

New Eddy Fields Get Offset Tests

Discovery efforts have been stalemated in two newly opened areas of Eddy County, N.M.

Location is 1,900 feet from south and 600 feet from west lines of section 25-21-27-2, 3/4 miles east of Carlsbad.

The field has two wells dually completed from the Wolfcamp and Morrow, and one dually producing from the Strawn and Morrow.

Shallow Test Corinne Grace, Roswell, will drill No. 1 Kuklah-Baby as a location northeast offset to the center of the Carlsbad, South (Delaware) field.

It is 2,310 feet from north and 1,550 feet from east lines of section 24-22-26-6, four miles south of Carlsbad. It is scheduled to 4,500 feet.

The discovery of the proposed field is D. L. Harvill, Roswell, No. 1 Merland, which finished in March, 1973, for 182 barrels of 42.5-gravity oil per day, through a 16-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,454-4,464 feet.

Midland Oil Pool Gains Second Well

The Hi-Lonesome multizone field of Central Midland County gained its second Wolfcamp producer and a 3/4-mile southwest extension to that pay, with recompletion by National Cooperative Refinery Association of Midland, of No. 1 Roper.

It was completed on the pump for 24.6 barrels of 42.5-gravity oil and 15 barrels of water, on the 24-hour potential test, through perforations at 9,316-9,607 feet. The section had been acidized with 311,000 gallons. Gas-oil ratio measured 2,195-1.

It was a former Pennsylvania producer, and has 5/8-inch casing seated at 13,000 feet. Plugged-back depth is 10,890 feet.

It is 1,993 feet from north and 600 feet from east lines of section 25, block 40, T-2-S, T&P survey, 5 1/2 miles southwest of Midland.

The Wolfcamp discovery, Mobil Oil Corp. No. 1 Hill-Lowe, was completed in 1961, and currently is producing 12 barrels of oil daily, from pay above 9,126 feet.

Amoco Logs Hole In Lynn Sector

Amoco Production Co. No. 1-B L. C. Stewart, Lynn northwest of the depleted O'Donnell (Pennsylvania) field, was bottomed at 8,000 feet, and operator was running logs.

A drillstem test in an unidentified formation from 5,870-5,909 feet, on which the tool was open one hour, recovered 13 feet of mud.

A test from 6,340-6,394 feet, open one hour, recovered 72 feet of gas and 270 feet of gas and oil-cut mud. The same. (Continued On Page 1C)

Houdek Loses Tennis Post; Will Continue As Teacher

By LUANNA CROW Former Midland High School tennis coach Ronald Houdek Tuesday lost his fight to continue coaching, but secured a contract for a teaching position in the city's schools.

Houdek, who has coached the Bulldog tennis team six years, had requested a public hearing at a meeting of the board of trustees to contest non-renewal of his contract with the Midland Independent School District.

The board room was filled to capacity during the three-hour hearing before the two attorneys, Larry Watts of Houston who represented Houdek and Thornton Hardie representing the school district, reached a settlement behind closed doors.

The settlement decreed that Houdek be "rehabbed for a one-year period, subject to assignment, as a teacher."

When asked by another trustee if the settlement included Houdek's coaching, trustee James E. Winget Jr. replied, "On the face of it, it excludes coaching."

The decision, apparently arrived at in an uncalculated executive session, culminated lengthy debates between the two attorneys and the two witnesses called by Hardie.

Watts objected to Houdek's non-renewal for four primary reasons: Houdek allegedly had no notice of the March 8 board of trustees meeting at which teacher contracts were renewed by trustees. Houdek was among several teachers who were not rehired.

Houdek had not received a pre-notice hearing. The bill had been requested by the city council, he said, and was passed in the state House of Representatives March 20 and in the Senate April 24.

Sponsors of the bill were Sen. Pete Stinson and Rep. Tom Craddock. Nussle said the bill was an enabling statute. It could only take effect if the city council passes an ordinance authorizing the municipal court to be a court of record. The ordinance can be passed anytime after the enabling statute becomes effective Sept. 1.

The bill was requested, the city attorney said, to cut down on "duplicate trials" and "frivolous" appeals.

A LANDING IN THE MIDST OF TRAGEDY — Wreckage of the Eastern Airlines jet is in the foreground as a DC8 jetliner prepares to land at Kennedy Airport today. The Eastern jetliner crashed Tuesday while trying to land at the airport and more than 100 persons were killed. (AP Wirephoto.)

110 PERSONS REPORTED KILLED— Lightning May Have Caused Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — Officials are investigating the possibility that lightning struck a jetliner attempting to land during an electrical storm, causing it to crash in flames near a crowded highway. Authorities said 110 persons aboard the flight from New Orleans died.

Fourteen survivors were hospitalized. Firemen said early today that 106 bodies had been found in the nearby area at the edge of Kennedy International Airport where the Eastern Airlines Boeing 727 plane, nonstop flight 66 from New Orleans, crashed late Tuesday afternoon. Two other persons died at a hospital.

There was still confusion today on the number of persons aboard the jet. A spokesman for the airline said there were 116 passengers and 7 crew members, a total of 123.

But the hospital where two of the victims died said a total of 16 persons had been admitted and the 14 were still alive. Added to the 108 bodies counted by the firemen at the crash scene, this would make a total of 124 aboard.

It was one of the worst airplane disasters in the history of the United States. In 1960, 134 persons were killed when a United Airlines DC8 and a Trans World Airlines Super-Constellation collided in the air over New York City. The nation's worst one-plane crash killed 111 persons when an Alaska Airlines 727 crashed near Juneau in 1971.

The survivors of Tuesday's crash included two small girls. Most of the survivors were badly burned.

The passengers included an Episcopal bishop, a professional basketball player and a group of Norwegian merchant seamen. The bishop and the athlete were not listed among the survivors. However, a hospital spokesman said early today that the 14 survivors included three unidentified men.

Mayor Abraham D. Beame, who went to the crash scene by helicopter, said, "I'm sure it's a terrible tragedy."

The National Transportation Safety Board's area supervisor, George Van Epps, said Tuesday night that there was no record of any emergency radio message from the pilot, Capt. John Kieven, of Queens.

Van Epps said flight and voice recorders had been recovered and were being sent to Washington for study. Asked about eyewitness reports that lightning had hit the plane, he said that was "something that will be considered in the investigation." A Federal Aviation Administration investigator at the scene who asked that his name not be used said "weather was definitely a factor."

However, Isabel Burgess, a member of the NTSB investigating board, said she doubted that lightning had anything to do with the crash. She said she had only heard of two previous crashes directly attributed to lightning.

A number of eyewitnesses, most of them motorists on nearby Rockaway Boulevard, said they saw a bolt of lightning which appeared to hit the plane just before it burst into flames.

They reported seeing the plane spin across heavily traveled Rockaway Boulevard and knock down approach light stanchions before shattering into an almost unrecognizable mass of rubble.

Columnist Says Castro Plot Involved Poison, Cash, Rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Underworld figure John Roselli's account of CIA attempts to kill Cuban Premier Fidel Castro in the early 1960s involves "cash payments, poison pellets, high-powered rifles and power boat launches to Cuba," columnist Jack Anderson said today.

The columnist said Roselli knows of five attempts to kill the Cuban premier.

He said Roselli has told him there were reports that Castro was desperately ill after one attempt to poison him—but that Roselli is not sure the illness was due to the poison or a virus.

Applying on the ABC-TV program "AM America," Anderson said Roselli supplied him with details after three hours of closed-door testimony before the Senate intelligence committee Tuesday.

Today, the committee scheduled a session with William K. Harvey, a former Central Intelligence Agency official mentioned in Roselli's talk with Anderson.

The columnist reported that Roselli said he was recruited in Los Angeles in 1960 by Robert Maheu, then an aide to billionaire Howard Hughes who previously had done work for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Roselli identified the CIA project officer in charge of the Castro assassination attempt as "Big Jim" O'Connell, Anderson said.

"Maheu put Roselli in contact with O'Connell in New York City on Sept. 14, 1960," Anderson said. He continued: "Thereafter Roselli flew to Miami and recruited the assassination squad. At first they plotted to poison Castro. Poison pellets were supplied by the CIA. They were delivered to the plotters in their Miami hotel room, according to Roselli, by Maheu."

"Maheu dramatically opened a briefcase revealing $10,000 in cash and the fatal pellets. The money was distributed to the Cuban plotters, Roselli swore he never took any money from abandoned."

As a trial de novo, the same witnesses and the same evidence are presented in the appellate trial in the county court as they were presented in the municipal court trial. If the conviction is upheld by the county judge, and the fine is more than $500, Nussle said, the case can then be appealed a final time to the Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin.

In the Court of Criminal Appeals, the case is heard solely on the basis of mistakes committed by either the judge, the prosecuting attorney or the jury as detailed by the court reporter in the transcript, or written

U.S. Gets Monday Deadline

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The Pathet Lao today warned the United States to shut down its aid mission by Monday or "face the responsibility for everything that might happen."

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said four officials of the U.S. Agency for International Development would depart by Monday, the deadline agreed to by U.S. and Laotian officials. But he said transfer of AID property to the Laotian government probably would not be completed by then.

Negotiations Slow Negotiations to complete the transfer of AID assets have been slow, and "not a single project has been signed over to the Lao government," the U.S. spokesman said.

The Laotians appeared to be delaying until they got instructions from Pathet Lao leaders who are meeting at their headquarters in northeastern Laos.

Meanwhile, a Saigon broadcast tended to confirm reports of fighting by former South Vietnamese army troops holding out around Thau Dau Mot, 20 miles north of Saigon, seven weeks after the collapse of the former South Vietnamese government.

Caravan Blocked The broadcast said some members of the Women's Liberation Federation in Thau Dau Mot "led the revolutionary army blocking a caravan of fleeing personnel of the former regime while in another sector of the same province members of the federation together with the wives and loved ones of soldiers persuaded 2,000 paratroopers to disband and report to the revolutionary authorities."

'Frivolous' Misdemeanor Appeals May Soon Be Eliminated

By BUDDY BAKER Those time-consuming, money-wasting appeals of municipal court trials, where the person sits quietly through his trial and, upon conviction, immediately announces his appeal to county court, may soon be eliminated.

A bill passed by the last legislature left it up to the Midland City Council to pass an enabling ordinance that would curtail those "frivolous" appeals in misdemeanor trials, city attorney Joe Nussle said.

"Under this bill," he said, "you only get one trial unless reversible error is committed in that trial."

Although he said he had no objections to appeals based on true judicial error, it is these "frivolous" appeals, Nussle said, that the bill is designed to eliminate. "We see no reason for having these trials involving duplicate offenses."

Provided the city council sets up the court of record system, Nussle said, the rearrangement of the appeals procedure hopefully will "expedite the administration of justice."

Under the present system, Nussle said, "after conviction, the defendant gives notice of appeal and his case is transferred over to the county court whether error was committed or not." There, the case is tried record, of the trial in county court.

Under the proposed system, Nussle said, a court reporter will be required, if requested, by the judge, defense attorney, defendant, or prosecuting attorney.

If the defendant is convicted and he appeals to the county court, Nussle said, the county judge will not retry the case, but read the transcript, listen to lawyers' arguments and decide the case only on "reversible error" — mistakes made by the judge, prosecuting attorney or jury which the court

Midland Teachers' Salary To Increase Average Of $1,736

Midland public school teachers will receive an average of $1,736 more in salary during the 1975-76 school year than in the past year as a result of action taken at Tuesday's board of trustees meeting.

Recommended by the school superintendent, Dr. James H. Malley, the raises include $1,400 for teachers with bachelor's degrees and $1,650 for those with master's and above approved by the state legislature. Also included in the plan is an additional $300 traditionally added to the annual pay for each year's experience.

Tuesday's action raises the salary of a teacher with no experience from last year's $7,750 to $9,450 beginning this fall. A new teacher with a master's degree would be paid $16,000 and one with a master's plus 30 hours additional study would earn $20,500 for his first year's teaching.

The salary schedule graduates upward with regard to education and experience, with the maximum pay slated to be $34,950 for a teacher with 19 years of experience who holds a master's plus 30 hours.

Warren said the effect of awarded "blanket" raises actually gives the experienced teacher proportionately less than the inexperienced one.

Discussion of the merit pay also entered Tuesday's salary discussion, with several trustees objecting that it is ineffective because the school district decries that no more than 15 per cent of the faculty may be on merit pay.

The principle of the merit payments requires that they be awarded for superior teaching performance on a temporary basis for the first three years, after which time the merit check of $300 becomes a permanent addition to the teacher's salary.

Elementary Principals Appointed

Two Midland elementary schools will have new principals this fall.

Mamie Rose Williams, currently coordinator of English and language arts for the school district, was named principal of Pease Elementary School and Leah Roy Shannon, history department chairman at Goddard Junior High, will be Henderson Elementary principal.

Both were approved at Tuesday's meeting of the school district's board of trustees.

Mrs. Williams replaces Hubert Schmidt who was acting principal at Pease, as well as coordinator of special education. Schmidt was given the temporary post at mid-year to replace Bill Zeiler, who had been promoted to direct transportation and custodial.

Shannon will begin at Henderson in the fall, freeing Keller Stany who had been part-time principal there, to be full-time principal at Jones Elementary.

Additional personnel action in the meeting included approval for Royce Austin to devote full time to principalship at Bonham Elementary. He previously had divided his time between the school and heading the district's Head Start program.

The now-vacant Head Start slot will be filled at a later date, school administrators said.

Six Companies, 19 Individuals Are Indicted In Payola Crackdown

By ROBERT RAWITCH
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Six corporations and 19 individuals, including three record company presidents — were indicted by federal grand juries here, and in three other cities Tuesday, kicking off the first U.S. Justice Department crackdown on alleged payola in the record industry.

Not since the disclosures of the late 1960s and early 1980s of widespread payments to radio disc jockeys by record companies has such scrutiny been aimed at the $2 billion-a-year record industry.

The indictments, culminating a two-year investigation initially launched in New Jersey, signify the first coordinated effort to seek criminal charges against record companies, promoters and disc jockeys.

Newer Companies Named
None of the nation's largest record companies nor well-known radio personalities were named in the series of indictments which instead served in several of the newer recording companies which have made financial inroads into the lucrative industry.

However, a New York federal grand jury indicted Clive J. Davis, former president of CBS Records and now president of Arista Records, on charges of failing to report more than $60,000 in taxable income for the years 1970 to 1972.

CBS' Fred Davis in early 1973 and has claimed that the $230,000-a-year executive misappropriated $94,000 in company funds.

It was not immediately clear how Davis might be linked to the alleged payola scandals, but his indictment was announced in New Jersey at a news conference called by the U.S. attorneys from New Jersey, Los Angeles and Philadelphia to announce the payola crackdown.

That indictment returned by the New York grand jury also indicted David Wynshaw, former director of artist relations at CBS Records, on tax evasion charges as well as for allegedly taking part in an scheme with a reputed organized crime figure to defraud CBS Records.

Wynshaw and Pasquale Falco, a reputed associate of members of the late Vito Genovese family, were accused of setting up five sham operations and then arranging for the submission of false invoices to CBS.

An authorized wire tap on Falco's phone in connection with a heroin trafficking operation was said to have included conversations in which Davis' and Wynshaw's names were mentioned, but again it was not clear if they were involved in the alleged payola operations.

Prior to 1960 there was no law prohibiting payments by record companies to disc jockeys, but disclosure of the widespread practice brought about federal legislation making such payments illegal.

Independents Used
Federal prosecutors say the modern payola schemes are using independent record promoters in an effort to get around the 1960 law on the grounds that the promoters are not actually employees of the companies and therefore, exempt from the law.

One such promoter, Fred Rector, 40, of Los Angeles, was indicted by a local grand jury on charges of failing to file income tax returns in 1972 and 1973, according to Asst. U.S. Atty. Stephen V. Wilson who is heading the payola investigation here.

Rector, who independently contracts with various record companies, was charged with earning unreported income of $65,241 in 1973 and $37,856 in 1972.

Rector allegedly was paid by record companies in cash and in large quantities of records he could sell to various distributors in return for promoting records at radio stations throughout the United States.

Reached by telephone in New York, Rector said he knew nothing about the indictment and would have no comment on the matter.

To this point, the payola investigations have been most extensive in Philadelphia and Newark.

Nat. Tarnopol, president and controlling stockholder of Brunswick Record Corp. and sole stockholder of Dekan Records, Inc., both centered in New York and Chicago, was indicted on charges of conspiracy, mail fraud, wire fraud and evasion of more than $103,000 in personal income taxes and more than $184,000 in corporate income taxes.

Six of Tarnopol's employees were also indicted and all were accused of setting records to distributors by illegal and surreptitious means.

Radio Employees Indicted
The only radio station employee indicted in the probe so far is Burke Johnson, programming director of WAOK-AM in Atlanta. Johnson was charged with perjuring himself when he told the Newark grand jury he never received any money or clothing from record companies or their representatives.

Indicted by the Philadelphia federal grand jury was Kenneth Gamble, president of Gamble-Huff Music, Inc., and Leon Huff, vice president of Assorted Music, Inc., and Gamble-Huff Records. Assorted Music's records are distributed through CBS Records.

In an 85-count indictment, Gamble, Huff and five other employees of the two firms were charged with giving $38,000 in cash, clothing, money orders and airline tickets to disc jockeys, program directors, music directors and other radio station employees.

Money Claimed Received
Johnson was alleged to have received two Western Union money orders from Gamble's firms, as well as clothing.

Assorted Music, Gamble-Huff Records, North Bay Records, Gamble Records, Hugo Management and Cheyenne Productions — all controlled by Gamble — were indicted as corporations.

William B. Ray, chief of the Federal Communications Commission's complaints and compliance division, hailed the indictments as just what the industry needed.

Although the FCC has probed payola privately and publicly on and off for nearly two decades, the federal regulatory agency has no authority to bring criminal charges.

When violations were found, Ray said, stations usually were given a strong reprimand. But cases turned over to the Justice Department for prosecution had almost always been rejected, he said.

Ray said payola is not nearly as rampant as it was in the 1950s, but it still exists and is exceptionally hard to pin down.

After the revelations of the 1950s, Congress made it illegal for any record company or its employees to give under-the-table payments to radio stations or record stores.

Ray said the new law in payola obviously has been to use independent agents "to try and insulate the record companies and yet do their dirty deeds."

"I'm just hopeful we'll get enough indictments and convictions to scare the hell out of everyone else," Ray said.

The Recording Assn. of America Inc. declined to comment on the charges. But it has reduced drastically since the noted "there are thousands of New Jersey federal grand jury companies and individuals in the started subpoenaing record industry personnel from around The overwhelming majority of the country.

These individuals follow ethical and lawful business practices." Told who were among those indicted Tuesday, the official said "from what I know there are going to be a lot more that his name not be used said — and big names."

Two Women File Suit Challenging Bell's Policy On Deposits

HOUSTON (AP) — A suit she told that any interest was required to be paid on said money.

Vaughan said Bell makes no investigation to determine the "credit-worthiness" of its clients and has never made public its criteria for determining which customers should pay a deposit and which should not.

Ken Brasel, a spokesman for the telephone company, said Bell officials have not yet been served with the suit and he could not comment on the particulars of it.

"Our deposit policies are being administered under the regulations of local tariff and state government," he said. "We are adhering to both local and state regulations in our deposit policies."

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police said Tuesday they were preparing an arrest warrant for a 18-year-old Paris, Tex. man in connection with the April 20 stabbing death of Raul G. Santana, 21.

Santana was found stabbed at least 37 times. Police said his throat had been cut and his body covered with a piece of wood.

Police Sgt. E.W. Urey said the motive for Santana's killing may have been robbery, anger or both.

Soviets Monitor President's Calls, FBI Source Reveals

By JACK NELSON
The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — There's no question about the capability of the Soviet intelligence service to monitor official Washington calls, including some of the calls of the President of the United States, an informed FBI source said Tuesday.

When the Bureau first learned of the Soviet practice of intercepting Washington calls, it put the FBI lab to work to try to learn what kind of calls the Russians might be monitoring, the source continued. "It just so happened that one of the first calls the FBI intercepted was a White House conversation involving a high government official."

Moreover, he said, the National Security Agency, which first learned of the Soviet practice more than two years ago, also found that random monitoring could pick up sensitive official conversations.

"The NSA picked up some FBI calls involving some of our guys here and some of them in our New York office," he said. "They told us, 'Hey, you guys have got to be careful what you say on the phone.'"

The Soviet capability of monitoring telephone calls in the United States was first disclosed on June 10 by the Rockefeller Commission in its report on abuses by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The commission did not say how the Russians could intercept telephone calls, but CIA officials said they could do it with elaborate electronics equipment mounted on the roof of the Soviet Embassy here.

Blackmail Possible
Although the commission made no specific mention of Washington telephone calls, it reported that Communist countries "appear to have developed electronic collection of intelligence to an extraordinary degree of technology and sophistication for use in the United States and elsewhere throughout the world, and we believe that these countries can monitor and record thousands of private telephone conversations."

The commission mentioned "the real possibility" that telephone conversations could be recorded and analyzed by agents of foreign powers and said "this raises the real specter that selected American users of telephones are potentially subject to blackmail that can seriously affect their actions, or even lead in some cases to recruitment as espionage agents."

Intelligence sources say both the United States and the Soviet Union have long had the capability to intercept microwaves. About 70 per cent of the long-distance calls in the United States, as well as some cross-country calls, are transmitted by microwaves.

Any monitoring of most local telephone calls, as well as 30 per cent of the long-distance calls, could be accomplished by the Soviets only through the risky method of installing taps, intelligence sources say.

CIA Issued Warnings
A former CIA official said the CIA began warning intelligence people at least three years ago that their telephone calls were subject to being monitored by the Soviets.

"The trouble in this town," he said, "is that most people talk over telephones that can easily be monitored. There are not that many 'scrambler' phones because that is an expensive and complicated system."

"Scrambler" telephones developed by NSA, are used by many high-level officials for sensitive conversations involving national security.

But two factors mitigate against the use of such phones in many cases, the former CIA official said. One is the relative scarcity of the phones because of the expense involved, and the other is the inconvenience of having to go to special locations to make the calls.

Such special phones scramble the voices in such a way that they are unintelligible except to the parties to the conversation. They unscramble the voices by inserting cards containing coded information that is changed daily in electronic attachments to the phones.

The FBI source who discussed the Soviet interception program with the Los Angeles Times said the FBI has only three of the telephones, one for FBI Director Clarence Kelley, one for the assistant director in charge of intelligence, and one for the New York office.

"We wanted to put one on the West Coast," he said, "but it was just too expensive. It would have cost more than $250,000."

California's Obscenity Law Revived By Court

By LINDA MATHEWS
The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — Over a scintilla of dissent, the Supreme Court Tuesday revived California's obscenity statute, and on a 5 to 4 vote reversed a decision by a federal court in Los Angeles that the law was unconstitutional.

Saying little about the validity of the California law, the high court majority instead ruled that the three-judge federal court which struck it down had no business entertaining the suit in the first place.

Out of respect for the Justice Potter Stewart, author of the unusually heated dissenting opinion, called the majority holding "an open invitation to state officials to institute state proceedings in order to defeat federal jurisdiction."

The case stemmed from Orange County officials' seizures, on Nov. 23 and 24, 1973, of four copies of the film "Deep Throat" and nearly $5,000 in box-office receipts from the Pussycat Theatre in Buena Park, a Los Angeles suburb.

An eight-count misdemeanor charge was filed on Nov. 15 against two theater employees and an Orange County Superior Court judge, after viewing the film, declared "Deep Throat" to be legally obscene.

California state courts, the federal court should have dismissed a Buena Park theater owner's challenge to the obscenity law once Orange County prosecutors filed state criminal charges against him, the high court majority held.

The four dissenters complained that the decision "ousts the federal courts from their historic role" as protectors of constitutional freedoms and made it possible for state prosecutors to void federal civil rights suits by arresting the plaintiffs.

Justice Potter Stewart, author of the unusually heated dissenting opinion, called the majority holding "an open invitation to state officials to institute state proceedings in order to defeat federal jurisdiction."

The case stemmed from Orange County officials' seizures, on Nov. 23 and 24, 1973, of four copies of the film "Deep Throat" and nearly $5,000 in box-office receipts from the Pussycat Theatre in Buena Park, a Los Angeles suburb.

An eight-count misdemeanor charge was filed on Nov. 15 against two theater employees and an Orange County Superior Court judge, after viewing the film, declared "Deep Throat" to be legally obscene.

Rather than appeal that finding, Vincent Miranda, the theater owner, filed a civil rights action in U.S. District Court against various Orange County officials. He sought the return of his receipts and the films, plus a declaration that the statute was unconstitutional.

Agreeing with Miranda that the police were more interested in shutting down "Deep Throat" than in enforcing the law, the three-judge court said Orange County authorities had demonstrated "bad faith and harassment" which justified federal intervention.

The statute was invalidated by the district court panel for failing to conform with the standards laid down in the Supreme Court's landmark 1973 obscenity rulings. The panel found that the statute did not specifically define the sexual acts that could not be depicted in books and movies circulated in California.

"Fair Notice Not Given"
By failing to state "what California permits or prohibits," the law ran afoul of the Supreme Court's 1973 requirement that state officials must provide pornographers with "fair notice" of what conduct will land them in jail, the three-judge panel declared.

Overturning that ruling, the majority said in an opinion by Justice Byron R. White that Miranda had turned to federal court only to circumvent state courts and to "interfere with the pending state prosecution" of his employees.

White said Miranda's suit was barred by a major 1971 high court decision, Younger versus Harris, which held that historic principles of federalism prevented federal courts from ruling on constitutional claims that were also raised in concurrent state criminal proceedings.

It was irrelevant, White said, that the theater owner himself had not been indicted when he filed the federal suit because he had a "substantial stake in the state proceedings" and could just as easily have had his employees attack the statute's constitutionality as part of their defense.

Another Reason
A second reason for dismissing Miranda's suit, White wrote, was that the state criminal complaint was amended six weeks after the federal suit was filed, adding Miranda as a defendant. That action clearly brought the Younger decision into play and required prompt dismissal of the suit, White said.

"The rule in Younger versus Harris is designed to permit state courts to try state cases free from interference by federal courts," White said, "particularly where the party to the federal case may fully litigate his claim before the state court."

Even "where state criminal proceedings are begun against the federal plaintiffs after the federal complaint is filed, but before any proceedings of substance on the merits have taken place in federal court," the federal judges must abstain, White held.

DISMANTLE TENT CITY — Military crews face the formidable task of cleaning up Tuesday after the last refugees moved out of the "tent city" camp on Guam. The tents served as homes for some 90,000 South Vietnamese refugees who passed through Guam en route to new homes. (AP Wirephoto.)

'Tent City' Being Pulled Down

AGANA, Guam (AP) — "Tent City," the first home on American territory for more than 90,000 Vietnamese refugees, is being pulled down.

The temporary shelter's last 3,000 residents were moved to permanent buildings elsewhere on the Pacific Island after a tropical downpour drenched the camp on Tuesday.

There are still more than 15,000 refugees on Guam, including 1,200 who have asked to return to their homeland.

Fearing Tent City would be destroyed by a typhoon, officials became anxious to shut down the camp when the storm season began in May. After Tuesday's rain, the last residents of Tent City were moved out.

Seabees began folding 50,000 cots and dismantling 3,500 tents today. A Navy spokesman said it will take about a week to dismantle the compound.

The 540 Army troops who run Tent City have started packing their gear to return to Hawaii, though they must compete with refugees for space on outbound flights.

Tent City held as many as 40,000 residents at a time during its days of operation, making it the largest city on Guam. It once boasted two newspapers, a bank, daily church services, a Navy exchange, a fleet of hot dog stands, eight dining halls, five outdoor theaters and its own Zip Code.

The first refugees arrived April 25 as Seabees toiled around the clock to keep ahead of the influx, the biggest wave of humanity to hit Guam since U.S. Marines and soldiers stormed ashore in 1944.

Many of those who are still on Guam will be housed at the abandoned hospital compound at Asan Point, which has room for as many as 10,000 refugees in old barracks. Shelter for another 4,000 is available at Andersen Air Force Base.

Diffident Author Reflects On Rape Experience

The Los Angeles Times — Those who know Shana Alexander — including Shana Alexander — say she is shy. Professionally tough, maybe, but personally reserved to the point of frostbite.

Consequently, it is a surprise to find her writing, in the introduction to her new book on women's legal rights, that she has been raped.

The reference is oblique: "I myself had to wrestle with every aspect of the law exposed in this book with the exception of widowhood and crime," she said in a recent interview. And it is consistent with increasingly enlightened attitudes in law and public consciousness that shame is due to rapist, not the victim.

Nonetheless, it seems an unlikely announcement from Alexander, who is generally not given to such self-revelation. She may reflect her liberal bent each week on CBS' 60 minutes. And she may have written contentiously as a columnist for Life (The Feminine Eye) and Newsweek magazines, but she remains a diffident person.

Her mentioning the rape was neither brave nor unusual, she said in a change of mood. She didn't want to make "a big deal" out of it, and it seemed on this promotional tour people were making a big deal out of it.

"I don't know how much to say of this," Alexander began. "I thought it was important to put in the book not because it was an exceptional experience but because it's quite a common one. If you interpret the statute as meaning what it says,

"Rape is carnal knowledge of a woman forcibly and against her will. That definition, I believe, is literally the same in all states. And by that definition, rape is a much more common experience than women used to be willing to admit to."

"By the time you've lived your life, if you haven't been through that, it might be more unusual than usual," said Alexander, 49. "Did I report it? Of course I didn't report it. It just seemed one of those things that happen in life. I experience rape, guilt, humiliation, yes, yes. But nobody got hurt." That is, there was no physical harm, she added quickly. "If you read some books about rape, as I have lately, you will discover most rape — I believe more than 50 per cent — occurs between people who've known each other, not close friends and not strangers but people where the degree of relationship is ambiguous, where obviously the man has one mental set and the woman has another, and by the time it's her turn to say no, it's too late. That's a very common experience."

The image of Shana Alexander is of a tall "lady writer," one who hides her diaries in the attic and coughs a lot. She is nothing of the sort. She is optimistic, unquenching. She may have stumbled into her career, as she says, but she knows what she wants today.

For a start, she's quit her job at Newsweek (She and Bill Moyers alternated columns on the back page.) The reason was not an admitted difficulty with deadlines — Alexander once spent seven years off and an interviewing Marion Brando for Life — but the problems of refocusing every week on a different subject.

"After a while your eyes get middle-aged in the sense it's hard to focus on a sports figure one week and a fashion person the next. Here's a political thing and here's a murder mystery and here's a presidential trip on Air Force One and here's going to a boxing match and here's having a baby and here's going to see George Wallace."

She was breathless, reciting the range of stories she's covered. "You want to do the best possible job you can, not only as a journalist but also as a person reaction. I think as you go along your standards get higher and you long to concentrate on one story."

For Alexander, inspiration for that single story came as she was driving in Los Angeles last year. "The Patty Hearst Story was on the air for 24 hours a day. Just like a comic strip with a light bulb over my head, I suddenly thought, 'My God, there's my story.'"

She had dinner with her agent, Irving Lazar, that night and a deal was made with a publisher the next week. "It's hard to explain the book and I don't try to, really, except to say it's not a detective story. It's my own book about America. Patty Hearst is the central character."

Alexander, who is divorced and the mother of an adopted daughter, comes from a writing family. Her father composed "Hard-Hearted Hannah, the Vamp of Savannah" and "Happy Days Are Here Again," among others. Her mother was a critic on the newspaper PM, where Shana went to work at 17. "I was so naive I never suspected nepotism," she said.

She put on her white gloves (it was during summer vacation from Vassar) and rode the subway to interview a pregnant Gypsy Rose Lee. There followed more writing jobs at Junior Bazaar, Harper's Bazaar, Mademoiselle, Flair and finally Life, where she was naming her first woman staff writer. For a time she edited McCall's magazine but was fired, the seventh editor in 10 years to fill the job, she learned later. "The executive role, with responsibility for people's lives," didn't suit her. To say nothing of her "ladylike" gray office.

She stayed in the corporation, however. "I did some so-called career counseling. We were trying to make Norton Simon Inc. a model company in relationship to the employment of women."

From that experience she learned a woman should think two jobs ahead, not merely the next step on the ladder. "She should think, 'Where am I going? What do I want?' A man would never think, 'What I want is marriage and children,' though he may want that, too."

Her own career just happened, Alexander said. After Flair folded, she got a $65-a-week job at Life just to pay her Saks bill. "It didn't seem to matter. I thought, 'I'm getting married. I intend to work here only a few months.'"

She stayed 18 years. "I loved it and I was a great success there." But when she speaks to young women today she tells them of the folly of not speaking up for their financial rights. "My retirement benefits, everything of a practical nature, grew out of that little pyramid. So instead of starting out at $125 I started at $65 and, when I'm an old bag, I'll be worth half as much."

Altrusa Governor Makes Official Visit To Midland Group

Mrs. Marjorie H. Cave of Dallas, governor, district nine, Altrusa International, Inc., is making her official visit to the Altrusa Club of Midland, Inc. She will be the installing officer during an installation ceremony at 7:30 p.m., Thursday at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

Mrs. Cave has been an active member of the Altrusa Club of Oak Cliff since 1966. She has served this club as president, vice president, program coordinator, membership chairman, vocational services chairman, classification chairman and editor of the Bulletin.

While serving as president, she won the highest honor award Altrusa presents, the Edith DeBusk Presidents Award, given to the most outstanding Altrusa Club president.

Mrs. Cave has served district nine as vocational services chairman, first and second vice governor, governor-elect and district program coordinator. She also served as area chairman and as such was in charge of area leadership training seminars held each spring.

There followed more writing jobs at Junior Bazaar, Harper's Bazaar, Mademoiselle, Flair and finally Life, where she was nam-

Her own career just happened, Alexander said. After Flair folded, she got a $65-a-week job at Life just to pay her Saks bill. "It didn't seem to matter. I thought, 'I'm getting married. I intend to work here only a few months.'"

She stayed 18 years. "I loved it and I was a great success there." But when she speaks to young women today she tells them of the folly of not speaking up for their financial rights. "My retirement benefits, everything of a practical nature, grew out of that little pyramid. So instead of starting out at $125 I started at $65 and, when I'm an old bag, I'll be worth half as much."

HINTS FROM Heloise

The Whole Family Goes Camping Together!

Dear Heloise: We have recently returned from our first vacation with a camping trailer. We made many mistakes, but did find this one idea very helpful. We covered cardboard boxes, inside and out, with adhesive-backed paper and cut finger holes in the ends for easier carrying.

Each member of the family had his or her own box which was nearly waterproof, and into the box went the plastic bottle of shampoo, bar of soap, tooth brush, tooth paste — anything that would be needed in the shower room.

Everyone was responsible for his own things without having to borrow from someone else! Also throughout the year I had put back partly used bars of soap, tubes of toothpaste, containers of deodorant, etc. so we didn't have the expense of buying a new supply for everyone all at once. Besides, a partly used bar of soap fits a soap dish better and a rolled-up tube of tooth paste takes less space.

If the half bar of soap or fourth of a tube of tooth paste doesn't make the trip back home, it won't be quite so many pennies lost.

This hint would be helpful for children going to camp also. It was a great vacation and quite a learning experience. We met many interesting people in the camping area.

Port Arthur Man May Be Lawyer For Carrillo Panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Former state Rep. Terry Doyle of Port Arthur apparently will be hired as the lawyer for the special House committee investigating state District Court Judge O. P. Carrillo.

The committee voted 8-0 Tuesday to authorize its chairman to employ Doyle, a Democrat, from among several applicants for the job.

The chairman, Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, told reporters he had already talked with Doyle informally about the job and would try to employ him at $300 a working day, which he said is recommended by the State Bar.

The committee then voted to recess until July 9 to give it time to get bank records it says are necessary for the completion of cross-indexing of the 12 volumes of testimony in the case.

Five of those volumes have been cross-indexed in two executive sessions, Hale said. But subpoenas to several banks in South Texas for photo copies of records have produced only two replies, and one of those banks said it has no record of the accounts the committee inquired about, he said.

Doyle would be the prosecuting attorney in the case in the event the House votes articles of impeachment against Carrillo and the Senate then sits in judgment on those charges.

Hale said the committee decided it was time to bring in a lawyer so he could "grow up with the case," but he rejected the suggestion this action indicated the committee thinks it is likely to recommend such articles to the full House.

"Articles of impeachment are going to be drawn up in any case," he said. "Whether the committee will vote for any of them or all of them, I don't know."

Carrillo has been accused of using Duval County employ-land equipment for private purposes, and of conspiring with rancher-banker Clifton Manges for the removal from office of four trustees of the Belvidere Independent School District.

The entire controversy has been viewed from the beginning as a fight between Carrillo, his relatives and Manges on one side and the Parr forces for control of Duval County.

George Parr, known for years as the Duke of Duval, killed himself on his ranch April 1. His nephew, Archer Parr, was temporarily removed from the county court bench by Carrillo on the grounds of a federal perjury conviction and allegations Parr stole $420,000 from the county.

Archer Parr's removal is to be tried in Carrillo's court in Hebbronville, with testimony expected to begin Friday.

Hale said he hoped the committee would be in a position to complete its work by August.

BRISCOE NAMES UVALDE MAN AS SUCCESSOR — Associate Texas Justice Resigns

AUSTIN (AP) — Judge Ruel C. Walker has resigned, effective Sept. 30, as associate justice of the Texas Supreme Court. Gov. Dolph Briscoe appointed State District Court Judge Ross E. Doughty of Uvalde to succeed him.

Doughty will serve at least through the November 1976 general election. He has the right to run in that election for a full six-year term on the high court.

Doughty, 64, has been a district judge since Gov. Allan Shivers appointed him to the bench in 1949. He previously had served as Uvalde County attorney and as district attorney.

Briscoe said Walker had "earned the gratitude of all Texans."

"I am especially pleased to be able to replace Judge Walker with an able and distinguished jurist and a dedicated public servant. Judge Doughty is an outstanding citizen—not just of Uvalde, not just of South Texas, but of the entire state and nation. I am confident he will bring great distinction to the court."

Briscoe said.

Doughty is a graduate of Texas A&M and The University of Texas Law School. He is a Catholic and a Navy veteran of World War II.

Walker, 65, said he "just felt like retiring."

He sent his resignation to Briscoe Tuesday, and the governor followed it with Doughty's appointment a few hours later.

Walker is senior associate justice on the high court. He was appointed in 1954 by Shivers and has been reelected without opposition since then. His present term expires Dec. 31, 1976.

"They sent me a Medicare card back in February, which was my 65th birthday, and that was when I got to thinking about retiring," Walker said.

Walker is a Cleburne native. He received his law degree from The University of Texas and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He was admitted to the bar in 1934 and served in the attorney general's department under James V. Allred, who later became governor. Walker also practiced privately in Cleburne for 14 years and served in the Navy during World War II.

Walker said he hopes to try cases occasionally as a retired judge.

Briscoe appointed Sabinal lawyer Jack Woodley to succeed Doughty as district judge. Woodley, 60, was Uvalde County judge from 1951 to 1962. He is a graduate of Schreiner Institute and Cumberland University Law School.

Mathews said that a record attendance is expected for this year's rodeo, which will boast a total purse of close to $15,000. He said he also expects "a bunch of top cowboys" to participate.

Pecos was the home of the world's first rodeo held July 4, 1883.

Air Force Denies Coverup Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has denied charges by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., that it has covered up a safety hazard on the large C-5 transport plane.

Proxmire said Tuesday the Air Force knew as long ago as 1971 that each of its C5 transport planes contained the safety hazard blamed for the crash that killed 155 persons, most of them children, during the Vietnam orphan lift near Saigon on April 4.

The Air Force said the Saigon crash was completely unrelated to an earlier pressure door problem. "The Air Force has not covered up any safety hazard on the C5," it said in a statement.

"On the contrary, early in 1971 during the test program a problem with the aft cargo door system was identified and corrected," the statement added.

An Air Force spokesman said the 1971 problem was in a mechanism separate from the locks which came open during the C5 flight from Saigon and caused the blowout of the pressure door and ramp and the resultant cutting of important cables for control of the plane.

Koreans Seem To Be Involved In 'War Of Nerves'

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
An AP News Analyst
As Koreans nervously mark the 25th anniversary today of their war, another war of nerves has been breaking out. But this one has the look of a war of nerves. The noise sounds grim and dangerous. But should there be a major outbreak of shooting, it probably would have to be launched by either the North or the South on its own. At this particular stage, the Soviet Union, Communist China and the United States each has strong reasons to want to avoid a new war.

The anniversary provides each government in Korea — that of the Communists in Pyongyang and President Chung Hee Park's dictatorship in the South — a rare opportunity to frighten people into unquestioning obedience.

Hate of Communists in the South is a reliable source of widespread support for Park, whose authoritarianism otherwise arouses a lot of public hostility.

Kim Il Sung, the Communist dictator in the North who modestly calls himself "Great and Beloved Leader," may hanker to bring all the peninsula under his red flag, but even the bombastic Kim is unlikely to be so rash as to do so without the approval of an ally.

One of Kim's generals said in a broadcast article that activities of Park and the Americans were gravely jeopardizing the peace and if they dared start anything, the North Koreans would "crush the aggressors to the last one."

That's standard textbook rhetoric for a Communist general on an anniversary and doesn't necessarily mean Kim is thinking of taking the leap, any more than Park is.

Chinese Using 'Swamp Gas' As Fuel

By RENE FLIPO
Agence France-Press

PEKING — Twelve Chinese provinces have begun the widespread use of swamp gas as a source of domestic fuel, the People's Daily reported in a lengthy account of "problems of fuel in rural areas."

"In the old days, homes filled with smoke at cooking time, but now all it takes is a turn of the knob on the stove," the newspaper wrote.

It went on to say that this modernization was not a sign of industrialization. Rather, it was due to the widespread rational use of methane from hermetically sealed septic tanks filled with the right mixture of "human feces, guano, animal droppings, weeds, plant stems and contaminated water."

In Szechuan Province alone, the newspaper wrote, more than 418,000 gas-generating septic tanks are in continual operation.

The party daily said the use of swamp gas began with the "Great Leap Forward" in 1958, but its production was later "subtended" by the revisionist line of former President Liu Shao-chi.

"But under the impulsion of the great proletarian Cultural Revolution and the movement criticizing Lin Biao and Confucius," the use of generating tanks has been generalized in two thirds of the Chinese provinces under the principle of "quantity, quality, speed and economy," the People's Daily said.

It explained that an easy-to-build 10-cubic-meter (350-cubic-foot) "generator" was adequate — "If sufficient care is taken in its operation" — to supply gas for the cooking and lighting of a family of five.

Thanks to improved construction techniques, the cost of such mini-generators has dropped from 100 Yuan ($30) to 40 Yuan ($12), the newspaper wrote.

Besides a saving in fuel costs of about 40 Yuan a year, the generators, in extracting methane, transform "human feces, guano and animal droppings" into high-quality fertilizer, the newspaper said.

It called for a "mass movement" aimed at widespread use of the generator tanks, whose construction can be financed with state loans. To back up its appeal, the People's Daily cited the example of a pioneer in the field.

Tung Kug-chi, a peasant from the Szechuan production brigade, installed his personal tank. Only two days after he had filled it with the "necessary material," he was able to "cook his rice and have enough light to study by at night."

Several of his friends and neighbors, won over by the new system, installed their own generators.

The "doubts" of some people about the practical, hygienic or functional nature of the tanks were quickly swept aside, the People's Daily concluded.

Other borrowers escape repayment by filing for personal bankruptcy. Some 2,514 borrowers took that route in the 1974 fiscal year, York said, compared to only 1,342 two years earlier.

"A growing problem," York told the subcommittee chaired by Rep. L. H. Fountain, D-N.C., "is students who refuse to pay because they feel they have been cheated by the school." Many who drop out of school don't get the tuition refunds due them, he said. Other school abuses include false advertising, overcrowded facilities and enrollment of students unable to benefit from the courses offered.

Problems can also develop within the government's own ranks, another witness reminded the House panel. Charles M. Cooke Jr., student-aid program troubleshooter for Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Casper W. Weinberger, said seven federal employees have been fired or suspended this year in connection with an investigation of possible criminal activities in OE's insured loan program regional office in Dallas.

Number of Defaults On Student Loans Doubled During Year, Official Says

By ERIC WENTWORTH
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The number of college and trade school students who default on federally insured loans has more than doubled this past year, adding greatly to taxpayers' costs, U.S. Office of Education officials have testified.

Edward T. York, OE's deputy commissioner for management, said the agency was paying off an estimated 134,000 claims totaling more than $134 million for the fiscal year ending June 30. Claims totaled 59,610 in the previous year and 35,364 in the year before that.

The federal government each year insures hundreds of millions of dollars in private loans to students by banks, other commercial lenders and educational institutions. When borrowers don't repay their loans after leaving school, the lenders file default claims to collect the federal insurance.

York, a House government operations subcommittee investigating how fraud and other program abuses can be prevented, said student loan default claims are expected to rise still further in the year starting July 1 to an estimated 148,637. In the past, such predictions often have proved too conservative.

York and other Office of Education witnesses said they didn't know what portion of all the default claims were resulting from abuses. Many borrowers defaulted, they said, because they couldn't find jobs after graduation and couldn't afford to repay their loans.

But program abuses, they acknowledged, did exist. A number of students refuse to repay loans even though they could afford it. Some defaulters argue they were legally minors

Mozambique President To Be Sworn In

LOURENCO MARQUES, Mozambique (AP) — Samora Machel, bearded 41-year-old leader of the guerrilla war that ended Portuguese rule in East Africa, is to be sworn in today as the first president of the new People's Republic of Mozambique.

Machel greeted Portuguese Premier Vasco Goncalves with a hug and long handshake before 35,000 persons at a midnight ceremony Tuesday marking the independence of Portugal's second largest overseas territory.

Scores of exuberant troops of FRELIMO, Machel's Mozambique Liberation Front, fired their Chinese and Russian rifles at random, sending nearby persons rushing for cover and hitting at least one man. The shooting lasted about 20 minutes.

Japan immediately announced recognition of the new People's Republic of Mozambique, Africa's 43rd independent nation with a population of 8.5 million and an area twice that of California.

Recognition by the United States is expected to be a long time coming because of the revolutionary Marxist character of Machel's movement and the strong backing it has from both the Soviet Union and China. The U.S. Consulate in Lourenco Marques, in operation since 1952, closed at midnight.

The independence ceremony in Machava soccer stadium was attended by hundreds of delegates from the Communist powers and African and other Third World countries. Official representatives from the United States and other major Western nations were not invited, but two black members of the U.S. House of Representatives — Charles C. Diggs, D-Mich., and Cardus Collins, D-Tx. — were among the Americans who came with personal invitations.

Diggs said Mozambique's independence was the "most important development" since Ghana's independence in 1947. He said the U.S. government's failure to support black liberation movements in Africa has damaged American standing at the United Nations and could be harmful economically.

The independence celebration began with a 21-gun cannon salute into the African night dampened by a freak dry-season rain. Every crash of the guns brought ecstatic shouts of "Viva! Viva!"

A Portuguese officer in dress whites slowly lowered the red and green flag of Portugal for the last time to the blunder of rolling drums and the roar of the largely African crowd.

Higher costs are pushing up the price of electricity.

Here's how you can hold down your air conditioning costs:

1. Set thermostat at 78 degrees—the lower the setting the more electricity the unit uses.
2. Replace disposable or clean permanent type filters as needed—clogged filters make the unit work harder and use more electricity.
3. Provide adequate attic ventilation—this helps reduce heat buildup.
4. Install proper duct, ceiling and wall insulation and weatherstrip windows and doors—keep hot air out, cool air in. This helps reduce winter heating costs too.
5. Shade the outdoor unit from the sun but keep the unit free of grass or other obstructions that might prevent proper air circulation.
6. Keep windows and fireplace dampers closed—this prevents excessive loss of cool air and infiltration of hot air.
7. Shade windows from direct sunlight with awnings, blinds or draperies—this reduces the load on the unit.

Even though it's costing more, the electricity that's helping keep you cool this summer is still a good value. While the cost of living has increased 68% in the past 10 years, the price of electricity is up only about 25%.

Cubs Pop Brewers Twice To Gain Full Game On Captains

By TED BATTLES

Ten days ago Shreveport was so far in front in the West Division Texas League race, the Midland Cubs needed field glasses and a clear day to see them.

After the Cubs swept a doubleheader, 4-1 and 8-1, from San Antonio's stumbling Brewers Tuesday night at Cubs Stadium, the Captains, rained out of a doubleheader with El Paso for the second night in a row, were almost within halting distance.

Not long ago, Shreveport was some 12 games in front of Midland. Now the lead is down to seven.

By winning 11 of their last 13, the Cubs pushed three games over the .500 mark at 37-34, the best record they've ever shown at this stage of the season in four seasons in the Tall City.

The sweep also enabled the Cubs to move ahead of idle El Paso into second place.

Donnie Moore went five innings to pick up his seventh win in 11 decisions in the opener. Gary Jungc finished up after a finger blister forced the former Lubbock Monterey and Ranger Junior College star to retire while working on a five-hitter.

Second baseman Al Montreuil was the hero both at bat and in the field for the Cubs, knocking in two runs with a double and single and coming up with a couple of dandy fielding gems.

Dan Corder, looking like the stopper who won 22 games in two seasons for Midland, hurled a two-hitter to win the second game, his fourth win in seven decisions.

Outfielder Bill Droegge supplied the batting fireworks with a three-run homer and run-scoring single to wind up the night 5-for-7.

The Cubs turned five double plays during the night. San Antonio got three of its five hits off Moore in the first inning with Dave Oliver's double and Will Aaron's single producing the Brewers' lone run.

Rich Guerra followed with another single, but Montreuil turned Gary Cleverly's grounder into a double play.

Midland jumped in front 3-1 in the second off starter Paul Starkovich, 9-3, when Wayne Tyrene walked and Bill Bright, Montreuil, Joe Wallis and Sember followed with singles, the last three knocking in runs.

Doubles by Tyrene and Montreuil made it 4-1 in the third.

In the fourth, Cleverly walked with one out and then third baseman Cesar Gonzalez came in on the grass and Montreuil made a difficult pivot to get the double play. In the fifth, with runners on first and second, Montreuil made a dive to deflect Oliver's grounder into the hole, rolled over and came up throwing to get the inning ending out.

San Antonio again drew first blood in the nightcap when Kris "Krouch" Krizanich walked, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on Oliver's hit into right, and scored on another wild pitch.

It didn't take the Cubs long to make it 3-1. Jose Ortiz reached first on pitcher Jerry Bell's throwing error, Gonzalez singled to right and Droegge yanked his second homer over the left field fence.

Bell, 34, a former Milwaukee Brewers' pitcher trying to make a comeback, gave up two more in the third when Ortiz doubled, went to third as third baseman Steve Rametta made an outstanding play to retire Gonzalez and scored when shortstop Cleverly misjudged Droegge's pop up. Droegge wound up on second and came home on an infield roller to wild pitch.

That was more than enough for Corder who didn't give up another hit until Krizanich beat out an infield roller to first in the sixth. Third baseman Wayne Tyrene went to the bullpen to one hand Aaron's foul in the seventh and ended the game by coming in fast to turn Manny Lantigua's hard hit ball into the game-ending out.

Ladner Dies In Crash

Young NY Net Presumed Among Victims

NEW YORK (AP) — Wendell Ladner, basketball's biggest little kid, a dynamo who attracted and loved attention, is presumed dead in an Eastern Airlines 767 crash that killed more than 100 persons.

Ladner, a forward for the New York Nets, was returning from a two-week visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Ladner, who raise cotton in Nacogdoches, Miss.

He was driven by a family member to New Orleans, where he boarded Flight 66 Tuesday afternoon. Two hours later the jetliner plummeted to earth in a thunderstorm, sparing the lives of just 14 passengers. Ladner was not among them.

In the inspection of the crash site, police found a body with Ladner's championship ring on it and Ladner's Nets traveling bag was discovered nearby. The bag bore the No. 4—Ladner's number in his 1½ years with the Nets.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

SPORTS

11A—WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25, 1975

Positive identification of the bodies by the New York Medical Examiners office continued into the early morning hours.

They called him "Wonderous Wendell," a 6-foot-5, 330-pound forward who played basketball like a combination tractor-tornado.

He came to the Nets of the American Basketball Association in January, 1974, from the Kentucky Colonels in a trade for Nets' guard John Roche. Also coming to New York was guard Mike Gale.

"He was almost like a little boy in his excitement for life and love of being a professional basketball player," said Kenucky assistant general manager David Vance after learning of the crash.

"If he played for you, he was your favorite. If he played against you, he was the biggest villain."

"In a playoff game in Kentucky two years ago, the sixth game of the Eastern Division championships, he dove out of bounds after a loose ball, fell over the water cooler, and had to have 48 stitches in his body. He practiced the next day and played in the seventh game two nights later, which we won."

And in another game with Kentucky, Vance recalled, "he knocked out the WHAS radio station play-by-play. Chasing a ball as always, he dove over the press table and accidentally ripped out the wires."

"The station reaches 49 stations and Ladner knocked it out with a single dive. Van Vance, the station's announcer, was saying 'The ball's going out! Here comes Ladner...'"

"Then there was silence all across the country, and Ladner was lying in Vance's lap."

"He was almost a legend in the league—no exaggeration."

The midseason trade that brought Ladner to the Nets was a surprise. The Nets had given up a starting guard for two reserves, though considered top prospects.

Ladner got off to a promising start and, as Nets President Roy Boe said, "he helped us to a title two years ago." But last year was a disappointment for the sometimes temperamental forward—prone to fits of temper on the court but a gentleman off it.

Bright Puts Steady Bat Tattoo In Midland Lineup

There are lot of reasons for the recent showing of the Midland Cubs, who not long ago lolled 10 games under .500, but none probably is any bigger than Bill Bright.

A veteran 35-year-old outfielder in his third year with Midland, Bright at one time this year wondered if he shouldn't give up pro ball for full-time career as a teacher.

Ernie Banks, roving coach for the Chicago Cubs, heard the statement and quickly vetoed the idea. "You are a good ball player, Bill Bright, with expansion coming up, you've still got a chance to make it to the 'big'. Don't talk like that."

The way Bill is going this year, he acts like a guy with a future in baseball. Since May 15, Bill has gone 49 for 139 for a .377 average which has raised his batting mark over the .300 level.

The last time Bright was over .300 this late in the season was back in 1972, his first year in the Texas League when he was property of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Bright first attracted attention in Midland when he came in the Tall City for a week-long series as a member of the Arkansas Travelers. He hit the first two balls ever over the great monster in centerfield.

"I was batting .395 at the time," Bill recalls. "But you wouldn't believe what happened to me. I went 6-for-69 and at one time struck out 33 straight times."

Bright finished the season with a .264 average, 30 homers and 89 RBI. That wasn't bad after going one for June and July.

Major league scouts flocked around Coca, Fla., when Bright was in high school. They considered him a prospect as a pitcher, but he hurt his shoulder and broke into pro ball as an outfielder in the Gulf Coast League in 1970.

The next year he hit 340 with 21 homers for Modesto of the Cal State League, quickly establishing himself as a lefthanded power hitter.

Chicago acquired Bill from the St. Louis organization in spring training 1973 and he batted .262 and .263 in his previous two seasons with Midland.

"When I first came to Midland," Bright explains the turnaround, "they wanted me to pull everything to right and the way the wind blows here, you waste a lot of power trying to reach the fence. This year, Doc (Manager Doc Edwards) wanted me to go with the pitch, so I've been getting a lot of hits to left."

"He's got the power to reach the fence in any direction," says Doc, "so why not take advantage of it."

Former Midland Cub outfielder Brock Davis wasn't at all convinced that hitting streaks were all they were cracked up to be. Brock once had a 38-game streak and wound up losing ground. "Every game I was either 1-for-4 or 1-for-5."

It hasn't worked that way for Bright. Bill took a 13 game streak into Tuesday's double header and showed a .444 average for that stretch.

Bill's team value this season was emphasized the other night when he grounded into two double plays against Shreveport. That brought his total for the year to three.

"If there's one thing I'm especially proud of this year, it's my runs-batted-in total. I've got close to 40 and that's with only two home runs."

Vilas Sets Hearts A Flutter

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — A new heart throb in being pursued by Wimbledon's tennis teletoppers this year. His name is Guillermo Vilas of Argentina.

On Tuesday he finished a rain-interrupted match against New Zealand's Jeff Simpson to win 7-5, 6-4, 6-4 and advanced to the second round.

For Vilas, 22, there was no clowning on court or off.

Quiet and polite, Vilas is a lover of poetry, music and nature.

But on court he is a muscular left-hander, his long brown hair pegged back by a brown blue headband. He believes in practice and more practice, which accounts for the accuracy of his ground strokes forehands and topspin backhands.

"I'm working at adapting my game to grass for Wimbledon," he said after practicing for the Simpson match.

Was he worried about the big names he could meet in the final stages — Connors, Ashe, Nastase?

"I fear everybody and nobody. I can only do my best—that's what I'm working for," he said quietly in near-perfect English.

His best appeals to hundreds of Wimbledon's young girl fans who encircled him when they had the chance, begging for autographs. Some brought him presents which he smilingly accepted.

Tuesday was not a happy day for the No. 7 seed, former Wimbledon champion Stan Smith of Sea Pines, N.C., who suffered a shocking defeat at the hands of South African Byron Bertram 6-1, 6-2, 6-1.

Cubs Send Krukow For 5th In Row

CUB BRIEFS — Infielder Joel Green has been assigned to the Chicago Cubs' AAA American Assn. club at Wichita while Bill Hennessey, Midland's MVP of a year ago, has been farmed to Midland by Wichita. Chicago didn't feel Bill was playing enough with the Aeros and figured he'd see more action in the Texas League.

Mike Krukow, 24, will pitch for Midland tonight as the Cubs go for their fifth straight and fourth in a row over the Brewers at 7:45 p.m. The Cubs have three more games with the Cleveland Indian farmhands before embarking on an important 12-day trip to Shreveport and then El Paso, a trip that could go a long way toward determining Midland's West Division pennant hopes.

Midland fans hope Jose Ortiz stages the same kind of birthday celebration Bill Droegge had Tuesday when the Kansas State grad collected five hits and knocked his second homer of the season. Midland is now 23-17 at home.

After singling the first time up in the opener, outfielder Bill Bright barely kept his 15-game hitting streak alive in the second game with a seeing-eye fifth-inning single. The bounce up the middle was touched by Tom Linnert as it went over his head, but it didn't slow it down quite enough for converging infielders to reach it before it trickled into center.

An announcement may be forthcoming soon that the Texas Rangers will take over the San Antonio franchise for next season.

Ali Is Out For Joe's Blood

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali says he expects to make the first round of his title fight against British challenger Joe Bugner a carbon copy of their first fight in 1973—by cutting his face.

"Most likely I'll cut him in the first round... it's effective," Ali told newsmen Tuesday. "It worries a man to see himself bleeding."

All opened a gash over Bugner's left eye in the opening minutes of their non-title bout at Las Vegas on February 14, 1973. Eight stitches were eventually needed to close it.

"Joe Bugner's been cut once in his life once... I mean stitch cut, not scratch cut," said his manager, Andy Smith. "That's why we don't think the first All fight goes down as the best fight or the most satisfying that Joe had, because he couldn't do his things. If Joe had gone back to Britain he'd have been stopped in any of those 13 rounds, he'd have been crucified. The thing then was to keep the fight going," Smith said.

Despite a cut so deep, in the words of one ringwise observer, "you could look down into it like the Grand Canyon," Bugner was not bleeding when he answered the bell for the second round.

The wound was not reopened and Bugner finished strongly. Some speculated that if the match had gone 15 rounds, Ali might have been defeated. The speed with which Bugner was patched up surprised Ali's handlers.

"I remember thinking at the time that the cat that did that repair work would be a good guy to have around in a knife fight," said Drew "Bundini" Brown, one of Ali's cornermen.

"He's in a class by himself," agreed the champion's trainer, Angelo Dundee.

"He" is London-born Danny said.

Holland, 64, rated by many to be the best cut man in the business.

"He is cool and calculating by the ringside. There's only one minute to work on between rounds and he always seems able to patch up the damage," said Smith.

Holland thinks Bugner has the edge on July 1. "Bugner is much more experienced than when he first fought Ali," he

SITE OF ALL-STAR GAME—Rock Concert Wrecks Diamond

MILWAUKEE (AP) — With major league baseball's All-Star game just three weeks away, County Stadium's outfield more resembled a scorched battlefield than a field of green turf Tuesday.

The culprit was a Sunday rock concert, the second at the stadium within two weeks, and the thousands of rock fans who camped in the outfield to watch it.

"I can't remember seeing that bad a field in the major leagues," Detroit Manager Ralph Houk said after the Tigers played on it Monday night.

Some of the players who were there had similar sentiments.

"It was terrible," said Brewers second baseman Pedro Garcia. "You didn't know where the ball was going to hit. The ball went crazy."

Tiger third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez wondered "how are they going to play the All-Star game here? It's the worst I've ever seen. You don't know where the ball is going to bounce."

Rosa Carrasco's Car Is Found On Archer Parr Land

By The Associated Press
Texas Rangers and San Antonio police have recovered two cars which they say belonged to Rosa Carrasco, widow of the late San Antonio drug kingpin Fred Gomez Carrasco. And Ranger Capt. John Wood says his information indicates Mrs. Carrasco may have been killed in March while running a roadblock in Mexico.

Mrs. Carrasco had been sought since last August when her husband died in a hall of gunfire during an escape break from state prison in Huntsville. Wood said Rangers found a car two weeks ago belonging to Mrs. Carrasco on the South Texas ranch of Duval County Judge Archer Parr where it had been placed in storage by Robert L. Forche with Parr's permission. The car was a Ford Galaxie assembled in Mexico and modified to make it look like a Continental, investigators said.

In San Antonio, police found a 1974 Thunderbird believed to be Mrs. Carrasco's last week when the lease expired on a storage garage where the car had been kept since last July, shortly before Carrasco's hold-out siege in the Huntville prison.

Police said the lease was signed by Jose A. Carrasco, Rosa's father-in-law; the car was registered to James Gillespie, a San Antonio lawyer who, in the past, has represented Carrasco and Parr.

Wood said while he did not have documented evidence of Mrs. Carrasco's death, he had received information as late as Monday that she, another woman and two men had been killed when they tried to overrun a checkpoint in Mexico.

Articles in the Galaxie — including a booklet of "wanted information" on Carrasco and his associates — were taken to the Texas Department of Public Safety laboratory in Austin for examination, authorities said.

Forche, now chief investigative assistant to Dist. Atty. Arnulfo Guerra in Duval County, was an investigator last year for Gillespie, to whom the second car was registered. Forche reportedly tried to change the title of the car from the name of Rosario Gomez de Marquez, a name used by Mrs. Carrasco, to that of the Southern Calvary Christian Church. But he could not provide the original Mexican title and a street address for the new owner and the transfer was rejected.

Forche, who claimed to be an ordained minister, is a former police chief at Mission in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and Robert L. Forche with Parr's permission. The car was a Ford Galaxie assembled in Mexico and modified to make it look like a Continental, investigators said.

Accompanying the Mexican registration in the title application was a note which stated that Mrs. Carrasco Marquez was donating the car to the Southern Calvary Christian Church. It was signed by Rosario Gomez de Marquez and witnessed by Robert Forche.

Shortly after the car was bought in Mexico, Carrasco and 10 others were arrested, with what police said was $20 million worth of cocaine and heroin.

Carrasco escaped from prison in October 1972 and was recaptured July 22, 1973, when he was wounded in a shootout at a motel in San Antonio. His wife was arrested at the same time.

Charges against Mrs. Carrasco were dropped later and she apparently remained in Corpus Christi until January 1974 when her husband pleaded guilty to assault with intent to murder and was sentenced to life in prison.

Months later he and another inmate were shot as they tried to escape from prison surrounded by a group of hostages. Two hostages also died.

Mirror Satellite Proposed For Tapping Energy Of Sun

SEATTLE (AP) — Two Boeing Aerospace Co. researchers have proposed tapping solar energy through the use of a huge satellite containing 22 square miles of mirrors. Boeing says the "Powersat" envisioned by Gordon R. Woodcock and Daniel L. Gregory could provide up to 10,000 megawatts of useful power, or about twice the present hydroelectric capability of Grand Coulee Dam.

Woodcock and Gregory say the 71,000-ton space energy station could be constructed in low earth orbit, then taken to an orbit some 22,000 miles above earth.

They said that after the mirrors collect and concentrate solar energy, thermal engines would convert the solar power into electricity. A microwave transmission system would then convert the electricity to a form suitable for transmission to earth.

In a paper presented before the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics and the American Astronautical Society recently, Woodcock and Gregory said the new energy system could be a reality within two decades.

Costs Estimated
Gregory and Woodcock estimated the cost of setting up the production line and building the launch pads and space vehicles necessary for Powersat at $80 billion, with an additional cost of $13 billion to build and launch each satellite.

Despite the huge costs, the two researchers said the systems would pay for themselves in 36 years at 2.5 cents per kilowatt hour, if one Powersat is launched each year. They said that price is close to the price of electricity charged today by some producers.

They said six of the satellites could fulfill Japan's present electrical needs, while 35 to 40 would be needed for the base electrical load of the United States.

More Than 2,000 Vietnamese Preparing To Go Back Home

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — Homesick and worried about wives and parents left behind, more than 2,000 South Vietnamese who escaped to the United States are preparing to return to their homeland and an uncertain fate.

The prospect that some may be killed by the new Communist rulers of their homeland was mentioned quietly by some of the prospective repatriates, but most generally avoided the subject.

"I like it here, but my family is not here," said Dang Van Nguu, a 30-year-old American-trained pilot in the South Vietnamese Air Force until he fled the Communist takeover in South Vietnam. He adds, "If I talk too much, I will die when I go back to Saigon."

The elected leader of the returnees here is Le Mith Tan, 44, who was a fire inspector for the U.S. defense attaché office. He says only, "I am Vietnamese. I want to return because it is my country."

A planeload of 49 of the 2,031 South Vietnamese refugees who have asked to go home flew from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., in this staging camp Tuesday for flights to Southeast Asia being sponsored by the United Nations. A total of 131,399 refugees have reached the United States.

Already here were 265 of the refugees who wish to return to their homeland, including 104 who arrived Sunday from Ft. Chaffee, Ark.

Mohamed Gharib, representing the U.N. High Commissioner on Refugees, told reporters Tuesday the requests to return home must be spontaneous and voluntary, and may continue as long as necessary.

Gharib interviews each of the refugees who seeks to return. His report, along with a detailed biography and other information about the refugee, is forwarded to South Vietnam's Provisional Revolutionary Government through its representatives in Geneva.

Eighty-eight of Camp Pendleton's refugees have been interviewed by Gharib. He described them as fully processed.

"There's no word yet," said the Iranian diplomat. "We expect to hear soon. The South Vietnamese officials have indicated they're willing to accept them and our job is to process them."

The Marine Corps, with the aid of the International Red Cross and other volunteers, is trying to get the returning Vietnamese ready.

American movies, classes dealing with civics and local culture and daily appearances by entertainers are designed to present the U.S. way of life up until the final minute a refugee may change his mind.

Washington (AP) — Former Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally met with President Ford at the White House last week, Press Secretary Ron Nessen says.

"They discussed a range of subjects" in a 35-minute session last Wednesday in the Oval Office, Nessen said Tuesday.

Responding to reporters' questions, Nessen said at first he did not know of such a meeting. After being pressed by newsmen, he had an aide check and then confirmed that a meeting took place.

Nessen said he normally would have been told of such a session but was not in this case. He said he could not account for the lapse.

Nessen said Connally was in Washington on business and telephoned a White House aide and asked if he could pay his respects to the President. The meeting was arranged Wednesday morning.

Connally recently was acquitted by a federal jury of charges that he accepted two bribes totaling $10,000 for getting an increase in government milk price supports.

Allison said he recommended that Groot resign, and told Gurney he didn't think Bastien was aware of Williams' fund raising activities.

Allison also testified that Groot told him in mid-1973 of a $10,000 contribution to Rep. L. A. "Skip" Baffalis, R-Fla. When Groot didn't reveal it to the FBI, Allison said he did after consulting with Gurney's lawyer.

On Dec. 7, 1973, he revised an earlier FBI statement, adding, "Groot did tell me he gave $10,000 to Skip Baffalis for his campaign."

Baffalis testified Monday that he never received $10,000 from Groot.

After the trip, Allison said, "My gut reaction was to proceed to the Justice Department." On July 31, 1973, he advised Gurney to get legal help.

Allison, now a publisher of newspapers in Midland and Plainview, Tex., said he spent about four days on his Florida investigation and then reported back, advising Gurney to seek legal advice.

Allison said he asked a lawyer if he had any responsibility regarding information on criminality and was told that he did. The witness testified that the lawyer said if Gurney did not go to the Justice Department, then Allison should.

Gurney, ex-side Joseph Bastien and former federal housing officers K. Wayne Swiger and Ralph Koontz are charged with conspiracy to raise an illegal slush fund through builder payoffs by promising Gurney's influence with the Federal Housing Administration.

Gurney also is charged with bribery, receiving unlawful compensation and four counts of lying to a grand jury.

At Gurney's request, Allison said, he interviewed: —James Groot, former Gurney aide and co-defendant, who plea-bargained with the prosecution and testified that Gurney learned in June 1973 that politi-

Assistants, Secretaries Stymie Young Lobbyists' Efforts For Poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alyce Maske, a 18-year-old girl from Westbury, N.Y., became a lobbyist for a few hours. The results were not completely encouraging.

Alyce and her friends wanted to plead with congressmen to vote more money for antipoverity programs, but all they found were legislative assistants and secretaries.

Alyce was one of a number of groups of neophyte lobbyists meandering through the halls of the House and Senate office buildings Tuesday.

The bill for which they were lobbying could come up for a House vote today.

Somewhere between 3,000 and 7,500 representatives of the poor and poverty agencies traveled to Washington to lobby for antipoverity programs. Afterward they held a rally on the Capitol steps.

John Kearse, chairman of the New York State Alliance of Community Action Agencies, said participants sought full funding for the Community Services Administration, the successor to the Office of Economic Opportunity.

Kearse said the House Appropriations Committee had cut back funding for all community action programs from $692 million in the current fiscal year to $399 million in the fiscal 1976.

The groups moving through the hallways had lists of the members of Congress they should see.

Alyce's group entered the anterooms of Rep. Omar Burleson, a veteran Texas Democrat, to find no one there except his chief aide, Judith Curtis. Burleson was on the House floor.

"We're thinking about students who can't get summer jobs," Alyce told Mrs. Curtis when asked what was on her mind.

Mrs. Curtis told the group that Congress had passed an emergency jobs program that had included funding for summer jobs.

"The President vetoed it," she said.

She did not mention that Burleson voted against overriding the veto.

They stopped at the office of Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala., who was in a meeting and then had a lunch appointment. They spoke with an aide.

Rep. Clifford A. Cedarberg, R-Mich., was on the floor and members of Alyce's group talked with legislative assistant Karen Vagley.

Mrs. Vagley said, "We'll do what we can to help."

She promised to relay the group's views to the congressman, and send them copies of the bills dealing with the programs about which they had talked.

At the rally at least there were members of Congress present. Eight promised their support to restore the funds to community programs.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., told those present their trip represented a sacrifice, "but it's the way it works in this country."

"You've got to do it personally," he said. "You've got to visit with your senators and congressmen."

Testimony In Gambling Case Claims $3,000 Bets Put On Single Ball Game

DALLAS (AP) — Written testimony submitted to a federal court here claims that four Dallas men, an Oklahoma city resident and another man from Las Vegas were involved in a bookmaking operation in which bets as high as $3,000 were placed on a single football game out of a Dallas restaurant.

The written testimony was accepted Tuesday by U. S. District Court Judge Sarah T. Hughes, who said she would enter a verdict Monday morning.

On trial in connection with the gambling operation are John E. Stone, 62, and Richard Carl Biggs, 51, both of Dallas, charged with financing and running the operation. Also, James Winghamam, 52, Anthony Paul Deidone, both of Dallas; Ruben Goldstein, 38, of Las Vegas and John Dayton Ritter, 69, of Oklahoma City. All four are charged with transmitting wagering information in interstate telephone calls.

All six have pleaded innocent.

The written testimony included statements that bets were placed with Stone at a restaurant here.

One of the witnesses, Malcolm Davis of Dallas, said, "Generally my minimum bet was for $500 and I would bet on from one to ten teams at a time; my largest bet being $3,000, possibly $5,000 on one team when I was betting on a number of teams."

Davis said bettors paid Stone a 10 per cent commission on bets they lost.

Dallas builder James L. Williams testified that at one time he had to pay $25,000 in lost wagers, but ended the 1973 season about even.

FBI agents said information on the gambling activities was obtained through intercepted telephones with court approval in late 1973.

Agent Phillip Baker testified that tapped conversations revealed the other defendants also were engaged in betting and wagering business. He said some provided "line" information, how many points to give the underdog team or sub-from the favorite to make the bets more even.

Baker said Ritter provided Stone with information on the volume of wagering on certain games and news of player injuries. He said Winghamam took wagers from several bettors and obtained a share of the proceeds. Baker also told the court that Deidone furnished Stone with line information on a regular basis from more than one bookmaker in Las Vegas and informed Stone of changes in lines.

Goldstein, Baker said, advised wagering information from more than one bookmaker. Biggs, Baker testified, carried current changes of two discussed merits and handled all placing the bets.

Wind, Rain And Snow Hit Far West

By The Associated Press

Wind, rain and out-of-season snow swept parts of the Far West today while warm and humid weather bogged down over most of the country from the Plains to the Atlantic.

High wind warnings with a threat of blowing sand and dust were in effect through the night for parts of Nevada and Utah and California desert country. Winds averaging 30 to 50 miles per hour, with some gusts to 120 m.p.h., whined through the central Sierras of California.

Snow sifted into the higher Sierras through Tuesday, and several inches was expected in some mountain areas of north-west Nevada. Showers ranged over the northern half of the Pacific Coast and east into the Intermountain region and the Rockies.

In contrast, most of the country east of the Rockies went into a second week of temperatures in the upper 80s and 90s. Forecasters saw no immediate general relief, although slightly cooler air dipped into northern fringes of the Northeast overnight.

Boston had its hottest June 24 since 1882 on Tuesday when the mercury sizzled up to 94. A 90 at Providence, R.I., surpassed a record of 92 set there in 1946.

Thunderstorms, sometimes heavy, broke out in scattered areas throughout the eastern half of the country Tuesday afternoon and night. More than 3 inches of rain drenched International Falls, Minn., and over 2.25 inches watered Wrightstown, N.J.

A thunderstorm stalled over Madison, Wis., Tuesday evening and poured out from 1 to 4 inches of rain within one hour. The downpour flooded streets and highways.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 39 at Klamath Falls, Ore., and Ely, Nev., to 84 at Phoenix, Ariz.

Some other reports: Atlanta 68 clear, Boston 78 cloudy, Buffalo 65 clear, Chicago 72 cloudy, Cincinnati 67 partly cloudy, Cleveland 71 light rain, Dallas 78 clear, Denver 69 clear, Detroit 64 partly cloudy, Honolulu 78 cloudy, Indianapolis 69 clear, Kansas City 73 clear, Los Angeles 59 clear, Louisville 72 clear, Miami 78 clear, Minneapolis-St. Paul 71 clear, Nashville 69 clear, New York 75 clear, Philadelphia 75 clear, Phoenix 94 clear, Pittsburgh 65 clear, St. Louis 77 partly cloudy, San Francisco 53 clear, Seattle 55 cloudy, Washington 61 cloudy.

Dear Abby

—By Abigail van Buren

Stifling Freeloaders Not That Difficult

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe that I am actually writing a Dear Abby letter, but I need to know how to solve a thorny problem.

I have an acquaintance of many years who teaches high school. He is male and unmarried, and he spends his summers traveling around the country (and, indeed, the world) freeloading on his friends.

He writes to say he'll be in the neighborhood, and asks whether he may "visit" for a few days. Then he moves in and stays a week or longer if he can get away with it. He's wined and dined, and he never, never reciprocates. In fact, when he is out for dinner, he always finds an excuse to get so deeply involved in conversation with someone at the table that the check could lay there collecting moss before he'd pick it up.

He is on his way here, then he's visiting a mutual friend and after that, another mutual friend. They don't know his name, but I do. Should I wise them up? And how would you suggest I treat this man?

JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: Don't wise up anyone. And treat him like you'd treat any other freeloader. No one can take advantage of you without your cooperation.

DEAR ABBY: My late husband, a police detective, called one day to inform me that he was bringing a couple home for dinner. I found them to be charming, intelligent and good company.

After they left, my husband told me that she was a "madame" and he was a pimp! Some time later they were married. She quit her profession and so did he. Subsequently, we became very good friends.

When my husband's illness was diagnosed as terminal, the former pimp was the only friend who offered to finance a trip to the Mayo Clinic in the hope that it could save him.

I suggest that Mrs. "Sain" overcome her bias. She may find a fine friend in the topless dancer. Who are we to judge?

POLICEMAN'S WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Amen.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Ford Talks Turkey With Congressmen

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although stopping short of one high-level private forecast that Turkey's link with NATO is now in deadly danger, President Ford's low-key, Oval Office appeal to several Congressmen last Thursday for rapid House action ending the U.S. arms embargo clearly shook anti-Turkey Democrats.

The possibility of Turkey leaving the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance (NATO) under domestic pressure of escalating political hostility over the U.S. arms embargo, almost five months old, is viewed as real by one high-level administration official. His private forecast: If rising anti-Americanism over the arms embargo does indeed lead to closing down U.S. bases in Turkey after July 17 (prior to the Turk-imposed deadline for lifting the embargo), Turkey might find itself in a chauvinistic spiral ending in a new, third-world foreign policy having no place for the Western defense alliance.

The arms embargo was imposed by Congress under pressure from pro-Greek politicians infuriated by Turkey's use of U.S. arms in the invasion of Cyprus last year. At the very least, it is now certain to lead to major changes in myriad bilateral agreements between Washington and Ankara.

Evans

With 500,000 men in uniform today, wholly dependent on U.S. weapons, Turkey is running out of replacement arms. Within the next few months the air force will be crippled if the arms embargo continues.

Outlining these hard facts in his 35-minute talk with six members of the House, Mr. Ford avoided inflammatory rhetoric and appealed for help. But he and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger agreed with Democratic Rep. John Brademas of Indiana, leader of the anti-Turk forces in the House, and Ohio Republican Rep. Charles W. Whalen Jr., a broad-gauged member of the International Relations Committee, that the House would never pass the Senate-approved bill easing the embargo.

Some in-between course must be found to save face for pro-embargo leaders without satisfying their demands for Turkish concessions to Greece on the inflamed Cyprus issue.

The administration feels the embargo violates some treaty commitments to Turkey, both bilateral and NATO commitments. Politically, Turkey is seething with hostility against the U.S. over the embargo. It has forced Turkey to pay storage costs here for arms bought and paid for but barred from shipment by the February embargo (based on a promise to punish countries using American arms for aggression).

With Portugal, NATO's western anchor, under increasing Communist influence, President Ford is now convinced that the deadlock between Turkey and the U.S. House of Representatives must be broken. If not, the loss of U.S. and Western influence in Turkey at NATO's eastern extremity would have a disastrous psychological effect throughout Europe.

Wallace and Wisconsin

Despite public assertions by Gov. Patrick J. Lacey that he would pick Gov. George Wallace of Alabama "against the field" to win next year's Wisconsin Democratic presidential primary, Wallace may wind up with a shamble of all or less of delegates there.

The reason: the Democratic-controlled legislature is not at all likely to amend the cherished, long-time Wisconsin "open" primary law to conform to new delegate-selection rules of the Democratic National Committee demanding good-faith efforts to fashion primaries in which only Democrats can vote. That would eliminate Republican cross-overs.

A half-hearted attempt to rewrite Wisconsin's law to fit the new party delegate-selection rules will start in Madison this week. It appears doomed.

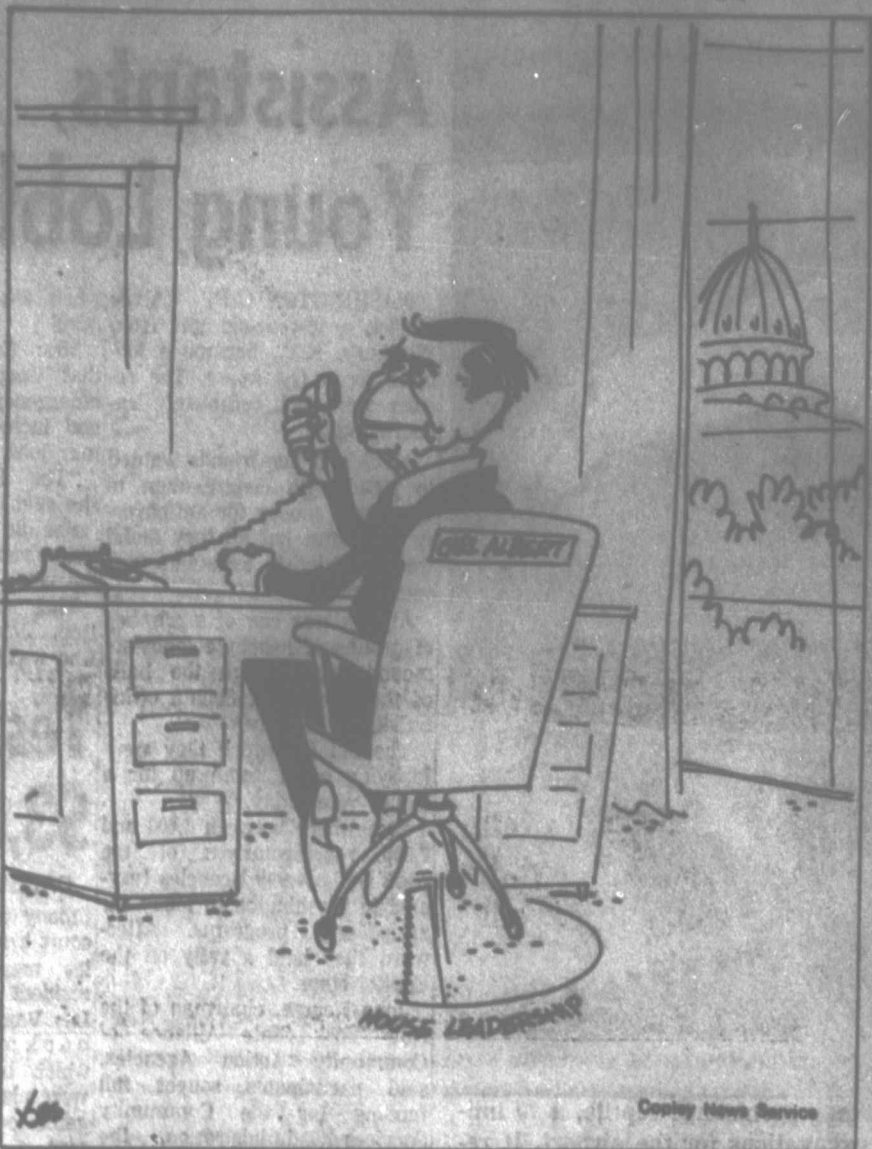

That opens the anti-Wallace possibility that, whether held or not, the Wisconsin primary will not be the vehicle to pick Wisconsin's 68 delegates to the national convention. Instead, the delegates may have to be chosen by precinct and district caucuses. If so, Wallace might end up without a single delegate, a result that would not displease Democratic leaders in Wisconsin.

A footnote: The party's sentiment toward Wallace was expressed in a June 2 letter to Alabama national committeeman Mickey Griffin, a top Wallace political aide, from Wisconsin national committeeman Donald O. Peterson. Replying to Griffin's third letter asking for possible changes in Wisconsin's delegate-selection rules (the first two went unanswered), Peterson wrote: "You and I know the letter you wrote (complaining about the lack of response) was 'filmm.' If the Wallace forces are going to use this kind of ruse to cry foul, they'll be whistling Dixie."

The information Griffin had politely asked would be available from the national committee in July, Peterson said.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Sex has become a booming backdoor business in Washington.

A silkscreen call girl service, for example, provides shapely "massages" for diplomats, dignitaries and visiting businessmen seeking $75 thrills.

The girls can be ordered to specification by telephone from dial-a-date outfits, which advertise in the yellow pages. "Let your fingers do the street-walking" might be their motto.

They offer room service at some of Washington's finest hotels. The girls will accept payment in cash, travelers checks or, if the customer prefers credit, sometimes by BankAmericard.

One of our reporters, posing as a potential client, was quoted rates from $30 for a simple massage to $75 for a more titillating experience. The massage promoters were careful not to offer outright intercourse. But the inuendo was clear that sex was the real service for sale.

The mode of sex, said a man at Grecian Dial-A-Massage, was "pretty much up to the masseuse." At Diversified Outside Calls, a woman answering suggested "if you talk to the masseuse, she 'might' agree to intercourse. The responses were similar from Dial-A-Date Club, Playmate Internationals and Swinger International.

The most candid of the operators was Hal O'Brien, who runs Selectra Male and other "usual" services from a suite high over Washington's famous Dupont Circle. He gives clients a summary of Washington law on the subject with a specific warning that intercourse with the "masses" is a criminal offense.

But he adds meaningfully that his girls "are over 21, and we don't control their acts." He has never known one of them to bring charges against a client.

One tactic used by the masseuses, acknowledged O'Brien, was to strip for action at the same time they refused to submit. Technically, this protects them from prosecution for soliciting. The ensuing sexual act then becomes rape, but the "victims" never file complaints.

Other Washington prostitutes operate out of luxury apartments. They also cater to the city's dignitaries, with price scales running as high as $300 a night.

Washington police are too busy patrolling the streets to keep a watch on phillandering in hotels and apartments. Even if the girls are arrested, the police have found it difficult to get convictions.

So the call girl operations in Washington aren't troubled with recession.

SOVIET SNOOPING: For the sake of détente, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is helping the Soviets establish their embassy on high ground, which will give them a better vantage point for electronic espionage.

At the same time, the Soviets have offered the United States an embassy site in a low area along the Moscow River near the present U.S. chancery. "It's just a little further down the slope," said a source.

The two nations agreed to exchange new chanceries more than six years ago, but they have been hickering ever since over sites and plans.

The Russians, with American concurrence, have settled on a 12.5-acre wooded site on Mount Alto, one of the highest points in Washington. They plan to erect a five-building complex, which would resemble a walled fortress.

From this prominent perch, according to our sources, the Soviets will get better results with their sophisticated electronic monitoring equipment. This is used to eavesdrop on long-distance telephone calls which, for the most part, are transmitted by microwave.

Kissinger has strongly urged approval of the new Soviet embassy, although he has full knowledge that it will give

Hear Him, Congress

"Mr. Chairman, I come from the oil country. I am acutely conscious that the thrust behind exploration, new drilling, and new production for oil and gas is slowing. This is a result of certain legislative actions and situations otherwise. It is especially due to the lack of certainty—the uncertainty that exists in the oil industry with respect to what the future holds.

This, of course, affects the large oil producers and the independents who drill about 80 per cent of the exploratory wells in the United States. More importantly, it affects the U.S. consumer who must have a more abundant domestic supply of oil and gas if this Nation is to prosper."

These are the sound observations made by Congressman George Mahon of this West Texas district on the floor of the House during recent consideration of the Energy Conservation and Conservation Act of 1975 (H.R. 6866), and as recorded in the Congressional Record.

They show beyond a doubt that Mahon is well aware of the energy situation as it exists today and that he isn't hesitant to speak out on the House floor concerning the plight of the petroleum industry. Most other Texas representatives, plus some from other states, feel the same about it, but they yet are in the minority. This doesn't mean, however, that they are giving up. It means merely that they must talk louder and fight harder at every opportunity.

"Mr. Chairman," Mahon continued, "at times a thing can be so simple and apparent that it escapes your attention.

"We debate at great length practically everything about energy except the most important thing—ways of quickly increasing our domestic supply of oil and gas.

"We have, I am sure, considered some very worthwhile matters in this pending bill. However, we are maneuvering on the fringes of the problem and seem to be unwilling to face the crucial issue—the need to increase our domestic supply of energy. So much of what we have proposed and so much of what we have done has not tended to produce any additional gas or any additional oil, and that is the only short-term solution that we can find to our energy needs."

The West Texas congressman really hit the nail on the head with this declaration. He is just as right as can be. Congress and its various committees considering the energy shortage haven't come up with one single thing to produce any additional petroleum to ease or remedy the energy crisis. Congress, on the other hand, has taken steps to slow down exploration and production, while doing everything possible to penalize the petroleum industry.

George Mahon told it like it is . . . and if members of Congress are interested in meeting the energy challenge they will heed his sage advice.

"I would like to urge that we not take our eyes off the main requirements of the Congress and the country, and that is to encourage the oil producing areas to do more exploration and produce more oil and gas," Mahon continued. "This is the plea which must be heard and heeded if success is to be achieved."

The congressman then gained permission to include in the record an article from the June 16 issue of U.S. News & World Report entitled "Behind the Sudden Drop in Oil Drilling in the United States," which highlighted statements made by Charles D. Fraser, senior vice president of The First National Bank of Midland, and others, further substantiating Mahon's remarks concerning the uncertainty which exists in the oil industry.

Yes, these are pleas which must be heard and heeded NOW!

HEMISPHERE REPORT—

Latins Pay More Attention To Red Threat

By WILLIAM GIANDONE Copy News Service

Latin America is beginning to pay more attention to the Communist threat.

In fact, some thoughtful Latins are saying that Moscow may have come to the conclusion that their countries are ripe for intensified Communist subversion.

As the Brazilian newspaper O Estado de S. Paulo views the situation, the Soviet Union "knows that a false move in the old world could bring on the nuclear confrontation that she desires to avoid."

On the other hand, in Latin America the Soviets "can maneuver with greater tranquility."

"Diversity is still the norm," latent hostility against the United States is maintained unaltered, above all in the countries of Spanish origin, and "the Soviets know that the Southern Hemisphere is not a priority area in view of the North Americans," O Estado said.

The newspaper voiced the hope that evidence of Soviet subversion in Latin America will prompt the United States to pay more attention to its hemispheric neighbors.

What seems to have sensitized Latin America has been the events in Portugal, where the Moscow-line Communists appear to be outmaneuvering the Socialists and the democratic parties, and also the indications that a similar scenario is being planned for Spain.

Most Latins cheered the 1974 military coup that ended four decades of dictatorship in Portugal, and applauded the elections there in April, 1975, that saw the more democratic parties outpoll the Communists.

But they have been appalled by the recent evidence that the Communists, working closely with what Spanish author Salvador de Madariaga calls "the three Moscow-toes" who now dominate the Portuguese armed forces, are trying to thwart the will of the voters.

Fears that something similar may be in store for Spain, once the chief of state, Gen. Francisco Franco, dies or becomes incapacitated, are being expressed in Mexico, for example.

Representatives of the Spanish Democratic Junta recently contacted Spanish exiles in Mexico City inviting them to join in a democratic alliance for the reconquest of Spain, as the Spanish Socialist described it. Frustrated among the anti-Franco visitors was Santiago Garriga, secretary general of the Spanish Communist Party, a man Spanish anti-Communists hold in high esteem as a Moscow puppet since the days of the Spanish civil war.

Whether they will admit it or not, Latin Americans tend to mistrust Communists, particularly orthodox, Moscow-line Communists, precisely because they are so well disciplined that they rarely deviate from whatever may be the current Soviet propaganda line.

That may be one reason why Latin America appears to be losing some of its earlier enthusiasm for Premier Fidel Castro and Communist Cuba.

As long as Castro looked and sounded like a Latin revolutionary, rather than a Moscow puppet, Latins could admire him.

But now that it appears obvious he is subservient to the Soviet Union, latter has been rubbed off his image. No longer is Castro regarded as a valiant Latin David facing up to the U.S. Goliath. Now he is thought of more as a Soviet pawn in the global chess game against the United States.

The latest Latin American nation to give indication that it is changing its mind on Castro and Cuba is the Dominican Republic.

There, Victor Gomez Berges, the youthful foreign minister who was party to the effort to get the Quito foreign ministers conference to remove economic and diplomatic sanctions from Cuba, and who later campaigned unsuccessfully for the post of secretary general of the Organization of American States, was replaced by a Dominican Navy officer.

If the Dominican Republic really has shifted over to the anti-Castro camp, it could mean that the foreign ministers' meeting in San Jose, Costa Rica, in July will fall once again to lift the OAS sanctions against the Castro dictatorship.

Another indication that the Cuban problem is being brought into more realistic perspective was Assistant Secretary of State William Rogers' announcement that the United States is not planning any immediate resumption of relations with Cuba.

Earlier it had appeared that the United States felt that prompt reestablishment of ties with the Castro regime would be the easiest way to ingratiate itself with the rest of Latin America.

the USSR a superior listening post to the one that the Soviets are permitting the United States to build in Moscow.

Reportedly under State Department prodding, the General Services Administration has filed an environmental impact statement calling for ratification "in the spirit of détente."

Failure to approve the proposal, says the GSA, could "create an international situation."

Not only have the Soviets provided the U.S. embassy with a low-level location, but they have objected to every construction plan the United States has submitted. The latest set of plans, according to sources with direct knowledge of the situation, were sent back with a list of 27 objections.

Rep. Wayne Hey, D-Ohio, who oversees the State Department budget, has held up approval of the new Soviet embassy until the United States is permitted to go ahead with its construction.

As a result, Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin recently called at the State Department and notified Assistant Secretary Arthur Hartman that the Kremlin had dropped all objections to the U.S. construction plans.

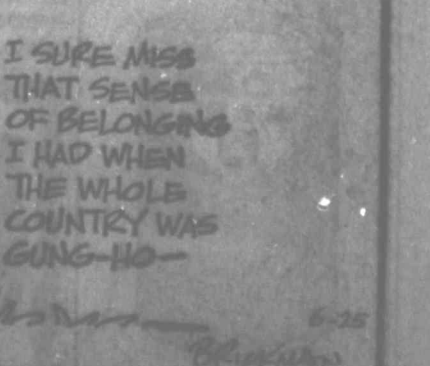

The United States could even use "black bricks," said the frustrated Dobrynin.

Footnote: A State Department spokesman said the Soviets had not raised "objections" but had merely offered "recommendations." Another spokesman in Hartman's office said our account of the conversation with Dobrynin was "inaccurate and incomplete." But he refused to explain the alleged inaccuracies, claiming it "was a private conversation and we don't want to go into it." Our sources, in fact, are wholly familiar with the incident and we have confidence they gave us an accurate report.

Attempts At Grim Humor Are Sweeping Portugal Today

By HARRY THOMPSON
The Los Angeles Times

LISBON — A Portuguese thrust his right hand into the air and asked a companion, "Which hand am I holding up?"

"That's your right hand," the companion replied.

"Wrong," said the man. "It's my left."

"Then what is your other hand?" demanded the companion.

"That," explained the man, "is my extreme left hand."

This bit of dialogue is one of many such attempts at grim humor sweeping Portugal today. With each passing moment, it becomes more grim as the nation waits with mounting tension to learn whether the top leaders of the ruling Armed Forces Movement will thrust up their left hand or their extreme left hand.

For the nation is waiting to learn the course it will follow after a tumultuous and erratic 14 months of AFM rule, since radical army officers overthrew a century of right-wing dictatorship in April 1974.

The signal is expected to come from the 50-member Supreme Revolutionary Council of the AFM which has been meeting in marathon sessions since June 12 in what has been described — to revive a cliché — as an agonizing reappraisal of the revolution and where it is going.

All that the AFM has said since the meetings began is what it will not do. It will not, according to a spokesman, set up a military dictatorship. Nor will it set up a Soviet-style revolutionary council of workers, soldiers and sailors that would emasculate, if not kill, Portugal's contentious parties and rule the nation in partnership with the military.

Such a partnership would make the Communists and many of the amorphous cliques and other parties to the left of it happy. These are lumped imprecisely — probably because they have no clear ideological viewpoint — as worker committees.

These groups, so doubt in large measure because they are spurred by the overwhelming majority of the Portuguese, wish to eliminate the parties — especially the Socialist party, which enjoys great popular support even if it has little power to back it up.

Yet even if the revolutionary council issues a clear and definitive announcement which, judging by the confusion and contradictions swirling now through the Portuguese political scene, seems highly unlikely, it still won't get the country off the hook.

For the question still to be asked is: Does the AFM really rule Portugal? And if so, which fraction of the AFM? Is it the AFM or is it COPCON, an acronym for Continental Operations Command, Portugal's military internal security force which is said to have as its hard core 5,000 paratroopers?

These questions derive from last week's two major assaults on freedom of speech, which freedom the AFM had deemed one of the revolution's cherished institutions.

One assault was against the independent Socialist newspaper Republica and the other was against the Roman Catholic Church's broadcasting station, Radio Renascenca.

China Seeking To Form New World Power Bloc

By ROBERT S. ELEGANT
The Los Angeles Times
HONG KONG — China is actively seeking to form a new world power bloc with Peking as its inspiration.
The first step was revealed by China's urging the non-Communist nations of Southeast Asia to establish their own common market and to utilize monopolistic control of the region's vast natural resources as a politico-economic weapon — and become the nucleus of a new international grouping. Peking ultimately envisions a union of all Asian, Latin American and African raw material producing nations that — with Western Europe, Japan and China itself — would exercise predominant international power. Inspired by Arab use of the oil weapon, Peking's vision for cutting the superpowers down to size is grandiose.

Significantly, the immediate design excludes Indochina, where Soviet influence is paramount. In Asia, it will take in China and, finally, the industrial powerhouse of Japan if Peking can transform its vision into reality.

Equally significant, the official New China News Agency Friday reported with undisguised pleasure two developments:
Sir Christopher Soames, vice president of the European Economic Community, heartily welcomed China's formal association with that body; and the smaller European nations' grave reservations regarding the proposed summit conference in Helsinki next month of the continuing European security talks, which would be a triumph for the Soviet Union.

The sweeping Chinese project is breathtaking in its political, strategic and economic ramifications. Peking believes the Asian common market would in time be linked intimately with the existing West European Common Market to form a new, major axis of world power.
The ambitious plan was partially revealed two years ago when Peking's official publications divided the world into new spheres of influence: "The true socialist nations, China and Albania; Western Europe and Canada; the developing nations; and the two major power blocs — the Soviet Union, United States and their adherents."

But the practical basis has just been described in Hong Kong's Communist-controlled daily, the Wen Hwei Pao. A major article commiserated with the non-Communist Southeast Asian nations for the "economic exploitation" they suffer at the hands of "imperialism and hegemonism," which means in Peking's terminology, the U.S. and Russia, particularly the latter. It then applauded efforts to form regional associations "in order to advance the economic cooperation of the Southeast Asian nations and protect their economic rights and interests."

The nations concerned were specifically named: Malaysia and the Philippines, which have both established diplomatic relations with Peking; Thailand, which is now doing so; Singapore, which is still somewhat reluctant; and Indonesia, which has so far shown no enthusiasm for reuniting formal ties with China.

Indonesia's inclusion was even more telling than Singapore's or the exclusion of feckless, socialist Burma.
Even more significant was the omission of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Peking once again signaled that it considered those nations either already lost to encroaching Soviet influence or, at least, most unlikely to respond to any Chinese initiative. The mini-common market is, initially, also aimed at curtailing joint Hanoi-Moscow influence in Southeast Asia.

The subsequent participation of Japan in the grand design was not specifically mentioned by the Wen Hwei Pao, largely because the oblique and relatively brief article concentrated on Southeast Asia.
However, Peking has in recent weeks been strongly pressing Japan, already its biggest trading partner, to strengthen its economic, political and security links with the People's Republic.

Preparations To Turn S. Korea Into Mobilized Society Are Accelerated

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

SEOUL — In response to anxieties about North Korea, President Park Chung Hee last week accelerated preparations to turn South Korea into a mobilized society that will have many parallels with the nation he vows to oppose.

A series of national mobilization measures for civilians and tightened control systems affecting everyone has been announced by the government. Some of the measures and restrictions bear a striking similarity to those reported to be in effect in North Korea.

A month ago the government announced mobilization of all male high school and college students into a "student defense corps." Universities are in the process of forming divisions, colleges are forming regiments and high school students regiments or battalions according to the size of the school.

This week the cabinet approved a separate "Civil Defense Corps" to conscript all civilian men between 17 and 30 as well as female volunteers. Ministry of Home Affairs officials estimated that 3.3 million men will be involved in education and training up to 30 days per year.

South Korea already had a standing army of 600,000 men, a homeland reserve force of 2.7 million men and about 40,000 police. Virtually all military-aged males except for the disabled are to be organized in one unit or another under the new systems.

An augmented system of community organization and control at the ward, precinct and block level recently has been implemented in Seoul. Citizens have been told the reorganization and tightening of an existing structure is for administrative efficiency and surveillance of people coming and going in the community.

Though there is yet no public announcement, some Seoul residents have been notified that a new sub-block "cho" level of administration is being formed, with one supervisor responsible for every five families. Such an organization is similar to the cell system reported in effect in North Korea.

Residence card regulations in South Korea are also in the process of being tightened, and penalties for violation stiffened. The government is expected to yield much greater population control in view of a requirement — previously unenforced — that permission from ward and precinct chiefs be obtained as part of change-of-residence formalities.

A newly announced measure to be proposed to the government-controlled national assembly last week will permit revocation of commercial broadcasting licenses for failure to meet official standards.

Since a presidential decree last month, the government has exercised tight control over newspapers, magazines and broadcast stations through secret police agents stationed fulltime at each press company.

In a barrage of speeches from Park, Prime Minister Kim Jong Pil and other leaders, the South Korean people have been told that total unity and mobilization is essential for defense against a "heightened military threat from the north."

By MATT YANCEY
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jim Weatherly gave up a possible career in professional football and moved to Los Angeles to try his luck at performing and songwriting.

The former Ole Miss quarterback had just about had his fill of one-night club dates and was considering returning to the gridiron as a high school coach when his songwriting career suddenly took off.

During the 2 1/2 years he was under contract to television star Jim Nabors, Weatherly wrote some 90 songs. But it was an afternoon telephone conversation with a friend's wife that was the inspiration for a song which gave him a solid footing in the music industry.

The title was "Midnight Train to Georgia," which Gladys Knight's producers later changed to "Midnight Train to Memphis" because, according to Weatherly, it had more of a black sound.

After that, Gladys Knight and the Pips made Weatherly's "Neither One of Us Wants to Be the First to Say Goodbye," which turned into a pop smash. They then followed with a million-selling version of "You're the Best Thing That Ever Happened to Me" after Ray Price moved the song to the No. 1 spot on the country charts in 1973.

"Midnight Train to Georgia" came about when I called this friend in L.A., and his wife answered and said she was taking a midnight plane to Houston, Weatherly said.

"She had done some acting and the way she said it made it so real I just conjured up this story in my mind about an actress who never quite makes it and about a guy who loves her so much that he leaves his whole world to be with her."

He said he originally wrote the song as a ballad and that he took a lot of the story out in the way it was recorded.

"You're listening to so many things, like the truck, the whistle in the background, but the song itself is very romantic."

Weatherly, from Poncaoke, Okla., didn't set out to make his mark in rhythm & blues. He said he likes to think of himself as a writer of universal songs.

Several of them have been recorded by Price and other country singers such as Bill Anderson and Bob Luman and by easy listening types such as Andy Williams, Jose Feliciano and Ferrante & Teicher.

But he admits he keeps reminding himself particularly to perform like Gladys Knight.

"I didn't do it consciously, but now when I analyze those songs, I see that there is a lot of space for interpretation. The songs are written so that a performer is not locked to the meter or beat."

"That's what I think is these artists feel their music; they may sing a little bit behind the beat or suddenly rush ahead of it and then pause."

Weatherly said he's either consciously or subconsciously always writing songs or picking up ideas for them.

"Every song I compose is a personal statement. My music tells how I feel, what I believe, and what I see," he said. "We all have that common denominator of having been touched by love at one time or another and I try to tell it in an intimate subtle way."

'Girl Named Sooner' Most Popular Show

NEW YORK (AP) — "A Girl Named Sooner," an NBC drama special about a young Indiana farm girl who last week's most popular evening TV show, according to A. C. Nielsen Co. audience estimates.

The first of six one-hour CBS dramas on life of Sooner also was an audience favorite, as was a Sunday CBS News special about the travels of the network's "On the Road" correspondent, Charles Kuralt.

According to Nielsen findings made public Tuesday, the week's 19 most popular evening TV shows after "A Girl Named Sooner" were "Caribe" and "S.W.A.T." (both ABC); "Richard Files" and "Police Women"

(both NBC); "M.A.S.H." and "Moses — The Lawgiver" (both CBS); "Sanford and Son" (NBC); "Missy Tyler Moore," "Hawaii Five-O," "Bernady Jones," "Good Times," "Rhoda," "Maude," "On the Road With Charles Kuralt," "The Jefferson" and "All in the Family" (all CBS).

"I cracked my ribs and hit my head on the cement floor. I put my hand on my head and it felt like a baseball. But we came back on in that old 'show-must-go-on' bit," he said.

Injured Singer Plans To Perform

YANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — A bandaged Alvin Cooper says the show must go on.

"I'm going to try. I think I can," the rock singer said Tuesday when asked whether he would perform as scheduled tonight in Edmonton, Alta.

"But my ribs hurt when I try to catch my breath. I tried to sing and couldn't get any volume."

'Rollerball' Provides Scary View Of Future

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — At first thought they are two unrelated themes for treatment. What has the growing bloodiness of sports (in response to the growing bloodthirstiness of crowds) got to do with the increasing scope and power of the multinational corporations whose assets are richer than whole countries?

"Rollerball," which Norman Jewison has produced and directed from a remarkable first script by William Harrison, entwines the themes in a not-so-distant future in which nations have been replaced by a half-dozen corporations, the corporations have carved up the world by monopoly — the food monopoly, the energy monopoly, the electronics monopoly.

Rollerball itself is the ultimate world sport and the ingeniously conceived opiate of the masses. It is a game so lethal (two or three players die each time) that almost no one survives long enough to become a champion. Everything is team play; forget individuality.

The message, of course, fits the super-corporate, medium-perfectly. The distant, toothless, totally powerful handful of corporate directors has everything under control. There is no room for mavericks. The game, which keeps everybody sedated by frenzy, lulled by mayhem, soothed by savagery, is better than Aldous Huxley's "Islands," although the corporations have also made dream pills part of the good life, and with no warnings on the packets that chewing may be injurious to your mental health.

The Huxley and George Orwell views of the future were so potent and prophetic that all others now seem to reflect theirs. It is true of "Rollerball" as well, in its vision of the corporate ascendancy, the omnipotent and life-controlling state (Big Brother), the maverick with some feeling (half instinct, half memory) of what it must have been like to be truly free and assertive.

Yet "Rollerball" manages to be a fresh, unusual and stimulating movie. In its portrayal of the vast and essentially stateless multinational corporations, "Rollerball" plays off developments and revelations which have come since Huxley's and Orwell's time. (Acceleration is the name of the world's game.) The violence of sports is also, if not new, grotesquely increased.

(Jewison, Canadian-born, was saying in his Pinewood Studio offices the other day, "I grew up loving hockey. It was rough, sure, but it was a kind of rough ballet, graceful and beautiful to watch, wonderfully skillful. Now it's gang warfare, all fights, and the crowds are disappointed if nobody loses a lot of teeth or breaks a leg. It's a bloody sport.")

On the fan side, the empties from heaven that rain on Pete Rose, the near-riots after unpopular decisions at prize fights and the rowdiness (as the newspapers call it) at soccer matches which has become a national embarrassment in England, all suggest some new and urgent demands put on sports to make the adrenaline flow in a bland or disappointing society.

The terrific excitement of "Rollerball" is that Jewison and author Harrison (who teaches creative writing at the University of Arkansas) have invented a whole new ball game which might well satisfy the blood lust of an Orwellian tomorrow.

It is lacrosse, basketball, Roller Derby, motorcycle racing, tag-team wrestling, the medieval joust and armed assault with intent to kill. Teams of skaters are towed around a steep-banked track by motorcycles. A heavy steel ball is fired across the rim of the track as on a roulette wheel. The players fight for possession of it and score points by tossing it into a receptacle above the rim which combines the finest elements of basketball and a pinball machine.

Gloves and helmets are steel-studded and there are almost no rules, few penalties. Extermination is all.

James Cost is the winner among losers, the rollerballer who keeps surviving until he is a world hero and, as such, her and the corporation arranges all these things, but he's got everything else, including replacements (Pamela Hensley, Barbara Trantham).

But Caan has that ticking hunch that there's another way to live, a past that was untidy but different. He makes a pilgrimage to the last library on earth, run by a dotty old man (Ralph Richardson) in one of those glorious cameos that would be a show-stopper if movies had show-stoppers. But all information is now in liquid storage, and the bubbles won't talk.

As the hero, Caan gives what is probably his most charismatic and starchy role so far. Not as testing and subtle as his work in "The Rain People" and "The Gambler," it may be, but heroic and sympathetic, the man of action forced to become a man of thought and feeling, caught in a quandary between what he does and what he senses.

Housman, following on his fine performance as the imperious professor in "The Paper Chase," is splendid as the suave magnate revealed as himself only a higher-level pawn, threatened and fearful.

The women are largely decorative, deployed as sex objects by the future society. Women may well resent the prophecy, but it is given as prophecy, not a present film industry convenience.

"Rollerball" is an offbeat entertainment which incorporates comments at once inescapable but also unobtrusive.

Kiwanis Reject Women Members

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Kiwanis International isn't ready for women members yet. A proposal to change the bylaws and allow them was rejected 3,941-608 Tuesday.

The votes were cast at the annual convention of the international service club for businessmen from the United States and 46 other countries.

Delegates also rejected proposals to readmit two clubs whose charters were revoked because they had admitted women.

The votes to sustain revocation were 3,800-482 for the Great Neck Chapter on Long Island, N.Y., and 3,200-482 for the Cheyenne Mountain Chapter of Colorado Springs.

Cooper, 48, holds a doctorate in science and retired from the Air Force in 1970.

He will help design Disney's planned community of tomorrow in Florida. It will showcase new ideas in housing, public transportation, waste disposal and energy conservation.
