Formula and Directions for Making Arsenical Dip.

To make 500 gallons--Dissolve pounds of Arsenic (Arsenica Florida, Comstock) and 24 pounds of soda in 30 gallons of pure water, by boiling 30 to 40 minutes, stirring frequently. Water should be free from iron and boiler should not be of iron. It is a light. Tank water is preferable to "city" as the latter has not been aged and the dip made with it will burn the clothes.

(Note--The organic matter in tank water may cause considerable sediment in the water, but this does not indicate imperfect solution of arsenic unless it is a very heavy brown sediment.)

When the Arsenic is dissolved, pour in enough water to reduce the temperature below boiling, pour in the one gallon of Pine Tar, in a fine stream, stirring constantly, until it is mixed. Pour the resulting mixture into the vat and add enough water to make 500 gallons.

The boiler should hold about 120 gallons. 1500 of dip can be made at once in it, enough to fill an ordinary vat, only that it seems to be impossible to get three gallons of tar in that quantity of water. In that case you can stir about two gallons of tar into the 100 to 120 gallons, put that into the vat, heat about 30 gallons of water, or dip from the vat, until it is pretty hot, but not boiling, stir in the rest of the tar and put into vat.

For re-filling the vat when it has been dipped low, I would suggest the following plan: Make up your medicine for 500 gallons of dip, using 1 1/2 gallons of water.
Then for re-filling the vat use one bucket of medicine to four buckets of water to make the dip.

LURE OF THE ARCTIC.

Problems That Await the Explorers of the Future.

With all that has been accomplished, many hundred thousands of square miles still remain in the 3,000,000 square miles of uncharted territory that existed prior to the expedition that resulted in the discovery of the pole.

Of unexplored regions in the north there remain but two of first importance, the inland ice cap of Greenland and the area represented by the large blank space on the map bounded by Bering strait and the pole, the western border of the arctic archipelago and the known open sea north of Siberia.

The theories of cotidal experts have it that within this region lies an undiscovered arctic continent or a series of large islands separated by narrow channels, the whole not greatly distant from Banks island, Prince Patrick island and Grant Land (the western limit of the arctic archipelago), while tradition among the Eskimos and indefinite reports of whalers strengthen theories in fixing the southern edge of the unknown land not far north of Point Barrow and the northern shores of America.

I must believe in the existence of such land, one corner of which I saw from Cape Thomas Hubbard in July, 1906, in the mountain peaks of Crocker Land.

If land of large extent be located west of Banks island and Grant Land the discovery from the standpoint of future exploration will be of unusual importance, since the new land will be a base for penetration of the remainder of the unknown area to the west.

In fact, since the theory of existence of extensive land, one corner of which is Crocker Land and another not far from Banks island, seems so likely to me and is so well accepted by many expert geographers and mathematicians I would divide the remaining greatest problem in the north into two separate problems--namely, the exploration of this land area and the exploration of the adjoining area beyond, between the pole and Bering strait.

As I said regarding the Crocker Land expedition, I would that my years were fewer that I also might penetrate again into the enchanted solitudes. I can hear the yelping of the dogs, the shouting of the drivers and forward rushing of the sledges as after days of weary travel across the ragged sea ice every man and dog spurts for the shore of that untrodden land lying a few yards ahead in the brilliant arctic sunlight. -- Robert E. Peary in American Museum Journal.

NAPOLEON'S FIRST VICTORY.

His Outgeneralled Archduke Charles With Wooden Soldiers.

It is a matter of history that at the battle of Aspern-Essling in 1809 Archduke Charles of Austria, considered by many one of the greatest soldiers of his day, inflicted upon Napoleon the first serious defeat that he had ever suffered.
Not so well known is the story of an earlier battle between these two soldiers.

One day in 1778 the Archduke Charles and his brother Ferdinand, aged seven and nine respectively, were playing with a box of wooden soldiers in an anteroom of the grand ducal palace at Florence. It happened that a gentleman, accompanied by his little son, called to pay his respects to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, the father of the two brothers. After waiting for some minutes in the anteroom the stranger was summoned to the grand duke's study.

The boy whom he left waiting in the room was a tall, aggressive child, with fine gray eyes and a prematurely serious expression. In his father's absence he amused himself by joining the two small archdukes in their mimic warfare on the carpet. Gradually, to their displeasure, he began to get the better of them.
His toy cannon, which he worked vigorously, moved down their soldiers as fast as they could set them up. At last, when a quarrel was imminent and the little archdukes were on the point of pummeling their adversary, they were restrained by the return of his father, accompanied by the kindly grand duke.

"Oh, but your youngster is beginning well, M. de Bonaparte," he said, laughing. "I see he has been outmaneuvering my sons while we have been talking. Well, good luck to him! I trust you will have no trouble in getting him into the establishment at Brienne."

It was indeed young Napoleon who, with the wooden soldiers and a toy cannon, had given evidence of the great military genius within him. M. de Bonaparte had called with his son to ask for the grand duke's personal recommendation, which he hoped would be of service to him in getting his son admitted to the military school at Brienne.
From "Reminiscences of a Diplomat's Wife," by Mrs. Hugh Fraser.

Animal Cleanliness.

A zoologist thus writes upon a point in which he claims that the lower animals set an example to many men:

"It has taken human beings many hundreds of years to acquire the habits of cleanliness and cleanliness, whereas the animals have always possessed them. From the time when they first made their appearance on earth animals have washed and combed and brushed themselves with tongue, claws and tail.
Many of them grow wretched and languish if deprived of any opportunity of taking a cold bath. As for the apes, they are such sticklers for cleanliness that they expel any member of the tribe who shows a disposition to shirk his duties in this respect. Even the insects show a scrupulous regard for neatness, as anybody who has watched a fly brushing itself with its feet, for instance, will readily admit."

Modest, Happy Writer.

After years of successful writing, with her stories translated into French and German, Maria Edgeworth said to a would be biographer, according to a sketch in the Lamp, that she had nothing to tell. Her life had always been peaceful, secluded, domestic and happy. She was fully satisfied with the experiences that had come to her. She said, "Imaginative as I am thought to be, I have always found the pleasures I have expected would be great have actually been greater in the enjoyment than in the anticipation." The magazine asks, "Is not that statement in itself a most remarkable life history?"

Business Caution.

"Waiter," said the hungry man.
"I want you to bring me a thick porterhouse steak with mushrooms."

"Is sorry, boss," replied Mr. Erasmus Pickles, "but you'll have to take Joe's plain steak."

"Why?"

"Structures I'm de boss. When de other gues'es sees an order like 'dat couin' into de cook dey's liable to git so jealous dey all loses deir appetites.'" -- Washington Star.

Then There Was a Fuss.

"Miss Doyle," said the six-year-old to the visitor who was waiting for mamma, "will you take one of your shoes off a minute?"
"My shoes?" repeated Miss Doyle in amazement. "Why, Johnnie?"
"Why, I heard mamma say you were getting crow's feet as fully."

NOTE FOR EDUCATION.

The proposed addition to the school house will only make room for the classes and teachers employed for this session, but it is thought that the accommodations will be sufficient for the next few years. The present building will be used this session to the best advantage and even then three classes will have to be taught in the court house. The people of the Independent district have been paying a tax of 45 cents for school purposes for the past several years but by extending the district, without interfering with other schools, will be able to reduce this tax by ten cents and the probable reduction as values increase next year and years to come. The tax levy, if the bonds are voted, will be ten cents less than formerly paid in the Independent school district and the funds of the extended district will be expended in the education of the same children as formerly because all the children of the new district were entitled to entry at the school of the old district.

The school board should be supported by the people because they have undertaken what is necessary and because their action is progressive. The extension of the district, while as a whole reducing the tax ten cents, will place the school on such a footing that the Sonora High School will have money enough to pay for the best teachers, put it in the best standing with higher educational institutions and keep up with the advance of educational desires of Texas and enable to give your children a thorough high school education at home. Two rooms of the proposed new building will not be finished according to the present intentions of the board but are provided for future development.

School will open in Sonora Monday September 1st for a 9 month term with eight teachers.

The auditorium of the present school building is being cut up into three class rooms for the coming session.

Mr. Taylor is Judge of the 41st Civil District court at San Antonio and his elevation to this office is evidence of his merit and appreciation by the bar of San Antonio. "Sam" as he was before going to San Antonio a few years ago and by "Sam" he wishes to be called by his friends in Sonora where he won his eyes. Judge Taylor is accompanied by two of his children. They are the guests of Judge and Mrs. E. S. Briant.

The cooperation of the State of Texas in permitting county or district local option elections for the eradication of the fever tick, is a great advance movement in the destruction of the "Texas fever" cry which keeps such counties as Sutton with his fine cattle, horses, mules, etc. from enjoying the "native" market of the country said Dr. P. B. Scott, Inspector of the U. S. Department of Agriculture who was in Sonora last week. Dr. Scott is an enthusiast on tick eradication and was here with R. E. Forbes state Veterinarian on other business, but as he is actively in charge of cleaning up West Texas, he suggested that if the people of the Sonora county wished to avail themselves of the advantages of being above the line he would come again and talk the matter over with them. Dr. Scott said the election under the new law carried in Tarrant county on August 9th by a vote of 91 to 58 and that a similar election would be held in Schleicher county in September and he hoped that Sutton would be the same safe district at the same time.

Hold Back The Cattle
 "In my opinion," said R. R. Russell, the well known cattle man and banker, "this is the reason for the Texas cattleman to refrain from marketing cattle as the drought is not a factor in the situation in this State. Texas cattlemen, through their business acumen, are not threatened with a shortage of stock water, as the trusty windmills and gasoline engine is ready to lift water when occasion demands. Kansas and Oklahoma, which are dependent upon the streams, are less fortunately situated, except in isolated places, where the ranchmen hold their cattle to be finished up on meal and hulls later in the season. No serious conditions exist in Texas now, and it seems to me that every cattleman who can do so should hold his cattle until there is more urgent necessity for marketing. With the large number of cattle being formed to market in the States north of us, the Texan who persists in sending his cattle to can have little hope of getting what his cattle are worth, even though they were fat. It is the dry weather and not the demand for beef which is responsible for the heavy runs to market." Mr. Russell is eminently correct in his conclusion that a man who ships cattle to market now hoping to get the top of the market will be sadly disappointed. Shipper--San Antonio Express.

Artesia, N. M., August 20.--During a fire which destroyed the residence of Dr. A. L. Taylor in Artesia this morning, C. H. Hudson, a lineman for the local electric company, three times crawled through a burning room flat on his face to save 3 year old son of Dr. Taylor. As he went through the room the hose was played on his back, to save him from the heat. Twice he was forced to come outside without the child, but the third time he found the boy on the floor of a closet and brought him back with him. He was compelled to feel his way through the room with his eyes shut. The baby was so badly burned that it died soon after it was brought out of doors.

IN A TURKISH COFFEE HOUSE.

The Politeness is Effusive and the Prices Are Very Low.

The etiquette of the coffee house in Turkey or those coffee houses which have not been too much infected by Europe is one of their most characteristic features. Something like it prevails in Italy, where you tip your hat on entering and leaving a cafe.

In Turkey, however, I have seen a newcomer salute one after another each person in a crowded coffee room, once on entering the door and again after taking his seat, and be so saluted in return—either by putting the right hand to the heart and uttering the greeting "Merhabah" or by making the temennah, that triple sweep of the hand which is the most graceful of salutes. I have also seen an entire company rise upon the entrance of an old man and yield him the corner of honor.

When your coffee is ready it is poured into an after dinner coffee cup or into a miniature bowl and brought to you on a tray with a glass of water. A foreigner can almost always be spotted by the manner in which he finally partakes of these refreshments.

A Turk sips his water first, partly to prepare the way for the coffee, but also because he is a con-noisseur of the former liquid as other men are of stronger ones.
And he lifts his coffee cup by the sauce, whether it possess a handle or no, managing the two together in a dextrous way of his own.

The current price for all this, not including the water pipe, is 10 paras —a trifle over a cent—for which the kahvehci will cry you "blessing." More pretentious establishments charge 20 paras, while a giddy few rise to a piaster—not quite 5 cents—or a piaster and a half. That, however, begins to look like extortion.

And mark that you do not tip the waiter. I have often been surprised to be charged no more than the tariff, although I gave a larger piece to be changed, and it was perfectly evident that I was a foreigner. That is an experience which rarely befalls a traveler among his own compatriots. It has even happened to me, which is rarer still, to be charged nothing at all, nay, to be steadfastly refused when I persisted in attempting to pay, simply because I was a foreigner and therefore a guest.—H. G. Dwight in Scrivener's.

Only by a Thread.

A young Alsatian woman affirmed one day that French genius was altogether admirable. "Out of nothing," she said, "it will make a masterpiece." At that moment a German physician gathered from the carpet a single blond hair. "Do you believe," he asked, "that the French could make a work of art with that?"

"Perhaps," she responded.
Some days later the physician received a delicate ornament, a German eagle holding in its claws a single blond hair, below which hung the escutcheon of Alsace, with this device:

"L'Allemagne tu tient l'Alsace que par un fil" (Germany holds Alsace only by a thread).—Cris de

A Railway Meal in Russia.

Possibly the most generous meal in the world is at the railway halt between St. Petersburg and Moscow. It is about midnight. You walk into a huge hall, spread with hot and cold meats, tea, vegetables, fish of all kinds to be sampled, voka at hand. Everybody walks round and takes what he wishes at the moment. The train sounds the departing note. The passengers walk out and say at the door what they have eaten and drunk, and pay. Russia is said to be a dishonest country, but this system pays. The Russian won't cheat the people who provide his supper.

Absent-minded.

The story is told of a college professor who was noted for his concentration of mind. The professor was returning home one night from a scientific meeting, still pondering over the subject. He had reached his room in safety when he heard a noise which seemed to come from under the bed. "Is some one here?" he asked. "No, professor," answered the intruder, who knew
of the professor's peculiarities.
"That's strange. I was positive some one was under my bed," commented the learned man.

A Sad Blow.

"I know I'm not very attractive, but I had no idea I was beginning to look old as well as plain," she said.
"But you're not."
"Yes, I am. A man offered me his seat in the street car today, and that's the first time that's happened in years."—Detroit Free Press.

HOW IT FEELS TO BE SHOT.

Not a Pleasant Sensation, of Course, Yet Not Very Painful.

"I was shot in Cuba in '98," says a well known army officer, "and I did not know it for awhile. It was not, of course, a pleasant sensation.
It was just like the sting of a pin or a knife when the skin is broken.
It was nothing to knock a man down. I knew of many cases during the war with Spain where a man did not know he was shot until somebody showed him the blood running down his shirt or trousers." Similar testimony is afforded by an army surgeon who has served for many years. He treated many gunshot wounds during his time and was himself shot, a circumstance that qualifies him to give a doubly expert opinion.

"A mimic ball passed through my left leg at Shiloh," says this surgeon, "and I did not experience any particular sensation except, perhaps, one similar to being jabbed with a sharply pointed knife. I felt the ball go through the skin, but it gave no sensation in passing through the muscles. That, of course, is on account of the greater number of nerves in the skin as compared with the muscles. The ball passed almost entirely through my leg and was removed a considerable time later, but I suffered almost no inconvenience.

"The wound, of course, swelled, as any wound of the kind will, but I should imagine that the bullet now in use would cause much less trouble and pain than the old round bullet, as the sharp point of the conical bullet enters the flesh very readily."

There is a great deal of misapprehension as to the intensity of the pain caused by the entrance into the human body of various objects. Many persons fancy that if a man is shot at all he must therefore suffer intensely. The reverse is true. A slight wound, a mere abrasion of the skin, is sometimes far more painful than a wound caused by the entrance of a bullet directly into the muscles or even into a bone. The skin is filled with nerves, and when any of them are torn by the ball the pain is extreme.
If the bullet plunges directly through the skin into the body the only nerves disturbed are those in the comparatively small space the bullet strikes. Since there are few nerves in the muscles, the nerves of the skin convey the sensation of pain to the brain.

In the same way the greater portion of the pain experienced in the amputation of an arm or a leg is occasioned when the skin is cut, and the subsequent cutting of the muscles and the sawing of the bone, in which all the pain is popularly supposed to be centered, amount to little in comparison. —Harper's Weekly.

Why He Enjoyed It.

A noted comedian was walking down Broadway New York, when a huge crowd attracted his attention.
He joined the crowd to find that it was watching a handful of laborers who were digging a hole in the street.

"God, ain't it," said a manager,
"show little it takes to gather a New York crowd? Here we are, a couple of hundred of us, breathlessly watching a few men shovel dirt. By the way," the manager added, "that chesty chap in the pink shirt seems to enjoy his job. Look at the showy way he flourishes his shovel."

"Why," said the comedian, "that's Platt, an ex-actor. You see, he never played to such a large and appreciative audience before."—Exchange.

Unconcerned.

Recalling the horrors of war General Sikes once said in a Memorial day address:

"Those horrors were so ghastly and so numerous that we became in a certain sense hardened to them.
Not really hardened, but so it seemed. Our mood seemed almost like the Chinaman's.

"A Chinaman was employed as a cook in Los Angeles at the time when the Yellow river flood carried off its thousands. The man's master hurried to tell him of the calamity, thinking it would overwhelm him, but the cook's only response was the calm and practical one:

"Plenty Chinamen left."—New

Naming the Baby.

the new baby.

"I think Esmeralda is too sweet," said one of the infant's aunts.
"Alfreda is better and more uncommon," said another.
"How would Alvin do?" asked a third.
"Hardly," said the fond father.
"You seem to be getting away from under the bed. Is some one
of the professor's peculiarities.

BULLED THE MARKET.

Esker At-Wood Did It in 1864 and Landed in the Pillory.

Restrictive legislation of financial business, "corners" and speculation is not new. England tried it more than once, but does not seem to have succeeded very well in the long run.

In 1864 one John-at-Wood, a baker, was arrested and charged with having feloniously "bulled" wheat. The indictment read:

"Whereas, one Robert de Cawode had two quarters of wheat for sale in the common market on the pavement within Newgate, he, the said John, cunningly and by secret words whispering in his ear, fraudulently withdrew Cavode out of the common market, and they went together into the church of the Friars Minor, and there John bought the two quarters at fifteen pence halfpenny per bushel, being twopence halfpenny over the common selling price at that time in the market, to the great loss and deceit of the common people and to the increase of the dearth of wheat."

At-Wood pleaded not guilty, but the jury found that he not only turned the trick, but had afterward boasted of his crime. He was thereupon sentenced to be put in the pillory for three hours.

Later, after the Bank of England was formed and bank shares created, a wave of speculation ensued, and there was an act passed "to restrain the numbers and ill practices of brokers and stockjobbers." In 1707 a law was enacted licensing brokers, and there were other bills of a similar nature passed in 1711, 1713 and 1719.

Then there came the collapse of the south sea "bubble," which resulted in 1734 in the Sir John Barnard act "to prevent the infamous practice of stockjobbing" which forbade short selling under penalty of $500 for each transaction, as well as dealing in puts and calls.
This act was finally admitted by the government to be a failure and was repealed in 1860.

Later legislation was also repealed, and today there is no law on England's statute books restricting speculation.—Wall Street Journal.

Properties of Gold.

Pure gold is unaffected by the atmosphere either at ordinary temperatures or when the metal is heated. It is also proof against the action of common acids when used singly. Moreover, it confers its properties more or less upon copper and silver when these metals are al-loyed with it. Thus, for example, twelve carat gold will withstand the action of nitric acid and the atmosphere at ordinary temperature, but some of the copper will be oxidized during annealing. Nine parts of gold may be alloyed with ten parts of platinum in an ordinary crucible fire, but such an alloy will not be uniform. A large proportion of platinum will free itself from the gold on solidification, and a homogeneous alloy of the two metals cannot be obtained.

Rather Cutting.

Young Mr. Jorkins had been buying an antique sword at a small arts and crafts shop in a Connecticut town.

"Now," he said in a superior way to the young person behind the counter, who was proprietor and craftsman in one, "I'd like to have something engraved on it. I suppose you could do that?"

"Oh, yes."
"I should like something that would—er—denote what I am—something subtly symbolic, don't you know. Could you suggest something?"

"I don't know about its subtlety," said the young person gravely, "but I could engrave a cipher upon it."

Snake Worship.

Python worship or the worship of snake gods is still practiced in parts of the west coast of Africa. In Du-boney and Ashanti there are temples where pythons are kept to receive the adoration of the people.
The snakes are not confined to the precincts of the temples. Small holes are left in the inclosing wall, through which they pass and sometimes make themselves very much at home in the houses of the people. When a stray snake is found word is sent to the temple, and the priests come and with many apologies to his snookship pick him up and carry him back home.

Made Sure of the Pence.

The ferryboat on a Scotch lake was well on her way when a violent storm arose and fears were entertained for her safety. The ferry-man and his mate (both husband-ers) held a consultation, and after a short debate the ferryman turned to his passengers, and remarked anxiously, "We'll just tak' your tuppence now, for we dinna ken what might come over us."

MEXICO'S FAMOUS CYPRESS.

This Monster Tree Has Lived Longer Than Anything on Earth.

The oldest living thing in the world stands in southern Mexico.
It is a famous cypress tree in the churchyard of the village of Santa Maria del Tule. Four feet from the ground measurements have shown this tree has a girth of 136 feet. The tree is situated two and one-half miles east of Oaxaca and has been the object of study for several scientists.

The approximate age of this giant of the vegetable kingdom can only be estimated. According to Robert H. Moulton, it is 5,000 or 6,000 years old and is likely to endure for many thousand more years.
His conclusions are drawn from the gigantic hole of the tree and his knowledge of the slow growth of the cypress.

These figures are staggering to the imagination. Taking the lowest computation, when the seed from which the tree sprang fell upon the earth King Menes was reigning in Egypt 3,000 years B. C.

The last scientific measurement of the Santa Maria del Tule cypress was made by Dr. Von Schrenk in 1903, a century after Humboldt discovered it, while on his famous tour of equatorial America.

Before the broad and towering bulk of this one life, which has persisted without interruption since the date of the dawning of history, Dr. Von Schrenk on his first visit halted in awe. Authorities on trees had declared the discovery of the approximate age of this cypress to be one of the most important problems in arboriculture. They had expressed a hope that the next scientist who should visit the ancient living monument would not fail to complete the evidence needed.

The mayor of Santa Maria del Tule, however, opposed a barrier of adamant. Measure the circumference of the tree? Surely. Photograph it? Indeed, yes. But to take an instrument and bore from the trunk a plug two feet deep and one-half an inch in diameter? Horrors, no!

So Dr. Von Schrenk was compelled to content himself with measuring the bole and with taking a photograph. He also observed a wood tablet which Humboldt 100 years before had nailed to the tree.—New York Press.

Hammers.

Hammers are represented on the monuments of Egypt twenty centuries before our era. They greatly resemble the hammer now in use, save that there are no claws on the back for the extraction of nails.
The first hammer was undoubtedly stone held in the hand. Claw hammers were invented some time ago in the middle ages. Illustrated manuscripts of the eleventh century represent carpenters with claw hammers. Hammers are of all sizes, from the daily instruments used by the jeweler, which weigh less than half an ounce, to the gi-gantic hammers of shipbuilding establishments, some of which weigh as much as fifty tons and have a falling 75 feet from winch to a hammer. Every trade has its own hammer and its own way of using it.

Correcting His Ignorance.

Two highlanders being in Glasgow for the first time were taking a walk through the city. They encountered much to their astonishment a water cart wetting the street. Never having seen anything of the kind before, James, under a mistaken idea, ran after the cart and cried out to the driver:

"Hey, mon—hey, mon, yer losin' a' yer water!"

His companion, much annoyed at James' want of knowledge, ran after him, caught him by the arm and said rather testily:

"James, mon, dinna be showin' yer ignorance. D'yer no see it's to keep the laddies off the back of the cart?"—Harper's Bazar.

Presence of Mind.

A captured Turkish officer on being led forth to execution asked for a glass of water before he died. On receiving it he looked uneasily around as if afraid of assassination.
"Drink," said the commander.
"No harm shall come to thee until thou hast drunk that water." Instantly the commander's word was given the prisoner dashed the water on the sandy ground and thereby saved his life.

He Saw a Light.

"These opera glasses were given to me a year ago," she said sweetly.
"Aren't they beautiful?" he replied.
"Yes," she answered, "but I discovered this afternoon that they're beginning to rust from lack of use." Whereupon he tumbled to himpences and invited her out to the theater.—Detroit Free Press.

TREATMENT FOR A CUT.

Wash, Sterilize and Bind It, but Do Not Use Adhesive Plaster.

No cut should ever be allowed to produce pus. It is not only dangerous, but utterly unnecessary. Pus means infection by noxious bacteria. The skin almost always has these evil things swarming in millions upon it, and when the skin is cut they enter the hole and multiply with amazing rapidity. They swarm along the lymphatic vessels and often cause abscesses to break out at distant points.

A cut should not be closed except by a surgeon. No mistake can be worse than to put a piece of adhesive plaster over a cut, for this simply imprisons the dangerous germs and prevents the cut from healing. Of course, if one could be absolutely certain that the cut was surgically clean, closing it would be virtually impossible. The proper treatment for a cut, even a little one, is to wash it with clean water, then with an antiseptic, and to cover it with sterilized gauze or any absolutely clean linen or cotton bandage.

There is a multitude of good antiseptics. Alcohol is excellent.
Most surgeons say iodine is the best of all. But the most convenient for home use is peroxide of hydrogen. The way this works is by forming a chemical combination with blood, lymph, pus and other fluids, which liberates oxygen rapidly. Pure oxygen is death to all germs.

It is sometimes a puzzle where to get absolutely clean bandages when a drug store is closed or far away.
But it is easy if you remember that great heat will effectually sterilize a piece of a handkerchief, a strip of sheeting or the tail of an old shirt.
A flatiron, so hot as almost to scorch, passed a dozen times over the stuff will serve the purpose.
Boiling for ten minutes produces absolute sterilization.—New York World.

The Oldest Bank.

It is thought that the oldest bank in the world is the Palazzo San Giorgio, on the Piazza Caricamento in Genoa. This institution has played a prominent role in the history of the Italian city. It was built in the year 1660 by order of Giuglielmo Boccanagra, "captain" of the republic of Genoa, and, after serving as his residence, was the headquarters of the famous company and bank of St. George. It is held that our modern system of banking sprang from this historic edifice and that the Societa delle Compre di San Giorgio was the first "limited liability company."

The architect of the building was a monk named Oliviero. Although its architecture has undergone a number of changes, the facade still speaks eloquently of the thirteenth century. Its arcades with pointed arches and its windows formed of little columns are exceedingly attractive.—Harper's.

Cheering the Invalid.

They sent Willie to inquire about the condition of a sick neighbor, giving him instructions not to worry the sick man.

Willie returned with a pleased look on his face as though he had carried out his instructions to the very letter.

"I tell you, mammy, I cheered up Mr. Smith all right. I told him that when he died we was all going to his funeral and that the neighbors had already chipped in to buy a wreath for his casket, and I only asked him one question, 'What was his favorite flower?'"

"It would be so nice, I told him, to have the wreath made out of them."—National Monthly.

Thinking and Wanting.

"Where's that waiter?" growled the man. "Why doesn't he bring us something to eat? Everybody else around here has been served long and we are still gazing at the ice and a canafe."

"It is because you prefaced your order with 'I think,'" said a friend.
"You said, 'I think we will have this and that.' He didn't consider that an order. He thought you hadn't really made up your mind, and he is giving you time to decide upon something. When in a hurry to be waited on in any restaurant never say 'I think I would like so and so.' Just say 'I want this,' and you'll get it."—New York Times.

Upon asking an eminent scientist how he accounted for enjoying exceptional and unbroken good health a doctor was informed that the cause was habitual self denial. "In fact," admitted the professor, "I only partake of one meal each day."
"Hush!" exclaimed the physician in alarm. "Pray keep this to yourself!
If many people were to follow your example we medical men should be ruined."—Westminster Gazette.
