales. Yields have run as high as the pen of Melville P. Smith. 351 bushels per acre on irrigated land and as high as 150 bushels this year on dry land farmping. We do not think it would be wise to depend on the rain every year in raising potatoes, but where irrigation is carried on it will pay and pay big. Regardless of the hard work attached to irrigation it will pay better than this $7.50 maize. Muleshoe will never get anywhere until we get this irrigation matter underway in a big way.

Title Float in Harvest Pageant Parade at Omaha

The grain-growing states of the Central West, the bread-basket of the nation, for the thirty-second successive year celebrated the close of the harvest season with an elaborate fall festival pageant at Omaha under the auspices of Ak-Sar-Ben. The big events were the electric parade on Wednesday night, September 29, and the great costume ball on Friday evening, October 1. That pictured above is the title float of the harvest pageant parade Other floats pictured in elaborate detail the agricultural resources of the central western states. ## J. C. Carpenter Improves A Farm

J. D. Carpenter who lives in Young County and owns several sections of land near Lazz Buddy has just completed a new set of improvements to go with a 320 acre farm.

W. T. Black, contractor and builder had the contract for this job and announces the completion of this piece of work.

The improvements consist of a nice four room house 26x30 and a barn 20x24. The house was sheet rocked and painted also a nice large 22 foot porch.

Mr. Black has been doing quite a bit of contracting here of late and invites your inspection on any of his work. He aiso stated he had enough building now contracted to keep him and his men busy until Christmas. But if you are contemplating a building he is ready to show you samples spotted about over our county.

The lumber and building material for the aforesaid job was furnished by Hart Lumber Co.

Mr. Carpenter may improve some more of his land later.

JOSHUA, ISRAEL'S NEW LEADER

LESSEN TEXT-Num. 27:18-20; Joshua 1:1-9. Joshua 1:1-9.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord, thy God is with thee withersoever thou goest.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Joshua the New Leader.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Task of Joshua.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP--The Secret of a Strong and Useful YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-Preparation for True Service.

The book of Joshua, from which our lesson is taken, is a history of the conquest of the promised land and its division among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character, Joshua.

I. Joshua, the New Leader of Israel (Num. 27.18-20).

The people were not to be left in doubt as to a leader when Moses was gone. The leader was to be appointed and given recognition before all the congregation.

During the wilderness journey Joshua was Moses' minister and the captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Caanan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name "Joshua" has the same derivation as the name "Jesus."

II. Joshua Commanded to Take Charge (Josh. 1:2).

Moses was dead, but God's work must go on, therefore God issued the command for the new leader to assume his duty.

III. God Renews His Promise to Israel Concerning the Land (Josh. 1:3, 4).

This promise had been given to Abraham and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel as they were about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were "from the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the River Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun." The nearest this territory was ever possessed was during the reign of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This land still belongs to the Jews, and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them that wherever their feet stood upon the land it was theirs.

IV. God's Presence Promised (Josh.

and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said as He was with Moses, so He would be with him. The difficulties before him were:

1. The Jordan river (v. 2). This river was now at Its flood (Josh. 3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross. 2. The people were living in walled cities (Num. 13:28). Notwithstanding this, God was ready to Insure success (1) "I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee" (v. 5). (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee.' (3) "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee." Joshua had been with Moses throughout their forty years' experience from the Egyptian deliverance to the time of his death. Because he believed that God was with his master, he was willing and ready to cross the Jordan at its floodtide and courageously meet the enemies on the other side.

V. Conditions of Blessing in the Land (Josh. 1:6-9). 1. "Be strong and of good courage" (v. 6).

His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. It required strength and courage to do this.

2. "Unwavering obedience to the Word of God (v. 7).

In a land of idolatry it required much courage to be true to God. Prosperity and success were conditioned upon unswerving obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined therein would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this the law of the Lord must be in his mouth continually. He was to meditate therein day and night. Joshua rendered prompt obedience, he did not stop to cavil, but at once gave order for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions.

Lightning Sought Woman in Shelter

Don't think hiding in the closet during a thunderstorm will keep you safe, remarks the Lewiston (Maine) Journal. Mrs. Joseph Benson, living on the Beachwood road, Biddeford, was alone in the house when a thunder shower broke the other day. She hid herself in a closet of the house to escape the lightning. A bolt struck a tree in front of the house scattering pleces of the tree all over the dooryard. The bolt then entered the cellar, and the door of the closet where Mrs. Benson was hiding was blown open. The telephone in the house was torn from the wall and the bolt set fire to the house, burning a little spot of the flooring in the parlor before it was extinguished. Lightning also entered the barn and tore a door from the hinges. It was reported that the lightning also plowed furrows in the field near the home where the bolts grounded. Mrs. Benson was affected by the lightning, though no serious results are expected.

Weber Farm Wagons have been used on American farms for 80 years. That fact alone may not be positive proof of quality, but it must be admitted that any manufacturing plant that has produced wagons for four score years must be making good ones. Forther you can rest assured that the Weber name has become known to a good many farmers in that length of time. These facts combine with the Patented Fifth Wheel and the Patented Swivel Reach coupling to make the McCormick-Deering Weber the logical wagon choice.

charlie stepped into the jail; the rider sent his horse at a walk through the belt of shadow into the light of Main street. At a run I rounded the corner after him. I caught up, slowed down just behind him, and followed. Still at a walk, he was weaving played with me. . . . Oh, but it was through the late traffic. Before the Black Jack he stopped, threw the horse's reins over a pin of the hitching rail, walked a little unsteadily through the door. I waited until he was gone, and made a swift inspection of his mount. I had not been mistaken-a rangy American horse, buckskin in color, and with that distinguishing mark on his flank. I entered. There stood the rider at one end of the crowded bar, tilting into himself a glass of whisky. I pushed into the convivial knot next to him, watched him furtively. His hand, as he reached toward his waistcoat pocket to pay, missed twice; then came down hard as he rang his silver dollar on the bar. His gray eye, as he turned it casually a moment in my direction, seemed filmed. He had "been drinking," as we expressed it in that day-not yet drunk, but on the way. His face, seen now in full light, was less comely than at first glance. There lay a kind of blackness under the smooth, young blond skin. He was dressed like a miner or a prospector; but he wore his rough frieze coat, his cordurey trousers, his topboots and his blue flannel shirt with a touch of jauntiness; his trousers seemed draped above his boottops rather than tucked into them. He gathered up his change, stabbed It into his pocket, rolled upstairs to

When after a discreet interval I followed him, he had just staked a twenty-dollar gold piece at roulette. I joined the group of spectators, who stood watching with fascinated interest the descending whirl of the wheel. He lost; the dealer's hand raked in his coin. He was reaching again to his pocket, when from the spectators a man stepped up beside him as though to play; but instead laid a hand stealthily on his arm. This was a tall man; I caught a glimpse of a full, black beard. The smaller man turned angrily, then froze for a second in position. Some signal, evidently, had passed from eye to eye; a movement of the larger man's beard showed that he was speaking; though I could not catch even the sound of the words through the babble of night in the Black Jack. The smaller man's hand went away from his pocket. He pushed through the crowd to the stairs. I followed him closely as, with only a second of hesitation when he passed the bar, he walked on out of doors. Through the front windows of the barroom I watched to mark the direction in which he rode. But he did not advance toward his horse. A moment he stood as though undecided: then turned to the right and strode rapidly down Main street.

Thrilled with the adventure of shadowing a man, exulting with the thought of a scoop I was going to score for the Courier. I shot as unostentatiously as possible through the door of the Black Jack, followed. For a moment I lost him in the congested crowd before Myers' Variety theater. When I had crammed my way through that, I picked him up again at the head of Main street. There he turned to the right toward the Addition, the route which I followed every day to my meals. That was odd-did he live in the Addition? Had the enactors of this stage robbery dwelt so near meand Constance—all this time?

Past Mrs. Barnaby's he strode, and stopped dead. Here was a contingency I had not foreseen. If I went on, I should pass him and forfeit my usefulness as a shadow. If I too stopped and he saw me standing-he would suspect. Hastily, I dodged into the shade of the big tent. I waited for a few seconds, then ventured a cautious look round the corner. He was nowhere in sight. Just above Mrs. Barnaby's the street threw off a sidetrail running up the hill. Doubtless, he had taken that. I sped on tiptoe to the other end of the tent. There he was again-but he was not taking the trail. He had stopped before the little tent where lodged Mrs. Barnaby and Mrs. Deane.

"Hoo-hoo!" he was calling, gently. I dropped to the ground, less from caution than from a weakness in all my limbs

The edging of light along the tentflap became a triangle. Some one had emerged. It was Constance Deane. I could not see her face in the moonlight, but did I not know the tripping move and trim figure of her, the poise of the bare head? Surely, he had mistaken the place! She would tell him so, and go back. But she laid a hand on his arm, led him a little way from the tent; they stood talking in whispers whose vocalization did not reach me; talking with swift gestures. Now I could see her face in the moonlight, upturned toward him. . . . Again she laid her hand upon his arm . . . she who had told me that she would not receive men in the evening . . . she who had kissed me : . . she who had been on the robbed stage. . . In let-ters of red fire that phrase of Mike's note danced before my eyes . . .

"Somebook in town informs."

Suddenly the group in the moonlight broke. She had darted back inside the tent. The man stood still a moment as though hesitant; then turned, disappeared round the boarding-tent, emerged a moment later into the moonlight, retracing his course. I followed no longer. When he was gone out of sight, I lay there, my eyes on the dim blob of light which was the tent, the brilliant slash which was the opening of the flap-lay and dug my fingers into the ground and panted. Suddenly the light in the tent went out. I rose and stumbled blindly down the hill to Main street.

CHAPTER X

When I came back to a semblance of reason and sanity I was looking down, from a dump of Liverpool hill, on the streaks of blobbed light which marked Cottonwood camp. Since I saw my betrayal I had been wandering through camp, aimlessly and insanely. I had kindled in my heart and soul every invidious emotion. My conviction, formed so hastily as I watched that couple in the moonlight, had set, frozen. There was no hope, no faintest doubt. Stern, dramatic plans of action had floated into my imagination to be blown away by others just as violent and fanciful. I would go and accuse her to her face-tell her what she was and what she had done to me. No, I could not do that. My pride had been seared enough already; besides, what would she care? I would leave the camp tonight and never again see her or the spot where she had tormented me, used me. But even while I imagined this, I knew that I could not abandon the game half played. I would follow him, her accomplice and lover, to the ends of the earth; and when I found him I would kill him as a man should. I would kill myself-I had the weapon there ou my hip. Even was there a terrible vision of Constance Deane's tender throat gurgling to flabby quiet in my clenched hands. . . . It was this sudden, primeval lust for murder which, imparting an unnatural energy to all my members, finally drove me on the run up Liverpool hill. Altitude and the limitations of the body had their way with me at last; my breath gave out; I dropped on the rough prisms of the dump, exhausted.

Oddly, I kept one tiny impulse of reinto my state of relative calm than I remembered the Cottonwood Courier, struggling on toward press-hour without me. Marcus Handy at least had done me no wrong. I owed him the courtesy of decent resignation. I rose, started down Liverpool hill in a leaden mood of profound but inactive melancholy.

Through the clear, carrying night air came the sound of a pistol-shottwo shots-a crackling fusillade. These sounds blew into a blaze the embers of my violent mood. The sense of dynamic power in the explosions, the imagination of the bullets with their terrific, satisfying punch into flesh or into wood, gave some devilish satisfaction to my nerves. Then the world of practical realities again flowed in upon me. This was no joy-fusillade of drunken miners or prospectors. The tempo was that of a general fight.

Again I broke into a run. As I passed the straggling row of cabins which fringed the road leading into the foot of Main street, I caught the noise of the crowds. It came in an irregular, roaring babble, quite unlike the ordinary rhythms of night in Cottonwood. And there was no music; something had muted the orchestras and bands. I rounded the curve toward the jall. Men were cinching saddles and mounting; a moment revealed by the swerve of a horse, in a moment concealed, stood the figure of Chris McGrath, one peremptory finger pointing a command.

A nondescript citizen stood with his hands in his pockets, regarding proceedings from the concealing shade of slouch hat.

"Bank robbed!" he answered casually to my inquiry, and spat a stream

into the gutter. "But the shooting-anybody killed?" panted

"Three, I hears," he replied as casually. Down the roadway of Main street I pushed my way toward the bankthere was no room on the sidewalks. All Cottonwood-clerks, faro dealers, miners, tenderfoot, visitors, painted ladies-had rushed out of doors. In gesticulating knots stood the citizens of our town, talking it over. Fragmentary, expletive sentences, whetting my curiosity, snapped out of the babel -"got clean away-that's funny"-"five killed"-"gold shipment." Out of bank, ran one of our straggling side streets. It was jammed. The focus of interest seemed to be the back door of way forward. By the entrance stood two guards, their .45-c. ber sidearms slung forward on their hips as though for instant action.

"I'm the Courier reporter," I panted. "How many were killed?" "Nobody, as I saw," responded the guard. "But there was shooting!" I objected.

"D-n bad shooting," snipped the guard.

"How much did they get?"

The guard hesitated. "Ask the boss," he said finally. Then was aware that the back window was opened a few inches, that a voice had whistled and called my name. I leaned down to the space between sash and sill, and was looking into the lean face of Mr. Taylor.

"Better go to your office, Gilson," he sald. "Handy has been looking for you.'

"Did they kill anyone-how much did they get?" I asked.

"No one hurt-but Handy will tell you what to say about all that!" replied Mr. Taylor enigmatically, and closed the window.

As I threaded among the dark cabins, sheds, rude warehouses which made a maze of the alley behind the bank, I saw that the crowd was thinning out. Just then, a band down the street gave its preliminary roll, struck up a march tune; Cottonwood, the fires of excitement already dying out had resumed its normal night life But not quite, I reflected as I came up the side street toward the Courier. Considering that it offered no lures of pleasure, it was singularly crowded for that time of night. Men were standing in knots; only they did not gesticulate, and if they spoke at all it was in low whispers. The excitement had abated only on the surface, I felt. Deep below ran a sense of tension. . . . I was hardly surprised when fro t he doorway of the Courier a stranger stepped forward, laid his hand on a scabbard swung forward from his hip, and said:

"You can't come in here!" "But I work here!" said I.

"Wait a minute," he replied, and disappeared. An instant later the keenly lined silhouette of Marcus became visible against the light. "It's all right-come along!" he shot out in his executive voice.

I entered. Marcus, his sleeves rolled up, his store clothes protected by the ink-spattered apron of his trade, his mallet in hand, stood at the stone. I had never seen his eye so bright.

"Where the h-I have you been?" he inquired. I answered nothing. The search for an excuse brought up the blackness of the past two hours which excitement had momentarily dissipated; if I had tried to speak, I would have choked. Marcus, indeed, gave me no time to answer.

"Well, rustle!" he growled. "Did you get anything on that bank rob-

"Not much. Taylor told me to see

"Just as well," replied Marcus. "You take this story exactly as I lay it out for you." With news to write, I was no longer his partner; he had become the boss, executive and exacting. "Don't touch it up too much. Make it straight and cold. All ready? Go! The Bank of Cottonwood was robbed last night"-as morning newspaper men must, he was dating the event one day behind. "Let yourself out a little in the introduction. Call it an insolent performance or something like that. Oh, yes, and say: 'due to the inefficiency of the administration which has made this camp a paradise for crooks, road-agents and sure-thing men.' Or words to that effect. Then the straight stuff. At ten-forty-five, a fusillade of shots from the alley back of Main street announced the daring crime. A few minutes before that time four horsemen rode quietly up to the entrance of the alley behind the Main street, three buildings from the bank, and left their horses. One horse, it was noticed by the spectators, was a buckskin"—here Marcus hesitated in his steady flow of language, then went the bank. With hasty explanations of on more slowly: "a buckskin with a my identity, with much discourteous peculiar spot on his flank had been

It is perhaps more than a coincidence that a few minutes before the crime occurred a prominent citizen, passing down the Liverpool hill trail, saw a group of men treating the hind quarters of a buckskin horse with something suspiciously resembling yellow whitewash"-it was well that Marcus here paused again in his narrative; for the rush of blood through tense channels deafened and blinded me. But my ears and eyes cleared; and Marcus was proceeding: "No, I guess you'd better leave that out. Not a word of that—or the color of any

"Owing to the danger of highway robbery ever present in this camp, the Bank of Cottonwood has been taking unusual precautions in moving its outgoing shipments of bullion and its incoming shipments of coined gold and currency. The transfer to and from the vaults of the bank took place usually after dark. Last night a consignment of"-a pause again-"what is reported to be gold coin was due to arrive at about ten-thirty, an hour when most of the revelers in camp would be in the dance-hall and varieties, or woolng the elusive goddess of chance. The bank was all ready for the shipment. The police department had been notified." Another pause. "Unfortunately, our efficient guardians of life and property-get in some sarcastic shot like that-were waiting at the wrong entrance to the alley, and did not participate in subsequent events. H. A. Taylor, president of the bank, and Horace Hutchins, his teller. themselves acting as guards, waited at the back door. . t the appointed hour the shipment arrived in a democrat wagon, dri en by John F. Gruder with-what the blazes are his initials? -oh, yes, Pete Hannan-as guard. Drawing up the wagon and dismounting, they prepared to unload the money, which was inclosed in two locked strong-boxes. Having reached the bank safely, the guardians of the treasure relaxed their vigilance—put in something like that. Anyhow, Mr. Taylor and Mr. Hutchins, instead of remaining on guard, started to help. At the moment when they had their hands full four men sprang from a doorway in a cabin which faces the back door of the bank. Before either the guards or the bank officials could get to their guns each felt a muzzle poked into his ribs. To resist would have been to invite certain death. With muttered words of command, the road-agents backed their victims against the door, took away their guns. Then, while two of the bandits kept them covered, the others rapidly removed the treasure-boxes to the entrance of the alley, loaded them on to their horses. So well had the criminals apparently informed themselves of the bank's habits that a spectator who noticed this act without comprehending its significance said that the saddles of their animals were fitted with rope slings. The operation took but a minute. When this was done, the pair who had been covering the bank officials backed away to the entrance of the alley, still covering their victims. With a final warning that they would shoot the first man who emerged, they swung into their saddles and rode away in the darkness.

"Pluckily disregarding the warnings of the bandits, the banker and his assistants hurried to recover their guns, which had been tossed into the dark space between two cabins. Mr. Taylor was the first to succeed. He ran to the entrance of the alley and turned loose at the bandits as they disappeared in moonlight. They returned the fire at long range, fortunately with no effect.

"The police were at once notified. The crime, as before stated, occurred at about ten-forty-five. At eleventhirty the posse which Marshal Mc-Grath immediately started to form was still engaged in interesting conversation at the jail. Cinching a saddle is an operation which takes time-or something sarcastic, better than that. Rub it into them. And end like this-take it down as I say it:

"The aftermath of this affair will doubtless be known to all before this issue of the Courier reaches its readers.'

I could endure it no longer. That side of me which had been burning all night in the dark flames of my own inner hell burst to the surface. It

| manifested itself in violent physical action as I struck the point of my pencil into the table and cried:

"Why are you keeping me in the dark? Why am I on the outside of all this?" A dozen circumstances had come together in my mind-the mysterious absences of Marcus, the hints of secret events underlying that bank robbery, the operations of Mike the Bartender, the guard at the door of the Courier, this last, cryptic sentence. Under it all flamed a deeper, fouler, more tormenting misery. Some one had informed the handits as to the very hour when the treasure would be delivered at the bank. Some one had informed them as to the very character of its packing. Some one numbly I could feel the nails diggins into my clenched palms.

And the face of Marcus Handy took on a curious expression. Almost, he looked ashamed. He dropped his eyes to the stone.

"Sorry, I can't tell you now, kid," he said hesitantly. "Right sorry l can't. You've always played square with me. But wait until we've gone to press. Then I'll tell you, if you sure want to know. Now get to work. Shove over your takes to the printers as fast as you write them. Had Marcus replied to my outburst with his accustomed energy and authority, I do not know what I might have done. But this touch of sentiment served to cool and steady me. My working side took hold again. Furiously I ripped through the story, the printers taking away the uncorrected copy as I wrote. However, I noticed dimly certain irregularities in the night routine of our office. I heard parleys at the door; evidently the guard was still turning visitors away. One man, however, was permitted to pass-Cohen the jeweler. He held a whispered conference with Marcus over the stone, nodded, departed hastily. Marcus was keeping the front page open for my story of the robbery I had scarcely finished when he set the last take into place, inserted a filler, locked the form. And now my hot, black impatience surged again. "You said you'd tell me-" I cried from my desk. "Wait till she's run off." replied Marcus. "Keep workin'. Start a column of telegraph news. V'e'll need it. There may be d-n little work done in this office tomorrow-today-" he corrected himself; for the hands of our old station clock pointed to half past one. Again I forced myself to work. Then the press began its rick-folded sheet upon my desk. My eye flew mechanically to my own story; then was deflected by a curious typographical feature, unique in the Cottonwood Courier. Sprinkled over the front page, a "door-mat" to each separate item, ran a single legend, repeated again and again in as-ety clang; and Johnnie, the office boy,

as was his routine, laid the wet, un-

sorted job type: "SACRAMENTO DIGGINGS"

Those words-where had I heard them? Memory worked in a blinding flash. It was the phrase Buck had slipped to me so casually that day by the claim. A faint perception of the truth crept into my mind, opening the Marcus stood over me, his face seeming to struggle with conflicting emotions, among which the chief was embarrassment. "Nobody will be leaving the Courier for half an hour or so," he said. "I guess I'm betrayin' no essential secrets if I tell you some things." He hesitated, and then, as though thrashing around the edges of the subject, he added:

"My fault at first that you didn't know. I like to play a lone hand. Then afterward—" He hesitated. And I burst out again;

"Why have I been left on the outside?" My voice must have rung disagreeably, for Marcus colored an instant as though with contagion of anger, that died out before he answered hesitantly:

"When we formed a certain organization-there was one party objected-"

"You mean," I said, coming out brutally with my conjectures, "when you formed the vigilance committee?" "How did you know?"

Life's Turning Point in Wonderful Career

Shortly after John W. Gates-"Bet- | knows you are cleaned out. Tell no You-a-Million" Gates—became head of the Illinois Steel company, and was just coming into recognition as an important figure in finance, he lost almost his entire fortune through speculation in grain on the Chicago board of trade. Though Gates made no mention of his loss to his private secretary until many years later, he made no attempt to keep secret from his wife the details of his reverses.

"Dell, I guess they got me at last," Gates told Mrs. Gates that evening as he unfolded the story of his unfortunate speculation, according to O. A. Owen, who was private secretary to the financial wizard, writing in the Saturday Evening Post.

"You are not whipped," she exhorted. "Your credit and reputation are intact. I am the only one who

How I Cured Myself of Rupture

After suffering thirteen years with double rupture, one very serious, and enduring the torture of trusses, injections, etc., that did not help. I cured myself by a simple method of my own discovery.

My family physician confirmed my cure, advising me to throw my truss away. I have worn no truss since, and am in perfect health today.

I want to help others who now suffer as I did, so if you will write me, I will tell you FREE about the method that cured my ruptures. Also give names of others who are happy after trying this wonderful method. Address
