25,000 Pounds Onions Produced On One Acre

R. J. Clark, who has been farming on the Millen farm, was in the first of the week shipping onions. Off of one acre of his Prize Takers, he produced 25,000 pounds. This was first year land. His onions will be shipped out by the car load to the wholesale houses up and down the Santa Fe. There was about ten acres in the patch, I believe. When it comes to growing truck by irrigation Mr. Clark is hard to beat. And he is good on the marketing end also.

Will K. K. Smith Eat Turkey or Beans?

Turkey or beans—which? Win and you feast on turkey—lose and you diet on beans.

This is the novel inspiration in the nation-wide sales contest being conducted this month within the great sales organization of the Chevrolet Motor Company.

Winners will be those who deliver the largest percentage of their November quota. In thousands of cities throughout the country, those who have won the right to dine on turkey will sit directly opposite their less fortunate bean-eating brethren.

The contest involves two assistant sales managers, C. E. Dawson and H. S. Klingler, six regional sales managers, 34 zone sales managers, 400 Chevrolet representatives, 8,000 direct and associate dealers and 14,000 salesmen.

Mr. Dawson is directing the Flint, Atlantic Coast and South Eastern regions against the Great Lakes, Middle West and Pacific Coast Regions, led by Mr. Klingler.

In addition to the regional contest, every Chevrolet zone within the regions is matched against another zone and every dealer organization within the zone is matched against another dealer.

The turkey-bean banquets of the dealer organizations will be held early in December, while the assistant sales managers, together with the regional and zone sales managers will eat either turkey or beans at the regional and zone sales managers' convention in Detroit about February 1.

The wife of a Methodist minister in West Virginia has been married three times. Her maiden name was Partridge; her first husband's name was Robin; her second husband, Sparrow and the present, Quail. There are two young Robins, one Sparrow and three Quails in the family. One grandfather was a Swan and the other a Jay, but he's dead now and is a bird of Paradise. They live on Hawk avenue, Eagleville, Canary Islands and the fellow who wrote this is a member of the family, being a big yellow-legged Lyre.—Ex.

Legion Boys Have Big Feed By Civic Club

The American Legionnaires were treated to a big feast by the Civic Club of Muleshoe on Armistice day at the Legion Home. This is an annual event and is always looked forward to by the Legionnaires with great pleasure. It is reminiscent of post war days when the people everywhere were feasting the boys on the fat of the land. "Grand poula" and "pomme de terre" were there in abundance. The only soldier conspicuous for his absence was General "Vin Blanc." While his absence was mourned by the entire party the members and guests were well fortified with the true spirit of the occasion. This was manifested by a rousing speech by our County Judge Wm. G. Kennedy, followed by equally fervent and patriotic speeches by Legionnaires Robt. A. Sone and J. D. Thomas of Farwell.

Following the after dinner speeches each member was called upon to recite his adventure on the day the armistice was signed eight years ago. Fortunately every member present was able to recall some amusing incident of that day. These word pictures brought back vividly to the minds of all those present the harrowing days of the war when the entire world was locked in the throes of that great conflict to determine whether the principles of true democracy should endure or be trampled under the foot of some selfish monarch.

The "Boys" are very grateful indeed for the spirit of true patriotism as manifested by these good ladies in remembering them in this manner. The names of these patriotic ladies are as follows: Mesdames Wm. G. Kennedy, S. T. Lawrence, J. D. Thomas, D. K. Smith, J. E. Aldridge, J. D. Waugh, L. C. Jones, W. A. Milligan, Misses Jewel Haney, Ila Mae Glasscock.

The Legionnaires present or accounted for was as follows: L. C. Jones, Robt. A. Sone, K. K. Smith, Connie Gupton, C. M. Montgomery, Jack Johnson, R. K. Lathy, S. A. Goodson, J. E. Aldridge, R. L. Roubinek, J. D. Thomas. Visitors present were: Hon. Wm. G. Kennedy, and Dr. A. R. Matthews.

Rev. J. E. Payne Is Returned to Muleshoe

We are glad to be able to make this announcement as Brother Payne has been doing a fine work here, we are sure that his return will mean better work than last year. ## Poultry Show At Hereford In Dec.

One thousand catalogues, for the Plains Circuit Poultry Show to be held in Hereford, Texas, December 2-3-4, will be off the press next week and will be hurriedly mailed to interested poultry breeders of this section.

Preparations are being made in Hereford to take care of at least 500 birds, and many believe that the show will equal the Tri-State Poultry show to be held in Amarillo following the one in Hereford. Reports from the seven counties in the Circuit show interest in the event. All of these counties are featuring more and better poultry and the show is expected to greatly stimulate the industry in this section.

An attractive list of cash prizes have been worked out by Superintendent N. C. Vogele, and his corps of directors from the seven counties in the circuit. Special prizes have been arranged for the Grand Champions of the Show, and an attractive list of premiums will be awarded to poultry exhibited by Club members and Vocational Agriculture Students of the Circuit.

The counties represented in this organization are: Curry, Quay, Roosevelt, and DeBaca in New Mexico and Bailey, Deaf Smith and Parmer in Texas. There is a possibility of other counties in this section joining the organization for the present year.

Report Of The School Carnival

The Carnival at the Hi School Bldg., on the evening of Nov. 11th, was indeed a great success. There seemed to be a spirit of co-operation prevailing on the part of all those who planned the Carnival and it seemed that each one concerned was anxious to make it a successful and pleasant affair.

Furthermore there seemed to be a spirit of optimism prevailing among all those who attended. This disposition on the part of the people contributed to the success of the Carnival.

Thirteen booths were open to the public, each seemed to be a satisfactory attraction.

The voting campaign which was closed Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock netted the school $78.05. The booths which were maintained at the Carnival yielded an income of $78.57 this the total income to the school as a result of the Carnival was $156.62 and the proceeds will be invested in a Hi School Library and this addition to the Library will bring it near the required standard.

The P. T. A. takes this opportunity of extending sincere thanks to all those who had a part in making this Carnival a big success.

P. T. A. will meet in regular session Monday night Nov. 22. You are invited to continue this fine spirit of co-operation by attending the regular meetings of the P. T. A. Organization.

Work will begin as soon as the material can be placed on the ground. The big well is located three-fourths of a mile north of town, in the pasture of the Fairview Cattle Co. It will be a $40,000 plant, with eight, six, four and two inch mains. The tank and tower will be located on the vacant lot next to Henington and Hart's. The people of Muleshoe are looking forward to this improvement. Then we can have beautiful yards, trees and homes. It will cut down our fire insurance rates and be a benefit to us all in many ways.

Gulf Production Co. Spudded In Last Wednesday

The Gulf Production Company spudded in their well over in Castro county Wednesday of last week. This well is about 35 miles northeast of Muleshoe. It is thought by people of great experience in the oil fields that this well when completed will open up one of the greatest oil fields in the Panhandle-Plains country. It is east of the Humble well which spudded in last week also. With the Whicker No. 1 to the south of us and the other above mentioned wells places Muleshoe in the center of the greatest wild cat proposition in the state.

The largest Oil Companies in operation in the State of Texas have had representatives here all fall leasing land in all directions.

Farmers in this territory have been offered as high as $4.00 per acre for one-half of their royalties. Surely there must be something to the tests that are going down if the Oil people would pay that amount for one-half of the royalties.

We understand there is to be several other tests made in the very near future, closer to Muleshoe.

Watch the Muleshoe Journal for oil developments in the Muleshoe country. Muleshoe is threatened with the next big oil boom. Let her go.

Fulghum Hatchery Said To Be Fraud

Practically every newspaper coming to our exchange desk has carried the advertisement from the Fulghum Hatchery, of Emory, Texas. Below you will find an extract from one of our East Texas Exchanges. It is the word received from an Emory citizen.

"The Fulghum Hatchery appears to be a fraud and at present is under investigation of the government. There is no hatchery located here. The parties have their mail forwarded to Atlanta, Ga., and so far as I know no one has ever received any chicks."

We would advise people to be careful who they order baby chicks from. We are going to investigate every advertiser that inserts an ad in this paper from now on, before we insert the advertisement.

SUNSPOTS CAUSE BOREALIS PRANKS

Scientist Sees Connection in Magnetic Phenomena.

London.—Connection between the spots on the sun and the displays of the aurora borealis and similar magnetic phenomena of the last few days, was seen by Dr. A. C. Crommelin of the Royal observatory, Greenwich.

He told how it may be possible that great streams of electrons thrown off by the sunspots, which he described as tremendous whirlpools of gas on the sun, may travel through the ether until they come within the magnetic influence of the earth.

Concentration of these electronic streams toward the North and South poles, he said, may give rise to the activity of the aurora and its accompanying phenomena.

"The sun is more active now than it has been since 1922," Doctor Crommelin said. "Its activity usually reaches its maximum in about four and a half years after its minimum activity."

"Sunspots are vast whirlpools of gas on the surface of the sun, some of them 50,000 miles across.

"Magnetic disturbances on the earth now are generally thought to be produced by streams of electrons projected from the surface of the sun, when it is especially active.

"The sunspots may well be the origin of these streams of electric particles which cross 90,000,000 miles of ether between the sun and earth and create magnetic storms on the earth, generally producing at the same time the phenomenon of the aurora borealis.

"These particles are attracted to the magnetic centers at the earth's North and South poles.

"They create, among other things, disturbances on the telegraph wires and cables by producing induced currents which confuse ordinary messages.

"At the same time that sunspots occur, flames of gas extending sometimes to a height of over 200,000 miles may be observed to erupt from the sun's surface."

Monks 8,000 Feet Up Live to Ripe Old Age

Great St. Bernard, French Alps.—Living 8,000 feet above the sea level, the monks here reach the normal span of years of their countrymen in the plains, but their dogs, celebrated for their numerous rescues of snowbound Alpine climbers, very seldom pass the age of eight.

This was the information given by the prior to a French journalist who investigated the truth of a statement that the monks never lived beyond thirty and the dogs five.

"I have been at the abbey for more than 30 years," said the prior, a patriarch with a long white flowing beard, "and you may be sure I did not enter it as a nursing baby."

Those whose hearts were sound ran no risk, he added, but the dogs were less fortunate.

"The poor animals suffer terribly from the snow, which little by little makes them blind. There are only nine at present. Each has a fine kennel, with good straw and excellent food. They are kept in the darkness of the cellars so that their eyes may have some relief. But the snow blindness gets them all."

Austrians Use Sirens to Filibuster in Diet

London.—Members of the opposition in Parliament are envying the ingenuity of the Social Democratic members of the Austrian diet. In Austria, who have evolved a method of filibustering far surpassing the old-fashioned device of delivering long-winded orations. Determined to frustrate the election of Dr. Anton Rintelen as governor of the province, the Social Democrats appeared in parliament armed with storage batteries and phonographs.

They connected the batteries with sirens, whistles, trumpets and other wind instruments and turned on the current. This cramped the parliament's style. Then they set phonographs going, playing different tunes at the same time, whereupon all legislative business was halted. These concerts were kept up for more than a week, keeping a regular schedule from 11 in the morning to 8 in the evening, with short intervals for meals.

Cockfighting Is Being Revived in England

Derby, England.—Cockfighting is being slowly revived in England, notwithstanding the law against it. During the present week a fight was secretly staged in one of the Derbyshire hills. A large crowd witnessed seven battles in which five birds were killed and two maimed. The sweepstakes totaled $2,000 and there was considerable betting.

"Cocker" societies are said to exist in almost every county in England and fights are staged without interference by the police.

CAVERN MONUMENT ATTRACTS VISITORS

One of Uncle Sam's Greatest Scenic Wonders.

Washington.—Carlsbad caverns, New Mexico, one of Uncle Sam's official scenic wonders for the past three years, has gained such popularity since its setting aside as a national monument in October, 1923, and its extensive exploration by the National Geographic society, that it now draws more visitors than some of the great American caves known for many decades.

Highways leading to the national monument have been improved, and during the month of August this year 3,248 persons visited the caves, according to information reaching the National Geographic society's headquarters here.

An Underground Fairyland.

A communication to the society from the late Dr. Willis T. Lee, who conducted its explorations, described the vast underground fairyland.

"About half a mile from the foot of the shaft," wrote Doctor Lee, "we enter the part of the cave reserved as a national monument and soon pass beneath the natural opening. This opening far above us, which seems so awesome at the surface, appears from the floor of the spacious cavern like a small and very inconspicuous aperture. Here we give it scarcely a second thought and pass on to the more impressive features which appear at each turn.

"As we proceed we gradually make our way deeper and deeper into the earth. For nearly a mile, or a distance almost equivalent to that from the White House along Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol, in Washington, we traverse a passage of astonishing dimensions. The walls are very irregular, approaching to within 100 feet of each other in a few places, then receding in lateral chambers many times that width. At the side of the passageway are many alcoves opening into rooms, few of which have been explored.

Polished by Vanished Stream.

"In most places the walls are rough and jagged, where masses of rock, now lying on the floor, have fallen. But in a few places the walls are relatively smooth, having been polished by waters which flowed through this passageway ages ago.

There is relatively little dripstone in this part of the cave. And yet every now and again, as a beam of light is directed into the darkness, one is startled at the sight of a snow-white figure perched on some rock, like the proverbial ghost on a tombstone. These are stalagmites built up by the slow dripping of water charged with carbonate of calcium from the limestone of the roof.

"A little more than a quarter mile beyond the natural opening we enter the spectacular part of Carlsbad cavern. Here we find chambers of unbelievable dimensions. Our way leads ever downward, over enormous jagged blocks of limestone fallen from the roof.

"The chambers in this part of the cave are several hundred feet wide and the vaulted ceiling so far above us that in some places we are not able to see it, much less estimate its height. It seems like gazing upward on a cloudy night. Our feeble lights only magnify the void.

"At the foot of a great heap of rocks 700 feet below the surface at the entrance, three large chambers open off the main hall. The largest may be called Shinav's wigwam in honor of the kingly warrior of Navajo mythology. Because of its size and the glory of its decoration, this great chamber may appropriately be likened to the glorified wigwam of the great wolf god Shinav, who in battle used petrified trees for arrows.

"The third and smallest of the three rooms is subcircular in outline and is 100 feet long by 140 feet wide. The middle room is about three times this size and the first one much larger. No measurements were made of the larger rooms.

Draped in Onyx Curtains.

"The chambers about the wigwam are separated from the master room by curtains and partitions of gleaming onyx formed by deposition of lime carbonate from waters dripping from the roof. The great dome is so high that it is only dimly illuminated by the torches.

"Most of the ceiling is covered with dripstone. Thousands of stalactites hang singly, in doublets, in triplets and in groups. They range from a few inches to lengths representing the entire height of the room, and in diameter from that of a small pencil to masses many feet thick. In some places they hang so thickly that they coalesce at the top, forming splay masses weighing thousands of tons.

"The most spectacular part of the cavern is reserved as the final scene of an eventful trip. Leaving the wigwam, we retrace our steps for a short distance, climb a steep hill, make our way laboriously at snail-like pace through heaps of fallen rock and over ledges where the guide patiently shows the bewildered climber which foot to put forward in order that the next step may be taken safely. After a half hour's struggle we enter the Big Room.

"The Big Room has astounding proportions. Had I been told before entering it that an open space of such great dimensions was to be found underground, I should have doubted my informant's word as frankly as many of my readers probably will doubt mine."

BERLIN WOMAN IS RED-CAP PORTER

Is Fifty-Seven but Finds Job Not Too Hard.

Berlin.—At the Zoological gardens station in Berlin there are 16 red-cap porters on duty. One of them is a woman, Emilie Hase.

In Berlin they call a porter a dienstmann, and as a dienstmann, Emilie is known as No. 37. She wears a red-leather cap with a brass plate and carries a stout strap over her shoulders for bucking the burden to her person. When she walks she shuffles with the dragging gait of the "heavyweight" porter whose feet have been made leaden with burdens borne, and with the lassitude that comes from a service of 20 years in a porter's harness. For Emilie is fifty-seven.

A hard life? An interviewer was consoling with Emilie. No, it was not such a hard life. "I get up to my rank in the early morning to meet the long-distance express trains and I go home by eight o'clock in the evening," she said. But Emilie admitted that times could be better. "Times are bad—so many people carry their own traps. I used to get odd jobs carrying flowers or boxes of candles for birthday presents and the like, but they don't seem to give many presents, nowadays."

More than twenty years ago Emilie delivered newspapers. But Emilie can't climb stairs any more. "I get out of breath too soon, if I am carrying more than a hundredweight."

When asked if she could not find a job of more gentle nature, she flared up. "That's what the other fellows keep hinting to me. They'd like to get rid of me; women's competition, see? No, sir, I'm not going to quit."

Boys Plan Foodless Jaunt of 400 Miles

San Francisco.—With a skull and crossbones insignia on their jersey, a firm conviction that the great majority of persons eat two-thirds more than they should, and implicit trust in their physical and mental fitness, two young men purpose to walk the 400-odd miles between San Francisco and Los Angeles in 14 days, without eating any food.

They are Frank Llevens and Roy S. Sandsberry, both of 184 Broadway, Huntington Park. Their only concession to custom is that they may drink all the water they want.

"We are not sponsored by any person or organization, and there will be no service automobile along to help out," the men declared.

Describing themselves as two physical-culture and diet enthusiasts, Llevens and Sandsberry said their only training for the ordeal was living an outdoor life and eating only natural food.

"We are confident no ill results will follow the undertaking. We have fasted, on occasion, for periods ranging from ten to twenty days, and have benefited thereby."

Sandsberry said that last year he walked a distance of 400 miles in eight days on a comparatively light diet of milk and fruit. In support of their ability to walk this distance without food, they referred to the 577-mile hike of George H. Johnson from Chicago to Bald Knob, Pa., several months ago. Johnson took no food during the journey, they said.

Women's Field of Work With Government Grows

Washington.—A slow but certain widening of the field of women's service in federal government departments is clearly evident, the women's bureau of the Department of Labor reported, but the proportion of men receiving the more attractive government salaries still far exceeds that of women.

The highest yearly salary received by any woman government employee, a survey disclosed, is $8,500 to the civil service commissioner. Only ten out of the thousands of other woman employees receive as much as $5,200 and only 35 receive $3,600 or more.

Measured by the number of women receiving $1,800 or more annually, stenographic and clerical positions offer opportunity for advancement to the larger number of women, but the survey added that, measured by the proportion who reach and exceed this amount, the greater opportunities for women lie in professional and scientific fields.

Roiled by Stamps

Berlin.—New one-cent stamps, bearing the likeness of Frederick the Great, are regarded by Communists as a provocation to the working classes and they demand suppression of the issue.

Finds Eggs Transmit Tuberculosis to Human

Columbus, Ohio.—Just as bovine tuberculosis is transferable to humans through milk and meat, so is tuberculosis transferable to humans through hens' eggs, the second annual Lake Conference on the Eradication of Tuberculosis in Livestock was told.

Proof of the transmission of tuberculosis germs to eggs has been found, Dr. Robert Graham of the University of Illinois department of animal pathology and hygiene, said.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of Day and Evening Schools, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Lesson for November 21

JOSHUA RENEWING THE COVENANT

LESSON TEXT—Josh. 24:1-55. GOLDEN TEXT—Choose you this day whom ye will serve....but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Israelites Make a Promise. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Covenant at Shechem. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Taking a Stand for God. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Value of Covenants.

I. Joshua RENEWING the History of the Nation (vv. 1-13).

This was his farewell address, the last message to the people. He began with Abraham's breaking with his religion, homeland, relatives and friends, at the command of God, and traced their history in Egypt, their deliverance at the hands of Moses and Aaron through the wilderness journey and showed God's providential dealing in the crossing of the Jordan at flood tide, and their marvelous blessings now in the land solely by the favor of God.

II. The People Elect the Lord as Their God (vv. 14-24).

Joshua knew that the people were liable to lapse into idolatry, therefore he reviewed before them the history of God's goodness to them, and appealed to their sober choice as to whether they were going to remain faithful to Him.

1. He appealed to them for a rational consideration and judgment (v. 15).

He placed before them four candidates upon which they could vote according to their relative merits.

- (1) The Lord.
- (2) The gods worshiped by their ancestors in Chaldea.
- (3) The Egyptian gods.
- (4) The gods of the Amorites.

Having placed before them these candidates, he urged them to make a rational choice.

2. His own example in the matter (v. 15).

He followed his appeal with his own example. He told them that his mind was already made up. He associated his household with himself. He knew just where they would stand. His decision was not a hasty one. It had been talked over at home, therefore he voiced the united sentiment of his family.

3. The response of the people (vv. 16-18).

Joshua's earnest appeal, accompanied by his own example had its desired effect. When they calmly considered the claims of the Lord as against the other gods, they saw the overwhelming evidence in favor of the God of their fathers.

They assigned the following reasons for their choice:

- (1) The Lord brought us out of Egypt (v. 17).
- (2) He did great signs in our sight (v. 17).
- (3) He preserved us in all the way we went (v. 17).
- (4) He drove from before us all the people (v. 18).

It would have been very foolish, not to say criminal, after they had experienced all this at His hands to have turned Him down.

4. Joshua reminds them of who God is (v. 19).

Wishing them to think more seriously and deeply upon the matter, Joshua drew a somewhat dark picture of God's attributes which were most unattractive to them.

- (1) He showed them that God is a Holy God.
- (2) That He is a Jealous God. He could not therefore tolerate a rival.
- (3) That He will not forgive.

He did not mean by this that He was an unforgiving God, but that His nature was such that unless they followed Him fully, He would become the means of their destruction.

5. Joshua demands sincerity on their part (vv. 20-23).

He wished to have practical proof of their profession. He no doubt knew full well that some had idols yet in their possession.

6. The people's position (v. 24).

They cannot avoid their determination to serve God and obey His voice.

III. The People Enter into a Solemn Covenant (vv. 25-28).

This is the clinching transaction of the meeting at Shechem. They entered into a formal covenant. Joshua wrote down their agreement in a book where it would remain a permanent witness against them. As a further help, he took a large stone and set it up as a witness. These would serve as barriers against their lapsing again into idolatry.

Lack of Faith

From lack of faith in Thy revelation of Thyself, from contempt of Thy promises, from readiness to think lightly of Thy holy commandments, and of that account of life which we all must render unto Thee, good Lord, deliver us!

God's Jewels

The saints are God's Jewels, highly esteemed by and dear to Him; they are a royal diadem in His hand.—Beescher

Makes Hair Behave But Doesn't SHOW!

There's a way to keep your hair just-so, without any of that objectionable "plastered-down" look. Just use a few drops of Danderine—comb it through hair, or use a Danderine-dampened towel—you'll be amazed at the way your hair then behaves, and its beautiful lustre!

Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Of course, you know what Danderine does to dandruff! Dissolves every bit of it. Puts scalp in the pink of condition. Invigorates hair and hair roots. Why use anything else?

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Dallas Woman Praises Tanlac

Mrs. J. A. Wakefield Ascribes Complete Relief From Bowel Trouble, Nervousness and Loss of Strength to Wonderful Tonic.

"At a time when I was troubled with irregular bowel movements, I became very nervous and was down in weight," writes Mrs. J. A. Wakefield, of 1504 W. 12th St., Dallas, Texas, wife of an electrician for the Dallas Power & Light Co.

"My husband, under even severer conditions of stomach pains, gas, bloating, etc., had been completely relieved by Tanlac. So I, too, took Tanlac, and likewise with splendid results. I gained about 15 lbs., my nerves were strengthened, and now whenever a nervous spell threatens me, I take a bottle of Tanlac, and am all right again."

Just as Mrs. Wakefield says, Tanlac is a most remarkable tonic for building up the system. Tanlac is Nature's own remedy, made from roots, barks and herbs. If you have symptoms of indigestion, gas, nervousness, ask your druggist for Tanlac—today!

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

"JEWEL" work—it sounds interesting, does it not? It surely is all that and more. In fact, it is so fascinating, once begun it, you will be planning a Christmas present for most everyone you know, bejeweled by your very own handwork. There is simply no end to the pretty things one can make for the home with just sealing wax and a few colored glass jewels—and the cost is so trifling compared with the looks. How to do it? Well, here are the directions which follow closely if you want the reward of perfect results. One can pick up such attractively shaped little wooden boxes or picture frames for a few pennies or perhaps the box, say a Chinese dragon as the motif on the box in the picture shows, or a floral patterning, setting jewels in the center of each flower as has been done on the frames in this illustration. Any colors can be used, but the bronze waxes are the prettiest. A frock which glorifies the material of which it is made, is the designer's joy and pride this season. A simple silhouette accomplished through an intricate handling of the fabric especially distinguishes the popular velvet frock, also those of solid colored georgette. To be sure, when trimming is conspicuous for its absence, there must be details to supply its place, and genius is admirably an-

you have been treasuring a cunning box or frame wondering "what to do with it." Here's your chance to transform it into a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." In this jewel work you cover your article roughly with melted sealing wax. This is done by melting one end of the stick of wax over a flame until it is very soft. Then dab it on your box or other article until the whole thing is covered roughly. Right here let there be a word of caution. Never under any circumstances attempt this work on a celluloid foundation. The box must be wood or tin, never celluloid, for it is inflammable and even if not in direct contact with the flame, it catches on fire when too near heat. Most everyone is familiar with the handling of swearing the challenge. Unique necklines is one way the stylist has of adding a note of interest, then there are unusual sleeves, multitudinous tiers on skirts, graceful blousings to the waistline, not to mention profuse shirring which is one of the dressmaker's chief assets this season. Speaking of interesting necklines, the late idea is for huge cape-like collars. Of course these require supple fabric for their styling. The collar or capelet treatment lends itself gracefully to a georgette frock such as the picture shows. In this dainty afternoon dress the designer depends entirely on fabric for effect. The idea of many ruffles or tiers on the skirt obtains in endless versions throughout the mode. The latest is sealing wax and it therefore may not be necessary to remind that a simple little wax taper in a candlestick with a good base to catch the melted wax drippings, or a wee alcohol wick as used in pyrography work is sufficient, no large blaze being required. Remember always, "Safety first." After the box or other article, a tray, a frame or a jewel case perhaps, of wood or tin, but never celluloid, is covered with sealing wax, one begins on the real design. Dab more wax where you want your jewels. Insert them one at a time, by pressing each in its little pile of soft wax. Take your spatula (thin, pliable knife), heat it over the flame and carve the wax around the jewel to form a setting. One can trace or stamp a design on

The State of Texas

To the Sheriff or any Constable of Bailey County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon the Corn Belt Investment Company, a defunct corporation, and the stockholders of said Corn Belt Investment Company, and the heirs and legal representatives of the stockholders of said Corn Belt Investment Company by making publication of this citation once each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Bailey County, Texas, to be holden at the court house thereof in Muleshoe, Texas, on the fourth Monday in December, 1926, the same being the 27th day of December, 1926, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 28 day of October, 1926, in a suit numbered No. 195 on the civil docket of said court, wherein A. K. Phillips is plaintiff and the Corn Belt Investment Company, a defunct corporation, and the stockholders of said Corn Belt Investment Company and the heirs and legal representatives of the stockholders of said Corn Belt Investment Company are defendants; said petition alleging, among other things, that theretofore on the 15th day of October, 1926, the plaintiff was seized and possessed of the northeast quarter (NE 1-4) of Section Thirty (30) in Block X, in W. D. and F. W. Johnson Subdivision in Parmer and Bailey Counties, Texas, containing 160 acres of land, and being a portion of League 588, holding and claiming the said tract of land by fee simple title; that on the date aforesaid defendants entered upon said premises and ejected the plaintiff therefrom and do continue to unlawfully withhold the same from him, to his damage $1,000.00, and he prays for judgment for the title and possession of said land; and the plaintiff further alleges that the Corn Belt Investment Company did on the first day of January, 1917, make, execute and deliver to Joseph H. Hoffman a deed conveying the above mentioned land and that said Hoffman, as part consideration therefor, did execute and deliver to the Corn Belt Investment Company four (4) notes of $250.00, each and one note for $1,000.00, due respectively on or before the first day of January of the years 1919 to 1923, inclusive, all being secured by the vendor's lien on said land; and that thereafter the said Joseph H. Hoffman conveyed said land to Frank J. Prinz who in turn conveyed said land to the plaintiff A. K. Phillips; and that the said Phillips assumed payment of the above mentioned notes. Plaintiff alleges that after he became the owner of said land he purchased the above mentioned notes and that they were by said Corn Belt Investment Company endorsed and transferred to him in blank but no written, acknowledged transfer of said notes and lien was delivered to him, or if delivered that it has been lost or mislaid; and that he afterwards cancelled said notes and executed a release thereof but that a cloud exists on the title to said land by reason of there being no written, acknowledged transfer from the Corn Belt Investment Company to him. He further prays for the cancellation of the apparent lien against said land and for the removal of the cloud from the title thereof.

Herein fail not but have you before said court at its next regular term this writ with your return thereon showing how you have executed the same.

Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Muleshoe, Texas, this the 28 day of October, 1926.

CHAPTER XII—Continued

A confusion of voices. Men jostling and pushing all about me. Shorty's face shoved close to mine; Shorty asking:

"Which way did he go?"

"I'll never tell!" I replied.

More confusion. Some one had struck me on the side of the head. They were forcing back my struggling arms, tying my hands. Some one yelling that my horse was gone. Shorty ordering the cavalry to saddle and start. A voice was crying: "String him up!" Constance speaking, her tones cutting sharply through the babble: "Don't—oh, don't! I did it, I tell you! I did it!" My own voice gasping: "Steady! It will be all right!" Marcus and Buck by very authority clearing a space about me. Marcus crying: "No lynching without a trial in this camp!" Constance, her voice controlled now, saying: "It is not necessary to touch me, gentlemen. I will go with you." A hollow square of guards forcing us on; I, remembering how the killer walked to his death, trying to hold my head as high, to move my legs as firmly.

Through an agitated, hysterical crowd we popped into the door of the courthouse.

In my picture of life, Major Brown had been another dim, suggested bit of background. I knew him as our most reliable assayer, as the first locator in the rush to Hayden hill, as a substantial personage about camp.

As they unbuckled me and led me up to the table at which he sat in judgment, I studied his face. I saw determination there, but no mercy. And my soul within cried out for mercy rather than for such justice as this court was administering.

They had seated Constance in a chair beside the judge's table—odd that I had not looked for her before! That hysterical moment of hers when they laid hands on me by the jail door had changed to a great stillness. I never saw a face and form of the living so quiet and so beautiful. Her hands lay clasped in her lap, but loosely; they did not clutch or move. I had that morning imagined her eyes looking at me across a courtroom with unutterable reproach. They looked on me, indeed; but with no more emotion than is in the blue petal of a flower. Above all, they were not afraid. My little terrors of the flesh vanished.

"Shall we try these prisoners one at a time—the man first?" asked Major Brown. This was a miners' court, and democratic in its forms. I perceived. The judge merely presided.

Constance stirred and spoke. At the major's words, a buzz of debate had started in the rear of the room. But her rich voice with the dropping syllables muted that:

"I presume you are trying this man for letting your prisoner escape? Then I should remain to testify. Because I am wholly responsible."

"That is not true," I said, as firmly as I could. "I did it alone. This lady is trying to save me. I let him go. Because—" There I stopped. How could I, without betraying her, sham-book, I was being sworn. Constance Deane sitting so quiet! I had kissed her once. Should I ask to kiss her again—before—?

I was talking. I must remember not to say that I gave him my hat and horse. They might identify him by my hat and my horse. Shorty—he seemed to be prosecutor—was asking me about that. I must dodge, dodge. I was saying that it was some horse which stood by the jail. And saying it badly. They would never believe me. Marcus was talking. About my previous reputation. A strange court! They let advocates testify. Buck was talking. About my squareness. And:

"We will hear now—from the lady!" said Major Brown. I came conscious, wide awake, every sense preternaturally acute. A drawing of many breaths agitated the room; then, as Constance rose, absolute silence even outside. Her lips parted once or twice; then she was speaking in that low, lovely voice with its dripping pause between syllables—and fluently.

"In the first place, gentlemen, the man who escaped a few minutes ago was my husband—Martin R. Deane. I married him in Providence five years ago."

A shuffle of feet changing position; a composite suspiration of breath like one long sigh.

"I think you will allow that a wife in any circumstances should do what she can to save her husband's life. Of course, you intended to kill him. I did not know until this morning what happened in town last night. Then I learned—I suspected—that you had my husband in jail. I reached the jail while you were—killing—the other man. I felt my husband had no chance. I saw an opportunity. And I released him."

Major Brown sat with his eyes on the cover of Judge Cowan's law book. Without looking up, he asked:

"Mrs. Deane, will you explain how you accomplished this? The jail was guarded, and Gilson had the keys."

"How does a woman make a man do anything? He was alone in front of the jail. The other guards were watching—what you were doing." Here she paused and drew a breath so deep, held it so long, that I thought she would never release it. Then, as though realizing that she must shrink from nothing, she went on. "The hanging, I mean, Mr. Gilson had captured my husband. He didn't know it was my husband. I told him. He is my friend. He did not want to break my heart. I begged him. I entreated him. I made him feel that if you—hanged—my husband, it would kill me. He unlocked the door. My husband got on Mr. Gilson's horse. He has told you differently. But if you believe him, you must believe that he was at least an accomplice in stealing a horse." How quick was her intelligence! I hadn't thought of that! "When he says it was some unknown horse, he is only trying to make my husband's escape more certain—trying to save me and mine. I cannot let him do that. He has done enough. He took his life in his hands like the gallant gentleman he is. But I made him do it. If I had asked—" She stopped there. What she had intended to say, what she had cut off with a little intake in her breath, I could supply. So, I think, could the rest. It was a boast of the power of her sex. "If I had asked any one of you—I with these eyes, I with this appeal of my youth and womanhood and goodness and grief—what would you have done?" Any man in the room must have read that in her silence.

Major Brown cut in with his dry, unemotional tone:

"Mrs. Deane, how much have you had to do with your husband's operations in this camp?"

For the first time her smooth pallor broke into color. As from a sudden, intense flame, a spot burned instantly on either cheek, was instantly gone.

"Allowing that my husband's business here was criminal—which I do not allow—I had nothing whatever to do with that. I have not communicated with him in any way—except as I have told you. When we talked, it was only about coming home with me. I cannot prove this, of course. But you cannot prove the contrary." Again her cheeks grew vivid, melted to pallor. "Gentlemen, I acted this morning on impulse; but if you hang anyone, you should hang me. I did not see the end of what I was doing. I did not know that I was putting in danger a fine, brave, good man, worth ten times—" Her voice broke a little here, but she caught back her sob. "And if you hang him, you must hang me. I do not care to live and realize what I have done. That is all." Firmly, Constance sat down.

Major Brown lifted his face to the crowd, opened his mouth to speak. But Buck, shoving past Marcus, stood before the table.

"Gentlemen," he said without the formality of addressing the court, "before we do any votin' I've got a few brief remarks to make concerning where we are at. This vigilance committee wasn't formed just to give the boys a treat. We was after somethin'.

We wanted to make this here a decent camp. And we took the only way there was. Some day, I suppose, this here imperial state is goin' to come snoopin' round inquirin' into these proceedings. What'll they find? That we cussed in five tarantulas that was better dead anyhow. No kick. Everybody satisfied. We've had that bunch looked up. Goin' on any law that ever was, they all would 'a' got a long term, an' most of 'em the rope. We've saved the state a heap of board. But you've struck a different question with the kid here. He's—he's good. He's helped make this here camp. He was in on the carbonate discovery. He's been workin' on the paper fightin' the bunch of crooks that was runnin' us. He's got nerve. I know. It's all right to go up against a man with a gun in your hand. But I don't see myself tackling a bandit barehanded like he done. I dunno why he turned this here Deane, alias Maxwell, loose. Maybe he's guessin', as maybe you all are, but I don't know. Anyhow, if he did it, I'm bankin' he had a good reason, a d—n—" Buck checked himself here, vainly tried to bite off the profane word he had dropped in the presence of a lady.

No one answered him at first. Then Shorty gave a growl, preliminary to speech.

"Shut up, Shorty!" snapped Buck. If anyone wanted to know why it was called Hayden hill, not Croly's hill, the answer was here. For Shorty did shut up; and Buck continued:

"I ain't goin' to let it happen. Not if I can stop it. The vigilance committee has worked harmoniously so far. If you go on with these proceedings, there's two of us will take objection, strong. Marcus Handy and me, his partners. And I guess there'll be others. Boys, let's call this thing off. Of course, nobody expects to do anything to the lady. While we're at it, I don't see any sense in chasing that husband of hers—unless the boys have rounded him up already. We've got five out of six of the men we wanted. That's doin' da—mighty well." Buck paused as though searching his vocabulary for the proper parliamentary expression before he finished: "I make that in the form of a motion."

"You make what in the form of a motion?" inquired Major Brown dryly.

"All them things," vaguely responded Buck.

It was a challenge. Buck's very physical attitude suggested that. Although he had finished speaking, he did not move away from before the table but stood there straight and poised, facing the crowd. From the belt round the waist of his store clothes hung his holstered 45-caliber revolver. His hand rested lightly, suggestively, on the butt. Voices broke out; some of them—but a minority, my hopes told me—angry, arguing, protesting.

Major Brown rapped the room to order.

"All in favor of hanging Robert Gilson for betraying the vigilance committee, say 'aye.'"

Silence.

"The 'noes' have it," announced Major Brown. "Unless there is a motion to the contrary, this court stands indefinitely adjourned."

CHAPTER XIII

Marcus Handy and Buck, standing by to the end, kept us in Judge Cowan's courtroom until the vigilance committee had evaporated, leaving us alone.

A rattle of drums sounded without; men were running and clamoring. A shiver which jerked her shoulders against the back of her chair ran over the form of Constance. The ready, understanding Buck was first to see what this meant.

"Don't worry, Mrs. Deane," he said, "that ain't him. That's the crooks being run out of town!"

This time, fascination drew us all to the window, even Constance. There was no emotion left in me now except a vague curiosity; my own languor of mind and soul seemed to heighten my perceptions; and from my night and day with tragedy I carry away no pictures so vivid as that of the procession which emerged from the Pioneer corral.

"Rogue's march!" commented Marcus briefly. "Curtain's up on the last act of our show!" And into view marched the prisoners of the Pioneer corral. Conway's stubble of beard had grown in the night. His cheeks were as dark as a chimney sweep's; but he faced his disgrace with a calm and humorous smile. The gambler who had lost his nerve and got religion walked with his head down. Among the dirty and depraved camp followers of Pearl street were those who cringed as they came under the eyes of our outraged city, and those who still managed in the pose of head and shoulders to express defiance. Collier, the lawyer, walked straight, glaring right and left, his eyes made terrible, insane, with suppressed anger. A little, indrawn "Oh!" from Constance signaled the passage of Red Nell. The powder on her cheeks had gathered dust during the night; the spots of rouge were no longer bright carmine, but a dull and dirty Indian red. Her frizzes fell in wisps over her forehead. But Red Nell raged no longer. She walked with her eyes down, her hands clasped before her, a ghastly and grotesque caricature of a maiden martyr led to the stake. Whatever womanly dignity remained to her had at the end of all her indignities come to the surface.

Chris McGrath was coming; among his separate entities, this one was new. I saw that in the first flash, before my eye began to pick up details. His shoulders, once so erectly confident in their carriage, sagged as though he had suddenly grown old.

His steps stumbled. His head was bowed. It did not imply sullenness, this averted gaze. Rather was it the attitude of a broken man who cannot bear to look upon disgrace. I understood the policy of self-preservation which Marcus Handy had been applying to this enemy of his. To expel the old, self-reliant Chris McGrath from camp was equivalent to prolonging trouble. He was bound to come back when opportunity served, and to shoot. But his night of mental horrors in the Pioneer corral, the sight of the lynching, the very psychological weight of public opinion, had served to break his spirit. I remember him as I saw him first when he stopped the lynching in the Black Jack—a dominant, heroic figure, dowered with a compelling masculine charm—and found it in my heart to pity him. After all, he was only misplaced. His virtues of courage, decision, generosity to his friends, rough personal good fellowship; his faults of rampant individuality and muddled moral distinctions—they belonged to the old era of gun law. Sudden, offhand Cottonwood had entrusted this anachronism with enforcing that book law to which our camp and all the West must necessarily come in the end. His night of horror and disgrace and spiritual loneliness may have given him black understanding, taught him that he had been fighting the current of the human spirit. That, possibly, explained the change in him. He was not so much terrified as overwhelmed. At any rate, Cottonwood never heard from him again. Years later, I picked up the remaining threads. He had become a drifter from camp to camp, a protector of gamblers, a dangerous drunkard, until a shot in a brawl at Miles City finished his career. He passed like the grizzly; crushed by progress.

Chris McGrath marched between solid lines of crowd, his bent head now visible, now concealed. A phalanx of vigilante guards followed; the crowd closed in behind; the Rogue's march stopped, to be succeeded by the beat of the drums; the deposed king of Cottonwood had passed from his kingdom.

"Where are you sending her?" asked Constance.

"Wagon's waiting to take 'em over the range to Pleasant's, all comfortable, and drop 'em," replied Marcus.

"Will she—" began Constance, and stopped. For a horseman loped down the street, pulled up at the door of the courthouse, threw his bridle over a lathered head, strode within. The hands of Constance went together; I, who had thought there was no emotion left in me, found my breath coming and going in great sighs.

"Boss," began the messenger—then saw Constance and me, paused.

"All right," said Marcus, "go ahead. These people are safe—they're acquitted."

"Well, we've got no line on where he went," said the horseman. "Trails is too d—n trampled. He started down the Ludlow pass road all right. After that, we loses him. What we need's a regular tracker. Wasn't one in the whole d—n outfit."

"Let's see," mused Marcus. "Boys' pretty tired, I suppose?"

"Dead!" said the messenger. "Look at me. Up all night. And done a hard day's work yesterday. Horses too."

"All right," announced Marcus. "They're ordered to come in and put up their horses." He paused. "I've already taken other measures to have our man followed—tell 'em that."

"Best news I've heard today!" commented the messenger as, with a haste betraying fear lest Marcus should change his mind, he shot through the door, remounted, loped away.

"Another public embarrassment removed from the path of progress, as Henry Ward Beecher would say," remarked Marcus. "If the boys had brought him in, I don't believe this camp would have wanted to hang him—now. Buck, guess our job's done."

Buck and I were looking not at him, however, but at Constance. Across her pallor a flush was mounting, as when the rose-dawn touches the snows of the Divide; in her deep-blue eyes a light was shining as when the sunrise strikes on mountain lakes. She held out hands—the right to Buck, the left to Marcus—who took them sheepishly. Buck, indeed, started the pumphandle motion of a handshake; then, as he perceived that her gesture meant more than that, retained her hand; and a blush inflamed his tanned brow. So she stood for a moment, looking from one to the other.

"I have had friends," she said. "And perhaps you wouldn't like to have me call you friends. But I never dreamed that I should ever ask any friend to do for me what you two wonderful men have done today. I can't thank you. It would be ridiculous to try. But if you ever want anything I can do or can't do—let me—" She broke off; her eyes became lakes indeed; she released their hands.

"It's all right—twasn't nothing!" Buck managed to say.

"I'd do it again for you and more, Mrs. Deane," began the reader Marcus. "You're—" but the lakes were overflowing. Buck first, then Marcus, backed out of the room.

"I want to cry, Robert," said Constance. "Don't—try—to—comfort—me—please. Just watch—to see if anyone's coming—"

So I stood for a long time, as it seemed to me, and studied Main street as it settled down to normal.

The voice of Constance, sweet with passing tears, spoke behind me.

"I think I'd better go home now," she said.

"I'm going with you," I replied.

She hesitated, as though restrained by some little, instinctive fear of the proprieties; then, as realizing how ridiculous that was in the face of our situation, smiled—firmly now—and replied:

"Do—I want, of course, to tell you everything."

So we walked together into Main street. Naturally we attracted attention. I could feel with the back of my head that the crowd about Doc Evans' window had turned from that odd sensation to this new one, had stared and pointed. Now and then a head craned from a window, or I heard a rush of feet at a doorway. Eyes ahead, we walked in silence up the familiar path—should I ever tread it again?—to Mrs. Barnaby's.

Constance was not entirely reassured that Deane had escaped. I must needs give her comfort on that. Once I asked: "What you said before they arrested me—you mean that, Constance?" She answered: "I meant it then. I mean it now. I mean it forever!" But we did not then kiss or clasp hands, as unfettered lovers may after such words; only sat for a time silent and looked at each other.

A spurt of sleep or what resembled sleep; when I came out of it, feverishly awake, she was talking:

"—my own fault, my very own in the beginning, Robert. A little of it sin—if you want to call it that. The rest just folly. Perverse folly. I was only seventeen when I eloped with him from Miss Gorham's academy at Providence. That was the beginning. I shan't lay that to anyone else. But I will tell you how it happened:

"We lived at Warwick—do you know it? A little old Rhode Island town. The family had been there forever. My mother was younger than my father. She died when I was six years old. I had no brothers or sisters.

"My father married again—a beautiful woman, a brilliant woman, but unbalanced. Perhaps insane. I wouldn't have had the charity to make that excuse for her once. I hated her. But I think, now, I shall never hate anyone else so long as I live. She was cruel to me—insanely cruel—because she was jealous. I have been beaten, terribly beaten, in my day, Robert. But more than that. The trick of putting me in the wrong. . . . Perhaps that was why father sent me away to school—to Miss Gorham's in Providence. From the time I was seven until I was seventeen—just school. At first I came home for the holidays. But finally she spoiled even that. She had a terrible hold on father. I can understand that, too. She was a beautiful creature.

Inkfish That Blinds Enemies With Light

A cuttlefish that confounds its enemies with light instead of darkness is the interesting creature described by Prof. E. Newton Harvey, student of what is popularly known as "cold light," who devoted eight months to research in the marine laboratories of Naples and Messina, Italy.

Ordinary squid or inkfish that live near the surface escape their pursuers by throwing out a cloud of black fluid, as a kind of submarine smoke screen, Professor Harvey explained. This abysmal form, which lives at depths of probably ten thousand feet, where no light ever penetrates, has only a rudimentary ink sac, which instead of the usual inky sepia contains a luminous substance. When disturbed it discharges a jet of this luminous material and thus blinds its enemy with light instead of darkness. Professor Harvey is of the opinion that this deep-sea squid is a descendant of surface-living animals, but that as it evolved in darkness it found that this reversal of its ancestral mode of defense was useful in insuring its survival.

In the manufacture of jewelry the usual alloy for gold is copper, but in the making of white gold nickel is used. This causes the white color, and, at the same time, makes the gold harder and more brittle. The price varies, according to the amount of the alloy used.

ing and humiliating her, say why I did it? What excuse could I possibly invent? I clutched at a weak one. "Because I didn't want to see him hanged. I brought him in," I added. "I caught him. And I had a right to let him go."

Major Brown struck the table with his gavel.

"Prisoner, you are getting ahead of the proceedings," he said. "Gentlemen, under the circumstances hadn't we better let this lady stay?" There was silence. He paused a moment. "Very well, if no one objects. Clerk, book the lady." He did not look at Constance, and neither did the clerk, as she answered to the formal inquiries:

"Constance Deane—Mrs. Martin Rosister Deane—of Providence, Rhode Island."

I wonder why the Hubbub when cotton is actually selling above 11c and we have more cotton in Texas than ever before.
