"B-5" gasoline coupons will be issued to fill future applications for "B" gasoline rations when the present Ration Board supply of "B-4" coupons is exhausted and will be valid immediately upon issuance. District OPA Rationing Executive Ely Fonville

Because of a shortage of "B-4" coupons in this region, the "B-5" coupons were validated early and gasoline dealers are being notified.

Fonville also pointed out that all outstanding "B-4" coupons are still valid.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SAUL REJECTED

International Sunday School Lesson for September 3, 1944.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Because thou hast rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king."—1 Samuel 15: 23.

Lesson Text: 1 Samuel 15: 10-23.

Samuel was the last of the judges. As he grew old the people of Israel demanded a king, like other nations. Samuel, the founder of the monarchy. Representing Jehovah, he yielded to their desires, and Saul became their first monarch.

The formal selection was made by lots First, the tribe of Benjamin, then the family of Matrites, then the household of Kish, and the individual, Saul. Previously advised by Samuel, at the time he had been hunting, his father's asses, Saul was found hiding among the wagons. At first some refused to recognize his rule, but opportunity soon came to prove his leadership.

Saul's primary services to his people were as a military leader. Seven able campaigns he waged, ending in the establishment of a unified, powerful nation. As a fighting man Saul was courageous and brilliant, possessed of ability and personal bravery. Another service, hardly less vital, was Saul's success in winning recognition for the kingship, setting the authority of the monarch upon foundations firm enough for David and Solomon to profit thereby.

The Ammonites attacked Jabesh-gilead, threatening to put out the right eye of its inhabitants. Saul hastily called his warriors to follow under penalty of death for failure. Leading a large army he relieved the besieged city, earning the gratitude of its people and a wider recognition as a worthy loyal leader. Years later, when Saul's dead body was insulted by the victorious Philistines, the men of Jabesh-gilead rescued it and gave it decent burial.

The second military campaign marked Saul's first disobedience to Jehovah, revealing a tendency to disregard the divine will and rely upon his own resources.

Samuel had commanded that the army wait seven days before beginning a campaign against the Philistines in order to offer proper sacrifices. Saul became impatient when the allotted time passed, presumed to exercise priestly functions himself, and offered sacrifices. Just at the close the old prophet turned up and warned Saul that his kingdom would not continue because he had disobeyed Jehovah.

Other campaigns for the rescue of Israel followed. The fourth struggle was against the Amalekites, traditional enemies of the Israelites, defeated by Joshua at Rephidim long ago. Saul was commanded by Jehovah to utterly destroy these people and their possessions as a punishment for their sins. The victory won, Saul saved the king in order to grace his triumph and preserved the better part of their possessions. The character of the campaign was diverted from an act of divine wrath to one for pride and greed. It was not a foolish gesture when America refused material profit from its enemies in the World War.

Once again, as so many times it was to occur in subsequent years, a prophet of God stood before a royal ruler to rebuke him for his misdeeds. When Samuel came, Saul brazenly declared he had "performed" the commandment of Jehovah. To which Samuel asked, "What meaneth then this bleating of the sheep in mine ears and the lowing of the oxen which I hear?" Saul had no excuse but the faithful prophet pointed out the error: "Hath Jehovah as great delight in burnt-offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of Jehovah? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams?" So spake the eighth century prophets later on.

In his high station as king, Saul got gradually farther away from Jehovah. His death was tragic. Once again in battle for the Israelites, he confronted the Philistines in a struggle that ended in disaster for king and people. Jonathan, the brave and noble, and two other sons of the king were slain. Deserted of everything save his own personal courage, Saul committed suicide. As he realized a little earlier, summing up his own life, "I have played the fool and have erred exceedingly."

Saul's life illustrates what happens when a man attempts any task without divine guidance and trustfulness. When selected king he was modest: "Am not I a Benjaminite, the smallest of the tribes of Israel, and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin?" When, after his first victory, his supporters wanted to kill those who had opposed him, he said: "There shall not be a man put to death this day, for today Jehovah hath wrought a deliverance in Israel." Unfortunately, with success and power, he wandered away.

EATING FOR BEAUTY

Listening to a group of ladies talking, the writer is impressed that one of the most absorbing topics of conversation is cooking recipes.

Most of the interest centers around deserts and foods that are mixed and combined with condiments to make them taste good. Civilized races have gotten so far away from the simplest food provided by nature, that it is no longer palatable to them, unless seasoned with condiments. Probably no race of people in the world suffer so much from constipation, colitis and intestinal disorders as the Americans.

In our own country malnutrition is evident among the rich as well as the poor. There is no state in which there is any excuse for this. Vegetables of every kind as well as many fruits will grow if planted and given reasonable care. Every little farm should provide milk and eggs in abundance for the needs of the family. Some how our boards of health do not get very good results by sending out doctors and nurses to remove tonsils and hold dental clinics. It is like pouring a little water on a burning building. In struction in the care of the body, must begin in the schools and homes.

The prospective mothers should be instructed how to eat properly, in order to put the right material into the teeth of their unborn children. Calcium or lime enters largely into the formation of sound teeth. The expectant mother should eat fresh leafy vegetables, beans, fruit, milk, etc. The diet should be rich in lime and phosphorus. Only in this way will the child form sound teeth.

The baby should have milk; at first breast milk is best, fruit juices and cod liver oil with plenty of sunshine. If this regimen were carried out, the expensive dental clinics could probably be dispensed with in a few years.

When the Deuchland, a German ship, captured a well-provisioned American vessel during the war they thought themselves in luck, for she was abundantly provisioned with white flour, white sugar, polished rice, cheese, meat, coffee, etc. They remained cut after capture for two or three months eating the above-mentioned foods.

The result was, that all on board developed scurvy. The officers were not so ill as the men for they had a little fruit. When the captain put in at an American port, all aboard were sick. Two or three died. The others were fed upon fruit juices, dishes made from wheat and rice polishes, and vegetable broths. Gradually they recovered. But these lusty German seamen had learned the lesson that they could not live upon the deficiency diet that is consumed in so many American homes.

The average child goes to school after a breakfast of hot biscuits (white), a piece of bacon and a cup of coffee if he wants it.

The families who can afford that sort of diet could provide milk instead of coffee, whole wheat instead of white flour. Eggs could be substituted for bacon every day or two. Some butter could be served also.

It would cost no more, but the change would prevent pellagra, constipation, and also discourage dental visits.

A supper of fruit, milk, whole wheat bread, or oatmeal would spell the difference between undernourished, sick children and healthy ones.

Give the children plenty of bread and cereals that have not been devitalized by removing everything but the white starchy portion. They like fruit.

THIS BUSINESS OF LIVING

BY SUSAN THAYER

My Friend Archie

Archie has a delicatessen in our town. But years ago, when I was a little girl, he used to deliver groceries at our house for a big store downtown. He worked hard. After that he clerked in a chain store.

When Archie decided to open his delicatessen, my father said, "We'll all eat baked beans now." Sure enough, all the women flocked to Archie's—a place of efficient service—and such good smells.

It was some years later that we heard Archie had bought the building his delicatessen was in. Well, Archie still has his store. In fact, he owns a block of stores. His girls have gone through college. There are half a dozen people behind the counter now, and I am sure Archie could retire. But the store is the center of his life.

I always think of Archie when the subject comes up of how important it is to protect and encourage small business. Of course thousands of businesses with as many as several hundred employees are included in that category. Such concerns make up the very backbone of this country. But to me, Archie typifies small business. For like all the rest, he has built success by his own efforts—out of courage and real service to the community; out of the spirit that seeks and finds its independence.

We'd just better make sure, whatever kind of country we plan after this war, that future Archie's have a chance to do the same!

Electronic Heat To Produce Better Tire

The radio Corporation of America has announced development of electronic power heating for processing textile cord used in tire construction, said to do a better job in a fraction of the time. The company states that the electronic heating method would help to produce a superior fabric for postwar tires, making for a lighter as well as a stronger tire.

Electronic generators have already been installed in three tire fabric plants.

Postwar Plants To Work More Shifts

Many plants which worked a single daily shift before the war may have to work two or three shifts in the reconversion period to meet the piled-up demands for peace-time products, L. R. Boulware, operations vice chairman of WPB, predicts.

This, he declared, should "aid materially in providing jobs for the released war workers for some time."

NEW YORK, N. Y.—That genial gentleman, Tommy Dorsey, learned to use his dukes early. It seems he and brother Jimmy when kids were locked in the cellar by Tommy Dorsey, Sr., leader of the Shenandoah (Pa.) brass band, with one saxophone and let fight to see who would toot it. But Abe Lyman and Phil Harris are rated the most formidable guys with their fists in show business. Bing Crosby, until his Thursday night radio program made him too big a proposition to risk, once averaged a street fight a month and usually won.

NEWEST ENTRY in the swooner sweepstakes is Andy Russell, talented 23-year-old Mexican. He's now singing Sunday nights on a program over NBC with comedian Jackie Gleason. He's rated in the Sinatra league, although not as experienced. Russell got sick when he came East by train. Said he never had been on a train before.

COMEDIANS NEVER END The comedy field is the hardest to break into, especially on the radio, but once started there seems no end. Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Bob Hope, Eddie Cantor and Ed Wynn, the latter back Sept. 8 on the Blue network, all have been before the microphones since radio's infancy days and always making more money. On the other hand successful newcomers have been few. Jackie Gleason, the roly-poly 28-year-old from Brooklyn (25 pounds over) and a young Canadian, Alan Young, performing Tuesday nights on the Blue network, are the best hopes of '44.

GORGEOUS Georgia Carol, the Kay Kyser vocalist (Mr. Kyser), with a name like that, she'd sound sweet if she couldn't sing at all. Incidentally, a young songstress by the name of Fredda Gibson batted around a long while and never got anywhere until she changed her name to Georgia Gibbs.

LOOKING AT WASHINGTON

By HUGO S. SIMS

Kimmel Promises Surprise In Story of Pearl Harbor

Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, Naval commander of the fleet at the time of the Pearl Harbor disaster, takes exceptions to a recent magazine article by Senator Truman.

The Admiral calls attention to the fact that the government has persistently denied any opportunity to defend himself and specifically asserts that the "inuendo" that General Short and I were not on speaking terms is not true.

This statement has been scattered throughout the nation since the Japanese attack. So far as we know this is the first time that Admiral Kimmel or General Short has denied it.

The Admiral also says that "statements alleging failure to cooperate and coordinate our efforts are equally false." He asks that until "complete disclosure" is made of the facts about Pearl Harbor the Senator and others, refrain from "repeating charges" that have never met the test of "public scrutiny."

Admiral Kimmel insists that when the "entire story" is given out the people will be amazed by the truth. He considers it "grossly unjust" to "repeat false charges" against him.

There is much basis for the complaint of the Admiral who, as he says, has not yet had his day in court. He intimates that there is much to be heard and he may be right even if Senator Truman insists that his magazine article was justified by facts known to him and other Congressmen.

Surplus Disposal Plan Worries Congressmen

Considerable importance attaches to the decision of Congress as to what will be done with the estimated -75,000,000, 000 worth of plants, machines and material that the Federal government will own when the war ends.

A strong drive is underway, sponsored by hardheaded business men, to persuade the government to get rid of the stuff just as fast as possible in order to give private initiative the green light and not compete with business.

It is perfectly natural for business men, hunting profits, to desire that the property of the government be thrown on the market, that they face no competition from government-operated plants and that they be allowed to pick up such bargains as may become available through limited bidding for mammoth government properties.

While we believe in the American capitalistic system, subject to certain modifications to prevent monopoly and preserve competition, we believe that the care of the disposal of the vast property of the government should be related to the financial problem of the government.

The nation should dispose of its surpluses in the way calculated to bring in the most money and, if a reasonable salvage is not in sight, retain them, either in reserve or, if necessary, in operation. The welfare of the people of the nation, as a mass, is at least equal to the interests of the capitalists.

Production of War Items Is Difficult To Gauge

The problems that confront Army and Navy officers as they plan production of the tools and equipment of warfare are illustrated by the testimony of Major-General Oliver P. Echols before a Senate Defense Committee.

General Echols reported that losses in heavy bombers had been so much less than anticipated that production is being cutback gradually and that workers in the aircraft industry will be laid off in order to enter other phases of production.

Significantly, the General pointed out that while the plants employed on aircraft will be reduced, they will keep an adequate force in order to adjust production plans "if we're wrong," in the estimate of heavy bombers needed in the future.

The General pointed out that, some months ago, the conclusion was reached that a cut-back was possible in the production of tanks. However, a shortage of tanks developed under the impact of the invasion and rush orders were given for the production of more tanks. The same thing might happen in regard to heavy bombers and it is wise to keep aircraft plants in a position to quickly expand production.

After all, the prosecution of the war demands that production exceed the needs of our armed forces, with a reasonable reserve to meet unlooked-for emergencies. When peace comes, it is certain that there will be a tremendous surplus of war goods on hand, but it would be foolish to guess-limit production in order to avoid surpluses. It is more important to exceed requirements to avoid defeat in battle.

Unified Command Promises Best Results in Warfare

The recent announcement that Lieutenant-General Omar Bradley had assumed command of American armies in France was construed to mean that he had been given equal status with General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, who is the Allied Ground Commander.

This seemed to imply some demotion of General Montgomery but subsequent announcement clarifies the matter, making it clear that the British General continues to hold second position to General Eisenhower.

Along this line, Hanson W. Baldwin, New York Times military expert, suggests that each army in France should have its own commander, operating under one supreme command. He says that this is the principle for which General Pershing fought in the first World War.

As we recall, the position taken by General Pershing involved the creation of an American Army on an equality basis with British and French armies fighting in France. The suggestion had been made to General Pershing that American soldiers, rapidly arriving in France, be used as replacements to maintain the strength of the British and French armies. This, the American General refused to permit, insisting that American troops should be organized into an army and function as an American Army.

Subsequently, under the impact of the German drive in 1918, General Foch was made supreme commander of the Allied forces in France. The advantages of a single commander were apparent and, in this war, there has been general recognition of the advantages to be obtained by joint command of American and British soldiers.

The Baldwin suggestion would put into the field a French Army, a Polish Army, and a Canadian Army, in addition to the British and American Armies. If this scheme of organization is followed, the heads of the armies would direct their own units, subject to conference with each other. This is not what has gone on in the battles so far.

As we understand the cooperation that exists between British and American fighting men, there is a general disposition to cut red tape and permit officers in responsible positions to use forces available although there is an understandable tendency to group fighting men of the same nationality.

Broadcasting Congress Would Educate People

The suggestion that Congressional proceedings be broadcast meets with no approval from the Honorable Sam Rayburn, Speaker of the House, who says, "There'll not be any broadcasts of House proceedings while I'm Speaker."

We are not advised as to the objections of the Texan, but it strikes us that it would be a good thing to let the people of the country hear what goes on in both Houses of Congress. Additional publicity will do the Congress good and, we suspect, educate the public as to the problems faced by the legislators.

Of course, no commercial radio system would care to allocate the time needed for a broadcast of the proceedings of Congress. This brings to mind the suggestion often made that the Government should establish a radio network of its own. The system could give the public much information and it should be possible to do this without political partisanship.

OUR SCHOOLS SERVE DEMOCRACY

With the opening of the schools of Dickens County near, it might be well for parents and teachers to do a little thinking about the pupils that present a problem to both of them.

Children going to a school system should not be regarded as raw material to be subjected to certain definite processes in the expectation that the finished product can be certain or standardized. Factors of inheritance make each child a special subject requiring, more or less, individualized treatment.

Parents who expect a school and its teacher to take a rough specimen of untrained humanity and develop it into a polished human being are looking for a good deal. They must not expect the school to take the place of the home and the church. The guidance that a teacher can give to a pupil is valuable and necessary but it should not replace entirely all function of parents.

Teachers, on the other hand, facing a mass of little human beings in their classrooms, should not overlook the importance of identifying each pupil as a separate and distinct human entity.

The good teacher is not a mass-worker. There must be the recognition of the peculiar difficulties that confront each student, together with an intelligent tolerance for the child, if the greatest improvement in the individual is to be secured.

Naturally, we are very proud of the school system in this community. Along with millions of other Americans, we thoroughly endorse the common schools which offer educational opportunity to all children upon practically equal terms. The schoolhouse, in our opinion, is the bulwark of democratic processes, which should be understood, respected and observed by officials and teachers, as well as by students.

NEW HEATING UNIT

The imagination of the reader hardly exceeds the predictions being made for products that will become available to consumers after the war.

Consequently, it is well to accept with caution the optimistic proclamations of interested producers, who may be over-enthusiastic in their outlook.

Nevertheless, we call attention to an announcement by Anthracite Industries, Inc., that a new automatic home-heating pipe unit, weighing about seventy-five pounds, has been developed to equal a 1,000-pound ordinary furnace and is so swift in pick-up as to start from scratch and in fifteen minutes reach its maximum output.

Without going into details of the new heating unit, said to be from eight to ten times as efficient as present furnaces, everybody is familiar with the waste of heat heretofore accepted as inevitable. The organization that developed the new model is not interested in manufacturing but has turned loose the new principle to all manufacturers on a 'non-strings-attached' basis.

The announcement predicts that manufacturers can produce an automatic unit, suitable for heating the average family-size home, that can be inclosed in a space less than two feet by three feet. It will burn anthracite at the rate of fifty to sixty pounds per foot per hour, which compares with about ten pounds per hour for present home-heating equipment.

In view of Gen. Patton's leadership in France it might be possible to get some other generals to slap somebody.

Hitler is ready to win the war with some new miracle but the only trouble is that he hasn't any miracle at hand.

Hundreds of Lone Star fighting men are coming home to Texas.

By plane and train, on stretchers or crutches, they arrive daily at the army's great McCloskey General Hospital at Temple. They are the heroic wounded, the boys who know the true meaning of sacrifice in this war.

With Capt. F. J. Moss, McCloskey's affable and capable public relations officer, the writer of this column visited the hospital and spent hours chatting with the boys about their parts in the fighting.

And don't get the idea that these returned, wounded veterans are spending their time in the hospital griping or feeling sorry for themselves. There's not a cry n a carload!

As a matter of fact, there probably is no more cheerful group of men in Uncle Sam's army. With fingers off, feet and hands off, and other terrible wounds, the lads in McCloskey face the future with a smile and a wise-crack and the painful present with a type of courage that is an inspiration to everyone who visits them.

There are two miraculous facts that you will discover if you visit this great army establishment, where wounded men are given new health and new hope. The first is the cheerful courage of the men, themselves. The second is the consideration and skill of the officers and men who administer to them.

As we walked through the long wards, Captain Moss waved and quipped at the boys, calling almost every lad by name. And the patients quipped back, their smiles showing plainly the friendship and confidence that exists between the wounded veterans and the officers and men of the hospital staff.

We talked with many of the patients. Corporal Leland Grohman of San Antonio told of heavy fighting in Italy, but forgot his own troubles to praise the home-folks who sent USO-Camp Shows across to entertain the boys.

We met Sgt. Charlie Rummell of Waco, who spent months in a Nazi prison camp after losing his legs from machine gun wounds. Charlie talked about the National War Fund, too, telling how sports equipment, books and other anti-boredom materials sent over by War Prisoners Aid helped the captured men fight off "barbed wire sickness."

And Lt. Majorie Gray of Killean, who served through 77 days under constant shell fire at Anzio, before being sent home to recuperate at McCloskey. The petite nurse told of the black day when the Germans bombed the hospital, killing scores of patients, doctors and nurses and wounding many more. She was close by when Lt. Helen McCullough, another nurse of the Baylor Hospital Unit, was seriously wounded. Lt. McCullough, who wears the Purple Heart, was released from McCloskey Hospital last week, well again.

Here's a note to mothers, wives and sweethearts of the wounded lads at McCloskey—a note that may ease their worries about the boys:

Don't worry about them! They are being cared for better than any soldiers ever were cared for before. They are cheerful, happy and confident of the future.

They are getting the best medical attention that can be had. And best of all, they are loved and lovingly cared for by the officers, nurses and men who staff this great army healing unit. There is nothing impersonal about the way McCloskey Hospital takes care of its boys. Every patient is a personal responsibility of those who staff the great institution, and nothing is left undone to return them to health, happiness and usefulness.

It's hard to tell which to admire most, when one visits McCloskey—the heroic wounded veterans or the human, capable and kind men and women who care for them so well. But one thing is certain: thanks to the skill and patience of the McCloskey medics, thousands of men who might have died or been helpless cripples for life will return to their homes happy, healthy and useful citizens of the Lone Star State.

The Eyes of the World Are Upon SCHOOL CHILDREN of AMERICA

THESE YOUNG PEOPLE of today are the hope of tomorrow's world—the success, or failure of it depends upon them, and our guess is that they won't let us down. They are growing up in a world at war, and it's a world that's dealing mighty tough blows . . . Fathers and older brothers are fighting to help insure a peaceful world for these youngsters. Your town is geared to give its younger generation the best in education, good times and entertainment that it possibly can offer.

It's time now for their return to school. They've had their summer Vacation, but to them Vacation has not meant idle hours . . . No, instead they have been working on nearby farms, collecting waste paper, working in local stores and plants; doing everything they could to make every minute count. We salute these young people for doing their summer jobs well, and wish them a successful, happy school year. Remember, that from the school children of today come the all-important populace of the America of tomorrow.

To Insure Their Future . . . Invest in More War Bonds!

The war in Europe seems to be getting out of control of Master Strategist Hitler, despite his willingness to sacrifice reasons to hold isolated points. Because politics get into many activities of government there is no reason to believe that it interferes with everything the government does.

New Electric Irons To Go On Market At March, 1942, Prices

Twenty manufacturers who have received allocations to produce 1,768,968 electric irons have agreed to sell them at no charge from their March, 1942, prices, the Office of Price Administration has announced.

New electric irons are one of the first items in the consumer durable goods field that will reappear on the market since production was suspended in 1942. They will bear price tags stating the dollar-and-cent retail ceiling. Authorized retail prices range from $5.30 up to $11.70, but the majority of the irons are automatic models in the medium price range.

War Production Board has authorized production of 2,037,838 electric irons, by 32 manufacturers. Prices for the other manufacturers have not been established yet.
