GOVERNOR ASKS DEFINITION OF "OPEN SALOON"

Submits Views Liquor Regulation To Legislature.

Governor James V. Allred submitted the subject of liquor regulation to a special session of the forty-fourth legislature meeting at noon Monday.

In a message personally delivered to a joint session of the house and the senate, the governor called for legislation clearly defining an "open saloon" and preserving the integrity of territory dry under local option.

He announced he would submit the subject of fixing salaries for county offices tomorrow and within the week that of old-age pensions. It was expected the last would open the broad field of revenue and taxation.

The governor declared no legislature ever had been called to enlighten the people to deal with problems of greater importance and the "combined wisdom" of the legislative and executive departments was needed to solve them.

Want No Subterfuge
"In my humble judgment the people want no subterfuge definition or camouflaged saloon, whereby, even though the brass rail bar is closed, the saloon practically the same evils of open saloon sales will again be upon us," he said.

Governor Allred did not commit himself as to the merits of the state monopoly or private licensing systems of liquor control, saying the legislature had power to establish either.

Gov't Control Of Cotton Production Is Debate Subject
Austin, Texas, Sept. 17.—Cooperation of the Division of Information of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Texas division, at A. & M. College, has been obtained by the Intercollegiate League in furnishing material on the League debate question this year, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the University of Texas Bureau of Public School Interests, State office for the League administration.

The question to be debated this year concerns the advisability of government control of cotton production. W. H. Darrow, field specialist in information of the AAA, has advised the League that the Division of Information is promoting discussion among farmers on topics involving many of the issues included in the debate question.

The list of bulletins and mimeographed material to be provided by the Division of Information includes about 20 items, and will be furnished in quantities sufficient to satisfy the debating squads of the largest high schools. As many copies of the printed material will be supplied as the school requires to 20, and two copies of each of the pamphlets will be included package. There will be no to any member school in the for this service.

The regular League bulletin of 200 prepared by T. A. Rousse, adj-professor of public speaking at university, is now in the press, and s of it will be available for distribution early in September.

W. H. (BILL) EVANS
Lubbock Attorney
Candidate for State Senator
30th Senatorial District

W. H. EVANS IS CANDIDATE FOR SENATE HONORS

Lubbock Attorney Sets Forth Platform For Special Election.

"If other parts of the State get a hog, West Texas should get a hog, especially when we raise the animal."

That, in a nutshell, is the campaign slogan of W. H. (Bill) Evans, Lubbock attorney and candidate for the State Senate from the 30th district in the forthcoming special election on Sept. 28.

Other planks in the Evans platform, in brief:

"Liquor Control: Favors state monopoly and sale of intoxicants in unbroken packages only, so that maximum revenue from liquor will go into the state treasury; considers the term "open saloon" to mean any place where public drinking is permitted and is opposed to any such methods of handling Texas' liquor problems; stands squarely for legislation protecting dry areas against liquor traffic and for legislation which will enable law enforcement officers to arrest and prosecuting officers to convict liquor law violators in dry districts.

"Old Age Pensions": Favors early assistance to permit the state to care for its needy aged and to guard against heavy discounts in the payments of pensions stands for revenue raised from the sale of intoxicants to be diverted to the care of our needy old people; proposes to work for legislation which will protect the tax payers from pensioning aged who are not needy and who are thus not entitled to a public pension.

"Highways": Since Texas Technological college does not yet have a large alumni body to help care for its needs, proposes to foster, day and night, generous state support of the college to permit it to continue its phenomenal growth and to become what its founders proposed it to be—the Southwest's leading technological institution.

"Highways": Will work for and foster continuance of the far-flung West Texas highway program until the 30th senatorial district has a complete, connected system of highways to compare with such systems in the heavier populated sections of Texas.

"School Apportionment": Will work to place school apportionment upon the basis of average daily attendance, rather than upon school census, thus keeping more West Texas tax money in West Texas for the education of West Texas children, rather than to continue sending West Texas tax money to South and East Texas to educate mythical Negro and Mexican school children—children listed by the census as of school age but do not attend school, their apportionment going to the school they should be attending, just the same as if they were there.

With a background of education, teaching and the practice of law, Mr. Evans comes before the voters of the 30th District with what he believes is a broad insight into their problems.

Born in Uvalde in 1899, he received his early education in the public school and graduated from Uvalde High school as valedictorian of his class. Entering the University of Texas, he received, with honors, a bachelor of arts degree in 1926. Dividing then his education with periods of teaching in Austin High school, the University Extension Department, and the University Department of Government, and in High Schools of

Wasps Imported To Lead Attacks In Bollworm War

A vicious little insect is going to start soon in this country between mercenaries brought from overseas and a resident, but nasty, army of destruction.

The department of agriculture in Washington, D. C., using the fastest air and water routes, has brought from Egypt three lots of promising wasps, which will be increased to a swarm to loose against the pink bollworm in small sections of the cotton belt. The bollworm has not yet reached the main belt, and the authorities want to make certain that it doesn't.

The wasps were obtained with the assistance of the Egyptian ministry of agriculture. In two weeks they made the trip from Cairo to the department's insectary at Presidio, Texas, where they now are engaged in building up force.

One of these small insects—called Microbracon Kirkpatricki—long has been a deadly and noted fighter against the bollworm, but previous efforts to bring it to this country had failed, the insect being unable to survive the long haul journey. Air express, ocean liners and refrigeration facilities were used this time.

The other two types of foreign wasps are Exeristes Roborator and Elasmus. Both have had long experience in being parasites upon the bollworm in Egypt.

Cotton Forms Soon Available To Take Care Of New Loan

Forms will soon be available to take care of the new 10 cent loan on cotton and the adjustment payment known as subsidy, J. B. Waide, Jr., Bailey county agent, stated. The 10 cent loan will probably be handled as it has in the past. The county agents office will have charge of the program.

The following information will be required on the new forms that are being printed: name and address of the producer and purchaser, number of bales, gross weight including bagging and ties, price per pound paid the producer amount of charges if any, amount paid the producer and the signature of the purchaser.

Any producer who sells his cotton before August 1, 1936 and who agrees to participate in the 1936 program make application for and is eligible to receive the adjustment on any cotton grown by him up to the amount of handbook cotton tax exemption certificate received in 1935. Waide stated a producer does not have to be a contract signer in order to participate in this program.

The adjustment payment will be the difference between the average of the 10 spot markets on the date of sale and 12 cents. The maximum payment will not be more than two cents.

"MITCHELL FOR SENATOR" CLUB IS ORGANIZED AT MASS MEETING IN MULESHOE MONDAY, AID CAMPAIGN

Near 100 Workers Carry Campaign Literature To All Parts of District; Efforts Made To Make Bailey 100 Per Cent.

Business men, farmers and professional men and many other interested citizens held a mass meeting in the District courtroom at Muleshoe, Monday afternoon and organized a "Bailey County Jess Mitchell for Senator" club.

The slogan adopted was "Bailey County 100 per cent for Jess Mitchell." Jess Osborn was elected president of the organization and K. K. Smith, Secretary.

A committee composed of J. B. Burkhead, Cecil Tate, and E. C. Smith was appointed to contact every business man and woman in town and secure the signatures of all professional men, teachers and farmers to a resolution, of which they had 10,000 copies printed and have put out over the district to show Bailey county's loyalty to her candidate for Senator.

Enthusiasm is at high pitch, all business men in Muleshoe and over the county have extended their personal

THREE POINT PROGRAM UP TO HOUSES

Liquor Control, Old Age Pensions And Fees Are Up.

JESS MITCHELL
Editor, Muleshoe
Candidate for State Senator
30th Senatorial District

JESS MITCHELL ANNOUNCES FOR STATE SENATOR

Pledges Constructive Service For West Texas Needs.

Jess Mitchell, editor at Muleshoe, in Bailey county, announces his candidacy as State Senator for the 30th Senatorial district, to succeed the late Hon. Arthur P. Duggan, whose recent death left that office to be filled by an election called by Gov. Allred for September 28.

Mr. Mitchell in making his announcement, says he is entirely mindful of the opportunity for service and of the grave responsibility this office entails. He considers holding of public office a sacred trust. "I verily believe," he said, "that aside from the duties of the Church, there is nothing more serious and more sacred than duties of State."

"I make no pretensions whatever at being a skilled politician; have never held public office and am not interested in politics per se; but I am tremendously interested in the welfare of this great area of West Texas. I have, in years past, as a public spirited citizen been able to accomplish many favorable things for this section, and confidently believe that as an official I can accomplish even more and greater results.

"I am 55 years of age, virtually in the prime of business life, strong physically, alert mentally and sound morally. I am a college and a university graduate. While I am now and have been for several years past a newspaper editor, I am also a farmer, owning three farms embracing several hundred acres, one of them an irrigated farm near Muleshoe on which myself and family reside. I was born on a farm, have been an actual dirt farmer and am well acquainted with the farmer's problems.

"I was a soldier in the Spanish-American war, served in the secret service department during the World War, and was at one time United States Commissioner at Columbus, N. M., under appointment of President Woodrow Wilson.

"The citizens of this State have spoken in large majority favoring old age pensions, repeal in some sections and abolition of the office fee system. As your Senator, it would be my privilege and pleasure to do all within my power to enforce these mandates by passing such laws as would grant to the needy aged this financial income and to arrange for its payment; to pass such laws as would regulate the sale of liquor to the best advantage of the State, as well as for the protection of those counties not favoring it, and to use my strongest influence toward enforcing the Fee amendment as authorized by the citizenry.

"I shall be glad to discuss in public or private other phases of governmental matters with citizens, many of which will be taken up in public speaking.

"My one desire is to give consistent, conscientious and constructive service to the State in general and especially to this district in West Texas, looking toward eventually making this area the best part of this great Lone Star Empire. My great wish is to keep step with the citizens of this district, to work in unison with them, and to eventually participate with them in the blessings which will come to all of us because we have fought a good fight—we have kept the faith.

"There are innumerable benefits to which this area is entitled, ought to have and could have with proper representation.

A triple assignment faced the forty-fourth legislature called into its first special session at noon Monday.

The immediate task was to evolve a system of liquor control to replace statewide prohibition repealed Aug. 24. Others were to set up an old-age pension plan and eliminate the fee system of remunerating county officials.

Raising Revenues Big Problem
Closely connected was the problem of raising revenue to defray the cost of pensions and possibly to meet the huge deficit in the general Confederate funds.

In the background were the subjects of automobile driver's licensing, delinquent tax collections and the fee system, depending on submission by Governor Allred.

To Limit Consideration
Governor Allred indicated he would limit immediate consideration to regulation of the liquor traffic, but would submit old-age pensions and abolition of the fee system in early date. He was expected to recommend tax legislation simultaneously with old-age pensions.

Members said prospects were for a stormy session. Speaker Coke Stevenson of Junction and Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul of Houston maintained after a conference with Governor Allred that the work would be done in 30 days but others said it might not be consummated "by Christmas."

Bitter Clashes Expected
In liquor regulations and old-age pension, most members said, lay the seed of the most bitter clashes. One member favored a state monopoly while another advocated state licensing of private dealers. Bitter clashes over terms of any bill on the subject were forecast.

Advocate of private sales argued the state ought not to enter the liquor business, while opponents maintained the profit motive should be removed.

"If strict control is what they want," said Representative George Moffett of Chillicothe, a dry leader, "it will be easier to bring about when profits are absent."

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE DEPENDS LARGELY ON PUPILS GOOD HEALTH

Austin, Texas, Sept. 17.—The beginning of another school year is here. The weeks have provided for school children the opportunity for mental rest and relaxation in the summer months made for physical growth and development. Thousands of boys and girls will advance to a higher grade as they turn toward the schoolhouse. In addition, a new group of children, invited by parents or other children, will be entering school for the first time.

The years spent in school represent training for life work. Such training accomplishes most when administered to pupils and students with clear minds and sound bodies. Moreover, this training must be on without serious interruption. Other things being equal, the school with a fine record for attendance is more apt to approach a high standard of education than the school with poor enrollment due to avoidable disease, declared Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer.

It is unfortunate from any standpoint when children are kept away from school because of illness; doubly so when sickness is due to preventable causes. No school need have its attendance record shattered because of an outbreak of smallpox or diphtheria. Parents in increasing number are having their children safeguarded against these diseases in the first year of life.

Likewise, through child health conferences, for preschool children, more and more attention is being given to work of immunization against preventable diseases and to the correction of dental and other remediable physical defects. Such measures will so far forward assuring good health and regular attendance throughout the period of school life. See your physician about diphtheria and smallpox immunization.

PUBLIC ACCEPTANCE

New car production for the first 7 months of 1935 surpassed the entire year output for 1934. We all figured that Uncle Henry had too big a schedule mapped out in his million car program for this year, but where he had the advantage of us at the time of announcement was that he knew what a wonderful car he would produce and we did not. It did not take the public long to realize the wonderful value and the million car program is now past history. Drive a V-8 today if you have not done so!

WATSON DEMONSTRATION CLUB The home demonstration club met Wednesday, September 11, with Mrs. Harless.

After an enjoyable recreation, sponsored by Miss Lela Key, we discussed preparations for the fair. Mrs. David St. Clair urged every member of the club to have an entry. She took names of those who already had something prepared.

Mrs. Harless made a report on arranging the pantry. She also made a report of the county picnic.

We are proud to say that we had two new members, Mrs. A. E. Cook and Thelma J. Cook. Mrs. Key and Mrs. Holster served nice refreshments to all present.

JOYLAND H. D. CLUB

The Joyland club met at Mrs. Albert Simmons' for a party demonstration last Friday. After a short business session, the club enjoyed a visit to the model pantry and Mrs. Simmons lectured on the family food budget, and how to meet the family needs. The pantry was very attractive and answered the needs of her family of five in that it contained an adequate supply of green and leafy vegetables and fruits. These were shelved and labeled in compliance with the 4-H Pantry requirements.

It was an interesting and profitable afternoon. Those present were: Mesdames Simmons, Claude Gage, R. D. Gatewood, L. L. Daniell, Lena Daniell, Tergie Jordan, E. L. Williams and one visitor, Mrs. Crobbis of Electra.

The club planned to meet again on Wednesday at Mrs. R. D. Gatewood's and quit the club quilt which will be given to the lucky winner at a near date. The next regular meeting will be an all day canning session, with Miss Stewart, our H. D. Agent present.

Old Grad Week

By JAMES BOLGER

"As I live and breathe, it's my old pal and classmate, Matt Brown. Meet my son, Matt." "Charley Davis! Meet my boy, too, Charley?"

Old Grad week in Pleasantville, and that scene was repeated hundreds of times during the day. Matt Brown wandered about the old grounds. A huge smile on his face, he kept chuckling and always that right hand was ready and willing to clasp the hand of an old classmate.

By his side strode his boy, Jerry. He ran the mile in the fastest distance clocked, and the other boys pointed him out to their fathers as Jerry Brown, that sensational miler.

Jerry seemingly didn't hear the comments but Matt and his heart was warm within him that his boy had done so well.

"I tell you, Jerry," he said, "there's nothing like it. To come back to the old school and march along with your old classmates. Just wait till you've been out as long as I have and then see how you feel about it."

He chuckled again and glanced at Jerry. But a shadow had crossed Jerry's face and there seemed to be a load of pain in his eyes.

"I guess so, dad. I'll probably feel the same way." Matt faced the boy squarely. "Tell me, Jerry," he said, quietly, his broad face set in determined lines, the same determination that had enabled him to reach the top in a hard fighting world.

"There's something wrong, and I want you to let me help you. Is it your exams?" "No," said the boy. "I'm third man in my class."

"Well, then, what else can it be? Is it a girl? Money? I can't think of anything else. You know, Jerry, that I'm willing to back you to the limit. You don't have to hesitate around your old dad."

"I'd like to ask a favor of you, dad," Jerry said. "I'm glad, my boy. Then: 'But—no, I guess I'd better not.'"

"Jerry!" There was startled surprise in the older man's voice. "Jerry, haven't I always loved you and helped you? Have I ever failed you in any way whatever?"

"Dad, you've been the best dad to me that anyone could have been. But—no, it seems so small to find fault now."

He seemed to swallow a lump in his throat. "It's about your introducing me to everybody as your boy. Couldn't you change it to: 'It would mean so much to me.'"

Jerry tried to see his dad's face but it was turned away, quiet. Brown seemed very interested in a group of grads across the street. Strange how they seemed so dim and shimmery.

"I understand, Jerry," he said slowly. "I think, 'I guess I've been selfish, my boy. I'll try not to be that way again.'"

Jerry threw out his hands. "I knew you'd have it in your mind. 'But, I thought—' his voice faltered for a moment. He was thinking of the boy he'd never known. He went on after a little silence: "I know, and realize all you've done for me, dad. I can never repay you. You never bid from me the fact that I was your adopted son. It seems to me as though you've found it out later. But you don't know how I envy the fellows around here."

He looked at Matt again to see how he was taking it. But Matt stubbornly kept watching the group on the other side. Jerry shrugged his shoulders. There was a hopeless note in his voice now.

"Gee, dad," he said. "I didn't realize that you would take it so hard. Can't you see it in my way? But as the other still did not answer, he seemed to sense the futility of his hopes. "It just says anything," he muttered, "it doesn't matter now."

Matt faced him with stormy eyes that had a vague hurt in them. He spoke quietly. "I'll call you anything you want, Jerry," he promised. "Just tell me."

"Will you, dad? Just once, at least?" Jerry's eyes were alight, his face was flushed with some inner joy. "Dad, just once call me your son when you introduce me?"

"Jerry!" There was a huskiness in Matt Brown's usually controlled voice, a mistiness in his eyes that made Jerry seem blurred and indistinct. "And all the time I thought—" his voice broke. He held out both hands. "Jerry, my son!"

Panhandle-South Plains Fair Greater Than Ever Before

Lubbock, Sept. 17.—Two hundred thousand people are expected to click through the turnstiles at the Panhandle South Plains Fair here next week, September 23 to 28, to see shows, exhibits, vaudeville acts, fireworks and other attractions at the 22nd annual exposition.

Friday is Press Day at the Fair. South Plains editors will be honored at a luncheon at which Hon. Harry Hines, Chairman, Texas Highway Commission, will be the principal speaker. Mickey Martin's thrilling two hour "Daredevil V-8 Drivers" automobile and motorcycle stunt show has just been signed up for a performance daily during the fair. "Reckless" Rex Murphy will roll his V-8 end over end at 60 miles an hour while strapped in the seat, followed by a head on crash of two automobiles with throttles wide open, divers seated. Betty Ynn Martin, the only woman board crasher in the world, will hit a flaming board with a stock motor car. Buddy Muellet will "slide for life" and Elmer Madgett will present a blind-fold board walk crash.

Only seven of the nine daredevils in the company will visit the fair as two are still in a hospital recovering from injuries received at a show at Austin in April.

Principal new feature is the Harley Sadler 3 ring circus showing the last three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Wortham's Western Exposition Shows will play the midway with Captain Jack doing a 90 foot free act dive into flaming water twice daily.

A big array of vaudeville acts, band concerts, and other thrilling free acts will be on the program twice daily with a spectacular fireworks display each evening.

Wednesday when all school children are admitted free will be the biggest day of all. Hundreds of schools over the Plains territory will be closed and a large per cent of them will transport

GIANT LENS FOR UNIVERSITY NEARING COMPLETION

Austin, Texas, Sept. 17.—Grinding of the 82-inch lens for the new W. W. McDonald Observatory of the University of Texas which is being erected on Mount Locke, near Fort Davis, is well under way, according to information which has been received from Dr. Otto Struve, director of Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis., and who also is director of the McDonald Observatory.

The firm of Warner & Swasey of Cleveland, Ohio, hopes to have the two and one-half ton 82-inch disc finished in 1936. Dr. Struve wrote. Most of the rough grinding of the disc has been completed in the shops of the firm but is not yet ready for tests, Dr. Struve said. The surface of the mirror is now a portion of a sphere, having a radius of approximately 54 feet. This means that approximately one and one-third inches of glass have been removed from the center of the disc, giving it a concave figure.

The next step will be the polishing of the mirror and the changing of its shape from a sphere to a parabola, which may take several months. The later geometrical figure has the property of reflecting parallel beams of light in such a way that they are all concentrated in one point which is called the focus.

It was stated by Dr. Struve that "practically all of the astronomical work with the 82-inch reflector will be carried on by photography and the astronomers will rarely have an opportunity to see the stars"; that through an eye-piece, they will expose photographs under microscopes and measuring machines in the Observatory laboratory.

"The Observatory building is completed and ready for installation of the telescope."

We will always have washing and ironing and three meals a day routine. Cooking by no means need be a routine job. As a matter of fact, it need not be termed a routine job but rather an accomplishment which can be made very interesting if it is looked upon in the right frame of mind. "The first item to consider in planning a meal is to include the food elements that have been lacking during the day (I am speaking of the evening meal, because that is when the family is generally together, and it is usually the main meal). The second is to prepare food in some way a little different from what you have been used to doing. Third, serve it as attractively as possible, remembering the old saying, 'Feed the stomach first through the eyes.' And let us suggest that you look further into how simplified your problems will become when cooking electrically with a Waldorf. SENIOR BRAW
 Kenneth Briscoe — President
 Sibyl Hunter — Vice-president
 Lora Liston — Secretary - Treas.
 Crystal Kennedy — Reporter
 Mrs. Jay Wire — Class Mother

Launching The Ship
 A crew of twenty-five seniors walked across the gang plank of the three years of high school wilderness into the colossal and safe craft the "Sheepskin" with her stern toward the land of destiny, across the sea of high school education.

The whistle of expectancy blew its siren and the crew weighed anchor of learning from the sea of vacation, aboard the ship, as the tugs of subjects pulled the "Sheepskin" through the channel of Knowledge.

The danger of quitting or flunking lay in a heavy fog which blanketed the Bay of Learning, of which, as a senior we have little apprehension. In fact we remembered the placid exaltation with which we took our first position on the lower deck of Freshmen, and allowed the mystery of the high school fog to lay hold of our imagination.

We remembered how comfortable it was, this division of labor, which makes it necessary to study mathematical reality and the tides of history.

The crew was summoned together by the chosen pilot, Miss Fort, who is a very able seaman. The meeting was for the purpose of choosing a captain and other distinct members of the crew. The captain, Kenneth Briscoe, was chosen by the majority of "a's".

The crew is very confident in Captain Briscoe's ability and feel that he can safely guide and direct the "Sheepskin" through the winds of dispute, fog of decision, and waves of mutiny that might arise midship.

The assistant Captain, Sibyl Hunter, the crew feels sure, is also an able seaman and will be able to stand the strain of the voyage. The Chef, Lora Liston, was chosen to serve and properly care for the grub of finances and fortunes the ship might acquire.

The radio dispatcher and reporter, Crystal Kennedy, feels that she might grow sea sick from the great foaming waves of labor, and topple and fall into the yawning valley of obscurity.

The mates, Malda Chandler, Eunice Griffiths, and Junior Winn manage the galley of programs.

The swabs, Ruby Sterling, Sibyl Hunter and Crystal Kennedy fly the flag of society and social life.

As the meeting of mates came to a close, the fog of learning seemed to break as the sextant points to the haven of graduation.

JUNIOR NEWS
 The Junior class of 1935 met and organized Friday, September 13. The president, Neal Prescott, by previous election, was absent so the sponsor, Mr. Warren Powers, acted as chairman until the Vice-president was elected.

UTILITY OF A DECK OF CARDS

Prejudice is often uncalled for, yet nevertheless, a fact, and a deck of spotted cards, because so often associated with gambling, is sometimes innocently convicted. Yet there is sometimes good in nearly everything, as is illustrated by the following story—

Richard Land, a private in the 42nd foot troops of the "Black Watch" of the British Army early in the eighteenth century, was brought before the mayor and lord protector of Glasgow charged with playing cards during devine service. He said he had no Bible or prayer book and was using the pack of cards instead. When asked to explain what he meant he answered—

"When I see the ace, it reminds me of the one God; the dice recalls the Father and Son; the troy, the three persons of Trinity; the four-spot reminds me of the four evangelists; the five, the five wise virgins; the six, of the days of creation; the seven, of the seventh day or Sabbath; the eight recalls the righteous persons in eht Ark; the nine the ungrateful lepers; the 10, the Commandments; the King suggests the King of Heaven; the queen, the Queen of Sheba who sought wisdom from Solomon. The knave (jack)—here he hesitated, but being urged, went on: "The knave stands for the constable who arrested me—"

The mayor interrupted to remark that the constable seemed to have been a fool, even though not a knave. Then the soldier continued: "There are 365 pips (spots) in the pack, which recall the days of the year; 52 cards, one for each week; 12 face cards, one for each month, and 13 tricks represent the number of weeks in a quarter. Thus the pack of cards serves as a Bible, a prayer book and an almanac."

DOES IT PAY TO ADVERTISE?

Strange as it may seem, there are some business concerns in Muleshoe who insist it doesn't pay to advertise—yet it DOES pay—and pays to advertise in the Muleshoe Journal, as will be readily testified to by many other local business concerns.

TWO WEEKS AGO MORE THAN 1,000 MAIL ORDER

Catalogs Were Delivered In Muleshoe BY MAIL ORDER HOUSES

Who seek the business of people residing in Muleshoe Trade Territory and who BELIEVE IN ADVERTISING TO GET IT!

Suppose each catalog produced only $10.00 worth of business for the Mail Order concern, and many of them will produce much more than that suggested sum during the life of the catalog, that means at least

$10,000 Worth of Business will go out of Muleshoe

Figure your own profit and loss on your share of this business which you will lose!

THE BUSINESS CONCERN THAT REFUSES TO ADVERTISE IS SIMPLY PERMITTING BUSINESS WHICH IS JUSTLY HIS TO GO TO HIS ADVERTISING COMPETITORS!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, ye do well—James 2:8.

It is the duty of men to love even those who injure them.—Marcus Antonius.

BANKRUPTCY OF LIFE

Practically everything in this world is just a means toward one end, and that end is life. We study that end, participate in athletics, eat certain foods, take part in certain spiritual gymnastics, patronize certain political and business functions; we become professional or tradesman—all for the one purpose of LIFE.

Life is the big thing in this world. Everybody knows it, but few actually attain it. True, life for many means little other than the regular routine of affairs; but there are unnumbered others who have certain ideals, hold certain creditable theories, set before them certain aspirations, cherish certain desires, the accomplishing of which to them means the fullness of life.

That's why they work and some times slave; that's why they enter certain lines of business endeavor; social and church relationships often contribute largely to such; marriage is a great contributor to success or failure, perhaps wrecking more careers than is generally known.

There may be another life beyond—as is generally believed; but even its success depends largely upon the results of this one. Innumerable men and women do not face the future life with any brilliant prospects because the present one has not yielded anticipated results. Mental and spiritual entities may be eternal; but their eternity probably depends largely upon keeping life out of bankruptcy here on earth. It's thought worth while to consider this aspect as one journeys along; an occasional check-up, an invoice of assets and liabilities is important to determine whether the Ledger of Life shows a profit or loss, for some day it will have to be balanced.

THE GREATEST NEED

Last week a woman living at Worcester, Mass., got $25 per week from the privilege of living apart from her hubby because she testified, hubby dipped the bread too long in the egg mixture in making French toast, it breaking in two when he picked it up. He got mad at her because on top of the stove. She told him his cooking was amateurish, and he blacked an eye for her. We believe that's better than we've heard in any of the divorce proceedings in Bailey County district court!

The Clovis News-Journal says, "Buy it in Clovis when you can't get it at home," but the Journal knows some folks in and around Muleshoe who buy it in Clovis when they CAN get it at home. However, there are some who appreciate home enterprises and patronize them, those business concerns persistently advertising the merchandise and price getting the lion's share of the business.

Jaunty Journalists

When a Muleshoe husband and his wife are not on speaking terms it means that the husband does the listening.
Another trouble with most of the Muleshoe chaps is that they begin at home is that it usually stays there.

Dear Sir:
Upon reading an article in your paper, Claude Stephens states:
"Since Bert Cook has told one experience of ours, I will tell you another."
In 1929 Bert Cook, George N. Jones, and Claude were working for the ABC spread in the State of New York. Their boss, E. G. (Shug) Hoskins, asked them to move 100 head of steers to Liverpool, England.

Claude says, "We drove the herd in the ocean at N. Y. City the 13th of May. One week later the chuck supply was gone. George, Bert and Claude pulled a steer and dried the meat for jerky" on the remaining steers horn. The 15th of June they drove the herd on land in Liverpool.

Dear Journal Editor:
Last week's weather prophecy that we would have frost by October 3rd seems like rushing things a little too much. Why not give crops more time to mature?
I have noticed for a number of years that Cosmos matures its seed and that it invariably blooms at least six weeks before a killing frost. Cosmos are late about blooming this year.
When you see the first Cosmos bloom ahead and see how it proves out. This chilly weather we have been having does not necessarily indicate an early frost—O. N. Robben.

"Thinking I See Thee Smile"

By VIRGINIA G. MILLIKIN
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNY Service.

The scrub woman picked up her ball and mop and stood aside for Mr. Horne to pass.
"You are early tonight, aren't you, Mammie?" he asked pleasantly as he pressed the elevator bell.
"A little early, maybe," she answered with a smile that showed nearly toothless gums. She watched the elevator shoot downward with him. Then she made a vigorous shushy sound with her mop on the tiled floor.

A few minutes later as she ran her dust cloth over Mr. Horne's mahogany desk, radio music came to her ears from one of those apartments across the alleyway. She leaned on the desk, half sitting and gazed at a small gold-framed picture of his wife. A beautiful face. Beautiful.

Mammie set the picture down gently. Her pale eyes looked dreamily out through the high window toward a square foot of sky. It was touched by the afterglow of the evening day, in such a setting she listened to the same song through the radio:
"Sometimes between long shadows on the grass,
The little truant waves of sunlight pass,
My eyes grow dim with tenderness the while,
Thinking I see thee, thinking I see thee smile!"

She glanced again at the small photograph. She, too, had been pretty once a long time ago. If only—but what was the use of thinking? But—if only one day of leany could be had! Not physical beauty, of course; that was gone forever. Not something you bought with money and wore to show off.

The afterglow grew fainter in the square foot of sky as she remembered a boy in her class in school that long time ago. She wasn't Mammie then. She was Mary Young with cheeks like rosy apples. Even she had realized she was not as clever as the boy. She was pretty in a common sort of way but dumb when it came to getting good grades. Her mind had never been very alert about things in books. The boy used to laugh and pull her hair and help her with the problems. He never let his friends know about his close friendship with her. He would come down across the tracks late at night to see her. At school he would pass her with a casual nod as the other fellows did. It was all right. She would never be a fine lady.

That last time they were together before he went away to Europe, he had held her very tight as they stood before the grate fire she had kindled in his honor. He had asked her if everything was all right. There had been an anxious note in his voice and she couldn't bear to hurt him. She had lied and said, of course, "Yes, the glad light had come back to his eyes and he had kissed her very tenderly. She was glad she had lied. She wanted him to go away with a happy heart, even if her own did break. He would be gone four years. She knew he would never come back to her. She had snuggled up at him with her eyes full of tears.

"Mary, I love your smile," he had said. Then he had looked down at the flickering flames. She remembered she had been so afraid the small amount of wood she could gather would not last that wonderful evening out. He had said, "Smiling, an open fire will always remind me of you, and in its flames I think I shall see your smile."
Six months later her baby was born. He was sweet and serawny. Such a helpless tiny type. But he looked like his father away off in Europe. She loved the little fellow wildly—savage. Soon after he had learned to clap his thin little hands when she came near, he had died.

The scrub woman shivered as the song from the radio ended.
Now it had been a long time since anything sweet had been hers. Queer how she should be thinking of all this tonight.

When she finished her work it was late. It had begun to snow. Spiteful icy flakes which stung her hollow cheeks. She yielded to a stronger impulse and took a Hillside car. She would have to walk six blocks and face the wind this way. But she could pass Mr. Horne's big new home on the avenue. There had been a picture of it in the Sunday paper. She liked to see where the big folks of her office building lived.

She alighted from the car at Elm and walked up the wide street. Her heart was beating faster than usual. Her breath came in little gasps. She was even with the grand new house. Splashes of light came from the windows. She was glad the curtains were not all drawn. She stopped and leaned eagerly over the low stone wall. She smiled. No one was near to see that it was a nearly toothless smile.

Before an open fire she saw Mr. Horne sitting in a great easy chair, his head comfortably relaxed, his eyes fixed dreamily on the flickering flames. And while she watched she saw him smile.

She was suddenly trembling. Here was the loveliest thing that would be hers alone forever. He had said when he looked at an open fire he would remember her. As she walked the weary blocks against the icy wind, her heart was singing:
"My eyes grow dim with tenderness the while,
Thinking I see thee, thinking I see thee smile!"

STATE OF TEXAS HAS FIFTH GOVERNOR WITHIN A YEAR. Texas had her fifth governor within a year last Thursday. As president pro tempore of the Senate, Senator John S. Reddick of Lubbock became acting governor when Governor Allred and Lieut. Governor Walter Woodhill left the state. His administration, clinaxed with a dinner by fellow senators, was short-lived, for Governor Allred planned to return during the night from a conference in Oklahoma City. Reddick issued several edicts, granted a requisition by the governor of Oklahoma and appointed a dozen colonels on his official staff. Origin of Tariff Tarifa, on the most southerly point of Spain, is the old pirate stronghold from which we get the word tariff. The name signifies "the reckoning." It was here that pirates levied toll on all merchant ships visiting the coast.

Amateur Supreme

NEW YORK... Is Wm. Lawson Little, Jr., (above), of San Francisco on his way to set golfing records as impressive as those of Bobby Jones? The 24 year old American youth, in winning the British Amateur title for the second consecutive year, while holding the American title, is the third golfer ever to have won the British title two years in a row. If he repeats in the American championship play this year he will have one record bettering Jones.

Where Friendship Ceases

By JACK RODOLPH

WNE Service.

"THAT'S her!" rumbled Big Un Beasley, raising a huge arm to point across the gay flutter of the dance floor.

Fewee Fruit swung his one hundred and forty pounds upon the big arm and pulled it down. "Civilized people," he admonished, "don't point. And they don't say 'That's her!'" Then he turned to look in the direction the big man had indicated. "My savage protege desires the paleface medicine in big gulps!" he whistled softly as his eyes lighted upon a glorious blond.

"Cut the kidding and start calling signals for my play," the giant urged. Fruit shook his head sadly. "Start calling signals for your play! Just like that, you know my play hasn't been doped yet that will carry a man across that goal line!"

Something in his tone caused Beasley to glance downward. "Has she thrown you for a loss, too?" he asked. "Every Romeo in school has tried to rush her," Fruit responded lightly. But his discomfiture did not deceive the big fellow.

"If she's your girl, that lets me out," he stated decisively.

"She's not wearing my brand, as you would say," Fruit answered. "She's what you would call a maverick—there for anybody who can rope her. All she has ever given me is permission to hope."

Beasley shook his head. "There'd be no chance for a man like me to get you, anyway."

Fruit dropped his air of mockery. "Big Un, that won't go between us. I'm going to call your play tonight and give you an even break. Then let the best man win. That girl has seen hundreds of men like me. And there's only one man in the world like you. Your play is to be yourself and not to imitate."

The David and Goliath act had been introduced at State university a half dozen months before when Fruit had crouched between the legs of the big center who had handed the ball back to him and ploved aside, with the little quarterback following between the protecting legs.

A month later Beasley had marveled, "You certainly can run interference on this kid."

"Concentration is the secret," the little man had snapped. "Jam your nose back into that book, and keep it there. Examinations, which would determine eligibility for the basketball team, were due the following day."

Beasley's father had gone West when land was just something between a man and where he wanted to go. When Beasley came to State he could read a cattle brand a half mile away better than he could read math symbols under his nose.

Fruit was from a long line of lawyers who spared enough time from acquiring a culture to garner their share of the coin of the realm.

Their act drew more applause when the big man tipped the basketball to the little one, who dribbled it in dazzling circles until the other was in position for him to pass for a score.

Beasley was on hand to catch Fruit when he staggered after breaking the tape in the hundred-yard dash and the little fellow lunged the hammer and the big shot to the ring for the giant.

By now the students generally referred to them collectively as David and Goliath. But a few of the more discerning ones had changed to David and Jonathan.

Then the two three-letter men were ready to break training.

"It's time you were getting civilized, you woolly son of the West," Fruit had declared. "Have a dress suit ready for the hon tomorrow night, and I'll break you for society."

The mentor decided the following evening that Beasley's first course of introduction should be to leave him on his own with a group of girls to whom he had been introduced. But it was not long before the big man came seeking the little one to declare, "Half-pint, I've found the girl who makes all of this fuss worth while. Come on. I'll show her to you. I want an introduction."

That had led up to the conversation which carried the two to the coat room. "Stand still," Fruit ordered, while he pulled Beasley's tie around to the front. "There were sundry adjustments before the final survey and he murmured, "Well, that's the best I can do. We'll go find her. And, remember, after the introduction it's every man for himself."

"I wouldn't do it if it were any girl except that one," the giant apologized. "Can't she still be friends?"

"Sure," snapped Fruit. "Damon and Pythias were—in the book. It's a pretty story. Better read it."

Fruit sought the largest group in the big hall and dragged Beasley to its center. He performed the introduction gracefully and added, "My best friend, and the finest fellow who ever came to State." Then he turned to leave.

He was halfway across the room when he was seized from behind. Beasley wrapped his left arm about the little fellow and jerked him about. As Fruit looked up into the grin of Beasley, the giant growled, "You fumbled with your damn politeness." He held Fruit powerless, while his long huge arm came up to point openly and deliberately at a girl with a shock of dark curls above saucy eyes. "That's her!" he said again.

71ST BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

On Friday afternoon, September 13, a number of the members of the Methodist Missionary Society and others gathered at the home of Mrs. Clara M. Harre, three miles north-east of the Y. L. school house, and surprised her in celebrating her seventy-first birthday.

Miss Dottie Wilterding made a lovely angel food birthday cake decorated "Happy birthday" and "Missionary Mother" in appropriate colors.

Mrs. Harre is an active member in the Church, Sunday school, and Missionary society. She joined the Methodist church at an early age, and since she has been a consistent and faithful member. Has been Steward, Secretary-Treasurer of the Church for ten years, in which time she has not missed a quarterly conference. She was a charter member of the Y. L. Methodist church when it was organized nine years ago. She was also a charter member of the W. M. S. when it was organized five years ago, in which time she has not missed a meeting and of which she has been Recording-Secretary since its organization.

If any wishes to know anything about the Methodist Church or W. M. S. of Y. L., they can go to Sister Harre's books and find a "complete record" of any phase of its works, of which she has faithfully and competently kept. She has meant much to her pastor and family.

It was a great privilege and opportunity to have the pleasure of celebrating the birthday of one like her, and especially at such a ripe age, and all wish that she may have many more such birthdays. After a few games were played, pineapple, vanilla and chocolate ice cream and various kinds of cakes were served to the following:

Mrs. J. M. Crawford, Mrs. Crockett Bruton and children, Wendell and Yvonne, Mrs. Mervin Wilterding and children, Maurine and Luella, Mrs. D. B. Head and children, Marshall and Norman, Mrs. A. L. Peacock and son Billie Joe, Mrs. M. Reed and daughter Delese, Mrs. Arthur Ryan and daughter Virginia, Mrs. H. S. Crawford and daughter Billie Jane, Mrs. H. M. Shottler, Miss Dottie Wilterding, Mrs. Cara M. Harre, Miss Julia Harre, Rev. and Mrs. F. R. Pickens.

After which all joined hands and sang "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" and prayer was led by the pastor, F. R. Pickens.

Sixty-one bullets pierced the body of the young doctor assassin of Huey Long.

Instructions have come out of Washington that all camps catering for transients will accept no new patrons after September 30, as they will be closed soon afterward.

Highland Mary
Highland Mary was a sweetheart of Robert Burns, to whom he addressed some of his finest poetry, including "My Highland Lassie," "O Highland Mary" and "Thou Ling'ring Star." She is said to have been a daughter of Archibald Campbell, a Clyde sailor, and to have died young about 1784 or 1786. Nothing authentic is known of her, and there is little reliance to be placed in the few indications that Burns gave in his poem or in his letters.

DRASTIC WHEAT CHANGES TOLD PLAINVIEW MEET

"Appraisal Method" To Determine Wheat Allotment.

Panhandle Plains wheat farmers who had crop failures because of drought can have their land appraised for their wheat production capacities to determine the amount of the wheat allotment to which they are entitled.

Announcement of the "appraisal method" of determining the extent of a farmer's wheat allotment and two important changes in the wheat adjustment contracts that will go into effect next year was made at the meeting of state wheat officials with county agricultural agents and wheat board officials at Plainview last week.

Under the old contracts the farmer was required to show records proving the amount of his wheat yield in the base years. This was termed the "historical method."

Revision Made
Most important of the changes in the wheat contracts over those in effect since 1933 is the revision of the base year period.

Wheat acreage planted for harvest in 1930, 1931, and 1932 was taken as the standard base.

However, farms planted in wheat for the first time in 1933 or for the first time since 1932 alone may be brought into the program under the new contracts without serious penalty.

This change removed the chief objection Panhandle farmers found to the wheat adjustment program. There were hundreds of farmers who couldn't participate in the acreage reduction program because of their acreage percentage of their acreage.

"Parity price for wheat is the only goal of this program," John R. Edmonds state wheat agent, said in presenting the new contracts.

In Force Four Years.
"The revision embodied in the contracts that will be effective for the next four years will give the wheat farmers that have been given opportunity to express themselves on the program individually and in the referendum elections of last May 27."

Texas wheat farmers gave the wheat adjustment program a 20 to 1 majority in that election, and the farmers of the nation gave it a 7 to 1 majority. This clearly showed their endorsement of the adjustment program," Mr. Edmonds said.

Under the 1930 contracts the adjustment payment was 30 cents per bushel for the farmer's allotment, the cost of administering the program being taken proportionately from each adjustment payment.

The amount of the per bushel payment is not set in the new contracts, but the initial payment will be 20 cents per bushel of the allotment and the second or last annual payment will be the difference between the average market price and the figure set for the parity price.

For the crop of 1936 the acreage reduction will be five per cent from the farm's base period acreage.

A farm's allotment will be 54 per cent of the accepted yield per acre times the average annual wheat acreage of the base period.

In cases where the two-year base is figured the base acreage will be two-thirds of the annual acreage. This would be for the crops of 1932 and 1933.

Many Agents Attend
The one-year base will be determined by the acreage planted for the harvest of 1932. The allotment will be one-third of the acreage times the average yield per acre.

Provisions in the old contracts required farmers to cut their acreage proportionately to their base year average and those who didn't have crops planted for the entire period of the base were severely penalized.

Assisting Mr. Edmonds in the conference were Parker D. Hanna, District No. 1 Extension Agent, and O. G. Tomlinson, District No. 2 Agent.

Approximately 40 agriculture agents representing what producing counties on the Panhandle Plains were present. A total of approximately 200 wheat men attended.

The Story of the Constitution
by CALEB JOHNSON
RIGHTS OF THE STATES

The hardest job the farmers of the Constitution had to do was to draw the sharp line between the powers granted by the States to the new Federal Government and those which the States retained for themselves.

The conflict between the new spirit of nationalism and the old spirit of independence of the States was acute. "The task," wrote James Madison in his notes on the Constitutional Convention, "was to draw a line of demarcation which would give the general Government every power requisite for general purposes, and leave to the States every power which might be more beneficially administered by them."

On that principle of contrasting all matters of common interest to the Federal Government and reserving the very large field of purely local interest to the States, the Constitution was finally drafted.

It is a very short and simple part of the document, Article IV. It provides only, in substance, that the citizens of any State shall be recognized as citizens by all the other States, and that the public acts of each State shall be given full faith and credit in every other State.

There was no delegation of power from the central Government to the States. The process was the other way about, the States delegating limited powers to the central Government.

In return, the central Government guaranteed to every State a republican form of government, protection against invasion and, at the request of the State authorities, against domestic violence.

The Federal Government, thus, has no right or power to send Federal troops into any State, even in case of violent rioting or insurrection, unless first invited to do so by the Legislature or the Governor of the State.

We are so familiar with the process of extradition of fugitives from justice that it is difficult today to realize how easy it was, before the Federal Constitution was adopted, for a criminal to escape the consequences of his crime by simply crossing the line between one State and another.

One of the most important provisions of the Constitution is that it requires each State to protect a person charged with any crime who has fled from justice, to deliver the accused on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled. Likewise, the principle that trials of criminals, not only shall be by jury but shall be held in the State where the crime has been committed, is so generally understood that the importance of that provision of the Constitution is not immediately obvious to the present-day mind.

But there was a time when States assumed the right to try and condemn men for crimes committed in other States, or even beyond the seas.

The Federal Congress had authority under the Constitution, from the beginning, to admit new States, but not to create them out of the territory of other States. In the one instance in which a new state was set up out of part of an old State, the nation was engaged in a civil war. Virginia had seceded from the Union, but when its people in the region between the Shenandoah and the Ohio asked to have a new State of West Virginia recognized, the Federal Congress granted that request.

Some of the States were not satisfied with the protection of their rights, appointed under the original Constitution and refused to ratify the new national set-up unless it were amended to meet their objections and calm their fears of Federal domination.

HONORED BY FAREWELL PARTY

Friday evening of last week a surprise farewell party was given in the form of a chicken barbecue, in honor of R. W. Tucker and Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Davis, at the sand dunes south of Mulleshoe.

The menu consisted of a number of salads, chicken, potato chips, pickles, coffee and watermelon.

Gallagher, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Lenau, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Basinger, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Umberson, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Bennett, Misses Ruth Mitchell, Gloma Hudson, Mildred Davis, Francis Watts, and Herschel Alsop, Ross Smith, Courtland Paul and the honorees Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Davis and R.
