Science Describes a Design for Living

The role of science in the evolution of mankind is a question on which even scientists disagree.

Some contend that sciences such as psychiatry will one day be able to control our minds and shape our ends. Others disagree. Certainly there is no unanimity of opinion on whether it would be wise for the human race to submit wholly to the ministrations of science.

Few, on the other hand, will disagree with the contention of scientists that objective reasoning and logical thinking must dominate such emotions as hate, and fear, and rage, if civilization is to continue functioning.

One of the chief contributions of science to the evolution of human thinking has been its ability to reduce generalities and half-truths to concrete statements of fact which will stand up under the light of reasoning.

Thus Dr. Ralph Gerard, professor of physiology at the University of Chicago, comes forward with what he terms three "ear-marks" for the identification of "intelligent behavior."

The first ear-mark, says Dr. Gerard, is "the absence of superstition; the emancipation from fear of nature and the here-and-now prejudices of the group."

Second, the scientist contends, intelligent behavior must be marked by "tolerance" in which "the new is neither fatuously accepted nor blindly damned" and in which decisions are reached "after due instruction in and evaluation of the facts, pro and con."

"Third," says Dr. Gerard, "intelligent behavior does not confuse the symbol with the thing. Words themselves are classes and stand only as symbols which are imperfect and shifting representations of that for which they stand. Even facts are abstractions and, like words, may lead via the machinery of the most impeccable logic to bizarre conclusions."

Dr. Gerard contends that "pure science" is the only hope for the future of civilization. He believes that it would be unwise to eliminate the selfish elements of self-preservation from man's make-up, but that it is "surely desirable to control and guide them."

But the scientist refutes, in part, his own contentions when he says that science, through genetics, could improve the human breed—but doesn't know what to breed for; and could train thoughts, motive and actions along new channels—but does not know what to educate for.

Probably most of us would be content just to accept Dr. Gerard's ear-marks of intelligent behavior as a design for present living, and let social evolution take care of the future.

Extending Treatment Is Goal of Medicine

The question of socialized or state-controlled medicine is one which comes up periodically, and with increasing frequency in late years.

No one who has studied the problem denies that many low-income families are not receiving proper medical care today because there is no money to pay for it. The question is how to remedy the situation.

Advocates of state-controlled medicine point to systems in effect in several European countries and contend that the government should assume the burden of providing proper medical care for all the people.

Various methods of socializing medicine have been proposed, all of which have been opposed by the medical profession generally. The American Medical Association has been severely criticized on its stand, but physicians contend that state control of medical service would depreciate the quality of such service, destroy initiative, inhibit research, and would not be suitable to the American temperament.

Various plans of sickness insurance, the profession claims, would be unsatisfactory because of the great burden of administrative costs and probable political interference.

Physicians concede that the cost of medical service has increased tremendously in recent years, principally because it has expanded to a point where 1,250,000 persons—doctors, nurses, pharmacists, dieticians, technicians, and hospital employes—are engaged in the task of healing the sick.

The ideal system in a democratic country, they contend, would be one in which citizens would be encouraged to save toward future medical costs.

But because this objective obviously is impossible of immediate attainment, the American Medical Association has outlined a course of action which it says will solve the problem without recourse to any socialization plan.

The association's board of trustees has passed a resolution calling on all state and county medical societies to determine the need for additional medical service in each county and to report on the best means of supplying that need to those unable to pay doctor bills.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, describes the program as "an attempt to apply on a nation-wide scale the best features of the numerous plans now in effect, utilizing in each county to the fullest extent the resources there available." He believes the plan may evolve into a "comprehensive system of medical care for all the people according to the American plan of medical practice."

Certainly the purposes of the association's program are laudable. Whether it will result in a complete solution of the problem remains to be seen.

If nothing else, the campaign should bring a fuller understanding of the precise extent of the problem to be met, and that's half the battle.

convert the stock into something transferable, so that one stockholder may dispose of his interest to a golf player or hoof shaker, that ought to be done. Chances are the prospective buyers could gather up some shares worth the money. I would trade mine for a good horse.

With further reference to the proposition of getting the Country Club ownership in the hands of those who would use it the most, or of deeding it to the city, one of the officers told me yesterday it would take a hundred per cent vote of the stockholders to do the latter. That would be hard to handle, due to the fact that many of the stockholders have scattered over a wide area since the club was built about ten or twelve years ago. However, if there is any way to than those of towns several times large. When you look out and see how many new homes have been made possible by this organization, however, its growth is easy to understand. If you have a few hundred or a few thousand dollars lying idle, you can invest it in shares of that association, draw four per cent per annum and have the principal guaranteed, up to $5,000, by the federal government. Or you can pay in regular amounts each month if you prefer not to put in a lump sum, getting dividends just the same and gradually building up a large saving. You can withdraw the money when you get ready, with a maximum of thirty days notice. It's not every deal that will pay you four per cent these days and guarantee the face of your investment.

I noticed the total of poll taxes paid in Midland county Monday amounted to 1,375. The total for Howard county the same day had reached 2,840. I could subtract it for you, but the figures ought to tell you all you want to know. You have only six days in which to pay your poll tax. Some of the things you will or may be called on to cast a ballot on this year are: state, district and county officers; city officers, school trustees, wet-dry issue. Maybe there will be something thrown in, but that should give you

Behind The Scenes In Washington

Editor's Note: The opinions expressed in this article are those of Mr. Dutcher, NEA-Reporter-Telegram Washington correspondent, and are not to be construed as expressing the editorial policy of The Reporter-Telegram.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25. — Some ship operators and Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York have been pictured in this article as plotting the U. S. merchant marine as a bedlam of insubordination and insolence to passengers.

The picture might be less blurred if insiders were not aware that it was accompanied by a certain amount of exaggeration.

Even some of the most sympathetic friends of the maritime labor unions, which are roaring denials at the charges, believe there have been at least isolated instances of acts by sailors, stewards and other ship employees that no one can condone. It is far from apparent, however, whether these instances are really isolated or whether they represent a condition so general that it threatens the merchant marine.

Not all ship operators appear anxious to blame the alleged misdeeds of American sailors into the headlines. Some operators are aware that recent inspired publicity is bound to scare more and more passengers off their ships. That fact is much more certain than is the chance that Copeland and the operators will be able to get legislation designed to bring the seamen "under control."

RECENTLY a passenger liner officer, identified only as "Captain X," was down a blast which accused seamen of every imaginable offense and misdemeanor. Thanks to Senator Copeland, his testimony was played up as that of a man whose name was kept secret lest he be assassinated by union seamen. "Captain X" was promised that his testimony would appear in the newspapers.

The captain told friends that the shipping company which employs him didn't want him to go to Washington and that he didn't want his testimony made public because it would hurt the merchant marine. He scoffed at the story that he feared bodily injury.

Whether "Captain X" exaggerated or told the plain simple truth is a question obscured by the unprecedented action of Copeland in keeping his name out of the record on the alleged ground that he feared being killed.

Ordinarily a witness before a Senate committee is identified and the men he accuses have a chance to answer specific charges. In this case the record contains no identification of men accused or their ships. The picture was so obviously twisted for publicity purposes that the question of whether American seamen are being maligned as a group still remains open.

THE only things that impartial outsiders can be sure of are that American sailors in some instances have not become accustomed to their new-found freedom and power as member of militant unions; that some American merchant marine officers are not yet accustomed to dealing with crews which demand the right to present grievances; and that some shipping operators regret the probable passing of exploitation wages, bad living conditions and complete domination of crews.

The process of adjustment appears to be difficult for all concerned.

Highway to Key West Across Sea

The end of Key West's semi-isolation is near, for the steel and concrete highway linking it to Miami, Fla., soon will be completed. Pictured above is the Knife's Key bridge, which extends over seven miles of water. The new highway follows the right of way of the railroad that joined the Florida keys until badly damaged by storms.

Brighter Times for 'Dust Bowl' Foreseen

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Brighter times may be ahead for the erstwhile "dust bowl", in the opinion of George E. Farrell, chief of the western division of the agricultural adjustment administration.

"The drought area is getting smaller every year—it is swinging back," Farrell said.

He estimated there were 25,000,000 acres in the so-called dust bowl area and of that total from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 acres are in "some stage of restoration or are being bucket listed."

"The next two months is an optimistic time in the dust bowl," he said. "But what it will be next June one can only guess now."

Agricultural experts contend that if there is not from two to three feet of subsoil moisture Nov. 1 "there is only one chance in eight to make a crop." This year subsoil conditions were described as "spotted."

In some places where there was "bucket listing" or wide ditches with check dams, moisture is from two to four feet. In some other spots the moisture is only six to eight inches.

Kills on Scarf Pins. Something new and different to hold your scarf in place is an attractive kilty pin. The pin is at the top with plaid silk forming a pleated hilt and a furry sporran hanging in front. If there is a wee bit o' Scotch in your family tree—have the kilts made up in your own plaid.

Lee Riggs, auctioneer, knows tobacco... he explains why experts prefer Luckies 2 to 1

"THIS SEASON," says Mr. Riggs, "I've sold tobacco in Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Tennessee. More than 7,500,000 pounds, I figure, amounting to about $2,000,000 in money."

"Time after time I've seen Lucky Strike get the prettiest tobacco in the auction. That's one reason I've smoked Luckies ever since I've been an auctioneer."

"Another reason I and so many other tobacco auctioneers prefer Luckies is because we have to watch out for our throats." (Luckies are extra-easy on the throat because the "Toasting" process takes out certain irritants found in even the finest tobacco.)

Mr. Riggs goes on to say that Luckies are the top cigarette with people who know tobacco. And he is talking facts.

Sworn records show that, among independent tobacco experts, Luckies have twice as many—yes, twice as many exclusive smokers as have all other cigarettes put together.

Ex-Champ Bounces Back

Jim Braddock, former champion, beats Tommy Farr to a left lead in the tenth and final round of their fight at Madison Square Garden. It was the first start for both men since they were beaten by Joe Louis last summer. A divided decision in his favor made Braddock's comeback a successful one.

Special Squad Checks Accuracy Of Ford Gages

DEARBORN, Mich., Jan. 25.—Forty men carrying little blocks of polished steel visit every manufacturing division of the 1096-acre Ford Motor company plant here every day to keep microscopic fractions of an inch from taking absence with out leave.

They are precision gage inspectors and their work is of prime importance in maintaining the accuracy of Ford manufacture at the high standard demanded by Ford production methods. "By actual count 38,600 gages are required in making 6000 Ford V-8s a day," the head of the precision gage department said after a recent check-up. "And in the manufacture of each car, there are approximately 6350 gage applications, not counting thread gage applications."

"Fourteen of these 6350 gage applications are for measurements of one ten-thousandth of an inch, and more than 200 are for five ten-thousandths of an inch. Those are very close limits—far more precise than any one dreamed possible in large-scale production a few years ago—and it is our job to see that every gage in the plant is kept entirely accurate."

The precision gage inspectors make their rounds equipped with kits of master gages and special Johansson gage blocks. Gages used at every step in production are checked so frequently that those showing the slightest sign of wear are detected and replaced before the error has reached allowable limits.

Conoco Credits Newspaper Ads

Giving due credit for the best year in its history to the heavy use of newspaper advertising, the Continental Oil Company today announced that its 1938 advertising appropriations for newspaper space will be increased by 17 per cent over the 1937 expenditures.

Continental during the coming year will allot to the daily and weekly press about 95 per cent of all that is to be spent on consumer media and will place advertising in approximately 1250 newspapers. The new advertising will continue to deal with Conoco Bronze Gasoline and Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and the action of this lubricant, due to the presence of a product of the research laboratories, in forming an abnormally tough film that stays on metal surfaces even while the motor is idle, instead of draining off.

The new campaign, which has been carefully checked for reader response in selected test areas at Colorado Springs, Colo., and in Richmond, Va., will also stress the position of local Conoco dealers as "mileage merchants" who are independent of the company and must deal with the customer on the basis of their own ability and standing in the community they serve.

Love and Drama Blended in Tale Of Pioneer Days

Take one of the most colorful stories from the pages of American history, the tale of the discovery of oil in Pennsylvania in 1859, woven into a scenario by Oscar Hommerstein II, add a strange and beautiful romance between a hard-fighting, iron-willed farmer and a gay, light-hearted carnival singer, played by Randolph Scott and Irene Dunne; augment the romance with the haunting melodies of a Jerome Kern score; put it all together, under the talented guidance of a great director, Rouben Mamoulian, and you get the new Paramount musical-historical romance, "High, Wide and Handsome," which opens tomorrow at the Yucca Theatre.

Against a pattern made up of the struggle between the farmers who found oil on their land and the railroads who sought to force control of the new commodity from them, the story of the Dunne-Scott romance unfolds with great beauty. Scott and Miss Dunne are married just at the beginning of the oil boom, and the new business draws Scott away from his bride before they can become adjusted to their new life. Finding her marriage meaningless as Scott becomes more and more absorbed in his struggle to hold the rich oil lands

Star Forwards Lead March Of All-America Cage Talent

This is the third of six articles on basketball, America's favorite winter sport.

BY JERRY BRONDFIELD, NEA Service Sports Writer.

In no other team game can individual brilliance stand out as much as it can in basketball. The very nature of the game assures this fact, and as long as it is the highest and quickest scoring of competitive sports, individual brilliance will continue to be spotted easily.

All of which makes the task of picking and All-American basketball team a far bigger—and tougher—job than selecting an all-star football eleven.

There are just too many good players around the country, and basketball is a game where the little schools are able to administer very thorough drillings to the larger and more publicized colleges.

But despite all that, the exploits of a score or more of sharpshooters on the nation's hardwoods, have so definitely stamped themselves as All-American timber that they can't be disregarded.

Eagle-eyed forwards are plentiful this year, but there are a number who are particularly brilliant. Heading the list of these standouts is Hank Luisetti, Stanford's one handed shot maker, and the most widely publicized collegiate player of all time.

Close on his heels are Purdue's field goal fanatics, Jewell Young an amazing southpaw who holds the Big Ten scoring record of 172 points and his running mate Johnny Sines.

Notre Dame loudly sings the praises of Johnny Moir, a six-footer who when he's hot just isn't stoppable. Joe Lapchick, former professional star who now coaches St. John's in New York, says Gerry Bush, his big scoring threat is the greatest collegiate player he has ever seen in action.

Long Island's Irving Bromberg, who leads the Metropolitan point-getters by a huge margin, is known as one of the coolest competitors in the east.

Georgia Tech, with one of the finest—and certainly, the biggest—teams in the south, offers Ed Jones, and 6 foot 4 inch Bill Jordan as two of the deadliest shots to be found anywhere.

John Townsend of Michigan stands over 6 feet tall and weighs 200 pounds, yet he is called the greatest and most graceful cager in Wolverine history.

Lads of smaller schools who are burning up the nets are Chuck Chuckovits of Toledo University, and Nick Frascolla of Wooster College. Chuckovits held the collegiate scoring record of 41 points for a single game until Luisetti's 50 markers against Duquesne erased his effort from the record books.

Gigantic Art Stofen of Stanford, easily the best defensive center on the west coast, is an out-standing choice at the pivot position, but any eastern fan, particularly a Temple follower, will argue that the Owl's Mike Bloom, is the best all-around center in college ranks.

And from Illinois comes the raucous challenge: "What about Pick Dehner?"

Martin Rolek, Minnesota captain, and an All-America choice last year

adults up to forty-five learn as rapidly as adolescent children and even more rapidly than younger children, says Dr. G. O. Clough, director of Dallas College of the Southern Methodist university.

Dr. Clough predicts the important changes in education just ahead are the nursery schools and adult education. Emphasis on the need of nursery schools, he says, was brought about by a scientific study of the pre-school age of child development.

Inerest in adult education, he of adults to learn rapidly but also says, is due not only to the ability to the fundamental change in the age composition of the population because of the declining birth rate.

In 1840 for every 1,000 children under 18 years of age there were 1,000 adults; in 1930 there were 1,000 children for 2,000 adults; and in 1970 there will probably be 1,000 children for 3,000 adults.

Dr. Clough says the need for adult education is emphasized by this change in the age composition of the population and by the rapid development of new machines. He says in the future more adults must be provided opportunities to improve their occupational efficiency and to guard against unemployment in case their specific skills become useless by the invention of new machines. The slowing down of population growth will multiply occupational shifts as well as increase unemployment occasioned by technological change, he says.

According to him an increasing demand for adult education, especially

The best thing a picker of All-America cage teams could do would be to name at least four men for each position, and let it go at that.

a program of vocational education, may be expected as the rate of population growth slows down and technological changes multiply. "It is estimated that $250,000,000 was spent last year for various phases of adult education," Dr. Clough said. He believes the time will come when there will be a tax-supported program of education for adults.

CATHARTICS GOT YOU DOWN?

If you have common constipation, due to lack of bulk in the diet, harsh purgatives don't get at the cause of the trouble. Often they leave you weakened. It is better to eat a natural laxative food. Try regular breakfasts of Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains vitamin B-1, the intestinal tract's great tonic. And All-Bran provides "bulk." It absorbs moisture, softens like a sponge, and forms a mass that aids elimination. Eat this crunchy cereal every day, drink plenty of water and join the "regulars." Made by Kellogg at Battle Creek.

edy of Congress." Barton thinks one remedy would be to cut the size of the House in half, and pay half as many members twice as much salary. Then they could save up for their old age.

To a congressional newcomer like Barton, other changes beside repealing laws occur. For instance: "The whole business of politics has fallen behind the progress of the country in other lines. The long time that elapses between nominations and elections isn't geared to today's life.

"A candidate makes one speech, and says all he has to say. Then he has to go on repeating that, and in the last three or four weeks of a campaign nobody listens." Like His Job Barton, whose reddish hair is already shot with gray, is enthusiastic about being a congressman. "I walk up and down the streets of my district, which includes the theatre, hotel, department store and book center of New York City, as well as streets like Fourth and Eighth avenues. The richest and the poorest people in the country live in this district. I think to myself 'I represent these people,' and I get a great kick out of it.

Alternately Serves As Scholar, Teacher

COMMERCE, Texas. (AP)—Life of Dr. C. V. Hall, head of the federal branch at East Texas State Teachers College since it was organized, was a pursuit of learning and teaching which he learned during seven years as a newspaper publisher.

Like many pioneer Texas educators, Dr. Hall was farm bred, being born in Delta county in 1874. He knew hard manual labor, but between crop-making time and when ever he was free from other labors about the farm, managed to attend the sessions of the rural schools.

When 16, his family moved to the newly organized county of Floyd where he learned further chapters of pioneer life. His first home on the great plains was a dug-out, the principal advantage of which was shelter and warmth in winter.

In 1891 he passed the examination for teachers' certificate and was appointed assistant teacher in the public school of Floyd, at $20 a month. The monotony of school teaching palled and he embarked upon a seven-year career as Editor-owner-publisher-printer of the Hesperian, a weekly newspaper at Floyd, now owned and published by Homer Steen.

Those years were pleasant, Dr. Hall has said, "but not profitable." A desire for more learning prompted him to sell the newspaper and he went to Huntsville to complete academic work preparatory to studying law. Upon completing the course he taught school in Hunt county to obtain money for the legal course.

Since obtaining the law degree at the university in 1910, Dr. Hall has practiced some, taught school some more, and again became a student. He received the B. A. and M. A. degrees from the University of Texas in 1922 and that year came to the East Texas Teachers College as assistant professor of history, there being no government department at that time. When one was organized subsequently, he was made head of it.

Students Agreed On What Occupation They Are to Follow AUSTIN, Texas. — The ideas that college students are uncertain about which profession they are going to follow, and that they may not be enjoying their courses were blasted this week by the Daily Texan, student newspaper at the University of Texas. In a poll over the entire campus, including a cross-section of students in every department of the school, worked out from the principles used by the American Institute of Public Opinion, the students declared in great majorities that their careers have already been chosen, and that they liked school. To the question, asked by interviewers of the Bureau of Student Opinion, "Have you decided what occupation you are going to follow?" Yes, said, 74.5 per cent. No, said, 24.8 per cent. No Opinion, said, 0.9 per cent. And to the question, "Are you generally enjoying the courses you are now taking?" Yes, said, 81.9 per cent. No, said, 16.6 per cent. No Opinion, said, 1.5 per cent. Those dissatisfied in their courses

Attractive Vegetables. To prevent hothouse vegetables or vegetables out of season losing their fresh color during cooking process, add salt and seasonings after the vegetable is cooked. In regular season, cook vegetables in salted water, using about one teaspoon of salt to a quart of water. Ashes Save Lily Bulbs. Use coal ashes to protect your lilies. Oil burner owners will have to use pebbles, but regular ashes from a coal furnace keep moisture from the bulbs. Lily bulbs have been known to melt away in warm wet winters and a covering of ashes prevents this. Tornadoes are the result of the running together of air masses of widely varying temperatures. The North Sea, fifth largest sea in the world, has an average depth of 300 feet.
