THE LUBBOCK COUNTRY IS OK

FINE SEASON IN THE GROUND AND THE FARMERS AND CATTLEMEN ARE FEELING FINE OVER PROSPECTS

MORE RAIN THIS WEEK HELPS RANGE CONDITIONS

Planting is All the Rage on the Farm and a Large Acreage of All the Crops Commonly Raised in This Country Will Be Planted This Year—Range Conditions Excellent.

The Lubbock country looks good! The entire South Plains is face to face with the best crop prospects that we have had for a number of years. In the winter months good rains fell and put a deep season in the ground, thus enabling the farmers to prepare their land, which they did, then the spring rains came earlier than usual, putting an excellent season in the ground.

There has been a great amount of seed planted and some of it is coming up; in fact, there is quite a lot of the crops already up, while a still greater amount is being planted. The acreage this year will far exceed that of any previous year in nearly every variety of crops usually raised in this section. This is true of those who have been farming here for a number of years, and there are many who are farming this year who have not been heretofore, hence the increased acreage.

The rain this week will help the range conditions which are already fine, but the additional moisture will keep the rapidly growing vegetation at its best and insure ideal range conditions within a very short time. The past few days have been real cool, which has been detrimental to a certain extent to growing crops, as very little growth can be put on at such a low temperature. However, at this season of the year, such cool weather is not expected to last long and will likely soon be over, followed by better growing weather; some more of those ideal days for which the Lubbock country is famous.

The people of the South Plains are looking forward to one of the best years in the history of the country, and it looks very much like their fondest anticipations will be realized.

The Avancee is optimistic; it's our nature, and we believe that the close of the year will find us on the top round of the ladder of prosperity. Our farmers and ranchers will be well compensated for their labor, and, as the natural consequence, Lubbock—the city of the South Plains—will reap her share of the benefits. Already, we hear talk of new brick business houses, and a number of new cottages, as well as a few fine residence buildings. We are in the swim! Come in, the water is fine.

IN MEMORIAM

Resolutions On Death of R. A. Barclay—Yellow House Lodge, No. 841, A. F. & A. M.

Whereas, All that was mortal of our deceased brother, R. A. Barclay, has been consigned to the silent tomb, and his serene spirit returned unto God who gave it; and,

Whereas, The members of the Masonic Lodge of Lubbock mourn the loss of their departed brother and desire to give expression to their grief and to extend consolation to the sorrowing widow and family; and,

Whereas, The members of this order feel, prompted by the requirements of propriety to record their profound admiration and esteem for his noble manhood and Masonic and Christian character and service; therefore,

BE IT RESOLVED, That there be placed on record the following testimonials to his exalted character:

Brother R. A. Barclay was a devoted Christian gentleman, always conscious of his duty to God and his fellow man, ever ready to respond to the right and resist the wrong; he was an humble worshiper at the foot of the cross. Brother Barclay was one of the pillars of the Baptist church, and no one ever doubted the sincerity of his faith, or the firmness of his convictions.

As a citizen, he was supported by a moral courage that knew no fear; and in the daily test of his actions and relations to his fellow man he knew and desired no other guide than justice and wisdom. He was a man of unusually strong character—no one ever questioned where Brother Barclay stood, on a moral issue.

As a friend, he was steadfast, loyal, kind and considerate. No malice ever possessed his heart, no revenge ever entered his mind. His life was one of correct dignity and true manhood. He was patient, modest and kind, and his whole life was one worthy of emulation.

As a member of the Masonic Lodge, he was ever faithful and obedient to the principles of the order. He was unwavering in his loyalty to the fraternity and devoutly loved it, because based on the teachings of the Bible. He was a worthy brother, respected and revered by the entire lodge, who deplore the loss of his exemplary life.

The members of this lodge deeply mourn the loss of their brother, and they here extend to the broken-hearted wife, niece and nephew, their unfeigned sympathy, in token of their love and respect for his life, and in memory to his name. It is resolved by the lodge, that these expressions be perpetuated on the minutes of the lodge, and that a copy hereof be furnished to the brother's family.

MEXICAN INVASION AND DISEASE

Danger of Heavy Loss in American Army is Not Expected by Doctors Who Have Studied Question

The possibility of war with Mexico has been before our people for some time. If a general war occurs, it will mean the invasion of Mexican territory.

The question naturally arises, What are the disease dangers which will confront American soldiers in Mexico? It has long since passed into a truism that in war, disease kills more than bullets. Will this prove true in a Mexican war? The increased knowledge of preventive medicine since the Spanish war has encouraged the belief that the mortality from disease will be materially lessened. To what extent is this belief justified and what are the diseases from which our troops may suffer in a tropical country and from which they should be protected? These questions which probably have been in the minds of our people during the last few weeks, are answered in a recent issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Aside from the ordinary diseases which might prevail among any body of two or three hundred thousand men, there are certain diseases to which soldiers in camp and in the field are particularly exposed. These are especially small-pox, typhoid fever and dysentery. Small-pox may be divested, as any troops sent into Mexico will be immune from this disease through vaccination. Typhoid fever, in the past, has been the awful scourge of military camps. The appalling experience of the Spanish-American war has not been forgotten by our people; the record of 20,000 cases of typhoid in the army in six months, produced an impression which can never be obliterated. But since then progress in preventive medicine has made, and vaccination against typhoid is a result. Antityphoid inoculation has been subject to rigorous tests on a large scale in the army during the past two years, with the result that in 1913, out of 96,000 men at home and abroad, there was only one single case of typhoid fever among the inoculated, a record that will be regarded as a triumph for preventive medicine. It is believed that the army surgeon now has a weapon against typhoid that will make the next war unique in this regard. Every officer and man now in the United States army and navy is practically safe against this disease, and each recruit will be inoculated at the time he is sworn into the service. The next campaign in which the United States army will participate will be a practical test of typhoid prophylaxis on a large scale. That it will prove the value of inoculation and will reduce warfare to its most horrible accompaniment, there is little doubt.

The dysentery, can be divided into those due to bacterial invasion and those caused by protozoans in foods. While the water and food of the soldiers will be more carefully guarded than ever before, a certain amount of intestinal disorder will be inevitable. It can be predicted, however, that the nation will be spared a repetition of the "embalmed beef" scandals of 1898. The work of the general staff of the army, the development of departmental officers of high efficiency and the enormous amount of publicity on pure food that has taken place in the last decade, ought to insure the American soldiers of a wholesome food supply. After the experience and warning of the past, the American people will hold to a strict accountability anyone responsible for supplying the army with food materials which are not in every way up to the standard.

Of the diseases peculiar to tropical and semi-civilized countries, yellow fever, malaria, bubonic plague, cholera and typhus must be considered. The brilliant work of the last 15 years in demonstrating the transmission of malaria and yellow fever by the mosquito, has put our army and navy surgeons and sanitarians in possession of all the knowledge needed to control these diseases. The convincing demonstration of the practicability of their control given by Gen. Gorgas in the Panama Canal zone has proved that malaria and yellow fever can be controlled completely in settled communities. Where men are living in fixed habitations, which can be screened, and where all possible breeding places of mosquitos for a necessary distance can be destroyed, the complete eradication of these two diseases is possible. It remains to be seen, however, what methods can be developed for preventing mosquito-infection among soldiers in the field. Mosquito nets can, of course be carried, and patients in the field and hospitals can be protected, as well as troops in barracks or permanent quarters. But how about the troops in the field, scouting parties, pickets and outposts? Undoubtedly, American ingenuity will devise methods to meet the needs, and the dangers of these two diseases will be greatly diminished, although occasional cases may be unavoidable. Epidemics, however, will be practically impossible.

Cholera being borne through water, milk, flies and human carriers, can be prevented only through cleanliness and by maintaining the purity of water supplies. It is not today a particularly dangerous possibility, as it can enter Mexico only by way of the seaports, most of which in case of a campaign, would soon be in the hands of the navy and under quarantine regulations.

Regarding typhus fever, it is a strange coincidence that the work of Ricketts, by which he demonstrated at the loss of his own life, that the body louse is the carrier of this disease, was done at Mexico City, where he went to carry on his investigations, on account of the prevalence of typhus among the lower class of Mexicans. This disease, which in past centuries caused enormous loss of life in camps and on shipboard, is limited in its danger and can easily be prevented by avoiding dirty dwellings and contact with dirty individuals. There is as yet no known method of prevention except the avoidance of infection. It is probable that among any large number of soldiers in Mexico, a few cases of this disease will develop.

Bubonic plague is epidemic in many of the nearby South American ports. It would probably be a constant danger in the Mexican seaports. Fortunately, it would be confined largely to the seaports and the large towns. An army in the field, living in tents on the bare ground, would be practically safe from it. Probably one of the first measures inaugurated by our medical officers on taking possession of a Mexican seaport would be a campaign of rat extermination, as this animal has been shown to be responsible for the plague propagation.

BURY SOLDIERS AND MARINES

Great Assemblage at Navy Yards to Meet Funeral Ship Montana That Bore Dead Soldiers

New York, May 11.—Honor was paid here today to the 17 bluejackets and marines who died at Vera Cruz. With President Wilson and Secretary of the Navy Daniels as the chief mourners, and with military pomp, it is estimated that more than a million people joined in the rites. Broadway was jammed.

The presence of President Wilson in the parade surprised the mourners. It was reported that he would only appear at the memorial services in the Navy yard.

Great Floral Wreaths

The bodies were taken from the funeral ship Montana and placed on gun carriages. Sailors of the Montana, Wyoming, and nine regiments of the National Guard formed the escort. The procession stopped momentarily at the City Hall, where Mayor Mitchell delivered a short address. Great wreaths of orchids and bay leaves were placed on the caisson bearing New York's dead.

Even the elements themselves were hushed. As the President and thousands of spectators stood bareheaded about the flag-draped coffin, the air was so oppressive that first at half past four, one marine fainted, from the oppressive heat.

Profound Grief for the Dead

President Wilson said to the living soldiers about the coffins: "I hope to God none of you will ever join this list of the dead. We have gone down to Mexico to serve mankind, if we find a way. We don't want to fight Mexicans. We want to serve them."

"I know the feeling which characterizes the whole nation at this hour. They cannot be expressed in terms of oratory. For my own part, I have a singular mixture; uppermost is a feeling of profound grief that these lads had to go to their death. There is also a thrill of pride, and a touch of envy for those who are permitted to do their duty so quietly and nobly."

"War is only a dramatic representation of a thousand forms of duty. I never went into battle; I was never under fire, but I fancy there are some things just as hard to do as to go under fire. It is just as hard, I think, to do your duty when men are sneering at you as when they shoot. When they shoot at you, they can take your natural life; but when they sneer at you, they can wound your heart."

President Wilson indicated that the nation is ready, if need be, to make further sacrifices for the same cause.

A LUBBOCK COUNTY HOME

The editor visited the home of his old friends, Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Harrett, who have recently moved to Lubbock county, while he was in Lubbock this week. They have moved to their recently purchased place, out at Shalwater, on the Texas Cut-off, 10 miles from Lubbock. They are milking some 15 or 20 cows, mostly Jerseys, and using a large-size Sharples separator and shipping cream twice a week to the cream factory at Lubbock in connection they have a nice stock of groceries, and are running the postoffice at that place. They live in a progressive community and have fertile land, and seem to be contented and happy. With such a combination, they can't help being happy.—Terry County Herald.

WAR BY ANY OTHER NAME

Nobody wants war with Mexico, but the end of people want to do something or other that would be war, yet they would call it by some other name. Such legal and moral confusion has many times arisen. It is at the bottom of the attempt to make out the possibility of such a thing as a "pacific blockade." This is in reality very much the same as saying a "loving crack over the head," or a "friendly" shooting. So, today, in our Mexican trouble, certain persons would invent smooth-sounding names for tough things. They would not begin hostilities against Mexico, oh no! They would merely send a polite military expedition into Mexican territory. They would have 1,000 American marines set out for Mexico City with every profestation of friendship. Governor Colquitt, of Texas, would dispatch a force of rangers across the river Rio Grande, to bring back the body of an American citizen who had been hanged on Mexican soil, and, incidentally, we presume, to teach the Mexicans to know their place. That this would be warlike does not seem to occur to Gov. Colquitt. He seems to think of it as a neighborly visit.

This drawing back from the blunt naming of acts in accordance with their harsh reality, is perhaps creditable to the hearts of those who do it. They do not like to think of war outright. The humane sentiment of their age is strong upon them. A battle field would be as ghastly a sight to them as to any of us; and so they resort to all kinds of phrases and masked descriptions implying that they do not intend to march the country into a bloody war. But however amiable may be this shrinking from so much as speaking of horrid brutalities, it does not argue well for the reasoning powers of those who display it. We may say a good word for their hearts, but we cannot retain much respect for their heads, for there is no use trying to escape the hard facts, or in seeking to sprinkle rosewater over human shambles. Gen. Sherman's definition cannot be at all amended, so that war is a place we do not like to mention. And if it acts of war are acts of war, no matter what we fastidiously call them.

It is in this form, unpleasant but unescapable, that the problem forces itself upon President Wilson. Others may talk loosely, he cannot. Impulsive gentlemen in congress or out of it may propose fantastic schemes to settle Mexico's hash, all of them implying armed coercion, though all of them are described as not at all tantamount to war, but the President has to look at things as they are. For him, international law still exists, even if others ignore it. The rights of nations are realities to a man who is acutely aware that he is dealing with them, and that they are sensitive and may become explosive.

Now, all this is, we do not question, the reason why Mr. Wilson took occasion to let the newspaper correspondents know that he is inflexibly opposed to all these near-war measures. He, as President, and as Commander-in-Chief, must sharply discriminate between what can be done by diplomatic representations couched in urgent language, though these may still ought to be, and what may have to be done by arms. The two cannot be mixed up. Bayonets remain bayonets, even when festooned with flowers.

In this attitude President Wilson is clearly right. His Mexican policy, as a whole, and up to the present time, cannot be called a success in the sense that it has achieved the results desired. That any other peaceful policy than the one he has pursued, however, would have worked any better, it would be impossible to prove. But Mr. Wilson's course with Mexico has at least been highly successful thus far in one important respect. It has avoided war. It has tended to calm and not to infuriate the American people. It has brought the country into close and good relations with European powers, and paved the way for a perfect understanding as to the ultimate steps to be taken, when the time comes to take them. And, accordingly, the President is wholly correct in refusing to countenance proposals which would infallibly mean that we should blunder into war. If war must come, as a last dread resort, it is for our government to face it with open eyes. It is not a thing to be tricked into. We should be guilty of incredible folly if we were to make experiment of some of the disguised war measures put forward by happy-thought statesmen and haphazard newspapermen, thinking that they might safely be toyed with, and then find that they plunged us into a woeful and desolating struggle.

President Wilson is to be thanked for being, in all this business, a cool and firm executive. But he is, perhaps, more to be thanked, just now, for being a clear thinker. He refuses to define black as white, or as a nice shade of gray. He knows what peace is, and what war is, and he will not confuse the two. Through fancy names, he pierces to the realities behind them; and will not admit that war would smell as sweet if we could only call it something else.

SWEET CLOVER

The Kansas Experiment Station, in a recent publication makes it plain that sweet-clover, a hitherto neglected plant, despised as a pernicious weed, has very considerable agricultural value. It is stated that as a soil improver it is unexcelled; for pasturing purposes, it has considerable value; and as a forage crop it can be utilized to good advantage where alfalfa or red clover cannot be successfully grown.

Attention is called to the fact that there are several varieties of sweet clover, of which the common white sweet clover and the large biennial yellow sweet clover are the most important. The white variety is generally to be preferred for farm purposes, although the biennial yellow is sometimes preferred, where production of hay is desired.

Sweet clover is adapted to a wide variety of soils; and while it does best on good soils, it will make a satisfactory growth on very poor soils. Grown on good soil and properly handled, it makes a fair quality of hay, which, in many cases, may be substituted with advantage for the more valuable alfalfa and clover hay. In actual nutritive constituents, it is practically equal to these. It will make an excellent pasture for cattle, sheep, horses, and hogs, and for this purpose may be profitably grown on very poor and rough land.

For quick results in improving the soil, sweet clover is superior to most other crops. Its ability to thrive well on soils lacking in humus or otherwise badly run down, makes it especially valuable for this purpose. Like alfalfa, cowpeas and other legumes, it has the ability to obtain nitrogen from the air by means of the nitrogen gathering bacteria which live in tubercles on the roots of the plants, thus adding much nitrogen to the soil in which it grows. When plowed under for green manure, or allowed to remain on the land, this crop is a very efficient one in building up the humus contents of the soil. The large looms which penetrate deeply break up in layers of the soil and add much humus there to when they decay, thus improving the physical condition of the soil to a considerable depth below the depth of plowing. Sandy as well as heavy clay and hardpan soils, which would not otherwise produce satisfactory crops, may be so improved in texture by growing sweet clover for a few years that they become quite productive. A weed has been defined as a plant which has not yet found its proper use. In view of present knowledge of its possibilities, sweet clover can no longer be regarded as a weed.—(Crop Correspondent U. LITTLE EDITORIALS ON BUSINESS

Trading By Parcel Post

The parcel post service is already one of the greatest conveniences the government has ever provided for the farmer. Just think what it means to yourself and your family!

Suppose you are busy making your crop and need a pair of shoes, overalls, or a new part for your broken cultivator. You may also have some eggs, chickens, or other produce to send to town, but can't spare the time to take them.

Simply get your produce for the R. F. D. carrier, and he will take it in for you. Write a note, instructing your dealer to pay you the market price and credit your account. Tell him to send you the things you want, and the carrier will deliver them to you next day.

You will save the time and trouble of going to town—a whole day, just when you need to make your land produce more money.

You can send produce to the dealer, and he can deliver merchandise to you in packages up to 50 pounds in weight. If the shipment is more than 50 pounds, simply make two or more packages. The postage on 50 pounds in the local zone is only 30c.

But this is not all. The country merchant now has advantages that were denied him before the parcel post was inaugurated.

If you want any article of merchandise that the local dealer does not regularly carry in stock, he can get it in two or three days by parcel post, direct from the manufacturer.

Conditions in the business world are changing rapidly; it will pay you to keep posted on these changes, so you can buy your merchandise where you can get the most for your money.

Community Co-Operation

Copyrighted Farm and Ranch-Holland's Magazine. By R. K. Phillips.

You doubtless realize the fact that the town and community in which you live is greatly benefited by the money you and your neighbors spend in the local markets. It is also safe to say that you realize that the community suffers, and that its growth is retarded by failure on the part of the people to patronize your local stores. Of course, you would not intentionally do anything that could in any way hurt you locally. In fact, the average person who sends or goes away for purchases instead of making them locally, figures that the small amount of their particular expenditures does not amount to much, and can do little if any harm. It is this line of reasoning on the part of the many, that causes so much buying away from home. An investigation of the amount of money sent or taken away from your community, annually, for the purchase of articles that could be bought to practically as good advantage locally, would greatly surprise you, as well as convince you that this money is kept in circulation at home, would do much to improve conditions in the way of better streets, sidewalks, schools, churches, etc. Of course, if your local merchants cannot, or do not, offer you as good merchandise, and at practically as good prices as can be found elsewhere, you could not be expected to patronize them. However, all things being equal, you owe it to yourself, and to your community to spend your money at home.

THE PROTECTOR OF BIRDS

President of Game and Fish Protective Association Says This an Important Matter in Texas

Now that the hunting season is over, let us check up results, and see how the matter of game and game-preservation stands in Texas. Thanks to the wide-spread campaign for bird protection waged during the last two years by the Texas Game and Fish Protective Association, also by a very wholesome publicity of the new Federal game laws, we believe that the protection of our birds and game was by 100 per cent better observed this year than in any year previous. Heretofore, there has been a merciless slaughter of all wild life that you have the first symptoms of a nervous system, and nervous people suffer in general their aches and pains, and suffer in silence. While the body is in this condition, it is a very serious trouble. If the patient should stop taking medicine, and abstain from alcohol or drugs, which may be the foundation of health, and just take the pure, strengthening, nourishment in the form of a Disulsion, it would create new blood, to pulsate through the veins, refresh their bodies, and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shut substitutes.

should put to shame a Christian civilization. Coast hunters in boats have shot ducks, geese and shore birds until their ammunition gave out, or they grew tired of the so-called sport. The writer has seen hundreds of birds that were thrown out of boats, floating in the bays. These ducks were of no use to the hunters. As a rule, the boats carry no ice. The birds cannot be sold nor expressed home, and only a limited number can be taken by hand on the train or sent by express, with the shipper on the same train. As for eating these wild birds, one duck a day will satisfy any hunter.

If there were any game wardens in Texas this year, the writer failed to meet one, or hear of one. We hunted for three weeks in several counties in South Texas, and along the coast in a boat. We had our license, bought in Bell county, but were never challenged. We met dozens of hunters who had no licenses, but who would have bought them, had they been required.

This putting of the hunter on the honor roll, is a yarn that should be told to the marines. A man is more apt to break the game laws than any other law on the statute books. When the excitement of the chase is on, there are few hunters that do not need a small regiment of game wardens to watch them. We will never have any increase in our game birds until we have plenty of game wardens where the game is most abundant.

Texas is a paradise for the breeding of game, and quail would be as plentiful almost as sparrows, had we any protection for them. The only solution is a hunter's license, imposed on every man, woman or boy that carries a gun. There must be no exception of individuals or counties. Many of the weak-kneed brethren at the last legislature tried to insert a clause in the new laws, exempting from the license a hunter shooting in his own county. That means, of course, that no one would have to pay the tax, as the license would be as good as it is at present. We have talked "hunters' license" all over Texas, and have yet to find a single man who is not favorable, or who wished his home county exempted.

So, hang your banner on specifications, Mr. Legislator, and get in line with the law, and order hunters and farmers who wish the birds protected, and who have more at stake in this big Texas than a little free bird meat.

This question is going to be brought up at the next meeting of the legislature, and there will be a thousand boosters back of it.

The whole state is crying for bird protection, and if the license is cut out the state will cut out shooting altogether.

Our legislators must not fly off on a tangent, in wanting to debar or tax the automatic and pump shotguns and pump rifles. These weapons have come to stay, just as the automobile has followed the ox-cart. It makes no difference, anyhow, if a man shoots his day's limit with 10 shots or 100 shots.

As a matter of fact, the automatic are extravagant shell burners, boosted by the cartridge men, and a man can get as many birds at half the cost with a double-barrelled gun as with an automatic.

The excited hunter drops 15 cents in the slot and 50 shells explode behind a bird that hears a disagreeable noise but—keeps on going.

With game wardens in Texas, working in connection with the federal authorities, the pot hunter, bird trapper, game seller and game butcher would have to go out of business. We heard of several men this winter member. In October and November quail, scouring the country for them in autos, and who boasted of having killed, during November and December, 1,000 or more quails apiece. This hogging of the game should be stopped, and the man that can only go out hunting occasionally should have a chance. Our business men cannot, as a rule, go on a hunting trip until after Christmas, and yet the last legislature tried to stop the hunting season at Christmas.

In some sections of South Texas, we heard of quail shooting that had begun in October, whereas the lawful season does not open until November 1. In October and November the birds are young and hang together in coveys, flying away as one bird and huddling for protection when they alight. The hunter then has an easy mark.

In December, January and February, the birds are big and strong, fly like the wind and run when they hit the ground like race horses, and it takes a hunter way above the average shot to get 20 to 25 a day. Again, the dogs are soon worn out, chasing individual birds. The sport late in the year is all the better, and the zest of the chase all the keener, and that is all that a hunter should really desire.

A hunter that can invest 75 cents for a box of 25 cartridges has, as a rule, enough money to buy as much fish and oysters as his appetite craves, while two quails are enough for a meal and six a day will give Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri, Ohio and 30 more states where the game laws are no longer an experiment. With this license money we can also have a breeding place for birds and their distribution all over the state, we can also import game that will do well in this climate.

The cultivation of inland fresh water fish will some day be a great industry in Texas, and the wardens can be of material help in this work. We have fish and oyster laws, and all fishermen pay the state a license, which money goes toward policing the salt waters.

The wild birds, also, belong to the state, and those that desire to shoot them should pay for the sport and the wild meat. Hunting game moderately, with a short season, and a bag limit, and wardens in control, does not diminish the game supply, but increases it. This is a fact proven in every state where the license and warden system now prevail.

Our game laws should be administered by a commissioner appointed by the Governor, and on salary. Also, by an Advisory Board of five enthusiastic game and bird protectors. This advisory board should meet two times a year in Austin, working in connection with a commissioner, and without salary. These men should be chosen from North, South, East, West and Central Texas.

Our state is so enormously large, and the altitudes so various, that him the Katzenjammer sits in his stomach.

On a sportsman's basis, the day's limit should be 15 quail, and 150 in a season. Let that same limit apply to ducks, doves, jacksnipe and all other shore birds. Let the license be $1.00 for the whole season's shooting, including every kind of game. It is now $1.75. That lets in all the "poor farmer boys," we hear so much about when it comes to legislative oratory. Require every hunter to carry his license on his person, and a tag on his gun, on penalty of losing his gun, and arrest. That will cut out about 200,000 irresponsible hunters after meat, and will leave, say, 100,000 men and boys in the field, who are willing to pay the $1.00 license. With this $100,000, we can obtain such good results as are now being obtained in New York.

Some Poultry Disease and Remedies

(By J. W. Neill of the State Dept. of Agriculture.)

To Make Lice Powder:

Mix 1 pint of crude carbolic acid with 3 pints of gasoline; stir in plaster of paris enough to take up all the moisture and bring the mixture to a powder, this will require about 4 or 5 lbs. of plaster of paris; add the plaster of paris rapidly and stir thoroughly, to prevent the mixture from hardening. Mix in an open vessel, put in airtight vessels when made, such as fat jars. Dust under fluff of feathers, wings and in the nest.

Liquid Lice Killer:

Shave 1 lb. cake of laundry soap into a pint of soft water, heat or allow to stand until a paste is formed, then stir in 1 lb. of commercial cresol (creosote acid); heat or allow the soap paste to be well dissolved; stir into one gallon of coal oil. Apply on the roosts, walls, etc., but do not allow it to get on the hands, as it will cause intense smarting.

Another Good Powder:

To 1 pint of chlorine, add 1/2 pint gasoline, and pour into the mixture as much slaked lime as the mixture will take up; keep in airtight vessels; dust under fluff of feathers and in nests.

Chicken Dip:

Add 1 gallon crude carbolic acid to 30 gallons water, dip the older birds first and for the younger birds dilute to a strength of 1 to 50 gallons. Or, you can add 1 gallon of pure Cresol to 20 gallons water. All dipping should be done early in the morning, while the weather is warm.

To Disinfect Whitewash

Slake fresh quicklime in water, and thin it to a paste with skim-milk; add 2 or 3 handfuls of common salt to a peck of the wash and stir in 1 quart of coal oil; use it liberally on roosts and dropping boards. The lime purifies the air and is also a great disinfectant. This should be done in springtime and in the fall, and occasionally through the season treat the perches with kerosene of crude oil.

Mite Mixture:

Mix 1 part of coal tar to 2 parts coal oil and stir well; spray thoroughly on roosts, walls, nests boxes and the floor. Wear gloves to protect hands, as this will irritate the skin; this like others, can be used in small or large quantities, but the preparation so as to make one combine with the other.

Cresol Disinfectant Soap (3 Gal.)

This is perhaps the most powerful disinfectant made and can be prepared as follows:

Put 2 1/2 quarts of raw linseed oil in a 4 or 5-gallon stone crock. Then weigh out in a dish 1 pound and 2 ounces of commercial lye or Dabbin's potash; add 1/2 pint of water to dissolve it, if this is not enough, add more very slowly—just enough to dissolve the potash or lye. Let stand from 2 to 5 hours (well away from reach of children)—until the lye is completely dissolved and is cold; then add this cold lye to the linseed oil very slowly, while stirring vigorously for about 5 minutes, and continue the stirring, as it should take at least 5 minutes to add the lye, and then continue stirring until the mass has the texture of smooth soap, even though it requires half an hour. While the soap is in this stage and before the mixture hardens, add with constant stirring, 3/4 quart of commercial cresol, which will blend perfectly with the soap and make a clear, dark-brown fluid, which can be mixed in any proportion with water and yield a clear solution. Be sure that each combination is formed before adding next. For hen houses, use 20 per cent solution, or 7 gallons water to 1 of the stock solution; or 21 gallons water with the 3 gallons of the solution made.

Spray thoroughly into all crevices, tubs, walls or roof, on the roost, the floor and dropping boards; it kills the pests by contact, and its odor is very offensive to all kinds of poultry pests. In extreme cases, apply two or three times, about a week apart, and protect the hands with worn gloves. This is effective against mites, fleas, the scaly-leg mite, and very repugnant to the blue bug (argus minutus) or tick.

For Scaly-Leg Mite:

To 1 cupful of lard, add 1 heaping tablespoonful of finely ground sulphur, stir it until it becomes a uniform color is reached, then stir in 1 tablespoonful of coal oil; dip the fowl's legs into warm soap-suds water long enough to soften the scales, rub off with a spoonhandle and apply the ointment thoroughly, and also apply to roost. This does not irritate and may be used for the stick-tight fleas around the eyes, on the comb and wattles (gills).

Sore-Head or Chicken-Pox

This is caused by a bacteria similar to roup, but not the same, and is especially bad in cold, damp weather or in the fall, when exposed to sudden changes of weather. First symptoms, a little dark scab on the comb or wattles, looking like dried blood.

Isolate the fowl and watch; if it is a case of pox, many more scabs will develop. It is contagious and usually shows up by the seventh day. After two or three days cankers form in the mouth, the eyes may close or partly so; the pox works on combs and wattles are slightly red. During wet and cold weather it is more severe, this disease should not be confused with roup, nor with inflammation of the mouth, swollen head white comb, frozen comb or diphtheria, all of which carry similar symptoms.

Remedies:

First, isolate all sick and suspicious looking birds; clean up and disinfect the premises.

Mix 1/2 cup epsom salts and 2 tablespoonsful cream of tartar in 1 quart of water to melt, add enough cold water to make 2 gallons of bran mash and with it feed chickens in morning for 2 days. This quantity should do for about 20 chickens.

After this apply the following ointment on all sores: 1 cup lard, 1 heaping tablespoonful sulphur, well mixed, 1 tablespoonful of kerosene and 1 tablespoonful turpentine. Apply daily for several days. Disinfect the drinking by adding potassium permanganate to the water, enough to color it to a light purple—some recommended copperas for the drinking water.

Another Remedy:

Add just a film of coal oil to every drinking dish. In addition, give a heaping teaspoonful of calcium sulphide in a wet mash, to be appropriated for 20 birds; do this every morning for 10 days, or until this disease is stopped; give the film of oil to the drinking water of all, to prevent spread of the disease, using clean glass dishes each time and do not allow a sick or suspicious looking bird to drink where others do.

Caution:

This disease is easily controlled at first, if proper attention is given at the right time, in the right way, while in a few days later it may pass that stage, hence clean and disinfect freely and never allow a bird to die in or around the premises when passing the curing stage, break its neck with a stick and burn it, and do not let it bleed as a drop of blood contains many disease germs to carry the disease to other fowls.

White Diarrhea

This disease is mostly confined to young chicks from 1 to 2 weeks old, but older ones and even adults will contract it; it is largely due to over-feeding incubator-hatched chicks. As all chicks must have a supply of grit to grind their food to prepare it for its digestive organs, if the little one is fed too much it becomes sluggish and will not stir out and collect the grit so necessary for its existence, and no one except an expert can handle the young chick as well as the mother hen. Fresh hatched chicks should not be fed for 48 hours, except to be given a little water. If incubated, you must remember, its mamma can give no training, and you must try to duplicate nature's laws, so provide plenty of grit and feed sparingly until the chick's digestive organs can develop; provide for its exercise and train it to rest, and you will notice it takes the mother or hen all day to train her little babies and provide their food—no telling how many steps the little chick takes for each bite of food, and while thus feeding it is picking up such grit as it needs, while the machine hatched chick gets several bites to one step and has no chance to select its grit, no parental training, which every chick needs. It's just as helpless as a little babe. Do nothing for the chick that the mother hen ought to and will do. Good-bless her old soul, she will work all day for nothing and board herself, raise her chicks almost free from disease, just furnish clean, comfortable quarters, clean water to drink, make her a pasture to run in; keep the fleas, mites, lice and blue-bugs away from her and she will do the rest. Later, you can increase the feed; by close watch, you can safely judge what is necessary.

If you have an incubator, first learn just exactly how to hatch and how to feed for three or four weeks. You might be an expert in hatching and at the same time feed so as to be an expert in producing white diarrhea or killing. Easily digested food, such as boiled rice, stale bread moistened with milk, etc., but do not allow children to do the feeding except under your direction, as they are liable to overfeed. They should be taught how to feed them, as white diarrhea is much easier to prevent than to cure. I suggest the prevention, as the little chick's stomach is not ready for drugs, although some few cases have been cured. Should you desire a treatment, it will be given free of charge, but if you carefully follow the above, no further treatment is necessary.

Blue Bugs or Ticks (Argus Minutus)

Rebuild the roost as follows: Take two pieces, 1x1, any length desired. Take ordinary fence stays; round off the corners and nail crosswise (like making a ladder) 18 or 20 inches apart, seeing that lumber is free of knot-holes and cracks. Swing this ladder-like roost with baling wire, and with other wire gable it to make it steady. Set a 2x2 post at each end, coming up to within 6 inches of the roost; tack a piece of shingle near the top to make an ideal place for the ticks to hide, as they will climb the post to get to the chickens, and finding they can't make it, the next morning they will be found under the shingle to be killed with a sprayer and disinfectant. Burn all trash and some pleasant morning dip the fowls in a solution made of 1 gallon crude carbolic acid to 50 gallons water—first the old ones, then dilute with more water for the young ones. Prepare a wash pot near the door; fill with water and while boiling (have on buckskin gloves) dip up a bucketful with a dipper, and apply it with dipper to walls and ceiling. A drop of this boiling liquid will kill them as quick or quicker than anything else. It may require several efforts to get all of them as some may hatch after it is applied. If the wall is badly infested, nail a 2x1 to the wall, let it joint and go to within six inches to the roost, and near the top tack a shingle to make another trap or set of traps, where you will know where to apply the hot water. Curve a wire over the short 2x1 to prevent chickens from roosting on it. If blue-bugs are present you will find them under the shingles. Guard closely the nests of setting hens, and see that hens are free from post before going to set. Many nest boxes can be protected by using the cresol disinfectant soap or the C. A. Wood preservative—ferbolium. Two or three treatments around the nest box will prevent the ticks from crawling in. Destroy the English sparrow, the greatest agency for spreading the poultry pests ever known, and these ticks are hard to destroy. The official record gives one case of 2 years without any food; another case, recorded at Dallas, that it took 11 days, one inch under water to drown them. I now have 2 such ticks, put in a bottle Oct. 25, 1912, which are still alive and seem jovial.

A town is as dead as it looks.

There is a reason for a city's growth—it is usually co-operation. Commercial clubs create confidence. It soon gets monotonous, when one man does all the boosting.

It may be tiresome, pounding the same proposition all the time, but the nail is driven home by continual pounding.

Prosperity follows publicity.

"Some men are born great;" and others achieve greatness by striving for the welfare of their community.

It is easy enough to be pleasant when you are a booster.

Persistent publicity pays profits to city and country, as well as to individuals.

We note that the Avalanche now comes out with sixteen pages. We consider that this paper is the best country weekly that we have ever met, and it rivals many papers of even larger cities. Sometimes people do not appreciate the efforts of papers, but having been on the inside of such work, we feel that our paper is a mighty good thing for our community.

Tide Turns From Canada to U. S.

The drift to Canada is checked. The tide of immigration, in fact, has turned. More people came from Canada to the United States in 1912-13 than passed from the United States to Canada.

According to the report of the Commissioner of Immigration for 1912, there came from Canada to the United States, from July 1, 1912, to July 1, 1913, 152,611 persons. Of this number 54,497 were United States citizens, 44,791 Canadian citizens, and 44,412 other aliens.

In the same year there went from the United States to Canada, a total of 130,664 persons; and of that number 57,669 were United States citizens, 19,279 Canadian citizens, and 25,715 other aliens. A net gain for the United States of 12,947.

The tide turned in 1912-13, for in the preceding fiscal year Canada got a net gain of 25,308. Undoubtedly, the next annual report for 1913-14 will reveal a still heavier drift from Canada to the United States, for the collapse of the Western Canadian land boom is sending settlers homeward in an increasing stream.

The Canadian government is striving, by the free use of advertising space in newspapers in the United States, to stem the turning tide, but, apparently, with slight results. The glamour is gone—the bloom is off the fruit, and discouraging reports from returning Americans more than offset the advertising of the government across the line.

This pronounces a renewed movement of immigration into the Western part of the United States. Evidence of this turn in the tide are visible already in the Inland Empire. Our people have quit speculating in Canadian wheat lands and town lots, and many who went across the line from Spokane and the Inland Empire have returned. Their numbers will increase.

Yet Western Canada has vast resources and will recover from this collapse, as Washington and Oregon recovered from the collapse of the land boom in the early '90s. Its great open spaces will yet be filled, but the return movement will never be as spectacular and striking as the one that has just passed. And we shall never witness another hegira out of the Inland Empire like that which has now passed into history. For several years, at least, the movement will be toward the south.—Spokane Review.

TWICE TOLD PARAGRAPHS

BROWNFIELD

Terry County Herald:

The Brownfield Odd Fellows pulled off their annual stunt last Friday night, but owing to the inclemency of the weather, only about 35 people were out. The anniversary came on Sunday the 26th, this year, but it was deferred until the regular meeting night thereafter, which fell on May 1st. The local speakers were: J. L. Randall, R. H. Banowsky, Percy Spencer and Rev. J. B. Reynolds, augmented by Judge Spencer, who organized the Brownfield Lodge, and who happened to be present. The talks were all fine and to the point; after which delicious cake and punch were served to all present.

R. H. Banowsky received a telegram Wednesday morning to the effect that his mother had died, and he left immediately for Lubbock.

He left immediately for Lubbock, to take his train for Sagerton to attend the funeral. The Herald extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

Jim Smith reports that he could count 20 dead prairie dogs and jack rabbits to one live one in his community. He believes that most of them were drowned instead of being killed by hail, as some think.

We learn that the lightning struck the west pasture fence of the Jim Smith last week and killed about 20 head of cattle for Lee Walker.

Mrs. W. A. Bell returned this week from Wichita Falls, where she attended the District Convention of the Mothers' and Parent-Teachers' Clubs. Mrs. Bell says they are doing a great work for Texas, and that she met a set of enthusiastic workers down there. They were greatly surprised that this "wild and woolly" country had ever thought of a Mother's Club, and in recognition of the good work done in Brownfield under the presidency of Mrs. Bell, she was elected District Auditor.

A. M. McBurnett and wife were in town last week and informed the Herald man that his father had died at Snyder, Texas, on the 27th ult., and that he was not able to reach there in time for the funeral. His father, E. B. McBurnett, was 72 years old at the time of his death, and was one of the first settlers of Nolan county.

Miss Emma Spear and several others went over to see Mr. Merritt's bunch of sheep, Sunday. He just lost 20 lambs by the hail storm.

H. C. Earnest, one of Colorado's leading attorneys, was here Wednesday, looking after legal affairs.

SILOS

If you are thinking of building a silo, don't overlook the D. Y. Tomlinson Cement Stave Silo. There were several built last season, and they have all given entire satisfaction. He is now building two for Frank Nordley, making the staves at Hale Center, where you can see both the staves and D. Y. Tomlinson.

Will be glad to quote and give prices on this silo, which I guarantee for all time.—D. Y. Tomlinson, at Hale Center, after the 15th of May. (44-4tp)

J. H. Lowrey left Wednesday afternoon for Brady, where he went to look after business matters.

Misses Irene Cullins and Kathryn Milklin, of Wilson were shopping in this city last Monday.

M. B. Sawyers and daughter, Miss Ora, were here Wednesday, trading with our merchants.

Gwinn Harris fell from a bicycle last week and sustained a painfully sprained wrist.

Miss Ruth Rollans, of Oklahoma, is visiting her uncle, P. D. Haney, of this city.

A. G. Cox was up from Slaton on Tuesday, looking after business matters.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. H. I. Henry, Sunday morning, an 8-pound girl.

Mrs. W. E. Penney is visiting at Tahoka this week.

J. M. Draper has recently been added to the list of employees of the J. M. Radford Grocery Company, with headquarters in Lubbock, and will move his family to Lubbock in a few weeks. The Radford Grocery Company is taking in more territory and will, therefore, increase their business at this point, which, by the way, already checks up among the houses at the top of the list operated by Mr. Radford. Mr. Cate, the local manager, says their cold storage plant is being kept busy these days, and that there is a large quantity of perishable goods shipped from this point daily by express.

Kone, was here Saturday, and addressed the people on subjects of vital importance to the agricultural interests of this section, at the court house. He delivered addresses at the school houses over the county, and was given a good hearing at each place. He furnished the Avalanche with an article dealing with several pests of the poultry yard, which he found in this territory, and it will be to the interest of every poultry raiser to read it and clip it out for future reference. It might save you hundreds of dollars in years to come by acquainting yourself with the contents of this article.

He has had a well sunk on top of the canyon bluff and a reservoir built for water, which will give him plenty of pure water for keeping his slaughter house thoroughly sanitary. He is complying with every requirement of the state laws regarding slaughter houses, and people who get meat from his shop may rest assured that it has been handled in a sanitary manner from the slaughter house to your pantry.

SUFFRAGETTE CAMPAIGN

An airship flying over an American city, distributing woman suffrage literature, would doubtless create a sensation, but that is the method employed by Turkish women to advance the rights "the for women" movement in Turkey, according to Ahmed Emin, a Constantinople newspaper man, who is with the delegates of the National Editorial Association. It is the means they have adopted to advertise their desire for privileges of citizenship.

Mr. Emin is a representative of the Constantinople Ikdam, a Turkish daily. He has been in America three years, and has taken a course in the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia University.

He is now on a trip through Texas, which is to him a delightful experience. He is not accustomed to speak of anything in point of age in terms of less than a few centuries, and when he encounters the wonders of Texas, which are in the main not more than a few years old, he is highly interested. For instance, the commercial and industrial pursuits in Texas are so vast that it is amazing to him that all this has developed in a few recent years.

Mr. Emin sat in the Dallas Press Club rooms yesterday and talked of a great many things. He is a character of interest, aside from the fact that he is from a famed foreign nation and a newspaper man. He carries about with him a copy of his paper, which is somewhat different in make-up from the American paper. The back page of an American paper is the front page of the Turkish paper—you read the Turkish paper from left to right, instead of from right to left.

Turkey, he said, has suffered very much from the Balkan wars, including the loss of territory, but he believes the future of the country will develop more rapidly; the people now have greater liberty, and the education of children is given more serious consideration. The latest invention, such as wireless telegraphy and wireless telephony, are in use in Turkey.—Dallas Evening Journal.

SAVING FOOD PRODUCTS

The bill creating a state department of foods and markets, recently passed by the New York legislature, has been signed by Gov. Glynn and is now a law of that state. It is said that no law of recent years has been received with greater enthusiasm. The agricultural organizations of the state worked for the law, the city consumers endorsed it and individual farmers enthusiastically favored such a law. It now remains for the law to be put into operation and for the people of that state to enforce it and co-operate to realize the objects of its authors.

Much can be saved in the products we raise by reducing waste and giving producer, consumer, transportation companies and others, a fair deal. There is need of a national law that would safeguard interstate marketing, as a state law, would not go far enough to render much assistance in our Southwestern states, where much is produced to be shipped to other states.

If it is the duty of the national government to conserve our forests, water power, minerals, etc., as is now quite generally accepted, why is it not economy to conserve our food products, without which our country could not prosper?

The products from the soil are the fundamental source of our nation's wealth, and it would seem the part of wisdom to conserve them and thus eliminate waste.

Marketing is the most important question now before the people of this country. The true admonition for farmers to produce more at less cost, will no longer satisfy those who pay for waste after the products leave the farmers' hands. It is now the consumers' time to complain, and with them are those who are engaged in legitimate business, which must depend upon the cost of the people's food. This will mean, we believe, a national bureau of markets.

The millions we waste every year in ill-advised marketing would soon make our producers more prosperous, relieve the consumer of the high cost of living and increase the business of the country.—Texas Farm and Ranch.

MARRIED AT LITTLEFIELD

Littlefield, Tex., May 10.—Deputy County Clerk C. J. Duggan issued the first marriage license that has been issued in Littlefield to John E. Hall and Miss Tommie Wallis. The ceremony was performed at the church this afternoon, in the presence of quite a host of friends and relatives of the contracting parties. Pure white, with a background of palms and cut flowers was the color scheme of the decorations which were artistically arranged for the occasion. Miss Wallis the granddaughter of H. F. Smith, the pioneer citizen of Littlefield. Mr. Hall has been employed on the construction work of the Santa Fe, and the courtship was a comparatively brief one.

GOOD ROADS

Texas needs more road-builders. The spirit for wanting good roads is hereditary. There is an excuse for everything except bad roads. The time has passed when roads are built haphazard.

Each man, woman and child in the country pays an annual 3.00 mud tax.

A man who drives over a bad road and is contented with it is a mope-back.

Good highways are essential to the highest development of prosperity.

A road constructed in a bad way cannot be benefited by all the "doctoring in the world."

A farmer, situated alongside bad roads, is seriously hampered in getting to the markets with his products.

The average farm haul is nine miles, and it takes two horses five hours to haul 600 pounds this distance over unimproved highways.—Homer D. Wade.

PERSONAL LIBERTY

It is paradoxical to suggest that the danger of attacks on personal liberty is greatest in a democracy, yet this view has been seriously maintained by sober thinkers. An absolute ruler is greatly restrained in making laws which interfere with the habits and customs of his subjects, by his knowledge that the people will not endure dictation beyond a certain point; there is apparently no limit to the tyranny which a people may inflict upon itself. On each specific issue the group which feels itself oppressed may be in a minority, and those who are pinched at one point may thoughtlessly lend their votes to help dominate over some other group.

Thus, the natural tendency of a democracy, infatuated with lawmaking, is to tie itself up in its own red tape until the individual can hardly stir, hand or foot. This is no fantastic speculation. The legislature of New York is turning out 700 new laws a year, and some of the more progressive states go far beyond this record. The annual output of new laws in the United States has been computed at from 40,000 to 50,000, and a considerable portion, year after year, unwarrantably invade the field of personal liberty, as one or another group of zealots succeeds in driving in its wedge.

Moreover, this tendency increases. As Mr. Andrae says: "Whereas, we have hitherto largely left it to nature to deal with the small percentage of defectives she produces, and have made our customs and usages conform to the character of the huge percentage of normal human beings, they are today adopting the opposite course. . . . demanding of normal man that he shall shape his customs and his habits to meet the needs of the comparatively few defectives among us." He very likely had prohibition of alcoholic drinks in mind, but the principle goes beyond that.

Is there a remedy? Mr. Andrae does not attempt to forecast, but he suggests the need of widespread instruction in the science of lawmaking, the science which concerns itself with the effect and the bearings of law, and the natural limitations of the lawmaking power, a subject which has, he believes, no chair in any university.

The lawmaker's profession is the one profession for which no previous instruction and training are demanded, yet what would such training of legislators avail if legislation is more and more to be turned over option of the holder; that said notes were given for part of the purchase money on Lot No. Ten (10), in Block No. 39 in the Overton Addition to the town of Lubbock, Texas; that in the deed from plaintiff and wife to defendant, T. W. Patton, a lien was reserved to secure the payment of said notes; that each of said notes are due and unpaid, and that defendant, though often requested, has failed and refused to pay said notes, or any part thereof; that plaintiff has placed said notes in the hands of J. E. Vickers, an attorney for collection and has contracted to pay him the 10 per cent stipulated therein, same being reasonable and customary. Plaintiff prays for judgment for his debt, principal and interest, and attorney's fee, and for costs of suit, and foreclosure of his lien on the above described premises; that the same be sold according to law, that the officer executing the order of sale place the purchaser of said property in possession thereof within thirty days after the day of sale, and for all other relief to which he may be entitled.
