The lamp cellar may not be primarily due to too much shade about the house, but there is no getting around the fact that the situation is aggravated by such shade. The germ destroying sunshine and fresh air ought to enter the cellar windows during a part of every day.

Not a little pleasure and real satisfaction can be got out of planting a shallow dish on the lawn and supply it with fresh water every day or two. The birds will discover it very quickly and will come to the dish to drink and bathe, where their formances will prove very interesting to the members of the household.

There are all too many chaps who haven't time to "monkey or fuss" with seed corn who stupidly spend hours and even days later in the season cultivating bare ground in fields which have half of a third of a stand because the seed wasn't any good, and it is often these same fellows who blame the weather or the party in power or their bad luck because they don't get ahead in the world.

The present day practice of building dairy barns so that they will be provided with abundance of fresh air and sunlight is no longer viewed as a fad by men who think. These conditions mean health to the stock which means more money in the bank. Hence it resolves itself down to a practical dollars and cents proposition, a language that ought to be understood by the most dull of understandings.

Regrettable as the fact is, truth compels the statement that up to date the most skilled specialists in the medical world have not been able to discover a medicine that will kill the germs that cause cancer and tuberculosis. Other measures sometimes effect a cure in individual cases, but seldom medicine taken internally. Medicines claimed to have this power are on the market, but primarily for the purpose of separating sick folks of their money.

The old world has mighty little to offer boys who start out in life at ten years old smoking cigarettes, except quarters in insane asylums, dry goods stores, pushing the sand of depot walls at train time or totting the country on brake beams. None of these occupations, by the way, yields a very handsome salary. It is well for the boy to look into the future far enough to make up his mind whether he wants to hang out with this kind of company, if he doesn't he would better out the cigarettes out.

Figures gathered by investigators in the federal department of agriculture show that those engaged in the poultry business in the United States suffer a loss of $45,000,000, or 15 percent of the annual value of the egg output, $300,000,000, through the careless handling of the product. This loss is traced to failure to provide adequate and clean nesting places, irregularly irregularly, the absence of cool places and infrequency of marketing. It is safe to say, in addition, that the bulk of this loss is sustained by farm poultry raisers rather than those who make of poultry raising a primary business. The lack is one that should be stopped.

We heard the other day of a tactful fellow who got the better of a balky horse by hanging out of the rig and pretending to adjust something about the harness. By the time he had tied and untied the ramp strap or monkey with the tag or handle and got back into his seat the horse was ready to start on. The writer has had equally good results while cultivating with horses inclined to balk by backing them up a few steps and then starting ahead. But all schemes fail at times, and like others, we have set for a good half hour, with the thermometer reading 110 degrees F. in the shade in the vicinity of our rear collar button, waiting for Tom to get over a balky streak. It takes a stack of patience, much philosophy and all or more religion than a fellow can muster to keep sweet tempered when he has one of the ornery critters on his hands.

Time was when cows needed their horns for self protection, but under modern domestic conditions they are useless and often dangerous appendages. The best and easiest method of dehorning is by the application of some caustic potash to the germ of the horn when the calf is a few days old. After the horn has got a good start the job must be done by saw or clipper. Many a dairyman hesitates to dehorn his cows because of the harm it does to their milk flow. However, this is a myth to be overestimated. A test made at the Kansas Agricultural college in a herd of twelve cows with a view to determining the shrinkage as a result of dehorning showed that in the five days prior to the operation it gave 1,125 pounds of milk, while in the five days following it gave 1,100 pounds, or a total shrinkage for the twelve cows of 408 pounds. This amounts to sixty-nine one-hundredths of a pound of milk per cow each day, or about half a pint. On the fifth day after dehorning all except two of the cows were giving as much milk, and a few more than they did the day before their horns were removed.

W. B. Keesee has ordered a new and complete outfit of tools and machinery and as soon as the material arrives will open a shop in Sonora. The News wishes "Hanna" success.

Mrs. John Finlister of San Angelo, organizer of the Eastern Star, was the guest of the Commercial Thursday. Mrs. Finlister has been to Rock Springs on work connected with the offer.

W. O. Strackbein was in Sonora Friday with peaches. They were the Grover Cleveland variety and each peach weighed about sixteen ounces.

The Iowa experiment station has been gathering data recently relative to the damage done by the wheat head army worm in several counties of the state. Two broods of the worm hatched, the first feeding from late in May until well into July and the second from the middle of August until frost. Measures which have been tried to reduce the pest show that early cutting of badly infested fields is a help, also keeping the grasses cut on the roadsides and in the fence corners and early fall plowing. Most effective of all as a preventive measure was found to be the mowing of infested fields during the early fall. The damage done by the worm is largely in the seed head, its habit being to eat the seeds and drop the chaff. In some fields examined as high as 49 percent of the timothy seed heads were found damaged.

WOMEN
Women of the highest type, women of superior education and refinement, whose discernment and judgment give weight and force to their opinions, highly prize the wonderful corrective and curative properties of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Throughout the many stages of woman's life, from girlhood, through the ordeals of motherhood to the declining years, there is no safer or more reliable medicine than Chamberlain's Tablets as sold everywhere at 25c a box.

OUR EARLY PAINTERS.
Benjamin West ended his career as an infant prodigy. Naturally the early painters in colonial times were immigrants. They were for the most part men whose names have long since perished and were probably of little account even in their own day. We picture these men with their paint boxes and rolls of canvas packed upon their knapsacks, trudging up hill and down dale begging an occasional ride, putting up at road inns and painting a new sign to settle the landlord's score. As late, by the way, as 1738 Matthew Pratt, a resident painter of Philadelphia, found signboards as profitable a subject as portraits. Benjamin West may be reckoned the earliest of native born American painters, for although his birth occurred in 1738, a year after that of John Singleton Copley, his rise to notice preceded the latter's. West, in fact, began by being an infant prodigy and never quite got over it. It was a remarkable fact in itself that an artist should be born of a Quaker family in a little Pennsylvania settlement, amid the rigors of frontier life, and that without any known encouragement from his family and surroundings the child at six years old should have unmistakably shown artistic tendencies. The story is that while left in charge of a baby sister he tried to make a portrait of her in red and black ink. Then the following year some Indians showed him how to make red and yellow colors, while his mother allowed him to dip into her indigo tub and even made a brush for him from the fur of the cat. With these rude materials he executed some colored drawings that attracted the attention of a Mr. Pennington of Philadelphia, who presented him with a real box of paints and some engravings after Italian pictures. He made such rapid progress that before he was twelve years old he was practicing as a professional portrait painter in Philadelphia. By the time he was twenty-two he had saved enough money to visit Rome, whither his father had promised him. Three years later he reached London and was received with an enthusiasm that at once launched him into a success which only grew greater as the years went by. Finally he was elected president of the Royal Academy and held this position until his death, when a great public funeral was given to his remains in St. Paul's cathedral.—Circle Magazine.

Mr. Hagerlund came back much benefited by his trip and while it was hot up there found that his friend Williamson had an ideal spot in that part of the country. There is a running creek through the place, plenty of timber, fish in the stream and squirrels in the trees, sheep, horses and cattle rolling fat, but even a failure due to the drought. Mr. Williamson has returned $10000 profit on the land and $88 head of black calves and 85 calves. The sheep are big fellows, the hogs are top-notchers and the crops have been good with the exception of the corn—and Mrs. Williamson is as good at cooking as she was at Twin Hill's with numerous chickens and an abundance of milk and cream.

WISE MEN OF THE EAST.

It quite evident that there are wise men in the east even if afflicted with Wall Street. According to Wednesday's Standard Edwin Hawley and Theo. P. Shonts have been elected directors of the Orient These financiers, largely interested in railways, are the first big operators to become wise to the greatness of the K. C. M. & O. project conceived by A. E. Stillwell. By the agreement made by the Orient officials with Mr. Shonts and Mr. Hawley, the Orient when completed will be judged a Transcontinental line New York to City of Mexico via Sonora and to the Pacific via Alpine. It is proposed that the Orient be organized as a trust, with some of the great financiers of the New York Tribune as authority for the statement that Hawley and Shonts have been elected to the directorate of the K. C. M. & O. and the presumption is that these gentlemen have mounted interests in the road and while in no way controlling, will assist Moore Stillwell and Dickinson and associates in putting the Orient in operation. The directors are possible Orient stock and bonds will be listed on Wall Street and American capital will soon see the merits of the great project.

Chas. Golpitts, resident engineer for the Orient at Sbordara, returned last week from a business trip to the Marfa and Alpine country. During his absence Boyd Hamblen was in charge of the camp. While away (Chas.) bragged about Sbordara and the Sonora girls and boys and if he had not been connected with the Orient would have been whipped by the Big Ben Busters. Now that Charlie is at home he tells marvelous tales of the possibilities of that country under irrigation and the advent of the Orient.

Plowing down the hills and putting mountains where the valleys were, is the progress of the Orient into Sonora. The work is completed to the breaks or the Radder camp and West Bros. have finished to the edge of Sonora on the North and Wright has come up from the South and is at work on the Terminal grounds in Sonora. These terminal grounds are 3.6 feet wide and about 4000 feet long. The grade that is now being worked is for three tracks and indicates that the depot will be between Water and Crockett avenues. The bridge will be 28 feet long where it crosses the Tom Adams place and additional three miles toward Del Rio has been let to Ruch & Stancell and Mr. Rudder has the sub-contract. Rudder will have some work for his teams doing their and also for Mr. Hogan when the track work above is completed.

One way to improve and multiply is to pasture pigs in the woods. Constant care is what develops the pigs into excellent toppers. Medium sized pigs are now most in favor. It is best to feed pigs for only eight or ten months. After they are a year old the profit is not profitable. Pigs are usually coming from the woods and the use of the woods for pig raising is not profitable. Pigs are usually coming from the woods and the use of the woods for pig raising is not profitable. SIDEBONES IN HORSES.

Cause and Treatment For This Form of Lameness.
On either side of the coffin bone in the horse there is a cartilage which in certain cases become hardened and thickened by such handling. This is called a sidebone. They are situated on one or both sides of the leg, just above the upper portion of the hoof. They may be the result of strained conditions, bruises or sprains like corns or hoof cracks. Swelling on the stony pavement is a frequent cause, and is the result of the weight of the hooves in heavy horses. If the wagon tongue falls on the foot at this point the cartilage may be injured and induce the disease. The swelling is first noticed just above the hoof or near the heel. Lameness soon follows, says Dr. McIntosh of the Illinois experiment station. The treatment usually recommended for sidebones consists in the free use of cold foot baths or cold water bandages. Thickets of iodine applied to the swollen parts is very good. A blister applied after the water applications have been made for a week or so is used by many veterinarians. The blister is made of two teaspoonfuls of caustic mixed with four tablespoonfuls of lard. It is rubbed in well with the fingers and allowed to remain for twenty-four hours, when it is washed off and applied a second time the following week. These applications are continued until the lameness disappears. If this does not bring permanent relief then driving of the injured parts and several months' rest will be necessary.

Dairy Notes.

The capacity of a dairy cow is worthless if she does not have material with which to work. The blood may supply the milk, but unless it in turn is supplied by the food there can be no milk. The quality of the butter depends very largely on the care of the milk and cream.

Forage For Hogs.

The Missouri experiment station has just given out the results of an experiment lasting three years which shows large profits from feeding hogs on forage crops. The average income per acre from clover forage was $24.63, from rape seed cuts $24.63, from corn and cowpeas $29.08, and from blue grass $17.71. The estimates are all made on the basis of 60 cents a bushel for the corn fed and 6 cents a pound for the pork produced. The results are important as indicating what may be accomplished when the hogs themselves do all the harvesting.

Hog Health.

Ashes have a good effect on the digestion and destroy intestinal worms. Sulphur should also be kept in every pen. Every hog should taste every year just by the manure it makes.

Notice to Trespassers.

Notice is hereby given that all trespassers on my ranch known as the Lone Lake ranch 12 miles south east of Sonora, and other ranches owned and controlled by me, for the purpose of cutting timber, hauling wood or hauling hogs without my permission, will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

he declared, "so hate me for hate at least is an emotion. As for Kelvin, I think you're mistaken about even your self. It is not Kelvin to whom you are attracted, but the force he represents. The power to achieve, that is what you worship, but in your dreams of the power he might acquire you are blind to other possibilities. I, too, can give you power. Join with me and future historians will acclaim us as the great liberators of the chained and untraveled American public."

tem, a new form of government which shall guarantee to every man an equal distribution of existing wealth. It is a grand, a grand, a grand idea. It will cost $150 per man. That amounts to a billion and a half of dollars. You have, let us say, influential friends who have plenty of money—solid cash. Join me, help me to raise this money; help me to carry through to its glorious conclusion this enormous benefit to humanity, and no king and queen will have a firmer and more honored place in history than we shall have."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE flat freight rate was a tremendous sensation. It was hailed as the great utopian realization, the one supreme act which was to level all distinctions, which was to place all business upon an equal footing, which was to cure all the economic ills of the country. And who was back of this huge philanthropic move? Kelvin Sumner Rollins, the Napoleon of the railroad world. And who was back of Sumner Rollins? Henry Breed. Yet another step, who was back of Breed? Phillip Kelvin. There was the man! Until Kelvin had come Breed had done none of these radical things. Since Kelvin had appeared upon the scene Breed had broken up the Stock Exchange, he had reduced the price of bread to cost, he had disintegrated the United Steel corporation, he had removed the unjust discrimination of the railroads; ergo, Kelvin was really the big force of all this reformation.

person, the head of the petroleum trust, one of the most perfect combines in existence and one which had been built almost entirely upon rebates and freight concessions of various sorts. Mr. Hepperton was a trifle impatient over the necessity of having to make such a trip and was insistent upon coming to a crisp working basis at once. For that reason he did not go to Mr. Rollins at all. He very calmly walked over that gentleman's narrative head to Mr. Breed.

"Hello, Breed," said he, walking in upon that gentleman as he sat in his library poring over a set of photographs, one of which happened to be Mr. Hepperton's. "Let's get down to business. How much of a rebate are we to get, and what percentage of it goes to the railroad?"

"There is no use in discussing the matter because this is flat and final." "Do you mean that?" demanded Hepperton. "I mean it absolutely." Hepperton studied him in silence for awhile. There was no doubt that Rollins meant precisely what he said. "Very well," snapped Hepperton. "Within two weeks there will be a special bill introduced in the United States house of representatives for solving your railroad combination."

CHAPTER XV. BOTH men looked at Breed curiously. He was not now addressing them, but gazing intently into the fireplace. Dr. Zephann came hurriedly over and put his hand upon Breed's shoulder. The door opened and Lillian came in. She had been about to ask some trivial question, but seeing that look in her grandfather's face, she too, hurried over to him and put her hand upon his other shoulder. At Zephann's touch Breed had given no sign, but to the touch of Lillian he responded instantly. He shook his head as one shakes off drowsiness and then looked up at Kelvin, with a resumption of his old shrewd twinkling.

"This thing is incredible," declared Rollins. "Such a state of affairs can not exist." "Such a state of affairs does exist," asserted Kelvin. "You may close your eyes and touch a pencil point in succession upon any half dozen names there not ringed with red. Wire those gentlemen and ask them to tell you by tomorrow how they intend to vote on this bill."

"In just this way," explained Kelvin. "With concessions by legislators from enough of these men to secure legislative control and go after the balance. This gives you flat rate pretty wide scope, Rollins, and it gives us until we can control our own legislation. We have, Mr. Breed and myself, as you must have appreciated by now, certain large ideas of reform. There never was a more just and equitable contrivance than your flat freight rate, but you can see at once what powerful interests are arrayed against it. We must conciliate those interests in order to stifle them. We will rent Hepperton's and Raymer's senators until we can buy them or supplant them with some of our own."

"They had touched the right cord. To the president," returned Breed. "The plans are under way," stated Breed. "We have had them secretly at work for a year. Today we could almost do without Hepperton and Raymer and the others but not quite. What do you suppose because of all the so called railroad senators? Did you ever wonder why they bothered you so little? Well, I took care of them—added them to my group. Mr. Rollins, I am an old man." Breed's hand strayed to the corner of his table where lay his well thumbed Bible. He clasped it in his hand and pressed it against his body. "I am an old man, an old, old man," he repeated. "I have done some evil in my life, I suppose, but all the time I have been acquiring more power than any man of the world has ever possessed, and I intend to use this power for good. I intend to use the very conditions by which I gained this power, for it is the fault of our economic system that I have so wonder would show the boy of Buckle's Arctica Balm that J. S. Loper, a carpenter of Marill, N.Y., always carries. "I have never had a cut, wound, bruise, or sore it would not soon heal," he writes. "You have much to learn," he returned. "Do you know that the army of the unemployed now numbers nearly a million? Do you know that there is an estimated 100,000,000 acres of waste land in this country? Do you know that a quarter of a million, which is sworn to change the existing order of things so that every man shall have an equal opportunity? Listen a moment. I could gain control of this organization and increase it to 10,000,000 if I had your opportunities to command a billion and a half dollars of cash."

"Or what are you talking?" Hepperton now was a frightened one. "The possibilities of a new and glorious order of things, a new social system, the head of the petroleum trust, one of the most perfect combines in existence and one which had been built almost entirely upon rebates and freight concessions of various sorts. Mr. Hepperton was a trifle impatient over the necessity of having to make such a trip and was insistent upon coming to a crisp working basis at once.
