New talks considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move to put nuclear weapons negotiations on course again, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger is actively considering a meeting in Moscow with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev. Alternatively, if Brezhnev's uncertain health is strong enough to permit him to attend a Communist party congress late next month in Cuba, Kissinger — or President Ford — may meet with the general secretary in the Caribbean.

While waiting word from Moscow on these feelers, U.S. officials are moderating their public expressions of irritation with the Soviets for rejecting the last U.S. weapons proposal in September and not coming forward with an offer since. "If the Soviet Union is prepared to review its attitude," Kissinger told a news conference Tuesday in Detroit, "then we can see what can be modified in ours, so that a mutually acceptable compromise can emerge."

This represented less public annoyance than Kissinger showed only two weeks earlier when he chastized the Russians for not giving a "reasoned response" to the proposal Kissinger handed to Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in New York during the U.N. General Assembly session. It called for the two countries to be allowed a certain number of Russian Backfire bombers and American cruise missiles beyond the 2,400 ceilings on missile delivery systems set by Ford and Brezhnev at Vladivostok last November.

The new note of U.S. restraint is based partly on increasing appreciation of the fact that Brezhnev is being pinched by his own bureaucracy as he tries to arrange terms for a treaty before next February's Soviet Party Congress.

Students of the Permian Basin are to meet with university President Dr. V. R. Cardozer this morning to present a proposal for a student newspaper.

David Brown, one of the students planning to make the presentation, said early this morning the student leaders had planned to make the presentation Tuesday. The appointment with Cardozer was delayed, however, when the student president's brother was injured in an automobile collision.

Debbie Pressly, the student, had assumed her post only Monday when Hoyce "Hawk" Kennedy resigned to insure continuity in the newspaper project. Kennedy will graduate at the close of the current semester.

Brown said he and either Miss Pressly or the council's vice president, Mike Calmes, would meet with Cardozer this morning to present the resolution passed Saturday by student leaders throughout the UT System. Presidents from five UT schools, representing 60,000 students, voted unanimously to support UTPB in its effort to obtain a student-operated newspaper.

The UT System Council, headed by James Corral of UT-El Paso, voted to take the matters to the board of regents when they meet Dec. 12 in Houston if Cardozer fails to act before then.

Brown said he and another student also would present a proposal for the administration of the proposed newspaper during the meeting with the university president.

He said he was optimistic the meeting ultimately would result in a student paper for the campus, now served only by the Windmill which is operated by the public information office as an in-house publication.

Brown is president of the College of Arts and Education, a member of the University Council and vice chairman of the Student Services Advisory Council which last month recommended funding a student newspaper on the Odessa campus.

Radar to be commissioned Monday

A new radar-generated weather display system designed to improve the quality of pilot weather briefings will be commissioned Monday at the Flight Service Station, Air Terminal.

The Federal Aviation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation said that, though the Midland FSS is the first to be equipped with the system, eventually 43 other key facilities strategically located will have it installed. The system will provide general aviation (non-airline) pilots with long-range, real-time weather information on a nationwide basis. Some 300 Flight Service Stations are operated by the FAA in the continental U.S.

The system at Air Terminal will utilize data from the FAA long-range radar at Andrews to provide a continuous picture of current weather within a 200-mile radius of the radar site. The heart of the system is a data processor which filters out many of the returns from air traffic and optimizes those of weather phenomenon for presentation on an 1-inch diameter screen.

The Midland station was selected to receive initial installation of the system because of the high level of general aviation traffic in the West Texas-East New Mexico area it serves and because of the large number of thunderstorms here.

DEAR ABBY

Overtime massages upset Walter's wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a masseur, and he has his own parlor. Our problem is the growing number of women who find it impossible to come in for massages during Walter's regular working hours. To accommodate them, he stays evenings, which means Walter and his customer are there all alone.

One woman used to come in three times a week—always after hours—so I started going down there when she did, and she finally quit coming in for massages.

Walter became upset and said he doesn't want me coming down to his and she did.

She wrote to tell me she has started smoking again. She says it "relaxes" her and keeps her weight down. "Only half a pack a day," she claims, but I am very much upset because I hate that habit and don't want her to smoke at all.

As her husband, do I have the right to demand that she quit? My mother used to smoke over three packs a day, and you should have seen her when she got up in the morning. I don't want that to happen to my wife.

What should I do?

FAR FROM HOME

DEAR FAR: Don't make an issue of it in your letters. You'll only upset her and increase her need to "relax." When you get home, ASK her to please quit. But I warn you, unless she herself is motivated to quit, she probably won't. Being a husband doesn't give you the "right" to demand anything except fidelity.

WOMEN'S NEWS

parlor at all because the word is getting around that he has a jealous wife—which is hurting his business.

I say he does well enough during the day hours and doesn't need to work evenings, too. Also, I've never known him to work overtime on a man or an elderly or obese woman—only young, good-looking ones.

Have I a right to be suspicious?

WALTER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. But you can't be absolutely sure until you catch Walter rubbing one of his customers the wrong way.

DEAR ABBY: I am stationed in Seoul, Korea, and read your column in the Pacific Stars and Stripes.

My wife is back in the States. We've been married two years, but have spent only 10 months together because of my Army training and stationing in Korea.

My wife used to smoke before we were married, but I asked her to quit

DEAR ABBY: I am 14-years-old and ashamed to admit it, but I still wet the bed.

When my friends ask me if I can spend the night with them, I make up an excuse like: "My mother won't let me."

Abby, I know it's a sin to lie, but I just can't tell them that I still wet the bed. Can you help me?

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: There are more kids your age who still wet the bed than you would believe, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

Ask your mom to get a "wet alarm." (It's advertised in both Sears and Montgomery Ward catalogues—and it really works!) After you've tried it, write again and tell me if it worked for you. I care.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

New way to carve

Dear Heloise:

I've always thought most people use a rather inefficient method when carving a turkey. Most times, I've noticed the bird being whittled at with a knife like a block of wood, trying to cut slices off the bird. Herein lies the problem:

For me, this process has more often than not resulted in bits and fragments of meat, not to mention considerable waste left on the bird. A far better approach that has worked quite well for me is to first remove the white meat breasts before cutting slices. This method is done much the same as filleting a fish.

First, remove the legs and thighs by cutting off at the point where they attach to the bird. Use whatever method you prefer to carve the legs.

The objective now is to remove the breasts so one ends up with a large chunk of meat from each side of the bird.

With the turkey on its back, cut along one side of the breastbone, letting the knife follow along the breastbone and rib cage of the bird. At the same time, apply gentle pressure with a fork to pull the breast away from the turkey.

The cutting should be done the full length of the bird and down toward the back of the bird until you run out of meat to cut. The breast may then be severed from the bird.

Place the breast flat down on a serving dish or cutting tray and slice much the same as a meatloaf. Cut the slices as thick or as thin as you prefer.

The whole process is just as simple as it sounds. No longer will you be required to perform the traditional ritual of whittling away at the turkey while your dinner guests wait in silent awe of your ineptness. Happy eating!

John Colvin

Thank you, kind sir. Sounds like your method is a good one and we love you for sharing it with us. Happy holidays...

'A universal gift'

National Bible Week, now being observed across the land, doesn't receive the widespread attention accorded some observances, yet it is and long has been one of the most important of all.

The special week, sponsored by the Laymen's National Bible Committee, Inc., in cooperation with major faith groups, merits more consideration than it gets in Midland and in other cities over the nation.

No other book has been translated into almost every language and dialect. No other book appears, in one version or another, in so many homes, offices, hotels and inns. To Christians everywhere, the Bible is THE Book.

Yet, the Bible, of course, means different things to different persons. Don Shoemaker, editor of The Miami, Fla., Herald, puts it this way:

"Whether the Bible is the full and true word of God, as many Christians believe; or whether it is the history of a religion, as all scholars acknowledge, or whether, finally, it is to be held simply as great literature, as agnostics and writers agree, it is to all mankind a universal gift." It truly is a universal book... actually 66 books in all.

Shoemaker says "The Bible's very antiquity, which stretches back in the Old Testament to some date between the 6th and 8th centuries, is at once mysterious and electrifying. In the main the 'preservation' of the hundreds of sacred manuscripts which were in fact lost is a strange triumph of the perseverance of the human heart and mind. To think, further, that the Bible is the first typeprinted history of man, surviving natural catastrophe and the collapse of civilizations, which one may hold in his hands, must make the senses tingle... As such the Bible is the human story."

The Bible, of course, is not a book just to read and put aside. It requires continued reading and study in order to gain anywhere near its full majesty and meaning.

Shoemaker sums it up beautifully in his observation that "Anyone who can be without it (the Bible) through ignorance of its pageantry or scorn of its religiosity is sorely deprived." Think about it.

decade of exile from the American wallet and purse.

The return of the $2 bill, according to the government, is intended to save $4 million a year in printing costs and reduce the volume of currency consumers must carry.

The bill, which bears Jefferson's portrait, was removed from circulation in 1966 because the public preferred to use the $1 bill.

Assuming a continuation of the inflation spiral, the American spender will discover that the revived currency will buy little more than the $1 bill did at the time of the $2 bill's expatriation.

INSIDE REPORT:

Voters' revolt evident in San Francisco elections

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

SAN FRANCISCO — The unexpected presence in the Dec. 11 mayoral runoff election here of a conservative Republican businessman — lacking organization, funds and even campaigning ability — is the latest evidence of spontaneous voters' revolt, this time in the most liberal of American cities.

Conservative city supervisor John Barbagelata seemingly needs a miracle to win on his anti-labor union platform in this traditionally union town against liberal Democratic state Sen. George Moscone. But discontent over strikes by police and firemen here and fear of going the way of New York are strong enough to provide the ingredients of that miracle.

There is no need for a victory by Barbagelata, however, to show that San Francisco is deeply influenced by the harsh new realities in big city politics. While unmistakably the candidate of labor and the left, Moscone is gingerly edging away from them and, if he gets to city hall, almost surely will disappoint them. Here, as elsewhere, the twin menaces of municipal bankruptcy and deepening crime are revolutionizing politics.

These trends had to be intense to reach San Francisco, easily carried by Sen. George McGovern in 1972. With a national reputation for permissiveness, it is the only city where homosexual support is openly courted by candidates. Moscone is the archetypal San Francisco liberal of the 1970s — an early McGovern booster, foe of capital punishment and the Vietnam war, reflexively identified with all liberal causes.

In this environment, Barbagelata was expected to run fifth in a five-man field in the Nov. 4 non-partisan election. While often described as a Reagan Republican, he has met Ronald Reagan only twice in his life and is really a non-political businessman who first entered politics with his 1969 election to the 11-member board of supervisors. He gives few political speeches, does little hand-shaking and is remarkably short on the staples of politics — smiles, small talk, organization and money.

Conventional politicians have all manner of sophisticated explanations for Barbagelata running second Nov. 4. Certainly he benefited from the police-strike and lameduck Mayor Joseph Alioto's capitulation to their demands. But his appeal runs deeper. His opposition to rapacious demands of municipal unions ("they are destroying our cities"), busing and lax measures against street crime, strikes a responsive chord with middle-class whites who live in San Francisco neighborhoods never visited by tourists.

As the ally of organized labor and the liberal Burton machine (run by Congressmen Phil and John Burton), Moscone would seem the antithesis of Barbagelata. Like Alioto, the bedrock of his support is welfare recipients, minorities and civil servants. But, in private, Moscone on fiscal affairs and crime is not all that different from his conservative opponent.

While Moscone aides expect a rout in the Dec. 11 runoff and rejoice that their victim is a Reaganite ("I just love it," one enthusiastically told us), Moscone in private feels the Nov. 4 election brought home a sober warning of taxpayer revolt.

Anti-crime czar is no tv star

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Richard W. Velde, the federal anti-crime czar, has bombed out as a television performer. His debut was so bad that the embarrassed Velde hasn't released his taped messages for public viewing.

For the taxpayers, therefore, the abortive debut has been a waste of about $175,320. Here are the incredible details:

The 43-year-old chief of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) faced the klieg lights to record some crime-prevention messages.

Velde was so eager to appear on TV that he discarded the spots his predecessor, Don Santarelli, had already taped. To re-record the messages with the droll Velde as the star may cost as much as $21,920.

He was backed up by such Hollywood stars as Bob Hope, Telly Savalas, Carol Burnett and Angie Dickinson. They plugged the theme: "Fighting crime is everybody's business. Get involved."

With such a star-studded cast, the messages had to be a hit. But Velde wanted to be certain. He hired Porter, Novelli and Associates, Inc., a private firm, to evaluate the spots.

They were duly aired last summer in Houston, Tex., and Porter, Novelli, et al. gave them rave reviews. The firm's 95-page report, intended for official eyes only, declared ecstatically that the anti-crime messages "rank among the highest in the media's perceived relevance to their audience."

Only one performance received a bad review. Velde's introductory message was an "unexciting" bummer. A star, unhappily, was not born.

In all candor, therefore, the research firm advised: "The introductory Administrator Velde message... is largely rejected by the media. The message is likely, therefore, to receive infrequent scheduling and thus would not be an efficient investment of LEAA funds."

Nevertheless, the firm recommended that the other spots be given "a comprehensive, well-planned distribution." They would receive $1.5 million worth of free radio-TV time nationally in one month, the firm estimated.

But Richard Velde is a sensitive soul, proud of his physical fitness. He has boasted to skeptics that he has the body of a 25-year-old. After his poor TV rating from the Porter, Novelli firm, the proud Velde apparently lost all interest in the radio-TV venture.

Result: The crime-prevention spots, which were supposed to be aired months ago, are gathering dust on a LEAA shelf. Moldering with the

EYE ON CUBA:

Executions by firing squads reach 27,600

By WILLIAM GIANDONI Copley News Service

In Communist Cuba, there are no gallows, no gas chambers, no electric chairs, no garroting.

There are only firing squads and Premier Fidel Castro's dictatorship has been using them to eliminate opponents of the Cuban revolution since January 1959.

A recent report on executions by firing squads in Communist Cuba indicates that as many as 27,600 persons have been put to death there since Castro came to power.

The first recorded executions occurred Jan. 1, 1959, the very day that former President Fulgencio Batista gave up and fled into exile, leaving the power vacuum into which Castro quickly moved.

Castro's forces which then controlled much of eastern Cuba promptly sent 318 persons who either were connected with the Batista regime or who were not in sympathy with Castro's 26th of July Revolutionary Movement before firing squads in Santiago.

From then on, according to the report authored by Miguel Angel Olba Benito, secretary of the Cuban Humanitarian Commission in Exile, the shootings were a regular occurrence.

Once Castro and his bearded guerrillas occupied Havana, firing squads worked day and night, under the command of Ernesto "Che" Guevara, the Argentine medic who was Castro's right-hand man. In seven months, the toll there reached 1,852.

When worldwide protest against the bloodletting reached a high point, Castro held one of his early mass meetings, in the plaza in front of the Palacio Presidencial. He harangued the people at length, defending the executions, and finally put the question to the aroused crowd. "Those who are in accord that the ruffians be shot raise their arm." As Olba Benito recalls it, "the mob answered yes, with bestial howls and varying degrees of enthusiasm. It was the direct democracy of the Communists. Then came the great trials in theaters, parks, sports arena, union locals, the workers' confederation, movie houses."

In those days, Castro still sought to maintain his image as a humanist, a man who respected individual and political rights.

"We never thought that our action would rest on armed force," he wrote later, according to the report published in the Latin American edition of the Bulletin of the Association of International Political Studies and Information, Paris, France.

"The public is the most decisive and powerful factor in the revolution. If we have used violence, it has been against the war criminals. If a judge were to order the freedom of Sosa Blanco (a Cuban army officer whose trial and execution in 1959 was televised), I would free him. Then I would ask that the judge be shot."

The most recent reports of executions by firing squad that Olba Benito provided date from 1970. But Cuban exile sources say that the shootings still go on. Some even are reported over Cuban radio stations that can be monitored in the United States.

The victims, in those cases, are described as criminal types or enemies of the revolution.

Before Castro, the Cuban constitution provided that the death penalty could be applied only to members of the Cuban armed forces or to persons convicted of treason or espionage in time of war. Cuba has had no constitution since then but the Castro dictatorship has drafted one that is supposed to go into effect next February. It makes no mention of the death penalty, or any other penalty beyond "the most severe sanctions."

But, as Castro once said, "We do not have to violate the law because we are the ones who make law."

Fires force evacuations

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fierce winds swirled flames across more than 68,500 acres of brushland in two separate fires near Los Angeles early today, threatening at least 100 homes and forcing evacuation of more than 600 persons.

The Mt. Baldy fire 35 miles east of downtown Los Angeles spread over about 10,000 acres in a few hours late Tuesday as 50-mile-an-hour winds off the deserts raked the slopes. Two ranger stations and four penal camps were abandoned as the blaze grew to 23,000 acres, making it the second biggest brush fire in the nation this year.

Meanwhile, the biggest, a fire twice that size, flared up again in spots in the Big Tujunga Canyon on the northeast edge of Los Angeles and forced residents to flee several homes. Fire has already destroyed at least 20 homes and damaged 30 others there.

Firemen on both fronts declared the new flare-ups contained, meaning fire lines were established, but the fires were not yet under control. The Santa Ana wind conditions — hot, strong and dry — subsided early today, aiding abatement efforts.

There were no new reports of injuries or property damage.

Weather forecasters said they expect a break in the wind conditions today, but fire fighters aren't sure what effect it will have.

"If the wind turns around on us, all the unprotected flanks we'd thought were safe will be in danger," said one Forest Service spokesman. "It could be a whole new ball game."

Most of the firemen on the line early this morning were saying they expect to be on the slopes for Thanksgiving in any case.

About 50 men and more than 200 teen-agers held in county work camps were bused to jails and juvenile facilities as flames roared within several yards of their barbed-wire fences.

As the wind rose at sundown, flames which had been hiding in smoldering embers leaped to life in scattered areas throughout both fires. Most of the people ordered to abandon their homes refused.

King Juan Carlos proclaims amnesty for most prisoners

MADRID, Spain (AP) — King Juan Carlos is beginning his reign with the liberal gesture of an amnesty for most political prisoners and a promise that terrorists awaiting trial for political murders will not be executed.

Government sources said the clemency will benefit about 15,000 prisoners, including about 1,000 political prisoners who will be released immediately, about 700 others whose terms will be shortened and between 2,000 and 3,000 common criminals who will be freed.

The rest will be common criminals whose sentences will be reduced.

The amnesty does not apply to between 250 and 350 persons being held on charges of terrorist activity. But the decree published today in the Official Gazette said death sentences given any persons now awaiting trial for terrorist killings were to be commuted to life imprisonment.

Most of those in jail on terrorist charges are urban anarchists or members of ETA, the Basque guerrilla organization fighting for the independence of the three Basque provinces in northwest Spain.

In an attempt to check terrorist murders of policemen, the Franco regime in August made the death penalty mandatory for terrorists convicted of killing or mutilating security officers. Despite a wave of protests in Spain and abroad when five such killers were executed two months ago, the amnesty decree gave no indication that the law would be modified.

The decree said persons serving terms of three years or less would be released immediately along with those waiting trial for offenses punishable by terms of no more than three years. Sentences of from three to six years will be cut in half. Those between six and 12 years will be reduced 25 per cent. Those between 12 and 20 years will be cut 20 per cent. And sentences of more than 20 years will be reduced a sixth.

The king said in the decree that the restoration of the monarchy "must mean a reaffirmation of aims toward a solidarity and peaceful living-together of all Spaniards." He called for "national harmony in order to consolidate the major objective of the monarchy: the unrenounceable good of peace."

Pearl Bailey speaks at U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Pearl Bailey made her debut at the United Nations General Assembly with a prepared script that the Cuban delegate said she should have sung and an ad lib encore in which she appealed for "truth, brotherhood and the will of God that everybody here should get together and get these bricks together."

Miss Bailey, who is starring in a revival of "Hello, Dolly!" on Broadway, last week took an assignment as special adviser to the U.S. assembly delegation with the intention of taking part in discussions that interested her.

South should go down on today's hand. He wins the first trick with dummy's queen of hearts, gets to his hand with a diamond and leads a low spade.

An expert West puts up the ace of spades and continues hearts to force out the ace. West gets the ace of clubs in time to defeat the contract with the rest of the hearts.

When the hand was actually played, West played a low spade instead of taking the ace. Now South could abandon the spades. He was sure of one spade, two hearts, three diamonds and three clubs for game and rubber.

Groundless Fear
West was afraid that South still held the ace-jack of hearts. If so, it was essential to let East lead the next heart, and the only real chance was that East had the queen of spades.

But East couldn't have a queen if South had 16 points for his opening notrump bid. West simply made a mistake because he was forced to make up his mind very quickly.

Perhaps the real villain of the piece was East. He should have played the jack of hearts at the first trick to prevent any misunderstanding.

14 former Nazi prison camp guards on trial

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — A former New York housewife and 13 other former Nazi death camp guards went on trial today for the mass murder of Jews at Lublin, Poland.

Hermine Braunstein Ryan, 56, who married an American after the war and settled in New York, was extradited to face charges of helping to send more than 1,700 camp inmates to their deaths.

Wearing a white, rabbit-fur cap and white sweater with violet scarf, Mrs. Ryan smiled occasionally as she chatted with her lawyer and two other women defendants before the courtroom was called to order. Some of the other defendants hid behind newspapers when photographers and television cameramen were admitted into the courtroom for a brief picture-taking session.

Mrs. Ryan sat in the front row of the dock, flanked by two defense lawyers in black robes. As the roll of defendants was called, she rose as the court directed.

Her conviction by the Duesseeldorf state court could mean imprisonment for life. The Polish government also wants her for concentration camp crimes punishable there with the death penalty.

Mrs. Ryan is one of five women defendants in the Lublin trial, which rivals in scope the proceedings against Auschwitz camp officials in Frankfurt during the mid-1960s. Polish authorities estimate more than a million Jews were exterminated at the Lublin camp in southeast Poland from early 1942 until the summer of 1944, when the Soviet army overran the region.

Because of the passage of time and legal complications, this may be West Germany's last major trial of former Nazis implicated in the gassing and cremation of 4 million Jews at concentration camps during the Nazi occupation of Poland. One defendant, former Lublin commander Hermann Hackmann, 62, is believed to be the only surviving commandant in the "death camp" chain that included Auschwitz, Treblinka, Sobibor and Belzec.

The trial, which could last as long as two years, will be the second war crimes proceeding against Hackmann, Mrs. Ryan and several other defendants.

Hackmann, a furniture salesman from Osnabrueck, was sentenced to death soon after the war but the penalty was later reduced and he was paroled in 1955.

Mrs. Ryan, who served at four concentration camps from 1939 to 1945, was convicted in an Austrian court of mistreating inmates and imprisoned.

After her release, she met Russell Ryan, then a U.S. serviceman, in Austria in 1957 and entered the United States via Canada later that year. They married in 1958, and Mrs. Ryan became a naturalized American in 1964 by concealing her Austrian conviction and imprisonment.

Four years later, Simon Wiesenthal, the Vienna hunter of Nazi war criminals, gave U.S. officials information about Mrs. Ryan's wartime activities, and the West German government later provided affidavits detailing her cruelties to concentration camp inmates.

In five years of legal proceedings that followed, Mrs. Ryan agreed to relinquish her American citizenship but fought deportation until a U.S. District Court in Brooklyn dropped the action in 1973 and accepted the West German request for her extradition.

Beirut's religious war continues unabated

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Christians beat back three Moslem attacks during the night while army commandos blocked a Christian attempt on a Moslem sector as Beirut's civil war raged on today.

At least 22 persons were killed and 54 wounded in fighting to defend the Christian residential quarters of Sodeko, Ein Rummaneh and Sinn el Fil, a police spokesman said.

This boosted the casualty toll to more than 150 killed and 350 wounded since the latest round of fighting in Lebanon's eight-month civil war erupted last week.

"It was a night of mortars and hand-to-hand fighting," the spokesman said. Several highrise buildings were set ablaze by mortars and rockets in Ashrafiyeh, the largest Christian district of Beirut.

Heavy rains helped exhausted fire brigades prevent the blazes from spreading.

Christian militiamen attempted to storm the Moslem slum district of Karantina, next to Beirut's once-busy port. The invaders were driven off by army commandos stationed at the port, and five Christians were arrested. U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim arrived in Beirut today to urge restraint and a cessation of hostilities. But mortar exchanges and sniper fire forced officials to take him by helicopter from the airport to the suburban presidential palace to talk with President Suleiman Franjeh.

Waldheim was scheduled to drive this afternoon to Damascus, Syria, seeking Syria's agreement to extension of the mandate of the U.N. peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights. The mandate expires Sunday, and Syria reportedly is making demands which Israel refuses to agree to.

Teams of Lebanese security officers and Palestinian guerrillas toured battle areas appealing by loudspeaker to the fighters to thin out their forces as a first step toward disengagement.

Another de-escalation agreement reached Tuesday helped calm the fighting until midnight, but it collapsed when both sides opened up with mortars and rockets.

TO IGNORE IS SUICIDE
The Word of God is sufficient to meet every spiritual need of man. (2 TI:3:16,17) As a matter of fact, it is the ONLY thing that will meet the spiritual needs of man. To spend our time addressing an audience on philosophy, or how to win friends and influence other and the such like, is to waste one's time spiritually. Paul says the gospel is the power of God to save. (RO:1:16)

The pulpits of the lands, the religious journals, the printed Bible literature (exceptions noted) are full of everything except the applications of Divine truth. As a result of this Bible deficiency, churches are extremely weak because the people who make them up are weak. Again, I say, it is because of the lack of Bible teaching and the proper application of it to the lives of the people.

"Ignore the Word of God," seems to be the criterion of the day. Not only ignore the Word of God but "ignore those who cry out in its defense." Try as you may, you cannot ignore it and have peace of mind until you have ignored it long enough for your conscience to become seared. When that happens you may be past the point of no return. Is that where you find yourself today, dear reader?

Jesus said, "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." (JN:12:48) Neighbour friend, to ignore the plain and positive teaching of the New Testament is to commit spiritual suicide. Eternity is too long, heaven is too wonderful to miss, and hell is too awful to endure. Hence we adjure you to be concerned about what is taught and what you are to believe.

The Cuthbert Street Church of Christ is a group of scripturally baptized believers who still believe that we should speak as the Bible speaks and be silent where the Bible is silent. We believe that we should be able to authorize our practice from the Bible and this we are willing to do should any of our practices be called in question. You have an invitation to meet with us, even tonight. Whether you do or don't, however, we plead with you not to ignore the teaching of God's Word.

Pearl Bailey, the institution

By JERRY PARKER
Newsday

NEW YORK — Somehow or other, little Pearl Mae Bailey of Newport News, Va., has gone and made herself into an institution. For the past 10 years or so, it hasn't mattered which party or who was in the White House — you could count on Pearl Bailey being there, too.

From Presidents Johnson through Nixon to Ford, Bailey figures she has been in and out of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., as entertainer or dinner guest, more often than any other performer with the possible exception of Bob Hope. Her familiarity is such that, years ago, she stopped referring to the President's residence as the White House. Instead, she talks of evenings spent "at the House."

How did she evolve from a nightclub entertainer mainly known for her throwaway delivery of bawdy material like "Minnie Had to Lose It at the Astor" into a commodity as popular and as wholesome as apple pie?

Ask Bailey, seated now in her dressing room at the Minskoff Theater, and you get some of what the customers out front at "Hello, Dolly!" get every evening: a shrug of those expressive, dub-taken shoulders; the quizzical double take; the deep-throated chuckle.

"Goodness, darlin', I don't know just how it started," she said. "I don't know if you could call me the White House pet. I'm not Liberty, the dog, Oh, and say do you know I got to pet some of those puppies and they are the cutest things, all camel-colored and..."

A conversation with Pearl Bailey is like that. In the space of an hour's interview, there is opportunity to ask, at most, a dozen questions. Just one inquiry — into her unique status at the White House, for instance — sends her rambling through 10 minutes of anecdotes: about how Betty Ford calls her "sister" because they are both Aries, about her duet with Margaret Truman Daniel on the Mike Douglas show, about talking Vice President Nelson Rockefeller out of his eyeglasses.

Dolly Gallagher Levi is the woman behind the enshrinement of Pearl Bailey.

ENTERTAINMENT

Bailey, however, slipped into it as if it were the finest new frock in town and, on her, that's how it looked to many. Clive Barnes, critic for the New York Times, said that Bailey "took the whole musical in her hands and swung it around her neck as easily as if it were a feather boa." The audience, he said, "would have elected her governor if she had only named the state."

The boost Bailey got from Dolly has taken her far and wide of Broadway and Pennsylvania Avenue: far into the Middle East, where she has entertained at the request of the State Department and received the First Order in Arts and Sciences from President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, the Hussein-Beli Ali from King Hussein of Jordan and All the Beauties of Life from Her Imperial Majesty the Shah Banou of Iran.

POPCORN THE CLOWN is featured in the International All-Star Circus coming to town Thursday for a 7:30 p.m. performance at Midland County Exhibit Building. Tickets for the performance, sponsored by Midland Elks Lodge No. 1826, will be on sale before show time.

Singing superstar serious about music

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Music Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever hear of Bruce Springsteen? He's the latest rock'n' roll superstar, but if you've been out of the country or been sleeping a lot lately you can be forgiven for missing his meteoric rise.

You see, one minute he was an unknown, his Bob Dylan look-alike, sing-alike act going nowhere.

The next minute he was starting at us from the cover of both Time and Newsweek and blaring at us from every rock station from Bangor to Biloxi.

Springsteen, 26, is a throwback to the late 1950s and '60s rock 'n' roll, but he's not doing it to make gentle fun of that period like the Sha Na Na spoof group. He's serious, if that's possible. He comes on stage wearing white undershirt, tight jeans, sneakers, black leather jacket, cap and guitar in the swivel-hip Elvis Presley manner.

He looks like an adolescent punk, sings city punk rock songs that he writes himself. Back home in New Jersey he has a customized 1957

Chevy convertible. (You remember, that's the year they had fins in the back.)

Springsteen was born in Freehold, N.J. He joined his first band at 14. When he was 16 his family moved to California, but he stayed. He more or less adopted Asbury Park, N.J., as his hometown, getting to know some of its lowlife, but staying out of drugs. He spent much of the last decade around the city's boardwalk, playing pinball machines, performing with his band for nickels and dimes and writing songs about some of the city's characters.

Most rock critics call him a poet. A few think the newly proclaimed emperor of rock isn't wearing clothes. Mention his name and you usually get a reply that includes the word "hype."

He made two albums for Columbia Records in 1973 and 1974 that went nowhere — except maybe to Asbury Park. But for his wildly successful third album, "Born to Run" this year, Columbia spent $200,000 in advertising.

The impact of that big bag of bread and the accompanying barrel of hype is still being debated in rock circles.

Opera coach rejects Italians

ROME (AP) — Italy's most famous opera coach, the grand old man of the theater, has one word for Italian opera singers: shriekers. And out of the window after them he throws the rest of Italian opera — productions, directors and composers.

Luigi Ricci grew up with the greats of the early 20th century: Pietro Mascagni, Puccini, Caruso, Beniamino Gigli. Today he refuses Italian pupils and never goes to the opera, a score's throw from his Rome apartment. And although he still teaches 48 hours a week, despite his 81 years, he sees no one to step into his shoes when he steps out.

His pupils come from everywhere except Italy, opera's homeland.

"I don't want Italian pupils," he said in an interview. "They think only of making their voices heard; they always sing at the top of their lungs. Bel canto with crescendos, diminuendos and pianissimos no longer exists here."

Aside from being urlatori — shriekers — Italians, Ricci said sadly, make lazy pupils.

"They don't study well. You can make Americans sing a phrase 10, 11, 20 times and they will say: 'Let's do it again.' They study with passion."

Milsap wants to make it on singing talent

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ronnie Milsap doesn't want to be remembered because he's blind. "I'd rather be accepted for my music," he says.

Despite his blindness, he has accomplished more in the last two years than some sighted stars do in 20. In 1974 he was voted male vocalist of the year by the Country Music Association and this year he won the CMA's album of the year for "A Legend in My Time."

Milsap, 30, said in an interview that his blindness has helped his career to some extent.

"Being blind enables you to develop your hearing better. Your ears become your eyes, your ears."

"People can say, 'Hey, there's this guy who's blind, and he sounds like Ray Charles.'"

"Or they can say, 'Hey, there's this guy who sounds like Ray Charles. By the way, he's blind.' That's the kind of direction I want to go."

Dead lake may come back to life

The Washington Post SUBOTICA, Yugoslavia — In the spring of 1971, Lake Palic died, victim of an intensive industrial development program. Foulsmelling odor began spreading to the outskirts of Subotica and the sight of tens of thousands of dead fish floating on the surface made it clear that the lake's recreational potential was dead as well.

Subotica decided to restore life to Lake Palic, which is only about five miles from the town center. Unable to obtain outside assistance, the residents of Subotica voted in a referendum to adopt a system of salary deductions to finance the reclamation project, which included a complete draining of the lake.

Town engineers will release water into the dry lakebed with hopes of restoring Lake Palic to a new life. Environmentalists here describe the entire project as being unique in Europe.

Confident that the project will be successful, Dr. Djula Salasi, a biologist who took part in it, said last week, "as soon as it gets refilled completely, I will drink a glass of water from the lake."

The total cost of the project approached $7 million, a substantial financial burden on Subotica, whose population is 80,000.

Sabine Royalty president predicts Ford will sign compromise oil bill

Ashley Priddy of Dallas, president of Sabine Royalty Corp., predicted here Tuesday afternoon that President Ford would not veto the compromise energy bill if it passes Congress next month.

"At first it seemed almost a certainty that the President would veto the energy bill, but now he may be changing his mind. It looks as if the long range welfare of the nation may be sacrificed for political expediency," Priddy said.

Priddy and several other officers and directors of Sabine, parent company of Dalco Oil Co. which has offices in Midland, were guests at a Midland Wildcat Committee reception in the Petroleum Club of Midland following a meeting of the Sabine board of directors in The First National Bank Building.

Priddy said he is very optimistic and enthusiastic about the future of the Permian Basin.

"There is a great quantity of gas still to be discovered in the Basin, and we want to participate in the development," Priddy said.

He added that Midland and Odessa will be the headquarters for tertiary recovery operations that will emerge in the near future.

"Of course, we will have to have a good price for oil to conduct tertiary recovery. Right now, we are leaving about half the known crude in the ground.

"Methods are being developed in laboratories that will make it possible to recover this oil. With a good price, we will see those methods leave the laboratory and put to use," Priddy predicted.

The board president said right now 65 per cent of Sabines production comes from the Permian Basin and that the company has interests in approximately 600 oil and gas fields in the United States.

Sabine employs 15 persons in Midland, with Orham Salman in charge of the Dalco office. Sabine also conducts its exploration through the consulting firm of Thomas, Harris and Anderson of Midland.

Priddy said one of the main lines of the oil industry now are the decisions made by Congress since the Arab blockade 26 months ago.

"Since the Arab's action, Congress has taken three steps, all backwards. One was the elimination of the depletion allowance that put a heavy tax burden on the industry. Another was the continuation of price controls, and now a third is about to take place—a rollback of crude prices," he said.

The other Sabine guests of the Wildcat Committee included E. C. McCarty of Dallas, chairman of the board; Glenn Mortimer of San Antonio, Paul Davis of Midland, Frank McCabe of Albany, N. Y.; James Kinley of Olean, N. Y.; and R. W. Howell Jr., D. L. Hosea, Frank A. Schultz, Robert Priddy, J. Lee Youngblood and W. R. Goff, all of Dallas and all directors.

Midland test awaits tanks

Davis Oil Co., Tulsa, Okla., has shut in to await tank battery, its No. 1 Scharbauer, Midland County Pennsylvania prospect, 13 miles northwest of Midland.

It swabbed and flowed 10 hours on the latest reported test, making 135 barrels of oil and 62 barrels of load water.

The recovery was through an unreported choke and pay behind perforations at 10,646-10,720 feet, after treating with 150 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 10,825 feet on an 11,000-foot contract, it has 5 1/2-inch production string set on bottom.

Location is 467 feet from south and west lines of section 36, block 41, T-1-S, T&P survey, 3/4 mile northeast of depleted production in the Nobles (Wolfcamp) field. It is 1/4 mile northeast of Strawn production in the Hallanan field, to which area it was amended.

Dorchester Gas discloses sale

Dorchester Gas Corp., Dallas-based firm with offices in Midland, has sold certain properties in Canada, including a major portion of its interests in the Tide Lake area of Southeastern Alberta. Purchaser is Connecticut Exploration, Ltd., a subsidiary of Prudential Funds, Inc.

Total consideration exceeded $5 million in cash to Dorchester. Covered was Dorchester's reversionary interests in 44 shallow gas wells, working interests in 49 shallow gas wells, and oil and gas leasehold rights on approximately 33,000 acres. There has been no production as yet from any of the wells.

Schleicher, Reagan Explorers Scheduled

The project was abandoned in September, 1959.

It was drilled by E. L. Cox and Coastal States Gas Producing Co.

It is 11,234 feet from north and 3,330 feet from east lines of Arthur Slaydon survey 57, in the Northeast Stonewall area.

Southeast New Mexico gain four explorations

Wildcat sites have been staked in Eddy and Lea counties, in Southeast New Mexico.

Deepest of the projects is an 11,700-foot venture to be drilled in Eddy, one mile south of Carlsbad. It is Corinne Grace, Carlsbad No. 1 Wood-Grace.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 11-22s-26e, 2 1/4 miles southeast of the Happy Valley (Morrow) gas field.

R. C. Bennett and J. C. Ryan scheduled No. 2 Exxon-State, an 11,400-foot Morrow wildcat, 12 miles southwest of Loco Mills, in Eddy.

It spots 1/2 mile north of Pennsylvania pay and 1 1/4 mile north and slightly east of Morrow production in the Burton, North field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 25-19s-28e, also about 1 1/4 mile northeast of dual Wolfcamp and Strawn gas production in the field.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 305, block 13, M&GN survey, four miles north of the Barilla (Wolfcamp) gas field, which produces at approximately 10,000-10,200 feet.

Interior says offshore oil would hurt Alaska

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department says a proposed opening of offshore gas and oil development in the northern Gulf of Alaska would be "a trade-off" in which Alaskans would suffer most of the problems and the rest of the nation would reap most of the benefits.

In the final environmental impact statement on the offshore lease sale proposed for next February, department analysts concluded that "most of the energy consumption and any benefits" would accrue to the populations in the "lower 48" states.

The four-volume study was released by the department on Wednesday.

The report predicted that approximately 45,000 barrels of crude oil would be spilled each year into coastal waters, that some organisms may die and certain vegetation could be damaged by pollution and there could be "chronic levels of disturbance and pollution which could be disruptive to fish and wildlife populations."

It said oil production should have little effect on air quality but that water quality could suffer significantly in the event of oil spills or the pumping of polluted water from oil wells.

The study said "At best, the production of oil and gas in the northern Gulf would provide short-term, critically needed energy and perhaps provide time, for the development of long-term alternative energy sources...At worst, petroleum development...means the irreplaceable loss of Alaskan wilderness—the nation's rapidly dwindling long-term resource," it said.

The study said most unavoidable environmental impacts from the proposed sale alone might be relatively minor.

But the study was more gloomy in assessing the impacts that would add up as more and more of the gulf is drilled after future lease sales.

"A variety of hydrocarbon sales in the Gulf of Alaska could have a monumental impact on the existing social and economic structures of communities which may be used for staging areas..." it said.

There would be problems in providing adequate housing and community services, competition from tankers, barges and drilling platforms which "could interfere or severely restrict the fishing resources," and some loss of wilderness and of air and water quality, it said.

The department based its assessment on the assumption a great deal of oil and gas will be found in the gulf, bringing maximum activity.

This maximum development, brought on through a series of future lease sales, could bring the nation a total of about six billion barrels of oil and 17 trillion cubic feet of natural gas—about a one-year supply at present consumption rates—although there is only one chance in 20 of finding that much, the department said.

Oil discovery reports final

I. W. Lovelady of Midland has completed as a San Andres oil strike, No. 1-SA Jones Heirs, Northwest Gaines County test, three miles north of Higginbotham.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 18 barrels of 34.3-gravity oil and three barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 509-1.

Production was through perforations at 5,116-5,175 feet, which had been acidized with 4,500 gallons.

Drilled to 5,400 feet, it has 5 1/2-inch casing seated at 5,310 feet, and is plugged back to 280 feet.

The following tops were picked under ground elevation of 3,677 feet: Rustler, 2,170; Yates, 3,072; Grayburg, 4,300 and San Andres, 4,580 feet.

Wellsite is 860 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 1, block A-6, PSL survey.

Mesa gas wells on production

Mesa Petroleum Co. petroleum exploration and producing firm, which maintains offices in Midland, has announced that four recently completed gas wells, of which two are dually completed, have commenced initial production. The rates range from 6 to 8 million cubic feet per day, and is being sold for $1.37 per thousand cubic feet after BTU adjustment. Mesa owns 100 per cent working interest in the wells and some 6,000 acres of undeveloped leases in the surrounding area.

Dowdle reports five new wells

Dowdle Oil Corp. of Midland has completed five new Devonian sand gas wells in Indiana County, Pa., at depths between 3,000-3,500 feet.

Open flow potentials range from 4 to 9 million cubic feet per day, with the gas price at 84 cents per thousand cubic feet, currently.

The completions bring to 15 the number of wells completed in the area this year, with five more wells to be drilled before year's end.

The President's sons—Steve, the bronco buster

Steve Ford...the bronco buster

By CHERYL BENTSEN
The Los Angeles Times

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Thick, black rain clouds swelled over the Forum in Inglewood where 19-year-old Stephen Ford, the President's youngest son, was acting as grand marshal for the International Horse Show.

He arrived early that particular morning "to work a few stock horses," but drizzles had turned the temporary outdoor riding ring, bulldozed for the occasion, into muck. To his disappointment, he couldn't ride.

Since spending a year working on a ranch in Montana, Ford, who had never been on a horse until 14 months ago, has gone cowboy. He's even flirting with the idea of being a bronco-buster. More than that, he looks and sounds like a cowboy, complete with a drawl and Western clothes. The people he met last summer were "real gen-u-ine," he says.

He looked like John Boy Walton trying to be the Marlboro man... tall, thin, smooth-skinned, with short blond hair just showing beneath a dirty beige cowboy hat that for him has become standard gear.

He wore a checked shirt with fancy snaps, silver bands at his neck and wrist, Western jeans with a beaded Indian belt that said "Steve," and leather boots with 2-inch heels and sharp, pointed toes. He walked with an easy-swinging stride, his legs slightly bowed.

"There are a lot of dollars involved here, that's for sure," he said, surveying the scene. "More than I'll ever see."

Exhibitors from the United States, Mexico and Canada had trailered more than 600 horses to the show — stock horses, quarter horses, standard-bred, Tennessee walking horses, pintos, Appaloosa, pony breed, palominos — which were stabled in tents outside the arena.

There was an interesting mix of people slipping and sliding in the muddy stables: society types; leather-jacketed horse owners with cowboy hats who drove up in Cadillac Seattles; honest-to-goodness leatheryfaced cowboys with fringed chaps; society girls with thoroughbred faces wearing velvet jackets and riding caps; assorted Hollywood celebrities with Jaguars and Mercedes.

It would have been difficult to pick out Ford and two Secret Service agents who are part of a permanent eight-man detail. They too wore Western clothes with pinty-toed boots and cowboy hats.

Protecting the President's son had been a fairly uneventful assignment for the agents until 14 months ago, when Ford packed his gear into a yellow jeep and headed for Montana.

Ford quickly developed a passion for broncobusting, bulldogging and calf roping. The agents once followed him into Montana's Scapegoat Mountains to study grizzly bears with a professor from the University of Montana, an area so remote that mail and supplies were carried in every 10 days by mule and pack horse.

Late last summer they went with him to San Diego (Calif.) Country Estates where Casey Tibbs, six-time saddle bronc world champion, has a rodeo school.

After a few lessons, it was Ford's turn to ride a bronc. Two experienced riders had just been hurled to the ground, and the Secret Service agents watched uneasily as Ford lowered himself from the chute onto the horse. For five seconds he held on for dear life until he was thrown to the ground. He wasn't hurt.

Casey Tibbs, who accompanied Ford to the horse show, agreed: "He was good. Real good. Extra good in ranch work and he really wanted to learn rodeo stuff. I didn't encourage him to start with, and when his lessons were over I told him to think about it and if he was still interested, to come back."

"But I looked at the slow-motion film we had on him and I saw where he could really make it. I think he wants to. You can tell right off if a guy has it. They have to have the will to win, and Steve ain't afraid of a damned thing. He has a lot of courage. Nothing scares him and that is unusual for someone who hasn't been around rodeos all his life."

Ford was modest about his skills. "I've just been doing a little cowboyin' here and there." He sat down on a box in a tent and took off his hat. It would not have been out of character if his next words had been "Howdy, ma'am." He lit another cigaret. Hatless, he looked more his age, his blond hair cut to 2 inches over all.

He had planned to follow brother Jack, 23, as a forestry major at Utah State, but when he enrolled this fall he switched to a major in animal science. He would like to become a ranch foreman.

While in Montana and Utah he picked up the drawl and cowboy mannerisms. "It was all those ol' cowboys in Utah I spent time with," he said. "You get to talkin' with them and they're pretty slow and easy goin'."

He had a little trouble relating to their music, his own taste running to hard rock and old Chicago blues. "I'm not too familiar with those country singers' names," he said. "But you ride with a cowboy down the road and he's got his radio tuned to Roy Clark and people like that. It's kind of good music, but I don't think I could listen to it all the time."

After learning to ride, Ford got his own horse. "I got to break her and she was kind of fun when I got to workin' her," he said. "I never knew what she was gonna do. It was kind of like sittin' on a deg of dynamite — you never knew if it would blow up on you. It was kind of a good feelin'."

"Then I got in touch with Casey Tibbs and he invited me down for a trial ride. I told him I'd come if he'd give me a little rodeo coachin'. He was a little worried about gettin' me on a bronc, but I finally talked him into it and did a

"Just to climb over that chute and get on that bronc was kind of an ego thing. You have to tell yourself there is a 1,200-pound horse and a 175-pound cowboy and who has the odds? You tell yourself you have the odds and it is an ego thing to feel you can beat this horse. I never had so much adrenaline flowing in my body in my life. It was great."

"You know, you get bucked off and hit the ground pretty hard, but you don't think you can get hurt, 'cause I never felt it hitting the ground. Your whole body gets so pumped up and it is a big ego thing."

"You've got to tell yourself you're in control. I only rode two buckin' horses and Casey told me to think about whether I wanted to do it. It has been four months since I've been on a bronc and when I see pictures I am real anxious to get back on one."

"My mother is not really crazy about this. My dad, I asked him one time what he thought of me doing some rodeo and he said, 'Well, I don't mind you riding horses. I just don't want you to try to make a living at it.' I don't think he minds so much, but my mother worries. You know how mothers are."

He soft-pedals the idea of a rodeo career, although it's clear he'd love to try it.

"Rodeo is a pretty short-lived career," he said. "Once you hit 25 you get kind of burned out and broken up unless you are in ropin' events or doggin'. But bronc riders are pretty beat up. I'd like to try it, but I don't have the experience yet. I'd like to work with Casey some more and maybe get a job workin' for a rodeo producer or something like that so I could do some ridin'."

"I really like the people in rodeo. They're just pretty easygoin' people who take it day to day. That's about all they can do. You go from this rodeo to the next one, if you have the money. If you don't have the money, you don't go."

... And Jack, the White House inmate

By TOM ZITO

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "A nice place to visit," says Jack Ford, scraping a strikeanywhere match across the bottom of his antique drawer and lighting the next of a continuing series of Marlboros. "But you wouldn't want to live here. And frankly, I'd just as soon have it all over tomorrow."

Can it be that one of his high school classmates is accurate in dubbing him "prisoner of the White House?"

Images and incidents in his room and elsewhere:

Currier and Ives snow scene over his Victorian wooden bed; stereo system pumping Steve Miller Band's "Gangster of Love" through expensive speakers; Schumacher-Williamsburg red and white floral print curtains; color TV turned on but without a picture; forestry books and Herman Hesse novels on stair rail and desk; clothes crowded into closet added to room as afterthought; white chenille bedspread; aquarium filled with tropical fish ("Gonna feed some to a friend's piranha," he says. Potted plants all over the room; large brown corrugated carton filled with record albums, mostly rock; old photographic print of an Indian chief; laundry billtopping a pile of desk debris; portrait of the President by Andy Warhol; checks on bed imprinted: "John G. Ford, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D. C., tel-456-1414" ((Picture it: "Can I see your driver's permit and one credit card, young man?"); photo of Mick Jagger inscribed "Something nice for Jack Ford."

GRAB: LEATHER moccasins, one ripped down the rear seam; brown corduroy slacks; brown checked shirt; brownish tinted lenses in his glasses.

Out of the bedroom, beyond a dresser stuffed with Lacoste shirts, through a 40-yard-long living room with comfortable red, green and white upholstered chairs, ("Barron's College Entrance Exam" prep book on an end table), past sister Susan's room (canopied bed with green and yellow floral print, stuffed animals), into the family dining room ("This is where Nixon told his family he was going to resign.")

TV is beaming out daytime quiz show and sister Susan and boyfriend Brian McCartney are cuddled up on the rug. "Have to take Liberty out for a walk." (Those pesky news-dominating pups are behind a door marked "Do Not Disturb.") Past a tuxedoed butler, Past Secret Service agents, out to south lawn.

"Let me ask you something," says Jack Ford, the first bachelor in the White House since the creation of the Secret Service. "How'd you like to go out drinking with two 55-year-old agents on your tail? I went camping with a friend last month in Minnesota. There are the two of us out in the middle of the wilderness, only I know that right over the hill is a circle of eight agents with their radios plugged directly into Washington. Seriously, I've been wondering whether it's an infringement on my constitutional rights. What a case that would be. They really don't worry about whether I get shot. It's just for the peace of mind of the President, so that he doesn't have to worry about his kids."

What worries Jack Ford these days is the gap between his self-image and the media's projection of his image — an image formed of events ranging from association with rock personalities like Bianca Jagger to off-hand remarks about marijuana.

"I just don't believe how people jump on the little things I say and do," he says. "It's depressing enough to make me want to get the hell out of Washington and become a total recluse."

LAST DECEMBER Jack Ford made one of his first visits to his parents' new home on Pennsylvania Avenue. A few days later his picture was in most of the country's newspapers — introducing former Beatle George Harrison to the President in the Oval Office.

Meeting a Beatle, or, as he eventually did, dining with the wife of Mick Jagger, would be normal fantasies for any 23-year-old rock 'n' roll fan. But because he is the President's son and consequently can have some of his fantasies come true, Jack Ford has abruptly found himself associated with the glamour circuit. This new image — however underserved it may seem — baffles a lot of his old friends. "I saw pictures of Ford with Bianca Jagger," says one high school crony, "and I thought to myself, 'I thought he wanted to be a forest ranger.' I was surprised, but I wouldn't have minded if it had happened to me."

White House photographer David Hume Kennerly — whose own associations with people like Candice Bergen may explain his Secret Service appellation "Hot Shot" — introduced Ford to the New York scene. An evening with Andy Warhol led to a transcribed conversation with Jack Ford in Warhol's "Interview" magazine — and consequent White House embarrassment: With the interview were photos made in the Lincoln Bedroom of Jack Ford with his arms around Bianca Jagger.

The photos raised an obvious question: whether Ford, in his youth and inexperience, and because of his White House association, had been used for publicity purposes.

"I guess so," he says in retrospect. "I guess I'm really surprised that so much attention was paid to the pictures, and so little to what I said." In course of the conversation, for example, Ford is told that he "won the Duchess of Windsor's heart (when he was in Europe with the President this summer)," and he replies:

"IT IS ALL very difficult for me — even this setting here, meeting Andy and meeting Bianca. And so forth. Not having been a public figure at all, and the only public figures I necessarily had contact with were politicians, who don't impress me all that..."

Jack Ford was raised in suburban Alexandria, Va. The son of the House Minority Leader, he grew up in a political family run primarily by his mother, although teachers at T.C. Williams High School recall Gerald Ford's taking a firm, active interest in the boy: attending PTA meetings; turning out for all his son's football games; speaking to service organizations at the school.

"The students knew Jack was," says Hollis Williams, Ford's physics teacher, "but they respected him for himself, not because of his father."

"Jack was always aware that people were watching him," says Kate Hagen, a former girl friend. "When I first got to know him, he'd say, 'Don't believe everything people tell you about me.' People always used to say he was a flirt. And he'd come to me and say, 'Doesn't that bother you, hearing that?' It didn't bother me. He was so good-looking."

"He was always very inquisitive about religion. (Ford, raised in the Episcopal Church, considers himself "truly religious, firmly in the Judeo-Christian tradition.") We'd sit around for hours and he'd ask me about being brought up as a Catholic. Some people used to think Jack only cared about himself. When he was a senior, he was in his Jeep on the way to have his football team picture made. Somebody in front of him had an accident and he stayed with her until the ambulance came, and missed the picture. That doesn't sound like much, but I think it's a good example of his real sentiments."

"Jack was always quite a ladies' man," says Hagen's brother Brett, Ford's best friend in high school.

FORD CONSIDERS this an exaggeration. "I really think I was pretty straight with girls in high school," he says. "Just normal dating — go with one girl for a few months, and then someone else."

Nixon offers to discuss CIA before Senate committee

The Washington Post reported that Nixon has offered to testify before the Senate Intelligence Committee on his dealings with the Central Intelligence Agency and other issues under restrictive conditions to be considered by the Senate Intelligence Committee next week.

A committee official said Tuesday night that the proposed restrictions were laid down in a letter to the committee received Nov. 13 from Nixon's lawyer, Herbert J. Miller Jr.

The committee ostensibly began dickered for the former President's testimony last summer amid hints that a subpoena ultimately might be necessary.

Nixon's lawyers, however, could always contest a subpoena in the courts; the failure to resolve the issue before this could make litigation impractical. With the committee scheduled to complete its work by the end of February, some staff members reportedly favor accepting the restrictions the former President has laid down as the only way to secure his testimony at this point.

Reached in Idaho Tuesday night, Committee Chairman Frank Church D-Idaho, said, however, that he had "serious reservations" about the proposal and said he suspected that the 11-member committee would want to be present at any questioning of the former president instead of the limited delegation that Nixon's attorneys had proposed.

The proposed restrictions for Nixon's deposition include: —Testifying before the ranking members of the committee such as Church and Vice Chairman John Tower R-Tex., at the Nixon home in San Clemente, Calif. —An initial time limit of four hours, although this could be extended by mutual agreement. —The committee's agreement that the former President is testifying voluntarily. This would tacitly preserve Nixon's contention that the doctrine of executive privilege still protects him from being forced to testify. —One committee official said Nixon also appeared to be choosing to invoke the right to invoke executive privilege whenever he chooses to block off a certain line of questioning.

Church said he had not yet had a chance to study the proposal carefully, but said it appeared to him to be a case of "Nixon's lawyers engaging in a duel with the committee."

As ranking-GOP member on the committee, Tower reportedly considers the Nixon offer reasonable and favors accepting it.

Miller refused Tuesday night to comment on the proposal.

The Church committee has been seeking Nixon's testimony on a wide range of issues, from his short-lived approval in 1970 of the so-called Huston plan for spying on domestic dissidents to covert CIA operations in Chile directed against the late Salvador Allende.

According to the committee's interim report last week on CIA assassination scheming, Nixon personally issued the order that touched off an intense political espionage campaign against Allende in 1970.

Nixon was also said to be willing to testify on all other issues under the committee's jurisdiction, such as "as proprieties by the FBI and domestic spying by the CIA, and reportedly would offer his views on how to reform the intelligence community and bring it under tighter control.

A Senate committee official also said that while there would be no restriction as such on the topics that might be discussed, the former president could set a practical limit by simply refusing to continue past the four-hour mark.

The question of whether Nixon's testimony would ever be made public was also left unsettled with attorney Miller suggesting only that this issue be subject to further negotiation.

White opposed

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Richard C. White, D-El Paso, has picked up a challenger for renomination in next May's party primary.

Jack Gregory, owner of an El Paso travel agency, said in declaring his candidacy Tuesday that White "has lost contact with the people he was elected to represent."

Gregory pledged to run a grass-roots campaign and said he would not spend more than $25,000.

Judges delay final decision on Texas mail vote until Dec. 6

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A three-judge federal court has delayed until Dec. 6 a final decision on whether to prohibit the mailing of voter registration forms to Texas voters.

The court said Tuesday it would continue a temporary injunction blocking the mailing until it conducts a hearing on a permanent injunction Dec. 6. The court said, however, the injunction would be void if the U. S. Justice Department approves the new Texas law.

David Richards, TCU lawyer, told reporters the main reason for filing the suit "was to get the attention. It had then begun to look like they were never going to submit it."

The measure requires county tax assessor-collectors to mail new registration forms to his registration merely each registered voter. The mailings would be three years. A number of voters were mistakenly removed from the rolls through that system, he said.

"Records around the state were in such disrepair that people didn't know whether they were eligible to vote or not," White said, while the new law would cure that problem by requiring re-registration by mail every two years.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — An Egyptian, Mostafa Kamal Tolba, was named Monday to succeed a Canadian, Maurice Strong, as executive director of the U.N. Environment Program with headquarters in Nairobi, Kenya.

Indian official wounded

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A gang of armed men shot and seriously wounded India's high commissioner to Bangladesh in Dacca today, the Indian government announced.

A spokesman for the foreign ministry said four of the attackers were killed and two others were wounded.

The Indian official, Samar Sen, was shot in the right shoulder. The government was sending a special plane with medical personnel to Dacca, the capital of Bangladesh, to bring him to New Delhi.

"The government of India has asked the government of Bangladesh to institute an immediate inquiry," the Indian spokesman said.

He charged that India had been the target of "insidious and mischievous propaganda" in Bangladesh for weeks.

Kilgore Rangerettes: more than sex, beauty

By ROB WOOD

KILGORE, Tex. (AP) — Gussie Nell Davis bounced to the top row of the stadium, dashed down to yell some instructions to her Kilgore Junior College Rangerettes, and without a pause to catch her breath said, "You want to know my age, Mister, I am ageless."

Gussie has been director of the high-kicking, fast-stepping, dancing Rangerettes for 35 years and she says she stays young "by being around the young."

The Rangerettes are a group of girls, most of them in their teens, who have performed throughout the continental United States, in South America, Hong Kong, Korea, Hawaii and other spots where acts like theirs are seldom seen.

JEAN HALE, public information director for the school, said in a recent interview, "There's no way to tell the male-female ratio now, but one does attract the other."

Mrs. Hale was asked if there had been any criticism from the feminist movements recently and she said, "There is no sexual exploitation. These are not show girls. They wear modest costumes and it gives them the excitement of the glamorous, and then they are ready to settle down."

Mrs. Hale said there are no scholarships given for the Rangerettes but "we still have five applicants for every one available position."

DURING THE tryout period, the competition is tough, and when the winners are announced there are a lot of tears shed, and a lot of sad faces and disappointed girls.

But as Gussie said, "We believe the girls must do it on their own. They need to be physically ready and there's nothing I can find wrong with competition."

The Rangerettes must maintain a "C" average to remain on the unit and must spend at least nine hours a week in practice.

WHEN GUSSIE puts the words on the girls for some sloppy kick or a stumbling step, the Rangerettes always answer, "Thank you Miss Davis."

Gussie explained, "When you thank someone for pointing out an error, you lose your hostility and you are not angry and you don't hold a grudge."

The Rangerettes, for the most part are pretty things with shapely bodies, but performance and ability rates above looks.

And, Gussie Davis attempts to do more than field a drill team of near perfection. She runs a finishing school, teaching poise, grooming, etiquette and personality.

THE GIRLS, who have performed on television, throughout the nation and in foreign lands, at the Cotton Bowl football game every year since 1951, may be to some nothing more than a collection of pretty faces and sexy legs.

It's difficult to accept that when the interviews are over and picture-taking session finished, and the practice and ballerina exercises completed, and all 65 give one loud yell, "We love you Associated Press."

Mathias won't run as Republican

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland says he will run as an independent or a third party candidate rather than as a Republican if he decides to enter the 1976 presidential race.

The Republican senator had considered a possible GOP candidacy but said Tuesday he dropped the idea of challenging President Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan in primary elections because such a challenge might erode the President's chances for victory and might increase prospects of a rightward turn for the party.

"We need to pull the political balance back to the center," Mathias said in explaining to supporters his decision to run a campaign designed to attract both Democrats and Republicans if he chooses to run.

Tall City cage tournament opens Friday

The 8th annual Tall City Invitational Basketball Tournament gets underway at 4 p.m. Friday in the Lee High School Gymnasium with a class field of eight teams entered in this year's meet.

Lee won the title last year, beating Lubbock Monterey, 70-67 in overtime and Coach Paul Stueckler's Rebels have won the crown five out of the seven years it has been held.

Midland High won the championship in 1971 and 1972, beating Monterey both times in the finals. Lee sports a 1-0 record with a 64-48 victory over the Lubbock Coronado Mustangs in Lubbock last Friday while Midland brings a 1-3 mark into the tourney.

Joining Lee and Midland in this year's tourney are Monterey, El Paso Austin, Amarillo High, Monahans, Del Rio and El Paso Burges.

Lee beat Amarillo Palo Duro in the finals of the 1968 tourney and then beat Lubbock Coronado the following year while in 1970, the Maroon toppled Austin in the finals followed by Coach James Cagles' Pack which won two straight first place trophies.

Two years ago, Lee took an exciting 80-74 victory over a strong San Antonio Jefferson outfit that had two 6-8 players in its lineup.

Last year's crown by Lee was one of three that the Rebs won in chalking a 3-4 record and a trip to the state tourney.

Lee also won championships at Brownwood and Plainview long along with trophies for titles in bi-district and regional play and took Houston Kashmere three overtimes in the opening round of the AAAA state tourney before bowing, 52-47.

Back off last year's Lee outfit is 6-6

Junior Miller, District 5-4A's Most Valuable Player and he has some talent to go with him. The Rebels are labeled quick and play great defense.

Ernest Modkins and Bill Wiley, a pair of 6-3 seniors, return this time around for Cagle's Bulldogs who have lost to Del Rio, Berger and Pampa with their lone win over Class AAA Pecos.

Burges, always a strong team from the Border City, takes the place of El Paso Coronado this year while Amarillo replaces Amarillo Tascosa. Del Rio returns for a second straight appearance and already owns wins over Midland and San Angelo.

Monterey is always a crowd-pleaser and the Plainsmen took Lee into double overtime in the first round of the regionals last year at Abilene Christian in Abilene before losing to the Rebs.

El Paso Austin and Amarillo get the meet at 4 p.m. followed by the Burges-Monterey battle at 6 p.m. Midland tries Monahans in the 7:30 p.m. contest while Lee and Del Rio tangle in the featured 9 p.m. game.

Eight games are on tap for Saturday with the finals set for 9 p.m.

BATTLE SCENE

Welcome back Horned Frogs

BY TED BATTLES

FOR A couple of years, a good TCU man was hard to find.

Oh, we'd see Jim Lucas out for his daily jog. James "Doc" Dodson showed up on the Texas A&M bench at Lubbock earlier in the fall, although it must be admitted he hadn't gone so far as to wear a maroon slicker. And once in a while, there was Ted Fay, shrinking into the crowd after a Midland High game, but careful to identify himself as an ex-Bulldog coach.

However, Tuesday we saw a lot of old familiar Horned Frog faces at the Texas Sports Hall of Fame Fund-raising meeting and it was nice to welcome them back among the smiling.

MAYBE IT was that win over Rice last week that lifted the yolk of a 20-game losing streak. Just as likely, it was Davey O'Brien who coaxed them out of the shadows.

Fay was there—and D.G. "Donkey" Roberts and Woody Adams. Someone said Harold McClure and Don Looney were roaming around in the crowd. They all hail from days when the Horned Frogs were a respected football force. And even in their bad years, the Frogs were the kind of team that, like cockroaches, had a habit of falling into someone's undefeated season and spoiling it, as one famed coach once lamented.

Talk was about the nine-month unbeaten streak ahead for the Frogs, but O'Brien, who led TCU to its only national title in 1938, was optimistic that the worst was over.

"It's going to take a while yet but the program was in bad shape when Shofner (Coach Jim Shofner) took it over."

WHEN JOSEPH L'O'Neill, Jr., chairman of the West Texas Hall of Fame fund-raising drive, introduced Davey, he remarked, "On Dec. 1, some 35 years ago, Davey completed 33 passes against the Washington Redskins, which still may be an NFL record."

O'Brien assured Joe that the record had been "broken and broken several times. But with the Eagles of those days we were like TCU last year, we couldn't do anything else."

Davey recalled, "I was fortunate to have Don Looney as an end. He'd hang back after the huddle had broken and would say, 'To hell with the rest, I'll be open' and he was."

Davey grinned, "Don was a great team man."

An idea of how the game has changed since the 5-9 O'Brien led TCU to national fame is that the Frogs were considered a pass-happy team in those days. Yet Davey threw only 194 passes all year. That's about 194 of course, the fact that he had a .567 completion percentage and 20 of his 110 completions for 1,735 yards wound up in the opposition's end zone still makes it pretty impressive even today.

And when the modest O'Brien was asked whether anyone who had played both offense and defense in the NFL had broken his 33 completion mark in a single game, he had to confess, "No, I guess not."

MHS girls draw state meet foe

Gamecock cops honor

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The problems Jeff Grantz had Tuesday were a typical college student's problems—whether to drive to class or hitch a ride, how to pass the time in the afternoon.

He solved them—by walking and lounging around the athletic dormitory—as well as he solved more difficult problems on the football field last Saturday.

That was his last home football game and the last time he'd quarterback the South Carolina Gamecocks against arch-rival Clemson.

Grantz personally accounted for five touchdowns passing and another on a 19-yard run, leading South Carolina past Clemson 56-20.

For his effort, the 5-foot-11, 185-pound senior from Bel Air, Md., received college back of the week honors from The Associated Press.

He connected on nine of 12 passes for 158 yards, rushed 12 times for 122 yards, pushed his touchdown responsibility mark to 28 to top all collegians in the country, set a school record for scoring passes with 16 and didn't have to punt. Grantz handles that chore, too, but South Carolina scored eight of the nine times it had the ball and would have gone in the other time except for a penalty.

South Carolina finished the season with a 7-4 record and this week was invited to the Tangerine Bowl. Grantz has also been named to the East Squad for the Shrine Bowl at San Francisco Jan. 3.

Grantz admitted to being up for the Tigers, "a little more nervous than usual." Clemson walloped South Carolina last year.

Asked whether the effort was the best of his career, he said, "I really don't look at it as an individual effort but as an offensive team effort. The backs and the line all did a super job and it culminated in a super game."

"Their efforts made it probably the best offensive game I've ever participated in."

Grantz holds almost all the offensive records in South Carolina football now, including season total offense; game, season and career TD responsibility, and touchdowns scored in a season and career.

Sports Hall of Fame gets boost by O'Brien

With 45 pledges for $40,875, Midland was off to a sprinter's start in raising its share for the Texas Sports Hall of Fame building fund.

"That's an encouraging beginning," said Kenny Jastrow, co-chairman of the Tall City drive to provide a living shrine for former Texas athletic heroes. "The goal for the far West Texas area is $125,000 and Odessa, El Paso, and San Angelo are still to be worked."

Joseph L'O'Neill, Jr., general chairman for the overall West Texas push, introduced Davey O'Brien, former TCU quarterback-tailback, who was the guest speaker at the first drive report Tuesday at the Petroleum Club.

"Not only was Davey a unanimous All-American in 1938, he also was the only player to win the Heisman, Maxwell and Walter Camp trophies as the outstanding football player in the same year."

O'Brien said that even in his day, youngsters had their sports heroes "but today they carry more impact than ever, because of television exposure." He pointed out the Sports Hall of Fame not only will provide an exhibit place for past greats, but "the broad goals of the Hall will include sponsoring of events, training and research for ant athletes and athletics. And for promising athletes whose careers might be ended by injury, it also hopes to provide scholarships."

Although the Hall will be located in Grand Prairie, O'Brien called it an "all-Texas project."

The overall goal for the Hall of Fame building fund is $2,500,000, the major sum of which will be raised in the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolplex.

L.R. "Bob" French is chairman of the Midland drive while Jastrow and Murray Fasken are co-chairmen.

Solomon takes tennis victory

LONDON (AP) — The yearlong tennis Grand Prix has ended with a sensational success by Harold Solomon, who squeezed past fellow American Eddie Dibbs for a place in the Masters.

Solomon, from Silver Spring, Md., made it into the tournament by defeating Brian Gottfried 6-2, 6-4, 5-7, 6-1 in the final of the South African Open at Johannesburg. That earned him 80 points in the Grand Prix, five more than Dibbs, of Miami Beach, Fla.

The two Americans, alike in appearance and style, were vying for the last place in the Masters, which starts in Stockholm next Sunday.

The Grand Prix began with the Australian championships last Christmas and has been spread over the tournament circuit through 1975. The top eight qualify for the $100,000 Masters, the climax of the year's international circuit.

Solomon actually finished ninth, but got a place in the Masters because Jimmy Connors, who finished sixth, decided not to compete in Stockholm.

Jay starts for Aggies on Friday

By The Associated Press
Texas A&M Coach Emory Bellard named senior Mike Jay Tuesday as his starting quarterback for Friday's Southwest Conference football showdown with Texas while the Longhorn quarterback situation became clearer with Marty Akins running well.

Jay got the nod over junior David Shipman of Odessa Permian who suffered a knee injury three weeks ago against Southern Methodist.

"David Shipman is well and is looking good in practice, but he has missed three weeks' work," said Texas A&M Coach Emory Bellard. "We're going into the game to play both Jay and Shipman but Mike will start."

Except for guard-tackle Craig Glendenning, who has a strained knee, the Aggies are healthy.

Texas fullback Earl Campbell missed Tuesday's workout with fluid on his abdomen. Doctors drained the fluid away and Longhorn Coach Darrell Royal said "We're not concerned about his playing. It was strictly a precautionary measure."

Texas quarterback Marty Akins, the master of the Wishbone-T option who had been troubled with a knee injury, ran well in practice.

"Akins was running better today than yesterday," said a Longhorn spokesman.

Akins will be the starting quarterback if his knee continues to improve with freshman Ted Constanzo of San Antonio waiting in the wings.

"Texas will run the same offense, regardless of whether they have Marty Akins or Constanzo at quarterback," said Bellard. "It's quite obvious they'd rather have Akins, but it makes no difference in our preparations."

There was one other note Tuesday. The kickoff was moved from 1:50 p.m. to 2 p.m. at the request of ABC-TV which wanted to run a 30-minute pregame show rather than 20 minutes.

Earl Campbell has two injured elbows AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Texas fullback Earl Campbell missed Tuesday's workout for Friday's Southwest Conference game against Texas A&M with fluid on both elbows, but Longhorn Coach Darrell Royal said "We're not concerned about his playing."

Quarterback Marty Akins ran well in practice and was almost a certain starter for the game.

Thanksgiving

A tradition for more than 350 years

This Thanksgiving, as we carve the turkey and enjoy the foods of the harvest season, let us remember to be thankful for the freedom we enjoy. And, as we approach the 200th anniversary of the United States of America, let us pay a special tribute to the Pilgrims of the Massachusetts Colony and our other forefathers who came to the New World in search of freedom. The Pilgrims of New England established the tradition of Thanksgiving even though their first years in the New World were rough and the harvest was small. They were thankful for their freedom and for the opportunity to create a colony in a new land, carving a community from the wilderness. We should always remember these brave settlers, for it was they who set the foundations for freedom upon which our country is built.

The following firms invite you to join them in giving thanks for all we have in America...
