

Uncle Sam's budget reaches $1 1/2 trillion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter today sent Congress the first complete budget of his administration, describing it as "lean and tight" but sufficient to meet the country's needs.

The president's proposed 1979 budget calls for outlays of just over $500 billion, making it the first half-trillion-dollar budget in the nation's history. Spending in the current fiscal year is projected at $462 billion.

The proposed deficit in the 1979 budget will be a near-record. Carter disclosed last week it would be almost as high as the $62 billion deficit in fiscal 1978, which would make it the third highest ever.

The record deficit for any single year was $66.4 billion in fiscal 1976. The 1979 fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

The proposed budget includes Carter's plan to cut taxes by $25 billion beginning on Oct. 1, with $17 billion in tax cuts for individuals and $8 billion for business.

Carter's proposed budget reduces the federal share of the nation's Gross National Product from 22.6 percent in 1978 to 22 percent next year.

Carter said his goal is to reduce the federal share of GNP to 21 percent eventually.

The defense share of the proposed budget increases somewhat more than the rest in terms of real purchasing power. Carter asked for future spending authority for defense of about $126 billion, and somewhat less for actual 1979 outlays.

Defense outlays this year are projected at about $105 billion.

The budget also includes the following jobs programs, previously disclosed by

Carter:

— A continuation of the public service employment program at the 725,000-job level through 1979.

— A $1.2 billion expansion of the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act to provide work opportunities and skill training for unemployed youth.

— A demonstration project to create 50,000 jobs as part of Carter's overall welfare revision proposal sent to Congress last year.

— A $400 million appropriation to create jobs in the private sector for poor and disadvantaged persons, especially youths.

The huge deficit proposed for 1979 moves Carter further away from his campaign commitment to balance the budget by fiscal 1981. And Carter acknowledged in his economic report to Congress last Friday that it is increasingly unlikely this goal can be met.

About one-third of the deficit, between $15 billion and $20 billion, is the direct result of his tax cut proposals, Carter said, which will reduce federal revenues during 1979 if Congress approves them.

Carter said in his economic report that should there be "unusually strong growth in the private economy" in the next two years, a balanced budget might still be possible.

But he said that if he determines that taxes should be reduced further in years ahead to keep the economy growing, then a balanced budget would not be possible by 1981. "In those circumstances, the date for reaching the goal of budget balance would have to be deferred," he said.

McPherson bids for judgeship

Attorney Robert McPherson signs up...

County Judge Don Hinton announced today that he will not seek a four-year term as county judge in November. The post will be sought by Pampa attorney Robert D. McPherson, who filed today for the position subject to the May 6 Democratic primary.

McPherson, a native Pampa, is a 1956 graduate of the University of Texas Law School. He served as city judge in 1959, and 1960, leaving Pampa to be an executive assistant to the state Commission of Commerce and executive director of the Public Service Commission of Alaska.

Returning to the Panhandle in 1969, McPherson practiced law in Wheeler. He returned to Pampa in 1972.

McPherson, 49, had his left arm bound to his chest today after breaking his clavicle in a fall in the parking lot of St. Anthony's hospital in Amarillo last week.

He described himself as a "fiscal conservative" and said he had not yet formed a platform.

He graduated from Pampa High School in 1948 and attended the New Mexico Military Institute for two years before receiving his bachelor of arts degree in 1954.

McPherson, who has not served as an elected county official, ran for county attorney in 1976, losing to David Martindale. He said he also sought the county judge position when it was vacated by 23rd

District Judge Don Cain.

Cain was replaced by Don Hinton, who said today he will step down after eight years as a county commissioner and 10 months as county judge.

Hinton said he "didn't know" what his plans for the future will be.

McPherson is a member of the Gray County and Texas Bar Associations and the Moose Lodge. He has one son, Robert, of Pampa.

HUD dusts off plan

DALLAS (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development has plucked its much-maligned Section 235 housing program off the shelf, remodeled it, and is placing it back in the forefront of the construction industry.

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris informed delegates to the National Association of Homebuilders here Sunday of the decision and got nothing but praise in return.

"I personally have very little patience with the view that our record as a nation in the subsidized single and multi-family market is a poor one," she said. "It is time that we that we stop focusing on the failures of these programs and come to realize that they have been in truth very successful."

The old 235 program was halted by the Nixon administration after several scandals were uncovered in its operation. However, the 1978 model has some new wrinkles.

Calling the old 235 program a "costly failure," Mrs. Harris said the new attempt at subsidized housing will include a three percent down payment plan and a mortgage interest rate of four percent.

Another change will include a government subsidy to pay the difference between the program's mortgage interest rate of four percent and the market interest rate.

Mrs. Harris said Congress in 1977 raised the Federal Housing Administration mortgage limits for homes in the program to $32,000 for regular homes, $38,000 for homes for large families and $44,000 for large family homes in high cost areas.

School trend: back to basics

EDITOR'S NOTE — When the John Marshall fundamental school opened in 1973, it was one of the pioneers of the back-to-basics movement. Educators around the country have closely watched the Marshall experience and today more and more schools are following suit. Here's a report on Marshall's work and influence.

BY BARBARA RIEGELHAUPT
Associated Press Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP)

— Donna Jennings says the big difference between her fourth grade experience and her older brother's is that he didn't have any homework and she has it almost every night.

"But I like that," the 8-year-old says. "My mom says I learn by homework, mostly."

Donna is among a growing number of students across the country who are going to fundamental schools. They are known in some districts as "traditional," "3R's," or "Academic Plus." Discipline is strict, dress codes exist, and the emphasis is on the basics of reading, writing, and math.

Donna attends the John Marshall fundamental school in Pasadena, one of the first of its kind when it opened in the fall of 1973 and considered by many educators nationwide as a model of the basics movement.

Other communities have watched the progress of Marshall, a combine school with an adjoining elementary school — and have begun their own programs in the past two or three years.

While the differences between Marshall and the regular schools don't seem dramatic, the stress at Marshall is on classroom drills, grouping by ability, and daily homework. Independent study courses are regarded with skepticism.

Misbehavior is immediately reprimanded. Parents are notified and are expected to support disciplinary actions. Parents also sign a form permitting paddling of youngsters when necessary — rare, the principals say. The parents are invariably consulted before any paddling.

"In every instance I'm aware of," he adds, "the fundamental schools came about as the result of a small group of parents who believe children are not achieving what they think they should."

Despite stereotypes of regimented fundamental schools, visitors to Marshall don't find the kids stiffly erect in their seats, eyes riveted on teacher. There's occasional whispering and snickering and even a bit of horseplay. But the general atmosphere is one of quiet and order.

"I like the whole atmosphere of the school," says Donna's mother, Nancy Jennings. "I feel good having my children there because I know the rules are stricter and people aren't allowed to mistreat others."

George Hepp, father of one of Donna's classmates, says his five children attend Marshall because of the back to basics approach and the discipline.

"There's nothing exciting about that for my children," he says. "They're disciplined at home and they fit in there very well."

Favorable comments like this, an annual increase in enrollment, test scores that have risen steadily for both minority and Anglo students and the duplication of Pasadena's program elsewhere have led the program's architects to declare it a success.

Some experts note that the fundamental school concept isn't all that different from many regular schools where there's renewed interest in "basics" too.

Dr. Alexander Law, an official in the California Department of Education, says fundamental schools are one element in a country-wide move toward "competency-based education," meaning that students must meet certain standards before advancing or graduating.

"We are saying there are standards everybody has to meet," says Law, chief of the state Office of Program Evaluation and Research. "I think the fundamental schools go further in a rigorous attack on these things... I just think public schools can accomplish everything the fundamental schools can."

A dog's eye view

Old Sam, the dog riding on the back of G.E. Stone's truck the way he has traveled for the past couple of years, passed by a minor accident this morning involving a couple of major vehicles. A bus with no passengers, driven by Jack Wayne Elder, 24, of Amarillo hit some ice while making a right turn off Foster Street onto West and slid into a truck owned by Rex Roustabout Service of Pampa, driven by Kenneth Dale Gage, 19, of Pampa. There were no injuries. Pampa Police Officer Mark Rigler investigated. The photo of G.E. Stone and his dog Sam was taken a few days ago on Highway 60.

Americans move to their paradise states

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many Americans no longer are just dreaming about a carefree life in the sun or the mountains. They're going there at ever increasing rates, says the U.S. Census Bureau.

In addition to rapid growth in the "Sunbelt" states, the government agency said Sunday in an interim report, there has been significant population shifts into the western mountains and the more rural northern states of New England.

"We were surprised at the very strong growth of the mountain states," said Donald Starsinic, of the Census Bureau's population division.

Starsinic, whose office compiled the 1977 statistics, said the romanticism of the slow paced lifestyle in the western mountains probably has had much to do with the shift.

And he noted that Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire — which have the same attractions — also showed population increases, although the other New England states are losing people.

"These states are not tremendously built up. There's plenty of room for expansion, more pleasant living, perhaps cheaper living," Starsinic said in an interview.

The Census Bureau said the population of the nation as a whole grew 6.4 percent between 1970 and 1977, to 214,669,000.

The growth in the Sunbelt and corresponding population decline in the industrial belt of the Northeast and North Central regions has for some time been apparent. The new figures confirm the trend.

The statistics said California had the largest increase in population, with 1.9 million more people than in 1970, a 9.6 percent boost. Florida and Texas were close behind, with 1.6 million new residents each.

But Starsinic said the latest figures show the desirable regions "are spread around a lot more" than had been expected.

While Florida had a 22 percent increase in the number of people coming into the state, its rate of growth declined by one-third during the past two years, the bureau said.

At the same time, a string of mountainous states stretching from Montana to Arizona and New Mexico showed an overall population increase of 21 percent, 11.9 percent of that attributed to people coming from other parts of the country.

Increasingly, said Starsinic, states such as Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada in the West and Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire in New England have become more popular. Alaska had the highest increase, 34.6 percent, but much of that was attributed to the oil pipeline boom, the bureau said.

In contrast, each of 10 industrial states of the Northeast and North Central regions has less people today than seven years ago or showed only slight increases well below the national average.

The population of New York state dropped 1.7 percent. Rhode Island fell 1.6 percent, and Pennsylvania dropped 0.1 percent. At the same time, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan had increases well below the national average.

Bucking the trend in New England, Maine showed an increase of 9.2 percent, New Hampshire 15 percent and Vermont 8.7 percent. In the West, Idaho increased 20.3 percent, Wyoming 22.2 percent, Colorado 18.5 percent, New Mexico 17 percent, Arizona 29.3 percent, Utah 19.7 percent and Nevada 29.6 percent.

The Census Bureau said the shift in population — if it holds up until the official census in 1980 — would mean a change in congressional district lines, with nine seats in the House of Representatives shifting to the Sunbelt states.

Following current trends, said Starsinic, Florida and Texas would each gain two seats, and Arizona, California, Oregon, Tennessee and Utah would each gain one. New York would lose three seats, Ohio would lose two, and Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania and South Dakota each would lose one.

For public 'good'

It must be a traumatic experience for socialist-minded liberals to hear that their idol, the Soviet Union, finds it necessary to resort to international capitalistic ventures. It was difficult enough for them to take the news that Russians would starve if it were not for private production of food outside the commune concept. Now they have another great burden to bear. Since capitalistic ventures are expanding, it will be difficult to pretend that it does not exist. Dedicated to the proposition that capitalism must be destroyed, their idol has let them down. The knowledge, however, may not deter these misled individuals from pushing for more and more socialism in our cities, states and nation. If they can march ahead oblivious to all historical failures of socialism and the tremendous successes of private enterprise, a tarnished idol will not seriously inhibit their efforts.

The Soviet Union is showing a marked eagerness to reap all possible benefits from capitalistic practices which they claim to abhor. A description of a study of Soviet commercial operations has been published by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). It tells of Moscow's expanding business conglomerate overseas, including five subsidiaries in the United States. The rapid expansion expresses a need for an increase in currency earnings and an attempt to build more of a commercial presence in the West. The CIA notes other gains in benefits which include "access to Western managerial expertise, knowledge of local markets and lower hard currency costs associated with exporting." Another plus for the Soviets is that its controlled firms are more willing to market Russian goods which have trouble competing in quality with foreign manufacturers. This problem and the inability to provide adequate spare parts keep prospects of rapid advances not too rosy in Moscow. But in some areas they continue to make gains in the use of the capitalistic concept. According to the CIA the Russians have expressed an interest in establishing a bank in New York to take advantage of the last important financial market left to them. If they establish the bank, it will be interesting to hear an explanation given by any of the leading socialist-liberals who are in the habit of trotting out their idealistic idol at the drop of a hat. Facts and logic have never been much of a barrier for those within and outside of government, who do their best to socialize any and every phase of our economy. Flying the banner "For The Public Good" they have managed to foist upon us, bit by bit, more socialism than even the Socialist Party hoped to achieve.

Fed causes inflation

The underlying, structural rate of inflation in the United States is now 7 to 9 percent. What's behind this miserable state of affairs? "The government is spending too much and printing too much (money)," says Milton Friedman, Nobel Prize-winning economist. Friedman, the economist who more than anybody else created the branch known as monetarism (although he dislikes the term), used an old rule-of-thumb to reach the 7 to 9 percent inflation estimate. M2 (cash plus bank demand and time deposits) is growing at a rate of 10 percent a year, while the long-term real (inflation-adjusted) growth rate of the economy is just 3 percent. The subtraction process — 10 minus 3 — leaves 7 percent, but underlying inflation may be even higher than that, he said. "These relationships don't work out perfectly," Friedman said. (Other economists, who do not pay as much attention to monetary aggregates, also reach about 7 percent by their own rule-of-thumb, to wit: wage gains (10 percent) minus long-term real economic growth.) Unfortunately, Friedman does not hold out much hope for immediate improvement. He does not think it will make much difference whether President Carter reappoints Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns (once Friedman's professor) when Burns' term expires early this year. "There is great misunderstanding on this question. Burns' statements are excellent," said Friedman, but the Fed's actions are decidedly not. "Burns' record (as Fed chairman) is not distinguishable from others recently," said Friedman, noting, "the Fed has established targets for slowing down monetary growth, but while the targets are going down, actual monetary growth is going up." Both M1 (currency plus demand deposits) and M2 (M1 plus certain bank savings deposits) have been rising at double-digit rates in recent months. Fed targets for both are far lower. The Fed lowers its targets — but not money growth, Friedman noted sardonically. And today's depressed stock market may be a more accurate reflection of current economic ills than was the stock market crash of 1929, Friedman said. In 1929, the stock market crash "was not a prelude to what happened later (the Depression). The stock market crash didn't create the Depression; the Federal Reserve did," he said. (In his most famous work, Friedman tracked how the Federal Reserve Board created and intensified the Great Depression by continuously shrinking the money supply, rather than raising it, as it should have done at the time.) "Today, we don't have that problem (a Fed which created deflation). Today, we have the reverse — a Fed which is promoting inflation," Friedman noted. The stock market not only reflects fear of this excessive money creation (causing inexorably higher interest rates) but "something more basic and fundamental" — a fear that corporations cannot cope with rapacious government, he said, citing a monumental recent work, "Can the Corporation Survive?" by Michael C. Jensen and William H. Meckling. The tract by the two professors at the University of Rochester, N.Y., has become widely quoted and respected. Federal Income Tax Every individual under 65 years of age who resided in the United States and had a gross income of $2,950 or more during the year must file a federal income tax return. Anyone 65 or older on the last day of the tax year, is not required to file a return unless he had a gross income of $3,700 or more during the year. A married couple both 65 or older, need not file unless their gross income exceeds $6,200.

Berry's World

Watch on Washington

Another major disaster?

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The firing of Republican David W. Marston as United States Attorney in Philadelphia could rank with the Lance affair as a major disaster in President Carter's first years in office.

Although the evidence is far short of conclusive, the incident gives the general impression that President Carter took a personal role in expediting the firing of a young prosecutor who was investigating Democratic crooks in the City of Brotherly Love. Sufficient evidence exists to leave the impression that President Carter intervened at the request of Representative Joshua Ellberg (Dem., Pa.), who was under active investigation. Appearances are made even worse by the manner in which President Carter handled the matter in his press conference. Initially, he stated he had nothing to do with Marston's firing.

Later, in response to questions, the President said that Representative Ellberg had called him on one occasion to urge rapid removal of Marston, a Republican appointed by President Ford, and that he had called Attorney General Griffin Bell to urge compliance with Ellberg's request.

After the press conference, Press Secretary Jody Powell issued a statement explaining that Representative Ellberg actually had called President Carter on two occasions to urge immediate steps to remove Marston. President Carter said he had called Attorney General Bell to urge swift action in removing Marston but he did not know at the time that Marston was engaged in an investigation of Representative Ellberg and Representative Dan Flod, another senior Democratic congressman from Pennsylvania.

Attorney General Bell says the call from President Carter was immaterial because he already had made a decision to find a Democratic replacement for Marston, and that his decision was made without knowledge that Marston was engaged in an investigation of Representative Ellberg.

In the wake of the political misuse of the Justice Department in the Watergate affair, the public will likely treat such denials with skepticism, particularly when admissions of intervention follow denials of intervention.

After the November, 1976 election, Carter declared that the United States Attorneys' posts, traditionally filled on the basis of political party, would be filled on the basis of merit.

This led the public of ad the press to believe that United States Attorneys with impressive records in investigation and prosecution of organized crime and political corruption would be permitted to continue those investigations. While the Carter Administration left an unusually large number of the 94 U.S. attorneys in office in the first months on 1977, Democrat pressure started to build for removal of Republicans and replacement with deserving Democrats favored by Democrat senators and congressmen.

While most Republican prosecutors left without public complaint, there was a small furor when Philip Van Dam, a former administrative aide to Senator Robert P. Griffin (Rep., Mich.), refused to resign to make room for a Democrat successor.

Van Dam involved in investigations of Teamsters Union pension and insurance frauds and the mysterious disappearance of former Teamster President James R. Hoffa. His desire to continue those nonpolitical investigations was not considered reason to be retained, and he finally was squeezed out.

John L. Goldstein, who had compiled a long record of successful prosecution of corrupt Democratic and Republican politicians as well as labor racketeers, made a longer and more dramatic fight for his job.

In the end the political clout of Representative Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.), chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Senator Harrison Williams (Dem., N.J.), chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, was too much for Goldstein and his reform backers.

There was no indication that Goldstein was involved in investigations of either Representative Rodino or Senator Williams, although a number of those under fire were labor leaders and businessmen prominent in the Democrat organization.

There never was any indication of President Carter's personal intervention in the removal of Republican U.S. Attorneys in Michigan or New Jersey and apparently Attorney General Bell handled those problems and kept the political fall-out at a minimum.

But, the admitted facts in the firing of Marston do involve presidential intervention at the request of a congressman who was under investigation.

President Carter's claim that he did not know of Marston's investigation of Representative Ellberg might have been more credible in the first months of his administration, before the many misrepresentations and misunderstandings concerning what President Carter knew and did not know about the pattern of overdrugs by Bert Lance at the National Bank of Georgia and at the Calhoun National Bank.

When the Carter White House insists there was "no pressure" to fire the federal prosecutor in Philadelphia, it is only an opinion — one that is at odds with established facts.

If it Fitz

Saturday Evening Post

By JIM FITZGERALD You probably think I am the only newspaper columnist who didn't sell the Saturday Evening Post when he was a boy. Or perhaps you think I am an original thinker who doesn't write about the things everyone else writes about. Wrong, both times. There's a long list of things that paid scribblers always turn to when they can't think of anything else. Boyhood nostalgia is at the top of the list. And there's nothing more nostalgic than reminiscing about the depression days when a runny-nosed little boy had to sell 10 Saturday Evening Posts a week or his dad would put him in a bag with 10 kittens and throw the bag into the river. (I remember once when Mother tried to use Dad's bag for collecting coal along the railroad tracks. He wouldn't let her. "That's my bag," said Dad, thus becoming the world's first hippie.) Anyway, I did sell the Post and I am glad to write about it. I'd have done it sooner, but I've been in a slump. You've probably heard that even the greatest writers go through dry spells in which they mean that the muse has deserted them. A muse is any of nine Greek goddesses who inspire creative artists. That sounds pretty classy and I wish it applied to my slump.

The truth is that I suffered a small paper cut on the tip of my typing finger and then, like a fool, I swiped a handful of popcorn from my son's bag. That's pouring salt on the wound (I may have coined a phrase there). When I was about 10 years old, I sold the Post for my cousin, Bobby Smith. He was only a couple of years older but already he was a neighborhood foreman for a magazine distributor. Bobby was one of those kids that a guy's mother was always pointing to and saying, "Why can't you be like Bobby? He has two paper routes and 10 magazine routes and an Essex dealership. And you won't even get out of bed in the morning." That's the kind of a cousin I had to have, boy. He was a real nice kid but, gee, he was always working and putting money in the bank and buying his mother presents. One Christmas, I remember, he gave her a new coat. I gave my mother a clay ashtray I made in school — and I gave it to her in front of Grandma who didn't know Mother smoked. Boy, Merry Christmas. Mother thought I would become more like Bobby if I sold magazines. But it never worked. I was the world's most reluctant salesman. I would ring neighborhood doorbells only because Mother was watching out the window. My sales pitch went like this: "You don't want to buy a Saturday Evening Post, do you?" I was always right. Each week I'd pick up 10 Posts from Bobby. A few days later I'd bring back 10. The day he suggested I retire was when I brought back 11. A woman had browbeaten me into buying back a Post she'd bought downtown. One of the cartoons was dirty, she said (I never did find which one and I looked for six hours). I went back to my wastrel life, but Bobby kept hustling. That kid worked hard at dozens of jobs until the day he was drafted into World War II. He was killed in the Battle of the Bulge. I always associate the Post with Bobby and the 1930s when a nifty double feature could turn a boy on for weeks. Those were days of simple pleasures, one of which was reading the Post, starting from the back and ending up with Alexander Botta, the incredible tractor salesman. Those pleasures seemed to disappear sometime during the war. I guess I became more sophisticated. Maybe I simply grew up; or grew bitter. Anyway, I quit reading the Saturday Evening Post. I guess I don't really know why. But I think it had something to do with the fact that the most patriotic pictures Norman Rockwell painted could never make me understand why my cousin Bobby, age 19, had to die.

Your money's worth

Nixing odometer spinning

Sylvia Porter

In 1978 alone, 13 to 14 million of us will spend $20 to $25 billion for second-hand cars. We've reached the point where nearly three out of every four auto models purchased in the U.S. by private individuals for their personal use are used rather than new cars.

If you are among these millions, a new federal law may help you spend your money a bit more wisely and perhaps aid you in avoiding getting stuck with a high-mileage heap when you thought you had bought a little-used cream puff.

Officially, it is known as The Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act (Public Law 95-604, Sections 408, 412, 413). Unofficially, it's the Anti-Rollback Law.

Effective this past Jan. 1, the revised MVI&CSA — which also, by the way, regulates sales of gas-guzzling new cars — provides for $50,000 fines and one-year jail terms for anyone convicted of spinning back odometers on used cars. And it requires every seller of used cars — including you — to sign an Odometer Mileage Statement certifying the true distance a car has traveled, or stating clearly that the car's odometer is wrong and why.

Some states have had odometer laws for a decade. California adopted the first in 1968, New York followed the next year, other states joined later. In 1972, the federal government itself passed an anti-rollback law. But the regulations often were mere hand-slappers, convictions were difficult to obtain, punishment was usually minimal. So, "spinning" has continued, although spinners charge more — with rates climbing from $5-$10 a car in the 1960s to $25-$50 in recent years in states with tougher statutes.

"Spinning was something even the best dealers had done routinely on virtually every high-mileage car they retailed," said one industry executive (who wants to remain anonymous for obvious reasons). But my informant continued:

"The game has changed drastically now. Some dealers are still seeking the services of a spinner, but they are being more cautious and the roll-back artist is charging more. A dealer today may actually sell his used units to a spinner and then repurchase them as lower-mileage models at $400 to $500 markups."

One result of this higher spinner cost: between 1970 and 77, used car prices climbed half again as fast as new car prices.

The threat of jail has changed the ways of other dealers, though, for they know FBI agents are checking used car lots in major cities and mingling with buyers and sellers at auto auctions.

One result of this threat: newspapers for the first time are carrying classified ads hearing 1974, '75 or '76 models with 50,000, 60,000 or even 70,000 miles of use — the actual totals.

Several companies now market to dealers a high-mileage "warranty" program — enabling the dealers to offer service contracts good for six months or 6,000 miles on cars with 60,000 to 100,000 miles of use, providing the cars are not more than five years old.

New car operating costs also are being affected by the anti-spin crackdown.

"When odometers could be readily rolled back, mileage didn't count," an expert told me, "and trade-in allowances were based almost entirely on age and appearance. Now, the trade-in allowance can vary as much as 2 cents a mile for travel over or under the typical 10,000-mile-a-year average." This, naturally, increases or decreases the initial owner's depreciation costs.

Still, if you are shopping for a used car, protect yourself by assuming any used car has run at least 20,000 miles a year during its first four years of use.

Assume, too, that taxis and police cars may run 50,000 to 75,000 miles in a single 12-month period.

Figure that the newer the car, the more likely it is a high-mileage unit. Cars in non-personal service are traded an average of every 2.4 years, but private owners keep theirs 5.3 years.

Since the car dealer is the professional and you are the amateur, expect the worst until otherwise indicated. Bring a non-related friend on your used-car shopping tour, ask lots of questions, take plenty of notes. Find out the name of the original owner. Does the owner live nearby? Beware of out-of-state cars. Can you see the maintenance records? How much did the dealer spend on repairing the car, and why? (Major fleet operators, such as Hertz, will willingly show these records.)

Ask, ask, ask! The new odometer law is a great leap forward in protecting you as you go used car shopping. But you still must be wary. Odometer spinning never will be stopped completely.

Freshmen--materialistic, unprepared

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Almost half the nation's college freshmen say they can bake a cake from scratch, but more than 40 percent worry about their ability to read and study, according to a new survey.

The results of the 50-question survey by the University of California at Los Angeles and the American Council on Education in Washington, D.C., were released over the weekend.

Questionnaires were filled out by 299,467 freshmen entering colleges or universities for the first time last fall, and raw data was weighted to give a statistical portrait of all 1.7 million freshmen throughout the country.

The finding that alarmed survey conductor Alexander Astin most was the students' apparent lack of college preparedness. Of those responding, 42.6 percent said an important reason for going to college was "to improve my reading and study skills."

"In the aggregate, I think the results this year are kind of a red flag as far as secondary schools are concerned," Astin said.

The goal cited by the largest number — almost three-quarters — of this year's freshmen was to be "an authority in my field." Nine years ago, 58.3 percent of the students named that goal.

For the first time since the annual survey began 12 years ago, a majority of freshmen, 52.9 percent, supported legalization of marijuana. Busing to achieve racial balance was advocated by 40.6 percent compared to 37 percent last year, and a whopping 92.3 percent said women should have job equality.

The pollsters learned that two-thirds of the students can do at least 15 pushups, almost half can bake a cake from scratch and more than 80 percent feel that government should do more to discourage energy consumption.

"Freshmen in recent years had been less willing to advocate federal involvement in people's lives," said Astin. "But the item on energy bucks that trend."

Astin said materialism was reflected in the 58.2 percent who said they want to be "very well off financially," compared to the 40.1 percent who gave that answer in 1967. In addition, 62.1 percent of the students cited being able "to make more money" as an important reason for attending college, up from 49.9 percent in 1971.

Astin also noted that developing a philosophy of life, once "by far the most popular goal," has dropped to third place at 59 percent.

Everyone looks for 'magic' man

BOSTON (AP) — Two years ago James A. Carr set up shop on State Street, the heart of Boston's conservative financial district.

Like the alchemists who promised to turn lead into gold, authorities say, Carr made a fortune convincing the gullible and the speculative he could turn a paper called a commodity future into hard cash.

On Jan. 14, Carr, his second wife, their daughter and his two children by a previous marriage disappeared from their $200,000 home on Marblehead Neck, a wealthy community some 20 miles north of here.

Among those who would like to find him are an unknown number of investors who claim they were bilked, the FBI, the Internal Revenue Service, the Federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the U.S. attorney for Massachusetts, U.S. district courts in Massachusetts, New York and Michigan, and court and law enforcement authorities in several states, as well as his attorney, F. Lee Bailey.

Although authorities believe Carr is on Grand Cayman Island, Bahamas, no one acknowledges seeing him since Jan. 14, four days after he was released from federal custody on $100,000 bail and three days after the FBI seized the records of his firm, Lloyd Carr & Co. Bailey says he has talked to Carr on the telephone.

The day after Carr was last seen, the FBI identified him as the Alan Abrahams who escaped in 1974 from a minimum security prison in New Jersey where he was serving four to six years for writing bad checks and fraud.

The FBI said Carr also was known as Alan Albert Cayne and Alan Albert Layne.

Carr has been charged with contempt of court for allegedly disobeying an injunction against him and two officers of his firm. The federal contempt charge alleges Carr and the two other company officers continued to cheat and defraud their customers by promising "enormous profits," misrepresenting costs of the options, claiming options are guaranteed and using high pressure sales tactics.

Authorities said that at least $1.7 million in Lloyd Carr funds was transferred to two Bermuda banks. Of a total $3.6 million deposited in a Boston bank by the firm since April, $200 remains, they said.

Paul Guzzi, Massachusetts secretary of state, estimates Lloyd Carr bilked investors here of $12 million. Hugh Maken, director of the Corporation and Securities Bureau of the Michigan Department of Commerce, estimated the nationwide figure through 11 other Lloyd Carr branches at $50 million.

The firm arranged commodity options, the right to buy or sell a commodity futures contract at a fixed price on a fixed date.

If a speculator guesses right on the futures contract, an agreement to buy an item like gold, copper, sugar or coffee at an agreed price on a fixed date, he can buy at a low price and sell at a higher price on the agreed date. The trading house makes its money on commissions.

But commodity options are so speculative that the Commodities Futures Trading Commission requires dealers to tell their customers they can lose their entire purchase price 24 hours after a transaction.

Inflation target 6%

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's budget for 1979 sets an unemployment goal of 5.8 percent and an inflation target of 6 percent, both within two years.

It also says the nation's gross national product will hit the $2 trillion mark for the first time in 1978.

And in a projection that may dismay some Americans, the budget indicates it may be impossible to ever get unemployment back to the old full employment level of 4 percent.

It said full employment now would be 4.9 percent unemployment, and that this might decline to 4.7 percent by 1983, but probably not below that.

"These rates are consistent with a 4 percent rate in 1955, adjusted for changes in the composition of the labor force toward groups that typically experience higher rates of unemployment," said the budget documents, which were sent by Carter to Congress today.

Carter's goals for the next few years are to gradually reduce both unemployment and inflation by one-half of 1 percentage point each year. The nation's jobless rate was 6.4

percent in December and inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, was 6.8 percent during 1977.

Here are Carter's specific economic goals for the next two calendar years:

1978 — Unemployment, 6.2 percent in the fourth quarter; inflation, 6.1 percent, and the GNP, up 4.7 percent.

1979 — Unemployment, 5.8 percent; inflation, 6 percent, and GNP, up 4.8 percent.

While those goals may translate into what seems like a slow rate of improvement to many Americans, administration economists believe it is the best that can be done without igniting new inflation or worsening unemployment, since both are to be dealt with simultaneously.

Carter's economic advisers say his $25 billion tax cut program for 1978 is essential to maintaining economic growth in the 4.5-5 percent range that will make it possible to achieve even the modest goals he has set.

Growth below 4 percent is considered insufficient to keep up with the nation's growing labor force.

Jimmy's just another cracker

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — With the temperature just right for fishing and tennis, President Carter is paying little attention to this marshy island off the Georgia coast. And the island is paying little attention to the president.

"I felt more excited when King Hussein was down here," said real estate agent Glenn A. Lewis. "Jimmy? He's just another cracker."

Carter, winding up his fifth visit here since the 1976 primary election campaign, will return to Washington tonight after spending Sunday and part of Saturday fishing without much luck.

For Carter, the Musgrove Plantation is a perfect weekend resort, a secluded estate owned by Smith Bagley, grandson of tobacco magnate R.J. Reynolds. The manor house is set back two miles from Frederica Road, well-hidden by dense shrubbery, towering live oaks, palms and palmettos.

Carter can go fishing in the stream behind the plantation. Or, as he did over the weekend, he can take a small boat through narrow channels to the mouth of Mosquito Creek, which opens into the ocean.

He can play tennis on the property and stroll around the 1,361 acres in privacy. He has little reason to leave its confines.

Amarillo auditory center underway

Buddy Stevens, executive director of the Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center helps Tony Cain, a hearing-impaired student of the center, with the shovel used in recent groundbreaking activities for the new speech and hearing building.

Groundbreaking for the new $1.5 million Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center was held recently in the Killgore Children's Psychiatric Center auditorium adjacent to the construction site at 1300 Wallace Blvd.

A fund-raising program has been in progress for the past 18 months, and approximately $300,000 is yet to be raised to provide equipment and furnishings for the new building.

The center was founded in 1959 by the C. Lowell Munday family with specific emphasis on diagnosis, therapy and education for people of all ages with speech, hearing and language disorders.

Money for construction was raised through a capital fund drive headed by Wales Madden, Jr., with Mrs. Lee T. Bivins and Virgil Patterson as co-chairmen of the steering committee.

Mrs. George Cree of Pampa served as area campaign chairman, and was responsible for raising $82,000 towards construction of the new facility.

The contract calls for 395 calendar days for construction, and should be open in early 1979. The new building provides three specific areas for diagnostics of speech and hearing disorders, a complete speech therapy clinic for persons of all ages and classrooms for the hearing impaired and multihandicapped deaf opening off a centralized learning resource center.

The building will contain 24,000 square feet on one level, with the hearing test chambers recessed into the hillside so that eight feet of soil will serve as a natural sound barrier from external noises.

In the very near future the new Children's Rehabilitation Center will be constructed adjacent to and connected by a corridor to the new Speech and Hearing Center. The design of the two buildings will increase the flexibility of treatment to the public and will eliminate any duplication of community services.

All therapy rooms and classrooms will be equipped with observation areas so that parents and family members of persons with communication disorders will be able to observe both the education and therapy that will be conducted in the new building.

Power sources will be utilized to provide heating and cooling to both the speech and hearing center and the proposed Children's Rehabilitation Center. The building is designed to gain maximum efficiency from energy sources with careful attention being paid to insulation factors, utilization of glass and as much natural sound proofing as possible. The new center will be located at 1300 Wallace Blvd. Parking space will be provided for 88 vehicles.

With the addition of two complete sound-proof chambers in the new building, Joel Lapedius has been appointed chief audiologist for the speech and hearing center. Lapedius holds a master's degree in clinical audiology and the certificate of clinical audiology from Hofstra University in New York.

For the past seven years, he has been chief clinical audiologist for the Metropolitan Center in Boston, Mass. He will join the staff Feb. 1.

The speaker for the groundbreaking ceremonies was Robert R. Ashworth, superintendent of Amarillo Independent Public Schools; introduction of guests by Buddy Stephens, executive director of the Amarillo Speech and Hearing Center; invocation was given by Dr. Winifred Moore, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Amarillo and welcoming remarks were given by Dr. Jack H. Walker, president of the speech and hearing center.

Vance expects talks to resume

By ARTHUR MAX Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has matched Egypt's suspension of their foreign ministers' talks in Jerusalem by refusing to resume the Cairo parley of their defense ministers, but Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance expects negotiations to resume soon.

Vance returned to Washington Sunday a few hours after the Israeli cabinet voted not to send Defense Minister Ezer Weizman back to the Egyptian capital for the time being to resume talks on return of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt.

A senior member of Vance's party said the secretary expects Foreign Ministers Moshe Dayan and Mohammed Kamel to resume their negotiations on a declaration of principles for a peace agreement, which Egyptian President Anwar Sadat suspended last Wednesday, after a cooling-off period of a week or 10 days.

The official said if Dayan and Kamel don't meet in Jerusalem or Cairo, Assistant Secretary of State Alfred L. Atherton Jr., who remained in the Middle East, will shuttle between the two capitals as messenger and mediator.

Vance advised the Israelis and Egyptians to keep quiet in the meantime.

"We believe it essential the parties put behind them the public exchanges of recent days and try to recapture the spirit of a common search for peace," he said.

Sadat told his parliament Saturday that Israel sabotaged the Jerusalem talks, and Prime Minister Menahem Begin in a statement after his cabinet met Sunday said the Egyptian president must soften his public statements before negotiations can resume.

Begin also accused Egypt of a "campaign of vilification" against Israel. Apparently he was referring to his being called "arrogant" by Sadat and "Shylock" by the semi-official Egyptian newspaper Al Ahran.

The statement said the cabinet would review its decision on the Cairo conference "in the near future." The Defense Ministry said there were no plans to recall lower-level members of Weizman's delegation who remained in Cairo after the last meeting of the defense ministers two weeks ago.

8 UF agencies get bigger bite

The Pampa United Fund board of directors Tuesday approved additional aid of $15,000 to eight of the twelve United Fund agencies in the Pampa area.

Receiving the money will be the Genesis House, the Gray County chapter of American Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Milk Fund, Community Day Care Center, Salvation Army, Boy Scouts of America and High Plains Epilepsy Association.

The United Fund campaign generated contributions and pledges of $175,867 for 1978, $26,000 more than the goal.

Recipient agencies will use the money for non-budget items, campaign chairman David Fatheree said.

New board officers for 1978 are LeWayne Hogan, chairman of the board; David Fatheree, president; Dwain Walker, vice-president, and Jim Olsen, treasurer.

Deputies take man in custody

A Gray County man was taken into protective custody by sheriff's deputies early Sunday morning after being found walking around the top of the Lefors water tower.

Doug Davis, Gray County deputy sheriff, said H.D. LaRue, 29, was found on the water tower carrying a flashlight at 1:30 a.m. Sunday by Davis and deputy Ken Keith.

Davis said LaRue is a resident of the Cabot-Kingmill Plant, a housing district.

Names in the news

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — South African editors Percy Qoboza and Donald Woods have been awarded the "Golden Pen of Freedom" award from the executive committee of the International Federation of Newspaper Publishers.

The editor of the Daily Dispatch of East London, Woods was placed on restrictive banning orders last October for criticizing South Africa's white-minority government. He fled the country on New Year's Eve with his family.

Qoboza, who edited the black newspaper The World, has been in jail since the October security crackdown.

Alf Christensen, the federation's Danish vice president, said Sunday that Woods would receive the citation next May at the federation's annual meeting in The Hague, Netherlands. The executive committee said it wanted to "pay tribute to the remarkable courage these two journalists have shown in their long struggle for the freedom of expression in their country — a struggle which was brutally put to an end on Oct. 19, 1977."

McRae is contesting the authority of Camden attorney Wayne Bryant, appointed by the court to oversee Wilson's affairs and his hospital care.

BERKELE TO THEALIF (AP) — Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, says Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin have accepted personal responsibility for seeking peace in the Middle East.

"It is not the case of an old man on his death bed sending out young men to do the job," Young said. "Instead of sending 100,000 young Egyptians to their deaths, Sadat and Begin have taken on the task of peace themselves."

Despite the recent breakdown in the Egyptian-Israeli talks, Young discussed them optimistically at a testimonial dinner Saturday night for Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif. Young termed the discussions a "move away from traditional politics."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant says she is forming a watchdog committee to identify television programs that feature sex and violence and depict homosexuality as an alternative lifestyle.

She announced the campaign Sunday at the National Religious Broadcasters Association convention. Outside the convention hotel, hundreds of homosexuals marched in a candlelight vigil and demanded that Miss Bryant leave town.

Miss Bryant, whose anti-gay campaign resulted in repeal of a homosexual rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla., told a news conference: "For too long, the family-loving, grass roots American public has sat back and watched ultra-liberal and militant radical groups cast fear into the hearts of our communications industries."

By the time Miss Bryant was preparing to entertain the broadcasters with hymnals, the gays outside were shouting, "Hey, hey, go home; Anita Bryant's gotta go."

Miss Bryant, singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" inside, would say only that she loved homosexuals and that all she was trying to do was teach them the error of their ways.

Alleged scissor slayer in 'guarded condition'

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — A Marine shot by a military policeman after allegedly killing two patients with scissors and wounding a security guard was listed in guarded condition today, authorities said.

Lance Cpl. Armando Vasquez, 20, of El Paso, Texas, had been listed in stable condition Sunday after being shot twice, but his condition apparently declined early today.

Vasquez will not be charged until he recovers from his injuries, said Cpl. Joe Pestell, a base spokesman. Vasquez had been admitted to the Naval Regional Medical Center after a traffic accident Friday in which one Marine was killed and seven others were injured.

Vasquez, the driver of a three-ton truck that tumbled down a 10-foot drainage ditch, may have been upset over the fatal accident, which killed Pvt. Henry Martinez, 21, of Los Angeles, said another base spokesman, Lt. Charles Owen.

Owen said Vasquez became unruly at the hospital and allegedly charged with scissors a security guard who tried to subdue him with tear gas. The guard — Navy Hospitalman

Second Class Ivan Blake, 35, of Chattanooga, Tenn. — was reported in satisfactory condition with stab wounds in the back, the face, both arms, and a leg.

Vasquez then allegedly attacked two patients — retired Chief Warrant Officer John Connolly, 63, and Janet Merriman, 62, widow of a retired soldier, authorities said. The two Oceanside, Calif., residents died from multiple wounds.

It was the second incident this month at Camp Pendleton. Officials said Sgt. Earl Holley, 24, was taken into custody by military police Jan. 3 after a shooting and knife incident that left two non-commissioned officers dead and four others wounded.

A military hearing, similar to a grand jury investigation, was to resume today in the Holley case. He has been charged with two counts of murder and four counts of attempted murder.

A military policeman called by hospital personnel confronted Vasquez in a vacant room and shot him from a distance of about 20 feet with a .45-caliber automatic, Owen said.

NE recovers from snow

By The Associated Press
Sunny skies over most of the snowstorm-battered Northeast gave many a chance to dig out from under tons of packed snow and ice today.

Light snow continued to fall in some areas Sunday, but the National Weather Service predicted little precipitation today. Forecasters said sunny skies would continue throughout the area, but some flurries or rain might be in store Tuesday or Wednesday.

Most National Guard units called out to help with snow removal and emergency services after last week's storm were sent home Sunday.

Schools were closed in parts of Massachusetts and Kentucky as clean-up efforts continued, and some Virginia residents still were without power. But most areas concentrated on clearing streets and highways and disposing of tons of snow along curbs and roadsides.

In New Hampshire, bright sunshine melted up to 2 feet of snow from rooftops, which froze into sparkling 30-foot-long icicles as it dripped to the ground. Many residents brought out skis, snow shoes and snowmobiles while others grabbed brooms and shovels to begin clearing driveways and sidewalks. Most roadways were clear.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis told state employees in Boston to stay home today unless their jobs are essential, and the school department ordered public schools in Boston and 20 suburban communities closed for the day.

In New York City, Mayor Edward Koch said he would have to ask the Board of Estimate for a new snow-removal appropriation to continue clearing city streets after Friday's 13.6-inch snowfall. The city Department of Sanitation urged commuters and residents to leave their cars at home and use public transportation.

Enterprising shovelers, generally youngsters, freelanced around the city — $8 in Queens for a driveway or sidewalk in front of a residence, up to $15 for a sidewalk in suburban New Jersey.

Crime took something of a holiday in New York, with police reporting almost no serious crimes in the city since the snow began falling.

New Jersey roadways were clear Sunday but much of the state remained sealed up in a 14-inch blanket of frozen snow. At least 12 people died in weather-related accidents during the weekend, including one man killed when a snow-covered patio roof collapsed.

Snowplows, snowblowers, snow shovels and tow trucks worked overtime as municipal workers opened streets and residents cleared vehicles and

Kunkel to speak to Desk and Derrick Club

Melvin C. Kunkel will be guest speaker at the Desk and Derrick Club meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Pampa Club in the Coronado Inn. Two of three runways at Newark International Airport remained closed Sunday, but a spokesman said no flights were delayed.

"As the sun works on it, we hope to break up some of the ice on the other runways," the spokesman said. "We're in good shape."

Rhode Island Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy called off a state of emergency and deactivated 1,000 National Guardsmen called out last week to help cities and towns dig out from under more than 18 inches of snow.

National Guard officials said sunny weather Sunday helped clean-up efforts, although it was expected to take several more days to clear snow and ice-covered roadways.

Three people died in weekend weather-related accidents in Rhode Island, two while shoveling snow and one, a 25-year veteran letter carrier, while delivering mail.

A snow emergency remained in effect today in Maryland's two westernmost counties, requiring motorists to use snow tires or chains. State officials said most major roads were passable. Cumberland reported 21 inches of snow still on the ground and Hagerstown still had a 24-inch blanket.

who suffered outages during last week's storm, but a Virginia Electric & Power Co. spokesman said 8,000 people in southside Virginia still were without power. Spokesmen for area power companies said nearly 100,000 homes, schools and businesses were without power during one period.

Gov. Julian Carroll deactivated all but a handful of National Guardsmen as the sun broke through clouds and helped melt huge mounds of ice and snow that covered most of Kentucky last week. Light snow fell in some southeastern counties.

On Thursday 353 Guardsmen were called out, and Carroll said all but 14 were being sent home today.

Advice

Dear Abby
By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A group of us men were lunching together at our club when a man (I'll call him Mr. Duck Hunter) said, "I've had a fantastic season and have some ducks put away for all of you."

Another man (I'll call Mr. Big Shot) spoke up and said, "My wife is an expert at preparing wild duck, so why not send all the ducks to my house and she'll prepare a duck dinner for all of us?" Everyone agreed it would be great.

Months passed and no duck dinner. Finally, Mr. Duck Hunter asked me if I'd ever been invited to Mr. Big Shot's for that duck dinner. I told him I hadn't. Then he said he had sent 12 ducks to Mr. Big Shot's house as promised, and that's the last he heard of them.

My question: Shouldn't someone ask Mr. Big Shot what happened to the ducks? And if so, who should ask?
NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Yes. Mr. Duck Hunter should ask him. Either the idea of the duck dinner was just ducky with everybody except Mr. Big Shot's wife, or the birds ended up in the craws of Mr. Big Shot and all the Little Shots.

In any case, let this be a lesson to you. A bird in the hand is worth two in somebody else's freezer, so next time someone offers you a gift, don't let a go-between fowl you up.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Lori, is not quite 16, but most of her classmates are 17, and some are 18. She has been invited to a boy-girl party next Saturday night at the home of a classmate (boy) whose parents are divorced.

When we asked Lori who was going to chaperone this party, she said she wasn't sure, but it would be "well chaperoned." Abby, this boy lives with his father, who has the reputation for being quite a "swinger," and somehow we can't see this father staying home on a Saturday night and properly chaperoning the party.

When we told Lori that either she would have to call and find out definitely who was chaperoning that party or she couldn't go, she became furious and said we didn't trust her. We do trust her, but do you think we're wrong in our demands?
CONCERNED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: No! Stick with your guns. There should be more parents like you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 24 and very much in love with a 21-year-old woman. Last week I asked her to marry me. Then she said she thought I should know that she had been to bed with four men whom she identified. (Two are in our social circle.)

I appreciate her honesty, but I don't know whether I can ever forgive her. Every time I look at her now I think of those other men.

I'm not worried about trusting her, because she says she loves me and has turned off all thoughts of other men, and I know she's sincere. But I am not sure I can ever be happy with her knowing what I know.

I have never been intimate with a girl. Should I go ahead and marry her and try my best to quit holding her past against her?
OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Don't marry her until you no longer hold her past against her. A person's past experiences (good and bad) make them what they are, so if you "love" her, accept her, past and all, without being judgmental.

(P.S. Be honest with her about your feelings. She may not want to marry YOU, knowing how YOU feel.)

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 39 years old, have a wife and three children, and I am in good health as far as I know. I am a settled person, and I do not drink or smoke. My problem is depression.

My wife and I have been married for 19 years, and she has been diagnosed as "chronic undifferentiated schizophrenia." She has spent more than a year in the last five years confined for treatment. Coping with the situation has always been difficult and particularly hard these last years. I have tried in vain to condition myself and not let it affect me, but I have finally decided there simply is no way to live with the problems it causes in any peace.

During the last two or three years I have experienced what I feel is rather serious depression — in that I have actually despaired of life several times. I can't remember when I've really enjoyed anything and several people I've talked to about the matter, clergyman, physician and otherwise have listened patiently but don't really seem to understand. Life has been just a long series of dead end streets while constantly trying to adjust.

I feel I have reached the danger point with respect to my nerves and the depression. I would be very grateful for any advice you might offer.

DEAR READER — You need professional help. Try to get some help from a psychiatrist. You feel that you are trapped in a situation that is unpleasant and you do not see a way out of it or when it will change for the better. In such a situation, it is not surprising that you would have a depressive reaction.

Your "actually despairing of life" and assessment of your situation suggest that you need more than just a friend. You need someone to assess whether or not you may be dangerous to yourself. A trained psychiatrist can give you some medicines that have greatly improved the outlook for severe depressive reactions.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-10, Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life, to give you a better picture of depression and how it works. Everyone has mood changes and many have depressive reactions when life doesn't seem very rewarding. Sometimes a person can gradually work out of these, but others require professional help. Others who want to know more about life's ups and downs and what they mean can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

With your wife's history, you should know how to get in touch with a psychiatrist. If not, your family doctor or even your minister should be able to help you locate one you can see. Don't fail to do this; it could make you feel a lot better.

As Thoreau once said, most men "lead lives of quiet desperation." Some lives seem to have more desperation in them than others, and it is not always quiet because it does take its toll.

Meanwhile, if you do not have a job that keeps you physically active, try to improve your physical fitness and exercise regularly. Stay involved and in touch with people. I would think it would be hard not to be involved with three children, apparently still youngsters who really need their dad in the home, with the problems you have faced. Being needed is very important to mental health. I do not want you to think, though, that you can manage this on your own. It is an illness like any illness, and good professional help can save you from chronic depression at a latter date and may be able to make you far more comfortable very soon.

From Paris palace to Broadway stage

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK—(NEA)—If you've got anything sharp-edged around, don't let Barbara De Portago near it. She'll round off the edges and paint it lavender.

Rounded shapes and lavender are favorite things of the 5-foot-9 blonde beauty with the nervous laugh and the lavender apartment in Greenwich Village.

Well, she has a right to like lavender. And she has a right to be nervous.

True, she grew up in a wing of the 3,000 room palace at Versailles (which her beloved stepfather, Gerald van der Kemp, oversees as curator) with her brother and sister, five servants, lots of hard-edged furniture and her mother who, she says, "was very organized — she changed husbands twice and we never noticed."

And she went to balls at the Rothschilds' and plays on Saturdays with papa (who single-handedly persuaded the Nazis not to burn down Versailles).

But that doesn't mean she's stepping into her first Broadway job as a full-fledged costume and set designer without a second thought.

"Opening night I'll be in tears," she laughs, "but 'til then I reserve my anxieties for my nails."

Opening night should come in March, '78, and all things being equal, it should see Audrey Hepburn and Christopher Plummer tied for billing in a period musical called "Riviera Rendezvous." For Barbara De Portago, American-born but BARBARA DE PORTAGO and her family ready for a Rothschild's ball in Paris. The costume and set designer, in white, at left, is wearing a gown of her own creation.

Mexico and Paris-raised, her credit will mean the end of a period of apprenticeship which began a few years ago when she married Anthony, the Marquis De Portago, a childhood friend from family Christmas parties at St. Moritz.

"I was 19 and Anthony was 18 when we eloped. We went to London because Anthony was going to be an actor and the theater was there. I always wanted to design and have my own life and after I spent the first six months buying everything I could, I became bored to tears."

So she mentioned to a friend that it sure would be nice to design things like sets and costumes and the next thing she knew, "My friend introduced me to this talented English designer, Tim Goodwin. He very kindly interviewed me in my own home. I'm sure I was nervous and tripped all over myself, but I said I wanted to learn to be a set and costume designer — the two go together in London — and that I would fetch coffee, anything at all if he would take me as an apprentice."

Goodwin did because he simply loved the way she'd done her apartment in fuchsia, royal blue and orange, and of course he didn't have to pay her anything. So she began working all hours of the day and night until husband Anthony, who was not too delighted with the situation, changed it.

"Without finishing his three years at one of the best acting schools in London, Anthony decided he was ready for the American stage," she says. "So we arrived in New York in September '74 and I took this apartment because it's near the Lester Polakof School of Theatrical Design where I studied drafting and scene painting."

Well, then she went to Paris and met an old teacher who took her on to help design "Sleeping Beauty" for the Paris Opera. Then to England and more work with Tim Goodwin and little by little, here and there, globe-trotting, accumulating assistant credits, she began establishing herself. But her professional assets, she admits, weren't always the initial reason she got work.

"Okay," she says, "some people took me because I was good-looking and because I had contacts. But if I didn't deliver, that would be something else. I do deliver and I've learned to believe in myself because I'm recommended by these people I've kept in touch with all over the world."

The fact is that under the Marquesa title and the fancy-schmangy childhood among the filled furniture and a number of convent schools, Ms. De Portago experienced her share of distress and loneliness which often lead to question and doubt.

"I never thought I could draw all these years. I would rant and rave and throw things, but I want to be Michelangelo," she jokes. "I believe if you have a high goal at least you'll achieve 10 percent of it. Yes, there are many retiring people who paint for their own pleasure. I'm being very sinful — I want to let everyone know that I can do it, too."

"Riviera Rendezvous" will give her a chance to let them know she can deliver 17 costumes for 10 characters on a budget of $120,000, and one main set for $250,000.

And she's confident — almost — that it will all work. "Look at these bustles for the show!" she laughs, those dear, round plump shapes. Still, if it doesn't come off, there's plenty of time to recoup. The Marquesa De Portago who has lived here and there and done this and that, who has sprinkled her lavender apartment with round lamps and round chairs and naughty Aubrey Beardsley prints, and who still laughs nervously when she speaks, is only 24 years old. There's time enough to do it all over again — and again and again.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK
Maybe it's because I write for a living, but letter writing has never been a big deal. I just blurt out what's on my mind and don't think about it.

Obviously that is not the case for many letter writers because a new anthology has just come out for school administrators listing over 175 form letters, or as Ed McMahon would say, "all the letters you're ever going to write ... a complete volume covering EVERY single situation in a single book."

From first glance, it would seem that the blurb is right: there's a form letter covering early rejection of a job candidate, rejection after consideration, sympathy letter, letter to a retiree, to teachers on snowball regulations, explaining Open House day, suggested tutoring for a child, college board scores, mid-year warning of possibility of non-graduation, to parents when cafeteria prices must be raised. Unfortunately, the handbook does not cover EVERY situation.

There are no form letters to cover the following areas: Policy statements on smoking the lawn.

Intentions of the school if student continues to rip off radios, antennas, and tires of faculty cars.

Options to be exercised by the school in the event a parent refuses to assist on field trips.

Obscene letter to teacher who requested day off following a holiday to go to Aspen with her husband.

Letter requesting aims and goals of student found with mimeograph stains on hands during exam week.

Letter of introduction to a college in Guam that you can buy your son's way into.

Congratulatory letter to a kid who passes a polygraph test — in connection with a school theft.

Final notice of a locker being condemned.

Wins Grand Slam title

Borg gains revenge over Connors

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The $250,000 Grand Slam of Tennis doesn't have the tradition of Wimbledon or Forest Hills, but it does its bit to answer the question of who is the world's best male tennis player. For the moment, it appears to be Bjorn Borg.

The stoic Swede turned aggressive Sunday and whipped Jimmy Connors 7-6, 3-6, 6-1 on clay in a three-hour match that left 8,000 spectators and a national television audience applauding the numerous clean winners and crisp rallies.

"It's just the best tennis you'll ever see, win or lose," is the way Connors modestly assessed the clash.

Borg collected $125,000 for two days' work in the four-man event. Connors earned $60,000.

Brian Gottfried won $40,000 by beating Vitas Gerulaitis 6-3, 6-3 in the consolation round earlier Sunday. Gerulaitis pocketed $25,000.

Borg credited a new game plan for his victory in the fast-paced final.

"Before the match, I said to myself, 'I'm going to play a little bit different,'" he said. "I said I was going to hit the ball hard and make him run after the ball.

"Before I have been pushing the ball more and slicing more. I kept him back and I kept him on the baseline. That's very important against Jimmy. This is probably the way I should always play against him."

But Connors disagreed, blaming the loss on his own aggressiveness.

"He wasn't forcing me at all. All he was doing was playing back and hitting a lot of topspins," he said. "I did most anything I wanted to, but I just missed the ball a few inches a couple of times.

"I'm not perfect — pretty close, but not perfect."

Connors started strong, running up a 3-1 lead in the first set. He broke Borg's serve to take a 5-3 advantage, but Borg broke back and saved two match points on his own serve to even the set 5-5.

The two players both held service to force a 12-point tie-

Irish nose out

By KEN RAPPOPORT

When the Notre Dame basketball team opened play against UCLA, two of the Irish's best players were on the bench.

Digger Phelps wasn't playing with a handicap — he thought it would be better that way.

"I felt they had the experience to observe what was going on and then come in to help us adjust," said the Notre Dame coach.

The move proved a worthy strategy. Don Williams helped the Irish "adjust" and Bruce Flowers helped them win, contributing key points and rebounds at the end for a 75-73 decision Sunday.

"I talked to Williams early this week and explained why he wasn't starting," said Phelps, whose strategy also included starting freshman Orlando Woolridge instead of Flowers.

Williams, a senior who missed one game with a sprained ankle and saw limited action in the Irish's last two contests, said: "Last year they (UCLA) came in here and we lost. I felt confident and thought the coach's idea would work. I sat down, observed and corrected some things we weren't doing well."

"I've learned more the last three games on the bench and in the long run it will pay off."

UCLA, 75-73

said Williams, the team's leading scorer who had 19 points in Sunday's nationally-televised game.

Flowers was just as significant a factor for Notre Dame in the late going. He converted three foul shots and grabbed a key rebound in the last 55 seconds to preserve Notre Dame's second victory of the year over the Bruins.

In other games Sunday involving ranked teams, Florida State upset No. 9 Louisville 70-66 and the touring Russian Nationals beat No. 12 Providence 78-73.

Alexandr Sainikov scored 18 points to lead the Russian Nationals past Providence. The Soviets now are 3-1 on a five-game tour.

In Saturday's action, top-ranked Kentucky beat Mississippi State 75-65; No. 2 Marquette trimmed Washington 71-63; Illinois State upset No. 4 Indiana State 81-76; No. 5 North Carolina outscored Maryland 85-71; No. 6 Arkansas defeated TCU 43-35; No. 8 Kansas edged Kansas State 56-52, and No. 10 Michigan State whipped Iowa 68-58.

King streak snapped

HOUSTON (AP) — There were a couple of strings attached to the singles finals in the $100,000 Women's Pro Tennis Tournament between top-seeded Martina Navratilova and former reigning queen of women's tennis Billie Jean King.

Now there is only one. Navratilova pulled off a stunning rally to beat the six-time Wimbledon champion King, 1-6, 6-2, Sunday and secure her third straight singles title in the Houston stop on the Virginia Slims tour.

But the former Czechoslovakian star now living in Dallas snapped King's string of four consecutive career victories to capture the $20,000 first prize.

"I wasn't even thinking about this being the final, I was just thinking about beating Billie Jean," said Navratilova, who now has won two of the three Slims tournaments this year.

In the first set however, King played as if she was had fully recovered from her third knee operation and Navratilova appeared prepared to lose for the fifth straight time.

Vets still find Pro Bowl exciting

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Ken Houston and Tom Mack each have a decade of All-Pro honors behind them. But they and other veterans of the Pro Bowl are as thrilled to be playing tonight's game as are the All-Star "rookies."

"Maybe some of the nervousness of playing in this kind of company wears away after a while, but the thrill never does," said Houston, a safety for the Washington Redskins and, like Mack, a 10-time All-Pro.

"The thing is, this is the game where the best plays, and you always want to gauge yourself, to see how you're doing, and you always want to do it against the best," Houston said. "If you can have a real good game against these guys, you know you've achieved something."

Mack, a guard with the Los Angeles Rams, recalled: "When I played in my first Pro Bowl, I was in awe of a lot of the other players. I mean, these were the stars, superstars, players I'd looked up to and sometimes only read about or heard about."

And how, Mack was asked, did he feel being at the other end, looked up to by newcomers to the Pro Bowl? "Awh, I don't think that's really the case," he replied. "I don't think I'm really in the superstar category. But I'll tell you this: it's a real honor to know that I've got more pro experience than anyone else playing here and that I'm still being picked, especially because you get picked by your peers. If the players and coaches think I'm that good, that's got a real special meaning to me."

Nobody on the American Conference roster comes close to the 10-year All-Pro status of Mack and Houston, each wearing National Conference uniforms. Oakland guard Gene Upshaw and Miami quarterback Bob Griese have each been selected to the elite group seven times.

"I still enjoy coming here every bit as much as I did when I first started," said Upshaw. "For one thing, it's one of the few times so many of us can get together, except maybe for an occasional golf tournament or something."

Arkansas, Texas on road

By GREG THOMPSON
AP Sports Writer

The sixth-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks, one of the nation's hottest-shooting teams, get their first look tonight at Baylor's Vinnie Johnson, the Southwest Conference's leading scorer and no slouch himself when it comes to shooting a basketball.

Johnson, a 6-3 transfer from McLennan County Community College, pumped in 29 points Saturday night in Dallas to spark Baylor to a 75-73 victory over Southern Methodist.

The Hogs stumbled through one of their worst shooting performances of the season Saturday night in edging pesky Texas Christian 43-35 and travel to Waco tonight to meet Baylor.

"I don't think anyone is going to stop him one-on-one," Baylor Coach Jim Haller says of Johnson, a Brooklyn, N.Y., native who is averaging 23.8 points per game and hitting more than 50 percent of his shots.

"Vinnie Johnson just plays. It's not my coaching," he added. "A coach has to have a mighty big ego to say he coaches him. He does things you can't possibly coach and I haven't put the reins on him offensively."

The Hogs had averaged 56 percent from the field — hitting 58.5 percent in their lone loss to Texas — before converting a mere 37 percent in the first half against the lowly Horned Frogs.

"Regardless of what you tell players, they read the newspapers and compare scores. We were flat," Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton said after the win over TCU, which lost 90-41 to Texas earlier this year and has dropped 22 consecutive SWC games.

In Saturday's other SWC action, the Red Raiders used a 21-point performance by Mike Russell to lash Texas A&M 71-58 and Houston's Charles Thompson hit 18 points to pace the Cougars over crostown rival Rice 96-74.

Floyd, Watson even after three at Peeble

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Ray Floyd has an opportunity to acquire an item that has eluded him for 16 long years on the pro golf tour — a victory in California.

"I've never won out here, and we play a awful lot of golf in California," Floyd said after he and Tom Watson had emerged from a mad scramble over the last few holes in a tie for the lead Sunday after three rounds of the rain-delayed $225,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

"I've come close. I lost a playoff to Jack Nicklaus here. I lost a playoff to Arnold Palmer in the Bob Hope (Desert Classic). And I lost a playoff to J.C. Snead in San Diego. But I've never won in California."

And, Floyd said, a victory in California "is imperative if a player is looking for an outstanding season. By that I mean a season as leading money winner or something like that. You check the record, you'll see the man that comes out of California as the leading money-winner often finishes the season as leading money-winner."

Last year that man was Tom Watson. And, going into Monday's final round — the entire tournament schedule was set back one day when Thursday's play was rained out.
