Girl gets 99 years for stabbing mother

DALLAS (AP) - "We felt it was the Christian thing to do." a juror said after the jury set 99 years in prison as punishment for a 16-year-old girl convicted of stabbing her mother to death

Juror Jacqueline Bluhm made the remark Tuesday after the jury decided the punishment for Lucinda Stout, accused of murder in the June 11, 1977, stabbing death of her mother. Sharon Stout

Miss Stout had been accused of stabbing her mother to death, shooting her father twice in the back and refusing to call an ambulance for her dving mother

Harry Stout, the girl's father and a key prosecution witness, was not in court when the sentence was announced A friend said he had left on a trip to Colorado earlier in the week. Stout pressed authorities to have his daughter tried as an adult, saying he wanted to see her sentenced to prison

The girl, who has continued her high school education in the Dallas County Jail with aid of tutors from Thomas Jefferson High School while awaiting trial, testified that it was her father who stabbed her mother to death. She said she shot her father after she saw him carrying a bloody knife.

Testimony at the trial included defense testimony accusing the father of being involved in an affair with another woman at about the same time as the slaving.

Under the 99-year sentence, Miss Stout would be eligible for parole in 20 years, but with "good time" credit earned if she serves as a prison trusty, she could be eligible for parole in 11 years.

Miss Stout, who earlier displayed no emotion when the jury convicted her. slumped into the arms of defense lawyer Steve Amis, who placed his arms about her shoulders when the punishment was read.

Formal sentencing by District Court Judge John Mead will be held later

William A. Karl. grandfather of the defendant and father of the victim. denounced the trial and sentence as "the biggest farce I've ever seen." Other relatives had said they did not believe Miss Stout got a fair trial in Dallas because of extensive news coverage of the trial.

The jurors in the trial had been kept isolated at a Dallas motel.

Most of the jurors declined to comment on the trial and the sentence although under Texas law they are not bound to remain silent about the proceedings once the trial is complete. Judge Mead. however, reminded them that although they were free to say whatever they wished, he warned them "Remember, what you don't say will never come back to haunt you.'

Juror Bluhm, 50, however, said "It was such an emotional thing that we don't feel like we can talk about. We felt it (the 99year sentence) was the Christian thing to

Local land auctioned

One hundred and sixty acres sold for $54,500 at a cold and windy sheriff's auction at the Gray County Courthouse Tuesday in what sheriff and auctioneer Rufe Jordan called a 'good sale.

The land, about three miles north of Laketon, commonly known as the F.J. Prcesang land, was sold to Doyle Smith, Grav county rancher, subject to the prior lien of about $13,395 by the Federal Land Bank of Houston.

The sale was ordered by the 223rd District Court on a judgment rendered in 31st District Court against F.J. Prcesang et al and in favor of Canadian Production Credit

About 30 farmers braved the wind, cold and a postponement from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. to gather outside the east door of the courthouse for the sale, with Jordan as auctioneer. Bidding rose from $35.500 to the sale price in about half an hour.

From failures to promises

With past records of success we can now seek financing for greater developments." That could be the normal statement of management for a private sector industry

With a past record of failure we will now seek financing from Congress for a bigger, more expansive program." That is the statement of a government agency which has, as its only claim to fame, a multitude of failures.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has recently announced that it hopes to rebuild its disastrous program for creating new communities (or should we say communes) with a "new town - in - town" concept. They claim the project is to aid development in inner cities.

New Communities Development Corp. Director William White said. "The idea is to develop the land already cleared by urban renewal.

Remember urban renewal? For the most part it turned out to be urban removal winding up with 'asphalt acres. The original new towns approach was an extremely expensive attempt to build 13 socially balanced new cities from scratch as an antidote to urban sprawl. Seven of them went broke. The six others are being juggled under the new concept in an attempt to keep them from dropping off the edge to bankruptcy. American history could have revealed that prerevolution attempts to establish socialistic communities failed and ended in misery for thousands of our ancestors. But if disastrous attempts in the immediate past do not dissuade past is probably futile. Right now more than 40 project proposals are already under HUD review. Currently there is a moratorium on funding for such new communities, so approval must be sought from White said, "The financing mechanism was suicidal under the original new communities approach. It never worked. Now we want to work in the inner cities.

Success is the road to financing in the private sector, but failure seems the only collateral ne eded to force money from taxpayers' pockets.

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris said. indecisiveness and lack of direction allowed these towns to stagnate at a cost of thousands, if not millions, of dollars.

If she is to direct another fantasy project of the magnitude suggested, should she not know whether the past costs were thousands or millions? There is a bit of a difference, even if it is not recognized in the bureaucracy

The present moratorium holding up these grandiose schemes of HUD was established in 1975 when the new communities program became a public embarrassment. Congress is still spooked and it may take a lot of convincing to get once - burned legislators to go along.

American hospitality

This season looks to have been about usual for the number of foreign dignitaries and notables who've appeared on our shores to be honored and entertained. Not long ago various Americans had their opportunity to play host to the Empress of Iran. Just the other day we waved goodbye to Boris Ponomarey, sent to us as an official visitor from the Soviet Union. Mr. Ponomarev. you may recall, now has the job of directing the Communist parties of Europe: a few years agohe was associated with some particularly nasty purges when he was a member of Stalin's Comintern. But the State Department is still having trouble finding a place amidst all the glitter for Tibet's Dalai

Back in October, the Dalai Lama's representative asked the State Department whether the exiled Tibetan ruler and Buddhist religious leader would be welcome to visit this country. The State Department worried that any such sign of our hospitality would antagonize the Chinese, who now occupy Tibet. The Department took some time before answering. Finally they called to tell the Tibetans that His Holiness's visit "would be inconvenient at this time. Later statements by the Department gave some hope that this wasn't a total and permanent rejection; so now the Tibetans are gearing up to begin

Meanwhile, though, this isn't the only kind of trouble that the Tibetan exiles have been getting from the U.S. government. It wasn't until 1949 that the Chinese really appeared in Tibet, and not until ten years later that they actually took over: vet Tibetans who have become U.S. citizens and want passports have to list "China" as their place of birth. This is a bit galling to people who are refugees from a Chinese occupation. The Canadian government has taken some note of the situation by letting their Tibetans claim Tibet as their place of birth if they were born before the coming of the Chinese. The U.S. seems to be able to find no such room for accommodation.

The Carter administration has in general made a good faith effort to build human rights concerns into U.S. foreigh policy. Recently, for example, the government corrected a rather serious omission by beginning to point out that there is butchery on a mammoth scale now going on in Cambodia. But the Tibetans are suffering some pretty serious violations of rights too, as the Chinese try to suppress Tibet's religion and culture. It wouldn't be amiss for us to take some humanitarian account of the situation, and it's hardly likely that the Chinese would use such actions of ours to disrupt the whole fabric of U.S. -

The great raid on pension funds

(Wall Street Journal)

Lots of loose money hes around in the nation's pension funds, and it takes a powerful doctrine of fiduciary responsibility to ensure that the dollars paid in now will be around 20 years hence to be returned as benefits.

In the private sector, the federal government has decided to help keep pension trustees solvent through the far reaching Employes Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA).

The severely underfunded Fire Department fund recently found that this year's outlays will exceed its investment income and that it would have to exhaust its last cash reserves to honor its agreement to help finance the city deficit.

There may be a certain rough justice in this plundering of the city pensions, since union pressures for high retirement benefits helped break the city's budget in the first place. State employes have also done well in pension baraining, but at least they haven't bankrupted their employer. Despite all this, it is rough indeed to jeopardize retirement benefits, and state workers can hardly be blamed if they don't feel they should run risks to keep New York City

Moreover, New York is only the most extreme and massive example of a situation which could arise in any financially troubled jurisdiction in the country. This ever - present danger of conflict of interest is bound to spur calls for placing state and local employe pensions under some ERISA style federal control. We have qualms about such a solution, since the original ERISA has imposed such high costs on private companies that it has discouraged formation of pension plans. A public sector version might expand pension burdens on government budgets beyond all bounds. Furthermore, such an extension of federal control over local government might do unintended damage to the federal system. Such control may not prove to be a bastion of fiduciary responsibility, after all, considering the way Congress and the Treasury have endorsed the present conduct of the New York City pension funds. Yet some corrective is needed for this emerging pattern of abuse. While this issue is of huge and enduring national moment, it comes to focus in New York's law, voiding fiduciary responsibilities and in the political challenge to Mr. Levitt. We hope that the courts, the voters and opinion leaders in the city and the financial community see their duty as clearly as Mr. Levitt sees his.

Senators fact oil tax hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The apparent end of a three-month deadlock over the natural gas pricing portion of President Carter's energy program has brought senators up against another, possibly tougher, stalemate - this time over his proposed crude oil tax.

The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Sen. Russell Long, D-La., broke the bad news Tuesday, saying that the crude oil tax cannot possibly pass the Senate.

House Democrats were caucusing today to consider breaking apart the president's fivesection energy bill and passing the less controversial parts.

Although House leaders have wanted to keep the energy bill intact, Long's statement adds impetus to the move by Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., and other congressmen to split up the gas compromise to top House negotiators today to see if it can win their support.

The proposal would mean higher gas bills to consumers than the Carter plan for continued price regulation, passed by the House, but less than under the original Senate-passed bill for deregulation in two years.

A majority of Senate conferees informally agreed Tuesday to support the compromise, which would lift price controls from newly found natural gas after Jan. 1, 1985.

It also would allow a steady rise in the regulated price between now and then, so that by 1985 the price ceiling would be roughly twice the present regulated top price of $1.48 per 1,000

Schools can force teachers to retire

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -School districts have the right to force teachers to retire before age 65, the Supreme Court ruled today. Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld a decision of the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals upholding a retirement policy set by the Monahans-Wickett-Pyote Independent School District. The district set a mandatory retirement age of 62, beginning with the 1974-75 school year. Lucille King, Addylene K. Lamb and Edna Snelson, all 63 at the time the policy took effect, were forced to retire and appealed to the courts.

They cited a 1963 state law prohibiting mandatory retirement below age 65 for most public employees.

But the court said a 1969 law gave each school district the right to set its own mandatory retirement age. It said that when a special law conflicts with a general one, and the special law came later, the special law controls the situation.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Is Mickey Rooney finally calling it quits after 50 years in show business?

Rooney says yes. His agent says no.

"I'm going to bring down the curtain," Rooney said Tuesday in an interview on NBC's "Tomorrow" show. "As soon as I finish a movie I'm working on now, I'm going to devote all my time to marketing a self-study acting course I've been working on for 15 years.

The Oscar-winning actor could not be reached later for elaboration, but his press agent, Dick Gutman, said it's nothing new for Rooney, 57, to announce plans to stop acting only to change his mind later.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) -Gerald Ford may run for president again in 1980. Then again he may be a golf pro by then.

Although the former president is becoming about as much a fixture on the pro tour these days as Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, his scores indicate he's in no danger of losing his amateur status.

Officials of the 1978 Greater Hartford Open golf tournament announced Tuesday that Ford will play in that tournament's pro-am event July 26.

Ford played in seven pro-am events on the 1977 Professional Golf Association tour.

He's already participated in several pro tournaments this year and will be in the Tournament Players Championship this week in Florida.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How can I tell my parents without hurting their feelings that they cannot come and spend the entire summer with us? (And I mean from May 1st until September 1st.)

The other day my father phoned from Florida to tell me that they were coming to spend the whole summer with me because the summers are miserable in Miami Beach!

Abby, I hope you won't think I'm a terrible daughter, but I just can't have them here for that long. One month would be the absolute limit. My mother is a chronic complainer, mostly about her aches and pains, and my father has nothing to do but sit around the house all day and wait for meals.

My husband has never complained when they have visited us before, because he knows they love seeing our children, but he feels the same as I do about having them here all summer. We don't have a guest room. Our children double up and we make room that way, but it's very inconvenient.

My father says the plane fare is too expensive to come for only one month.

Please tell me how to handle this. There is no way I can have them in our home for four months.

THEIR "TERRIBLE" DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Be honest. Tell them you can accommodate them for a month in your home, but no longer. If you can afford to put them up in a nearby motel, by all means do it; perhaps then they will feel that the trip would justify the plane fare.

And don't feel guilty. A third of a year is a sentence.

DEAR ABBY: Doctors read your column, too. Referring to a recent letter from a woman with an impotent husband who "ogles" all the other women: Let me say that some "impotent" men perform like champions in the company of a more understanding and sexually imaginative woman.

M.D. IN OREGON

DEAR M.D.: So what else is new? Such men, however, are not actually "impotent," they are merely unstimulated.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 16 I married a great guy to get away from home. We live on a large ranch with all the modern improvements. He treats me nice, gives me everything I want and he loves me, but it's not enough. I feel like I'm missing something and I don't know what. Maybe a child would help.

When we're in town, I'm always hoping other guys will notice me. Deep down I don't feel married. If I left him I wouldn't even be able to give him a good reason. I'm so confused. How can I get over thinking of other men? I'm 18, and my husband is 28. Do you think a child would help? RESTLESS IN TEXAS

DEAR RESTLESS: I recommend counseling. In the meantime, if your thoughts continue to turn toward other men, the best advice I can give you is to make sure you don't have a child until you're reasonably certain your marriage will last.

Problems? Tell them to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, write Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Water torture

By Karen Blaker, Ph.D. DEAR DR. BLAKER - I can't swim. I never learned as a child and now — at 40 — I have no desire to try.

But it bothers my husband. He tells me to be a good sport and take some lessons. He also thinks I would be safer - less likely to drown - if I knew how to swim. I can't argue with his reasoning - but then I never can because he is always so logical. Jokingly, I call him 'Mr. Right.

He is pressuring me to start lessons at the YWCA so I will be ready by summer. He's also reading about some new technique guarenteed to turn even the most reluctant nonswimmer into a champion. This has been going on for years. Why does he continue to torture me like this? DEAR READER - Why? Because you let him. If you do not want to learn to swim,

His arguments make little sense anyway. His demand for you to be a "good sport" is a not very subtle ploy to have you do something he thinks you should do. Recognize it for what it is.

The "swim your way to safety" argument is also based on questionable logic. Donald ("How to Cure Yourself of Positive Thinking") Smith points out that you are less likely to drown if you do not know how to swim.

Why? Because people who cannot swim do not go in the water.

Once you realize your husband's arguments hold little water, so to speak, you will not be so intimidated

You can then decide whether you may really want to learn to swim

Are you hoping that some day he will convince you to try? Otherwise, why haven't you put a stop to his "encouragement?"

. It is possible that, even though you have decided not to learn to swim, you enjoy the attention you get by refusing to try. If this is the case, relax. You have things well in hand.

Judging from your letter, however, it is more likely that you fear clearing up this situation once and for all.

Are you afraid of the repercussions if he learned the truth? Is he always right even about decisions directly concerning your life? Can one person know what is best for another? it may be too late for you to learn to swim, but it is definitely not too late to start thinking for yourself. Begin by outlining the differences between you and your husband. If you find you have everything in common, begin again, for you have probably been brainwashed (another not so subtle kind of social control which sometimes has involved water). Your relationship with our husband should have room enough for two.

Write to Dr. Blaker in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies, but questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Polly's Pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY - My husband is a school bus driver and he gets tired of sandwiches for lunch. Two or three times a week I use a three-sectioned plastic dish with a cover to hold a delightful plate lunch. Some of the foods I use are cottage cheese fruit salad, macaroni or potato salad, apple sauce, carrot and celery sticks, sliced roast or ham, pieces of cheese, olives and pickles. Any kind of finger sandwiches will fit in. My husband tells me that I should hear the "oohs and ahs" from the women drivers. Be sure your husband has access to a refrigerator before doing this. - JENNIE

School runs its own lunch program

By FRANK J. PRIAL 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW LEBANON, N.Y. -Jerry Blair has a dream. He dreams if a totally self sufficient public school, a school run by students and faculty members, free from the interference and pressures of government; a school that would impose no tax burden on the community and where children would play a central role in their own education by helping to pay for it. Blair - Gerald L. Blair - the 36-year-old principal of New of New Lebanon Central School, has made at least a part of that dream come true.

He came to this semi-rural community halfway between Pittsfield, Mass., and Albany, as principal of the combined junior and senior high school in 1970. The following year local taxpayers defeated a proposed school budget and the state put the minuscule school system the high school and one elementary school - on an austerity budget: no sports, no library books and, among other things, no lunch program. Without local financing for the lunch program there could be no federal subsidy, and as long as anyone could remember, the program had existed in part on the federal money. But Blair had another idea - perhaps there was no need for the subsidy.

"It took me a few months to work it out," he said the other day while snow fell outside his cramped little office. "I thought that if we could do it ourselves we would eliminate all the paperwork, all the hassle and all the interference that goes with outside assistance. At the same time we could give the kids a unique and rewarding experience

Blair and a home-economics teacher who has since moved away each put up $200 to buy soup, meat and crackers to start the experiment. Students were recruited to cook and serve, and prices were set slightly higher than they had been under the federally supported system.

"It was an instant success," Blair said. "We made a profit from the start and I had my $200 back in four weeks."

Seven years later, the program pays for all the food used, has bought modern cooking equipment for the school and pays the wages of two women who assist the students, one at the high school and one at the elementary school in West Lebanon, where the same daily meal is also served

Under the present program students pay for their meals, u: sually around 75 cents. "No one gests anything for nothing," Blair said. "I don't care if his father is a millionaire or dirt -p oor. Anyone who can't afford a m eal can work for it. But they have to work to get the meal, and the work comes first." Only one parent has ever complained. "A woman told me heer son was entitled to a free mieal," Blair said, "She told me she had her rights. I told her You may have all the rights in thie world, lady, but not under our program.' Her kid worked for his lunch.

One day recently the menu at th e New Lebanon Central School included two soups - minestone and chicken gumbo; hot meatball and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches; juice, cider, fruit cocktail, homemade chocolate pudding and apples. The receipts that day were $163.50, all of which went back into the fund for more supplies and wages for the two assistants.

"We use only the best materials," said Jacqueline Zaremba, who has worked with the program-since 1973. "If we make chocolate-chip cookies we make them from scratch.'

Since students run the program, the menu is based on what they like to eat. And it does not always include vegetables or other things that dietitians consider part of a balanced Educators who have heard about the New Lebanon experiment call regularly to inquire about it. "They are intrested." Blair said, "but they are so used to old ways, to being covered by the bureaucracy, they usually say. Well, it will that it makes them nervous. 'it would never work for us' is what

'What's good for Texas is good for nation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -"Texas," Sam Houston once said, "could exist without the United States, but the United States cannot, except at a very great hazard, exist without Texas:

"Amen, brother," chairman Mack Wallace of the railroad commission is wont to say.

Wallace and commissioners Jon Newton and John Poerner are shuttling from Austin to Washington preaching an oil and gas sermon that says "what's good for Texas is good for the nation.

Historically, Texas has produced 25 percent of the nation's energy and is now producing approximately 38 percent of the oil and gas consumed in this country

"Texas," says Wallace, "is bleeding itself white for the rest of the nation." But so far, the commission-

Credit union offerings Sylvia Porter

If you are among the one in six and point - of - sale terminals. Americans who belongs to a credit union you soon may be given the chance to earn higher interest on your savings. If you are not a member of a credit union, now is the time to investigate whether you qualify, for credit unions recently have been granted a wide range of new savings and lending powers that make them far more competitive with commercial banks and various types of savings institutions.

This country's 12,800 federally chartered CUs, for instance, now may offer their members four new types of savings programs, 30 - year home mortgage loans and revolving lines of credit. Many state chartered CUs have had these powers for some time.

The directors of each credit union will make the decisions on whether or not to offer the new savings accounts and loans. If you are a member or would - be member of a CU, find out which, if any, of the additional services will be available to you.

On top of the traditional savings or so - called share accounts (on which 55 per cent of federal CUs paid 6 per cent interest or more in 1976), recent savings possibilities include:

Share certificate accounts, akin to certificates of deposit available at banks. A CU offering this type of account may choose to pay any interest . rate up to 7% per cent over any term from 90 days to six years.

Notice accounts. These require the depositor to give 90 days written notice of intent to withdraw, but in some cases, this notice could be given at the time of deposit.

Minimum balance accounts, under which members would leave minimums of $500 (or less) on deposit throughout a dividend period to qualify for a special interest rate. Dividend periods usually range from three months to a year.

Split-rate accounts. These pay varying interest rates on different portions of a member's savings. For instance, your CU might pay 5 per cent on savings up to $500, 51/2 per cent on savings between $500 and $1,000, and 614 per cent on savings of more than $1,000.

In addition to these savings plans, federal and some state chartered CUs may, pending the outcome of a court battle, issue share drafts, similar to NOW (negotiable order of withdrawal) accounts currently being offered in some New England states. These drafts would allow members to write the equivalent of checks for purchases - without losing interest on the funds remaining in their accounts.

Bank trade associations are challenging in the courts the authority of CUs to permit share drafts and thus are trying to prevent CUs from offering this service

Obviously, the CUs hope this new collection of savings and lending powers will help them attract business away from banks and savings and loan associations. CUs consider their late entrance into the longer term mortgage lending area a "plus" because they do not have to carry the burden of old loans made when mortgage money was comparatively cheap. Thus, they should be able to make mortgage loans at more reasonable rates and without extensive (and to you, expensive) hidden closing costs and points.

Also, CUs are not subject to banking laws hindering commercial banks from establishing automated tellers deaf ears, and Wallace was interviewed recently about the Texas-federal split on energy.

Q: Is there a growing effort Washington to regulate Texas' oil and gas industry? A: Certainly. Q: Why?

A: It's very simple — Texas has paid the price to develop a strong intrastate gas market and the rest of the country has nowhere else to go on the short term to acquire gas.

Q: Does Texas have any friends on energy outside of its own congressional delegation? A: The (natural gas) deregulation issue was very close, but don't view the situation as Texas needing friends. I view the situation as far more serious. I think the country needs analytical leaders who can lay aside the short-term demagogic statements about

Journalism risky in Argentina

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - In the last four years, more than 35 journalists have been killed in Argentina, 30 have been arrested and scores more have left the country after receiving death threats.

Oscar Serrat, 43, an Argentine citizen who works for The Associated Press, was one of the lucky ones.

Men in civilian clothes picked him up as he left home for work last November. He was released 18 hours later after the U.S. State Department, the AP, other international news agencies and foreign newspapers, and a few other governments pressured the military regime to "find" him.

He was freed near where he had been abducted. He could not identify his captors, who had put a black hood over his

Most missing journalists, whose publications lack the clout of a worldwide agency, rate only a few lines, if anything, in the local press, and many are not heard from

Many of the kidnappings are presumed to be the work of government security forces. More than 700 persons died in political violence last year as the government stepped up its drive against leftists, and more than 2,000 people were reported missing

There is no formal censorship. But local editors are mindful of the fate of their colleagues and often let that affect what they print or ignore.

Railroad car detects flaws

A new sophisticated $85,000 ultrasonic detector car is at work on Santa Fe Railway's Plains Division near Pampa today. Santa Fe has invested more than $1 million to convert 12 standard Chevrolet Suburban C-20 carryalls into the ultrasonic rail detector cars at the Albuquerque shops. Internal flaws in steel rail aggravated by today's long heavy trains make track maintenance a top priority mission on any railroad. Testing steel for internal flaws with ultrasonics is nothing new. Railroads started using ultrasonics more than two decades ago and now all of the major lines use the method in some form. The rail test data is read by watching two standard B-scan oscilloscopes. Seventy - five per cent of the cost of the vehicle is the test equipment itself. This equipment can be ransferred to new carryalls when the old one wears out.

Alaska line boosts oil production

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) The trans-Alaska pipeline's Pump Station 8, blown up last summer in an accident, is pumping oil again, boosting U.S. crude production by 5 percent. Now the question is where the extra oil will go.

With the startup Tuesday of the rebuilt pump station, 41 miles south of Fairbanks, oil flow increased from 730,000 barrels daily to about 1.2 million. Daily U.S. oil production totals about 10.1 million bar-

Federal energy officials predicted that with the $7.7 billion pipeline producing more oil, there would be a West Coast surplus of at least 500,000 barrels daily. Several long-term solutions on how to handle the excess oil have been proposed, but for now it is likely to be shipped to eastern U.S. markets through the Panama Ca-

It may sound like science fiction but a report from the U.S. Geological Survey suggests that is just what happened - 200 million years ago.

Scientists have named the 40,000-square-mile slab of land 'Wrangellia' because much of the evidence for its existence and movement was found in Alaska's Wrangell Mountains. They say its trip north may have taken 100 million years.

'So far, we've identified pieces of ancient Wrangellia on Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands of Canada, as well as on Chichagof Island and the Wrangell Mountains of Alaska, and perhaps in Hells Canyon of Oregon, Washington and Idaho," said Dr. David Jones, senior author of one of two articles on Wrangellia printed in the Canadian Journal of Earth Sciences.

Jones said rocks from Wrangellia "form a distinct sequence or 'layer cake' of rocks that are quite different from the rocks they butt against. The sequence consists of a thick stack of lava flows, some in 'pillows' or mounds that apparently formed under water." he

The round Jack Nicklaus forgot

BY RED SMITH (c) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK - Jack Nicklaus's golf is better than his memory. When he came charging home in thee Inverrary Classic on the weekend, picking up four strokes on Grier Jones, three on Jerry Pate and Andy Bean and two on Hal Irwin with five birdies ont the last five holes., he was asked whether he had ever put on such a finish before.

'I can't imagine any other time," he said. "It was the most remarkable thing I've ever seen in my life," said Lee Trevino, comparing it with Reggie Jackson's three home runs in the last World Series game and Leon Spink's victory over Muhammad Ali. Well. it was remarkable but it wasn't unprecedented.

Fifteen tears ago, Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer represented the United States in the World Cup competition at Saint-Nom-la-Breteche near Versailles in France. If Jack has forgotten his performance there, perhaps he wanted to forget it. Maybe he deliberately put it out of his mind as too outrageously theatrical to bear remembering

The things he did on the very first hole were downright scandalous. The hole was a legitimate par 5 for club members but a trifle short for a pro with Jack's power, measuring somewhere between 450 and 500 yards. In his four rounds, Jack played it eagle, eagle, eagle, birdie, and that was just for openers.

Bretche may have been a trifle shorter than Inverrary's 7,127 yards, but this was no exhibition on a pitch - and - putt course, and the opposition was at least as distinguished as the field Nicklaus encountered last week. The World Cup, now 25 years old, is a movable feast that leaps from continent to continent, usually playing national capitals, matching twoman teams from practically every land where the game is known. Though it hasn't the prestige of the United States or British Open, it is probably the closest thing there is to a world championship.

In 1963 Saint-Nom-la-Breteche was a comparatively new course built on land that had been the royal farm when Louis XIV was top banana. The clubhouse, once the royal cowbarn, was a splendid building of ivy covered stone set in a terraced

The galleries had a touch of quality seldom associated with, say, Maple Moor in New York's Westchester County. Among those who followed the play were two former kings and one former vice president -Leopold of Belgium, the Duke of Windsor and Richard M. Nixon.

Before play started, Prince Michel de Bourbob - Parme, the club president, dispatched 10 dozen fresh eggs to a nearby convent. This, he explained, was an ancient custom in the Ile de France. Anyone planning an outdoor binge like a wedding or garden party sent eggs to the poor and this assured him of good weather. The standard fee was one dozen eggs but the Prince had laid it on to guarantee a week of sunshine.

Morning of the opening round found the Prince glowering through a clammy fog. "So," he said. "I am sending to the sisters to get back my eggs. Soggy turf made the course play long for little guys, but not for Nicklaus. His second shot on the opening hole was 20 feet from the pin, and he ran down the putt for his first eagle 3. After that he had five birdies and three bogies for a 67. Palmer's 69 gave the pair a tie for first place with Al Balding

Stan Leonard of Canada. Prince Michel changed his mind about reclaiming the eggs. but the weather didn't relent. Day by day the fog thickened, until the green hills and yellow bunkers were all but blotted out. Realizing that if a hitter like Nicklaus tried to fire a tee shot into that soup the ball would never be seen again, officials postponed the final round for 24

It didn't help much. Next day gray souffle garnished the fairways. The climate dripped sullenly from the trees. Windsor and Leopold showed up as they had each other for earlier round.

gallery to a minimum. Reluctantly, the committee decided to cut the final round to nine holes. At this point Nicklaus and Palmer were tied with Spain's Ramon Sota and Sebastian Miguel for the team trophy with Nicklaus and Gary Player all square in individual competition

Automobiles were driven out past the first green where they made a U-turn and parked with headlights on. From the tee, the lights were blurred but visible, giving the players a target. For the first time in four rounds, Nicklaus needed four shots to get down. Then he got serious.

With that birdie for a start, he played the next five holes as follows: 3-3-3-3-. When he walked toward the seventh tee, a spectator asked: "What are you going to do for an encore?"

"Try to finish," Jack said. On the first six holes he had taken 19 shots. On the last three

Jury is out on Finley

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Charles O. Finley how will baseball history record him? Great innovator or detriment to our national

A trio of Finley's most illustrious Oakland graduates, all valedictorians, sat around the New York Yankees' locker room and discussed the pros and cons of the sport's obvious "Get Rid of Charlie O" move-

"They're trying to kill him that's what they are trying to do," said Catfish Hunter. "I think it's a shame. He brought more to baseball than anybody I know in our time.'

Reggie "Candy bar" Jackson, sitting across the room, was quick to agree. "He changed the game as no one else has done," argued the 1977 World Series home run hero.

"I am not just talking about the designated hitter, bringing and instituting colorful uniforms. He revolutionized the actual techniques. He brought a new speed concept to the game. He changed the entire theory of relief pitching with Rollie Fingers, Paul Lindblad and Jim Todd. His emphasis on pinch hitters and base running brought a new offensive dimen-

A discordant note was sounded by Ken Holtzman. "Speaking to the Finley legacy," said the articulate pitcher with two no-hit games-to his record. "I would have to give the man more bad marks than good.

"True," he made notable contributions - night ball in the World Seies, the DH and shak- ing the establishment out of its conservative shell with those wild uniforms and moustaches.

"But I think Finley contributed more than anyone to the credibility gap now existing between owners and players.' Holtzman went on. "He had no respect for players, on and off the field. I think this had a snowball effect and created a chasm between players and management."

Hunter, Holtzman and Jack son all were members of the great Oakland A's teams that swept three straight World Series during 1972-1974. Jackson was the team leader and catalyst, just as he is with the Yankees. Holtzman won 59 games during that 3-year period, Hunter won 67.

It is no secret that the game's higher echelon - from the commissioner's office through the ranks of owners has been seeking to get the maverick Finley out of their hair.

Is baseball specializing? stealing records - he now has Olympic track prowess.

NEW YORK (AP) - Lou Brock, a base-stealing specialist, foresees the day that baseball will become strictly a sport of specialists - but no Olympic gold medalist is going to grab his record cheaply.

"It would take even the best Olympic sprinter five years to undergo the proper test," the St. Louis Cardinals' sleek outfielder said.

"Speed is only one minor facet of successful base-stealing. There are other important factors - the mechanical phase of it, weight shifting, acceleration, the element of surprise. I would like to see a guy like Bruce Jenner out there on base. It's a lot different than running down a track against the clock. Brock used Jenner as an example because his decathlon victory at Montreal in 1976 and his subsequent TV commercials for a favorite cereal have made

"I don't care whether he runs the 100 in 9.5 or 10 flat; it's still going to take him 3.4 seconds to get from first to second base (90 feet)," the 38-year-old outfielder insisted, "Whether he's watch. Brock, en route to St. Petersburg. Fla., to begin his 18th major league campaign, stopped off in New York Monday to make a presentation to baseball's Hall of Fame. He presented the red cleated shoes with which he slid into base last August, breaking Ty Cobb's 50-year record of 892 career stolen bases. Edward W. Stack, president of the Hall of Fame, accepted the trophy and gave Brock a gilded replica as a personal trophy for his tremendous feat. Brock predicted that the greatest threat to his base-the American League and they're pushing for the designated runner. Some day we will have offensive and defensive platoons just as they have in football. It's almost that now in the seventh and eighth innings of a tight game.

Brock admitted that his legs "felt like rubber" when he went after Maury Wills' single season and Cobb's career records. "Second base looked 1,000 miles away," he said. "I wanted to call a cab.

The Cardinals' speedster said he carries on private little wars with rival catchers - principally Steve Yeager, Johnny Bench and Barry Foote, whom he rates the toughest - although the pitcher is his real foil. "You use every strategem of sight and sound." he said.

Brock also is approaching two other baseball marks. He is 166 hits away from becoming the 13th player in history to get 3,000 and he needs only 53 strikeouts to break Mickey Mantle's dubious honor.

"Hitting," Lou philosophized, "is the bread and butter of the game. Base stealing is optional.

Jamie and the rest of the Mosley family made it up the hill just in the nick of time. Seconds later, a wall of water swept all their earthly possessions away. Here you see Jamie in the Red Cross shelter, thinking it
