RIVERSIDE FOR REAL... Riverside Chemical Company, two miles west of Muleshoe became a river Thursday morning as a rain which fell some 1.6 inches of rain in a short time quickly flooded the chemical company yard. Following breaks in an embankment, the river was running into a ditch and the yard wasn't covered but for a few hours. Here, pickups, trucks and equipment are shown in the deep water, which also surrounded the office building.

Green Thumb Will Sign Up June 6

The Green Thumb program, designed to provide meaningful employment for elder residents of the county, will also be of value to the various communities within the county by providing labor and workers to non-profit organizations for many different types of projects, according to Bailey County Judge Glen Williams.

His announcement was made as plans were completed to interview applicants in Muleshoe Monday, June 6, at 10 a.m. in the commissioners courtroom in the Bailey County courthouse.

Judge Williams explained that applicants for the Green Thumb program must be 55 years of age or older, have been residents of Bailey County for at least six months, pass a general physical examination (paid for by Green Thumb) and have limited incomes.

Those accepted for the program, sponsored by Farmers Union and funded by the Department of Labor, will be covered by workmen's compensation for the protection of those in charge of local projects and the individual worker while on the job.

A work week for Green Thumb workers is 20 hours and workers are paid at the rate of $2.30 per hour with paychecks being sent directly to the workers twice monthly. In addition, Green Thumb personnel are given two weeks paid vacation per year, as well as sick leave. No contract is required for persons joining the program and reports from local sponsors are kept to a minimum.

Judge Williams stressed that elderly persons joining the program will learn new skills or assist others in the program by teaching them skills already known.

Bailey County will join 18 other counties in the Caprock/High Royals Win Game Sunday At Muleshoe

Muleshoe Royals fans were on their feet a big part of the afternoon last Sunday as the Royals eked by the Edmonson 4-Aces 9-8.

During the first inning, no one scored, but in the second, Edmonson scored on two solo home runs. The Royals came back with three runs with Ray Garcia, Fred Bara and Haynes Jackson to make the score 3-2.

In the third inning, Edmonson tied the score 3-3 and both the fourth and fifth innings were scoreless. Edmonson scored an additional two runs in the sixth, coming out in front 5-3.

The Royals bounced back with three runs by Danny Rodriguez, Fred Bara and Haynes Jackson taking the lead again 6-5.

Two more runs were banded in by the 4-Aces in the seventh and the Royals also scored a duo by Gerald Bara and Alonzo Ontiveroz, and the score was 8-7.

Again, the eighth inning was scoreless, but the ninth inning, everyone was beginning to wonder who would win the see-saw ball game.

Edmonson came in with a tying run to make the score 8-8, then the Royals came to bat. The first batter struck out. Jackson came up to bat but was hit by a bad pitch, and stole second base and the winning run. Danny Rodriguez came up with a double, scoring Jackson and making the final score 9-8.

Richard Jackson was winning pitcher and losing pitcher was Kevins. A spokesman for the Royals commented, "Richard Jackson pitched a good game and helped the Royals in errors."

Double Tornadoes Reported On Friday

Tornadoes levelled a 'double Whammy' at the Needmore community at 10:37 a.m. Friday morning when workmen from Bailey County Electric Cooperative reported two tornadoes on the ground. They said both tornadoes were south of Needmore in open country and they apparently spun back into the clouds without damaging anything.

However, the report was sufficient to activate Civil Defense and all officers, who scattered out to monitor the menacing clouds. This was about the time National Weather Service at Lubbock was issuing a tornado watch for the county. The watch was quickly converted to a tornado warning, as the clouds continued to menace Muleshoe.

Following a brief, quick shower which deposited little additional rain, the skies overhead cleared, and Civil Defense workers and law enforcement officers went back to their regular jobs.

The Friday weather followed a 'sneak attack' early Thursday morning when Muleshoe residents were awakened by a severe thunderstorm. As lightning crackled across the sky it was accompanied by almost continuous rolling thunder and hard rain.

Shortly after 6 a.m. hailstones started peppering down, with the ground briefly resembling a winter scene from the pea to marble-size stones. The hail did no significant damage, and minor street flooding occurred during the Thursday morning storm which deposited 1.3 inches of rain in Muleshoe and up to nearly two inches within three miles of Muleshoe.

Around 4 p.m. Friday afternoon, billowing clouds again were rolling into the area, heralded by a massive sandstorm which was noted south of Muleshoe. As had been the case most of the day, the entire county remained under a tornado watch.

By 4:30 p.m. Friday, the sky had turned 'red' with the sand. Bud Street in the Coyote Lake area said sand was blowing there, and what clouds could be seen through the sand appeared to be high and spotty.

Farmers continue to be optimistic as they look at the best crop prospects in the past four to five years. Many producers think a cotton crop is assured even if no additional moisture is received during the summer.

Ernest Kerr of the Federal Land Bank said a good cotton crop is almost certain, barring a weather disaster such as a hailstorm.

No severe hail damage has been reported in this county although surrounding counties have reported varying hail damage. During this week, most of the flooding and severe hail damage has been reported east and north of Bailey County.

Saturday morning, area residents woke up to bright sunshine, and brisk temperatures with the passing of a cold front. No additional moisture was in the forecast for the next five days.

Inquest Held In Death Of Bruce Little

Thursday morning, Bailey County Justice of the Peace Ken Martin held an inquest into the March 4 sudden death at the VFW, located northeast of Muleshoe.

Questioning in the Bailey County district courtroom was conducted by District Attorney Jack Young. Judge Martin explained that the inquest was held to attempt to "get to the truth of what happened at the VFW" in the sequence of events leading up to Little's death around 8:30 p.m. that Friday night in March.

Judge Martin heard several witnesses during the morning, and dismissed the group. He said he will make his decision in the case in the next few days.

tion, home management, clothing needs, consumer education, rehabilitation and sources of assistance for the elderly.

HSAP provides quality, in-home care services of meal preparation, personal care, home management, escort service, visitation and companionship for the elderly, House said.

The aides work with elderly in Bailey, Cochran, Crosby, Dickens, Floyd, Garza, Hale, Hockley, King, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Motley, Terry and Yoakum counties.

The program is designed to provide services to elderly persons in the community where they and the aides both live.

These services enable persons over 60 years of age to function in their own homes with limited assistance. The program also provides employment and paraprofessional training opportunities for mature, unemployed homemakers, added Mrs. House.

She said those with a number of years' experience in managing a household are given preference in employment. Persons over 60 are eligible to receive homemaker services, based on their ability to pay.

Beef Checkoff Vote Outline Given By Agent

There has been much discussion about the proposed Beef Research and Information Program, which will be voted on this spring by the beef and dairy cattle owners. The registration period for producers to qualify in the election is set between June 6-17 and the actual voting dates are July 5-15.

Eligible producers should contact their county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office to receive a registration form. The county ASCS offices will conduct the referendum, explains Spencer Tanksley, county Extension agent.

"There are two separate parts of the referendum, registration and voting," he reminds. "A producer must register during the first period and must make another trip to vote during that

Men in the program usually work as members of a crew, and, within the region are working at school, city/county state parks, city and county buildings, housing repairs for the elderly, providing maintenance and upkeep at senior citizen centers, museums and libraries, street repairs, water systems repairs and maintenance and other functions.

All of the work and assistance provided by Green Thumb benefits the elderly workers with increased income and improved self-confidence as well as providing a very definite, lasting service to the community, said Judge Williams.

He pointed out that the program is not permitted to replace persons presently employed and is to provide services the community would not have without the program. Organizations wishing to request Green Thumb workers for various projects must furnish the materials and equipment required and a person to provide guidance to the Green Thumb personnel as to the project. No cash can be accepted by Green Thumb for services provided.

Non profit-organizations may request the assignment of Green Thumb workers, or the assignment of a crew for a project by contacting the office of County Judge Williams. Judge Williams noted that projects and assignments are determined by local offices in accordance with established guidelines for Green Thumb. The limitations for assignments and projects are few, other than requirements concerning non-profit organizations and except for work on any facility used or to be used as a place for sectarian religious instruction or worship. Safety is observed on all job sites.

At least 50 per cent of the cattle owners who register must vote--and two thirds must vote affirmatively--in order for the referendum to be valid. Those eligible include 4-H youths, FFA members, men and women who own livestock.

"There is no age limit or minimum requirement of numbers of cattle owned in order to qualify to vote. Any questions about bonafied ownership can be resolved by tax records, sales slips, registration papers or any other valid papers showing ownership of livestock," adds the county agent.

A partnership, cooperative, corporation or similar business is considered as only a single entity for the purpose of voting in the referendum. Where a husband and wife own cattle jointly, this will be considered a single entity and only one may vote. If each owns cattle separately and has documented proof of ownership, this is considered as two entities and each may vote.

In the event that a person owns cattle in a county other than where he lives, or if he cannot make it to the polls during the registration or voting period, it will be possible to write or telephone the county ASCS office for an absentee ballot, explains Tanksley.

If approved, the Beef Research and Information Program will allow establishment of projects for advertising, promotion, education producer information and consumer information with respect to the use of cattle, beef and beef products.

Attending the meeting with Jones was Elbert Estep of the local highway department office. The program was presented by Bob Blackwood.

An announcement was made by Rotary President Ken Henry that $52 had been collected from individual Rotary members to go to the Tom Newton family at Three Way following the recent loss of their home in a tornado at the Three Way School.

Incoming Rotary President John Blackwell reminded Rotary members that the Rotary Officer Installation banquet would be Thursday, June 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Corral Restaurant. The evening will also be ladies night, so all Rotarians are encouraged to attend and bring their 'ladies' with them.

Speaker and installing officer will be John Tyler of Midland, who is District Rotary Governor.

Following his discussion, he fielded questions from the Rotary members as to future plans for Bailey County, and additional projections, including a possible Interstate bypass for this city. The Rotarians were assured that no bypass is in the planning stages, and said that in order for a bypass to be tentatively planned, it must be sought by county officials. Jones said no bypass had been asked by the county judge and/or county commissioners.

Modern society, which is oriented to productivity and youth, tends to lump the elderly into the negative stereotypes of "senile" and "cantankerous," says a University of Texas associate professor of nursing.

Dr. Ruth Gailman says those stereotypes cause younger people "to withdraw very subtly and cease to identify with their elders as human beings."

Among clues she lists as revealing negative attitudes toward aging are: institutions for older people are called nursing homes or old-age homes; clothing stores do not cater to the elderly, and few in the health-care professions go into the geriatric field.

At least 50 per cent of the cattle owners who register must vote--and two thirds must vote affirmatively--in order for the referendum to be valid. Those eligible include 4-H youths, FFA members, men and women who own livestock.

Small Business Week Beginning Sunday

Small, independent business. You have heard about it. You have read about it. You have probably even benefited from one. But what do you really know about it?

In towns, villages and cities across the country, the small independent business located on Main Street U.S.A. symbolizes the American way of life. It is a dramatic story of courageous individuals who faced unknown challenges in a vast unexplored land, determined to succeed in spite of hardship and sacrifice. With strength and character, these men and women struggled to create a livelihood out of a lifestyle that required nothing less than industry and imagination.

Small business is as American as apple pie or the Fourth of July. Historians have recorded this event again and again. Adventurous colonists who voyaged to the New World came up against the cold winters and hot summers--climes unfamiliar to them. They realized immediately that this land was abundant with natural resources. Here was opportunity.

In order to survive, a spirit of unity, a camaraderie, developed. People realized that they needed each other. Together they established an exchange of goods and services. What one person made, another sold, and still another used. The embryo of individualistic enterprise was born.

This enthusiasm for the individual of family-owned operation manifested itself at all levels of business, be it manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer. The origin of this feeling was based on the thought that craftsmen and artisans could take pride in creating a product or providing a service. The concept that big was better did not exist. The triumphant idea of the moment was founded in the philosophy that the endeavoring makes the dreams come true.

Over the years, small business has survived the ups and downs of the economy. In the past, small business has played a rather quiet, behind-the-scenes role. The profile was low key. Not today.

Times have changed. The small business of the late seventies is not the same as the small business of the twenties or forties. For the small firm--the butcher, the baker--merely maintaining a business on a daily basis is difficult without having to be worried about the possibility of being caught in the ever tightening federal noose. The government has become the bane of small business. The most common problems stem from the fact that too often the Congress of the United States thinks big, not small. What is good for the boys in Detroit--the large car manufacturers--is not necessarily good for Sam's Shoes in Santa Rosa. There is a distinction. A great one. For this reason, the independents are banding together in the political arena. Proponents of their cause are making their feelings known. They are ready to take on a few rounds and win.

The small business community no longer wants to be hassled. They want their problems solved. They are tired of yelling "paperwork, taxation, regulation." They want to yell "freedom." So that they can, they are working toward seeing that laws are written which will be in their best interest. They want the U.S. Congress to realize that there are constituents out in the heartlands who mean what they say. They want action, they want answers. Now.

"Independents are organizing at the local, state and federal level," says Wilson S. Johnson, president of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), the largest business organization of its kind in the country. "The climate is changing. By querying our 500,000 members on their position in regard to hot issues like energy, minimum wage, unemployment compensation and taxes, we can present an accurate opinion poll to Members of the U.S. Congress."

Small business is now in action. It is fighting on behalf of the 97 per cent of the nation's businesses which are dubbed small and the 53 per cent of the daily work force who are employed by these companies, who contribute 43 per cent of the Gross National Product.

You can BANK on it!

Bill Loyd, President Muleshoe State Bank

Although the world of electronic banking looms closer each year with Electronic Funds Transfer Systems (EFTS) becoming a banking byword, the importance of people continues to grow too. One of the things planners of the new super-efficient systems have had to acknowledge is the fact that people still like to rely on people. On people much more than machines.

People have been the cornerstone of our business through the years and will continue to be in the future. No matter how much electronic wizardry pervades the financial community, customer service on an individual basis will continue to be our foundation. Banking machines or electronic transfer systems will be used only as a tool for further implementing this goal of personal service. Our bank is people. People serving people. We like it that way.

Fashion

Some of the new fashions, shown in high class magazines, are ridiculous. The average woman is not interested in wearing skirts cut up to the thigh on both sides or in the bodice open from the throat to the waistline.

Most women who buy these garments sew the skirts down to a proper length and sew the bodice up to a respectable area.

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa,
I am getting married in May and I would like to wear a hat. Some of my friends say this is not proper and I should like to have your opinion. This hat is one my mother wore and it is a beautiful large brim hat made of white crepe de chine and lace. It is very becoming and it has been kept in good condition.

What do you think?
Bride-to-be-La.

Answer:
I can understand why you would like to wear this hat because of the sentiment attached to it and its beauty.

Of course your dress will have to be in keeping with your hat. A lovely long, white dress for a late afternoon wedding would be perfectly proper or for a midday wedding. If a short dress is worn it should be of soft silk and lace and well below the knees.

Good luck and best wishes for a happy marriage.
Louisa.

Dear Louisa,
My husband objects to me wearing these very low dresses in front. Do you think it is any of his business?

Answer:
If my husband disliked an exhibition bodice I should simply sew it up a few inches or wear a small dicky with it-that is-if I wished to keep the dress.

Plant "Nitrogen Factories" Can Help Energy Needs

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

In view of exploding world population and increasing food shortages, it's possible a race of "super plants" could help ease our problems with both food and energy. Suppose we ask our scientists to design a plant that wouldn't have to be fertilized with increasingly expensive nitrogen. Let's ask that this plant furnish more protein of improved quality for human food. It should also be suitable for livestock feed. And while we're at it, let's ask that it double present yields.

Impossible, you say? Well, scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station say it's not! In fact, they're well along with developing such super plants.

A team of scientists are converting the popular Southern pea into a source of human food with greater protein content. The Southern pea includes "black eyes", crowders, cream peas, cow peas, etc., that have long been utilized for both human food and livestock feed. Such peas belong to a family of plants called legumes which, when symbiotically teamed with various bacteria of the genus Rhizobium, have the ability to remove nitrogen from the air and convert it to food.

Legumes do this when specific strains of the bacteria are present in their roots to "fix" the nitrogen. Dr. Richard Weaver is part of an Experiment Station team working on this research. As a soil microbiologist, Weaver has identified bacteria strains that can greatly increase the ability of legumes to "fix" nitrogen. He seeks better bacterial strains than those presently available from commercial sources.

Southern peas vary widely in their nitrogen-fixing ability according to the project leader, Dr. Creighton Miller, horticulturist and plant breeder. Miller and a graduate student, Keith Zary, have found that there is great variation among varieties in their potential nitrogen-fixing ability, as measured by nitrogenase activity.

Nitrogenase, an enzyme, is the key molecule involved in biological nitrogen fixation. All nitrogen-fixing organisms contain nitrogenase, while those which lack this enzyme are unable to fix nitrogen. Nitrogen is the key element in amino acids, the "building blocks" of protein.

Therefore, by increasing the availability of nitrogen through biological nitrogen fixation Miller hopes to increase total protein produced by this leguminous crop, as well as recycle the fixed nitrogen to the soil for use by subsequent crops.

This project of research by the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station scientists is being supported by the Agency of International Development (AID) for three years. Findings could help increase the world's total food supply.

The Speaker Reports

by Bill Clayton

AUSTIN—As long as we have had welfare, we have had welfare fraud.

Although Texas experiences one of the lowest rates of fraud in the nation—about 2 percent of our welfare checks go to ineligible recipients—Texas legislators are still concerned about theft from aid to help our State's poor.

The median instance of fraud from our welfare system is over $900, and through December 1976, the State Department of Public Welfare presented 12,923 cases to local district attorneys for prosecution.

This session of the legislature, welfare fraud has received a good deal of attention. We have had a number of bills introduced which speak directly to fraud and the penalties for those convicted of fraud.

One bill, Senate Bill 87, relates to the penalties for food stamp fraud. The bill makes it a Class A misdemeanor if the value of the stamps is less than $200 and a third degree felony if the value of the stamps is over $200. This bill has already passed both Houses of the Legislature, has been signed by the Governor, and is effective immediately.

Two other bills—one relating to theft in the medical assistance program and the other relating to the State's financial aid program—have been passed by the Senate and have been reported from the House Committee on Health and Welfare. These two bills should soon come before the full House for consideration.

All these bills amend the Public Welfare Act of 1941 by bringing the penalties for welfare fraud into line with the penalties for other types of theft. These bills are not designed to bring harassment on the deserving recipients of public assistance but rather are intended to penalize those persons who knowingly and willfully commit fraud against the State's program for the needy.

I feel that these bills address a vital area and an area about which I have received a great deal of communication from the people back home. What my constituents are saying is "stop giving aid to those persons who don't need it and stop the thieves from stealing from the State." I believe that with the implementation of these new measures to treat welfare fraud just like theft, we will be able to make our 2 percent level of checks to illegibles even over.

Mulching Boosts Garden Production

Mulching your vegetable garden can make a marked increase on production if the procedure is done correctly, points out Spencer Tanksley, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Mulching is a way of retarding weeds and protecting plant roots from adverse conditions with some type of ground covering.

Tanksley notes that there are four basic types of mulching materials—clear plastic, black plastic, paper and organic mulches such as grass clippings, sawdust and compost.

Plastic is becoming a widely used ground cover to provide the same results as paper, straw and other mulches. Plastics tend to raise soil temperatures from 5 to 10 degrees F. while paper and organic mulches tend to lower soil temperatures by about the same amount.

Both clear and black plastics may be used, and both types warm the soil earlier in the season than most mulches. Clear plastic has one distinct disadvantage of allowing weeds to grow.

Clear plastic can be laid over seeded row to speed up seed germination. Of course, it must be removed as soon as the seedlings emerge, reminds Tanksley.

Black plastic drastically cuts down weed growth with the exception of nutgrass. Holes of slits should be cut through the plastic to allow seeding or transplanting and to permit sufficient moisture to reach the garden bed.

Paper mulches are among the older types of coverings for vegetable gardens. Since paper mulch can reduce soil temperature and thereby inhibit plant growth, it should be put down after plants are well into the growing stages, says Tanksley.

Paper mulches have one of the benefits common to organic mulches—they decompose and therefore need not be removed at the end of the gardening season.

Organic mulches are still the most popular today. They are effective in retaining soil moisture, in controlling weeds and soil erosion and in reducing fruit rot. Organic mulches also improve the soil's physical condition where plowed under at the end of the season, notes the county agent.

Homeowners Urged To Control Bagworms

South Plains homeowners whose trees and shrubs have bagworms decorating their limbs need to get out their insecticides unless they want some unusually adorned trees next winter.

County Extension Agent Spencer Tanksley says insecticide control is most effective in May and early June when bagworms are small and before young worms begin to construct bags around themselves.

"Homeowners should closely examine their woody, ornamental plants for newly-hatched bagworms," Tanksley recommends. "If bagworms go unnoticed in the spring, heavy populations may develop which can strip almost all of the leaves off the plant."

He says that in the spring, bagworm larvae emerge from hatching eggs inside of last year's bags and begin feeding on leaves. Soon they begin to construct their own protective bag of silk, twigs and leaves, making them hard to see. As the larvae and their bags continue to grow, control becomes more difficult. In these later stages, two chemical applications may be required to obtain effective control.

Bagworms feed throughout the summer months, building their bags larger until the bags are about one and one-half inches long, Tanksley adds. In the fall, the bagworms become adults, mate, and the females lay eggs inside their bags.

"Since the bagworm only completes one generation a year and spreads very slowly from plant to plant, picking the bags off infested plants in the winter will help a lot toward controlling this pest," says Tanksley. "But if bagworms were present on the plant last year and control measures were not applied, chances are very good that an insecticide will be needed this spring."

Tanksley says interested persons can get complete information on bagworm control at the county Extension office. The pamphlet, "Texas Guide for Controlling Insects on Ornamental Plants," and other Texas Agricultural Extension Service publications are available upon request.

Running rats

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — The patter of little feet coming from the Rat Room of the Exercise Physiology Lab at The University of Texas is helping researchers learn more about how exercise can protect the heart.

By inducing heart attacks (through drug injection) in sedentary rats and in rats which had run many miles on narrow treadmills, UT Austin researchers found that the running rats tended to live through a heart attack while the unexercised ones did not survive.

The studies also have shown that pregnant rats that swam produced babies with stronger hearts.

Plainview Bee Habit Discussion Set May 25

Bee habits, feeding characteristics, and their management are among the topics to be discussed in an afternoon seminar May 25 at Plainview's Hale County Agricultural Center, beginning at 2:00 P.M.

Described by program coordinator Dr. Roland Roberts as a "Cucurbit Pollination Seminar", the event is especially for growers, bee handlers, crop consultants, entomologists, seedsmen, processors, educators and other interested in profitable production of vine crops.

"Vine crop vegetables, known to the industry as cucurbits, are highly dependent of skillful management of bees," says Roberts, who is a Lubbock based area specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Such crops important to our Northwest Texas area are pickling and slicing cucumbers, summer and winter squash, cantaloupes and watermelons. Most of the nearly 9,000 acres of cucurbits are grown for fresh market, but there is a growing interest in seed production, especially for melons."

The seminar is being presented by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, with Hale County Extension agents as local hosts.

Listing the topics to be presented, Roberts says flower formation and its relationship to bee pollination will be discussed by Tom Longbrake, Extension vegetable specialist at College Station.

Dr. John Thomas, Extension entomologist at College Station, will describe bee habits, feeding characteristics and bee management in detail.

Dr. Robert Berry, area Extension pathologist at Lubbock, will discuss the effects of fungicides on bees and will answer questions. Roberts will speak briefly on the importance of vine crops to Northwest Texas.

"We plan to have a local bee keeper discuss the problems and economics of handling bees for pollination. Longbrake and Thomas are familiar with all the problems of cucurbit pollination and will bring a wealth of information to us," adds Roberts.

"Last year growers had crop pollination problems," the specialist says. "I saw a 100-acre field of watermelons in which there was hardly a melon in the center 20 acres. One summer squash grower lost more than a week of picking in a 10-acre field in late May when prices were high because he relied on wild pollinators which failed to start working the field early enough."

Texas 'Earns' Tornado Title

A spokesman for the U.S. Weather Service says Texas has more tornadoes than any state. Encyclopedia Britannica says Oklahoma and Kansas have more per square mile. But both sources agree that April, May and June are prime time for twisters. May seems to be the worst month of all and the hours between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. are the most dangerous time because that is when it is easiest for thunderstorms to form and create tornadoes.

North Central Texas in the area ranging roughly from Lubbock to Dallas seems to be the heart of the Texas tornado zone, the U.S. Weather Service (USWS) says. Warm, moist air coming up from the Gulf of Mexico collides with concentrations of cool, dry air coming across North Texas from the Rocky Mountains and the northern U.S. This collision creates thunderstorms that spawn tornadoes and hailstorms, another violent weather pattern that occurs mostly in May.

Scientists have studied tornadoes for years and the one thing they are sure of is their unpredictability. The killer storms can strike anytime anywhere. People need to be alert and prepared to deal with them at all times but especially during tornado season, the Texas Medical Association says.

Tornadoes usually occur in hot, sticky weather with southerly winds and threatening sky with thunderclouds bulging down. In most cases the tornado moves from the west or southwest toward the northeast. Rain and hail often precede the tornado.

Another good weather signal is the USWS bulletin. The USWS issues three types of weather bulletins: a) The severe weather watch bulletin indicates where and when probabilities are highest. b) The severe thunderstorm or tornado warning bulletin means a severe thunderstorm or tornado actually has been sighted in the area or indicated by radar. It is advisable to take cover immediately if the warning is issued in your area. c) The all clear bulletin indicates the storm or the threat of a storm has ended in the area previously included in a severe thunderstorm or tornado bulletin.

When a tornado warning is issued, the TMA urges people to get inside as quickly as possible. Open windows on the side of the house away from the storm's approach. If you have a basement, take refuge there near the wall in the most sheltered and deepest part. Stay under a sturdy table or workbench. If there is no basement or cellar, take cover in the smallest room with stout walls. The first floor is safer than higher floors. Lie under a heavy piece of furniture against inside walls near the center of the house. Stay away from windows. Keep listening to a battery-powered radio for emergency bulletins.

If away from home, take shelter in a steel-framed or reinforced concrete building. In open country, move away from the tornado's path at a right angle. Tornadoes can travel between 0-70 mph. If unable to escape its path, lie down flat in a low place that is reasonably safe from flash floods, shield your head and cover your face with clothing to prevent suffocation from dust. Do not stay in a car, trailer or mobile home. Stay out of buildings with wide-open roofs, such as theaters and gymnasiums.

High-heeled shoes

AUSTIN, Texas (Spl.) — A physical rehabilitation specialist at The University of Texas feels sorry for women who wear high-heeled shoes. Prof. Karl K. Klein says high heels keep the calf muscle in a constantly shortened state, adding that as "the heels go up, the back goes forward and low back stress begins to appear." The professor believes stresses caused by posture imbalances can be responsible for heart conditions, arthritis and rheumatism.

GREEN THUMB

GREEN THUMB... is the way of describing those that have a way with plant life. The ones, who are so gifted, will tell you that to be successful with plants, you must see that they have plenty of water. God knows too, that a soul must be watered in order for it to mature and grow.

...and thou shall be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not." Isaiah 58:11

Attend Church Regularly and receive your spiritual nourishment.

THE CHURCH IN EVENING

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedom which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENT REDUCTION BOOSTED

Reduction of serious and fatal traffic accidents is the goal for 18 West Texas counties embarking on a new effort with the help of the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation and the Texas Tech University Division of Continuing Education.

The effort is an extension of the Texas department's Office of Traffic Safety program, initiated in 1969 when district managers were appointed to assist local governments in finding grass roots solutions to traffic problems.

In the northwest Texas district, covering the Panhandle and surrounding area, Earl Bartley was appointed district manager to assist traffic experts in 54 counties.

The new effort establishes within the Texas Tech Division of Continuing Education and office which will draw upon the expertise of the university to help identify problems, establish priorities, find alternative solutions and develop traffic safety programs tailored to individual community needs. Objectives include development of educational and public information programs.

Dr. Michael Mezaack, associate dean of the Division of Continuing Education, is project director for the contract with the state Office of Traffic Safety. Coordinator is John B. Howard, formerly traffic safety coordinator, civil defense director and employee safety director for the city of Abilene.

Howard said the new effort is an outgrowth of the federal Highway Safety Act of 1967. Mezaack said initiation of the nationwide program began to combat a dramatic increase in serious and fatal accidents on the U.S. highways.

"The program already has apparently had some impact on reducing the number of serious accidents," he said, "although the problems are not solved." He cited Lubbock's unusual 1977 record. Nineteen fatalities have occurred within the city since January 1, he said, compared with only six during the same period in 1976.

The coordinator will be working with Bartley, but by undertaking assignments with the southern counties of the district

Governor Endorses Referendum

Texas Governor Dolph Briscoe today easily slipped into his role as a leading cattleman as he announced his support of a National Beef Referendum.

"This self-help program for cattlemen is the most bold and far reaching program in my memory...and possibly in the history of the cattle industry. I plan to register to vote 'Yes' in the upcoming Beef Referendum. Furthermore, I urge all cattlemen in Texas to inform themselves on the merits of this program, then register in June and vote 'Yes' in July."

Briscoe pointed out in a special capitol news conference that the national program would raise an estimated $30-40 million annually for research, education and promotion of beef. The funds would come from cattle producers themselves and would be voluntary. He said that cattle producers should go to their local ASCS office to register between June 6 and June 16 and then go back between July 5 and July 15 to vote.

More than 120 of his fellow cattle producers from around the State were on hand today to hear the official endorsement. The producers represent the Texas Beef Development Taskforce, a state-wide group working for passage of the Referendum.

The Texas Governor is recognized as a leader in the cattle industry and has served in various leadership positions in the cattle business.

"As a cattleman," Governor Briscoe pointed out, "I have long had an interest in beef research, consumer education and promotion. Six years ago I was chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, an organization that had a great program but always was under financed and promotion of beef. The funds would come from cattle producers themselves and would be voluntary. He said that cattle producers should go to their local ASCS office to register between June 6 and June 16 and then go back between July 5 and July 15 to vote.

Mineral Deficiency Takes Crop Tolls

Texas High Plains corn and sorghum growers encountering zinc or iron deficiency in their crops will need to be cautious in their diagnosis. Although the symptoms of deficiency are not that similar, it is easy for persons to be confused about the two disorders which could prove to be costly.

In the West Texas area, zinc and iron are the only two micronutrient deficiencies of significance in corn and sorghum.

Contributing to the increased incidence of these deficiencies are excessive use of phosphates, high calcium-high pH levels and decreasing organic matter content in the soils.

The first step in correcting a nutritional disorder is a correct diagnosis, therefore, recognizing the symptoms is crucial. Zinc deficiency is more likely to be seen in corn than in sorghum or any other field crop. A pale streak of light yellow will generally occur near the base of the leaf blade. This discoloration including the leaf veins may be wide as a pencil or as wide as the thumb, and will often gradually disappear about the middle of the leaf's length. But it may extend any length, though rarely to the tip. Discoloration may be apparent on only one side of the leaf midrib and frequently will not be observed on all the leaves of a single plant. Such symptoms are rarely observed in sorghum except in extreme cases.

Dwarfing of both corn and sorghum due to shortening of the internodes is common.

If these symptoms are observed and treatment appears to be needed, foliar application of zinc can be very effective and relatively inexpensive. A complete coverage of the leaf surface with a solution containing three pounds of 36 percent zinc sulfate per 100 gallons of water will do the job. Include a wetting agent at the concentration recommended by the manufacturer for insecticidal use. Be concerned only about just wetting the foliage. One such application is all that will likely be needed. Before the next crop, get a good composite soil sample for analysis by the Extension Service Soil Testing Laboratory in Lubbock. They will suggest rates of zinc for soil application for the next crop. Soil applications of three to ten pounds of actual zinc per acre are highly effective when worked into the root zone pre-plant. Indiscriminate use of such rates is definitely not recommended.

Iron deficiency is more likely to be visible in sorghum than in corn. It is readily recognized in all crops by the characteristic yellowing between green leaf veins which, in sorghum and corn, begin at the base of the leaf and extend to the extreme tip. Long recognized as a severe production problem in sorghums on the high lime soils, corn is quite resistant to the disorder. Although symptoms frequently occur in very young corn, the crop tends to quickly grow out of the condition.

Foliar application of iron is the only measure that has given satisfactory control, and yield increases from such applications have frequently been disappointing. Spraying until foliage is wet with a solution containing 15 to 20 pounds of iron sulfate per 100 gallons of water plus a wetting agent or spreader sticker is a long standing recommenation. Several applications may be required for sorghum.

Individual plants in a row are more uniformly affected by iron deficiency than by zinc. With both elements, the most severe visual symptoms are likely to occur on shallow high lime soil. The pattern of occurrence can be highly irregular.

Concentrations given for foliar application are for use in ground rigs and should not be exceeded. Other additives such as copper, manganese, sulfur, nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, etc. will not increase the effectiveness of the zinc or iron and could easily cause foliage damage. If both iron and zinc are included in a single application, the concentrations of each material should be reduced by one-half.

It's positively surprising what some people will do in the expectation of monetary gain.

View From The Plain

Springtime in Texas is a season of flowers, green trees and young wildlife and many of these cute animals and birds are picked up and taken home by both children and adults resulting in problems for both them and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

The best reason to leave young wildlife alone is state laws governing the possession, sale or barter, and confinement of both game and non-game animals, birds, and endangered species such as the Horned toad.

Many times, serious, unexpected problems arise from unqualified attempts to domesticate creatures which nature intended to be wild and free. Most people attempting to pen or confine these young of the wild do so with a sense of compassion for the apparent "lost" animal or bird. In reality, the parent or parents are most likely near by watching as you handle or even injure their young. Some wild parents will not accept their offspring back if human scent is left on the wild young.

Opportunities for the wildlife young to learn to survive in the out-of-doors is lost if not taught by their parents. These birds and animals fail to learn who their natural enemies are and how to defend themselves against an attack.

Both adults and children are often bitten by wild "pets" in captivity and usually it is the children receiving the worst of the deal.

Carter sets moral view on foreign policy.
