BAILEY COUNTY A C A HOST TO DISTRICT

The Bailey County A. C. A. will be host to a District meeting at which four other counties will be represented. The visiting counties will be Cochran, Lamb, Castro and Parmer. The meeting is to be held at the court house March 7.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the 1939 Texas Handbook and Farm Show.

Those expected to attend will be the County Committee, Secretary, Administrative Assistant and one clerk from each of the counties.

TECH COLLEGE WILL HAVE AN AUDITION ROOM

Lubbock, Feb. 26.—An audition room for class work and ultimate broadcasting is being equipped at Texas Technological college. The room will be used as a laboratory in radio speaking, a course in the study and practice of composing radio talks, plays, and programs, offered in the department of speech.

Lower floor of a small studio building at the Broadway entrance to the campus is being remodeled for temporary use. Better facilities will be available "in due course," reported Clifford B. Jones said.

ONE-ACT PLAY TO BE "GOOD MEDICINE"

"Good Medicine," is the name of the one-act play students of Muleshoe High school will present at the Bailey County Interscholastic League meeting to be held in the near future.

The cast will consist of the doctor, played by Gerald Pribith; Betty, Hattie Ray Griffiths; the wife by Jo Beth Solomon.

Alternates are Virginia Whittington, Miss Ina Renfrow and Hubert Clark.

The play is being directed by Prof. William Crow and the actors and actresses will compete in the event with Bula school.

PLANTING TREES FOR WINDBREAKS AND SHELTER-BELT PURPOSES IS URGED FOR BAILEY CO. FARMERS

In a very recent conference of AAA and Extension employees, planting specifications for Practice No. 28 (Forest Tree Planting) of the Soil-Building Practices for 1940 AAA program were outlined. This new practice provides for the planting of forest trees and stipulates that a farm may earn an additional $750 per acre for forest trees planted on a farm for windbreaks or shelter-belt purposes, which is a practice made to order for Bailey county. No farm will be paid for more than four acres or ($3000) for Practice No. 28 if the farm has already earned the regular soil-building payment of 55 cents per acre on the soil-conserving acres by qualifying for some of the other practices.

However, if you have not earned the regular 55 cents per acre on the soil-conserving acres, you may be paid for more than four acres.

Some of the recommended trees that may be used to qualify for this practice are: Chinese elm, black walnut, desert willow, salt cedar, ash, honey locust, osage orange, western yellow pine (Scotch pine).

According to state AAA officials there must be at least 350 living trees per acre at the time of compliance; therefore it is suggested that you plant from 450 to 500 trees in order that you may have the specified number living at the time of compliance. It is recommended that you plant these trees in 1939 if, spacing and not less than 4 rows wide. In the event that there is less than 350 trees per acre living at the time of compliance, you will be paid proportionately.

Experiment stations throughout the U. S. have experimented extensively with windbreaks, and it is learned from their reports that with proper windbreaks, a home fuel saving of from 25 to 30 per cent was made. It is further observed that cattle with a bush windbreak have gained more flesh than those in sheds or barns, although the feed and other conditions were the same. It is further observed from the experiment records that an average of $14.00 per acre may be saved on building repairs with proper windbreaks.

The Forest Service recommends that trees be planted by March 15. Trees may be obtained at Lubbock or Plainview and possibly other neighboring towns at a nominal price. For further information call by the County Agent's office or the Home Demonstration Agency's office.

Don't miss this golden opportunity to get your windbreak. Its value need not be explained further, according to J. C. Smith, of the local AAA office.

Texas Is Sixth In Placing Federal Road Contracts

The Public Roads Administration in Washington has released figures giving the status of all states in placing Federal projects under contract, as of December 31, 1939.

In contracting projects on the Regular Federal Aid Program, Texas is sixth in the nation, with only 13 per cent under contract as compared to 37 per cent for all states.

On the Secondary Federal Aid Program, Texas is thirteenth, with 22 per cent under contract. The nation as a whole has 49 per cent under contract.

On the Grade Crossing Federal Aid program, Texas is fifth, with 33 per cent under contract as compared to 61 per cent for all states.

When it is considered that all states to a majority of the lotments are much smaller than Texas, and the same time allowed to place projects under contract, it appears that the Texas Highway Department is maintaining its reputation as one of the best in the nation.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS TO START VOLLEY BALL

Beginning the first of next week girls of Muleshoe High school will begin practicing on volley ball, under the coaching of Mrs. Virginia Brummett.

Several of the girls who have been playing on the basketball team this year will take part in volley ball and it is hoped by the time the Bailey County Interscholastic League meeting is held a good team will be in order, to compete for county honors.

Be proud of your home town.

Cold Storage Locker Meet Is Called For March 2nd

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the proposed Cold Storage Locker project to be located in Muleshoe is called for Saturday afternoon, March 2nd, at the court house beginning at 2:00 o'clock, to which all subscribers are urged attendance, according to H. E. Musson, president of the Board.

Mr. Musson explains that much of the stock has been subscribed and arrangements have been made for a loan to finish the organization, but that under the law such stock must mostly be paid in before the loan can be obtained. Several subscribers have already paid their subscriptions, but more must do so promptly before organization can be completed.

Directors have, during the past week been seeing subscribers regarding such payments, and it is stated that unless these are made promptly, the project may have to be dropped.

SENIORS WILL LEAVE BLOCK IN SIDEWALK

Members of the Senior Class of Muleshoe High school voted on "What to Leave the School," last week.

After much consideration and serious thinking the class decided to make two blocks of sidewalk to start a walk in front of the high school building.

"Seniors 40" will be written in the blocks and will also have each seniors signature.

Members of the present class are hoping that each year to come, the Seniors will add a block of sidewalk and a complete walk is built.

C. C. ELMORE PASSES AWAY

C. C. Elmore 84, resident of Bailey county for several years, died at the home of his son in the Cityblock community Wednesday afternoon of last week, following a prolonged illness.

Funeral services for the deceased were conducted in Sudan Thursday afternoon of last week and burial made at the Sudan cemetery.

Mr. Elmore was well known by a large number of citizens in and around Muleshoe.

L. E. Smith In Race For Commissioner Precinct Three

Following is the statement to the Journal, by L. E. Smith, who this week makes his formal announcement for the office of Commissioner Precinct Three, Bailey County: "To the Voters of Precinct Three I am going to run this race feeling that I can serve you as well as any of my opponents. I own one hundred and sixty acres of land, (that is the Loan Company and I do) and I think a man who helps to handle the people's money ought to be a real estate owner. I have lived in precinct three for seven years. I bought in '29 and moved here seven years ago.

"I am sure my qualifications are sufficient to handle the office in a first class manner. I have kept books in a bank under the Boston system which is much harder than the new system. Also I spent five years as collector for a bank and appraiser of property that people wanted to get a loan on. My decision was acted upon by the banker. I have also been in a grocery business but over the people's heads. I realize that highway work is an important part of the commissioner's task.

"If elected, I will give you a square deal in everything that is entrusted to me. I will stand for good roads at the lowest possible cost. I realize that highway work is an important part of the commissioner's task.

I know that this office should be guarded and if I am your commissioner, I will see that there is nothing put over the people's heads. I will promise the voters that the books will be open for your inspection at all times. If it is a good place pass it on, and if it is a bad place don't burden anyone with it.

"Some of the leading citizens asked me to run for commissioner and I make this declaration after mature consideration and consultation with many of the leading citizens of this precinct.

"Now, I am not going to draw out of this race for my good friends got me to run and they told me they were behind me and I am going to be in the race to the last." L. E. SMITH.

LOCAL GIRLS VICTORY DISTRICT MEET AT MEADOW

Friday of this week the Muleshoe High School girls basketball team will motor to Meadow to participate in the District Basketball tournament, to continue throughout Friday and Saturday.

The local team's first game is scheduled to be played Friday morning, beginning at 10:00 o'clock with the girls' team of Littlefield High school.

The local girls won first place in the Bailey county basketball tournament, making them eligible to enter this district meet.

ECKLER-DAVIS RITES HELD SUNDAY

Miss Ruth Ecker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Eckler of Hamilton, and Mr. Gwynn Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Davis of Flat Top, exchanged wedding vows Sunday afternoon in the home of Rev. H. E. East, pastor of the First Baptist church, read the single ring ceremony, which was witnessed by close friends and relatives.

Miss Betty Merl Routh played the wedding music. The couple's only attendants were Miss Ethlyn Allen, of Kermit, and Mr. Leslie Shelburne.

The bride wore a navy triple-sheer dress with black accessories. Her flowers were a locket fastened of white carnations.

Mrs. Davis is a graduate of Hays High School and attended T. S. C. W. Denton, and Texas Tech.

Highway Projects On Plains Are Planned

Five South Plains projects were included in the state asphalt program for the current year, according to an announcement by the state highway department at Austin.

They are: Bailey, seal coat on highway 84 from Muleshoe to Parmer county line.

Cochran, asphalt surfacing on highway 290 from New Mexico line to five miles west of Morton.

Castro, asphalt surfacing on highway 86 from Dimmitt east four miles.

Cochley, asphalt surfacing on highway 290 from Cochran county line to Leveland.

Lamb, asphalt surfacing on highway 51 from Springlake to Castro county line; reshaaping base and asphalt surfacing on highway 51 from 9 1/2 miles south of Springlake to Littlefield.

In announcing approval of the Asphalt Program the Commission stated that it was the last of the annual programs to be approved and that all available funds for 1940 had been allotted.

The programs that have been approved by the Commission during the past few months are the regular 1941 Aid program, the Annual State Wide Construction and Betterment Program, and the Annual Asphalt program. The estimated cost of these programs, together with the 1941 Secondary and Grade crossing programs, add up to the very respectable sum of $28,000,000.

The Commission further said that they especially want these facts called to the attention of City, County and Chamber of Commerce Officials, who very properly appear before the Commission from time to time in the interest of proposed designations or proposed construction projects, in order to save the time and expense in journeying to Austin seeking projects when no funds will be available for additional projects until next year.

14,000 ARRESTS MADE FOR OVERLOADED TRUCKS

Austin, Feb. 27.—Fourteen hundred arrests were made during January as Texas truck operators paid $22,740.10 in overload fines, Lynn B. Shaw general manager of the Texas Motor Transportation association has reported.

The average fine was a little more than $16.00. Seventy-three cases are pending.

The worst day of the month for the truckers was January 12th when 100 arrests were made.

1939 Study Club Give A Program About Geo. Washington

Members of the 1939 Study club met at the beautiful country home of Mrs. A. W. Copley with Mrs. Mills Barfield co-hosts Thursday evening of last week with Mrs. Ray Griffiths, president, presiding in her usual gracious manner.

Roll call was answered by each member giving some interesting historic fact or instance in George Washington's life.

The subject of the evenings program was "George Washington." A very interesting biography of his life had been arranged by Miss Lillie Gentry and as she was not present the topic was read by Mrs. J. Clyde Taylor.

An unusually interesting and entertaining topic on "George Washington as Commanding Chief of the American Revolutionary Army, was efficiently given by Mrs. C. D. Gupton.

The third topic of the program was to have been, "George Washington as President of the United States and His Contributions to the Government," by Mrs. John Farley, but she was not present.

At the close of the delicious refreshments' program, consisting of cherry pie, topped with whipped cream, strawberry sandwiches, pie, hot butters, hot sandwiches, pies, potato chips and were served. Plate favors were given. The George Washington problems.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Lud Taylor with Mrs. Earl Hicks co-hostess at which time a program on the neighboring state of New Mexico will be given. Roll call will be answered with a current event.

Thirty-five hundred girls in a London clothing factory are making uniforms for soldiers.

HIGH SCHOOL BOY TO GET $4000 RADIO SCHOLARSHIP

RCA engineers televising a studio show. (Insert) David Sarnoff, RCA President, encourages talent.

The outstanding radio scientist of the future will be given a flying start toward his goal through the award of a $4000 college scholarship next fall, according to a plan announced today by David Sarnoff, President of the Radio Corporation of America.

Realizing that tomorrow's radio engineering talent is to be found among the boys who are now in the senior classes of high schools, Mr. Sarnoff intends to find the student who is best fitted by brains and natural ability to succeed in a scientific career. To this end, a competition is being offered this week through the Principals of 17,000 high schools throughout the United States to students who are qualified by high scholastic standings.

Ten preliminary winners will be selected on the basis of their ratings in this examination. All of them will be brought to New York

BIRDS BENEFICIAL TO FARM CROPS

Value of Food Habits Are Often Misjudged.

Some of the birds that save millions in crops each year are still misjudged by the farmer. The beautiful Baltimore oriole has been accused of damaging grapes and garden peas. But studies show that the oriole's food habits are largely beneficial. Caterpillars are its favorite fare, but it also eats quantities of plant and bark lice, ants, wasps, grasshoppers, spiders and weevils.

Farmers who tear swallows' nests from barn eaves are turning out their best friends. Swallows consume vast numbers of harmful flying insects and young birds in the nest often eat more insects than their parents.

Woodpeckers are often suspected of damaging trees by their drillings. Each hole drilled means that the bird has located the larva of a destructive wood-boring insect. Woodpeckers are among the most valuable forest conservationists and with their heavy bills they get insects that other birds can not get.

Fruit raisers often look on robins as enemies because of the robin's appetite for cherries, yet robins consume insects harmful to fruit crops throughout the year, and only during June and July do they eat cultivated fruit to any extent. One good way to keep robins out of the orchards is to plant mulberry trees near-by. Mulberries ripen at the same time as cherries and the birds prefer them to other fruits.

Rob and Sara swept past them. "Hey!" Joe called, "somebody ought to sit at our table and watch the coats!" Bob and Sara obligingly danced off the floor.

"What a joint!" Joe exclaimed.

"What the whole floor, bud," a voice snarled. It did not ask; it stated; and Joe blinked.

"What a joint!"—out of earshot. Jackie giggled. "Oh, Joe—your face."

"Yeah—I thought he was going to slug me."

"Maybe we're too conspicuous in our evening clothes."

"You're so well-dressed, at his immaculate self. 'I'd give these away in a second for a nice pair of greasy overalls. I'd feel safer.'"

"And Bob and Sara, too!" Jackie laughed and crept closer. "But really, Joe," sobriety, "these gimcracks I'm wearing are the only things left from the robbery last week."

"That was some job," said Joe.

"Getting into a fortress of a house like yours and grabbing everything without leaving a trace."

"We've been stepping over police and detectives ever since—but all they can give is a bad guess." Jackie shrugged shortly. "There were some pieces we prayed we'd never lose—or forget. Dad's college photos—pins—" she broke off. "Oh, really, Joe?"

"They hung themselves into a nimble step when a burly figure shouldered through to the wall. 'Break, bud?'"

"Again it was not a question on my demand."

Joe spluttered. "I—no—"

"That is, if the lady don't mind?'"

"I don't mind," she said briefly. "In fact, I might enjoy it."

"The lady swelled. He was big and dapper. His derby was pushed far back on his head and Jackie saw thick red waves of hair.

"Carrot top?" she asked, smiling.

"Who, me? Oh, sure, kid. That's why they called me Red Jim!"

Her eyes flamed wide. "So you're Red Jim!"

"That's me, baby. Red's my favorite color. I go for red-striped ties. I like red." He expanded. A ruby red ring glittered on his finger. "Red's my lucky color, too. Some-time I'm gonna get me a rug like it and I can remind up some steps the same color exactly as my hair!"

"Impossible!" she breathed.

"Look!" he drew a triangular plush swatch out of his wallet. It matched his hair perfectly.

"Oh, yes!" she smiled bewitchingly.

The music blared to an ear-splitting crescendo and ceased.

"Here you are, boy-friend," said Red Jim patronizingly to Joe. "See you later."

Jim was white with rage. "The cocky rat!" he snapped.

Sara shrieked. "Red Jim!"

"Ye proud owner," explained Jackie. "Excuse me while I polish up for the maiden's next encounter with the gent." She sped off with a gasp.

A squad of uniformed policemen had surrounded Jim.

"We want you for the Macrae robbery. Someone's voice was ice.

"Macrae? Say, that's a big joke on you. Last Wednesday night I was right here till morning. I can prove it, see?"

"Alibi Jim, as usual. But this time you're pickled."

"Says who?"

"Says Miss Jacqueline Macrae herself!"

Jackie appeared in the doorway, very quiet and white.

"Slip! Job. No fingerprints. No clues. No nothing. A clean get-away, fella. But just a little too fond of red for your health!"

"I don't getcher."

Jackie spoke. "You said you saw a stair runner exactly the same shade of red as your hair. That was in my house. The runner was jacked down Wednesday morning and removed the next day. A tiny corner of it was missing. The house was robbed Wednesday night. The rug was taken away the following morning."

She stared intently at his red hair.

"You see," she said, "we couldn't stand the color."

Bull's Pedigree, Looks, Poor Guides for Buyer

Dairymen who pick a bull only by his pedigree and appearance pick a good bull only one time out of three, but those who use proved sire records as a basis for selecting herd sires choose a good bull three times out of four.

J. F. Kendrick of the United States bureau of dairy industry. These conclusions are based upon numerous records of breeding activities in dairy herd-improvement associations.

An example of a dairyman who depended only on pedigree and looks is cited by Dr. Kendrick. In 1925 the cows in his herd were averaging 320 pounds of butterfat a year. A new bull was purchased. Four years later the average herd production had been boosted to 354 pounds of fat for each cow. Another sire was added to the herd chosen by the same method as the first. At the end of another four years the average herd production had dropped to 316 pounds. A third bull has not boosted the production average. Without proved sire records as a guide this dairyman picked only one good bull out of three.

Hog Mixture

A well-balanced grain ration and good quality pasture will bring pigs through in fine condition after weaning. A grain mixture of 80 pounds corn, 80 pounds oats, 12 pounds tankage, 10 pounds soybean oil meal, 8 pounds cottonseed meal, 6 pounds alfalfa meal, and 4 pounds of minerals is recommended. The amount of oats in the mixture is gradually reduced as the pigs get older and replaced with corn until all oats have been removed. The alfalfa meal can be left out if the pigs have good legume pasture.

Getting the pigs started right and keeping them growing is the formula for success in hog raising.

Farm Purchases

Last year the federal land banks and the land bank commissioner made more than 6,000 loans to finance the purchase of farms. Loans averaged $3,000 to $4,000 each. They are limited to $7,500 and can be as high as three-fourths of the value of the property. Borrowers are required to have experience, equipment and sufficient savings to finance at least one-fourth of the purchase.

Isolate New Animals

New farm animals should not be allowed to mingle with the home stock, but should be isolated for several weeks, authorities of the American Foundation for Animal Health declare. This will allow time for dormant diseases to manifest themselves and will prevent the spread of such diseases to other stock on the farm.

Manure Important

Barnyard manure should be well cared for. Use plenty of straw to soak up the liquid part and protect the pile from the weather and heavy drainage. Of the 10 pounds of nitrogen contained in a ton of average farm manure, about one-half is in the liquid, and is in such chemical combination that it is as easily lost by exposure to the air, with freezing or drying, as free ammonia, would be. Neglecting care of manure is a common farm error.

A Dash of Red

By HELEN ALPERT
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

JOE had thought it would be exciting to show them Red Jim's place out on the Philadelphia road. "And is it tough!" he had laughed. "Man, these are the dregs what am! Oil workers out for sport—a slice of the lower depths—a week's pay blown like a shot—swell!"

"What fun!" they had shouted as they jostled their way to a table.

Joe looked uneasily at his tiny partner as they circled the floor. The air seemed menacing. "Maybe we'd better scram, Jackie," he said. But Jacqueline impishly tossed her head. "Joe! I've never seen such people before. Such types! My word, they look like pickpockets, kidnapers, gunmen, forgers—even murderers!"

Bob and Sara swept past them. "Hey!" Joe called, "somebody ought to sit at our table and watch the coats!" Bob and Sara obligingly danced off the floor.

Drain sliced or button mushrooms from liquid (use liquid to flavor sauces or gravy). If button mushrooms are used, chop coarsely, reserving a few for garnish. Add bread crumbs to mushrooms and brown in butter. Add thyme and sage; add onion, blend well and spread on steak. Roll steak like a jelly roll and fasten with skewers. Season meat with salt and pepper, dust with flour. Brown in hot fat in roasting pan, or in oven glass baking dish. Add water to cover bottom of dish and roast, covered, in moderate oven (350° F.) until meat is tender—1 to 1 1/2 hours.

Note: Flank steak, scored and larded, may be used instead of round steak if desired. Or broil and serve with:

Mushroom Steak Sauce

Brown 1/2 cup canned sliced mushrooms, drained from liquid, in 2 tablespoons butter. Add 1/2 cup chili sauce, dash of cayenne, juice of half lemon and heat through. Thin to desired consistency with canned mushroom liquid, and continue cooking until heated through again. Serve hot.

Round Steak with Mushroom Stuffing

1 1/2 lbs. round steak, 2 teps. butter
1 cup onion, 1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup thyme and 1 egg, dash salt
1 medium size onion, Salt, pepper
chopped fine Flour

It's Steak and Mushrooms For Dinner Tonight

Round steak goes 'round bursting with pride, because of the mushroom stuffing inside!

PROOF of the adage "it's not what you do, but how you do it," is this economical version of a luxurious favorite—steak and mushrooms. Satisfying both palate and pocket, as well as festive enough for a feast, round steak rolls from the oven tender as tenderloin, with full-flavored mushroom stuffing, tucked into steak that is roasted slowly in moist heat until it is tender and succulent to the last savory mouthful.

A surprise for the family, or treat for your guests, it's handsome enough for a holiday party, with that garnish in the traditional holiday colors—the red of radish roses and the green of crisp, zesty watercress. Good to look at, delicious to eat, the tested recipe follows:

Round Steak with Mushroom Stuffing

1 1/2 lbs. round steak, 2 teps. butter
1 cup onion, 1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup thyme and 1 egg, dash salt
1 medium size onion, Salt, pepper
chopped fine Flour

Drain sliced or button mushrooms from liquid (use liquid to flavor sauces or gravy). If button mushrooms are used, chop coarsely, reserving a few for garnish. Add bread crumbs to mushrooms and brown in butter. Add thyme and sage; add onion, blend well and spread on steak. Roll steak like a jelly roll and fasten with skewers. Season meat with salt and pepper, dust with flour. Brown in hot fat in roasting pan, or in oven glass baking dish. Add water to cover bottom of dish and roast, covered, in moderate oven (350° F.) until meat is tender—1 to 1 1/2 hours.

Note: Flank steak, scored and larded, may be used instead of round steak if desired. Or broil and serve with:

JUDGE HAMLIN, FARWELL PRESENTS RARE BOOKS

Judge James D. Hamlin of Farwell, collector of rare classics, has presented a volume of Livy's works published in Holland 62 years ago to Mrs. William Dingus, assistant professor of Latin at Texas Technological college. The gift followed a radio speech last week by Mrs. Dingus entitled "Is Latin a Dead Language?"

The 788-page volume, bound in leather with gilt-edged leaves, was edited by Johann Friedrich Gronovius, German antiquary, and printed by the Elsevir press at Amsterdam in 1678. English title of the book is "Extant Works of Livy's Histories of Ancient Rome."

INSULATED BARN MAY BE DRAFTY

Ventilation Problems Must Be Closely Watched.

By E. R. GROSS

Although insulated animal shelters represent a great improvement over old-time, drafty farm structures, insulated structures may develop moisture conditions more prominent than those in a leaky building. For this reason, farmers are urged to study the ventilation problems in their barns and shelters before insulating them.

The day will undoubtedly come when insulated farm structures will be the rule rather than the exception. Insulation for farm buildings is not new, agricultural studies at Rutgers university reveal. The use of sawdust in the ice house is a good example of its early use. Now that farmers are better acquainted with the materials and how to use them and because insulation is now more readily available and reasonable in cost, more farm buildings are being insulated than ever.

Generally speaking, it pays to insulate animal shelters. Insulation reduces the rate of heat loss from the building, hence should make it warmer and more comfortable for the live stock. Suppose, however, that cracks around windows and doors allow air leakage causing a greater heat loss than that through the walls themselves. Under these conditions, insulating the wall will do little good and is not advisable unless the doors and windows are also repaired to prevent air leaks. This sort of reasoning must be applied to poultry houses, dairy stables, hog houses, horse barns and the like.

Early farm structures made of barn boards and bottoms had cracks allowing ample ventilation of its kind. The stock lived under reasonably beautiful conditions although often at quite low temperatures. Tighter walls resulted in less air movement with consequent condensation on walls and ceiling indicating the need for ventilation. So we see that the use of insulation implies the ventilation problem and that the volume of air required for ventilation is so great that the flues must be very large.

Government Develops Better Grass Strains

Grass breeding is "catching up" with research on other economically important plant crops, reports M. A. Hein, pasture specialist of the federal bureau of plant industry. Grass long has been recognized as the cheapest of live stock feeds, but until recently little attention was given to better grass strains through breeding. Department forage specialists co-operating with various state experiment stations have shown that grasses can be improved by breeding as much as field crops.

Recent studies, for instance, show that length of day, light intensities, air and soil temperatures all play an important part in grass growth. How to induce and increase the production of grass seed, particularly in the Southeast and the Great Plains where many of the more desirable and most promising grasses fail to produce any quantity of viable seed, is another problem that the scientists want to know more about. Why some grasses are more palatable and higher in nutritive value than others also is being studied.

To carry out grass studies as rapidly as possible, the country has been divided into regions where there is a similarity in the problems and consequently in the methods of attack. Adaptation studies of large numbers of domestic and foreign grass species are made at nurseries in the various regions. In this preliminary work studies are made of the palatability and the reaction of the introduced grasses to grazing. As far as possible those that fail to show promise in this initial phase of the breeding program are eliminated.

R. E. A. Dollars

For each dollar loaned by the Rural Electrification administration to bring central station service to farm communities, the farmer spends approximately another dollar for wiring and appliances so as to take advantage of the energy brought to his home, REA records show. Available electricity creates a demand for radios, irons, washing machines, water pumps, vacuum cleaners, and many other items that bring comfort and entertainment to the farm home and employment to industry.

Skimmed Milk

All farmers know that skimmed milk is a good feed for pigs, but many people do not know just what its feeding value is. Skimmed milk, and buttermilk too, are both deficient in vitamins A and D and in iron. Vitamin D, which aids in the assimilation of minerals, is supplied by the sun. Vitamin A and other vitamins, proteins and minerals, including iron, are supplied by good pasture, and to some extent by green, leafy legume hay.

proper use for the benefit of mankind. A sign of patriotism? FORCED PATRIOTS

A youngster in a grade school was expelled from school because she refused to salute the flag. The procedure causes comment and gets front page space. The child was of a religious faith that disapproved the oath of allegiance. In Germany the matter would not be dismissed so calmly for a conscientious camp usually follows a disregard for the Naal flag.

Is an enforced and commanded salute a sign of patriotism? The fact that a Communist meeting boldly displays the American flag and heartily sings the national anthem does not mean that heart and spirit is truly American. Demanding loyalty will not make a man a patriot.

A false salute is a mockery. Teach the child the meaning of the flag, what it stands for, the value of its protection. BE MANNERLY

The age of chivalry has not passed, for when a few of our colleges add emphasis to courses in good manners for men, it goes without saying that it is lost in the field of etiquette. This return to manners is sponsored by colleges and universities throughout the country.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

STOOD for an hour watching a pitch man coining money. He was selling a useless gadget worth a dime at the ten cent store.

By clothing it with mystery and high-power sales talk he sold this gadget like hot cakes—at a dollar. And the crowd pressed around for more. I thought it must be wonderful to have a business like that last, if only the customers would come back for more. But I knew they wouldn't. Two days later I passed the doorway where the pitch man had been operating but he had decamped. Where was he? In some other city, probably miles away, going through the same tricks.

These pitch men, almost without exception, die broke. Inspired salesmen, really with a talent for persuading people that amounts to genius, they nevertheless fill pauper's graves, and spend their old ages in cheap rooming-houses. What's the trouble with them? It isn't hard to find: They do not give value. They depend upon talk to replace quality, tricks to do away with honesty. They lose as every dishonest man must.

Jaunty Journalettes

Wedding tours of some Muleshoe newly weds, because of their length, have turned out to be lecture tours. There are some women in Muleshoe who will seek a bargain, even when it comes to a husband.

Some Muleshoe folks are so full of ambition they don't have much room left for work in their lives. The Muleshoe fellow who proposes on his knees often has to have a woman put him back on his feet.

Some Muleshoe men keep their noses to the grindstone while the wives keep their turned up at the neighbors. The honeymoon is over when the Muleshoe groom stops raving about his bride and starts raving about his food.

Most Muleshoe girls have two boy friends, the one she likes and the one who will probably amount to something. Many a Muleshoe fellow wishes that shoe manufacturers would wet the product a few days before selling them.

GOODLAND 4-H CLUB HAS REGULAR MEET

The Goodland 4-H club met in regular session at the school house on Tuesday, February 20, with seven members present and the agent, Miss Lillie Gentry.

In discussing how 4-H club girls can look their best, Miss Gentry said: "If a person is not clean on the inside, the result may be poor complexion, and a bad breath. To keep clean on the inside and to maintain good posture, eat the proper food and drink 6 to 8 glasses of water daily. Good posture not only makes a girl look well in her clothes but makes people admire and respect her."

Each girl compared clothes she has with the minimum clothing standard. The next meeting will be the first Tuesday in March with our sponsor Mrs. Henry Hanover.

MAPLE DEMONSTRATOR MAKES PLANS

Annie Mae McWatters of the Maple 4-H club says, "I am anxious to get started on my work as clothing demonstrator for the Maple 4-H club." In making her plans with the agent Miss Lillie Gentry and the sponsor, Mrs. Richard Finch, it was decided that her clothing plans should include the making of a work garment, a sun bonnet and as many other garments as time will permit. Improve her clothes closet by making shelves, shoe racks, hat stands, laundry bag and putting in a hanging rod; keep a clothing inventory; keep clothing clean, pressed, and repaired; work on good grooming habits, such as shampooing hair, manicuring nails, keeping teeth clean and shoes polished.

Annie Mae says, "The demonstration will be a big task but I believe that it will be interesting and helpful to me."

Early Indian and Cattle Trails Are Distinguishable

Lubbock, Texas, Feb. 26.—Early Indian and cattle trails, criss-crossing Yellowstone canyon, are still easily distinguishable from the air, says William M. Pearce, history instructor at Texas Technological college, The canyon, which has its source in New Mexico and forms headwaters for the Brazos, runs about two miles northeast of Tech campus. "In parts of the valley which have never been under cultivation, stunted shrubbery and a different-colored soil mark the trails beyond doubt," he said. "The Indian trails are amazingly straight, but the cattle trails follow the contour of the land."

Once a route by which cattle thieves moved stock northward for sale, the canyon later became a legitimate trail for cattle movers. In the frontier days of West Texas, he pointed out, Yellowstone canyon, because of frequent water holes, offered the only path from central west Texas over the Cap Rock and across the Great Plains. The water table is quite close to the surface.

"Butterfly" Supper Enjoyed By A Large Crowd Fun-Makers

Tuesday evening members of the Fidelis Sunday school class, Methodist church, entertained with a "Butterfly" supper at the church annex, there being approximately 65 guests present. Men attending the entertainment, decorated hats for "MI-ladies" to wear. A fashion parade was conducted and prizes went to Judge M. G. Miller and Earl Hicks for having the most "artistic" ability. Their masterpieces were worn by Miss Hortense Nordyke and Mrs. Buford Butts, who were stunning in the attractive headgear.

A supper was served, consisting of waffles, bacon and coffee. Members of the class serving were Miss Lillie Gentry, Mesdames Bonnie Isaacs, Howard Carlyle and Inez Bobo. Following the supper, the world's greatest past time game, "Kootie" was played. R. L. Brown and Clay Beavers tied the score for first place prizes and they drew for the award. Brown winning, his award being a very "handy, useful and convenient back scratcher."

Miss Lillian Cameron won the prize for first place among the women in the "Kootie" game. Approximately $20 was made from the entertainment and these proceeds will go into a fund of the Fidelis Sunday school class, to be used for work being done at the Methodist parsonage. Mrs. S. C. Beavers is teacher of this class.

WEEKLY LAY SERMON

RELIGIOUS INCONSISTENCIES

By JESS MITCHELL

There are always two sides to every question, as some one has said, "Your side and my side." At first there is a wrong side and a right side, and it is quite a relief that sometimes we are on the wrong side when we honestly believe on the right side. Consistency is quite a jewel to be sought after. Sincere people would always strive to learn the right and merits of any given proposition before taking any action in decisive manner of preference for or against any vital subject affecting individual or community welfare.

Last week in my lay sermon I discussed the merits of reasonable faith, which reasonableness cannot be too strongly emphasized. This week I discuss the value of good works. Frankly, if I had to give up one or the other of these factors of life, I would quickly choose to give up Faith rather than Good Works. Not that the one is of less importance than the other; but rather that Good Works will of itself automatically generate a system of Faith, while Faith often fails to generate Good Works.

The Catholic church is often charged with putting too much stress upon good works and not enough emphasis upon faith. On the other hand, I charge the Protestant church with putting too much stress upon faith and not enough upon good works. The interpretations of some Protestant denominations put on faith is positively silly and inconsistent to reasonable logic, and many of these adherents would quickly realize that fact if they would cogitate their own grey matter a little instead of taking the word of some one else who have never studied the subject through to rational conclusions. Mind you, I am no more favorable advocate of the works of supererogation than is any Methodist. What I emphasize the necromantic idea of communion of saints any more than do devout Baptists, yet I would be much more inclined to accept the former rather than the latter for the simple reason that fitness can come nearer analyzing and interpreting the effects of works than it can that of faith.

One trouble with good works is that the doer of them may perform such and be entirely void of any faith whatever or any genuine religious convictions. Indeed, there are too many folks depending for personal salvation upon being right inside when their conduct outside is wrong. In other words, their conduct is not in keeping with their profession. They are very fat with talk, but terribly skinny with actions. Many are like some of these modern sporting vessels that are mostly sail and little boat capacity for tonnage, like an automobile that has a long wheel-base, beautiful body with plenty of room and all possible gadgets of convenience; but a dinky motor. They are not well balanced for general service accommodations.

Somewhere I one time saw a picture of two rivers. One had steep and rocky banks, the water rolling over its stony bed with the speed and noise of a young Niagara. Its channel like that of the Colorado in the Grand canyon or of the Snake river, which in some places has cut its way at least 5,000 feet deep into the mountains, is incapable of excess. It quenches the thirst of no animals, it drives no grist mills. It irrigates no valleys, and no one cares from whence it came in the mountains nor whether it goes to the sea. The other river is calm and placid. Soft moss and sturdy trees grow alongside its banks, there is an abundance of floral lullabies exuding beauty and freshness along its sides, beautiful willows nod upon its placid bosom. The cattle come down to inhale great draughts of its crystal freshness. Birds warble in the tree branches and dip their wings in its refreshing stream. Numerous factories of different kinds utilize its power in operation and farmers digging ditches into its side take out the water to run it over their fertile soil, and these strings of liquid crystal, like ropes of pearls adorning the bosom of the bride, quench the thirst of earth, causing it to germinate, grow luxuriant and bring forth abundant harvests. The one river is like the person who lives for himself, is chock full of faith, but weak in good works, while the other river is like the man who may not have much in his estimation, whose ideas of analytical faith may be somewhat vague and uncertain; but who lives for others and is full of good works.

The Apostle James one time said, "Faith without works is dead," and I insist the great need of the world today is a more practical manifestation of religion. There are plenty of folks who exude religious odors from every pore of their body on the Sabbath day, but during the other six days of the week they never sweat drop. Their religious skin is dry as parchment and hard as concrete. There is seldom an indication of sympathetic moisture. They drive hard in business, selling cheap sugar for the price of good, adulterated brands of coffee containing chicory and dandelion root for pure Mocha or Java, ancient canned fruit that must have benesate of soda in it to keep it from completely spoiling, skimpy mechanical repair work, cheap rings in automobiles that stop sealing back the oil in sixty days, gasoline that still retains the color, but is lacking in octane, lubricating oil that has been largely denatured of its lubricating ability, chemicals that are impure, synthesized or adulterated, and a whole host of actions, transactions and manifestations lacking in wholesome, sincerity, genuineness and integrity.

A more practical type of religion would rectify all of this. It would clean up boards of trade and concentrated stock markets, reorganize the New Deal into a Square Deal for everyone concerned, cut out most of the price spread between producer and consumer, see that the South was not discriminated against in favor of the North; but that all of Uncle Sam's children were accorded fair justice. It would keep a man from thinking he could dig and gouge for several years and then build a church or endow a hospital and get square with the Almighty. It would keep a man from becoming a millionaire in America and then pocketing his fortune go to Europe to live, imagining he was outside the pales of justice and beyond the powers of restitution and

New P.-T. A. Officers To Be Elected Next Monday

Regular meeting of the local Parent-Teachers association will be held Monday evening of next week at the Muleshoe High school auditorium, all parents, teachers and interested persons being cordially invited to attend.

New officers for the ensuing year will be elected at this meeting. The nomination committee is composed of Mesdames R. N. Edwards, J. J. DeShazo and Vern Sneider with Mrs. Edwards serving as chairman.

An interesting and entertaining program is being arranged by Supt. W. C. Cox acting as director and Prof. O. Dickenson as conductor. A panel discussion will be the feature of the program with various pupils in the high school giving talks on the subject, "Where Are You Going My Pretty Maid?"

Pupils in the high school participating in the program are: Miss Jo Beth Solomon, Horace Edwards, Hattie Ray Griffiths, Lela Mae Baron, Morris Gaston, Gerald Praboth, D. L. Smith and Helen Lovelady.

Topics to be discussed are: "What are some occupations for which your high school particularly prepares you?" "What are some of the courses that in your estimation the school could and should offer to prepare you for other occupations?" "Do you think that the high school student is thinking seriously about preparing himself for an occupation?"

"What are some of the things that in your estimation, the home, the school and the community should and could do to promote the opportunities of youth?" "In your contact with your associates, do you find them thinking seriously about their relationship to God?"

"Do you find that selfishness dominates the average high school boy or girl, or do they think in terms of the welfare of the home, the school and the community?"

safely without the realm of Omnipotence. A more practical type of religion will make a carpenter work as fast by the day as by the job, cause a contractor to put as good material in a house when building it "turnkey" style as if he were hired by the day. It will cause employees to take as much interest in the welfare of their employers business as if it were their own. When folks buy diamonds they never have to worry whether they are paste or synthetic. Thousands of dollars will be saved annually by hiring inspectors to see that work is done honestly and carefully. Superintendents won't have to watch proprietors won't have to watch proprietors, Plumbers won't forget wrenches and have to look for them. There won't be so many hot boxes on train wheels. Lawyers won't charge for briefs they never prepared nor "correct" abstracts they superficially glanced over. Doctors won't find it necessary to make so many visits to patients who have reliable bank accounts. This practical religion will then come to hover over every home, perch upon every desk, direct the keys of every stenographer, the pen of every bookkeeper, enter into the calculation of every business transaction and decide every national question in behalf of humanity, regardless of politics or party power.

This practical religion will clean society like a wet broom going through the house after a spring sandstorm. It will change individual specimens of human xun vomica into comforting elixirs of pepsin, aiding digestion of innumerable diets of public benefit. American politics needs expurgating and washing and fumigating and Christianizing, and this practical religion will aid greatly in such disinfecting. Hymnbook religion on the Sabbath won't do for the rest of the week. A man can't roll up his eyes in sanctimonious manner as though he was ready for translation on the Sabbath and then during the other six days in between consort with the devil and get away with it in either the here or the hereafter.

Personally, I have always been much interested in theoretical religion. I have studied all the major and many of the minor religions of earth and know somewhat of their virtues and vices, their merits and demerits. For many years past I have studied the theologies of various denominations, and have been greatly benefitted by such applications; but after all, I am firmly convinced that any religion which fails to give demonstration of practicality to its finely spun theories is but froth and foam to the human soul. There is no real substance to it. There must go with every profession a consecration and with every consecration a vivid demonstration to give concrete evidence to the original avowal. Some one has said "What you do speaks so loud I can not hear what you say," and too often what folks are counts for much more than what they claim to be. "Faith without works is dead," and not only dead but actually stinketh."

A Break for Julia

By SMITH JOHNSON
(Released by Associated Newspapers WNI Service.)

CHARLOTTE DAVIS could hardly wait till 12 o'clock lunch hour, so eager was she to show her friend Julia Winter her new wardrobe.

"It's lovely," praised Julia. "I do hope you and Leslie will be very, very happy," she added, wistfully.

"I hope so, too," retorted Charlotte. "And I guess we will be, for Les seems willing to give me anything I ask for. Lucky for him that he works in a store and can get a good break on the sort of stuff I want."

"Where will you live?" inquired Julia.

"Out on Park terrace."

"Aren't the rents awfully high in that district?"

"Oh, yes," exclaimed Julia.

"It's lovely," she cheerfully admitted Charlotte. "But we only live once, I tell Les, so but we're getting the very best of everything."

"It sounds wonderful," sighed Charlotte.

"I'll say it's wonderful," agreed Charlotte. "All that swell stuff for only $25 down, and he didn't really have to pay that, for the store is giving him credit for the twenty-five a wedding present, so he took the fifty he saved and made the down payment on my ring."

"Oh!" gasped Julia, aghast at the thought of the size of the debts in proportion to the size of Leslie's income.

"That's what I get for having a sweetie who is a salesman."

"Want a nice willow rocker for your hope chest?" called the foreman of the warehouse, as the tall, cheerful-looking truck driver passed the office door.

"What's wrong with it?" replied the younger man.

"Paint got scratched off in uncrating and the party that ordered it claims the color can't be matched. We settled with the jobbers for $3 cash—and we don't want the rocker."

"Store it for me?" grinned the tall chap in tan.

"You bet," cheerfully agreed the foreman. "Put it right in with the rest of your junk. And while you're in the mood to spend money, better take a look at the table over by No. 15. Make you a nice dining table when you go for the top done over, and it won't cost much since the party that owns it hasn't got room for it and won't pay storage any longer."

In the warehouse Pete's bargaining-hunting had become a standing joke. But it was a kindly joke that the men enjoyed, for Pete MacElroy was popular and the men all knew that the young chap's nose was strained to the utmost with helping put three younger brothers and sisters through school and at the same time saving to marry Julia Winter.

"I'll wait," Julia had bravely promised.

Sunday afternoons when Peter and Julia walked in the park or took a bus ride or went to a cheap movie they got the young chap's nose strained to the utmost with helping put three younger brothers and sisters through school and at the same time saving to marry Julia Winter.

"I'll wait," Julia had bravely promised.

Peter and Julia were the first guests to be entertained at the Park terrace apartment. Proudly Charlotte displayed her new treasures: Silk draperies, silk bedspreads, handsome glassware, china and rugs, stunning furniture.

"Honestly, Julia, I wish you could clear out of that study hall bedroom before the hot weather comes," whispered Charlotte as she kissed her chum good-night.

Going home on the bus Peter and Julia were strangely quiet, yet when they reached Julia's rooming-house Peter said, "Let's sit on the porch a while and talk."

Nervously the young chap clasped and unclasped his hands, cleared his throat and exclaimed abruptly, "Honestly, Julia, there isn't a bit of sense in going on this way. We are just eating out our hearts. And at the rate I'm getting on we'll both be gray-haired before I can give you more than about two rooms to live in."

Julia's poor heart almost stopped beating. Yet she did not blame Peter for wanting to stop pinching pennies to save for a home after spending most of his wages for his brothers and sisters.

Bravely Julia winked back the tears which filled her brown eyes. She tried to speak, to tell Peter that he was free-to offer to give back to him the inexpensive little room he had given her two Christmases before.

But the words choked her.

Anxiously Peter peered down into her face. Tensely his firm, tanned fingers closed over Julia's trembling hands as he said, "How about it, sweetheart? Are you game to start homemaking with me in just two rooms? I've some odds and ends of furniture stored at the warehouse. And I've enough money saved so you can pick out your own cooking things for the kitchen, and curtains—not silk, like those fancy ones at Charlotte's." And the foreman gave me a tip yesterday about a garage, cottage we can rent dirt cheap, with an option to buy."

"Oh, my dear!" gasped Julia, looking up with a smile that was radiant testimony as to just how

Cotton Hosiery May Be Included In Lady's Wardrobe

Lubbock, Feb. 27.—An all-round hosiery wardrobe may be included in miady's clothes budget of tomorrow, predicts Mark Wood, graduate in textile engineering at Texas Technological college. Wood arrived this week to conduct a research project in spinning yarn for women's full-fashioned cotton hosiery.

The project is sponsored by the Bureau of Home Economics, a division of the United States Department of Agriculture, and supervised by M. E. Heard, head professor of textile engineering at Tech.

"The bureau does not intend to displace silk and rayon as material for women's hose," he explained, "but to develop a suitable cotton yarn for sports and utility wear."

A special, long-staple cotton is being used in the Tech project, which aims to develop a fine yarn, suitable for standardized use in manufacture of cotton hosiery. Thread spun here will be used purely for test purposes, Wood said. It will be sent to Washington to be mercerized and gassed before it is made into hosiery. Tests will be made to determine spinning speed, breakage strength, and wearing qualities. The project will require several months for completion.

Wood has been assistant editor of Textile World, a trade magazine for the last two years.

Work toward perfecting full-fashioned cotton hosiery was undertaken by the Bureau of Home Economics late in 1938. First concern was with style and design, and thus far only commercial yarn has been used. Texas Tech's laboratories were selected over eight other collegiate textile engineering departments for developing a suitable cotton yarn.

Baileyboro News

A good bedroom must be comfortable, said Miss Lily Gentry, Home Demonstration agent, at a meeting of the Baileyboro H. D. club, at Mrs. Dana Annold's Feb. 26.

To make a bedroom comfortable there must be plenty of ventilation and light. A good bedroom should have a bed with good coil springs, a well made cotton mattress or innerspring mattress and two pillows and warm bedding. Miss Gentry gave a demonstration of the type of bedding one should use.

The H. D. members paid their five cent educational fund. There was a report from the council delegate of the council meeting held Feb. 23 in the home of Mrs. A. E. Newton.

There were 13 members present with one new member joining. We cordially invite all to attend our club. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Opal Wallis, March 12.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Blackshear and little daughter, Joann of Fortales, N. M., visited in the Curtis Moore home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Wallis were Muleshoe visitors Monday.

Plans are being made for a new school building at Baileyboro. Work on the building will begin as soon as the plans are completed.

Clyde Gallagher returned from California, where he was called to be with his father, who was ill. He was reported as improving nicely.

Mrs. W. P. McCarty and sons of Littlefield visited her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Gallagher, Sunday—Reporter.

Teachers Association Meets At Plainview March 8 and 9

"Measuring and Evaluating Educational Methods in Texas" is the convention theme of the meeting of the West Texas Teachers association to be held in Plainview March 8 and 9. With the completion of the program, Dr. W. B. Irvin, superintendent of Lubbock schools and president of the association, is urging all teachers and administrators of this section to make plans to attend the meeting and make it the largest in the history of the association.

Teachers from 25 counties will attend the meeting.

General session speakers for the convention include Dr. Willis A. Sutcliffe, president of schools, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. Clair V. Mann, professor of engineering drawing, Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy, Rolla, Missouri; Dr. Donald McKay, president of Eastern New Mexico Junior college, Portales, N. M.; and Dr. T. L. Henderson, professor of education at the University of Texas.

Greetings will be extended to the convention by Charles H. Tennyson, president of the Texas State Teachers association; Mrs. W. R. Weaver, president of the Texas State Teachers association; Mrs. W. R. Weaver, president of the Texas Parent-Teacher association; and Roy Bedichek, director of the Interscholastic League.

Luncheon will be held by the homemaking teachers, primary teachers, intermediate teachers, and administrators. Friday night high school teachers will have a banquet, with Dr. Sutton as the speaker, and Saturday noon there will be a luncheon for the ten executives.

Following registration Friday morning, the first general session will be held in the Plainview Municipal auditorium.

Friday evening a program of music and dramatics arranged by Miss Ruth Hicks of the Department of Speech, Texas Technological college, will be given. Saturday morning the Plainview High school choral club directed by Mrs. H. F. Axtell, will be given.

REVIVAL MEETING AT ENOCHS UNDER WAY

The revival meeting at Enochs is now well under way, having started last Monday night after a one week delay owing to illness of the evangelist, Joe E. Denning.

An unusually good attendance is reported being at every service, with several towns and communities covering a wide area being represented.

The meeting is being held in specially prepared building just west of the Enochs post office, is warm and well lighted and equipped with comfortable seats, and radio frinds of the evangelist invited to come and participate these services, which begin each night at eight o'clock.

Zed Robinson is in charge of song service, with Mrs. Albert I assisting at the piano. The meet is expected to run for at least weeks.

Romance in Hardware

By ALICE DUANE (McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WHEN Peggy Prince was 15 she began selling kitchen utensils at Warner and Prince's after supper on Saturday nights...

Peggy had not tried to hide her admiration for the tall, fine-looking son of her father's partner... One evening after closing hours...

Now Peggy was 20 and Harold was 23 and they were driving home after a Saturday evening that had been especially prosperous to the business...

"Of course, you like hardware," Peggy taunted Harold. "It's your whole life—hardware..."

Peggy paused and looked at Harold, but Harold, to her surprise, had not turned to look at her.

"I'd like to cut loose myself," he said at length. "I don't particularly hanker to lead a life that has been cut out for me either..."

"Well, if that's the way you feel, we might as well call our engagement off..." Peggy was decidedly annoyed...

"It's O. K. with me," said Harold. "It that's the way you feel about it..."

And so within a few days Peggy and Harold told their fathers of their broken engagement, and started forth to seek their fortunes apart from hardware...

Three months later Mr. Prince appeared at the usual time on Saturday night and with him came Peggy, looking a little thinner...

"Peggy's back for good," said Mr. Prince, gleefully. "Says she'll come back to sell kitchen things Saturdays, the same as usual, if we want her..."

As soon as Mr. Warner was at liberty he went to Peggy and, laying a rough hand gently on her shoulder, said: "I'm glad you're back..."

"New York's too big for that," said Peggy demurely. "Besides, Wall street is miles from Fifty-eighth street..."

Mr. Warner was laughing to himself. "So you'll stay and meet him here?" he asked. "Well, maybe you can get together again—you two. Though I hope you won't do it just to please your father and me..."

Harold had come in the store by the back way, had hung up his hat on the accustomed peg before anyone knew he had entered the store...

"Need a hand to help with the chicken wire?" he called out to Mr. Prince, by way of attracting attention to his presence...

Mr. Prince turned red, rubbed his eyes, shook hands and stammered his welcome, with something like tears in his beaming eyes...

"Hello, Harold," Peggy said, lightly. Their eyes met and they seemed to exchange an understanding message. "No, I didn't tell them," she said aloud...

'Thank You, My Friend'

By MARtha K. DAVIS
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"I'M TERRIBLY sorry, Tom, but we are having the rector and his wife for dinner."
I doubtless looked my disappointment.
Stranded for a few hours in a western city, I had happily bumped into an old college chum, Jerry Bosworth, whom I hadn't seen in years. Of course nothing would do but I must go to his home for dinner. "Judy will be mighty glad to see you," he said heartily, and remembering pretty Judith Bosworth, I experienced a pleasurable anticipation at the thought of meeting her again. "It will have to be 'cat and run,'" I said. "My train leaves at eight-forty and I simply have to make it." I found Judith charming ever and the thought of a few hours' visit with these old friends was decidedly gratifying.
Now—here was my hostess announcing the impending arrival of a gorgeous rector and his probably equally gorgeous wife.
"It's a perfect shame it happens this way," deplored Judith, "but you will enjoy meeting Nancy Rathburn, Tom. She isn't the ordinary rector's wife at all. She is the most fascinating, interesting, delightful woman! Everyone adores her. How she ever happened to marry George Rathburn—Really, I do not believe she could stand him, if it weren't for her little periods of escape. Every spring she spends a couple of months abroad. She comes back more beautiful than ever, fairly aglow with enthusiasm, and plunges heart and soul into parish work. The things that woman accomplishes! Why—last winter—" but Judith's dissertation was interrupted by the arrival of her guests.

The Reverend George Rathburn was all that my hostess had implied. Pompous—conceited—arrogant! But for all his bluster, he quickly faded into insignificance.
Beautiful, quiet, poised Nancy Rathburn! The way she moved—her voice—no, the secret lay in that expression in her eyes. What were those fathomless, dreamy eyes seeing? Surely not her pragmatic little husband, or anyone or anything in Judith's cozy apartment.
I was glad to be placed beside her at the table, but the smallness of the party forbade any intimate conversation.
It was during the salad course that I noticed the ring on the third finger of her right hand. A dower cluster of diamonds embedded in black onyx, surrounded by a wreath of dull gold.
I was a fool for speaking.
"Your ring, Mrs. Rathburn—may I look at it? It reminds me of a ring a comrade of mine in the war."
Nancy Rathburn's white hand clenched.
"Ah—show him your ring, my dear," broke in the rector. "Perhaps he can tell you something about it. You see, Mr. Neeland, my wife picked up that ring at some pawnshop over in London. It has some kind of inscriptions on it. What do you think? It may be a noble old ring, but they'd have a difficult time trying to buy it back." He guffawed loudly. "Mrs. Rathburn thinks more of that ring than all the rest of her jewelry put together. Sort of talisman, you know. Show it to him, Nancy."

I took in mine the hand she slowly extended. The fingers were like ice. And as I looked down, I saw again a trench—a khaki-clad man, whimsical, gay, untouched by fear—headless—cynical. "What does it matter, old man? Nothing can happen to me. It's all happened. You know—some of those arranged affairs. Sit down! Give a damn whether or not I'm bit by a bloomie's shell. But there is a girl, Tommy lad! Oh, well—she's tied as tight as I."
There was a small piece chipped from the onyx.
I remembered about that. "By Jove—if I hadn't put up my hand, Tommy! Trust the 'House of Garland' to jolly well protect its sons of war!"
And then—convalescing in a hospital. Young Lord Garland—Dicky Garland calling frantically for—"Nannie! Nannie!"
Late—first hand-clasp. This ring cutting into my flesh. "Good-by, Tommy, old man! Jolly luck! Take good care of yourself."
I looked up. Nancy Rathburn's eyes were enormous and her under lip was caught tight between her teeth. She was holding her breath.
I said, "No, the ring this reminded me of was—quite different. In fact, on close inspection, this is not like it at all."
I had to leave directly after dinner. Nancy Rathburn stood beside her husband. As I shook hands with her conventionally, I caught a faint little whisper—"Thank you, my friend."

Proxymy Bride and Widow

The 23-year-old proxy bride of Wong Chin, 52 years old, traveled 9,000 miles from Hongkong to Liverpool to learn she was a widow before she had seen or spoken to her husband. Lonely, Wong had asked friends back home to find him a bride, marry them by proxy and send her to him. This they did, but until she walked down the gangplank the girl did not learn of his illness and death.

Patient Paul

By BARBARA A. BENEDICT
(Released by Associated Newspapers WNU Service.)

PAUL SOTHERN, Alberta thought, was nice. Too nice. Too good to be true. He didn't seem real. It worried her. Two nights ago he had proposed and she had stalled him off for no better reason than because she thought he was too nice. She had promised to give him her answer on the coming week-end. They were to be members of a crowd that were going up to Ned Fenway's place on Winnetoesaukee. Judy would be mighty glad to see you." he said heartily, and remembering pretty Judith Bosworth, I experienced a pleasurable anticipation at the thought of meeting her again. "It will have to be 'cat and run,'" I said. "My train leaves at eight-forty and I simply have to make it." PROGRESS 4-H GIRLS DISCUSS SEAMS

The Progress 4-H club girls met February 21. The president was absent, so the vice-president, Geneva Hallford, presided.

The house was called to order. Secretary called the roll, the minutes were read and approved.

The meeting was turned to Mrs. J. J. Gross. She gave her demonstration on sport clothes, when and where to wear them. Seams were discussed and the girls worked on overcast of seams.

Games were enjoyed by all present.

Two visitors were present—Reporter.
