STICK TO DIVERSIFIED FARMING IN THIS SECTION.

This is the time of year when farms are being rented, rent contracts are being written and signed. The farm owner too is planning his acreage for another year, and in fact it is the time of year that the crop for the season is being arranged for, both by the tenant and the farm owner. We urge that you stay with the diversification idea, and not drop into the dangerous ruts of one cropping. This is the worst thing that could happen to the country, and is something that must be avoided if we are to make this the successful farming section that it is destined to be under 1.50 the proper farming methods. You say, oh well, that is swivel chair advice. It may be but it is about the soundest advice that can be had on this subject. The editor of this paper has watched the crop situation for years. He was a farmer for several years himself, and has had actual experience and very often wish that we had what we have in a farm now, and making our home there. The bankers of this section of the country. to whom many appeals are made during the year, for assistance to carry on the farm work, will vouch for the statement that diversified farming is the only solution for the success of farming.

It is all well enough to plant a good acreage of cotton, but even then not more than you can cultivate properly, but you should also plant enough feed to make you independent of the the feed they need and then have money to buy
