SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE ON PENSION FUND

Gov. Requests Luxury Tax; Tremendous Sum Needed.

While the first day of the third special session of the Forty-fourth Legislature began with harmony, it became well known that plenty of dynamite was laid, with a chance that this session may witness more dissension than any for many years. Investigations and inquiries galore were made by members as they listened Monday afternoon to Governor Allred's delivered message on tax-

As has been known rather definitely for some time that the Texas old age assistance law does not sit well with Washington, that there has been discrimination, likely unintentional, in the administration of the law, and no one is blamed, but a big majority of members demand changes, adjustments and information before going into the heavy tax program that the Governor recommended.

Governor Allred urged a luxury tax, "substantial and reasonable" increases in the levels of natural resources and diversion of $3,000,000 of highway funds in his message Monday to the special session of the Texas Legislature.

The Governor said official estimates of the tremendous amount of money would be required to pay old age pensions were "astounding."

The session was called to raise revenue for pensions and to consider Texas participation in the federal unemployment insurance program.

Some legislators had expressed hope they could consider altering the pension law but Allred emphasized the session was convened to provide "farther necessary revenue for old age assistance to persons entitled to same under the provisions of the present law."

The proposal for the pension fund to borrow $3,000,000 of highway funds to meet immediate pension needs surprised many observers.

"This recommendation I make as a matter of emergency and not as a matter of permanent policy," the Governor said. "Under normal circumstances, I am opposed to the diversion of highway revenue for other purposes, but in the face of the crises which now exists in old age assistance, I am firmly convinced that the general welfare, and particularly that of our aged citizens during the coming months, is of greater importance than any highway program which might necessitate the immediate expenditure of the funds before they could be replenished."

This Legislature may well provide for a return of the highway funds when the old age assistance program has been permanently financed.

This Legislature last year appropriated three million dollars out of the general fund for the Texas Centennial; and that Centennial, more than any other factor, has contributed to the cash balance which the highway fund now enjoys. At the close of the fiscal year there was a net increase in gasoline tax collectors over the preceding 12 months of $4,490,224.

The Governor recommended the following additional measures to enlarge the available pension fund: Increased franchise taxes on oil and gas pipeline companies, substantial increase in inheritance tax, general increase in franchise taxes, revision of gas laws to prevent evasion, stricter provisions for collection of delinquent taxes, a higher beer tax, an increase in the general level of industrial and utility taxes, and transfer of the $40,383 now in the permanent pension fund.

As an example of the type of luxuries he proposed to tax, Allred mentioned "moving picture shows, theaters, athletic contests, and similar forms of amusement."

"The tax," he said, "should be levied only upon those articles which fall within the class of luxuries and are not classed as necessities."

As a normal part of the average family budget.

Allred urged the Legislature not to "write" one State to be managed "against the other" in the matter of using natural resources levels.

"Heretofore when efforts have been made to increase the sulphur tax," he said, "we have been met with the 'great, express or implied,' that the tax would back page please)

Muleshoe Loses Game To Levelland Lobos On Last Friday Night

The Muleshoe High school football team, motored to Levelland Friday night for a match game with the Levelland High school team under the floodlights at the Hockley county seat. The local team was defeated 39 to nothing.

This was an interesting contest as it was really the first opportunity the local team has had to play a Class B team and the first time of testing the strength of the two teams during the present season.

It was a fairly row as well, as Coach C. R. Stevens of the Yellowjackets is a brother to Coach Bill Stevens of the Levelland team and they matched wits from opposite sides of the gridiron as their teams met in the middle.

As Muleshoe is a Class C team this was not a conference game. Players in the Levelland team outweighed the local boys by several pounds on an average, there being about 40 men suited out, and 24 to be used on the first string.

This being the first time the Yellowjackets had ever played a night game under the floodlights they were somewhat handicapped and in the first quarter it was a little difficult for them to get warmed up and on the right foot some of the boys were slightly cramped from their game last Friday at Dimmitt. In the first quarter Levelland made a runaway of the game, making four touchdowns without stopping. By the second and third quarter the Yellowjackets started buzzing around as if they meant business and held the opposite team down and no scores were made. Two touchdowns were made in the fourth quarter by the Lobos.

Bill Murray, local school bus driver furnished a bus for the players to make the trip to Levelland, which courtesy is greatly appreciated by each member of the team.

Friday afternoon of this week, the Yellowjackets will play a match game with the High school football team at Otton. A good crowd of fans and the local High school pep squad are planning to attend.

Week's Beauty Hint

Every woolen frock is going to need at least one bright flower embroidered on it once the fall fashion parade gets under way. Tiny bow-knots and floral designs are effective whether they are used on taffeta or velvet. Moire also sets off the theme to advantage. Embroidered hemline borders and yoke designs on some of the frocks have the basque waistline and the puffy sleeves which are in keeping with the quaintness of the other features of the costume.

A Kitchen Hint

The disagreeable odor from rendering fat may be avoided if the kettle containing the fat is placed in the oven. Start the fat on top of the stove and when heated through, place it in a moderate oven until finished.

The Doctor Says

Public Health Is Largely Matter Of Personal Protection

Great strides have been made in mass control of public health in the past twenty-five years by public health officials and the use of scientific methods in the control of disease. The job of the individual in getting fit and remaining in good health, however, is a personal rather than a public matter, according to Dr. John W. Brown, state health officer.

While the ravages of diphtheria, smallpox, typhoid fever, and other devastating diseases have been definitely checked by public health measures, he said, "there are left many health enemies whose onslaught is stealthy, and whose approach is definitely individual. Heart disease, cerebral hemorrhage, nephritis, and cancer continue to stand high in the list of major killers.

"As these degenerating diseases cannot be controlled by quarantine and immunization, each individual should see to his own protection against these diseases if they exist, while they are in a state where control may be effective. The annual physical health examination is the major defensive weapon against such diseases.

"The annual physical examination has two definite objectives in the life of an individual; namely, to establish the fact that there is or is not present a disease which calls for prompt control measures, and to determine the margins of safety in health habits. When the family physician has established the facts brought to light in a physical examination, he is in a position to advise the individual as to procedures which must be adhered to in order that a proper balance may be maintained.

"Go to your family physician and give him a chance to tell you whether you are giving your body the treatment it needs."

JUNIOR CLASS ORGANIZED

The Junior class of Mulehoe High school has successfully started the new school year work.

Officers for the class were elected as follows: Houston Hart, president; Woodrow Lambert, vice president; Orville Justus, secretary; Mrs. Opal Smith, class mother, and Juanita Coker, reporter.

Each year the Junior and Senior classes have flag fights. Last week the seniors put their flags up first and they stayed 24 hours. The Junior class members decided their upper classmen had been victorious enough so they took one flag down and knocked the other one over. The Juniors had a get together and erect their flags, one on the water tower and the other in the classroom, and by noon the following day both flags had been taken down. The Juniors have not given up yet they state.

Tuesday evening members of the Junior class were entertained with a social.

Insurance Head Warns of Inflation

Says Continued Government Borrowing Threatens Policy Holders.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—M. A. Linton, president of the $300,000,000 Provident Mutual Life Insurance company, warned policy holders of the danger of inflation resulting from the Roosevelt administration's program of expanding bank deposits through federal borrowing. His statement, printed in the company's magazine, was similar to many made by Col. Frank Knox, Republican candidate for the vice presidency, charging that New Deal spending of two dollars for every one dollar in revenue, Moore also sets off the theme to advantage. Embroidered hemline borders and yoke designs on some of the frocks have the basque waistline and the puffy sleeves which are in keeping with the quaintness of the other features of the costume.

The belligerent Colonel's latest blast, made at Helena, Mont., was: "I repeat that under the present policies of this administration no life insurance policy is secure, no savings account is safe, because the present spending policy leads straight to inflation. It is not the insurance companies or the savings banks that are unsound. They are as safe as the Rock of Gibraltar. It is the administration of the United States government that is unsound."

Mr. Linton warned that insurance policy holders have a precious interest in balancing the budget of the United States. "The essence of life insurance," he said, "is a promise by the life insurance companies to pay dollars in the future when a given contingency shall occur. The policy holder knows that the dollars of the future are going to be used to purchase the food, clothing, and shelter that his dependents need if he is called away by death, or that he and his wife will need after his earnings days are over.

To maintain a sound currency a nation must live within its income. Emergencies may make extensive borrowing necessary in times of depression. However, the longer the borrowing is continued the greater the danger that the situation will get out of hand and lead to disaster.

A. B. Ballantine, former under-secretary of the treasury, in a statement issued from Chicago, charged the Roosevelt administration with sacrificing the security of policy holders and bank depositors upon the political block.

"Mr. Roosevelt knows which side his bread is buttered on politically," said Mr. Ballantine. "If it is necessary to plunge this nation so deeply into debt by reckless and politically inspired spending that printing press money is the only logical outcome, he will do it unflinchingly—even if it makes a piece of waste paper every life insurance policy and savings bank book in the United States."

Says GOP Platform Will Save Sugar Beet Farmers

SCOTTS BLUFF, Neb.—President Roosevelt has attempted to hamstring the sugar beet industry of the West, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg declared here. He cited the establishment of quotas favoring Cuban and Philippine sugar producers, the horizontal decrease of 25 per cent in the sugar tariff, and the reduction of the Cuban tariff in the Cuban reciprocal trade agreement to the lowest point in a half century.

The Republican party, he said, offers the domestic sugar producer a program which will apply restrictive quotas to continental imports only, and which will permit the American producer the non-competitive privilege of producing all the domestic sugar which the domestic market can consume.

"You need nothing else," said Senator Vandenberg. "It would be the greatest possible single practical contribution to the relief in a score of sugar states, including the 'reat sugar bowl' to which I refer."

Various Clubs Are Organized In High School This Week

Miss Lucille Bealy, member of the High school faculty, organized a dramatic club for the high school students the latter part of last week. The club will meet each week and study dramatics and will start preparing plays for presentation at later dates. The High school boys and girls showed much interest and were very enthusiastic with the organization and joined immediately. New members will be added to the club with each meeting. It has been the custom for the past several years for the local high school to have a dramatic club and they have proven very beneficial.

The regular Home Economics club was organized with Miss Evelyn Boone director.

Miss Stella Jackson, English teacher in the local high school organized a journalism club with several students becoming members. This is the first club of its kind to be organized in the school here and the boys and girls are greatly interested. They will study various phases of journalism and plan to publish a small school paper later in the school term.

Miss Alma Stewart, local county home director, organized a 4-H club for girls in the high school, there now being 27 members.

J. B. Waide, Bailey county farm agent will organize a 4-H club for the boys in high school at a later date. Plans have been developed and will be started soon. Local men teachers of the high school are cooperating with him in the organization.

GIRLS BASKETBALL TEAM BEGINS EARLY TRAINING

Girls basketball practice at the Mulehoe High school started last week, under direction of Miss Addie Belle Fort, girls coach. There were about 80 girls in the High school came for the workout, and it is anticipated there will be an excellent team for this year. There are only two girls to play this year who were on the team last year, the remainder of the team will be made from all new material, some being former players on the junior team.

They will have only a short time each day for practice and training. They are planning to match games with teams from neighboring towns and hoping to win a coronus.

Cotton Growers Meet Is Postponed Due To Inclement Weather

The one variety cotton demonstration that was to have been held Thursday, September 24, with Roy Saunders, F. E. Lichte, gin specialist and E. A. Miller, extension agronomist, present to discuss the various problems of the cotton producers, was called off due to the rains last week.

Considerable interest has been shown in one variety cotton communities by Bailey county farmers and ginners in the county. J. B. Waide, Jr., county farm agent, stated. By standardizing on one variety it is much easier to keep seed pure, preventing mixing of seed at the gin. The ginster is able to set his gin for that variety of cotton therefore giving a better quality product as a result of standardizing. This not only helps the farmers secure a better market for his cotton but also enables him to keep his seed pure without mixing at the gin. The specialists who were due in Bailey county last Thursday will return in about two weeks for this demonstration.

DUCKS ARRIVE EARLY IN TEXAS THIS YEAR

Drought conditions, causing scarcity of food and water, and possibility of an early Winter were given as reasons for the migration.

"Ducks are inhabiting the coastal areas in considerable numbers, far larger than usual," Tucker said. "The trail which always leads the rest, has been there since the first of August. They arrive, as a rule, the first week of September."

Two weeks ago I received complaints from farmers in the Panhandle area that ducks were eating their crops."

Every Great Attempt is Glorious Even If It Fails

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

And thou shalt have no gift: for the gift hindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.—Exodus 23:8.

A man who is furnished with arguments from the mind will convince his antagonist much sooner than one who draws them from reason and philosophy. Gold is a wonderful clearer of the understanding.—Addison.

THE BIG PLUM

Really just how many Muleshoe people know what it's all about—the coming election, we mean? We don't ask as a question, merely utter an exclamation, because there are so many angles and tangents to the situation it's difficult for any one person, group of persons and given section of the Union to become cognizant of all the ramifications of the present situation and its future portents.
It may seem fairly easy for local citizens to follow the bunch of state strides going on, as in Maine and Michigan last year, but when speaking heads and tails straight on the big national show is quite another question and one that taxes the average person to extremes, and then when they think they have it pretty well analyzed only to discover they are about as wool-gathered as before they took up its attempted solution.

Party leaders, big politicians, stalwart statesmen, skilled lawyers, learned economists and some others, doubtless realize the full aspects of the national campaign now and they are alert to every relevant action that might effect it, but they are not making public many of these important phases nor advising the public generally how to act one way or another.

Should the Republicans win how much of a victory will it really be? They can never hope to attain a majority in the senate for the coming congress, since only about one-third of senators are due for re-election. Even if every Republican senatorial nominee is elected this fall, the Democrats still have a majority. The Republican's great hope of accomplishment lies in securing a majority in the house—to be used to off-set the majority senate section.
Should the Republicans win the house majority, then even if Roosevelt is elected, he is up against a hard problem, for all "money measures" must originate in the House of Repre-

Cotton Exports Down
Exports of American cotton the first three years of the New Deal decreased 33 per cent.

UP TO THE WOMEN

What promises to be a good example for every small town in America is being set by the women of the town of Talladega, Alabama. Not content with the manner in which the streets and sidewalks, and grounds around public buildings are kept, the women of the town have organized their own improvement association, and mapped out a program of civic beautification.

So great is the interest in their work that they find it necessary to hold their monthly meetings in the court house to accommodate the crowd.
Committees on cleanliness and health, on house painting and building, on paved streets and roads; and even on prevention of crime are now at work striving to give Talladega the most thorough municipal bath she has ever known. The women contend that if the men will listen to them and provide the necessary funds for the town treasury they will make their town a model for every other community in the nation, and one so healthy and beautiful it will appeal to the tourists who may be seeking a new location. They also argue that increased business will ward the merchants, since an attractive town always draws visitors.

Politics doesn't enter into the planning by Talladega women, and that is why newspapers in Alabama are predicting success for it. Already their activities have been noted by the national and other towns may soon be following Talladega's example.
In many towns of Texas business and professional women's clubs have been organized and are doing a lot of civic development for their respective home towns, especially in the larger ones where there are more women to specialize on this particular type of work.

One of the difficulties of such organizations in small towns is the simple fact that there are comparatively so few women and so many organizations of different kinds, that by the time these few women patronize and take part in many of these organizations their time and energy is so taken up they have to neglect the most fundamental duties of home and family. It's very easy for any small town to be over-organized, and no matter how much interested and anxious women may be for certain civic improvements, both sides of the question should be carefully weighed.

YOUR NEW CAR

No matter what model he may be driving every Muleshoe car owner is interested in the new 1937 models now appearing on the market.
In the first place, he is pleased to note that no radical experiments are being tried out, and secondly he feels sure that never before has the automobile dollar bought as much real value.

Makers have devoted their attention to producing more comfortable and convenient cars instead of trying to turn out still speedier ones, and they seem to have felt that the streamlined demand has been fully met; it is not necessary to "jazz up" the body lines any more than they are. Many of them are offering still lighter cars, which is not objectionable since they are accomplishing it through the use of stronger alloys and metals.

All in all, American motorists have just cause to praise the 1937 models, which are being designed of the highest grade, and from the standpoint of service and value will fully measure up to every expectation.

DECEIVING REPORTS

More or less conflicting reports make it difficult for the average Muleshoe citizen to get a satisfactory picture of conditions following the long summer drought.
Some reports say it was more disastrous than any previous spell, others that it was not as disastrous as that of 1934. Some predict that it will eventually cost 2,500,000 people, out of charity, others place the number at 500,000. It stands to reason that the drought has affected some states more than others. Consequently having all reports on those from the states hardest hit is deceiving to the public.

If the public is entitled to anything it is entitled to know the facts, seen through the eyes of honest investigators, not those of politicians seeking chance to spend more of the public's money. The time has come when the public feels it should help those who need to be helped. Let's have the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

Tax on Pork Chops
When you buy a pound of pork chops, included in the price is seven cents for New Deal taxes.

DUTY OF PARENTS

Thousands of school teachers in this county are serving the public a good turn by acquainting the scholar in their care with the danger of auto traffic. Auto clubs are doing the same thing. But thousands of parents take it for granted their children know about these dangers and they do not need occasional warning. That is a mistake.

It is the duty of every father and mother to warn their children against playing in the street or walking carelessly along a highway. It is their duty to explain to them that when it is in motion the auto is as deadly as any moving body can possibly be, and that unless they guard against its dangers they must certainly suffer the loss of life or limb.

The teachers are doing their part. Now it falls to the parents, as they should, accidents in which school children are involved will be greatly reduced all over the country.

Jaunty Journalettes

People around Muleshoe who have a scandal in the family are lucky in one respect, they are generally the ones who don't hear about it.
A Muleshoe conservative is any citizen here who hates to part with an idea after he has once got used to it.

We have frequently noticed there are plenty of Muleshoe people who don't take much, if any, interest in the other fellow's business until he begins to make a little money at it, then some of them want to crowd in to death.

It's a wise Muleshoe citizen who has learned that a ripple of laughter is worth a flood of tears at any stage of the game.

Generally speaking, the honeymoon is over when a Muleshoe man begins to think of his wife as being expensive instead of "dear."

Some Muleshoe voters have already decided the nicest thing about the coming election day will be the day after it is over.

When a Muleshoe man begins shipping he can generally tell it himself. He begins day-dreaming about yesterday instead of planning for tomorrow.

Some Muleshoe men are queer creatures. They make fun of a young man one day and then perhaps marry him the next one.

Muleshoe folks should try to so live that when they die folk's won't be saying, "that's the last of that guy!"

The only way some Muleshoe husbands can make their wives pay any attention to what they say is to talk in their sleep.

Muleshoe folks who won't go on a diet when the doctor advises them to, generally have to suffer they get h's bill.

Pavement Pickups

Clay Beavers has a friend who was so lazy he married a widow with five children.

Dr. Gibbs says the man who has learned how to love, how to hope, how to give and how to forgive has learned the real art of living.

According to J. E. Aldridge, the worst thing about a person who has nothing to say is that he will never be happy until he says it.

Mills Barfield says the story the Journal told about him last week is just another Presbyterian distortion of the truth.

Ed Myers says it seems to him this country needs a good cotton selling machine more than it does a cotton picking machine.

A little girl went up to H. A. Robb in Jennings Food Store the other day and asked him if he had a calf's head for sale. "No, only my own," he replied. "That won't do. My mamma wanted one, with brains in it."

At the football game last week between the Yellowjackets and the Lobos, Eunice Griffiths made the remark, "I don't see how football players ever get clean." Irma Willis promptly replied, "But, teacher, one little boy asked, 'how can birds open cans?'"

The third grade of the Muleshoe school was having a lesson on birds last week, and Miss Adella Beavers, teacher, after some discussion established the fact that birds eat fruit. "But, teacher," one little boy asked, "how can birds open cans?"

Opal Smith in her shoppe, using high powered salesmanship, on one of her gentleman customers: "These stockings are the very latest fall shades, hole proof, run proof, and priced far lower than elsewhere, and a very good yarn." "Yes," he replied, "and you tell it well."

R. L. Brown received a letter last week from a former Muleshoe resident which contains the following sad news: "The depression sure ruined me. I lost my job and went back to dad's to live, sent my children to the orphan home, my wife went back to her mother's, and if things keep getting worse, I'm afraid I'll have to give up my car."

SNAP SHOTS

Apparently there are only two happy days in some folk's lives, the first is the day they get married and the second the day after they get their divorce.

Many a wise word is spoken in jest and foolish ones in earnest.

A budget is the modern way of worrying before you spend your money instead of afterwards.

Too often plans for saving the world include a nice soft job for the fellow who suggested it.

One objection to "flaming youth" is that it expects somebody else to furnish the fuel for the flame.

They say it is "more blessed to give than to receive." That is especially true of advice.

What is the good of a political speech when no one listens to it except those who agree with it? We sometimes have the same wonderment about certain sermons.

Judging from breakfast prices, the cow that jumped over the moon must have hit a star with her horn; and got stuck up there.

One-Fourth for Taxes

The part of the Roosevelt administration tax bill that is collected from the workers also farms taxes, largely in the form of hidden taxes, represents one-fourth of the wages or income they receive.

TVA Goes Wild

Congress appropriated $50,000,000 for a two year period for TVA. In the first 18 months the expenditures had amounted to $10,000,000, with the government now obligated to spending $379,000,000 as a minimum of cost.

Pause and Play a Bit

Life is a serious business, but it ceases to be a well-balanced business unless it is lightened and brightened, sweetened and purified by a wholesome seasoning of mirth and merriment.
There is a wagon-load of truth in the old adage that no work makes Jack a dull boy. It is just as true that all work and no play makes Jack not only dull but worthless. Wise men work and play.

Play is a duty. It is the filter through which character is refined. Play is governed by the same laws that govern work. Play is the relaxer from the concentration of work. Hence it puts men to test in their life of larger liberty.

Play is the temper test. It is fun to win a game. It is an art that only the cultivated know, to lose a game and laugh at the loss, rejoicing, sportsmanlike, that the best man won.

He who cannot lose without blaming everybody on his team—the crowd, one may chide in the game in the old adage that all play and no work makes Jack not only dull but worthless. Wise men work and play.

Play is an opportunity for honesty and dishonesty on the ground. One may chide in the game in the old adage that all play and no work makes Jack not only dull but worthless. Wise men work and play.

POLITICAL DISHONESTY

Political dishonesty breeds dishonesty of every kind. A state of mind which will intend one fraud will, upon occasion, intend a thousand. He who upon one emergency will lie, will be supplied with emergencies in order that he may continue to lie. He who will perjure himself to save a friend, will do it in a desperate juncture to save himself. He who is unjust in the least is unjust also in much.

Temptations to political dishonesty are easily accepted. The political dishonesty which destroys one's character unites him for honest positions in every other department of life. That which is true of leaders in politics is true of subordinates.

Political dishonesty in voters runs into general dishonesty as the rotten speck taints the whole apple. Men who play the political game dishonestly will play the same kind of a game in their private affairs. The tricks and traps in politics, when once learned by a young man, are by him used in business and society, and in every other walk in life.

The man who lies to you in politics will lie to you in trade, in business and in social intercourse. The man who slanders in politics will slander in personal affairs.

The man who claims to be a Christian and at the same time is a dishonest politician, may be branded as one of the dirtiest, most contemptible and pitiful aspects to be found wearing the name Christian. It is the duty of every person to be a politician in the highest and truest sense of that term. What is politics? It is the science of government and every man should master that science.

Be loyal to home town interests.

WEEKLY LAY SERMON
LOVE

By JESS MITCHELL

Several years ago a movie picture, entitled "The Greatest Thing in the World" was thrown onto the screen which attracted multiplied thousands of people from all over the nation to view it. That greatest thing in the world was "Love"—a something in which everyone was interested—proving its universal appeal. Indeed love is such an all-important fundamental of life that the betrayal of it deserves the most drastic penalty ranking alongside the crimes of murder, rape and similar moral and legal violations.

When the Book of Books says that Almighty God, in behalf of justice and because of his interest in eternal welfare of mankind, gave his only begotten son to die for the salvation of those reptiles of divinity who had gone astray he set an example which humanity has been emulating for thousands of years past.

Divine love is a river without bank or bottom, deeper than space and wider than the universe, flowing from the heart of an eternal Omnipotence in all its tranquility and continuity. The angels of heaven have revealed in its pristine purity and the saints of earth have plunged into its profoundest depths. Time has grown grey in contemplation of its awe-inspiring efficacy, and eternity alone can reveal the potency and magnitude of its fullness.

Invincible artists invading the domain of the celestial realm have returned to paint the fleecy white or burning lustrous clouds floating across the canopy of the sky with the throbs of the omnipotent sky. The flashing count across the sky, the silver lining of the vapor banks floating in the upper firmament, the swirling mountain peaks about whose hoary heads play the lightnings of a sin-fired earth, with giant megaphones announce in the thunders that beat and boom against their rocky breasts; the fact that love is the greatest boon and blessing known to mankind. True love rings as clear as a silver-tongued bell upon the fresh cool air of the morning, calling all mankind to consider and appreciate, as well as to partake of its unimpeachable and unextinguishable joy.

The rainbow in the glorious exuberance of its prismatic prodigality draws its cord and shoots its arrows across the skies defying the Storm King with its pledge of eternal felicity. The soft, sweet petals of the rose bluish at the step of their Creator. The honey-suckles wave and the carnations breathe forth their fragrance, while ten thousand hallowed tendrils "tangle" their new-fresh from the hand of Omnipotence intoxicate us with their perfume and charm us with their colors rare—all in one combined message of transcendent delight voicing the appreciation of humanity for the revelation of supreme love as manifest by Omnipotence.

Love is hot and creates heaven; hate is cold and creates hell. Love dwells in the realm of life's highest values. It cannot be deserved, neither can it be bought nor sold. It is an art, not a science; for it can be learned but never taught. It needs no management, for it manages all who look upon it. It is the eye of the soul. In it lives our common divinity. It will right wrong quicker than prayer, eradicate sin sooner than self-abasement. Without love the most pleasant human relationships are impossible. It will eventually become the mediator between Capital and Labor, and not until love supercedes rivalry will our nation and our homes rise toward the realm of purity and perfection.

Love is the cure of the criminal, the help of the wayward, the inspiration of the outcast. There is no justice without it, no understanding, no growth and over this road of love the whole human race must travel from earthly chaos to heavenly order. Love is a thing of destiny, with its origin beyond the stars. The wise may know, the skilled may do, the shrewd may think; but the least and lowliest may love as an archangel, and when the flame of love dies, from then on until the dusky crevice of earth can only exist.

Sweeter than honey, more beautiful than a poem, grander than the march of mighty armies, more inspiring than the charge of ten thousand cavalymen, more stupendous than the barrage fire of giant artillery across the fields of battle in the dead of night, more astounding than the tread of planets across the trackless fields of ether where they forever move, it is the un-fathomable joy that comes to human hearts in the revelation of love for another. It is the most perfect exemplification of divinity we can possibly know while dwelling here on earth. Omnipotence may strike the serpent as his wrath against sin, he may cause the mountains to part in his fury and the ocean to heave in his anger; yet I think the entire universe trembled, and the angels circling the thrones of glory bowed down in sack cloth and ashes when he suffered the sacrifice on Calvary because of his love for those creatures made in his own likeness and image, and endowed with his own immortal spirit.

Indeed, love without sacrifice is impossible. Pain may be the price of fidelity, but peace is the inevitable reward of felicity. Unselfishly and mag-nanimously the mother goes down into the jaws of death, suffering the indescribable pangs of maternity that she may give her daughters as sweet, modest angelic contributions to honor hearts and homes, and her sons as noble stalwart offerings to the world. The sweetest blossom that ever bloomed in the garden of life is the form of a precious love-gift. With her supreme modesty born of heavenly virtue she sweeps into the royal line of human sacrifice and freely gives the love of her throbbing heart. Because she loves, she becomes a wife—the queen to sit upon the throne of some man's heart, and with modest sceptre to rule some man's home. She puts aside her chosen pleasures, weds herself to his affections, and pledges her troth to his ambitions alone, and when at last, she walks with delicate careful step, because she loves the unborn child which she carries concealed near her wonderful heart. I think all heaven bows to her honor and the angels lean "clear over the balconies of heaven to bestow upon her their smiles of supernal benediction.

On the ocean depths of human love's deep and boundless sea. How cheerless would be our firesides, how cold and dead would be our homes, how hard and inflexible our hearts without it! This earth would burst forth in a flame of eternal hate and heaven itself fall in ashes at our feet. The story is told of two sweethearts who lived in a southern city that quarreled and parted. One of them was a prominent judge, the other one of the Southland's fairest daughters. A few weeks after the quarrel a scourge of smallpox swept over that city. The judge fell a victim to the disease and was removed to a lonely place on the outskirts of the city for treatment. With him there went a doctor friend who sat by his bedside and nursed him through the long days of deadly sickness.

Finally the ravages of the disease passed by and the time came when the judge should have been convalescing, but he remained frail and weak. The doctor carefully diagnosed his case; but could find no physical cause for continued illness. One day he carefully changed his clothing, bathed himself, disinfected his body, and went back into the city. He called at the home of this quietly Southern girl and told her the story of the judge's illness.

He said to her, "He has passed the critical stage, yet he is slowly dying." "I do not understand you," replied the girl, "but he is slowly dying." "The judge was sleeping when the doctor slipped in; but in a few moments the fragrance of the roses filled the room and he awoke. Turning on his side his eyes fell upon the bouquet and he exclaimed: "Who sent those beautiful flowers?" "Can't you read," replied the doctor. The judge, reaching out his trembling hand drew from the box and picking up the card read the message of love written there:— "Did she really send those flowers," he asked of the doctor. "She certainly did," replied the physician, "and it was an act worthy the queen she really is." The judge overcame with the message, turned his face toward the wall and entering "woman's realm of expressive supreme pleasure, wept while the doctor crept softly from out the room.

The next day the judge was found sitting in an invalid's chair; the next day he walked out onto the porch, and the third day the wedding bells rang out their joyful tones. Some poet has well said: "Could we with ink the ocean fill, Were every blade of grass a quill; Were the whole world a parchment made, And every man a scribe by trade; To write the love of God would drain He ocean dry. Nor could the whole Mankind, To stretch from sky to sky." Love is without doubt the crowning attribute of Omnipotence, its manifestation the salvation of mankind, and its participation his greatest earthly boon and blessing. It is indeed, "the greatest thing in the world"—yes, the entire universe. Fortunately, yes a million times fortunate, is he or she who, under its spell possesses it!

Hidden Taxes
"If the major portion of the government's income is obtained from indirect and hidden taxes—taxes upon such things as food, clothing, gasoline and cigarettes—then the main burden falls upon those of small income and the cost of government is hidden. In such cases, it is the wage earner, the salaried worker, the farmer, and the small business man, who have to pay most of the bill."—M. L. Wilson, at Buffalo, N. Y., August 26, 1938.

Mura's Portray Texas Life

Expressive of the four sections of Texas, their bountiful natural resources and historical background are the elaborate murals which adorn the walls of the $1,200,000 Hall of State, the dominating building on the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas. At the top a section of one of the giant murals found in the great hall portray two of Texas' foremost natural resources, oil and cotton. On the extreme left may be seen the prow of a sea-going freighter, representing the vast shipping industry of East Texas and the lower Gulf Coast. In the center mural, which hangs in the North Texas room, Old Man Texas is the predominant figure. The lower is unmistakably typical of the "arrry West." The paintings adorning the walls of the Texas Building's great hall are reputed to be the largest in the world. They portray the story of Texas, both in the days of the republic and after statehood.

Although opened but a few weeks ago, the magnificent Hall of State has won a place as one of the nation's foremost memorial edifices.

BACK TO THE FARM MOVEMENT CONTINUES; TWO MILLION PERSONS CHANGE RESIDENCE IN FIVE YEARS

The "Back to the Farm" movement continues in the United States, the Census Bureau finds, with some two million persons changing from urban to rural residence from 1926 to 1931. Despite drought in the Middle West, the movement has continued this year, being especially notable in the industrial regions of the North and East where the farm population has scored the first increase in a generation.

Until 1910 the United States was predominantly an agricultural country. The Census Bureau in that year found 42,166,120 people living in urban communities and 94,606,146 rural dwellers. Ten years later, in 1920, the race became close, with urban dwellers taking the lead. The 1920 census showed 54,304,000 urban and 51,406,000 rural population.

By 1930 the number of urban dwellers had increased to 68,954,000, almost 10 million more than the number of rural inhabitants. But in this year the swing back to the land began and is still proceeding. While no authentic figures will be available until the decennial census, in 1940, the trend indicates that the figures will again be about evenly divided between city and country.

Analysis of the Census Bureau figures and estimates shows the movement too farms most extensive in five areas. The largest of these regions comprises the Appalachian subsistence farming area, extending along the hills and mountains from Pennsylvania to Alabama. Unemployed miners, lumber workers, factory employes and others unable to find work in industrial pursuits, totaling between one-third and one-half million persons, returned to the small hill and valley farms which they once abandoned, or to farms being operated by their relatives or friends.

The Pacific Coast valleys. Into each of these three areas have flowed more than 100,000 persons from cities, towns and villages.

Much of this migration back to the farm represents workers unable to obtain work, and may be temporary. Nevertheless, it seems likely that many have become convinced that the farm, refuge in hard times, may also have advantages in prosperity when there are plenty of jobs in the city.—P. Worth Star Telegram.

Poultry

MILK IS ESSENTIAL IN CHICKS' RATION

Protein Content Up to Right Point Necessary.

By A. R. Winter, Professor of Poultry Husbandry, WSU Service.

Carefully controlled feeding tests have shown that early feeding of chicks does not interfere with yolk absorption—almost a traditional belief. Have food and water or milk ready for the chicks as soon as they are received from the hatchery.

A good starting and growing mash should contain 18 to 20 per cent crude protein, not more than 7 to 8 per cent crude fiber, and should be ground finely enough that particles are no larger than half a kernel of wheat.

Also, the chicks should be given nothing but milk to drink for the first seven to fourteen days, to maintain the proper content of protein in the ration. Or, the poultryman may mix 10 to 15 per cent of dried milk with the chick mash for the first few days.

This need for more protein in the early diet, the first food of the chick after hatching, is yolk, which contains about 23 per cent of protein. Milk, the first food of mammals, also contains about 23 per cent of protein.

Birds and chicks in the wild state are fed largely on worms and insects for a time after hatching. This natural food has a higher protein content than egg yolk or milk.

Therefore, it does not seem logical to change the ration of the chick and young from egg yolk, a 23 per cent protein food, to a mash that contains 18 to 20 per cent protein. Some form of milk in the ration, to supply additional protein, is essential for the first week or two.

High-Production Birds Happy, and Good Eaters

Early rising and late retiring are good signs in a flock of poultry, since they indicate vigor. Hens with such characteristics should be selected for a breeding flock on farms where chicks are hatched, says a writer in Prairie Farmer. It is easier to get a small flock of good birds together and manage them with roosters from high-producing flocks than it is to increase flock production by hatching eggs from the farm flock. The birds used in the breeding flock should be the super-birds of the entire flock. They should be selected for breed character, vitality and constitutional vigor. Birds that have these will be bright-eyed, have glossy plumage and lots of energy, as indicated by the way they move around and scratch for feed. Birds that are physically strong have good appetites. High producers will be found most frequently at the feed hopper.

Cross-Breeding Poultry

Cross-breeding of purebred fowls for the purpose of securing greater vigor and vitality in the first generation of the progeny, and of making it possible to distinguish the males from the females at hatching, has become a measure of considerable popularity within recent years. Both increased vitality, leading to greater gains in weight in the male chicks kept for broilers, and better production in pullets kept for laying are claimed as a result of such crossing. There is more question of the validity of the latter claim, however, because of lack of evidence in sufficient volume to lead to positive conclusions.—Rural New-Yorker.

White-Crested Black Polish

All Polish fowls have a common origin. The White-Crested Black Polish was originally more common than any of the other varieties. They had but little crest. Those with beards might be described as having "a few feathers growing the wrong way" beneath the beak. The recent development in the White-Crested Black Polish began about 1880, at which time fully one-fifth of the crest was composed of black feathers and most of them grew in front. Since that time, improvement has been made in form and color, and their crests are more than twice the former size.—Montreal Herald.

Avoid Overcrowding

Fifteen feet of nests for every 100 hens is required to avoid crowding. Some commercial poultrymen generally dislike straw, hay, excelsior, shavings or sawdust as nesting material. They much prefer rice hulls. Now England poultrymen use shavings and sawdust very generally. In some parts of the East peat is rather commonly used. In the corn belt, straw is the standby, though excelsior is used more or less by those who try to produce clean eggs.

How to Hatch Turkey Eggs

Probably the best way to hatch turkey eggs is in a special turkey incubator, which differs from chicken egg incubators in several minor ways, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer. Next to that, the most satisfactory way to hatch turkey eggs is to have some hatchery that operates turkey incubators to hatch them. Lacking in either of these two facilities, one can fall back on the old hen, or use regular small-sized incubators that are used for chicken eggs.

Health Education Important Program Says State Doctor

Austin, September 29.—Assembling of students in the schools of the State this month calls to public attention the definite health responsibility of parents and teachers, as well as health workers, and is the subject of an address from the State Department of Health to the citizenship.

"A public health education program is an outstanding factor in the development of the physical, mental, and social welfare of the school children of today," said Governor Brown, State Health Officer. "Health teaching should be a basic part of every educational program."

"Practically every phase of the school system is related to health. Housing, screening diet, disposal of wastes, exercise, rest, even the manner of daily contact with others, all have a direct bearing on health. Schools must treat the child as a whole—with his physical condition related definitely to his mental and emotional capacities.

"Prevention is the all important factor in the control of communicable disease. 'Communicable' means we all know—describes that kind of disease which may be imparted or transmitted from one person to another, either by personal contact or through some other method. One by one, the communicable diseases, such as smallpox, diphtheria, whooping cough, and typhoid fever, are being controlled by preventive or immunizing agents. It is much better for all concerned that the child should be protected from ever taking these diseases, which often leave some condition that will cause trouble later in life.

"Assume your responsibility in the community and work for the development of health education which will pave the way to a better health for the future."

Banks Hold the Bag

Nearly 60 per cent of the national debt of $24,500,000,000 is owed to the banks of the nation. According to Senator Glass, a drop of ten per cent in the price of government bonds would put 90 per cent of the banks out of business. He says the New Deal forces the banks to buy.

DANNY'S HOME-COMING

WHEN the first Jolly snows came stealing through the Green Forest, Danny Meadow Mouse began to be uneasy. He was thoroughly scared and the dangers of the dreadful night were already forgotten. Perhaps I should not say that they were forgotten, for, of course, that kind of thing never goes out of your mind. That is the way with the little people of the Green

"Oh, Danny, I'm So Glad! I'm So Glad!"

Forest and the Green Meadows. Dangers that are past are not worth thinking about. They must keep their minds clear for possible dangers to come. So Danny's thoughts were not of what he had been through, but were wholly of getting home. He thanked his cousin, Whitefoot, for all the latter had done for him and then climbed out of the hollow stump and once more started for the Green Meadows and home. As long as he was in the Green Forest he was anxious. He didn't feel at home there. He didn't know what to expect. He imagined all sorts of dangers. But the instant he reached the edge of the Green Meadows his heart became light.

He still had a long way to go and many things might happen before he reached that snug little home and Nanny Meadow Mouse and the babies. But Danny's heart was light, for on the Green Meadows he knew just what to do and where to go. He could see Redtail the Hawk sailing round and round, high in the blue, blue sky. He knew that Redtail was watching with those wonderful eyes of his for a fat Meadow Mouse, but that didn't worry Danny in the least. You see, he knew just how to keep out of sight. After a while he reached one of his own private little paths. The brown grass hung over it making a regular little tunnel of his for a fat Meadow Mouse, but that didn't worry Danny in the least. The brown grass hung over it making a regular little tunnel of his for a fat Meadow Mouse, but that didn't worry Danny in the least. You see, he knew just how to keep out of sight.

By and by, as he sat just outside his snug little home, he heard foot- steps hurrying along one of the private little paths. It was Nanny hurrying home to her babies. When she saw Danny she stopped short and stared at him as if she thought her eyes were playing her tricks. Then, instead of the sharp words he expected and knew he richly deserved, Nanny rushed to him crying, "Oh, Danny, I'm so glad! I'm so glad! I thought you were dead!" And Danny Meadow Mouse knew then how great is love.

How Devaluation Of Franc Will React On Nations In General

France's move to devalue the franc marks the end of one of the most remarkable "last ditch" stands in modern economic history. For several years she suffered the severest kind of deflation—falling prices, wages, etc.—accompanied by mounting political unrest.

But while other countries, including the United States, yielded and abandoned their currency in an effort to halt deflation and give a fillup to their internal economy and their international trade, France, which had bitter experience in the past with money which decreased in value, doggedly refused.

Now, France at last has yielded. France at present are "dear" in terms of other currencies. Here's why: When an American sends his dollars to France to buy its products they are, in effect, converted into francs.

At present he can get about 19.5 francs for one dollar. Other factors—such as tariffs and quota limitations—being equal, the purchaser will send his dollar to the country where it will have the greatest purchasing power.

Thus, the international bargain hunter might find that by sending his dollar to France he could buy three yards of ribbon, but that in another country he could get five yards. When France devalues, it means she is reducing the amount of gold which each franc represents. This makes one unit of gold worth more francs, and the relationship of the dollar to gold remains unchanged, one dollar also is worth more francs.

The American, then, finds that his dollar may buy more French products than before—that he may get five yards of ribbon for a dollar instead of the former three.

Thus, the tendency to put France in a position to compete for American purchases.

Conversely, however, devaluation may have American products cost the French more because more francs are required to purchase one American dollar.

Stabilization of value by currencies, projected in connection with the franc devaluation is seen by economists as benefitting trade in that it would give traders some assurance of stability.

National Loans For Bailey Co. Totalling $374,150, 2 Months

In Bailey county 191 loans were closed in the amount of $34,150 by the Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank Commissioner, from May 1, 1933 through June 30, 1936, according to information received by H. P. Drought, National Emergency Council state director for Texas.

Of the loans closed in this county $6 for $184,800 were made by the Federal Land Bank and 115 totaling $190,350 by the Land Bank Commissioner.

Through the agency of the Farm Credit Administration in Texas $190,350 have been loaned during the same period.

In addition to refinancing loans through the Farm Credit Administration, the farmers in Texas were benefited also by a reduction of mortgage principal which amounted to $5,283,500. Further savings resulting from lowered interest rates are estimated at $3,550,000 annually.

SPECIAL SESSION 4TH LEGISLATURE: PENSION FUND, LUXURY TAX

(Continued from page one) sulphur companies would move to Louisiana where the tax was 60 cents a ton. Now Louisiana has taken the lead and increased her tax to 42 per ton. Ours is 75 cents. Press accounts recently carried the statement that sulphur interests were threatening Louisiana with a move to Texas on account of our tax being less. There is no occasion for either Texas or Louisiana to be "jockeyed" in such a fashion. The records before this and previous Legislatures clearly disclose that the sulphur interests have too long escaped adequate taxation both at the hands of the State and in some of the counties where their properties are located.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THERE are two distinct types of stairways. The first and customary type is the open stairway. The second is the closed or boxed stairway. The names are descriptive. An open stairway may be detached from side walls and be a distinct architectural entity open throughout its entire length from floor to floor. This is the case when the stairs start in the center of a hall, and rise in broad steps, which usually divide part way up, each half turning to rise and join an upper floor opposite the other half. There may be a landing where the division comes, or it may be that the steps form a circular stairway. For the entire height, each of the stairways described is open on both sides, with edges railed. It takes very large halls to include such types of staircases. Those who have seen them in private homes realize the architectural grandeur they impart to the residential entrance halls.

Open Stairways. The name open stairways, or staircases as they are interchangeably termed, is also applied to those which have banisters on but one side, the open one, while they follow the contour of the wall on the other. The circular staircases of olden times are notable. Some of them are found in the spacious mansions of early American days. The one drawback is that the width in each step varies, as it is tapered at one end and comparatively broad at the other.

For practical purposes the staircases with landings are desirable, the height are deservingly popular. The landings break the long mount, making the steps easier to climb, while at the same time they stop a fall and so prevent bad accidents should one slip when going up or down stairs.

The boxed stairway is one which is railed in on both sides, and therefore has no architectural beauty. The partially boxed stairway is one which is open but a portion of the way, which generally is the lower part. Thus some architectural merit is attained.

Advantages. The advantages in the boxed stairway is that it can be shut off by door or landings across the entrance on the lower or upper floor, thus conserving heat. It probably was chiefly for this reason that many boxed stairways were put in houses at one time when homes were not centrally heated, or where fuel was a very great item of cost. Boxed stairways for this reason are in general use for back stairs, and for those which go to a third floor.

Open stairways are featured in almost all homes for the front halls of today, with semi-boxed stairs introduced only when the plans make them necessary. Boxed front stairs, having no architectural beauty, are relegated to upper halls and back stairs.
