Personality Weak Spot?

I suppose all of us have some weak spot in our makeup. But any weakness can be changed into a strength. You do not need to be pushed around indefinitely by some characteristic that is a bolder to you.

How do you go about changing a weak spot into a strong one? First, want to. This is hard because maybe you don't want to, but know it is important that you should. And the next step is even harder: Choose to be rid of a weakness, and believe that you can. You've got to want to change strongly enough to make it stick. Start saying to your indecisive self: "I'm through being controlled by this weak element. I won't live with it any more! I'm fed up and I'm going to turn this old weakness into a new strength!"

I know this process will work, for I tried it myself on an enormous inferiority complex. An inferiority complex is no fun. Shy, shrinking, reticent, I would think glumly: "I don't amount to anything. Have no brains, no ability." Presently I became aware that others were agreeing — for people unconsciously tend to take you at your own self-appraisal.

At college, one professor seemed to take satanic pleasure in firing questions at a student standing before the class. When he did this to me, even though I knew the answer, my mouth got dry, I became tongue-tied and put on a pretty miserable demonstration.

One day the professor called me to his office. "What's the matter with you anyway?" he asked sternly. "I am aware that you know the material, but why can't you get it?" He repeated a couple of questions previously put and answered readily enough. "Why didn't you come up with these answers in class?" he exclaimed.

"I don't know, professor. Guess I was all tied up," I replied weakly. "The real trouble with you," he continued, "is that you are a scared rabbit. Why don't you get wise to yourself and shake loose from that inferiority complex? Act like a man, not a poor weak fish!" On which high note the interview concluded.

Angered, I stomped down the hall muttering: "I'm going to resign from this university; then go back and clean up that professor!" But I knew he was right about me.

So I went out and stood miserably on the front steps of the university building. I asked myself a serious question: "Are you going to live this timid, scared way the rest of your life?" Right then and there I made a choice. I decided I was completely fed up with being a scared rabbit. I chose to do something about it, and well remember saying aloud: "I'm through with this inferiority complex and I don't mean maybe."

It's an encouraging fact that you can actually do just about anything with yourself that you choose to do.

Ex-Exchange Student Here Viet Refugee

By LUANNA CROW
Midlanders attending Lee High School in 1965 will remember her as Tran Thi Huong—nicknamed "Rose"—a petite and shy Vietnamese girl here as a foreign exchange student.

Huong has returned to the United States, but this time as a refugee from her war-torn homeland. Penniless and homeless, the former Midland student is a temporary resident at the Ft. Chaffee, Ark., refugee center along with her husband, a former major in the Vietnamese air force, and their four children.

Gene Isaacs, the school counselor who took one of the "home"—either to Midland, her only previous connection in the U.S., or to Houston where the family she formerly lived with now resides. Huong has called Lee High collect three times in the last few weeks in an effort to obtain some assistance and she also has called the Bernie J. Ferris family in Houston several times for the same reason.

The telephone calls are the first contact anyone in the U.S. has had with the former American Field Service student since she left here during the summer of 1965. They earlier had speculated that her family—an aunt and uncle who lived at Can Tho 35 miles southwest of Saigon—had prevented her from corresponding. "We do know that she told us many times about her uncle, that he was a very domineering, autocratic type person," Ferris said. A strict guardian, he had objected to Huong's coming to the United States in the first place.

The Ferrises speculate that the uncle's attitude coupled with Huong's romantic involvement with a Midland boy prior to her return to Vietnam may have prompted the man to forbid her correspondence. When Huong called the family the first time, the first question was, "Why haven't we heard from you?" She replied that she had written, only to have the letter returned.

Ferris said their Vietnamese "daughter's" English, which never was extremely good—has deteriorated in the 10 years she has been gone. Ferris said Huong, her children and her husband, Do Phat Hal, arrived in this country absolutely penniless and without even their suitcases. "Huong told my wife when they got on the boat or plane, there were shells falling around, and they were told if they wanted transportation, they would have to leave their suitcases. They came with only the clothes on their backs."

Chicago Rocked By Bomb Blasts

CHICAGO (AP) — Two bombs exploded in Chicago's business district Saturday and a third was hunted in a floor-to-floor search of two federal buildings after authorities were directed there by a note signed by FALN, a Puerto Rican nationalist group. The blasts came between midnight and 1 a.m. Three persons were treated for minor injuries.

Two married couples told police they found a black bag on a ledge of the First National Bank of Chicago building, carried it away in their car, discovered it contained sticks of dynamite and tossed it out the window. It exploded in front of the Mid-Continental Plaza building, shattering windows as high as the fifth floor.

About seven minutes later a second explosion rocked the United Insurance building about six blocks away. Authorities said it apparently had been placed on a window well. Windows were shattered up to the 10th floor. The United of America Bank occupies the first level.

A search of 50 phone booths failed to uncover the note. But several hours before an afternoon parade started down State Street in celebration of Puerto Rican independence day, police responding to an anonymous call of a bomb planted in a food shop at Union Station, found a note. It was sealed in a white business envelope, folded in an arm rest in a phone booth near the food shop.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said the note was typewritten and signed FALN. It named the federal building as the next bombing target, but did not specify which building, the Dirksen Federal Building or the new federal building across the street.

U.S. Bomber Crews Ordered To Train For Limited Atomic War

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — U.S. Air Force bomber crews have been ordered to start training for fighting a limited nuclear war in case the United States should want to exercise that option.

Many crews, under the top secret orders which have added a number of wartime missions to the Strategic Air Command, already have received new "mission folders" explaining their new tasks.

These instructions represent another big step in the Ford administration's controversial decision to prepare the nation for a small nuclear war, where destruction might be controlled,

Schlesinger "has enunciated the change in nuclear strategy and it would therefore be a natural follow for the military to start revising our plans."

Schlesinger for two years now has championed a more flexible nuclear strategy — one that would enable the United States to respond in kind to a nuclear attack on a few targets as distinguished from massive destruction of cities and the people in them.

Strategies for trying to control the destruction in a nuclear war have been advanced before — such as the "counter-force" concept advocated strongly in the 1950s under which the United States and Soviet Union might concentrate their fire on the other's nuclear weapons.

Pushing the limited nuclear war concept into Air Force tactics is expected to provoke fresh concern in Congress where opponents have argued that to make nuclear war look tolerable is to invite it.

Signs Of 'Real Change' Needed For U.S. To Revise Cuba Stand

PARIS (AP) — President Ford says the United States will not revise its position toward Cuba until it detects signs of "a real change" in Cuba's attitude toward the United States, according to an interview published here.

Premier Fidel Castro's attitude. Asked by Salingier if the United States would review its position if the Organization of American States (OAS) ended its boycott of Cuban products, Ford replied: "If the OAS should take such a decision, it would bend in no way our attitude. We will maintain the boycott as long as there is no change in the Cuban policy toward the United States."

Ford Marks Army's 200th Birthday

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — President Ford witnessed an impressive display of American military might Saturday as infantry troops dropped from the sky and fought mock hand-to-hand combat on the 200th birthday of the United States Army.

The President flew to this sprawling infantry training base to salute the Army and declared that — just as during the revolution — "There are times when principles must be defended with the force of arms."

Ford also set aside 40 minutes to meet in nearby Columbus with Georgia Republican leaders who might help his candidacy next year. He hoped to erode 1976 conservative GOP support already building in Georgia for former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California.

The President received a 21-gun salute as he arrived at York Field to address 25,000 soldiers and civilians. He recalled that two centuries ago the Continental Congress created the American Army to back up with strength its deliberations.

"It was a bold step from which there was no retreat," Ford said. "Since that day in 1775 our soldiers have protected and preserved this nation at home and throughout the world."

He received loud applause when he said, "I will continue to work with the Congress to keep our armed forces supplied with the best and most modern training, weapons and equipment in the world."

The President noted that, like the original American Army, today's army is made up of all volunteers. He said he can remember when he was in Congress there were doubters who said that an all-volunteer Army of 782,000 soldiers was impossible. "Today's Army is not only an Army of volunteers; it's an Army of winners," he stated.

The Army's bicentennial was also marked by military displays and parades at numerous bases across the country. Parachute jumps and concerts were featured at Ft. Devens in Ayer, Mass., and a parade was held at the U.S. military academy at West Point.

A bicentennial pageant called "Soldiers" on the history of the Army was on the program at Ft. Bragg, N.C., along with parachute jumps and children's activities.

In Columbia, S.C., the Ft. Jackson museum was presented with the first flag to fly over Ft. Sumter after its recapture by the North in the Civil War.

Two weeks ago former California Gov. Ronald Reagan keynoted the Georgia State GOP dinner in Atlanta and was warmly greeted by South Carolina Gov. James Edwards, who said he felt confident that the Republican party in the South would line up solidly behind Reagan in 1976.

Ford said Saturday that he has no philosophical differences with Reagan about the need to expand the Republican party base. And the President termed his own philosophy "from center to right," according to Republican participants.

Former No. 3 Man In Agency Contends CIA Probe May Embarrass Both Parties

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. (AP) — Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, former No. 3 man in the CIA, says the probe into the CIA's alleged role in foreign assassination plots is likely to "embarrass both political parties."

Kirkpatrick, who joined the CIA in 1947 and served from 1962 to 1965 as executive director-comptroller under then-director John A. McCone, declined to elaborate. He also refused to comment on whether he had any personal knowledge of the CIA's alleged participation in assassinations of foreign leaders. Kirkpatrick testified for more than three hours before the Rockefeller Commission which investigated the CIA's domestic activities, but he refused to discuss the content of his testimony.

He also declined to discuss specifics of the commission's report, although he generally commended its investigation.

"If you put all these things in the proper perspective as the Rockefeller report did, there's no question that it (the CIA) is a positive force in our society," Kirkpatrick said in a telephone interview from his home here. He also praised the report's recommendation that congressional oversight of the agency be strengthened.

"If there's not that check, we'll end up with other executives abusing the power of the CIA," Kirkpatrick said.

He added, however, that any committee formed to review the CIA would have to remain silent about much of their work or risk jeopardizing the CIA's international intelligence activities. Kirkpatrick, now a political science professor at Brown University, said that congressmen and senators are elected officials who find it politically useful to talk publicly about their duties in Washington.

Move Afoot To Abolish Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior House members are planning a move to abolish the House Intelligence Committee because they think it has been taken over by people who are a threat to U.S. intelligence agencies.

Reps. Richard Bolling, D-Mo., and Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., said Friday a resolution to abolish the committee may be introduced Monday when the House takes up Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi's request to resign as chairman of the embattled committee.

"I think it would be harmful to the national security and to the House to have this circus sideshow," Stratton said. He charged that Rep. James V. Stanton, D-Ohio, chairman of the committee's CIA subcommittee, leaked classified information by saying the CIA was involved in the assassination of at least one foreign leader.

"It seems to me clear this is not going to be a responsible inquiry," Stratton asserted. Bolling, an expert on House history and procedures, indicated his objection is over Nedzi's resignation Thursday under pressure of a takeover of control of the committee by five Democrats.

"You've got a problem of what seems to me to be cannibalism," Bolling said. "The cannibals have eaten the king become king."

The five Democrats mounted a move to oust Nedzi last week on grounds he had been briefed on CIA misdeeds more than a year ago and did nothing about them. Nedzi replied that the misdeeds were history and he was concerned with current problems.

President Says He Plans Aggressive Campaign Push

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — President Ford told Georgia Republicans Saturday he plans to wage an aggressive nationwide campaign for election in 1976 and said he has "a pretty good start" in key states.

But the President left some Republicans uncertain about the role Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller would play in that campaign. During a 50-minute closed-door meeting with GOP state officials, the President said he thought he would run strong in states with large numbers of convention delegates, such as New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Michigan.

"That's a pretty good start," he was quoted as saying by one Republican who attended the meeting at a motel here not far from Ft. Benning, where the President participated in ceremonies earlier in the day marking the 200th anniversary of the United States Army.

Ford also said he would campaign to elect more Republicans to the Congress.

Asked about Rockefeller, Ford replied that the vice president "had done a fine job on the CIA investigation and other jobs that he had been given," said Mack Mattingly, chairman of the state Republican party. But Mattingly said the President noted that "whoever the candidate is who gets the most votes, picks the vice president."

Another participant in the meeting quoted the President as saying of Rockefeller: "He'll get his votes and I'll get mine." Mattingly said he believed the President was making a noncommittal comment which reflected the fact that "it's a long way off to the convention."

Two weeks ago former California Gov. Ronald Reagan keynoted the Georgia State GOP dinner in Atlanta and was warmly greeted by South Carolina Gov. James Edwards, who said he felt confident that the Republican party in the South would line up solidly behind Reagan in 1976.

Ford said Saturday that he has no philosophical differences with Reagan about the need to expand the Republican party base. And the President termed his own philosophy "from center to right," according to Republican participants.

Andrews Lawsuit Moved To Midland

A $135,000 lawsuit charging that the Chicago-based Montgomery Ward Co. unduly harassed an Andrews couple who got behind on payments has been transferred from the state's 109th District Court in Andrews to federal court here.

The change of jurisdiction was requested by the department store chain. Plaintiffs Emmitt M. Wagner and his wife Barbara claim that a P. Hatley, an agent for Montgomery Ward, made "a deliberate campaign of harassment to coerce the plaintiffs' prompt payment of the debt."

Wagner says in the petition that he got behind making the $18-monthly payments on a $488.45 indebtedness when he left his job as a carpenter in Lampasas for oil field work in West Texas.

The petition claims the Montgomery Ward agent harassed the plaintiffs through repeated telephone calls, called them "deadbeats" and threatened "to ruin their credit rating" unless they paid the debt in a lump sum. Plaintiffs say they notified Montgomery Ward of their financial difficulty and of their intention of paying off the debt "as soon as they could."

Doctors Get What They Lobbied For In Insurance Issue

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer

The bills being passed in many states to meet the malpractice insurance crisis seem to be just what the doctor ordered — or at least what he lobbied for.

Like the parent American Medical Association, state medical societies have influence with legislators and most have been using it to push bills to halt the skyrocketing malpractice insurance costs.

The first thing doctors have asked for — and gotten in bills passed in about a dozen states — is some form of insurance pool designed to guarantee they will be able to get malpractice insurance at more reasonable rates.

In some states they also have gotten limitations on the amount of malpractice awards, a shorter time span for filing claims, and review panels to weed out suits before they go to jury trial.

Doctors have not gotten everything they wanted in every state, of course. In Texas, for example, an insurance pool was created but bills limiting settlements and shortening the statute of limitations were defeated after lawyers lobbied heavily against them.

A spokesman for the American Medical Association said he thought that generally the major complaint doctors have about the legislation so far adopted is that it doesn't go far enough to protect them. Some 35 states either have adopted legislation or are considering malpractice bills.

Organized medicine's position on bills it favors is that they are in the public interest. With the bills, the doctors argue, large increases in malpractice insurance rates will eventually reach the public in higher health care costs.

Critics maintain that with extensive lobbying by doctors, lawyers and insurance companies — sometimes in combinations supporting the same bills — the one group left out is the public.

The problem facing the physicians is that insurance companies have greatly increased premiums, by up to 400 percent in some cases, or terminated coverage in some states, in large part because of the growing number of malpractice suits.

Patients still lose most malpractice suits, and many more are settled out of court for small amounts. But large six- and seven-figure settlements are becoming more common.

A Florida couple was recently awarded $1,685,000 on a claim that surgery actually worsened the patient's condition. In California more than a dozen million-dollar-plus awards have been made in the past two years.

In some states, most notably California and New York, the issue has boiled over into job actions by doctors withholding services, except for emergencies. The New York job action ended last week with the state government agreeing to a commission that will consider the doctors' demands. Similar commissions have been created elsewhere.

Some form of withholding services was discussed in other states, among them Texas and Idaho, but never carried out.

Critics say that doctors also have been suggesting to patients that they limit services unless legislation is passed and that this exploits the doctor-patient relationship.

The largest number of bills passed have been those allowing state insurance commissioners to create risk-sharing insurance pools should they be needed so that doctors can get malpractice policies.

Laws Passed
Typical of these is a bill passed in Idaho requiring all casualty insurance firms selling policies in the state to take part in the pool. Similar legislation has become law or is only awaiting governors' signatures in at least 10 other states.

Critics say such laws mean that any person with fire or auto insurance is, in effect, subsidizing physicians, who already are one of the wealthiest segments of society and don't need the subsidy.

As John C. Fritschler, president of the Wisconsin Academy of Trial Lawyers, puts it: "There isn't a doctor in Wisconsin who can't get malpractice insurance at a price he can afford."

Fritschler's group is opposed to a doctor-supported malpractice bill now before the Wisconsin Legislature.

$49,415 Net Income
The AMA says that in 1973 average net income — after payments for insurance, office, staff, etc. — was $49,415 for a doctor in private practice. It says malpractice premiums vary so from state to state and specialty to specialty that there is no typical figure.

A recent AMA survey found the lowest premiums were in North Dakota, where "low risk" doctors such as general practitioners paid $180 a year. The largest were for "high risk" physicians such as neurosurgeons and orthopedic surgeons who pay $15,808 annually in California and $14,329 in New York.

An indication of physicians' income may be that the state medical society in New York raised a $2.7 million fund for lobbying simply by assessing each of its 27,000 members $100.

The assessment is also an indication of the lobbying effort. So are the 23 persons registered as medical lobbyists in Idaho, the largest number for any profession in the state.

Idaho's legislation also includes two other provisions that doctors supported: limits on settlements of $150,000 per claim and $300,000 per incident and limits on lawyers' contingency fees in malpractice suits to 30 per cent of a malpractice award.

Pool Set Up
In Iowa, a bill awaiting the governor's signature sets up an insurance pool and also prohibits claimants from collecting as a result of winning a lawsuit if they already have been paid from other insurance. In other states, doctors are lobbying to eliminate laws that stop juries from even considering other settlements resulting from the same injury, settlements that might convince the jury to reduce the size of its award.

Legislation adopted in Indiana includes a $500,000 limit on malpractice settlements. It is being pushed by doctors as a model for other states. Another provision of the Indiana law is a review panel to examine malpractice claims before any jury trial can be held.

Some form of review panel recently has been established in Tennessee, Arkansas and Florida and similar bills have been introduced in several other states. The panels generally can't prevent a jury trial, but experience has shown that a negative ruling by such boards often is an omen of a similar ruling in court.

Interference Claimed
Doctors say these panels will eliminate many unmerited suits, but some critics say they interfere with the right to a jury trial.

One man who is critical of most of the bills adopted, Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the Ralph Nader-backed Public Health Research Group, says such panels are the only reasonable idea being put forth — but only if they include a fair representation of the general public.

Most of the panels are weighted with doctors and lawyers on grounds expertise is needed, but Wolfe notes that the idea of a jury trial is based on the average person's ability to deal with complex issues.

is a growing problem that will outdate many of the state bills now being passed. Most medical societies seem to agree.

In New York it was after passage of a bill creating an insurance pool that doctors started their job action, claiming the pool would not significantly hold down malpractice premiums. They only agreed to go back to work when a panel was appointed to study the problem and come up with solutions.

California's doctors said they would return to work when Gov. Jerry Brown signed a law creating an insurance pool. He signed, but the doctors let it go known more action might be necessary unless wider measures were passed. Brown has called a special legislative session to deal with other malpractice bills.

Says Wolfe: "The only group that doesn't have money to burn at the state legislatures is the public and if they did, their bills would get passed."

Letter Appropriate For Father's Day

DEAR READERS: Some months ago, I published a letter signed "NOT GUILTY." It was written by a father who was driving home from a father-son fishing trip in a blinding rainstorm when the car skidded into a ditch. The boy was killed and the father walked away with only a small cut on his nose.

The father wrote, "I wasn't going fast, and I wasn't careless. It was just a freak accident. He was only 18 and our only child. My wife blames me for our son's death. We once had a good marriage, but now we are practically strangers. Can you help me?"

I urged the man to get his wife into therapy, and although I never heard from him again, his letter prompted this one from another father, which I think is appropriate for publication on Father's Day:

up, I didn't spend much time with him. (I was too busy.) How I wish I had taken him on a fishing trip now and then, as this Dad had done. It seems to me that this Dad must have been a good father before the Almighty intervened for reasons of His own. There are worse ways for a father and son to part; in fact it is difficult to think of a better way than in an atmosphere of love and sharing.

A generation or two ago, when child mortality was higher, married couples seemed much more aware of a fundamental fact. Although we love our children dearly, we lose some through death, some leave us, some displease us and occasionally one will crown our old age.

But in the end, all parents have is each other. Our children are just "loaners." We start out a couple, and we'll most likely end as a couple, finding comfort and fulfillment together in a union ordained by God.

My wife and I felt that ours was a good marriage, but the loss of our son drew us even closer together.

I hope NOT GUILTY's wife will realize that the intimacy of shared tears can add a precious new dimension to their marriage.

OHIO DAD

Judge Blocks Rules That Would Reduce Number Of Persons On Welfare

By TIMOTHY S. ROBINSON
The Washington Post
WASHINGTON—U.S. District Chief Judge George L. Hart Jr. has blocked temporarily, new federal rules that would significantly reduce the number of people on welfare.

The Department of Health Education and Welfare guidelines were scheduled to take effect Monday. They have been opposed by numerous states, which say they would be too costly and burdensome to implement in the state-administered welfare programs and could result in welfare re-ipients having to divest themselves of necessary items, like their car and house, to meet the new rules, which would set guidelines on the amount of property they could own.

In granting a temporary restraining order that will last at least until a hearing on the issue June 26, Judge Hart said implementation of the proposed regulations now "would throw the system of every state into chaos and an awful lot of citizens are going to suffer."

The proposal could cause "tremendous harm and damage to states and recipients" if it is allowed to go ahead and is later ruled to be illegal, he said.

His order came in a suit filed by the National Welfare Rights Organization, the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and various local welfare organizations. Attorney Henry A. Freedman, representing the NWRO and labor groups, said the federal regulations should be found illegal because states should set the guidelines under which persons are eligible for welfare payments.

More than 3.2 million families currently are receiving the welfare payments that would be affected by the new regulations. Attorneys said Friday they had no estimate of the number of families that might be stricken from the rolls if the new plan takes effect.

Under the federally funded Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), the federal government reimburses states for the cost of benefits paid to needy families with children and for the cost of administering such programs.

The states set the standards to determine who gets the aid and may set aside a "property reserve" that each family can have that will not be included when its eligibility for welfare is determined.

The states are now allowed to set a reserve level that includes the full value of a home, an automobile, income-producing property, and other property worth $2,000 per recipient, attorneys said Friday. States currently deduct the amount of money owed on particular property before assessing its actual value.

If the new plan takes effect, state welfare departments, which do not appraise the property of all recipients, would have to do so and would have to include the full market value of the property, regardless of the amount of money a recipient may owe on it.

An individual recipient in a family of four could only own property valued at $72.50, according to the new regulations, rather than the $2,000 now allowed.

Attorneys for the plaintiffs said the new plan would require states "to pauperize families in a manner (the states) have determined destructive to proper family functioning and an early return to self-support."

Government attorneys said the regulations had been considered for two years by HEW officials, and that they were necessary changes in welfare rules. They admitted, however, the implementation of them will cause "hardships" to recipients.

Gerald Warren Becomes Editor

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP)—Gerald L. Warren has resigned as deputy Presidential press secretary to become editor of the San Diego Union.

Warren resigned from the White House post Friday morning. His appointment to the Union was announced later the same day by Helen Copley, publisher of the Union and the San Diego Evening Tribune.

Warren, deputy press secretary under President Ford and former President Richard M. Nixon since January 1969, will succeed Gene Gregston as editor of the Union. Gregston resigned late last month.

Warren's appointment takes effect Sept. 1, said Mrs. Copley. Warren has spent the bulk of his journalism career with the Union, joining the paper as a reporter in 1954.

He was promoted to assistant city editor, then joined the Copley News Service briefly before returning again to the Union. He was named city editor there in 1963 and assistant managing editor in 1968.

Reopening Bid May Be Costly

Tournament bridge players are often encouraged to reopen the bidding when the opponents bid and raise a suit but then stop at a low level.

"Your side should have just about as many points as the opponents," the argument goes, "and you will almost surely find a good trump suit. You will usually be able to play the hand, but this will seldom be the case. Your object is to push the opponents one trick higher in the hope that they will then be one trick too high."

Did you notice that this advice abounds with such expressions as "almost surely" and "usually"? If you follow the advice and fall right on your nose, the best lawyer in the world can't help you recover damages from the bridge authority who led you astray.

Maybe that's why nobody is filing a lawsuit over today's hand, played in the finals of the Open Team Championship for the Vanderbilt Cup last March in Honolulu.

clubs if the defenders took a solemn vow never to lead clubs. (But if the defenders led trumps promptly, as they should, North would take only four club tricks, one spade and one diamond.)

As it happened, North couldn't bid three clubs because South reopened with three hearts. West doubled, and the rest was on.

West opened the nine of spades, and East won with the ace in order to return the six of clubs. West thought things over and decided to refuse the first club trick, allowing dummy to win with the nine.

Declarer led dummy's queen of hearts, and East stepped up with the king. East shot back his other club to the ace and ruffed the club return.

East now cashed the ace of diamonds, after which West was sure to collect three trump tricks for a penalty of 1,100 points. All this to stop East from making two spades!

In a pair tournament you accept this kind of disaster with a good grace. It's just one bad hand and you can hope to get it all back by stealing one overtrick at a part-score contract. In a pair contest you expect to earn about 2 per cent of your score on each hand. No matter how badly you are burned on any one hand, it costs you only 2 per cent of your expected score.

The situation in a team contest or at rubber bridge is very different: A loss of 1,100 points represents just about your entire expected profit from several hours of play. (An average win of 1,100 points per session is more than you can reasonably expect unless you are a very good player in a weak game.)

In a team tournament, a loss of 1,100 points represents 14 international match points—costly but not decisive. You'd need unusually good results on several hands to make up for a loss of this kind, but it wouldn't wipe out the profits of the entire session.

With this in mind we can modify the sort of "expert" advice usually given in such situations. It's reasonable to reopen the bidding when the opponents have bid and raised a suit but have stopped at a low level, provided (1) you are playing in a pair tournament; (2) you can make your competitive bid at the eight-trick level (two of a suit); (3) your partner is even-tempered and resilient.

Do not reopen the bidding at rubber bridge or in a team contest unless you have a good hand and a very strong suit. Don't reopen by bidding three of a suit. Don't reopen with a partner who may explode or fall apart if you are taken for a bad ride.

New Dog 'Pill' Not Substitute For Spaying, Midland Vets Say

By STEPHANIE WARD
When is a spayed not a spayed?

Because of a new birth control pill for female dogs recently made available to licensed vets across the country, the question has an answer.

The new contraceptive, Ovaban, a progesterone derivative (Mestrol Acetate), is considered by the manufacturer to be safer than spaying, and cheaper, and is guaranteed to stop the heat period, conception and false pregnancies.

However, Midland veterinarians contacted said that the pill is administered in cases where only temporary contraception is sought. They felt that the pill will definitely not replace spaying and, in the long run, could be more expensive because it is temporary.

The pill, on the market since early May, was recommended by the manufacturer to promote the contraceptive as an alternative to spaying and neutering.

The canine contraceptive can be administered orally intact or mixed with crushed food in doses that depend on body weight and the way Ovaban is being used in the dog's reproductive cycle.

On the other hand, the vets that have used the pill reported it to be quite successful and users have been satisfied with the results.

Because of the recent release of the drug, no in-depth studies have yet been made but from use thus far, no drastic drawbacks have been discovered.

"I have been very pleased with the pill although I have only administered it to approximately eight to 10 dogs," one city veterinarian said.

The pill is prescribed for eight-day or 33-day regimens during the heat cycle but cannot be prescribed for more than two consecutive seasons, which normally occur twice a year.

Midland veterinarians said that after administering the pill, which must be given within the first three days of the season to be successful, that the male will no longer be attracted to the female—one bother with which most female dog owners are familiar.

Patients who request the pill most frequently are pet owners that desire to breed their dogs in a following season or who own a dog that is not physically capable of undergoing the spaying operation.

As with many medicines, some side effects may occur while "on the pill." From the Midland vets contacted, no serious side effects had been observed with only 4 per cent of the animals experiencing reactions.

One pet owner noted the family dog, always spunky and playful, tended to be quite sleepy while being given the pill. Another saw an increase in the pet's appetite.

Midland veterinarians who prescribe the pill have mixed feelings but none felt the new drug would ever replace spaying.

One vet said, in the long run, expense would be greater while another believed that the pill should be the choice over boarding the dog for its season.

Only one city vet contacted does not use the pill. He said he prefers what is termed "the morning after shot," that works much like the shot for humans and must be given within 48 hours.

Veterinarians contacted said if the pill, used extensively in England and Australia, proved very successful, it could become quite popular.

This Family Really Up Against Wall

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Louis F. Quaglia and his family are up against a wall.

The Quaglias' home is just over the border from Munsey Park and when that village decided to wall off a street on the boundary, the fieldstone and concrete was thrown up across the Quaglias' driveway.

The wall went up so fast on June 2, the Quaglias say, that it blocked their compact car inside and their Jaguar outside.

The Quaglias have taken the issue to State Supreme Court in Mineola and the village has been ordered to explain Monday why the wall is blocking the driveway.

Munsey Park Village clerk Kathleen Smith said that the village in 1937 had won the right in a lawsuit to dead end streets along its boundaries.

She said the Quaglias had been given official notice last April of the exact date and time that the wall would be built.

But Mrs. Quaglia said: "I think every village has the right to maintain its character, but there is a point at which irrationality takes over."

IRS Offers To Train FBI Agents

By GAYLORD SHAW
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Internal Revenue Service commissioner Donald C. Alexander has told the FBI that his agency is willing to help recruit and train 300 new FBI agents to spur the lagging campaign against organized crime.

Alexander's offer was presented as part of a formula for patching up a bureaucratic battle between the IRS and the Justice Department which has snarled operation of federal anticrime strike forces.

The offer was linked to a reduction of the IRS role in the strike forces. The Justice Department and FBI did not respond officially to the Alexander plan, but sources in both agencies indicated a coolness to the formula.

The strike forces combine the efforts of many federal and local law enforcement agencies in a coordinated campaign against organized crime. Justice Department lawyers contend the IRS has reduced its strike force participation and thus hurt the drive against racketeers.

In an interview last week, Alexander said he did not believe IRS agents should be assigned to non-tax investigations, or that they should answer to Justice Department lawyers who head the task forces.

He said he did not object to IRS agents working with the task forces, so long as they worked only on tax cases and were responsible to IRS officials.

"To some extent, we are being called upon to fill voids in the general enforcement of criminal laws" because other agencies represented on the task force lack the expertise in financial investigations, the commissioner said.

"To some extent, we are being called upon to fill voids in the general enforcement of criminal laws" because other agencies represented on the task force lack the expertise in financial investigations, the commissioner said.

The IRS role in the strike forces, the Justice Department and FBI did not respond officially to the Alexander plan, but sources in both agencies indicated a coolness to the formula.

The strike forces combine the efforts of many federal and local law enforcement agencies in a coordinated campaign against organized crime. Justice Department lawyers contend the IRS has reduced its strike force participation and thus hurt the drive against racketeers.

In an interview last week, Alexander said he did not

AMA Facing Deep Financial Problem

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Medical Association faces a deep financial crisis, the need to expand membership and questions about the organization's own survival as it opens its 124th annual convention Sunday.

Following closely on the financial problems caused by the malpractice insurance problem, members of the AMA's governing body, the House of Delegates, will be asked during the convention in Atlantic City, N.J., to approve an increase in annual dues from $110 to $250.

HEW Planning To Limit Doctors' Price Increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Monday will publish regulations which will save taxpayers an estimated $26 million in Medicare fees paid to doctors who treat elderly and poor patients.

The savings will come from a limitation on the amount doctors can raise their prices under Medicare, Medicaid and Maternal and Child Health programs in fiscal 1976.

Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, estimates the so-called physician fee index will save about $26 million out of the $3.2 billion budgeted for Medicare.

Based upon doctors' net earnings and office expenses in 1973, the index limits their maximum fee increases beginning July 1 to 17.9 per cent.

"Thus, any individual prevailing charge that would increase by more than 17.9 per cent over its 1973 base level will have its rate of increase limited to 17.9 per cent," Weinberger told a House ways and means subcommittee on Thursday.

Medicare spending has quadrupled between 1967 and 1975 to nearly $15 billion. HEW attributes about half the increase to escalating medical care costs and the remainder to increasing numbers of beneficiaries who now total about 23 million.

The AMA lost $3.5 million in 1974 and faces a $2.6 million deficit for 1975 despite a $1 million reduction in expenditures, according to a study by a special AMA committee. The society ended 1974 with a negative cash balance of $30,000.

At the last meeting, however, the delegates who gathered in Portland, Ore., in November rejected a proposed increase to $300 and substituted a one-time assessment of $60. Observers expect sharp debate over the proposed hike to $250.

On membership, a report of the AMA board of trustees to the delegates notes that membership fell off during the late 1960s and early 1970s, with some improvement in 1973 and 1974.

For 1974, there were 370,748 physicians in the United States, the board said. Of these, 55 per cent, or 200,872, were members of the AMA, but only 45.5 per cent, or 172,646 were paying dues.

The question of how to improve this situation, the board noted, "has fundamental implications for the future of the organization," and for whatever role the AMA is to play in the future.

"AMA has a number of basic decisions to make in the coming years in relation to the type of leadership role it wishes to pursue," the board of trustees told the delegates.

The traditionally conservative organization, for example, issued a statement of sympathy last March for the four-day strike by interns and residents against 21 New York hospitals. Some AMA officials admitted that at least in part this was a gesture to younger, more liberal physicians.

In another departure from tradition, the AMA delegates will be asked to approve the creation of a new office to train staff and doctors in the techniques of collective bargaining for state and local medical societies.

Magnatex Awards Homesite Contract

Magnatex Corp. Real Estate Division has awarded a $300,000 contract to Co-Con, Inc., of Albuquerque, N.M., for the first-phase water and sewer improvements for the Saddle Club North development here.

Work will begin immediately on the project.

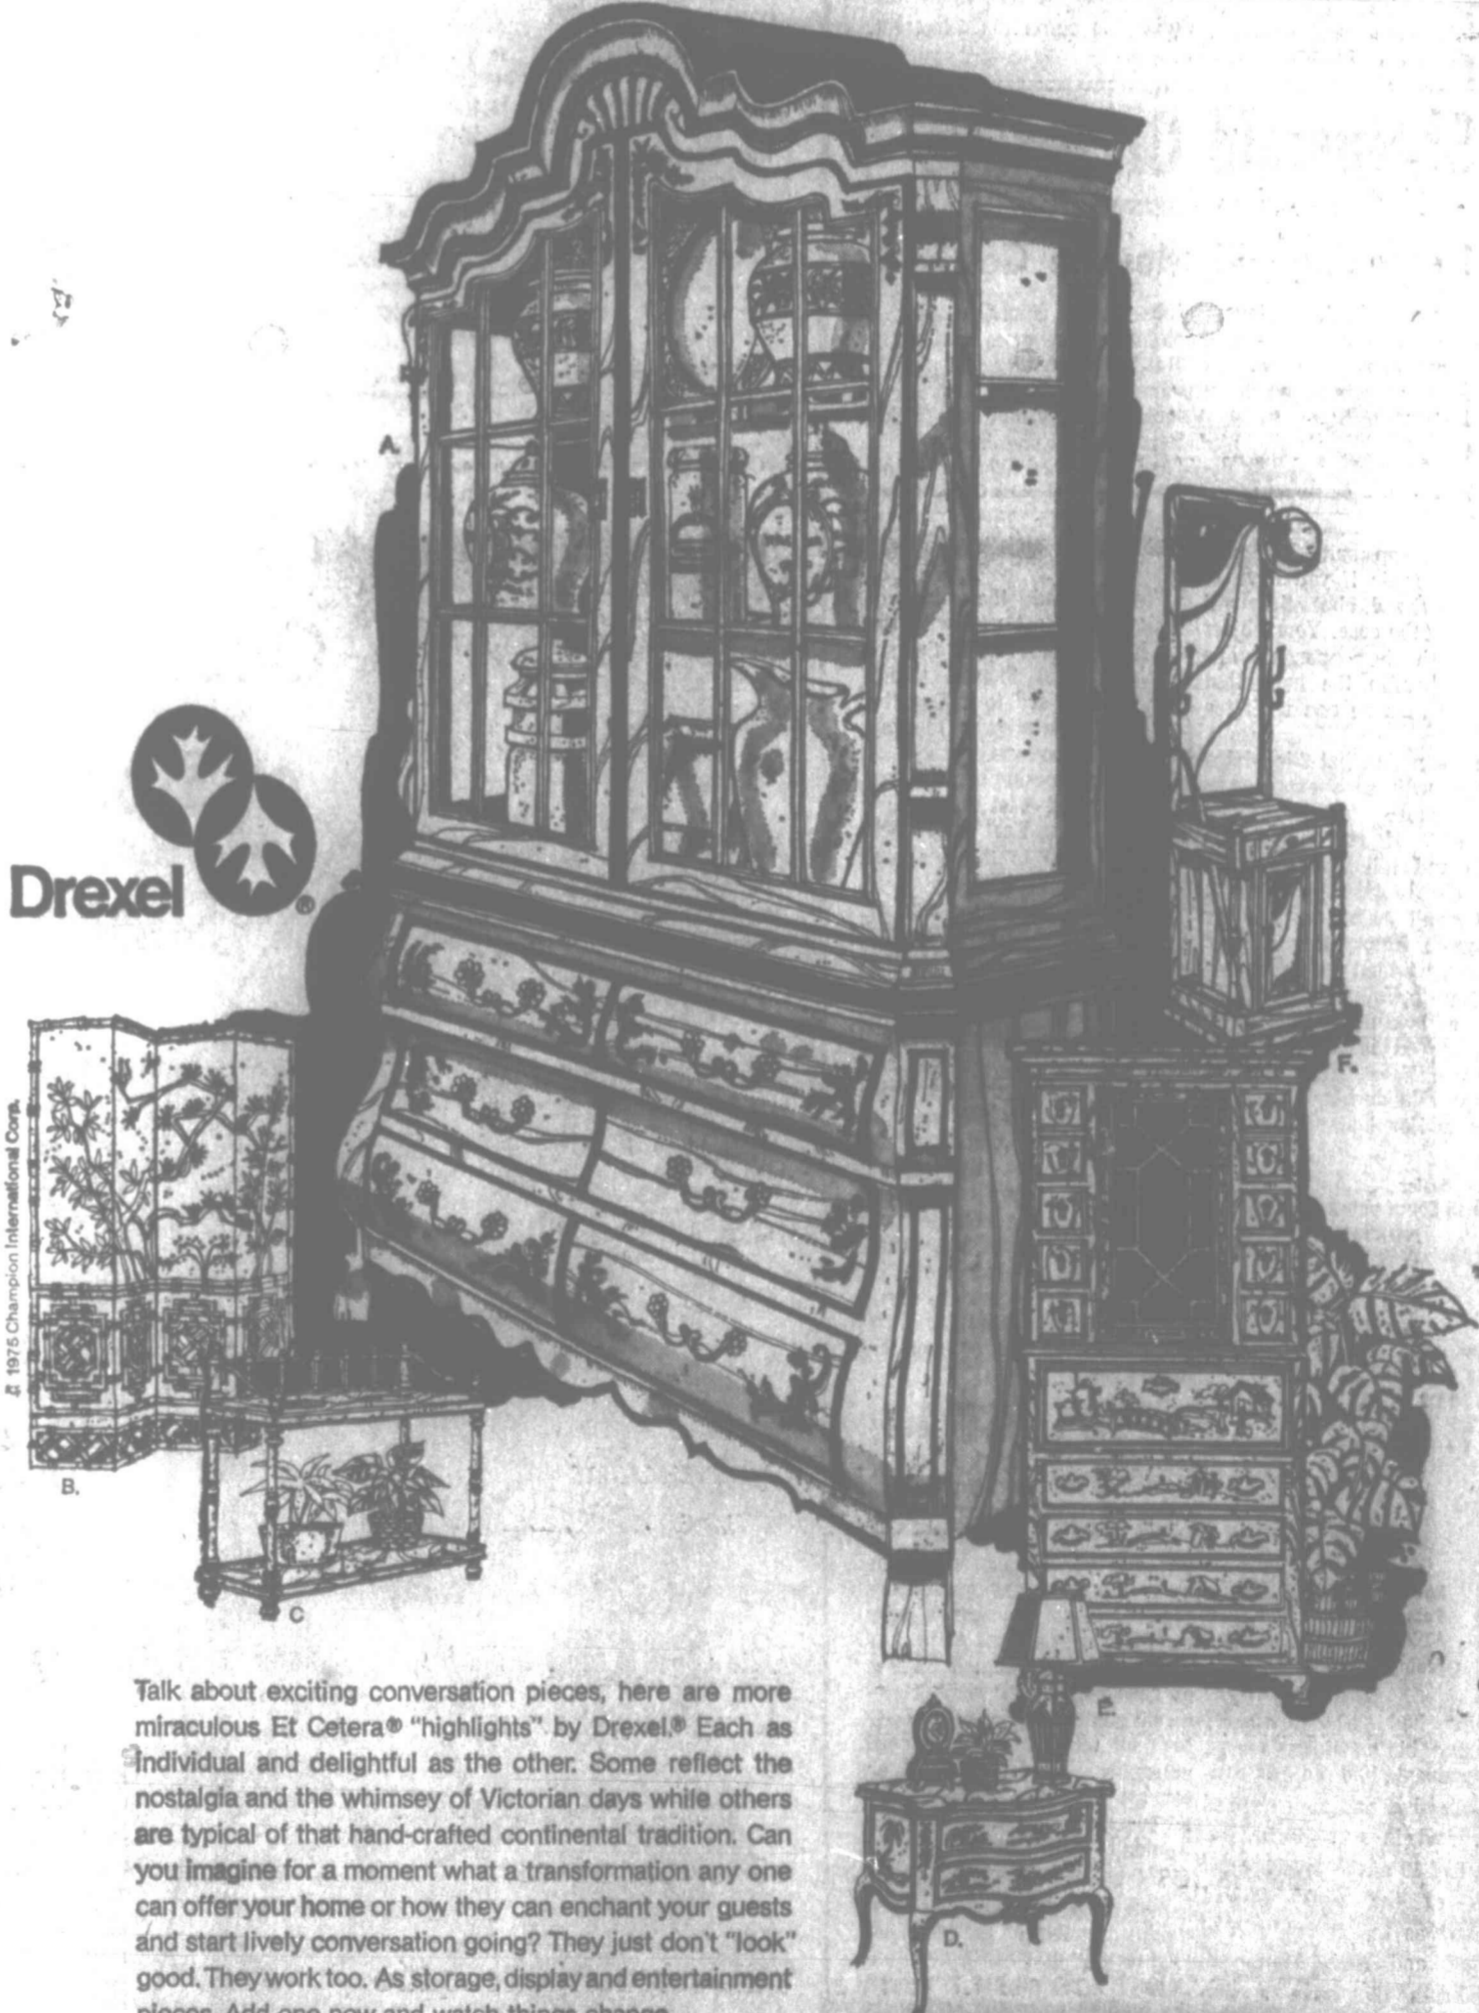

John Kelly, real estate division manager, said the improvements in this phase will provide city utilities to a portion of the homesites and to all the townhomes.

The water and sewer improvements are scheduled to be completed the same time as the first townhome units in mid-September. Construction already has begun on the first seven of 46 townhomes planned for the area.

MORTGAGE PROTECTION

Homeowners insurance is great. It can protect you against almost any conceivable damage or accident that can happen in, on, around and even away from your home. But do not make the mistake of thinking that your homeowners insurance will pay off your mortgage upon the breadwinner's death. It won't.

For this type of protection, and it is desirable, you must purchase a certain type of term life insurance policy for a period of time equal to the length of the mortgage loan.

The premiums on such policies are relatively low — in fact, they are about the lowest cost life insurance policies you can buy because the insurance protection decreases with the reduction of your mortgage. Most insurance companies will tailor a plan to fit your needs and in many cases you can have the payments included in your mortgage payment to the bank. Check with your insurance agent and he will be able to give you the details regarding this protection.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON JOHNSON REALTORS, 2318 W. Ohio St. Phone: 683-5333. We're here to help! (Come in for your free copy of "Homes For Living" magazine).

Dirt, Squirt & Quirt
— FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS —
By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Agent

The hardest decision a cotton producer ever has to make is whether to replant after losing a crop after June 10. Many Midland County and area producers are having to make that decision after last Wednesday night's rain, hail and wind. At least half of the crop in Midland County was destroyed and much of the remainder was seriously damaged. Many farmers had already planted as many as three times due to rains occurring immediately after planting. Some small acreages of ready-to-harvest wheat and oats were also lost to the weather. Moisture supplies are very good now, but whether there is time to take advantage of it with respect to crop production depends now on the type and length of fall season.

Any cotton planted after Monday will be in a race for time to mature. However, there are varieties that have been developed for earliness and these are the ones that should be considered for late planting.

One characteristic that should be considered is whether the variety is determinate in fruiting habit. By that we mean it has a 30- to 35-day fruiting period, then cuts out and matures.

Indeterminate varieties that have a fruiting period of 50 days or more will keep trying to make a top crop late in the season if conditions are good and this interferes with maturity.

A list of cottons and their relative maturity range (listed in order of maturity) are: Earlycot 31, Paymaster Dwarf, Paymaster 54B, Gregg 36, Rilcot 90-A, Rilcot 90, Broadcast 31, Tamcots 21, 23, and 37, Tamcot 768, Lockett 77, Lockett 4789-A, Paymaster 101B, Deltapine SR-3, Stripper 31, Norther Star R-4, Paymaster 202, Blanco 3363, Dunn 56C, Stripper N, Earlycot 32 and Lankart LX571.

These cottons will require 115 to 135 days to maturity if conditions are reasonably good. Some of the above cottons are very short stapled and have low turnout. Those that have some improved staple and quality are the Tamcots, Stripper N, Lockett 4789-A, Earlycot 32, Deltapine SR-3 which are all purported to have 1 inch or more staple. With near 1 inch staple (30 to 31-stnds) are Broadcast 31, Stripper, 31, Lankart 57, Rilcot 90-A, and Earlycot 31.

The first official case of screwworms in Midland County this year was reported this past week. Worms found in the nasal of a calf on the Kern Merren ranch in the southeast part of the county were confirmed as screwworms.

Warm weather and rain over a big part of the area and state have combined to provide ideal conditions for this serious pest of livestock. Stockmen should be particularly alert for this flesh-eating pest at this time. Regular herd checks and the treatment of wounds is essential to keep screwworm cases at a minimum.

Any worms found in livestock wounds should be sent to the Mission Lab, Box 909, Mission 78752. Kits for making the worm samples are available from the county extension office and local livestock inspectors and veterinarians.

If the worms are confirmed as being screwworms, sterile males mate flies will be dropped over the area where the confirmed case originated. Sterile flies were released on the Merren ranch last week. These sterile males mate with the female screwworm flies, and the eggs that are produced will not hatch. Since the female flies usually mate only once in their lifetime, their life cycle is ended. When enough sterile matings have occurred, eradication of the screwworm is achieved.

For the eradication program to be effective, prompt reporting of all worm cases by stockmen is paramount. Screwworms are found most often in the navels of newborn calves. Also, "working" wounds such as those resulting from shearing, docking, earmarking, branding and castrating are prime locations for screwworm flies to lay their eggs.

It is best to postpone such work on stock until late fall after the danger of screwworms has subsided. However, if such work is absolutely necessary, a USDA-approved spray or dip will help reduce the risk of screwworm infestation.

The shorter the vocal cord, the higher the voice sound will be.

Ringing The Bell

By BOB TIEUEL
 The Black Experience: In these days of increased crime and violence sweeping the country, town and cities of the nation, there is one city in Southeast New Mexico, Hobbs, that has kept a firm grip on those who would break the law.
 As a result, there has been downward trend in crimes of violence. One of the leaders of this crime fight and campaign to protect lives and property of its 30,000 citizens is its chief of police Jimmy Palmer, who might be called an olive-complexioned black, who on Sept. 1, 1973, was promoted to chief of police of a force of almost 75 men and women. Prior to his promotion, Palmer had served for several years as second in command of the force.
 Fresh from four years in the Navy, Palmer applied for a position on the Hobbs police force more than 24 years ago. He was accepted March 15, 1951. He started as a patrolman and soon was elevated to senior patrolman and wore the No. 1 badge from 1953 to 1957.
 Palmer was promoted to lieutenant in 1960 then later to captain. During these years, Palmer attended the various academies and police schools conducted by federal and state law enforcement agencies, winning several awards in police work.
 The force at Hobbs is composed of representatives of all ethnic groups.
 "However, I am opposed to any quota system as we want to keep and hire the most efficient and capable officers, without regards to race or creed," the chief said.
 In reply to a question of some of the basic problems encountered, he said, "we try hard to keep open lines between the police and the community. Some police departments have trouble recruiting minority representation because of this very lack of rapport between the people and the police."

A Critical Review Of a Parade: There were a lot of things going in favor of a good news coverage of the 70th birthday celebration and 15th annual rodeo, held in all-black Boley, Okla., in late May. Thousands upon thousands of mostly black youth "kicked up their heels" for some three days in "celebration" and hundreds of gallons of beer, choc, "white lightning," etc. were consumed, with dancing in the streets and no fear of arrest from the mostly black police force.
 The white news media from throughout Oklahoma headlined the affair, with Flip Wilson doing a television show with his crew. It will be televised this fall. Even though Oklahoma's Gov. David Boren led the parade, one could see that thousands had come only to see Wilson.

Rhubarb Pie Recipe One To Remember
 ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Mrs. Jack Zeller's rhubarb supreme pie was accepted for publication in a book of recipes. Then she found out she was being billed, so she made it a recipe to remember, officials say.
 The Pennsylvania Consumer Protection Agency said that when golden Recipes of La Jolla, Calif., advertised for recipes to print in what it advertised as a national publication, it claimed entries could bring cash prizes of $1,000. But when Mrs. Zeller's recipe was approved, she was told she had to pay $10.95 in "publication fees."
 The bureau said Mrs. Zeller, whom it described as an excellent amateur cook, "intentionally altered (the recipe) to include ingredients which any knowledgeable cook would recognize as improper." Among them were chili powder and half a cup of epsom salts, a potent laxative.
 The bureau filed suit Thursday in Erie County Common Pleas Court, charging Golden Recipes with false advertising. The bureau said the firm has never published a recipe book and will approve any recipe sent to it.
 "Golden Recipes plays upon the vanity of citizens by suggesting national recognition for their recipes."

(Continued From Page 1) girl, not an intellectual. She was more interested in home-type things." Although an honor student, she was largely unaware of world events or personalities. She had never heard of Winston Churchill or Beethoven, Rogers remembered.

He said she was quite influenced by Oriental superstition and recalled her telling him her family would cut off the leg of a chicken and boil the leg to forecast the fortunes of the coming year by checking the position of the claws.

Commenting on Hoang's current predicament—a marked contrast to the year the Americans came to Vietnam—Isaac said, "It's so pitiful that this little girl, who probably received a diploma (in Midland) in back under these circumstances."

Efforts are being made, however, both here and in Houston, to sponsor the refugee family. Although several Midlanders have expressed concern and willingness to help, a Houston church apparently has proceeded furthest in viable plans to bring the family there.

While nothing is certain yet, Ferris said, "I got the feeling there is a fairly firm commitment with Hoang's family to come to Houston" through discussions with Memorial Methodist Church which is attempting to sponsor them.

Momentum Builds For More Kissinger Shuttle Diplomacy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Momentum is building for an early resumption of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East.

Arrangements were made late Friday for Kissinger and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin to resume their Middle East peace talks Sunday in New York.

Kissinger and Rabin will get together at the prime minister's suite at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Rabin had scheduled a stop in New York to address a dinner given by American Jewish organizations Saturday night and to appear on CBS' "Face the Nation" on Sunday.

Final Energy Vote May Come This Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The Democratic leadership looks ineffective; the followship looks petulant and irresponsible," observed Rep. Jim Wright after the first week of debate on a House energy program.

Wright, a Texas Democrat, was a key figure in the moves in the early days of the 94th Congress to set up energy and economy programs to counter President Ford's proposals.

He headed the task force to develop a program behind which Democrats could rally, both key committee members and the rank and file.

In the five months since then Democrats in the House, able to arrive at some consensus on the economy, have been unable to agree on the basics of an energy program.

vote for anything that would bite," said Wright. After a week of debate, the House takes up the bill again Tuesday, hoping for a final vote sometime this week.

Some have blamed House Majority Leader Carl Albert of Oklahoma for the inaction, while others blamed the large and sometimes bumptious class of Democratic freshmen. Several freshmen have mounted a move to ask Albert to resign.

But congressmen of both parties were not inclined to cite a single cause for problems in approving an energy program.

Among the shortcomings suggested were: —Most major energy provisions bore more heavily on one part of the country than another and congressmen voted to protect their districts.

Paper Reports States Buy Wiretap Equipment

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Post says information developed by a federal wiretap commission shows wiretapping equipment has been purchased since 1968 by law enforcement agencies in several states which have no laws permitting the use of wiretaps.

The states include Texas, the newspaper said. The Post said in its editions today that it has learned that this information will be disclosed during hearings June 25-27 in Washington, D.C., by the National Commission for the Review of Federal and State Laws relating to Wiretapping and Electronic Surveillance.

Mike Hershman, chief investigator for the commission, was quoted by the Post as saying the sales of wiretap devices to police across the country were determined when the commission obtained records of nine major manufacturers of electronic surveillance equipment.

Blown-Out Gas Well Blazes, Mysteriously Snuffs Self Out

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fire shooting 200 feet into the air from a blown-out gas well in the Gulf of Mexico mysteriously choked itself off Saturday morning, but a stream of natural gas and oil-like condensate continued to spray from the well.

A spokesman for Amoco Production Co., operators of the well, said engineers did not know what started the fire or what put it out.

The Amoco spokesman said it was possible that a large bubble of water surfaced in the well, temporarily scorching the flames.

Four barges pumped a continuous stream of 12,000 gallons of water a minute on the well to guard against the possibility of reignition.

The well had blown out Wednesday. Thirty-one men aboard the rig escaped uninjured to another platform nearby a mile away and firefighting barges were called in as a precaution.

No Break In Heat Wave In Forecast

You may want to sit on a block of ice later on in the afternoon if what passed through Midland about 5 p.m. Saturday creeps in and over again today.

The heat wave. The temperature here hovered in the low 100s and hit 103 right at 5 p.m. Saturday, the National Weather Service at Midland Air Terminal said.

Another hot spell is forecast for this afternoon when the thermometer is expected to reach the 100-degree mark. Tonight's low is to be in the upper 90s.

Monday's high, under clear-to-partly-cloudy skies, is forecast for the upper 90s.

In Saturday's heat wave, El Paso clipped Midland by two points with 105-degree readings. Lubbock registered 101 and Wichita Falls, 100.

Elsewhere, temperatures climbed to their hottest levels thus far this year across broad areas of Texas. Childress had 103 degrees early in the afternoon while Lubbock checked in with a 99. Other high 90s readings were reported at Mineral Wells, Amarillo, San Angelo and Wichita Falls.

Gusty winds raked the Big Spring area as the front passed slowly through far West Texas. The Associated Press reported.

Piggly Wiggly officials here declined to comment Saturday on whether Midland employees would participate in the walkout that was expected to take place at 12:01 this morning in Piggly Wiggly stores throughout West Texas.

Interment will be in Lamesa Memorial Park under direction of Bronson Funeral Home.

The youth was fatally injured Thursday night in a motorcycle collision at the intersection of Front and Clark Streets in Midland.

The matter involved a federally financed special unemployment assistance program which gives benefits to roughly 12 million state and local government employees, household workers and farm workers whose jobs had not been covered by such laws until Congress first moved in this area last December.

He said the men were riding in a pick-up truck and an automobile when the vehicles stopped at a customs checkpoint. A routine inspection discovered about 23 kilos, or about 70 pounds, of a substance.

Number Of Bureaucrats Able To Stamp 'Secret' On Documents Decreased

By DON IRWIN
The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The number of bureaucrats authorized to stamp "top secret," "secret" or "confidential" on official papers has dropped by 74 per cent in the past three years, President Ford was told Friday. Still, document classification is not a lost art in Washington.

The seven-member Interagency Classification and Review Committee reported to Ford that 1974 ended with 15,466 officials throughout the government empowered to classify documents. It said 59,316 officials had that authority when former President Richard M. Nixon created the committee in June, 1972, and ordered it to organize systematic declassification procedures. The committee report said "reduction in the number of authorized classifiers contributes to a reduction in the number of documents unnecessarily classified," but it was clear that the volume of classification remains substantial.

The 23 governmental units with classification authority imposed restrictions on over 4 million documents during 1974, the report said. Because of changed reporting systems, a spokesman said, it is impossible to say if the total is below that for 1973. Although the Defense Department has the largest decrease in the number of "authorized classifiers" — down from 30,542 in 1972 to 5,550 last December — the report found that it remains the busiest classifier in government. Data based on a sampling system showed that the department's worldwide operations generated 2,225,000 classified messages — 14,275 of them top secret — during 1974. Runner-up was the Central Intelligence Agency, with a reported total of 814,000 classified documents, including 14,447 top-secret documents and "a limited number of photographic intelligence reports."

The committee said government departments and agencies had developed machinery to prevent abuses of classification that include letters of reprimand to officials who fail to comply with instructions to downgrade classification of documents and to declassify those that no longer require classification. The committee said it had received reports of 20 unauthorized disclosures of classified material during the year, primarily "unauthorized releases to the press, persons responsible unknown."

Although the committee considers the leaks "a serious matter," the report said, their small number gives "grounds for continued confidence that the tighter and more credible classification system... will continue to bring about an increased respect for the system by those who work with it." The 1972 Nixon order that created the committee authorized any member of the public to request a mandatory review by the appropriate government department or agency of any document it has kept secret more than 10 years. The report said 1,017 reviews were requested in 1974 and 607 requests were approved. Another 138 requests were granted in part and 161 were denied. Many of the requests covered numerous documents.

The committee also reported that the 1972 Nixon order that created the committee authorized any member of the public to request a mandatory review by the appropriate government department or agency of any document it has kept secret more than 10 years. Snelson's income from royalties from Tesoro Petroleum Corp. was between $1,000 and $4,999.99. Snelson and his wife, Susan S. Snelson, jointly own an 80-acre farm and six lots and a house in Ward County, six lots in Jeff Davis County, two lots in Travis County, a house and five lots and 140 acres of minerals in New Mexico. Snelson's personal liabilities include four loans for more than $5,000, one each from The First National Bank of Midland, The Midland National Bank, Carter Securities Corp., El Paso and Carl Stantz of Austin. He owes money to six other institutions, each loan listed between $1,000 and $4,999.99, including his home loan.

Assets listed for Snelson, Randal and Johnson, Inc., in excess of $5,000 were good will, office furniture and equipment, automobiles and accounts receivable. Liabilities listed for the company in excess of $5,000 were accounts payable and notes payable. Assets for Six-S Properties, Inc., listed in excess of $5,000 were all property and real estate and miscellaneous equipment and pickups. Liabilities in excess of $5,000 were accounts payable and notes payable. Mrs. Snelson is not listed as holding any stock in the two companies, although she is treasurer of both.

Rep. John Hoestemach of Odessa said his 1974 income came from being a member of the Legislature, president of Energy Plus Co. and as a lawyer, where he was under retainers for KOZA Radio, Ancors & Holes Inc., B&L Equipment and Blakely Construction Co. He also has cattle interests and between 100 and 400 shares in Mobil Oil Corp. Carrillo's Lawyers Say Oil Firms Push Impeachment Probe

AUSTIN (AP) — Big oil companies are behind the impeachment investigation of Duval County District Judge O. P. Carrillo, says the judge's lawyer.

The late George Parr and his nephew, Archer Parr, have made deals with the oil companies for years, according to the lawyer, Arthur Mitchell of Austin.

"What they are afraid of is that if the Parris lose control of the taxing authorities in Duval, they will be carried on the tax rolls they way they should be," Mitchell said.

The doubling of the price of oil has made it economically feasible for the oil companies to go back into the old, inactive fields in Duval, he said.

Carrillo ousted four of the seven members of the Benavides Independent School District board of trustees March 20 after Dist. Atty. Arnulfo Guerra alleged those members were involved in the destruction of school district records.

Guerra said he began an investigation of the school district and other county agencies Feb. 10 because of stories in the Corpus Christi Caller-Times on alleged wrongdoing.

The ousted trustees were Parr men. The other three trustees included two Carrillo relatives. Carrillo and Guerra have been accused of conspiring to take over the school board.

Mitchell said Friday he will no longer cooperate with the special House committee investigating Carrillo. "The basic fairness has gone out of the thing," he said.

Mitchell said the hearing has turned into a trial on income tax charges. The judge is under federal indictment on such charges, but that matter should be handled in court, he said.

Mitchell contends he had rebutted the committee's case against Carrillo but that "the skids are greased" for the impeachment. He will file a civil rights suit in federal court as soon as the committee recommends impeachment articles to the full House, he said.

The House erred in the resolution creating the committee, he said, because it used the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1961 to continue the committee's jurisdiction after the legislature adjourned. The Texas Constitution provides the correct procedure, he said.

But the main point of his federal suit will be an allegation of a conspiracy between the Internal Revenue Service and legislators to get Carrillo. "It's a syndication of governmental power, and that syndication becomes oppressive. They come at you without constitutional restraints," he said.

"It's a well-known fact among lawyers," Mitchell said, "that if you take an IRS case, you can count on being audited, and audited again."

He said he spent $15,000 for accountant's fees last year justifying his tax return in an IRS audit. He has represented several tax defendants, including Jake Jacobsen of Austin, the man who accused former Gov. John Connally of taking a $10,000 bribe from milk producers.

Waco Legislator Wants Briscoe To Veto Some Spending

By PATRICK CONWAY
Austin Bureau

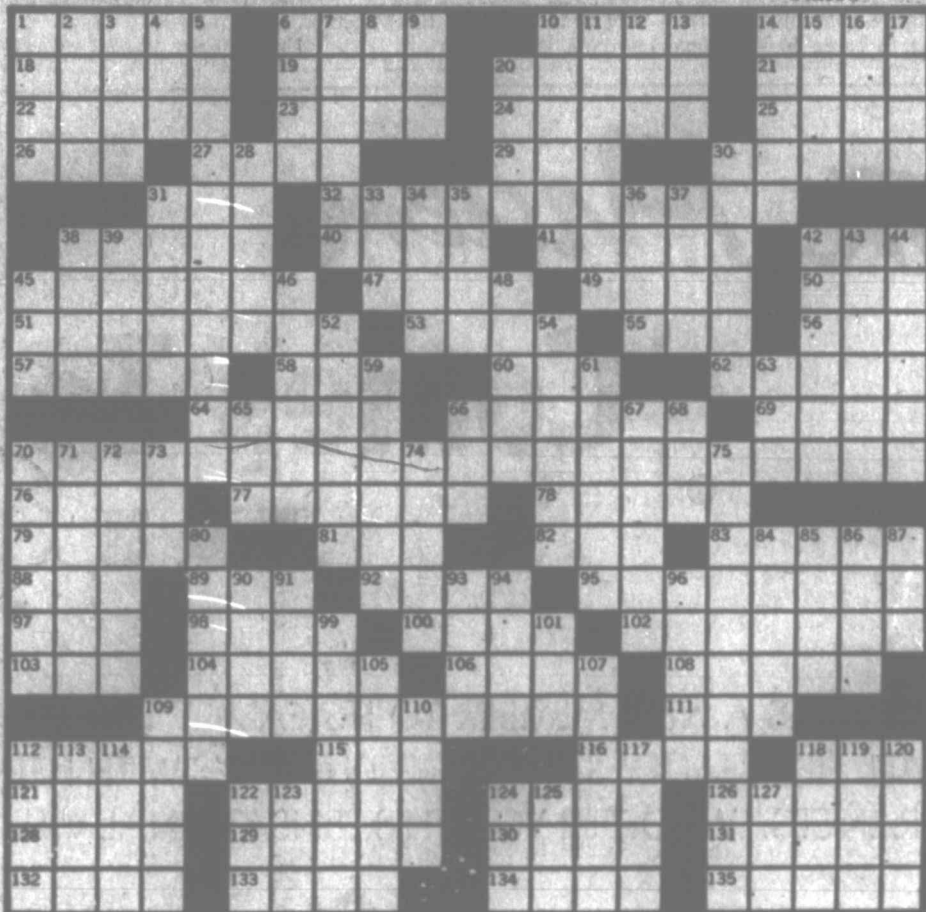

AUSTIN — Rep. Lane Denton of Waco is mighty frugal when it comes to spending state money outside his district. Denton is urging Gov. Dolph Briscoe to veto programs for areas ranging from the Panhandle to the Big Bend and from the rose gardens of East Texas to the High Plains and Red River. In all, Denton recommended that Briscoe strike $41 million from the state's new $12.1 billion budget for 1976-77. He did not call for any budget cuts in McLennan County—his district. Denton even went for the governor's jugular. He told Briscoe he should veto $3.4 million for the Governor's Energy Advisory Council. Denton said it would duplicate work already done by the Railroad Commission, General Land Office and other agencies. Denton's money machete sliced 129 miles east of Waco to propose budget cuts of $17.2 million at the East Texas Chest Hospital and $9.9 million at Texas Eastern University, both in Tyler. The hospital is only 50 per cent occupied, he said, and the university is so small that with the $9.9 million the state would be spending $18,000 per year per pupil, almost twice that spent at other colleges and universities. Moving a little to the southwest, Denton said $4.8 million earmarked for the Col-field Prison Unit near Palestine for construction would create one of the world's largest prison complexes and "may create a situation ripe for discontent and violence by the inmate population." Onward to the Red River he went, urging a veto of $5.8 million for the Vernon Drug Abuse Center, saying such a remote place was not needed to teach youths from Houston, San Antonio and Dallas how to cope with an urban environment. The next target for saving is 348 miles away from his district—$150,000 for facility improvements at the Texas Tech University Museum. He said that was more than one-third of the entire budget for the museum. Northward to the Panhandle and a recommendation that $380,000 be cut for construction at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum at Canyon. Finally to the Big Bend where it would be ridiculous. Denton said, to spend $174,900 for street improvements at Sul Ross State University. "I do not suggest that this is all that could reasonably be vetoed from SB 52," Denton told Briscoe. "In my opinion, additional amounts could be vetoed in this bill considering the need to restrict state spending now to avoid additional taxes later." Denton was one of 52 House members who voted against the entire spending package for 1976-77.

INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT*

NEW TAX-DEDUCTIBLE RETIREMENT PROGRAM NOW AVAILABLE AT FIRST SAVINGS

Federal law now permits individuals not participating in any type of pension or retirement fund to set aside 15% of their earned income, or up to $1500 a year, in a tax-deductible fund for retirement purposes.

If a husband and wife are both working each may establish a separate I. R. A. account provided neither is not participating in any other retirement plan. Thus a single family would be eligible to put aside up to $3000 each year.

During the time the plan is in force accounts will earn interest daily and no federal income tax will have to be paid on either contributions or interest. At retirement, the individual may elect to receive monthly payments from the account or take it in a lump sum. These funds are then taxed as ordinary income, at a rate which would ordinarily be less than it would on the original sum because of the probable change in the individual's tax bracket.

For more details about how the INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNT can work for you come by First Savings or give us a call.

*The IRA savings plan is offered in addition to the Keough Plan for the self-employed.

FLAG DAY LOSER — Milwaukee flagmaker Mel Shikora says the groundswell of patriotism for the national bicentennial is making this a banner year for his business, except for the hundreds of WIN flags he got stuck with. 'Model Cities' In Financial Trouble

JONATHAN, Minn. (AP) — Dr. Robert Kiste has a stake in the $21 million dream that is this village in the woods, lakes and rolling hills southwest of Minneapolis.

Indeed, his 7-year-old son likes it here so much that he told his mother she should be a kid again so she could grow up in Jonathan.

But 7-year-old eyes don't read the debit sheets on this project that was the first of 14 "New Towns and Model Cities" scattered around the nation — experiments in living that were to find answers to the problems of land planning, home design, pollution, schools, mass transit and other aspects of metropolitan living.

The U.S. Congress authorized financial and technical help to approved developers. But at most all of these experiments are in trouble today, and money is the reason. Consider Jonathan:

Born seven years ago, it was authorized $21 million in federal mortgage guarantees in 1970 and was to house 50,000 people by 1980. It would be a designed balance between residential, commercial and recreational areas. Commuter trains would whisk workers the 25 to 40 miles to their jobs in Minneapolis and St. Paul, and others would work at companies that moved into Jonathan.

But today, there are only 2,300 residents in what is called Village One, the first and only residential area completed. There are no commuter trains, and Bob Kiste for example drives an hour and a half roundtrip to his job at the University of Minnesota where he is an associate professor of anthropology. It doesn't bother him. He spends three days a week at the university, two at home reading and writing. His home has office space at a walkout level that opens on an expanse of rolling terrain.

"For my kind of work, it's a beautiful place," he says. "It's like country living, quiet and peaceful. It's a delightful place to live and raise children."

Not necessarily for the people who built it.

The Jonathan Development Corp. has had to ask the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for advances of $468,000 and $360,000 to meet interest payments.

Bruce Nimmer, third president of the corporation in a year, says he's trying to line up another company to take over the mortgaged 6,000-acre spread.

The model cities program began in 1968 with HUD looking for functional, pleasant styles of living, as opposed to the haphazard, subdivision-on-subdivision jigsaw puzzle of the suburbs.

Jonathan is not the only new town in trouble. HUD says that almost all, but not all, of the 14 model communities are having difficulties. Some blame changing times, inflation, and changing money supplies. Others say the federal government has not helped enough. As a result of the problems, some of the new towns might become carbon copies of what they were supposed to replace.

Under laws passed in 1968 and 1970, HUD was authorized to guarantee up to $50 million worth of each developer's bonds, plus technical assistance, plus financing for roads, schools, sewers and other facilities. But some developers have charged that the federal government has withheld funds for the new communities program.

Some new towns are healthy, at least for the time being. Woodlands, a 20,000-acre project 30 miles north of Houston, Tex., that has preserved much of the site's existing forest, reports no present money problems. And Maumelle, a development 13 miles from downtown Little Rock, Ark., is busy with its construction program.

Otto Stolz, the HUD official in charge of the new community projects, says almost all the projects are in financial difficulty. He says most developers have planned the financing of their projects poorly. He also says there are a limited number of people willing to buy homes in these experimental communities.

Stolz pointed out that financial failures wouldn't mean people would be thrown into the streets at these new towns. The land simply would be sold to other developers, and the people there would stay if they chose to stay.

The state of the economy gets much of the blame for the problems faced by new town developers. But Nimmer, echoing complaints from other developers, cites a "basic lack of direction" within HUD.

A major problem, Nimmer said, is that HUD is not making loans to cover interest payments. Another is that HUD isn't making grants to cover installation of sewer and other facilities. Both, he said, are part of the 1968 legislation.

Tornadoes Blast Oklahoma Town

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Cleanup operations got underway today in the wake of Friday's tornado barrage which caused extensive damage at Oklahoma State University and in the downtown area.

No serious injuries were reported as at least two funnels destroyed 20 mobile homes in southeast Stillwater and battered OSU buildings.

Officials said one woman received a broken leg when a camper vehicle overturned as the storms tore a six-block-wide gash from OSU to the southeast through the business district.

OSU President Robert B. Kamm said half of the campus' 60 buildings were damaged. He said Old Central, OSU's oldest building, lost its roof and part of an outside wall.

Many plate glass windows were blown out of businesses and police reported several overturned cars throughout the business district.

Most of the city was without power after the storms downed numerous power lines.

Heavy rains left a foot of water on Oklahoma 51 west of town, and hail the size of marbles and golfballs was reported.

National Guardsmen from several northeastern and north-central Oklahoma towns were put on alert for Stillwater duty. Meanwhile, Guard officials here put troops in the streets to prevent looting.

Highway Patrol troopers controlled traffic into Stillwater throughout the night with roadblocks surrounding the town.

Meanwhile, the Patrol reported additional tornadoes near Chandler, and Stroud, along with 75 mile per hour straight winds.

Civil Defense officials in Chandler reported downed power lines and numerous broken windows, but no injuries.

Brezhnev Proposes Ban On Developing 'Terrible' New Arms

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev has proposed that the United States and the Soviet Union initiate an international agreement to ban development of systems of mass destruction "even more terrible than nuclear ones."

The Communist party chief, in a televised speech Friday, said there was a "serious danger" that modern science and technology would create such weaponry.

He did not specify any particular weapon system under development.

Sources in Washington said the only new systems under study make use of lasers but development of such weapons was still 10 years away.

Under existing accords, the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to limit the proliferation, testing and development of nuclear weapons.

They have also agreed to an international ban on environmental warfare and are currently negotiating a limitation on missiles armed with multiple nuclear warheads.

Brezhnev pointed to limited progress so far in controlling the arms race and said, "I would like to stress the significance of one important question. It has not yet been reflected in agreements between states, which, in our belief, becomes more and more timely and more acute, and cannot be shunted aside."

"The matter concerns the fact that countries, especially large countries, sign an agreement to prohibit the creation of new types of weapons of mass destruction ..."

"The wisdom and conscience of humanity dictate that we set an insurmountable barrier to the appearance of such weaponry."

Brezhnev proposed no timetable or means for instituting such an accord, but indicated that he hopes to sign an agreement on offensive nuclear missiles when he and President Ford meet in the United States later this year.

Brezhnev, appearing fit during his speech to workers and officials at the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses, suggested that talks in Vienna on troops and weapons reductions in Central Europe are not going well. He accused the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of using the talks to strengthen its military position.

American Beef Packers' President Quits Post

OMAHA (AP) — Bowing to mounting pressures from creditors, Frank R. West has conditionally resigned as president and board chairman of financially-troubled American Beef Packers, Inc., (ABP).

In a prepared statement Friday, West said his resignation is dependent on, and will not become effective until two conditions are met:

—Federal Bankruptcy Judge David Crawford's approval of ABP's plan to pay off its estimated 2,000 creditors.

—And on a firm commitment to supply funds to bail out the firm is made by the General Electric Credit Corp. (GECC).

In January, ABP filed for protection and reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Act.

Since then, West has been scrambling nationwide in an attempt to gain funds through the sale of ABP assets and new sources of financing.

He has been partially successful; negotiating the sale of ABP's ultra-modern slaughtering and fabricating plant at Dumas, Tex., to Swift & Co., Roberts-Dairy, Inc., of Omaha to a pair of Omaha businessmen, and a large facility at Minstare, Neb., to the Premier Corp., of Fowlerville, Mich.

All told, the three sales raised about $29 million, but the sale of the Dumas plant is yet to be approved by the U.S. Department of Justice.

M-Cubs Win, 7-3

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Cubs swept to their fourth straight win before more than 8,000 Texas League fans Saturday night by dumping the San Antonio Brewers, 7-3.

Midland got off to a good start in the first inning when Joel Green was safe on the catcher's interference. Bill Droega walked and Wayne Tyrone singled in Green. Tyrone was out stealing and Al Montreuil walked. Bill Bright followed with a single for a 2-0 lead.

San Antonio came back to score one run in the bottom of the first inning off starter Dan Corder when Kashmirch walked, stole second and scored on Will Aaron's single in six.

The Cubs came back in the fifth on a double by Steve Clancy, Green's single and a two-bagger by Droega. Montreuil then followed with a single to right for a 4-1 lead.

San Antonio scored a pair of runs in the fifth when Gary Cleverly singled and Andy Rodriguez was safe on an infield single. Al Oliver walked to load the bases and Rich Guerra singled in two runs.

Oliver was thrown out at the plate moments later by Wallis in center to end the uprising.

Midland eighth inning, Tyrone walked, Montreuil moved Tyrone down on a sacrifice and Bright grounded to short, but Mike Sember singled and Wallis followed with a double into the right field corner.

The same teams play tonight at 7:45 p.m.

He's in his customary position as the season's leading money-winner. He has responded to Johnny Miller's challenge in the devastating, overwhelming fashion of which only he seems capable.

Six AAU Records Fall During Meet

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Six meet records fell Saturday night in the National Junior AAU track and field championship, but sprint sensation Houston McTeer won the 100-meter in an ordinary time of 10.2 seconds.

McTeer, 18-year-old high school junior from Milligan, Fla., got off to a poor start and didn't challenge the 9.98 he posted Friday night in the preliminaries.

The Friday time was six-hundredths of a second off the 100-meter world record of 9.9 and established AAU and national high school records.

Meet records also were broken in the triple jump, discus, 400-meter intermediate hurdles, 800-meter run, 3,000 steeplechase and 5,000 run.

The record-setting athletes were:

—Villanova freshman Mark Belger, with 1:47.5 in the 800 meters.

—Henry Perez of San Joaquin Delta College in the 3,000 steeplechase with 8:48.2.

—Ralph King, Atlanta, with 14:17 in the 5,000-meter run.

—Michigan State freshman Howard Neely with 51.2 in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles.

Behind Wretford are Lones Wigger, Carter, Mont., at 1157.

Chisox Topple Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Deron Johnson drove in five runs with a pair of homers and a sacrifice fly and Wilbur Wood settled down after a shaky start as the Chicago White Sox beat the New York Yankees 7-3 Saturday night for their first victory after nine consecutive losses to the Yankees.

The Yankees had won 19 of their previous 34 starts, including all four meetings with the White Sox this season.

Brian Downing started Chicago's tie-breaking, two-run sixth inning against Doc Medich, 5-8, with a bunt single. One out later he stole second and scored on Jorge Orta's single. Orta went to third when second baseman Sandy Alomar booted

Gulf-Ford Leads Le Mans Classic

LE MANS, France (AP) — With nothing to fear but mechanical trouble, two British Gulf-Fords led the 24 hour Le Mans endurance classic Sunday as it neared the halfway point.

But as if to illustrate what could still rob them of victory, the second best Gulf-Ford developed electrical problems after the 12th hour, dropped to fifth place but fought its way back to second again.

Jackie Ickx of Belgium and Britain's Derek Bell drove the No. 1 Gulf faultlessly and developed a four-lap lead over the nearest car before their teammates, Australian Vern Schuppan and Frenchman Jean Pierre Jaussaud, went back into second place.

The challenge to the blue-and-orange Gulfs had been expected to come from three French Ligiers and a Porsche 906, and it did. For hours, the leading Gulf was followed in second place by Reinhold Jost and Mario Casoni in the Porsche, driving beautifully.

One Ligier dropped out after a collision, and another stopped in the pits and went from fourth to 21st. The remaining Ligier in good shape, however, clung on grimly behind the Porsche 906 as night fell.

But then, near the halfway point, both the Porsche and the leading Ligier of Jean Louis Lafosse and Guy Chasseuil went into the pits in quick succession, and the Gulfs were back on top.

Five sturdy Porsche Carreras and another Porsche 906 charmed round with only minor mishaps, and had settled down in fifth to 10th positions.

Britain's Alain de Cadenet, in a modified Lola, at one point was third, developed exhaust trouble and dropped to 20th place, advanced again but lost a piece of bodywork and was again delayed.

Sam Posey, of San Juan Capistrano, Calif., drove his colorful three-liter BMW expertly and maintained seventh place for more than five hours, but on the far stretch the car developed transmission trouble, fell back to 37th place and finally abandoned the race.

The race is expected to be run entirely in dry, warm weather, but no track records are in the offing. The cars are slightly less powerful this year and must adhere to fuel consumption restrictions as a nominal concession to the energy crisis.

The new conditions and uncertainty over the future of the Le Mans race, Matras and Alfa Romeos that could have proved the only sure threat to the Gulf-Fords.

Western Catholic Topples Monahans

Western Catholic dethroned Monahans, 5-2, in a Senior Teenage League baseball game at Cubs Stadium Friday night.

Winning pitcher Larry Murphy was touched for two runs in the third inning, but Monahans got 10 hits in the game.

Billy Shock and Clelan Pearce had run scoring singles in the first for the Western team and two more scored in the second when Chris Gaddy scored on a wild pitch and Murphy on a single by Shock. Shock scored another run in the fourth on an error by Monahans' Dale Stephens.

Jesie Rubio was the losing pitcher for Monahans.

Yankees Lose Elliott Maddox

NEW YORK (AP) — Center-fielder Elliott Maddox of the New York Yankees was placed on the 15-day disabled list Saturday by the American League club, which also announced it had purchased Kerry Dineen from Syracuse of the International League. Maddox suffered an injured left knee in a game Friday against the Chicago White Sox. He was hitting .307, with one home run and 23 RBI. Dineen was hitting .227, with no homers and 18 RBI, for Syracuse.

Aaron's Blast Downs Angels

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Henry Aaron slammed a towering tie-breaking home run off fireballing Nolan Ryan in the third inning, sparking the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-4 victory over the California Angels Saturday. Aaron's seventh homer of the year, the 740th of his career and the second of his career off Ryan, broke a 2-2 tie. Ryan struck out 12 Brewers in his losing effort to raise his major league leading total to 118. A sacrifice fly by Gorman Thomas gave the Brewers a 4-2 lead in the fourth after Darrell Porter walked and raced to third on an error by Jerry Remy.

Grimsley Blanks Minnesota, 7-0

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Ross Grimsley pitched a five-hit and Lee May's two-run single triggered a four-run third inning that propelled the Baltimore Orioles to a 7-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Saturday. The victory was Grimsley's first since May 18, when he four-hit Chicago, and only his second in 10 decisions this year. The Orioles loaded the bases against loser Jim Hughes, 6-4, on Ken Singleton's single, a walk to Mark Belanger and Al Dumbray's single before May lined his two-run hit to left-center field. Jim Northrup's sacrifice fly and Don Baylor's double made it 4-0. Baltimore added two runs in the seventh off reliever Vic Albury on a walk to Dumbray, a double by May, a wild pitch that let Dumbray score and a sacrifice fly by Paul Blair. Then Baylor hit his seventh homer of the season in the ninth.

Twins, Brewers Trade Outfielders Saturday

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Twins announced Saturday a trade of outfielders with Milwaukee—Bobby Darwin for John Briggs. "We want to use Briggs at first base," said Minnesota Manager Frank Quilici. "I think it could be a good trade for both teams, but it should really help us getting another experienced bat into the lineup." Darwin, 32, enjoyed his best season with Minnesota last year, hitting .264 with 25 home runs and 94 runs batted in. However, he was off to a slow start, hitting only .220 with five homers and 18 RBI. "Apparently Milwaukee plans to use me if they were willing to make the trade to get me," said Darwin, who bats left-handed. "I've been pressing and need the playing time to get untracked. I kind of figured the trade was coming, but I have no hard feelings toward the Twins." Briggs, 31, had a .254 career batting average with 129 home runs coming into the 1975 season. He has been used as an outfielder, first baseman and designated hitter and has played with Philadelphia in the National League and the Brewers. Briggs hit .253 with 17 home runs and 73 RBI last season. The Twins had an abundance of outfielders and Darwin, who has been in a prolonged slump, had seen little action recently.

Triple Medalist

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — Lee Chin-Shia, 24, of Taiwan and the University of Redlands, Calif., became the first triple gold medalist in the Asian Amateur Athletic Championships Saturday, winning the women's 1,500-meter race. Miss Lee, coached by Chi Cheng, former women's sprint champion from Taiwan and her husband, Vincent Reel, previously had won the 800-meter and 1,000-meter events. In the 1,500, she set an Asian record of 4 minutes, 23.0 seconds.

National Little League City Tourney Wednesday

The annual National Little League City Baseball Tournament will begin a three-day run Wednesday at the Richard Knox Field, according to Dick Saxe, commissioner of the Midland Junior Baseball Association. The "B" Tournament, as it has come to be known, will have two games on Wednesday and Thursday with the championship final set for Friday. All games are slated for a 6 p.m. start. The Richard Knox field are located across the street from the Leo High School tennis courts. The tournament is made up of city league champions. Each team will also carry three pick-up players from other teams, and will be allowed to only pitch. Tower and North Central managed the first break of the single elimination tournament when they drew byes, and will not have to play until Thursday. Wednesday's first round action will pit Northern Little League against the Westerns on diamond 1 while Eastern and Central tangle on diamond 2. The winner of the Northern-Westerns clash will meet Tower Thursday on diamond 3 while the Eastern-Central winner will take on North Central Thursday at diamond 1. These winners will then meet Friday for the championship.

Evert Captures French Crown

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert retained her French tennis title Saturday and again underlined her mastery on clay courts. In winning, Miss Evert turned a threatened upset into a rout, beating Martina Navratilova 2-6, 6-2, 6-1 in scorching heat before 15,000 fans at Roland Garros Stadium. In Sunday's men's final, defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina will meet Bjorn Borg of Sweden. Vilas eliminated Eddie Dibbs of Miami Beach, Fla., 6-1, 6-4, 1-6, 6-1 while Borg beat Adriano Panatta of Italy 6-4, 1-6, 7-5, 6-6. Dibbs was the last U.S. man in the tournament. The last American winner of the French title was Tony Trabert in 1955. Miss Evert has not lost in Europe since bowing to Billie Jean King in the Wimbledon final in 1973. Since then, the Chicago star from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has won Wimbledon once, the Italian title twice and the French title twice. But for a time Saturday, it appeared Miss Navratilova, who lost to Chris in the Italian final two weeks ago, was going to pull an upset. After Chris had held service in the opening game, the 18-year-old Czech won the next five games. "She played unbelievable," Miss Evert said of her opponent's first-set performance. "If she had gone on like that, the title would have been hers." In the second game of the second set, Miss Navratilova thought one of her serves had gone out and made no move to go after Chris' return. After an argument, the woman umpire ordered the point replayed. The American won it again for a 2-0 lead. The incident clearly upset Miss Navratilova's concentration and she lost seven points in a row. In fact, she managed only to win three more points in the match. In the final set, Miss Evert coolly broke down Miss Navratilova's game, making Martina chase about in the heat for cleverly placed shots which were returned into the net. With Miss Evert leading 3-1 in the final set, she did not lose a point in the fifth and sixth games. In the final game, with the score 30-30, Chris played one of the finest shots of the match—a delicately arched backhand drop. It took her to match point which she got, along with a $10,000 prize.

NCAA Cage Meets Open

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — The six-man basketball committee of the National Collegiate Association's Division I assemblies here today to begin five days of closed meetings. Bids for the 1976 tournament finals will be received Monday from Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Oklahoma City and Louisville, Ohio Gov. James A. Rhodes is scheduled to be among the group making the presentation on behalf of Cincinnati. NCAA finals for the next four years already have been assigned to Philadelphia, Atlanta, St. Louis and Salt Lake City, in that order. Civic leaders and representatives of schools seeking to serve as host to the finals will make presentations to the committee. Each one has been allotted 45 minutes. Chairman Tom Scott of the basketball committee and his group will discuss the merits of the sites offered and make a recommendation, which Scott will give to the executive committee of the NCAA at its August meeting. Scott already has visited each of the prospective sites. Scott said the committee also will consider sites for 1977 regional finals and first round regional games for 1976. Next year's regional finals already have been awarded to Greensboro, N.C.; Baton Rouge, La.; Louisville, and Los Angeles. The tournament structure also will be reviewed by the committee at the meetings. The committee will meet Tuesday with the board of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, headed by Bill Foster of Duke. Coaches will make their recommendations then and consider over-all problems, including the economic pinch, at their own meetings during the week. The coaches organization has some 1,600 members from college, junior colleges and high school levels. The coaches and the basketball committee are expected to recommend that regional three-place games be dropped as meaningless. The executive committee voted a year ago to retain them. Scott said bids have been received from some conferences to have their champions added to the 16 conference winners gaining automatic first-round berths in the NCAA tournament. West Germany won a total of five gold medals and the Soviet Union took three golds in the eight-event competition.

Kolbe Captures Regatta Crown

RATZBURG, West Germany (AP) — European champion Peter-Michael Kolbe of West Germany scored a three-length victory over Jim Dietz of the New York Athletic Club Saturday in the singles sculls event at the 19th Ratzburg Rowing Regatta. In the eights, the Union Boat Club of the United States, which won the world title last year at Lucerne, Switzerland, finished a disappointing third, behind the Soviet Union and West Germany. West Germany won a total of five gold medals and the Soviet Union took three golds in the eight-event competition.

'Announcer Okay' Means He's A Skill For Promoter

By WILLIAM B. FURLONG
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The words are brief and fleeting. They are whisked swiftly onto the screen, whisked off again. The words are a confession disguised as an explanation: "Personnel on this program selected with-consent of the promoter." Or words to that effect. They all mean the same thing: the announcer is a skill for the promoter of the event, if he dares to tell you the truth about it — that perhaps it's dull, deleterious or disgraceful — he'll likely be thrown out on his ear. "The worst example was the Masters golf tournament where Jack Whitaker once called the crowd a "mob." He was banned from the Masters for four or five years after that. Clifford Roberts (director and cofounder of the Masters) didn't like that.

The views are those of Ron Arledge, head of sports for ABC. The program he speaks of — the Masters — belongs to CBS. ABC can afford to accuse CBS and NBC: it is the one network that does not invariably allow announcer approval.

"Absolutely not. We just will not do it," said Arledge. "I told Pete Rosella even when we started Monday night football that we would blow the deal rather than give them announcer approval, even though he had it with both other networks. The Kentucky Derby when it came here — at CBS they had announcer approval — we would not give it to them. Baseball just gave up announcer approval with us (in the Monday night baseball starting next season) although it had it with NBC."

He admits the source of the melody: the networks have to buy TV rights with anything that's handy. Mostly it's money. Sometimes it's concessions that are shameful. The rationale of the networks is that announcer approval works to the advantage of both the promoter and the network. For the announcer must then do everything he can to sell the event, whether it's worth selling or not.

"At the same time, we are promoters, we are financial backers, in a sense, of a sports event. We're attempting to be objective journalists in talking about it," said Arledge, or at least they're attempting to mislead the public into believing they're objective journalists about it.

All this, he said, "leads to the a s p o u r approval monstrosity which the other two networks fear, some reason — I guess because I've talked about it so much — refuse to do anything about . . . which means that your announcer is always afraid that if he says anything bad about anything, he's going to lose his job."

Not just about the event he's doing on tv. He's in danger of losing his job if he says anything negative about anything the promoter has going anywhere in the country.

"One of the things the NBA used with us, when we had our problems with them," said Arledge, "was Bill Russell said something about a game elsewhere, something like 'Who would want to see it?' so they wanted Bill Russell off the telecast. Bill — the greatest asset the NBA has ever had — they couldn't stand him saying — I think it was Cleveland against Buffalo when they were both expansion teams — something like, 'Who would want to see that?'"

Not long after that, the NBA shifted its programming to CBS. For years, the networks didn't think to mention this detail — of selling announcer approval — to the public. That they do so today is not because of an attack of conscience; it's because of a ruling by the FCC. The networks have to let the public know.

What are the networks doing to change the situation? At NBC, Carl Lindeman, head of sports programs, thinks it's "a dead issue," even though the public is being told, on the screen, about it for the first time. Besides, he doesn't believe that ABC is as virtuous as Arledge claims.

"When they took the Kentucky Derby (away from CBS), they took the track announcer that the Kentucky Derby wanted, he said. It was Chick Anderson, who mis-called the Derby finish on ABC. "Then they (ABC) repudiated the track announcer."

In baseball, predicted Lindeman, ABC will "take team announcers on the World Series, just like we do." In NCAA sports, "we have exactly the same language in the NCAA basketball contract as they do in NCAA football. Our interpretation is to consult the NCAA (on announcers)" — while ABC, he suggests in effect, does so, whether it admits it or not.

Decker To Rangers? ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Rangers, apparently not satisfied with Friday's acquisition of former Cy Young award winner Gaylord Perry from the Cleveland Indians, are making moves to obtain Joe Decker from the Minnesota Twins.

Wheeler Named FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Thomas Wheeler, basketball coach and assistant baseball coach at the University of Northern Colorado, was named Friday as head baseball coach at Colorado State University. Wheeler, 28, replaces Iv Ferguson who retired as baseball coach after 10 years.

Wheeler was a three-time baseball letterman at Kansas State and an All Big Eight and National Collegiate Athletic Association second-base selection for two years.

Lancaster Brings Chaps First Title

BY JAN WILLIAMS

Vicki Lancaster hasn't been in Midland long enough to take on that air of sophistication which separates the upper echelon from the common folk — or the top tennis players from the hackers.

But she has been here long enough to establish herself as one of the top female college tennis players in the nation. It is talent, not talk, that separates her from the "sophisticated hacker" that seems to dominate the Midland tennis courts.

The 24-year-old Aussie appears to be as much at ease on court as she is in court.

Her talk and manner is as fluid and graceful as her style of play. Her words are delivered with as much confidence as her forehands and backhands and just as skillfully placed.

A native of Fremantle, Australia, Miss Lancaster came to this country in January of this year to play for the Midland College tennis team. It was her first time to play for a college team.

Miss Lancaster said Frank Sedgman (winner of men's singles at Wimbledon, 1968) spoke to Roland Ingram (then coach of the Midland College tennis team) about the possibility of the addition of girls to his team. Ingram agreed to the addition which turned out to be Miss Lancaster. And the addition proved to be a valuable one as she won the national singles title for junior colleges this year, beating Susie Smith of Odessa College, 6-4, 6-2.

Midland College went on its edge out Odessa College by 1 1/2 points to win the team championship in the National Junior College Athletic Women's Tennis Tournament. Midland scored a total of 35 points.

Before joining the Midland College team, Miss Lancaster had played some of the European circuits, against such players as Evonne Goolagong and Margaret Court. She also played at Wimbledon in 1977 and 1978, but was beaten in the first round both years.

"I haven't done much as far as beating any of the top players," Miss Lancaster said. But she has done rather well against local players and is undefeated in over 50 matches and every tournament she has played.

Miss Lancaster said she started tennis lessons at the age of eight and started competitive play at age 13. "I've won a few tournaments here and there," she said.

This summer she is teaching tennis at the Racquet Club and will compete in the Four-Year College National Championship in Kalamazoo, Mich. The tournament is scheduled for June 14-23 and will feature the top women netters in the nation on both the junior college and major college level.

This is her first trip to this country and so far she has seen much of Texas and parts of Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana. "The people are very friendly in this country, especially in Texas," Miss Lancaster said.

As for her tennis, Miss Lancaster said she has no plans at the moment, except to return to Midland College this fall and perhaps win another singles championship.

TENNIS LESSON—Vicki Lancaster teaches the serve to one of her students at the Midland Racquet Club.

Why Doesn't Somebody Hijack Those Old Movies

Back in the 1930's in Fordham's Seven Blocks of Granite era, the Rams once played three consecutive scoreless ties with Pittsburgh.

Perhaps somewhere, sometime in NCAA annals 12 quarters of nothing have been played, but not by teams who were nationally ranked powers, as were the Panthers and the Rams of that period.

One rival coach says, "Ray Overton's idea of a good late show is dragging out those three games and watching them until he falls asleep."

A few Abilene Cooper fans suspect Ray got his offense from the same movies.

As Midland and Midland Lee teams are well aware, Overton's Cooper eleven are about as tough as they come defensively. A good drive against Cooper consists of a fumble recovery, five yards in three downs and a field goal attempt.

Cooper has come so close to removing the touchdowns from football that a 1-0 soccer game seems like an all-night scoring orgy.

The first inclination is to assume that anybody that tough on defense must work on it overtime, so we found Overton's views on practices interesting during a chat last week.

"Some coaches in an effort to win sometimes feel the only way they can do it is to work harder than anyone else, so they exceed the time limit."

"Frankly, I've been tempted to do it, but we just don't. Athletic Director Shorty Lawson told us how he felt about such things and there's no doubt about where he stands."

Battle Scene

By Ted Battles

Lawson, a familiar figure on West Texas and Southwest Conference football field and basketball courts, is the type who would look at a complaining coach while sweat rolled off his brow in rivulets, smile, nod and then call the controversial play exactly the same way the next time it came up.

Apparently, he runs athletics at Abilene the same way.

"We try to work from 2:00 to 2:40 and then shut it down," explains Overton. "Of course, even in that period, you can't have more than three boys together in a drill, which is a handicap, but we stay with it."

Overton went on, "Some people try to beat the rule and remain legal by requiring their boys to lift their weights on their own time after school. What they've done is extend their workout period beyond school. Maybe they can legally get by, I don't know, but it is a violation of the spirit of the rule."

We don't know how many coaches would go along with Ray's philosophy, but it shows that perhaps the shades of what is proper and what is improper assume many hues.

Now if someone will just kidnap those old Pitt-Fordham movies . . .

Woman Umpire Starts Career, Dreams Of Majors, 'Series'

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Northwest League's first woman umpire starts her career here Wednesday night, and she looks at it as a step toward working the World Series.

"I hope to stay in baseball as long as I have a job here," said Christine Wren, 28, in a telephone interview. "I want to make the big leagues. I would like to work the World Series."

The newly formed Boise A's start their first season in the league with a three-day home stand against the Portland Mavericks Wednesday, but it won't really be the first game for Miss Wren.

She worked an exhibition game between Portland and the Eugene Emeralds last Tuesday. "There was no trouble at all," she said. "I think they were very pleased with the job I did."

She said she spent the spring at a training camp at Vero Beach, Calif., and worked with a number of professional players there.

She said she became interested in baseball and softball at an early age when she sat in the dugout as her father played softball.

"I learned by following my dad around," she said. "He was the one that taught me how to throw a ball and to catch."

"I was an avid fan of Mickey Mantle as a youngster," she said in a warm contralto voice that she played baseball as a child, then switched to softball because that was the only place a woman could play.

"I played softball until last year," she said. "I got started umpiring about four years ago in Spokane. I started through local associations to get a little basic umpiring background," she said.

"I worked with the local associations, and each spring they would hold a type of school." She said she spent a couple of days a week for eight to ten weeks every year studying the game.

She said there was no problem getting into a training course in California this spring. "None at all," she said. "I talked to Barney Deary, the head of the umpire development committee, and he recommended the school and got me in touch with them."

Miss Wren said the family was enthused about her job and her mother will be at the opener Wednesday.

"My sisters all think it's a big deal," she said. "I've become sort of a celebrity. It's something I wasn't ready for at first, but, well, the fans are what it's all about."

She said she went to college for awhile and wanted to be a teacher.

"But I decided I didn't want to be a babysitter," she said.

Miss Wren said she wears exactly the same equipment the men do.

"I use all the inside gear, the shin guards and chest protector, the same kind of equipment the guys do," she said.

HUNTING and FISHING

Fishing at Oak Creek Lake last weekend was a lot like weather. Thunderstorms were in the area, and even though none hit the lake, they were close enough to influence the fishing.

Late afternoons were the best time for fishing and E. C. Carter took the largest yellow cat of the week — an 18-pounder. A string of 11 channel cat to 16 pounds and a 13-pound yellow cat with a nice string of channel cats were also reported.

The lake has finally stopped running over the spillway, but is full and clear.

At Lake E.V. Spence, a good mixture of white, striped and black bass were caught along with channel, blue and yellow cat fish.

Mike Recknagel and Herman Smith of Midland turned in a report of 1-2 pound black bass and channel cat plus three white bass to one pound. G. A. Jamerson and James Watkins of Big Lake, landed 33 channel cats to five pounds.

Robert Huckaby won the Permian Basin Bass Club's April Bass Tournament at Twin Buttes Lake while Milt Ardrey took second. In the May tournament at Amistad, Wallace Langley and Larry Thornberg took first places for the two-day affair.

The Mexican government is taking steps toward improvement of its side of Amistad Lake. A large and modern boat ramp was recently completed on the south side of the big border lake near Marker 5. The facility is open to boaters from both countries. The Mexican government also is engaged in the construction of a major marina facility. A large barge, which will hold up to 100 boats, has been completed and a concession area is now under construction.

Fishing at Amistad has been good recently with bass, catfish and crappie providing the action. Favorite fishing sites are located in the Rio Grande sections of the lake, mainly around marker 17.

Bosox Nab Doyle MILWAUKEE (AP) — The California Angels traded reserve second baseman Denny Doyle to the Boston Red Sox Friday night for cash and a player to be named later.

Doyle, 31 and in his sixth major league season, batted .300 as the Angels' regular second baseman last season. However, he lost his job to rookie Jerry Remy this year and has appeared in only eight games with one hit in 15 times at bat.

Pro Linebacker Hester Fighting For His Life

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ray Hester earned the reputation of being a player who wouldn't be beaten as a linebacker in college and professional football, and he says he doesn't intend to lose the toughest fight of his life.

Doctors say he has Hodgkins disease and only a 50-50 chance to pull through. Hodgkins disease is a form of cancer that hits the lymph glands.

After graduating from Tulane University, Hester played three years on special teams with the New Orleans Saints in the National Football League and last year worked his way up to a starting linebacker's post with the World Football League's Hawaiians.

He's proud to be thought of as a fighter and regards his disease as just another challenge—the toughest he's ever faced, but nothing he can't whip.

"When you're in a situation like this, you learn to have a deeper appreciation of everything," he said. "I never knew I had so many friends. Some of them are talking of raising money to help with expenses. It's sort of embarrassing. It almost makes you feel obligated to die."

"I'm not thinking of dying. I'm thinking about living. I've thought the whole thing through. After you come to the realization that you may die and face up to it, then you put yourself in the right mental frame of mind.

"With the mental part behind you, you turn to the physical. You take it as it comes." He is the idea of facing two years of says.

"But what the heck, I'm still here. I've been through some pain on the football field, so you take it as it comes," he says.

"I have no complaints, the outcome just didn't go our way," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock, whose team was regarded by many as the series favorite.

AGAINST ARIZONA STATE—Gamecocks Advance, 4-1

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Mark Van Bever typifies the spirit of the South Carolina baseball team.

"If I had to take a pitch in the head I was going to get on in the ninth inning," said the scrappy second baseman after the Gamecocks scored four runs in the sixth inning to record a 4-1 victory over Arizona State Friday night in the College World Series.

Arizona State, 61-12, had taken a 1-0 lead in the last of the eighth and the Gamecocks were three outs from elimination.

No. 9 hitter Van Bever bounced a double off the glove of the Arizona State third baseman and after a sacrifice, Gary Hancock's single knocked the game.

"Mark's hit was the turning point," said South Carolina Coach Bobby Richardson, who has a team in the final in its first series trip.

"Mark had a squeezed bunt in our other game with Arizona State and I believe because of that, their third baseman was playing him shallow. If he would have been at normal depth, it would have been a routine ground out."

A single by Hank Small, a walk and a fielder's choice let the go-ahead run. Steve Cook's perfectly placed bunt added another and a throwing error on the play let in the fourth run.

"That was more than enough for Jimmy Lewis, who retired the final three Arizona State batters in order.

"I have no complaints, the outcome just didn't go our way," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock, whose team was regarded by many as the series favorite.

TEXAS' MORELAND PICKED ON NINE—Bass, Gideon Head All-America

OMAHA (AP) — A pair of undefeated pitchers and seven 400 hitters top the 1975 All-America college baseball team announced Friday by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

Earl Bass of South Carolina and Jim Gideon of Texas, a pair of 17-0 performers who have led their teams into the finals of the College World Series, are the pitchers on the first team.

Rounding out the lineup are first baseman Hank Small, South Carolina, .397; second baseman Randy Duarte, Iowa State, .405; shortstop Jerry Maddox, Arizona State, .376; third baseman Keith Moreland, Texas, .431; outfielders Dennis Walling, Clemson, .421, Dave Stegman, Arizona, .403 and Steve Kemp, Southern California, .385; catcher Ricky Corone, Seton Hall, .465, and designated hitter George Wiecher, Davidson, .448.

"This has to be considered one of the top hitting All-America teams we've ever had," said Erv Husher of South Dakota State University, chairman of the selection committee.

Smal and Maddox, who was earlier selected as the Lefty Gomez Plate Award recipient for 1975, are the only seniors on the team. All others are juniors.

The second team consists of first baseman Dan Massari, Oklahoma State; second baseman Joe Palomares, Michigan State; third baseman Paul O'Neil, Boston College; shortstop Wayne Krenchinski, Miami; outfielders Ron McNeely, Memphis State, Doug Simon, Washington State and Joe Hernandez, Pan American; catcher Duane Gustavson, Wisconsin; pitchers Bob Owchinko, Eastern Michigan, and Floyd Benalister, Arizona State; and designated hitter Steve Powers, Arizona.

Perry To Face Old Mates

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The Cleveland Indians won't have to wait long to find out if they should have traded Gaylord Perry. Texas Ranger manager Billy Martin will put the perennial 30-game winner on the mound against his former employers today.

"I imagine the juice will be flowing," said the 36-year-old Perry Friday after being traded to Texas for three moderately successful pitchers and a bundle of cash.

Perry, struggling with a 6-0 record and not 100 per cent pleased with the way per Manager Frank Robinson was handling the club, said "this is probably best for me. I certainly think I can say I left Cleveland earning my keep."

Robinson, baseball's first black manager, and Perry got into a jawing session during spring training over Perry's routine and Perry felt from argument out of the.

51-Year-Old Wins Baja Off-Road Race

ENSENADA, Mexico (AP) — Grizzled 51-year-old Jim Ellis of Imperial Beach, Calif., and his 30-year-old teammate were the unofficial winners Friday in the Baja International Off-Road Race, marred by the death of a high school motorcyclist.

Early in the race, Von Peterson, 17, of La Graciosa, Calif., was killed when his motorcycle crashed at high speed.

Authorities said the youth's bike went off the course about 80 miles from the start in a hilly desert area west of Valle de Trinidad.

Ellis rode partner Gary Standridge's Honda motorcycle the final 60 miles after Standridge, of Ramona, Calif., covered the first 250. They finished with a time of 8:23.34.

The first car to complete the race was some 80 seconds back. Ivan Stewart, 30, of El Cajon, Calif., coasted across the finish line on the outskirts of this seaside town after the engine in his dune buggy conked out less than three miles from the end of the 400-mile race.

'Giff' Recalls Packer Coach

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Gifford remembers Vince Lombardi.

"You can't forget a man like him," said the halfback-turned-broadcaster. "He was an exceptional human being."

That's why Gifford was happy to serve on the committee for the Vince Lombardi Golf Tournament, which will meet June 23 at the Washingtonian Country Club in Gaithersburg, Md.

Three of Lombardi's other players, Bart Starr, Paul Hornung and Sonny Jurgensen, also are on the committee. But their lives were touched by the coach later in his career. Gifford met Lombardi in the beginning, when the halfback was starting his second season in the National Football League and the coach was a rookie hired to handle the offense of the New York Giants in 1954.

Gifford had played both offense and defense during a disastrous 1953 season. "I remember the first time I saw Lombardi, he was standing at the top of a long row of steps and he had a big grin on his face. That grin was typical of him. One of the first things he said to me was, 'You're my halfback.' And I never played defense after that. He built the Giants' offense around me, the same way he did with Hornung in Green Bay."

Lombardi virtually adopted the Giants' offensive unit as his own.

"He was very close to his guys," said Gifford. "After practice we'd go to his house and watch films for three or four hours at night. Charlie Conerly, Kyle Rotz, Don Heinrich, myself... it was a regular routine. He preferred effort to skill. His teams were never fancy, but you never had them beat until the final gun. They were never out of a game."

Gifford remembered the relationship of Lombardi and Roosevelt Brown, an offensive guard drafted as a late-round choice by the Giants. "Rosie didn't even know how to get into a proper three-point stance," he said. "He had never been taught. But Lombardi first and foremost was a teacher. That was his training. And he enjoyed teaching. If you had the capability to grasp what he was trying to teach, then you were his man. He worked with Rosie, and today Rosie is in the Pro Football Hall of Fame."

Gifford said that Lombardi's image as a martinet was false. "He was puseyful. You had to know him. The media did not. They painted a false image of the man. Sure, he wanted to win. He felt every emotion 100 per cent. He had a dedication to doing the very best at whatever he was doing."

Lombardi's drive turned careers around, Gifford's included.

New Hungarian Quartet To Perform At Lubbock

LUBBOCK — The New Hungarian Quartet, one of the world's best-known and most distinguished string ensembles, will perform in Lubbock Monday night.

The 8 p.m. concert, sponsored by Texas Tech University's Summer Artists Series, will be in the University Center ballroom. Admission will be $3 for the general public, $1.50 for area students, as well as for TTU faculty and staff members, and 75 cents for Tech students. Tickets will be on sale at the doors prior to performance time.

Debussy, Beethoven and Brahms works will be offered by the instrumentalists, each of whom is a solo artist in his own right.

Violinist Andor Toth Sr. studied with Hans Lenz at the Juillard School and with Ivan Galamian. Prior to joining the Hungarian Quartet when it was reorganized several years ago, Toth toured extensively with the Arpa Quartet and the Alma Trio. He has headed the strings and orchestra departments of the University of Colorado and has been director of San Francisco State College's chamber music center.

Son Andor Toth Jr., cellist, made his mark in both solo and orchestral work before joining the chamber group. He has performed in recital and with many of the nation's notable symphony orchestras, including those of Houston and San Francisco. He had cello studies with such masters of the instrument as Gabor Rejto and George Neikrug.

Played For Queens

Richard Young, still in his 20s, received his first recognition as a violinist at age 13 when he was invited to perform for Queen Mother Elisabeth of Belgium. He holds degrees in music from Indiana University and Catholic University in Washington D.C. and has had individual study with such renowned artists as Janos Starker and Aaron Rosand. He received a thorough grounding in string ensemble repertoire from members of the original Hungarian Quartet during summer studies with them at Colby College in Maine.

The fourth member of the ensemble, Denes Koromzay, plays viola and is the only remaining member of the original Hungarian Quartet formed before World War II. He received his initial music training on piano and later studied violin with Jenő Hubay before embarking on his long and distinguished career as a chamber musician. When the original Hungarian group was immobilized in the Netherlands during World War II, Koromzay became principal viola for the Amsterdam Concertgebouw orchestra, then under the direction of the brilliant Willem Mengelberg.

The New Hungarian Quartet, which has performed in Lubbock to great acclaim in the past, currently is in residence at Oberlin College in Ohio. The ensemble recently completed the recording of the six major chamber works of Franz Schubert (four quartets and two quintets) on the Vox label.

Van Johnson To Play Lead In 'Music Man' At Casa Manana

FORT WORTH—When Van Johnson starred in "Music Man" in London he took the town by storm.

When he made a coast-to-coast U.S. tour of summer theaters in the same hit musical, he broke records all the way.

Two weeks hence, when Johnson closes a Fort Worth engagement of the musical, there is every reason to expect he will have broken records here, too.

Johnson will lift the magic baton of that lovable con man, Prof. Harold Hill, Monday night at Casa Manana, Fort Worth's widely-known theater-in-the-round, to usher in Casa's third attraction of its new summer season. Performances will continue through June 28.

"Music Man" is a melodic tune-fest recalling Midwestern small town life circa 1912. All of it—book, lyrics and music—is by Meredith Willson. Johnson will be singing, dancing and acting the role of Harold Hill, the disarming swindler who spellsbinds glibly townspeople into purchasing expensive musical instruments and uniforms for a brass band, then skips town without ever teaching anybody to play.

The plot of the musical tells how Hill's scheme misfires in River City, Iowa, when the con man falls in love with the town's pretty librarian and stays on to figuratively and literally face the music. In Casa's production, Linda Michele is in the role of Marian the Librarian and will sing two of the show's most famous songs, "My White Knight" and "Good Night, My Someone."

Bob Hoak will be seen as the town's sputtering Mayor Shinn, with Rose-Mary Rumbley in the role of his culture-conscious wife Eulalie. John Galt has the part of Marcellus Washburn, with Helena Humann as Ethel Toffelmier. Rounding out the cast will be Evelyn Bell as Mrs. Paroo and Bobby Cleveland as the bashful Winthrop Paroo, along with Amy Ballenger and Gil McNaughton as the romantic teenagers Zaneeta and Tommy.

Probably the most famous song in "Music Man" is the ever-so-hummable and singable "Seventy-six Trombones," but there are many other memorable tunes as well: There is the tender love ballad between Harold and Marian, "Till There Was You," as well as the popular patter-song, "You Got Trouble" and the comic "Pickalittle" and "Shipooop." Finally, there are two barbershop harmony numbers that never fail to please audiences, "Lida Rose" and "Good Night, Ladies." In all, there are well over a dozen song hits, virtually all show-stoppers.

"Music Man" won the New York Drama Critics Award as best musical during the 1957-58 season and it continued as one of Broadway's hottest shows until the spring of 1961. Casa's production is directed by Jack Bunch, with Joe Stecko as musical director. Choreography is by Zac Ward, with set designs by Larry Parrish and costumes by Brooks Van Horn of New York.

The musical will have performances at 8:15 Monday through Saturday each week, as well as Saturday matinees at 2:30. All seats are reserved and tickets for the 14 performances are now on sale at Casa Manana, 3101 W. Lancaster Blvd. Telephone reservations may be made through the box office, 817-332-6221.

Wednesday 'Texas' Day

CANYON — Wednesday is "Texas" Day in Texas!

What's "Texas" Day? It's the day that the unique and colorful musical drama of Texas Panhandle history and lore begins its 19th season. That's what!

Gov. Dolph Briscoe recently signed legislation authorized by State Rep. Bob Simpson of Amarillo designating June 15 as "Texas" Day in Texas. The resolution not only honors the musical drama on the opening of its 10th anniversary season but also praises the permanent staff of the musical for its efforts aiding tourist development for the state. The musical has twice been named in the top 20 tourist-attractions of the nation by the National Association of Travel Organizations. During its first nine seasons the production has been seen by more than two-thirds of a million people.

Hard Work, Dedication Praised

"It is a pleasure to sponsor this resolution honoring the hard work and dedication of those who promote this great state," Gov. Briscoe and Simpson pointed out. "Certainly the show is deserving of the unanimous support it received from the Texas Legislature," Simpson added.

Singled out in the resolution were Margaret Harper, winner of the 1974 Governor's Tourist Award for her vision as the founder of "Texas"; Raymond Raillard, executive director; William and Margaret Moore, directors of the annual production; Royal Brantley, its longtime music director, and Neil Hess, the choreographer.

Acclaimed By Visitors

"Texas," acclaimed by visitors from throughout the nation and by those from many points abroad, was written by prize-winning author Paul Green, who has created a number of other outstanding summer pageants and musical dramas across the U.S. The music is by Isaac Van Grove.

"Texas" is presented in its own outdoor theater in Palo Duro Canyon State Park, with the colorful canyon walls as a vivid backdrop. The production is presented under auspices of the Panhandle Heritage Foundation Inc.

The "Texas" cast annually is made up of talented young singers, actors and dancers from colleges and universities throughout Texas and elsewhere in the Southwest. The directors of the musical conduct auditions for performers during late winter and early spring in such cities as Lubbock, Amarillo, Dallas, Oklahoma City and elsewhere, and those chosen for parts assemble in late May and early June to begin a rigorous schedule of rehearsals leading up to opening night. In the meantime, costumers also are hard at work outfitting the current cast members, who don't always "fit" into the available costumes remaining from previous years' productions.

Now all is almost in readiness for the big opening by box office crew, hospitality crew, backstage crews, behind-the-scenes personnel of all kinds and all types of expertise. When the first bugle sounds through the canyon at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, echoing against the canyon walls, "Texas" will be ready once again to provide the color, the drama, the excitement which has made it not only a "must-see" but a "must-see-again" for thousands of fans.

"Texas" will play nightly except Sundays through Aug. 23 and tickets for performances are now being filled. Mail orders should be addressed to "Texas" at P.O. Box 286, Canyon 79015. A printed schedule of seating and ticket price information is available from that address.

Aaron Slick Not King Any Longer

NEW YORK (AP) — Aaron Slick is no longer king of crossroads dramatics, but his spirit marches on.

Next season, big and little theaters across the country will be doing, as usual, many plays Broadway has never seen—or didn't want.

"The notion everyone out there just echoes New York is plain nonsense," one veteran agent appraises grassroots reality.

For students of such matters, "Aaron Slick of Punkin Creek" rates as a classic example of hinterland insurgency. The rustic farce, written more than 60 years ago by Beale Cornick, never got further than the byway circuit. But in the hinterlands it was performed more than 50,000 times.

Its popularity has dwindled during the past decade, but other items such as "Accommodations," "Count Dracula" and "How Green Was My Brownie," which never basked in the spotlight of the Great White Way, have risen as replacements. One maverick, "Take My Wife," grossed $500,000 in two seasons.

Other durables west of the Hudson include such Times Square losers as "No Hard Feelings," "Norman, Is That You?" and "No Sex Please, We're British."

Also out there considerable interest is being shown in an eclectic assortment ranging from the classics to the existential.

"There's constant change in what audiences will accept," reports Charles Van, head of the rights and permission department of Samuel French, Inc.

The firm, with a basic catalogue of 3,000-plus scripts, is one of the main suppliers of performing texts for the widely diverse theatrical endeavors that together provide most of the country's stage entertainment.

The clientele of French, the Dramatists Play Service and a handful of smaller agencies ranges from resident and dinner theaters through university, community, church and high school troupes.

Certain preferences are discernible, according to Van. Dinner theaters like light comedies, and, since onset of the recession, shows with just two or three performers, to cut overhead. College workshops and repertory organizations prefer the more cerebral offerings of avant-garde authors.

There are about 1,500 amateur community enterprises scheduling from one to six productions, generally reliant on standard works with a sprinkling of the more unusual.

A new type of play, the television spinoff, recently became available for the cross-country repertoire. Norman Lear, video's ranking maestro of public entertainment tastes, has supplied five adaptations suitable for stage enactment from each of four series — "All in the Family," "Maude," "Sanford and Son" and "Good Times."

Round Top Festival In Second Week

ROUND TOP—The fifth annual James Dick International Music Festival-Institute goes in its second full week with concerts this week by orchestras from two of Texas' largest cities, Fort Worth and Houston.

The Houston Symphony Chamber Orchestra, under the baton of brilliant young Akira Erdo, will be returning to the festival for the second year when it presents concerts at 8:15 p.m. Monday and 11 a.m. Tuesday. The Monday night event will present student keyboard artists of the festival-institute in concert.

The Youth Orchestra of Greater Fort Worth, under the direction of the dynamic conductor of the Fort Worth Symphony Orchestra, John Giordano, will present a concert at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in Henkel Square. The ensemble will perform works by Vivaldi and Alan Hovhaness, with noted concert pianist James Dick joining the young people in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Organized In 1966

The youth orchestra was organized in 1966 with 35 instrumentalists initially working under the baton of conductor Ezra Rachlin. By 1969 the orchestra has expanded to include 95 instrumentalists under the guidance of Giordano, then a member of the music faculty at North Texas State University. That same year, the orchestra made its first concert tour to Europe, and this was followed by another tour in 1973.

The orchestra presents five to seven full concerts in Fort Worth each season and annually accepts a number of invitations to perform elsewhere, including performances on national television.

In the audience for Saturday's concert by the Youth Orchestra of Greater Fort Worth next weekend will be the festival-institute's critic-in-residence, William Bender, who is music editor for Time Magazine. Bender is scheduled to present a seminar that afternoon titled "Musical Criticism." He is to be joined by Dorman Winfrey, director of the Texas State Library. Winfrey was a personal friend of the late, great Arturo Toscanini and will speak on the famous conductor and his many accomplishments in the opera and concert world.

Bender is scheduled to present a second seminar, that one titled "A Need For the Past," on Sunday afternoon, June 22.

In addition to the current week's series of orchestral programs, the festival-institute has scheduled seminars by the famous Tokyo String Quartet, which is currently in residence at the festival, as well as recitals and special programs by violinist Leonard Posner and cellist Paul Olefsky, both of The University of Texas-Austin. Friday's highlight will be a concert of chamber music (by Beethoven, Brahms and Debussy) presented by pianist Dick and his faculty at the festival-institute. The program will begin at 8:15.

WTCC Opposes Expanding Corps' Control Of Water

ABILENE — In a letter to the Army Corps of Engineers, the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has voiced opposition to the Corps' recommendations which would greatly expand its control over water resources, contending the actions would "cause further erosion of private property rights."

Under some of the proposed regulations, federal permits may be required by the rancher who wants to enlarge his stock pond, or the farmer who wants to deepen an irrigation ditch or plow a field, or the conservationist who wants to protect his land against stream erosion. The WTCC said all those actions could adversely affect West Texas.

Bob F. Scott of Fort Worth, chairman of WTCC's Water Development Committee, said, "None of the four proposed regulations developed by the EPA and Corps of Engineers is acceptable to WTCC. If any one of the four alternatives is adopted as policy, the results could impose unnecessary economic restraints on the producing segment of the economy."

"In addition, adoption of any one of the alternatives further would shift power to the federal government away from the state and local governments."

Scott said WTCC believes that its position represents that of any citizen, business or industry who uses water and earns a livelihood from water use in the territorial boundaries of the U.S.

Business Colleges Fall In Try To Be Dropped From Suit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Two San Antonio business colleges have failed in their attempt to be dropped from a state attorney general's lawsuit alleging deceptive trade practices by a former operator.

The request was denied Friday by State District Court Judge Richard J. Woods. It had been filed by Parish-Draughon's Business College and Technical Institute Inc. of San Antonio and Southwest Commercial College Inc. of Houston.

The judge said none of the business schools are defendants in the suit, although former operator Carl D. Wehling is.

State prosecutors allege that Wehling owes $101,000 in refunds to former students of the schools, according to a state auditor's check in 1973-1974.

Wehling recently sold the schools in San Antonio and Houston.

Alabama-Coushattas To Raise Curtain On Historical Drama

LIVINGSTON — Friday will be a red-letter day on the Alabama-Coushatta Indian Reservation, as tribal members raise the curtain on a brand-new historical drama-pageant in their brand-new Sundown Outdoor Theater.

The dramatic production, "Beyond the Sundown," joins such other outdoor shows as the "Texas" pageant near Amarillo and "Fandangle" at Albany in providing unique summertime entertainment for tourists and Texas residents alike.

The Summer Outdoor Theater, recently completed, is the first in the nation built and managed by an Indian tribe. The $650,000 structure was greeted with assistance from the State of Texas, the Economic Development Administration and numerous agencies and public officials, said Fulton Battise, principal chief of the Alabama-Coushatta tribe.

The outdoor theater is the major project of the Alabama-Coushatta tribe's current tourist development program, a program aimed at making the tribe economically self-sufficient. Performances of "Beyond the Sundown" will be offered nightly during the vacation season, following the opening performance scheduled to begin at 8:45 p.m. Friday.

Chief Battise and the Tribal Council have invited numerous dignitaries to Friday's opening festivities. They include, besides Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe and other state leaders, officials of the federal government and governors and Indian tribal chiefs of New Mexico, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama (the latter state drawing its name from the Alabama-Coushatta tribe which originally resided in that area).

Friday's festivities are scheduled to begin at 9 a.m., continuing throughout the day. A barbecue meal will be served at 6:30 p.m., after which the invited dignitaries will be honored guests at the premiere performance of "Beyond the Sundown."

State High School Theater Workshop Begins At UT

AUSTIN — High school youths from throughout the state, including three from Midland, have begun an intensive introduction to theater as participants in the 13th annual high school theater workshop at The University of Texas here.

The Midland students are Mark Folger, Clay Guthrie and Ann Yuronka, all of whom are members of Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players and active in Players' productions as well as high school drama productions.

They have joined 43 other students from such points as Comfort, Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, Mineral Wells, Wichita Falls, El Paso, Richardson, Rotan, Lufkin, Clyde, Mansfield and Dimmitt.

From now through July 5, faculty members of the UT-Austin drama department will put the students through the paces of drama production, including acting, dancing, stagecraft, directing, makeup and costuming.

On the final two days of the workshop, the students will put into practice what they have learned by staging public performances of three plays: "Lady Windermere's Fan," by Oscar Wilde, "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, and "Blood Wedding," by Spanish playwright Federico Lorca.

Fear Of Invasion Temporarily Unifies South Korea

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — A quarter century after the start of the Korean War, fear of a new invasion from the Communist North has brought at least temporary political unity to South Korea.

Despite restrictions on freedom imposed by their present government, South Koreans still regard themselves as enjoying a better economic and political life than the North Koreans.

Their country is one of Asia's leaders economically. Seoul, the capital, now is a bustling metropolis with a subway system. Industry and commerce, although troubled by worldwide inflation and recession, has reached modern proportions.

American veterans of the Korean War, returning now, would find vast changes in society.

Began June 25, 1950, and ended July 27, 1953, the Korean War resulted in nearly six million military and civilian casualties, including 33,000 American dead.

It touched off two decades of hostility between the United States and the People's Republic of China when Chinese "volunteers" poured in to help the retreating North Koreans. Less than 10 years later fear of Communist domination of Southeast Asia prompted the United States to become involved in Indochina.

The American setbacks in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos coupled with a visit by North Korean leader Kim Il-sung to Peking — where he promised to come to the aid of any uprising in the South — has aroused anxious speculation here that he intends to test U.S. and South Korean resolve through stepped-up guerrilla activity, a short stab across the demilitarized zone or a full-scale invasion.

One of those who say he believes that Kim Il-sung might undertake a new invasion is the South Korean president, Chung Hee Park. Whether he is right or not, the threat has helped him bring unity among his 35 million people.

Until recently, South Koreans had been divided into camps supporting Park's measures that have deprived many of their civil liberties and those who opposed them. Park has contended that strict measures were necessary, not only to keep up a guard against the North, but to strengthen South Korea's economy and political life.

South Korea now has the larger army — 620,000 men — as opposed to the North's 400,000.

The United States still has about 42,000 military personnel here, technically under the auspices of the United Nations.

Some of Park's opponents had demanded the withdrawal of American forces unless Park gave in to their demands for a restoration of full democratic processes.

But now most of the opponents have changed.

The U.S. presence is regarded here now as a mortgage on future American intentions, evidence that Washington's commitments to defend the South will be honored.

The Americans also remain a symbol of the close ties which have bound the United States and South Korea together since victory in World War II ousted the Japanese colonizers.

Kim Dae-jung, the most prominent of President Park's opponents, says: "The American troops here will encourage Russia and China to force Kim Il-sung to behave. They also will make Kim think it over before doing anything rash. He knows they have sophisticated weapons, including nuclear ones. And even though the Korean military will man 99 percent of the front, the fact that the Americans are here will boost our morale."

University and high school students who not long ago were demonstrating against Park's policies have now lined up behind him in anti-Communist solidarity. Even the opposition parties have called a halt to their campaign to have Park restore democratic liberties, judging the North Korean menace as more critical to the country's existence.

On May 21 an event occurred which underscored the drastically changed political mood. On that day Park received Kim Young-sam in a friendly two-hour conversation, only the fourth the president has had with an opposition leader in 12 years.

There is talk of making Park a nonparty president — he now heads the ruling Liberal Democratic Republican party — and leaving the day-to-day governing to a coalition government which would include the opposition New Democrats.

Not everyone has jumped on the unity bandwagon, however. Some 400 Seoul National University students late in May staged a campus rally to denounce what they called an attempt by Park to use the doctrine of defeat and national security as a pretext for more clampdowns. Most of them have been arrested.

Still Park in 14 years has been regarded as unifier and economic savior as well as the one responsible for the restrictions on freedom.

In 1961 he ended the political anarchy brought about by civilian rule, imposed a sense of discipline, brought about reconciliation with Japan, got the economy into first gear and attracted foreign investment.

South Korea today is one of the leading nations of Asia. Its people are better dressed, fed and housed than ever before.

Seoul, a city of six million, is studded with skyscrapers, criss-crossed by superhighways and boasting its first subway system.

Since 1971, when he barely won re-election, Park has moved not only to consolidate his rule but to put down dissent. His strictures were directed at students, Protestant and Roman Catholic social activists, the press and intellectuals.

In the midst of the moves toward unity he puzzled and dismayed his critics on May 13 by issuing still another decree which virtually eliminates all criticism of his actions.

Park points to a network of tunnels built by the North that cross the demilitarized zone and the rigorous training of North Korean militia as evidence, the Communists mean business.

The president's dilemma is that in tolling the bell for wartime unity, he may be frightening away potential foreign investors.

Watermelon Seed Spit-Off Challenge Issued

WEATHERFORD, Okla. (AP)—The challenge has gone out from this western Oklahoma city to the folks at Pauls Valley: pucker up and get ready for the big watermelon seed spit-off.

"We're going to have our World Championship Watermelon Seed Spitting Contest on Aug. 2, and we figure the folks at Pauls Valley will need that much practice time to even have a chance," said Ken Reid, publisher of the Weatherford Daily News.

"I understand they're going to have a seed-spitting contest at Pauls Valley sometime around July 4, but that's merely a scrimmage in preparation for the main event here," Reid added.

In addition to the watermelon seed spitting, other events scheduled for the town's 78th birthday celebration include the third annual Andy Payne Memorial Marathon, a 26-mile, 385-yard endurance run named for the longtime State Supreme Court clerk who won the 1928

Bunion Derby, a cross-country run from Los Angeles to New York.

Also on the program will be the third annual Turtle Derby, the third annual Jumping Frog

Ky Doesn't Want Refugees Exploited

WEIMAR, Calif. (AP) — Former South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky says refugees from his country should not be exploited on the American labor market.

Ky, who called himself a spokesman for his people in the United States, told newsmen Friday the refugees do not want to take jobs away from Americans. But they don't want to be exploited, either, he said.

"We want to have a decent life. We don't want to be slaves. I think your people don't want to see it happen. We don't want to live for the next 15 or 20 years on welfare," Ky said.

Contest and, as an added attraction, the First Annual Custer County Invitational Old Fiddlers Opry.

Reid said a committee was at work now picking judges for the various events. One prime requirement, he said, is the ability to wield a whisk broom to clean up the watermelon seeds.

"We hope to get Gov. David Boren as one of the judges because he can wield a broom better than just about anyone else in the whole state of Oklahoma," Reid said.

Others expected to be contacted to serve as judges include Atty. Gen. Larry Derryberry; Leslie Fisher, state superintendent of public instruction; U.S. Rep. Glen English and State Sen. Ed Berrong of Weatherford.

Payne will be invited as a special guest, Reid said.

Reid and John Fowler, director of the local chamber of commerce, admit the whole thing is just in fun. But they're deadly serious—maybe—when it comes to upholding the tradition of having the World Championship Watermelon Seed Spitting Contest.

"Pauls Valley says we stole the idea from them," Fowler said. "But if the truth be known, Pauls Valley originally stole it from someone else."

Fowler is hoping that a special event can be scheduled this year, a spit-off with the holder of the Pauls Valley contest and Russ Foster of Dallas, the record holder here.

"Foster set the world's record last year with a prodigious spit of 57 feet 8 1/2 inches," Fowler said. "The 'champion' of the Pauls Valley contest is Maj. Boyd Barclay, who has won the contest there two years in a row."

Even with just a little to lose . . .

YOU'VE GOT A LOT TO WIN

Look what a loss of 11 pounds and 21 inches meant to Nancy Damon

Dear Miss Walker,

Over the last two years I had gained 10 unwanted, unnecessary pounds. That might sound like a small amount, but on a 5'2" frame it made considerable difference in my clothes. A little will power was all that was needed, I kept telling myself, while several people I knew were going to Pat Walker's getting undeniable results. They looked so great I already knew the method worked.

Once I decided to come to Pat Walker's myself it has been pure pleasure, with the good feeling of improved circulation plus the steady, consistent loss, not only in weight but in those all important inches at a safe healthy pace. Eleven pounds lighter and 21 inches smaller I now "feel thin". It's actually been fun losing weight at Pat Walker's.

Sorry, Sheriff

To The Editor:
On behalf of the Midland League of Women Voters, I would like to extend my sincerest apologies to Sheriff Ed Darnell for having inadvertently omitted his name from the League's "Guide to Elected Officials." Sheriff Darnell has efficiently served the citizens of Midland County for many years, and his name most assuredly belongs in the brochure.

I want to give thanks to the Midland Memorial Hospital for the month I was in and also to the nursing staff of the fourth floor, the Women's Auxiliary, the ladies in admissions, the insurance lady, the business office and also to the young lady who assisted me to the car.

The type of food service was good where you ordered what you wanted.

I want to thank the nurses, the doctor, and all of the Midland Memorial Hospital staff.

SPCA Praised

To The Editor:
My family and I wish to commend highly those people working with the SPCA and with the pet cemetery who were of such great help to us recently when our dog was accidentally killed by an automobile.

Each person with whom we dealt was extremely considerate and understanding and we wish to thank publicly all of these people — Ken Moelling and Steve Nolan, the drivers who responded so quickly to our call; Mrs. W.T. Probandt, president of the SPCA, and Ron Wesley, director of the animal shelter.

Good Neighbors

To The Editor:
The purpose of this letter is to pay compliment to Officer P. Flores of the Midland Police Department and to the Midland Memorial Hospital for the courteous and dedicated assistance given me recently in Midland.

On the morning of May 18th about 2:30 a.m. while spending the night in one of your fine motels, I suffered a kidney stone attack. Being alone I made an effort to leave my room in order to either get to the hospital by my own automobile or to get assistance. Officer P. Flores came to my aid. He not only took me to the hospital after I had passed out but remained with me and saw that my automobile and other personal belongings were brought to me in the hospital.

Such courteous and dedicated treatment by a person like Officer Flores should be recognized. The main intention of this letter is to ask that you in some way give public recognition to Officer Flores.

By the same token the treatment given by the Midland Memorial Hospital was very fine. My compliments go to the City of Midland for its good fortune of having individuals and institutions like Officer Flores and Midland Memorial Hospital. Congratulations!

Young Getty was arrested last week in connection with the alleged theft of a pickup truck in Malibu. The case is pending in Santa Monica Municipal Court.

Patton's Son To Command Ft. Hood Armored Division

FT. HOOD (AP) — The son of famed World War II general George S. Patton Jr. will take over the command here next month of the same armored division his father led 33 years ago.

Ft. Hood officials announced Friday that Maj. Gen. George S. Patton III will assume command of the armored division in ceremonies Aug. 9.

His father's command of the division during the early 1940s earned the outfit its nickname,

"Hell on Wheels."

The new commander will take charge from Maj. Gen. Robert L. Fair, who has commanded the 2nd Armored Division for the past two years.

Fair's new assignment is not known at this time, Ft. Hood officials said.

The command change is believed to be the first time in the Army's 200-year history that the son of a division's former commander will lead that same division, Hood officials said.

Patton will come to Ft. Hood from the U.S. Army Readiness Command, Region I, at Ft. Devins, Mass.

Patton's assignment will mark his second visit here. He served as a battalion commander of the 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 81st Armored, 1st Armored Division at Ft. Hood from July 1963 to July 1964.

Patton's father commanded the 2nd Armored Division from Sept. 1940 to Jan. 1942.

West Texas Brotherhood

By PATRICK CONWAY
Austin Bureau

Austin — The West Texas Senate delegation to the 64th Legislature is far from a clique, yet their approaches to issues and their final votes reflect the conservatism of a breed whose forefathers conquered a remote and hostile land.

Two of the delegation were freshmen—Sen. Kent Hance of Lubbock and Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls—so they spent a lot of time learning the Byzantine ropes of Senate parliamentary procedure, sometimes the hard way.

Sen. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells is a veteran, a staunch conservative, and a man who can be a real shark when it comes to putting jaws on bills he is against. However, during the session, his floor activity was more limited than usual because the chairmanship of the powerful Senate Economic Development Committee took up a vast amount of his time.

Sen. Max Sherman of Amarillo has the potential of becoming a real Senate leader and possibly a statewide political figure, but he maintains a gentle timidity that causes him to often bow to older, if not always wiser, hands.

Sen. Pete Snelson of Midland can be a forceful debater when he wants to. He has a calm persuasiveness that commands attention. He was outstanding during debate on the proposed new constitution, and was effective in defeating several other issues that he opposed. Snelson was weighted down with the chairmanship of the Senate Intergovernmental Relations Committee, which handles every conceivable routine bill a person can imagine.

Sen. Grant Jones of Abilene is accused of mumbering his legislation through. Perhaps this is true, or maybe he's just used to talking into a strong West Texas wind, which is sometimes duplicated by other senators during debate. Jones, an insurance agent, may handle more insurance bills on the floor than he sends out to customers back home.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban of El Paso is a colorful senatorial study who comes from a generally liberal district yet usually votes with the conservatives. His legislation sort of centers on Penal Code matters, but he often waits to the last minute to try to move things through committee. This could reflect a manana attitude, but more than likely it has a much deeper meaning.

The West Texas senators had their hands involved in a number of the major bills passed during the session.

Snelson passed what Secretary of State Mark White called the "finest" voter registration law in the nation. He had to fight like the devil to get it through, but he did it with aplomb.

Sherman was the sponsor of the new strip mining regulatory bill. It was not everything he hoped for as it was finally passed, but he worked long hours to achieve a compromise that would both satisfy industry and soothe the breasts of the environmentalists.

Creighton passed a measure that should be a joy every son of the soil in the state. The bill would tax farm, ranch and forest lands on productivity instead of at market value. The legislation is still contingent on the passage of the new constitution.

Jones, when he wasn't working to change insurance laws one way or fighting the attempts of Dallas Sen. Oscar Maury to change them another way, carried a knapsack full of bills dealing with game and fish regulations. He may become known as "Mr. Woods and Waters."

Santiesteban's name is not listed as initiating sponsor on any of the major bills, but he played a key role in pushing the legal provisions of the new constitution to final passage. His big bill of the session was to reduce marijuana penalties, and it darned near gave his colleagues grabbers before it was killed by seven votes. Santiesteban is the only senator who can correctly pronounce "marijuana."

Farabee's major accomplishments were in improving the juvenile section of the family code and in the field of equal rights for the mentally disturbed. For a time, it appeared his trump card was another bill to change the name of Midwestern University and a measure that had something to do with a sewer. He was also sponsor of the medical malpractice bill that the doctors like the most. It was killed.

Hance got his feet wet the hard way. His first run on the floor was with the bill to raise the truck weight load limit and also permit tandems. He carried it through, and admitted that it was a tough baptism under Senate fire.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Texas Base For Presidential Race?

By STUART LONG
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — "I've been investigated by a grand jury and have been no-billed," the big East Texas senator declared.

"I can prove I did nothing wrong. Can my opponent make that claim?"

That senator is still in office, 20 years later, and it gives some credence to the idea of some of former Gov. John Connally's friends that as just about the only one of the Nixon administration's big wigs to emerge with a "not guilty" verdict from a District of Columbia jury, he does indeed have a real chance to again become the presidential possibility he was before his indictment and the move by Representative Gerald Ford to the presidency.

Texasns take an even more charitable view of such goings-on, as Woodrow Bean of El Paso can testify. Bean was knocked out of an almost certain victory in a race for the U.S. House of Representatives by the charge that he had failed to pay income tax for 10 years.

He was guilty, and after his probation expired, he came back to win election first as county Democratic chairman, and then as a member of the State Board of Education, a place he now holds.

So it is indeed safe to say that as one Republican with a certificate of nonguilt from the Watergate syndrome, John Connally may indeed move back into the exclusive circle he once occupied with U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen — one of the only two Houston millionaire lawyers being considered for the presidential nomination.

Connally has begun to move back into the political grandstand. He has been making speeches, submitting himself to national TV panels, granting interviews to magazine and news service reporters, and finding fault with President Ford's reactions to the crises of today.

He emerges as a tough guy, ready to carry a big stick in international affairs, including even the touchy proposals of finding ways to force the oil producing nations to bargain less arrogantly on oil prices and supplies.

Connally and Bentsen probably come as close to being ideological twins as any two Texas political leaders, with the possible exception that Bentsen understands Mexican-American aspirations while Connally never has.

But the two are going to be as different as grains of corn on the same ear as they pursue the presidential nominations of the two parties which are also as dissimilar as any two grains of corn from the same ear.

Bentsen must draw from the liberal elements in the Democratic party, since he bears the mark of having defeated Sen. Ralph Yarborough, a national liberal leader. So his statements and comments often sound as if Yarborough himself had written them.

Connally, who must gather his delegates where they are, must reach to the distant right of his Republican party, where former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California is his rival.

Thus, when Connally is asked what lessons he has learned from the experience of Viet Nam, he gives the answer you can hear in any American Legion hall or officers club.

"Never get into a war you don't intend to win."

While Bentsen is out on a continual speaking tour, all over the nation, Connally is moving less aggressively into that area. But he is making himself completely available for speech invitations. Republican fund raisers were welcoming him before his indictment, and now that his trial has been successfully concluded he will be taking more and more speech assignments. Knowing that the party faithful who come to the $100 dinners are the ones who will be delegates in 1978, he cannot afford to turn down the invitations which he is openly inviting by his national media appearances.

But don't be taken in by the fact that young reporters in the East and West ask whether he will run for the U.S. Senate in Texas against Bentsen.

Connally is not interested in the U.S. Senate, or he would have run for it himself in 1970 instead of helping to mastermind Bentsen's campaign against Yarborough.

If Connally runs for anything in 1978, it will be for the Republican presidential nomination. And he wouldn't at all mind running against his Houston friend and neighbor, Lloyd Bentsen, if an all-Houston-presidential race should develop.

Sluggish Economy Hurting Tobacco Sales

By DON KENDALL, AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says the sluggish economy is hurting U.S. tobacco sales both domestically and overseas.

Cigarette production for the year ending June 30 is expected to be down about 2 per cent from 1975's record U.S. output of 652 billion cigarettes, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said Friday.

Exports of U.S. tobacco leaf are expected to be down about 10 per cent from last season's record of 657 million pounds. Cigarette smoking over-all was up about 1.5 per cent through April of this fiscal year, and so were cigarette exports. But the increases came from existing inventories, the board said in a preliminary report.

"Reduced cigarette inventories combined with increased sales should help bolster the production in the second half of 1976," the report said. "Use of cigars continues to trend downward in contrast to the increase in cigarette smoking."

Department experts said that world demand for U.S.-type cigarettes "is still climbing but some overseas markets have slowed their purchase rate or shifted to competing tobacco because of steep price increases and declining real incomes."

Looking ahead, the report said that with a larger 1976 tobacco crop now expected exports may rise later this year if prices moderate.

Even with the decline in exports and cigarette manufacture, total "disappearance" of tobacco in 1974-75 is expected to be 2,025 million pounds compared with 2,091 million last season and more than was produced by the 1974 crop.

Thus, the report said, the U.S. tobacco reserve will be pulled down further to 2,394 million pounds by the time 1976 crops are ready, the smallest carryover since 1947.

Further, officials said, the situation is not evenly distributed among different types of tobacco. Including all uses, for example, flue-cured consumption is expected to decline 5 per cent from 1973-74 while burley tobacco use probably will be up 2 per cent from last season.

Southside Lions Hold Officer Installation Awards Banquet

The Midland Southside Lions Club held its 22nd annual officer installation and awards presentation banquet Friday night in the East New York Street building.

The Dandy Lions Club, the Southside Lions' woman's auxiliary, also held its officer installation ceremony at the banquet session, which was attended by a near capacity crowd.

W. A. "Buddy" Ray, the retiring president, presided, and Leonard Hanson served as master of ceremonies.

Hanson also was named the club's "Lion of the Year" and received a special plaque in recognition of the honor. He is a long-time member and leader of the club. He also is active in Lionism at district and state levels, particularly in the Lions members ranged from jazz to boogie woogie to ragtime and concluded with a special rendition of "St. Louis Blues." The pianist was introduced by Ken Peeler.

Other officers are Bob Wallace, Claude Addington and Wayne Butler, vice presidents; Bill Stone, secretary; Bill Anderson, treasurer; T. L. "Happy" Bond, Lion Tamer; Byron Garrison, taitwister; and

Rev. Jimmy Stovall, chaplain, and Mrs. Jack (Bettie) Schuler, sweetheart.

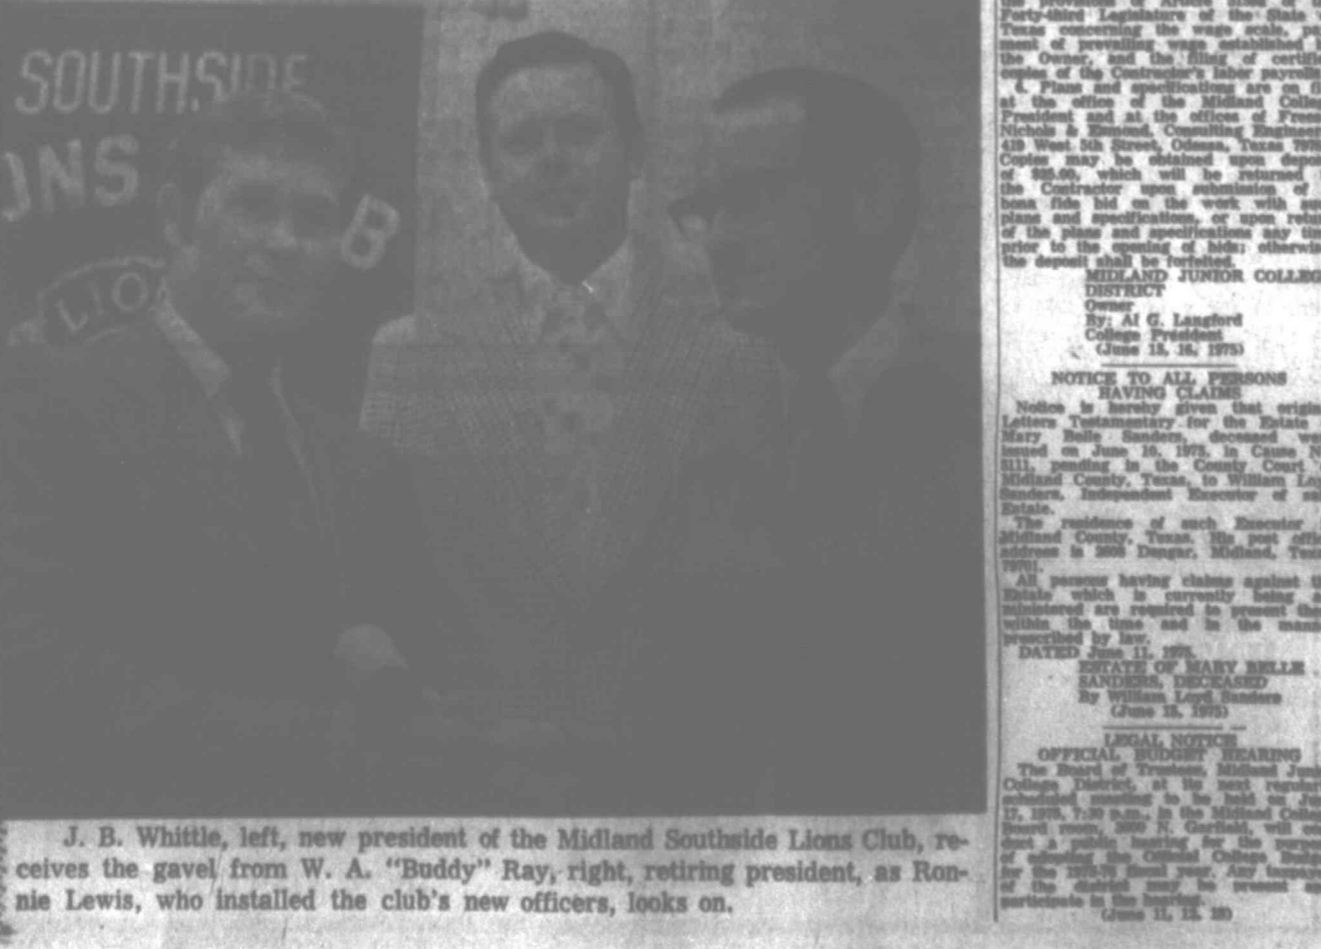

Directors are Leo Scoggin, C. E. McCain, Don Tergerson, Harold Gilliam, Fred Johnson and Dr. David Norton. E. O. Messersmith is an honorary director.

The Dandy Lion officers were installed by Mrs. Leonard Hanson, a past president. They are Mrs. J. B. Whittle, president; Mrs. Ronnie Lewis, vice president; Mrs. Bill Anderson, secretary; Mrs. R. D. Sellars, treasurer; and Mrs. T. L. Bond, reporter. Mrs. Leo Scoggin is the retiring president.

Bill Smiley, a graduate of Lee High School and now a student at the University of Texas, was presented in a number of piano selections as the highlight of the entertainment program. The members ranged from jazz to boogie woogie to ragtime and concluded with a special rendition of "St. Louis Blues." The pianist was introduced by Ken Peeler.

Erwin Lehker led the group singing, with Mrs. Schuler at the piano, and Gilliam led the Pledge of Allegiance.

Certificates of appreciation were presented to radio stations KNFM, KWEL, KBAT, and

J. B. Whittle, left, new president of the Midland Southside Lions Club, receives the gavel from W. A. "Buddy" Ray, right, retiring president, as Ronnie Lewis, who installed the club's new officers, looks on.

AMPI Assessed $5.6 Million For Back Taxes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI) followed tax laws and must defend itself from a $5.6 million bill for back taxes, the cooperative's controller says.

Gary Woods said Friday that the bill for taxes is tied up largely with the Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) revocation of AMPI's tax exempt status effective July 1, 1968.

"The assessment by IRS was based in part on its revocation of our tax exempt status and in part on its disallowance of certain expenses on the basis they were not ordinary business expenses," Woods wrote in the cooperative's monthly magazine.

AMPI officials used the magazine article to question the IRS's prerogative to retroactively revoke a tax exempt status.

No Comment
IRS refused comment. "We think we followed taxation laws... so we must defend ourselves," Woods said at his office here Friday.

The controller said there was nothing abnormal about the IRS examination of AMPI's back taxes except that the investigation began during the cooperative's legal troubles over its political activities and contributions.

Woods said also that the assessment from IRS was for 1971 only and noted that AMPI is being examined for a five-year period.

Included in the 1971 assessment was $3,733,862 back taxes for 1971 plus fraud penalties of $1,866,931.

No Clear Law
Woods said that there is no law which clearly applies to AMPI concerning tax exempt status because modern-day regional cooperatives were not considered when the tax laws were written.

AMPI's tax exempt status had been based on single taxation taxing the cooperative's members instead of the cooperative itself AMPI officials said in the magazine article.

Woods was the only AMPI corporate officer available for comment.

Some Army Officers Face Reprimands

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Army officials face possible official reprimands for failing to carry out 1971 orders to remove all information on political and other activities of American civilians from intelligence files.

Although a reprimand may seem a mild form of punishment, it represents a blot which could cost a military officer or civilian official promotion and cloud his career prospects.

Secretary of the Army Howard H. Callaway indicated the possibility of administrative punishment in disclosing Friday that the Army had found 9,200 documents on activities of American civilians in its intelligence files more than four years after the records were ordered purged.

"Consideration is being given to whether any administrative action should be taken against any of the officials whose oversight or misunderstanding of the requirements of the directive helped produce this problem," Callaway said.

He did not elaborate on the point, but the Army said later that "appropriate admonitions-reprimands are being considered for those civilian and military officials involved in the regulatory violations."

The Army declined to go beyond this while possible actions are pending.

Callaway first acknowledged the remaining 180,000 documents "relate mainly to the activities of foreign intelligence services" in the United States and abroad, the Army secretary said.

In a statement accompanying release of the Callaway memorandum, the Army said it has "instituted steps to eliminate all" of the forbidden materials from the intelligence files.

However, it said it is holding this material at the request of Congress while Capitol Hill investigations continue.

Callaway stressed "the Army's commitment to the policy that it is not the Army's business to know what American citizens are doing except when their activities appear to pose a criminal threat to the security of our armed forces or when the President has ordered the Army to deal with a civil disturbance..."

ANPA Research Institute Opens Today

HOUSTON (AP) — Millions of dollars of electronic equipment has been installed in the Astrohall for a five-day inspection by thousands of newspaper executives.

The 47th annual production management conference of the American Newspaper Publishers Association's Research Institute opens today.

A record attendance in excess of 11,000 is expected for the conference and exhibition jointly sponsored by the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

Publishers, editors, advertising and production executives will see all that is new and improved in equipment and materials as the electronic age makes increasing contributions for both speed and efficiency.

"This annual event has become the largest newspaper meeting in the world because it offers provocative and informative sessions that explore and investigate every facet of the newspaper operation and the most complete and advanced exhibition of newspaper systems and equipment to be found anywhere," said Peter P. Romano, director of the Research Institute's production department.

"The conference program will offer both a microscopic and telescopic look at the newspaper of today and tomorrow," Romano said.

Discussions will range from computer applications and mailroom auto-mechanization to a newly added session on environmental control and compliance. An editorial-newsroom symposium Wednesday will permit editors to exchange views on the industry's new electronic editing systems. "Destinations" will be the theme of Thursday's concluding session at which scientists and publishers and newsroom, advertising and circulation personnel will discuss changing trends and how new and future technology can be applied.

The exhibition in the 765,000 square foot Astrohall, the world's largest single story exhibit hall, will be open from 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Sunday and from 12 noon until 6:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

Lyell B. Clay, publisher of the Charleston, W.Va., Mail and chairman of the Research Institute's executive committee, is to speak at Monday's opening session.

Other participants will include Oveta Culp Hobby, chairman and editor of the Houston Post, Richard J.V. Johnson, president of the Houston Chronicle, and Wayne C. Sellers, president of the Palestine, Tex. Herald and president of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

Planning, Zoning Meeting Scheduled

Members of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission Monday will consider five items when they meet at 4 p.m. in the council chambers—at city hall.

They will consider a request by Roy B. Moran for a zone change from one family residence to multiple family residence on an eight-acre parcel of land on Garfield Street north of the Chaparral Apartments.

Consideration also will be given the request by Leo L. Hatfield and Jesse H. Hatfield for a change from one family residence to multiple family residence and local retail for 9.55 acres on the southwest corner of Garfield St. and FM 868.

In addition to discussing city services for a trailer park outside the city limits on Carter and Goode streets, the commission also is expected to continue studying an 11-acre tract of city owned property near Midland Air Park on Wadley St. in which the Midland Community Theatre is interested.

Included as a supplement to the agenda is a final report for 1900 block of Woodlawn for planned development as requested by Harold B. Shull.

'Swap Fest' Set
The next meeting of the Midland Camera Club will be Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Marian Blakemore Planetarium in Haley Park. The program will feature a "Swap Fest." Visitors are welcome.

Commissioners To Hear Gripes

The Midland County Commissioners Court will change over to a board of equalization Monday and Tuesday in hearing complaints from individual and corporate taxpayers on the county's assessment of property for taxation.

Meeting at 9 a.m. both days, the board will consider real and personal valuation issues Monday and oil and gas assessments on Tuesday.

Pritchard & Abbott, valuation engineers, will meet with the board Tuesday.

The county's ad valorem tax rate is 95 cents per $100 valuation based on 32 per cent of the fair market value.

County Tax Assessor-Collector Elmo Linebarger has computed this year's tax revenue at $2,135,772.14 based on valuations of $224,810,360.

The board will meet in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the courthouse's second floor.

Making up the equalization board are County Judge Barbara Culver and commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, John Thomas and Win Brown.

John D. Profumo Back In Royal Favor Once More

LONDON (AP) — John D. Profumo, former British minister of war who resigned 12 years ago after confessing an improper liaison with callgirl Christine Keeler, is back in royal favor.

The 60-year-old Profumo, honored for his work in helping London's poor, appeared on the annual honors list on the eve of Queen Elizabeth's official birthday today.

Her actual birthday is April 21. And the queen's honors made to British and Commonwealth citizens in her name is not drawn up by the queen but by the government. Names are recommended by the prime minister and a special committee.

The list included 206 persons — including Profumo — awarded the title of Commander of the British Empire (CBE) in recognition of their public service.

Shortly after resigning, Profumo began working at Toynbee Hall, a welfare organization for the poor and victims of drugs and alcohol. He has been there ever since.

Profumo had no comment on the announcement Friday, but fellow workers at Toynbee Hall hailed the award and described their colleague as "dynamic" and "a good friend."

"He has always taken on any job asked of him and his help has been invaluable," said Tony Locke, a social worker at Toynbee Hall.

It was Profumo's second award. He was made an officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) for his military service in the North African desert campaign in 1944.

Profumo quit former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's cabinet in 1963 at the height of the scandal that took his name.

Besides Profumo, Miss Keeler, a high-class callgirl, was linked with a number of top British people, and with Capt. Eugene Ivanov, a naval attaché at the Soviet Embassy in London. Investigations produced no evidence of security leaks.

Remained Stable
Test samples analyzed from the Greenland Ice Sheet found that mercury levels in the atmosphere remained stable from 800 B.C. to the 1960s. Since then it has doubled, believed to be the result of industrial pollution and the speeding up of natural escape of gases from the earth's surface in man's quest for new homes, roads and industry.

Long, Cold Winters
Arctic winters are long and cold and, in most places, dark. The length of darkness and degree of cold varies greatly, however. In summer there are less than 50 days between the late spring and early fall frosts.

NTSU Budget OK'd By Regents

DENTON, Tex. (AP) — Regents at North Texas State University here have given preliminary approval for a 1975-76 school year budget of nearly $37 million.

Regents Friday called the $36.9 million budget a "hold the line" expenditures plan which still needs the signature of Gov. Dolph Briscoe before it may be adopted.

President C. C. Noten said the budget is 11 per cent more than last year's, due in part to state-ordered salary and travel allowance increases.

Regents also approved a 1975-76 school year budget of nearly $37 million.
