AN ABLE SEAMAN.

Sailing a Boat Was Not the Only Thing He Could Do.

The master of a vessel in a port in the gulf of Mexico, being in need of money, borrowed it and to secure its repayment executed what is called a bottomry bond. By this bond it was agreed that if the money was not paid within so many days after the vessel arrived at New York proceedings might be taken to have the vessel sold and the debt paid out of the proceeds. The money was not repaid, and I was retained to enforce the bond and began a suit. Some one interested in the vessel appeared in the been executed by the master, as had been alleged.

It became necessary to take the National Magazine. testimony on this point of a sailor whose name was subscribed to the bond as having witnessed its execution. In answer to my questions the sailor said that the captain called him into the vessel's cabin and asked him to be a witness to the bond, and he signed his name to it as a witness, and he spoke of the paper as the bottomry bond.

The opposing counsel in a sharp cross examination asked him how he knew it was a bottomry bond, and the witness answered that he read enough of it to know what it was. Some other skillful questions brought out the fact that when the sailor came into the cabin the cap-tain resisting on the other side of a table, facing the satior, so that the paper was between them; that the paper was not read to him; that name at the end of it and told the sailor where to sign his name, which he did and then left the cabin.

his statement that he read enough or you will be left out in the cold of the document to know it was a bottomry bond was false, because, of course, he could not read writing disbelieved.

The lawyer opposed to me saw the point also, but instead of leavcluded to clinch it, and, taking the document, he laid it down on the table before the witness upside down and said to him, "Let us see the place, about April 15th, the you read the paper now."

To my great surprise and relief the witness read the writing, upside down as it was, with nearly as much fluency as if it had been right side

Origin of the Turban. The origin of the turban must be looked for not, as commonly believed, among Moslems, but as a sign of authority and honor dating back to the earliest periods of Jewish history. for putting on the bonnet of the high priest is from a root meaning "to bind round." The words miter, hood, disdem, as used in the Old Testament, ban. Jerome tells us that the turban has a place in the most ancient records of history. The variations as adopted by Mohammedans are many. Their own authorities hint at a thousand methods of arranging the turban, which show not only the tribe and religious distinction, but even the personal peculiarities of the wearer. An old legend traces the turban to an act of desperate courage recorded of the ancient Levantines. A brave band of warriors are said to have wrapped their winding sheets round their heads as they devoted themselves to certain death to save their comrades on the

The Judge's Crime.

A prisoner, a faded, battered specimen of mankind, on whose haggard face, deeply lined with the marks of dissipation, there still lingered faint reminders of better days long past, stood dejected before a New York police judge. Before leaving Europe he made a stipulation that he be furnished with a carriage to and from the opera house every night. This was inserted in the contract. When he arrived he found a carriage waiting at the pier. He rode uptown- The RED FRONT always at the expense of the opera company—and took a look around. Then he decided to put up at the Marlborough hotel, which happened to be only three short blocks from the Metropolitan Opera House. Every time he HAY AND CRAIN sang he walked up to the opera house, refusing to take a carriage. He said he had just as soon walk. When it came time for him to return to Europe he presented a bill for over $200 "for carriages to and from the opera."

"But you didn't take a carriage," said the manager of the opera com-

Tamagno bowed low and invited the manager to look at the contract. He repeated the same suggestion whenever anything was said about it. The result, of course, was that the $200 had to be paid. He stood out for it seen a dollar for a month, and all the time he was getting $1,000 a night.
