Sonora ISD Makes the Honor Roll on Accountability Report Card

Sonora Independent School District received a passing grade from the Texas Education Agency (TEA) which released preliminary grades Friday, December 30, 2016 under the work-in-progress state accountability system.

According to the state's report card, Sonora ISD received an overall score of "B" which is better than neighboring school districts.

"Sonora ISD students have met the state standard since the new system was put into place in 2012," Sonora ISD Superintendent Ross Aschenbeck said.
"Moreover, the academic rating in the new accountability system, which was released on December 30, 2016, Sonora ISD received an overall grade of a "B." The new system does not officially start until the 2017-2018 school year, but SISD is very proud of the academic success of our students."

Under the new system, so far, grades are based on the findings of four domains, each one representing a specific category.

These are as follows: Domain
I - Student Achievement, Domain
II - Student Progress, Domain III

Closing Gaps and Domain IVPost Secondary Readiness.

Sonora Intermediate School earned a "B" in Domain I, Student Achievement, "B" in Domain II, Student Progress, "B" in Domain III, Closing Gaps, and an "A" in Domain IV, Post-

Sonora High School earned a "C" in Domain I, Student Achievement, a "C" in Domain II, Student Progress, a "D" in Domain III, Closing Gaps, and a "B" in Domain IV, Post-Secondary Readiness.

Compared with neighboring schools Sonora's overall grade was higher than the majority, considering most districts earned a grade of "C" or below. Among Sonora's nearest Crockett County ISD, Iraan ISD, Christoval ISD earned an overall grade of "D" and Junction ISD received an overall score of "F.

More than 1,000 school districts and charter schools as well as more than 7,000 K-12 campuses statewide received grades based upon four categories

Broncos Smash Badgers, 41-30

The 2017 season is off to a good start for the Sonora Broncos varsity basketball team.

The Broncos are 8-4 after their non-conference win over McCamey this past Friday, January 6, 2017. That put them ahead of their win total from last season.

Coach Cannon McWilliams credits the success to team leadership and improved talent over last season.

"We've got a good group of seniors, 4 out of 5 starters are seniors," McWilliams said. "So, it's a very senior heavy team. Defensively we played really well. It took a while to get going as far as shots falling. We were cold in the first half with only 4 points in the first quarter. But, in the second half the shots started falling."

Last year, the Broncos were 0-8 going into district play. A turnaround from this year's 8-4 record.

"It's kind of reversed," McWilliams said. "We've got 8 wins – that's already more than we had last year. So we are building upon last year and I'm excited as we move into conference play. I'm ready to see how we match up against our district opponents."

Of course, this record comes as no surprise to fans after watching Friday's game against the Badgers.

Taking their time in the first half the Broncos held a close score against the Badgers with only a 2-point difference at intermission. 16-18.

However, in both quarters, the Broncos defense proved resilient.

In the third quarter the Broncos picked up their game with turnovers and rebounds, and they did what they do best – score.

McWiliams said his team knows that running and fast breaks are key to scoring points. They are at their best when they get out and run, he added.

The Broncos continued their lead over the Badgers into the fourth quarter until it was clear that the odds were in their favor. As the clock ran down, the Badgers attempted fouls but it wasn't enough to change their fate and the Broncos claimed the victory 41-30.

Kade Creek goes for a lay up during Friday's non-conference game between the Broncos and McCamey, January 6, 2017. The Broncos won over the Badgers 41-30. This win gives the Broncos an 8-4 record as they move into district play against TLCA this Friday.

KIMBERLEY MEYER | THE DEVIL'S RIVER NEWS

McWilliams acknowledged Kade Creek, Liam Yourgalite, Michael Solis and Rauly Ojeda, all starters, as team leaders, providing a certain "senior leadership" that keeps the team working together.

He named Kaden Cordell, a junior, a natural team leader and front-runner as far as averaging of points.

"Team unity has been great with this group of guys," McWilliams said. "They have been the easiest group of guys that I've had the privilege to coach. They make it easy."

Next, the Broncos compete against TLCA in their first conference match this season, Friday, January 13, 2017. Game time is set for 8 p.m. at the High School main gym.

"We are looking forward to seeing TLC Friday night," McWilliams said. "We know that Wall and TLC are heavy favorites but, I'm looking forward to seeing how we stack up against our district competition."

Legislation Proposes to Regulate Access to Restrooms, Locker Rooms

AUSTIN — Texas now has a "bathroom

The Lone Star State has joined Alabama, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, South Carolina, Virginia and Washington as states where legislation has been filed in an effort to restrict access to restrooms, locker rooms and other sex-segregated facilities on the basis of sex or gender.

On Jan. 5, Texas Sen. Lois Kolkhorst, R-Brenham, filed Senate Bill 6, titled the Texas Privacy Act. The legislation, she said, would address "the personal privacy concerns of many Texans."

The legislation comes after a May 13, 2016, "joint guidance" from the U.S. Departments of Education and Justice "to help provide educators the information they need to ensure that all students, including transgender students, can attend school in an environment free from discrimination based on sex."

Under Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the federal agencies said, "schools receiving federal money may not discriminate based on a student's sex, including a student's transgender status." The federal agencies signaled their intent to treat a student's gender identity as the student's sex for purposes of enforcing

However, last fall, U.S. District Judge Reed O'Connor of the Northern District of Texas granted an injunction against enforcement of the federal "guidance." The judge ruled that the injunction applies not only to Texas, but to all states.

Kolkhorst termed the federal agencies' "guidance" an "edict." She said "the proposal to have boys and girls potentially showering and using the same restroom" alarmed the public.

'This bill is written not to begin a controversy, but to end one," said Kolkhorst. "The Texas Privacy Act is a thoughtful solution to a sensitive issue. It preserves an expected level of privacy for our public schools and buildings. At the same time, it also allows for schools and universities to make personal accommodations for those requesting an alternate setting. Senate Bill 6 also allows Texas businesses to determine their own policy without government interference."

Kolkhorst said SB 6 "is unique" in that it enhances penalties for crimes committed in a bathroom against any individual, regardless of their sex or gender

Opponents of ン By Ed Sterling "bathroom legislation" have argued that it is unconstitutional not to accommodate transgender people and

Goldie and Brindle Canyon

In the late 50's when we leased the old Diamond Bar Ranch in Southern Pecos

The previous leasee had moved off in a hurry. As a result, there were a few remnant sheep and goats left on the property.

It Happened Out West

The normal procedure was to gather this stock and return them to their owner. We proceeded to do this and were very successful on the upper parts of the ranch.

Then we got to the big east pasture. This contained 3,000 acres of rough, broken up country with only one watering spot.

The water trough was on top of the plateau at the southwest corner. In this corner was a gate that opened into the shearing trap. To gather the remnant sheep and goats Goldie and I had no help and only took two saddle horses, as we were just starting to ranch. We had to clean up this stock, so we could stock the ranch with our

By this time, we had gotten to the big east pasture.

One day as we drove up to the corner water trough at noon there were six big fat rambouillet ewes. They immediately broke off into Brindle Canyon. We decided that these sheep came to water about noon in the heat of the day and we should plan to get them accordingly.

Now we have the location, the time, and the participants of this story so let's get on with it from here.

The next day we rode our horses up to the corner about 10 o'clock expecting to get the gate open and be ready for these sheep when they climbed out of the canyon, hot and thirsty. Good plan. WRONG!

The sheep were already there, rested and watered. Upon seeing us they broke off into Brindle Canyon.

I opened the gate and told Goldie that I would run down the canyon and try to head the runaways against the fence. Then, I would hold them as they rested from the run until she got down to me. I ran down this rocky trail and headed the sheep against the fence after about a mile run. Holding them until they rested then starting back up the canyon by myself.

Anyone who has ever worked sheep knows that six sheep want to go in six different directions. After about an hour I got these sheep up the hill and out of Brindle

Reaching to top at the corner trough I found Goldie sitting on her very rested horse. She came to me and we herded the tired sheep through the gate into the shearing trap. I shut the gate and walked my horse over to the water trough where we both drank our fill.

Then I asked my wife why she had not come on down the canyon to help me with the sheep.

This was the very indignant answer I got, "As I started down the trail after you, about half way down, there was a huge rattlesnake laying across the trail. My horse boogered and I decided that snake could have the whole dang canyon. And I came back out on top to wait for you."

I accepted this explanation and we rode back to the ranch.

The Will of the Voters – When the Legislators Agree

Analysis

By Ross Ramsey

THE TEXAS TRIBUNE

Voters are either smart, or not, depending on whether the state's legislators agree with them.

When the politicians agree with the voters, they cite the wisdom of the crowd to bolster their arguments. When they disagree, they see voters as unruly

Want examples? Look at fracking in Denton, at Houston's equal rights ordinance and at ride-hailing in Austin. And look at the words uttered and written this week by the authors of legislation that would regulate who uses which bathrooms in public buildings in Texas.

The 2015 legislative session saw the state stepping in to protect hydraulic fracking operators in Denton and elsewhere, after that city's voters approved a ballot measure outlawing fracking inside the city limits.

The losers of that vote property owners and operators alike — convinced legislators that voters had overstepped their authority. They had a point; some of their operations were in place before the suburbanites encroached and got cranky, and they felt their property rights had been trampled.

That said, the citizens went to the polls to express their preference. They were overruled by the Texas Legislature, with the result being a statewide law that overrides those kinds of local regulations and initiatives when it comes to oil and gas

More recently, Austin voters inspired at least one legislator — state Sen. Don Huffines, R-Dallas — to cry "mob rule" after they approved an ordinance that requires drivers for ride-hailing companies like Lyft and Uber to pass the same kinds of background checks required of cab drivers. The companies waged an expensive and divisive campaign for their side and got trounced in the polls. They dropped out of the Austin market, which has since sprouted a number of new ridehailing operations. But Huffines was incensed.

"It's official: Austin has gone from being the 'weird' neighbor to being a national embarrassment for the free market, liberty loving state of Texas," he wrote in an editorial at the time. "With its mob-rule vote against Proposition 1 effectively forcing Uber and Lyft to leave the city, Austin has used 'local control' as a thinly veiled excuse to trample economic liberty and drive out a popular, innovative, disruptive service."

He's one of several lawmakers who have promised to exert state control of that issue during the current session, pushing for statewide regulations instead of sometimes-conflicting local > Lawmakers don't always fret over the local stuff. Public smoking and texting-while-driving laws have remained a local concern, in part because the Legislature has never approved statewide bans on those things.

Sometimes, state politicians are actually pleased with the work of local voters — even when they're trying to assert state control.

In the state's largest city, voters rejected the Houston Equal Rights Ordinance in 2015, swayed in part by arguments that the local law would allow men into women's bathrooms. On Thursday, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick and state Sen. Lois Kolkhorst, R-Brenham, introduced a much-anticipated state law that would direct transgender people to the bathrooms that match their biological sex, making a similar argument about men using the ladies' rooms.

Their Senate Bill 6, which is signed by Kolkhorst but high on Patrick's list of priorities for the 85th Legislature that begins tomorrow, starts with an amendment to a section of state law called the Local Government Code. Where that code now has a Chapter 250 titled "Miscellaneous Regulatory Authority of Municipalities and Counties," the bill would strike the last four words, replacing local control on these kinds of bathroom regulations with statewide laws drawn up in the state capital.

Kolkhorst deployed the wisdom-of-thecrowd argument, saying the HERO vote was the only time something like this has been on the ballot in Texas and suggesting that the local public opinion evident in that 2015 election should be a guide to lawmakers now.

"That's because the public has a way of getting it right," she said, as she presented the bill that would replace local preferences with those of the state.

McKittrick Canyon Is an Easy Hike

I hadn't hiked McKittrick Canyon in a while, so when I scheduled some interviews around Dell City I decided to call my friend Drew Stuart and ask him when the leaves were at peak. "In a couple of days," he said. So in a couple of days Susan and I left home for the three and a half hour drive fall color. Big tooth maples have the same flaming red leaves like you see during a New England autumn. Other trees provide the golds, oranges and yellows that shine in the mid-November sun. There was no wind at all and the temperature was perfect. When we left the park to head to Dell City after the hike, the temperature was 83 degrees.

The parking lot at the entrance to McKittrick had just a few cars, which was surprising. I expected to see more because of the ideal conditions. We did see one man from New York who had just retired and as a gift to himself was traveling to several national parks. "It's my way of celebrating the 100th anniversary of the national parks system," he told us. "I'm having trouble remembering which parks I visited. They all kind of run together."

We left the parking lot just before ten A.M. with backpacks full of bottled water, snacks and a lunch. We were anxious about what we might encounter. We hadn't gone a hundred yards before we saw a tree with red leaves. The sky was a deep blue against the mountains and made a dramatic backdrop for the colorful trees.

Drew has hiked all over the Guadalupes and has been on obscure trails that only the park rangers know about. While he was editor of the Hudspeth County Herald he published beautiful lyrical prose about his hikes. "Every time I start out on a hike, it's a soul journey," he says. "It's like a spiritual quest." He has camped overnight on some of his meanderings.

A couple of miles into the canyon you encounter the Pratt cabin, built by the head of Standard Oil a long time ago. He called the location of his cabin the most beautiful spot in Texas. We stopped there for a drink of water and brief rest in rocking chairs. We hiked another couple of miles and stopped for lunch at a place with a cavernous overhang complete with stalagmites and stalactites called the grotto.

There are no steep climbs in McKittrick from the entrance to the grotto. Hikers walk most of the way on level ground. Serious climbers go past the grotto and the trail becomes more difficult.

After lunch we started back. Even though we went back the same way we came in, we were amazed at how the place had changed. The sun was lower and the light was intriguing. A stream reflected golden sunlight. The hike lasted less than six hours and covered about six miles. It's an easy one-day trip from Midland-Odessa.

OBITUARIES

James "Jim" B. Stephen June 8, 1936 - January 8, 2017

James "Jim" B. Stephen, 80, passed away on January 8, 2017, at his home in Sonora, Texas.

Jim was born on June 8, 1936, in Olney, Texas, to Mr. and Mrs. G.B. Stephen.

Dear Patients & Friends:

It's my privilege to serve as your Dentist for the last two decades at my Sonora Office. On behalf of my entire staff, I want you to know we appreciate your choice of our office to professionally meet your dental needs & those of your family. We thank you for the trust you have placed in our practice.

I have enjoyed getting to know the wonderful people of the area. My family was thrilled to escape Houston in 1996 for the blue skies & sunshine of West Texas!

I've had health challenges since 2014 but my physical condition has recently forced me to find an exemplary dentist to take over my practice. While many rural areas have lost their Dentists, Sutton County is truly blessed to have a military veteran who wants to serve a rural community.

Dr. Brian Midei practiced in Tucson after his lengthy U.S. Navy tour of duty overseas. Before the U.S. Navy Bureau of Medicine & Surgery, Dr. Midei earned his Doctor of Dental Surgery degree at Ohio State after his undergraduate at Penn State. Dr. Midei's impressive credentials & extensive experience are augmented by a gentle chair-side manner plus a philosophy of dentistry similar to mine.

Dr. Midei's professional skills & compassion nature fit with the mission of our office & staff to provide the finest quality dental care & superior customer service in a convenient, local setting.

I want to spare the people of our community the burden of driving to Angelo for even emergencies. Dr. Midei delivers fine, friendly dentistry; I entrust your care to him. Our wonderful staff continues working in the practice to provide you the quality dental care & customer service you deserve.

Dr. Midei's history of exemplary patient care, eases my difficult decision to retire & transfer ownership of the practice to Dr. Midei. He will be your Dentist January 16, 2017. I leave you in his capable hands. I hope the community will welcome Brian as you welcomed me. Please continue to support me, Dr. Midei, Linda, Rae Ann, Rosemary & Lilia during the transition. The team looks forward to your next appointment.

Warm Regards,

Dr. Phillip G. Miller

What you may not realize is that for many youth, showing livestock will be their only exposure to animal production or agriculture.

Educating youth about livestock husbandry, even within the stock show venue, helps youth understand the management struggles that the American rancher faces.

This experience can help make them a more informed consumer.

Finally, youth will benefit from the premiums they receive at the stock show.

These funds are made possible through the generosity of local and area business as well as individual donors.

The premiums received from the county stock show will help youth build college funds to assist with their educational expenses.

including students achievement, student progress, college readiness and attempts to close the gaps between minority students and

However, grades were not inclusive because results were not yet available for a fifth category measuring community and student engagement

Education Commissioner Mike Morath noted that the grades included in a 494-page report to the State Legislature, 2015–16 A–F Ratings: A Report to the 85th Texas Legislature D-287, were not official and that definite results will not be available until next year.

Until then, Texas will continue to follow the accountability system which rates districts and campuses as "met standards" or improvement required."

"It is important to note that the Met Standard/ Improvement Required ratings issued in August 2016 and updated in November 2016 are the official academic accountability ratings for the 2015–16 school year. A similar process will be used for the 2016-17 school year," Morath said.

"The ratings in this report are for informational purposes to meet a legislative requirement and represent work-inprogress models that are likely to change before A-F ratings become effective in August 2018. No inferences about official district or campus performance in the 2015-16 school year should be drawn from these ratings, and these ratings should not be considered predictors of future district or campus performance ratings.'

Superintendent Aschenbeck said he thinks the new format is a good reflection of Sonora ISD's performance.

"We scored 79% in

Index 1, which on a grading scale is a C. However, in the old system most people wouldn't know what a "40" meant in Index 2, 3, and 4. So at least the new system gives people a clear understanding," Aschenbeck said. "Moreover, we really push progress, or moving kids toward the college readiness standard, so we are very excited with a "B" in the other 3 domains. Sonora ISD scores were outstanding compared to the region and state. Not many schools can say they scored an overall letter grade of a "B".
