

Proposed Pampa Mall

This architect's rendering illustrates the interior view of the main concourse planned for the Pampa Mall to be located on the north edge of the city. Aimbinder Associates of Houston are developers of the shopping mall. The design will include brick paved flooring and an acoustical tile ceiling lighted by a combination of fluorescent and incandescent lighting. There will be 250,000 square feet of area enclosed and air conditioned. Outside construction will be of masonry with wood trim. Parking facilities are planned for 1,300 cars. Persons interested in additional information on the mall may contact Alan Smith, project manager, Aimbinder Associates, 3461 West Alabama, Houston 77027. James A. Bishop and Associates are architects and planners.

Pampa voters Saturday will elect city commissioners for wards two and four and representatives for three places on the Independent School District Board of Trustees.

Places one, two and three on the ISD Trustees Board are up for election.

Only those residents on the 1977 voter registration list or on the current 1978 list are eligible to vote. Persons who are on the 1977 list but who failed to return a 1978 voter registration card by the March 1 deadline will be permitted to vote in Saturday's elections. However, they must first sign an affidavit swearing to their legal residency.

Voting booths for both elections will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. For the city commissioners' race, Ward One residents must vote at City Hall, Ward Two at the North fire department substation, 321 E. 17th; Ward Three at the Optimist Boys Club, 601 E. Craven; and Ward Four at the South fire department substation, 1010 S. Barnes.

The ISD Trustees election booth will be located in the music room of Pampa High School.

Candidates for the Ward Two city commissioner race are Charles J. "Chuck" Eckelberry, an IBM service employee and corporate pilot for Cabot Corporation, and Coyle C. Ford, owner of a local automobile body shop Joe B. Curtis, Ward Two commissioner, is not seeking re-election.

Ira Linden "Butch" Shepherd is running unopposed for the Ward Four commissioner's seat. Shepherd, an incumbent, is an employee of Panhandle Industries Corporation.

ISD Board of Trustees candidates are Paul Simmons

(incumbent) and Burley T. Owen, place one. Mrs. Billy Winingham and Darville D. Orr, place two; and Don Butler and Dr. Robert Lyle (incumbent), place three. David Crossman, place two trustee is not seeking re-election.

City commissioners serve terms of two years and ISD trustees serve three-year terms.

Citizens of Lefors also will go to the polls Saturday to elect a mayor and three city councilmen.

Candidates for mayor are Ben White and Leonard Cain.

Nine men are running for the council seats, all to be elected at large. They include Clayton Lock, J.W. Franks (incumbent), Wendell Akins, Dean Crain, Bob Klein, Butch Wyatt, Royce Gee (incumbent), Jeff Baker (incumbent) and Bruce Gillman.

Voting will be in Lefors Civic Center and polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Group seeks new city pool

By CHRIS EDWARDS
Pampa News Staff

A group of Pampans want a new swimming pool to replace one they say was built "with baling wire and chewing gum."

But the question seems to be money.

They plan to approach City Council in April for help in financing and construction of an Olympic-sized city pool, but also hope to count on donations from industries and individuals.

Mack Wofford, city manager, agreed that the city pool at Kentucky and Deane is in poor condition, but said immediate construction on a new pool might require the passage of a bond issue.

But representatives of the group said they are as yet making only "long-range" plans.

Mrs. Lillian Esson, a member of the Gray County chapter of the American Red Cross board, and Mrs. Joyce Roberts, executive secretary, cautioned today that the group has only talked and could give no estimates on construction cost, time or location of the proposed pool.

The women said the municipal pool at Kentucky and Deane was one of the oldest pools in the state still in operation.

The pool was built about 1935 and city government officials aren't "particularly proud" of the dressing rooms and the rest of the pool Wofford said.

The city spent about $3700 excluding labor for renovation at that pool during 1976, but problems stem from a poor heating system and the dressing rooms, Wofford said.

But a new pool could mean a local expenditure of at least $150,000, he said, and to do anything immediately would require a bond issue.

The question is whether the old pool could be upgraded and how a new pool would be financed, he said.

"You can build Cadillac-type or VW-type pools," he said.

Wofford estimated the new pool cost at $250,000, but said that was a figure he'd "plucked out of the air."

Mrs. Esson and Mrs. Roberts said they and two Pampa businessmen plan to ask City Council for the help of a city engineer to estimate cost.

"What we want is an Olympic-sized pool so we can get some swim meets in here and bring in some money for the city," Mrs. Esson said.

The women said they planned to form a committee to raise funds through donations.

And Wofford said commissioners might approve city maintenance for such a pool. "Why not, we're maintaining one now?" he asked.

He said the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission might agree to finance not more than half of the construction cost.

City council has discussed appointing a recreation study committee to study the need for facilities such as swimming pools, baseball diamonds, golf courses and tennis courts in Pampa, Wofford said.

Bank robber debut nets raves and jail

DALLAS (AP) — Melba Sue Bello was so excited about seeing her husband on camera for the 6 p.m. news, police said she was telling everybody about it.

Unfortunately, it was film taken by hidden camera that officers said recorded a robber leaving an Oak Cliff bank after a Tuesday robbery.

"Why James, that's you," police said Mrs. Bello told her husband James Howard Bello as they watched the news.

Several hours later, the 41-year-old Bello was jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond after being charged in connection with the robbery.

Police investigator Steve Brasher said Mrs. Bello, 26, went around telling people near her apartment that her husband was the bank robber on television.

About an hour after the news program, the couple took their apartment manager to a Dallas hospital for treatment of minor injuries. While there, police said Bello asked to be admitted for a psychiatric examination.

During the examination, Mrs. Bello told the psychiatrist her husband had robbed the Oak Cliff bank and David Zook, a police officer assigned to the hospital, was notified, investigators said.

Zook arrested Bello and the apartment manager directed officers to Bello's car where a note was found stating: "Just give me your largest bills. I have a weapon."

Bank employees said the robber never displayed a weapon. Officers said Mrs. Bello later led them to the couple's apartment, where they discovered $1,159 — within $10 of the amount taken in the robbery.

Carter pushes rights in Brazil

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — President Carter, risking the displeasure of his official hosts, met today with Brazilian champions of human rights who are critics of the military government. He said human rights improvements in Brazil are "very encouraging."

The president and his party left immediately afterward for Nigeria, where he will be the first American president to make a state visit to black Africa.

of reporters, Carter talked about meeting with Brazilian supreme court justices Thursday in Brasilia.

"The chief justice made a very clear statement toward dedication to human rights," Carter said. "He said they (the justices) were the most liberal elements in the court system. It was very encouraging for us."

"Since my last visit here, there has been, I think, great excitement building up (about human rights), and the people are expressing themselves very clearly," the president said. At that point, the reporters were ushered out.

The meeting was held coincidentally on the 14th anniversary of the military coup which deposed a populist civilian government in Brazil. Afterward, the president was accompanied to the airport by one of the cardinals, who is archbishop of Sao Paulo, Brazil's most populous state.

Jose Mesquita Neto, a publisher and member of the group who met with the president, said to reporters: "We told the president that the Brazilian press and not only the Roman Catholic Church has played a major role in the defense of human rights conditions in Brazil."

"The president agreed and told us that the increase in freedom of the press existing now in the country represents an improvement in the human rights situation," Mesquita said. "We told the president that the Brazilian newspapers are now denouncing the cases of torture and arbitrary arrest. A few years ago these things were mysteries."

Mesquita said Carter asked many questions about human rights, press freedom and the nation's economy. The publisher said the president also asked for opinions about political affairs in Africa.

After a seven-hour flight across the south Atlantic in Air Force One and a night's rest, Carter will confer with Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, chief of state in oil-rich Nigeria. Obasanjo is expected to ask Carter to get tougher against white-minority governments in Africa.

Nigeria is the third developing nation on Carter's seven-day tour of South America and Africa. He has spent two days each in Brazil and Venezuela. The president, wife Rosalynn and 10-year-old daughter Afriy will visit Liberia before returning to Washington late Monday.

Although not all of the six Brazilians meeting with Carter are outspoken critics of the Brazilian regime, most have opposed at least some government policies and are associated the human rights cause Carter espouses.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said that before Carter's final meeting with Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel on Thursday, the American president's human rights crusade and his opposition to Brazil's purchase of nuclear technology capable of producing weapons-grade uranium had "poisoned the atmosphere" between Brazil and the United States.

However, Powell, speaking for the administration, said two days of talks between Carter and Geisel, ranging far beyond the issues of human rights and nuclear non-proliferation, laid the groundwork for improved relations.

Carter himself said in the presence of reporters that his meetings with Geisel had been "delightful and very productive."

FORUM ... and against 'em

Bicycles, showerbaths and bureaucrats

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-Editor

What I like doing best with the words I fit together for this space is getting a chuckle or a smile from the reader of the resultant phrases.

Not your loud guffaws and strenuous belly laughs, that's a lot to expect. But a happy kind of feeling inside to aide the digestion or to help counteract some of the day's unpleasanties.

That kind of writing isn't always easy to accomplish. Sometimes there's a necessity to comment on some serious matters that need attention. When that happens sometimes some readers don't agree with the views expressed. Sometimes a frown rather than a grin results.

And sometimes, even when a subject comes along with a potential for humorous development, I can't capitalize upon it.

Just the other day, for example, a story came over the Associated Press machine telling about a couple of Environmental Protection Agency officials who were in Houston for a day-long seminar on employee transportation. These EPA fellows told about 200 employer representatives attending the meeting that firms with 250 or more employees must begin providing incentives for bicycle commuting.

The two bureaucrats indicated at one point in the program that providing shower facilities "might" be a necessary part of such an incentive program.

That's what I thought contained an element of humor. Reminded me of that bit of wisdom which emanated some months ago from OSHA. You'll remember the official report that informed farmers they should be careful about stepping in fresh cow manure because the stuff is slippery.

But I couldn't get anything humorous fit together. I wrote false start after false start. Explored in some depth the entire realm of bicycling and sweating and smelling bad and showering at work. And I wondered what the effect might be when the EPA shower rule butts head - on into the ERA - can we expect future government regulations to endorse, encourage or enforce mixed group showers? Sounds ecological from a conservationist viewpoint, doesn't it?

The issue became too involved and bogged down to be light and enjoyable.

If businesses must provide showers and changing facilities for employees who wish to commute by cycle, how long will it be before businesses are government - forced to provide beds and sleeping facilities for workers who don't wish to commute at all?

And it is possible that the government, in trying to deal with the fuel crunch, decides we should all live at our places of employment?

Will employers be forced to build apartments and housing for employees? Will there be new volumes of federal regulations listing specifications for patios complete with smokeless (EPA standards, you know) barbecue pits for employees who like to cook outside? What about workshops for hobbyists, golf courses for golfers, tennis courts, maybe a lake for fisherpersons and boaters? Where will it stop? How much is too much?

Showers for cyclists. Instead of making me laugh it made me angry, frustrated. Everything I tried to develop kept leading to the question: "When are those damn bureaucratic sycophants going to stop meddling in and messing up our lives?"

The only answer that I can come up with is: "When we refuse to comply with their stupid regulations."

And that's just about what happened at that Houston meeting. A businessman in the audience asked the EPA representatives if a shower and dressing room would be required if only one employee wanted to ride his or her bike to work. And another questioner asked if a company president could go to jail if he simply chose to ignore an EPA order to install showers. Since the irate businessmen outnumbered the EPA officials - Jack Divita, pollution control chief, and Jim Veach, regional counsel - there was some considerable back-pedaling on the issue.

"What we are talking about is providing a place for employees who ride bikes to lock them up," Divita told the businessmen. "I don't think we'll force people to begin installing showers."

But I don't think the EPA has any business even forcing people to install bike racks. It isn't a matter of degree, it's a matter of principle.

And it just isn't funny.

Today is Friday, March 31, the 90th day of 1978. There are 275 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1854, the first treaty between the United States and Japan was signed. Two Japanese ports were opened to trade with the outside world.

On this date: In 1889, the Eiffel Tower was opened in Paris.

In 1917, the United States took possession of the American Virgin Islands after their purchase from Denmark.

In 1931, Managua, Nicaragua, was destroyed by an earthquake.

In 1933, during the Great Depression, Congress authorized a Civilian Conservation Corps to employ and train young men.

In 1943, in World War II, American bombers pounded the shipyards at Rotterdam in the Netherlands.

In 1953, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden was elected secretary-general of the United Nations.

Ten years ago: President Lyndon Johnson declared: "I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination of my party as president."

Five years ago: South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu left for Washington to seek assurance that the United States would underwrite the survival of a non-Communist South Vietnam.

One year ago: A friendship treaty was signed by the Soviet Union and the former Portuguese territory of Mozambique.

Today's birthdays: Former High Commissioner for Germany John McCloy is 83 years old. Entertainer Henry Morgan is 63.

Thought for today: There's one kind of tax that would win universal approval - a tax on the other person - anonymous.

Thanks, Bubbles

It was for freedom she left and in freedom she died. For more than two weeks the world was delighted by Bubbles' antics as she repeatedly dodged efforts to trap and return her to captivity.

Why did everyone fall so madly in love with a blubbery two-ton hippo quickly? Bubbles really wasn't pretty and few ever saw her. When swimming she was graceful, but on land she was just another lumbering beast.

And Bubbles didn't smell like the proverbial rose, either.

Bubbles was fortunate enough to have the name that is more often associated with strippers than hippos, and that could explain some of her popularity.

To others she was a symbol of liberated ladies everywhere, doing her thing and flouting the determined efforts of her prospective male captors.

But it probably goes deeper than that. Bubbles was loved because Bubbles found what everyone seeks: Freedom.

However temporary her unrestricted life may have been, Bubbles gave every indication she enjoyed it. For nearly three weeks she did what she wanted - when she wanted - and forced everyone concerned with her capture to wait on her.

Fearing the food she foraged wasn't nutritious enough, rangers brought in a diet even better than that she regularly received at home in her pen. As a Lion Country Safari spokesman put it, Bubbles had breakfast in bed.

Curiously enough it took a hippopotamus - an animal generally considered to be on the low side of the totem pole when it comes to brain power - to teach the world something about intelligence. Whether she knew it or not Bubbles continually out-hopped park officials, game wardens and the curious throughout the world who forwarded suggestions ranging from the feasible to the flaky on how to contain her.

And in the end it was a combination of flukes of nature and man's technology that took her life.

No one, including Bubbles, may ever know the reason she broke out of Lion Country. But in her death she rekindled a sense of freedom and left us with the knowledge that it can be expensive

On nuclear energy

The necessity for nuclear power was never more evident than during the coal strike. The need for increased production from utilities, not dependent on coal, became imperative and the nuclear segment of the electric industry came through to provide it.

An Atomic Industrial Forum survey reveals that a large majority of nuclear operations worked at better than average capacity despite crippling cold and blizzards. In many cases, a utility's supply of relatively cheap nuclear power allowed it to sell to plants threatened by wet, frozen or depleted coal supplies.

Consolidated Edison was able to transfer 465 million kilowatt hours, Niagara Mohawk, 125 million, and others were able to join in the transfer. Most nuclear plants were able to run at high rates of from 96 to 100 percent of capacity.

Nuclear energy is now supplying about 12 percent of the nation's electrical use which means that it is saving the equivalent of near 10 million tons of coal.

It is most certain that reduced business and industrial activity and unemployment would have been much more severe without the contribution made from nuclear plants.

While these plants were delivering the power we had several deadly accidents which took many lives. There were 20 victims of railroad accidents, five died in an oil rig blaze, five in a plane crash and one in a bus overturn. These all took place during one week in February. This, in addition to the many killed and maimed in automobile accidents.

We mention these because the excuse the anti-nuclear people give for hampering the development of this form of energy is a "factor" of safety. In the twenty years of power production through the use of nuclear energy there has not been one death. Yet politicians listen to the yeops of a fanatical fringe calling themselves environmentalists.

Goaded by this vociferous element, the bureaucracy is happy to oblige in raising impediments to progress since federal and state agency careers are enhanced by a proliferation of rules and regulations.

The economic health of the people in this nation is dependent on a continual flow of energy. We cannot live long without it. Oil, coal and nuclear fuels are all needed to keep the energy stream flowing.

A relatively small group of strikers should not be able to intimidate our industries. Much less should a small number of fanatics be able to halt the progress of nuclear use through misuse of governmental power.

Business limelight

Multi-source energy need

By GENE WEKALL

Santa Ana (Calif.) Register Business Editor
PITTSBURGH, Pa. - Energy has been a political football for a long time. It resembles the political public relations plan for "tax-supported mass transportation."

The trumpet call for everyone to jump on the bandwagon of using buses and other means of mass transportation rather than the passenger car has led to personal problems in some areas.

If you yielded to the so-called "patriotic spirit" of reducing pollution and conserving energy by using some form of mass transportation you could have had some serious difficulties in the recent past. Subway strikes in New York, strikes of BART drivers in San Francisco and bus drivers in Los Angeles all have stranded millions of persons trying to go to work or carry out errands.

Bureaucrats and politicians continue their siren call for abandonment of private transportation for tax-supported vehicles. But unionization of municipal employees who operate these systems has put the tax-paying public at the mercy of the union officials.

When President Carter entered office he told the citizens of the U.S. that coal would take a major part in the nation's energy picture. He has supported the reduction of proposed nuclear plants in favor of coal-fired electricity generation.

But again the public is being held a victim of union officials and some coal mine operators who use the energy picture as a means of obtaining their goals.

In Pittsburgh as well as other parts of the Midwest and Northeast a coal strike has caused some disruption in businesses, commercial activities and public events.

Most businesses have cut back their use of electric energy from 25 to 50 percent. Many thousands of employees have been laid off because of the reduced use of energy, which is normally supplied for various plants.

It has been estimated that about 50 percent of the coal production is from non-union mines. But union members have used violence and threats to force the non-union workers from their jobs.

Now the persons who pay the bill for this action are not the coal mine operators nor the coal mine employees. Those who pay the price are employees who have been laid off because of the shortage of electricity and coal-fired heat.

President Carter's call for more dependence on coal as an energy source rings hollow because it would only increase public dependence on the unions and coal mine operators.

In the past the coal situation depended upon supply and demand. But today, with the threat of force, coal mine union members can hold the public hostage to gain additional employment benefits.

In the United Kingdom the coal mine unions have brought the country to its knees during various strikes. This winter's U.S. coal strike brought parts of the U.S. to its knees. The additional uses of coal as an energy source would only enlarge this dependence.

There is approximately a 500-year supply of coal for energy uses in the U.S. Despite this, a stranglehold by unions could increase the energy problem rather than solve it.

The best alternative is to have a myriad of energy sources available. This includes nuclear power, geothermal, solar, and fossil fuels.

The individual should always keep in mind that a termination of an energy source by union or governmental power could cause severe problems for those who depend upon it. He should plan for a supply of multisource energy if possible.

Watch on Washington

Georgia skeleton in Carter closet

By CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

WASHINGTON - A federal investigation of mismanagement and favoritism in the Georgia State Energy Office could result in changing Billy Carter from a comic character into a symbol of serious embarrassment to President Carter.

The investigation of proven irregularities and possible illegalities has been stalled for months in the Energy Department despite recommendations that it be sent to the Justice Department for criminal prosecution of state and federal officials.

Two senior Democratic members of the House Commerce Committee - Reps. John E. Moss of California and John D. Dingell of Michigan - have recently asked Attorney General Griffin Bell to appoint a special prosecutor to conduct the investigation.

Although the alleged illegalities and favoritism in the allocation of gasoline took place in the time when Jimmy Carter was governor of Georgia, there is no charge that he was personally involved in the decisions that resulted in his brother Billy Carter receiving as much as 25,000 gallons of emergency fuel a month through the Georgia State set-aside program.

In their letter, Moss and Dingell set forth the allegation that the state energy director at that time, Lewis C. Spruill, an appointee of then Governor Carter, "gave unwarranted and highly advantageous gasoline allocation from the State Set-Aside program to selected and favored jobbers and dealers, to the detriment of others who were not so well connected politically with the Director and his associates."

Moss and Dingell related that they have been told that some of these allocations "were in return for a variety of alleged favors." In the letter to Bell they did not enumerate the charges which included an allegation that one oil jobber supplied state and federal energy officials with a love nest.

"For two and a half years the investigation dragged on in the Department of Energy until March when the Department finally made a criminal referral of the case to the Department of Justice," Moss and Dingell said.

They noted that a "new dimension" had surfaced as a result of the work of two investigative reporters for the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, Patrick Tyer and Charles C. Thompson II.

A review of the files of the Georgia State Energy Office revealed that Billy Carter "was allegedly a recipient of large volumes of the State Set-Aside gasoline."

Department of Energy officials told the subcommittee staff they missed the (Billy) Carter involvement because they failed to audit his supplier in the initial audits, although the information was in the files of the Georgia Energy Office.

Billy Carter has been quoted as saying that the extra allocation provided by Spruill "kept me alive" at his two-pump gasoline station in Plains, Ga. He contended the extra allocations were "all above board" and arranged legally with Spruill.

"Hell, if I've done anything illegal, I wouldn't try to hide it. I'd brag about it," the affable Billy Carter told reporters.

The question of the legality or illegality of the emergency allocations to Billy Carter probably cannot be determined until there is the full investigation by a nonpartisan prosecutor, congressional sources said.

They noted that Spruill was removed from the Georgia energy program because of irregularity and favoritism in the operations, and that it has been recommended the case against Spruill be sent to Justice for prosecution.

In asking for "an independent prosecutor not associated with any parochial interests," Moss and Dingell said it is essential to erase the public's perception of "politics as usual and the good old boys."

To assure that the Georgia "good old boys" image does not cloud the decisions on the energy office, Moss and Dingell suggested that Bell, a Georgian, seek advice from the American Bar Association in the selection of an independent prosecutor for the full investigation.

Not mentioned in the Moss-Dingell letter was the fact that the White House press office sidetracked a CBS program on Billy Carter's gas allocation over the objections of investigative reporter Charles C. Thompson II.

Following a dispute with his superiors over the Billy Carter story, Thompson went to the St. Petersburg Times where he and Times reporter Patrick Tyer completed the research and did a series with the support of Editor Eugene Patterson.

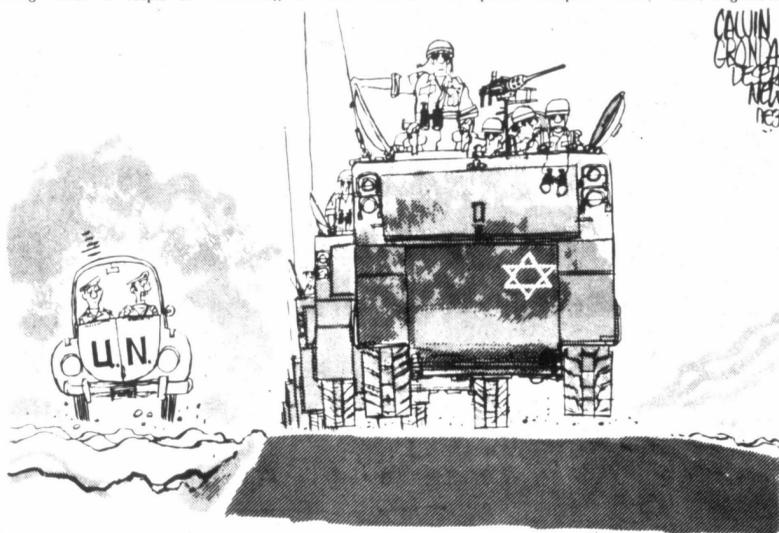

Although President Carter's son, James Earl (Chip) Carter, was an employee of the Georgia Energy Office at the time it was headed by Spruill, he had no role in any of the policy decisions or mechanics of the questionable gasoline and diesel fuel allocations.

Spruill was removed by Georgia Gov. George Busbee, who succeeded Jimmy Carter, as a result of a multiplicity of charges involving irregularities and favoritism in the Georgia State Energy Office. Busbee named Mrs. Orn Walden, an energy adviser to Governor Carter who had served under Spruill, to the state post.

President Carter has nominated Mrs. Walden, 31, to a $50,000-a-year job as an assistant secretary in the Energy Department. That nomination is being held up pending a congressional investigation of whether she had any responsibility for the most criticized decisions under Spruill.

With the Senate probing the nomination of Mrs. Walden and with Moss and Dingell prodding the Justice Department, the long smoldering investigation of Carter's Georgia energy program could burst into political flame on any of a number of fronts.

If it does, the questionable allocations of emergency gasoline to Billy Carter will not be a laughing matter for the Carter administration - even if it is established clearly that Jimmy Carter was not aware of the favoritism and other hanky-panky.

Rio stops to greet president

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The scantily-clad men and women on Rio de Janeiro's famed Copacabana beach interrupted their sun worshipping to watch him drive by. Sweating construction workers on a road along a cliff put down their picks Thursday to watch President Carter drive by. Ice cream vendors stopped hawking their wares. Schoolchildren in white shirts stood at a street corner and waved. Several thousand persons turned out to see Carter place a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldiers. In Brasilia, the capital 800 miles to the north, only a handful of people had been on the streets as the president's motorcade sped through the city. Others watched from the shuttered windows of government office buildings. The chief reason for the cool reception in Brasilia, where official thinking dominates, and the warm reception in Rio was Carter's human rights policy. "I think Carter is one of the most admired U.S. presidents because of his human rights campaign," said one middle-aged man in a group of about 20 people who watched the Carters' arrival at the summer home of Rio's mayor to spend the night. "Carter has shown his greatest interest is human rights," a woman said. They and others questioned said it was the president's emphasis on human rights that drew them out to see him. Although Carter in his meetings in Brasilia with President Ernesto Geisel and the Brazilian Congress dealt with a number of issues, his only meeting in Rio was with Brazilians known for their advocacy of human rights. They include two Roman Catholic cardinals who are outspoken critics of the government along with other non-government figures. Carter told his news conference in Brasilia that the Brazilian government and his administration differ primarily in their approach to problems of human rights, how allegations should be investigated and what should be done to correct defects. He said both are committed to enhance human rights. Carter said the Brazilians are balking at suggestions from the United States and others that international agencies be allowed to investigate allegations of human rights violations. White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the problem of human rights "tended to poison the relationship generally" between the U.S. and Brazilian governments. He said this relationship was improved by Carter's visit to Brasilia, but more because Carter made personal contact with Geisel than because substantive agreements were reached.

Host to give up power

By LARRY HEINZERLING Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, President Carter's host for the first African stop of his current tour, is scheduled to become the first Nigerian chief of state to relinquish power voluntarily. Three of his four predecessors were killed in army coups. The fourth was overthrown by the army while he was out of the country. Obasanjo has promised black Africa's richest and most populous country to step aside in October 1979 for its first civilian government since 1966.

A new constitution, to be patterned on the U.S. constitution, will provide for an elected president, a two-house parliament and an independent judiciary. Most observers say Obasanjo is virtually certain to achieve his goal, making Nigeria once again the largest democracy in black Africa.

The 41-year-old Obasanjo He is widely popular, both because of his firm rule of the nation of 80 million people and his determination to relinquish power and take the 220,000-man army with him.

While not a charismatic figure, he has worked long hours trying to instill a sense of national discipline and unity on the tribally diverse nation. Observers say he has had some success.

Personality in the news

"Obasanjo is obsessed with one-man one-vote, freeing the black man and ending apartheid in South Africa," said one Western diplomat.

He actively seeks to root out corruption in government and is a vocal advocate of hard work to shake the people out of the complacency induced by oil wealth.

"I've emphasized that in spite of the oil, this is not a rich nation. We are around the top of the league of the poorest group," he said in an interview several months ago. "If men's needs can be listed as food, water, shelter, clothing and fuel, even before we come to health services and the rest, many of our people are short even of the first items on the list. But there is this belief that we have everything."

More than 70 percent of the Nigerians are still subsistence farmers, eking out a living from the soil despite dramatic economic growth on the cities.

He has been a strong critic of U.S. policy in Africa, especially in southern Africa, where he believed the United States was actively supporting the white-minority governments of South Africa and Rhodesia.

He refused to allow Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to visit Nigeria in 1976 and convinced Ghana to bar him also, believing Kissinger was more concerned with Soviet and Cuban involvement in Africa than in supporting the cause of majority rule.

President Carter's visit reflects a turnaround brought on by the Carter administration's more active support of black African aspirations.

Diplomatic sources say Obasanjo has little enthusiasm for the Soviet-Cuban involvement in Africa but feels they supported just causes in both Angola and Ethiopia.

Obasanjo, who attended military school in Ghana and several training centers in Britain, was commissioned in the Nigerian army in 1958 as an engineer.

In the 1967 war to quell the Biafran rebellion, he commanded the marine commando division that broke through the Biafran lines and ended the war. He initiated the surrender papers in the field.

Quake rocks Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — A moderate earthquake rocked a wide and heavily populated section of the Puget Sound region early today, but authorities said no damage or injuries were reported.

Frank Baldwin of the Newport geophysical observatory in eastern Washington said the quake registered 4.2 on the open-ended Richter scale and appeared to be centered about halfway between Tacoma, on the east side of the sound, and Bremerton, on the west.

The quake was of sufficient force to be felt over a 50-mile radius, Baldwin said.

It followed a quake that was centered in Anchorage, Alaska, Thursday night that had a magnitude of about 5 on the Richter scale, the U.S. Geological Survey in Washington, D.C., reported.

Spokesman Don Kelly said the Alaska tremor occurred at 7:38 p.m. EST. He said no there were no reports of damage or injuries but that the quake was widely felt.

The Richter scale is a measurement of ground motion in which each number represents a tenfold increase in force. Thus an earthquake measured at 4.0 is 10 times as strong as a 3.0 tremor.

Hightower backs area missile base

U.S. Representative Jack Hightower, in Amarillo Wednesday, said he will support the location of nuclear missile bases in the Texas Panhandle if tests prove they are feasible for the area.

"My full support will depend on results of tests and investigations being made by the Air Force," said Hightower, democratic candidate for re-election to the 13th Texas Congressional District. He added, "I certainly support the concept."

The Air Force is currently compiling information needed for engineering design feasibility studies, land availability evaluations and environmental impact statements.

Said Hightower, "This information includes hydrology, land ownership, acreage, land use and costs, in addition to soil information."

The Air Force has completed soil density analysis for the area. Counties under consideration for the missile sites are Dallam, Deaf Smith, Bailey and Lipscomb.

The possible missile bases for the Panhandle area would house the "M-X" intercontinental nuclear missiles which are designed to protect the U.S. from surprise nuclear attacks.

"A nuclear missile base nearby certainly would provide an economic boost to the area. And location of a site near here would not make this area any more vulnerable to nuclear attack than other areas. More likely, it would provide greater protection," Hightower said.

Army Corps of Engineers is set to collect real estate information when a specific area is determined.

Hightower said that an Air Force communication to his office Monday indicated that proposed Panhandle testing sites have "potentially" suitable geology and geography" for an M-X missile system.

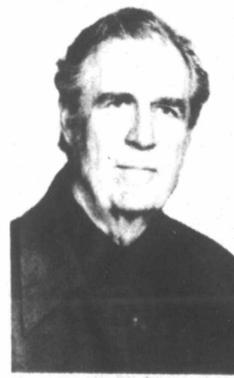

Culberson, Cochran, Reeves, Pecos and Gaines are other Texas counties being considered for the nuclear missile sites.

Officials estimated 12,000 Lebanese and Palestinian families returned to their villages and camps in the south during the last three days.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old professional man, single and never married. I recently became attracted to a very pretty girl who works at a fast-food counter, and I could tell she liked me. I asked for six pieces of fish and she gave me eight. The next day she gave me change for a five dollar bill when I gave her a one.

After talking to her today, I found out that she's only a junior in high school. Could I get into any trouble if I asked her out? (I read that Dostoevski married an 18-year-old girl when he was 50 and they had a wonderful marriage.) I need your answer before I make any moves.

BILL

DEAR BILL: Never mind what Dostoevski did; that was 100 years ago. The schoolgirl to whom you are attracted either can't count or she's giving her boss's store away. If you are planning any "moves," I advise you to move in the direction of a girl closer to your own age.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved here from another state, and quite by accident we learned that my husband has a niece in a private institution within half an hour's drive from our house. (I'll call this niece "Nellie.") Naturally we went to visit Nellie at once, after which we phoned her mother (my husband's eldest sister) to tell her we had seen her daughter.

Nellie's mother objected strenuously to our visiting Nellie. She said the girl has been a "hopeless vegetable" since birth (she is now 28 years old) and it would have been much better had we left the family skeleton in the closet where it belonged instead of digging it up! (We ignored her wishes and continued to visit Nellie.)

Abby, in the few months we've been visiting her, she has learned to recognize us and seems so happy to see us. The head doctor there told us that Nellie has improved physically since we've been giving her our love and attention. He has even let us take her home on Sundays.

The problem is Nellie's mother. She has asked us to stay away from her daughter. She says for her support but hasn't visited her once!

Should we continue seeing Nellie in spite of her mother's objections?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: I can see only good resulting from your visits, and I would continue to give Nellie as much love and attention as you possibly can.

DEAR ABBY: My husband recently died. I think it would have been nice if the doctor who had taken care of him during his illness had sent some kind of condolence message, don't you. Or don't doctors believe in that?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: If the patient was only a patient, all the doctor sends is his bill. If the patient has been a personal friend, the doctor would send his condolences and a bill.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am a 26-year-old female. Eight weeks ago I was told I had a duodenal bulb ulcer. Then I had X rays and was told the ulcer had not improved at all.

For the entire eight weeks I stayed on my diet, took antacids and stayed on Valium with no results at all.

My doctor told me that I should wait three months and he would run some type of scope test to see if anything else besides the ulcer is in the bulb. Could you give me some information on duodenal bulb ulcers and why one would not heal? I am a little nervous over going in for the scope test which I have been told is very painful.

DEAR READER - Despite all the facts we know about ulcers we still don't really know what causes them and there is plenty of disagreement about what has to be done to treat them.

We know that increased acid formation by the stomach is important; apparently the action of pepsin, the enzyme produced by the stomach to start the digestion of proteins as in meat, is important too. The excess acid-pepsin is squirted out of the stomach with stomach contractions and hits against the wall of the small intestine where it connects to the stomach. The small intestine makes a sharp turn there forming the duodenal bulb. The first part of the small intestine is called the duodenum.

The stomach is lined with a heavy mucous material which protects its lining from the digestive action of the acid-pepsin juice, but the duodenum is not lined. The acid-pepsin juice literally starts digesting the wall of the duodenum and the area that is eaten away is called the ulcer crater.

When an X ray is taken, the barium fills the hole of the ulcer crater and outlines it so it can be seen on the X-ray picture. As it heals the crater contracts and may deform the duodenal area and that can be seen thereafter as evidence of a previously active ulcer even if it has healed.

Healing is promoted by neutralizing the acid-digestive juice and that is where antacid therapy becomes important. I am sending you The Health Letter number 10-4, Use and Abuse of Antacids, to give you detailed information on how these work. These include the highly advertised antacids such as Tums, Roloids, and others. Anyone who uses antacids needs to be informed about their limitations and uses. For example, the liquid preparations are far more effective than the pills. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

As The Health Letter points out, you need to take enough antacid to really neutralize the stomach acidity. Relief of pain alone may not be enough to promote healing. The most common cause for failure of treatment programs is inadequate neutralization of acid-digestive juice.

You can help promote the healing of an ulcer by stopping all beverages that contain any caffeine, including coffee, tea, colas and cocoa or chocolate. You should not smoke at all and should not use any alcohol. Any cause for nervousness or stress should be eliminated if possible.

The gastroscope examination isn't all that difficult and many people have had it. Your doctor will help make it easy for you.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY - To make a suitcase or musty drawer smell nice, sprinkle or spray a bit of cologne around the sides or leave a cake of unwrapped scented soap in it for a few days. I even did this with a box of greeting cards that smelled musty and it worked well. Perhaps this will help Lola who has the musty suitcase. - ALICE

Heels run from tiny to spike

NEW YORK (AP) - Classic casuals will walk right along with romantic sophisticated looks this spring, says the Footwear Council, which sees two important fashion directions: Success Dressing and the Sporting Life.

Success Dressing for women takes dancing looks into daytime with high-stepping heels, strappy straps that wrap about ankle or instep, and baby-pale tones mixed with shiny black or metallic. The bare foot complements the swing of dirndls and the swish of silk. Very high heels and wrapped ties give proportion to the leg line.

But look also for "Mary Jane" party flats. Half-inch heels have already been selling in Paris, and are expected to become popular in the United States, the council predicts.

But the Footwear Council assures the woman who wants to play the middle ground that there will also be mid-high heels, with 1-inch to 2½-inch heights showing greatest strength. These heights have been redesigned, though - they're narrower, for a higher, more ladylike look.

Small platforms are this year's trend; chunky, sky-high versions are gone and flexible polyurethane unit bottoms, already so popular in Europe, will become more important. These are especially refreshing in colors that mix or match with the rest of the shoe.

Wedges of all heights will make big fashion inroads. The classic espadrilles will continue to rise higher; but look for mini-wedges on softly colored "little girl" styles.

Women's shoes, especially the dressier styles, will burst forth in kaleidoscopes of color. White may well be the only color to decline in importance as it is replaced by a whole spectrum of cool neutrals. Beiges, in particular, will gain strength. And black will be important, even in the heat of the summer!

Men's Success Dressing footwear fits in with the return to three-piece suits and conservative colors for business and after. Slightly higher heels, polished leather finishes and the importance of basic black indicate an elegant turn of foot.

The most classic of men's shoes - the moccasin - is being updated for spring. It will be lighter in weight and made from softer materials. The newest of this style is the tubular moccasin. This is practically an unconstructed shoe that incorporates handsewn vamps and top stitching and looks new with this year's versions of Ivy League ready-to-wear.

Interest in boots will remain constant and side zipper versions will dominate. Heel heights will rise and narrower toes will be seen in better lines.

Higher heels in business and dress shoes are also an advanced trend for men. Slip-ons and ties will be set on heels up to 2½ inches, and there will be a few platforms in evidence.

The "height" of spring fashion can be either a 3-inch spike or just the suggestion of a heel, says The Footwear Council. It all depends on your frame of mind and the look of your outfit.

The relaxed dressing of the Sporting Life influences men's, women's and children's casual footwear. Bright colors, easy-to-wear styling and serious attention to function and comfort create a wardrobe of bottom line possibilities. The Footwear Council notes that every important casual style for spring has athletic ancestry, as even confirmed grandstanders want to look as if they're part of the action.

For women, the biggest changes will be in the design of the upper and in use of new colors in interesting combinations. "Specific purpose" shoes such as boating shoes and running styles will be worn more and more with the most casual of sportswear.

According to the council, spring 1978 presents a variety of men's casual "athletic" styles - espadrilles, clogs, meshes, sandals and wedges. Rounder toes (another "playing field" influence) cut across all groups, although wider, heavier lasts will be less popular than last year.

Most of the news in men's casuals is at the bottom. Flat soles, turned-up toes and heels have left the running track and are making tracks in city streets. Boating soles with non-skid treads aren't limited to the harbor. "Signature" treads with logos, words, numbers, are leaving their imprint everywhere.

As with the adults, "athletic" influences are by far the most important trend for children, says the council. In fact, the kids will be sporting carbon copies of what their elders are wearing.

The kids continue to hang onto their jeans and don't dress up too often, and shoes are styled to complement their rugged, everyday moods. Functional footwear will increase in importance - whether or not the youngsters are out to jog, they'll dress the part.

Unisex looks continue to dominate with the wavy bottoms, heavier lug soles, naturally finished leathers and top-stitch detailing. Girls and boys will be wearing sandals, closed oxfords (for those occasions when they get dressed up), platforms, wedges, clogs and espadrilles.

Soviet TV game shows aim to educate viewers

EDITOR'S NOTE - Soviet TV game shows are more like "College Bowl" than "Hollywood Squares." They're meant to educate as well as entertain. And by U.S. standards, the production is sometimes poor. But Russians, the women in particular, love 'em. And their eases.

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) - There's the orchestra, the audience, the handsome emcee. But there are no giggly women hugging and kissing and screaming and swooning at winning a room full of furniture or golf cart or convertible or Hawaiian holiday for two.

"Come On, Girls" is a television game show. Soviet style. The 90-minute monthly program hosted by Alexander Maslyukov, Russia's answer to Monte Hall, Dick Clark or Bill Cullen, is considered the most popular in the country.

Officials say it attracts more than 100 million viewers even though there are no big winners, no big losers and the games are meant to educate as much as to entertain.

Winners on "Come On, Girls" - and on other shows like "Festival Salute" and "Sports Family" - usually walk off with flowers or books rather than with cars, home appliances or cash. In fact, about the only big prize on Soviet TV these days is from "Festival Salute" where winners get a free trip to an international youth fair this summer in Havana, Cuba.

If five points are needed to win one segment of a show, most Soviet contestants will get five points and only one or two will get as few as four.

"There's no reason to give just one or two points," says Maslyukov, who is 36 years old, crew-cut and known as something of a heart-throb to Soviet women viewers. "You want the contestants to stay in a good mood until the end of the program."

Thus the game shows seem to reflect Soviet society, where the very rich and very poor are few.

The goal of "Come On, Girls," Maslyukov said in an interview, is to "propagandize professions." Contestants on a given program generally come from the same job category and they spend much of their time describing the virtues of their occupations.

"A lot of people write in and say I saw your program and I want to do that kind of work, too," Maslyukov said.

One program was devoted to policemen. As part of the program, they had to do a drill with a traffic baton to music and to design traffic signs they thought would make driving more pleasant.

One proposed a triangular warning sign with a high-heeled shoe in the middle, which she shyly explained meant "there is a woman policeman ahead so drive politely."

Recently on "Festival Salute," a series keyed to the Cuban festival, Soviet students attempted to converse with Cuban exchange students by using Spanish-language phrasebooks. Students also had to try to get the gist of foreign songs they had never heard before. One decided that "Jingle Bells" was a "happy song about the end of school exams."

"Sports Family" is based on family teams that compete in various athletics, apparently in an effort to encourage national interest in sports.

The production of Soviet game shows is often amateurish by Western standards. Elaborate electronic scoring equipment doesn't always work, camera focusing can be rough, and musical interludes often involve singers obliviously mouthing their songs to recordings.

But "Come On, Girls," which generates "bags of letters" for Maslyukov after every show, will continue so long as officials want, since there are no rating battles and almost no commercial sponsors.

The lack of big prizes doesn't bother Maslyukov, a 14-year game show veteran who has read about American game programs but has never seen one.

"We have no lack of willing contestants even though we have no refrigerators waiting for the winners."

"I'm sure that for the young people who take part in our programs, the most important thing is just to show themselves off on TV."

An investment in Your Future ATTEND CHURCH

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

AFTER THE PARTY IS OVER

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

©Coleman Adv. Ser.

Have you ever felt like this little girl after a big, exciting day at the Fair, or a party? You know how you feel — excited, exhausted; but you feel good, too. Sometimes you just want to lie down and think about it. But like the little one in this picture you, also, are too tired to remove your party hat or your shoes.

Sometimes it is delightful just to lie down and think of something good and wonderful and happy. It is good just to be still and sort of day-dream about what has happened.

There are other times in our lives when we need to achieve a sense of quietness and think of God. The Psalmist says, "Commune with your own heart upon your bed and be still." Psalm 4:4. God says in Psalms 46:10 "Be still and know that I am God."

We invite you to attend church and sense the still, quiet holiness that is God's presence in the midst of the congregation.

Spacesuit frees David from bubble

HOUSTON (AP) — Little David, dressed in his life-saving space suit, didn't walk on the moon or float through the dark expanses of outer space.

But, once out of his womblike plastic bubble, he grabbed a garden hose and sprayed the windows of his home, and his parents, and his neighbors, and that, to him, was more exciting than a space trip.

In recent months, David, who during the six years of his life has lived in a germ-free bubble, has ventured into the outside world, thanks to a spacesuit developed by researchers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) headquarters near Houston.

David suffers from a disease known as severe combined immune deficiency. His body has no defense against germs or bacteria. What could be the sniffles for a normal child could be death for David.

Since birth he has lived, learned and, on a lot of occasions, laughed in plastic bubbles, one at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, and the other at his home not far from the medical facility.

He breathes filtered air, eats sterile food and has never felt the skin-to-skin touch of a loved one.

But while at home in late month, David put on the spacesuit and made a tour of his house and the yard.

Dr. Ralph D. Feigin, chairman of pediatrics at the Baylor College of Medicine, told a Wednesday news conference, "he sprayed people, plants and windows. He petted the two family dogs. He explored the house for the first time in his life. He looked at family photos and played records and then finally said, 'What I really want to do is go back outside and play with the hose again.'"

Dr. Feigin said hope still existed that someday David would be able to function as a normal child, "but until that day we must take every precaution to insure his safety."

The medical college scientists also reported that in January David swallowed two coins from his collection. This called for a normally simple oration to remove the coins from the esophagus. But, for David, it was not normal, nor safe.

The coins were removed by a team of 35 medical professionals, including several surgeons. David, described by scientists as "very bright" accepted the medical procedure and came through with no more problems than a normal child.

Dr. Feigin, answering some of the recent criticism from other scientists that David's plastic bubble existence was not necessary, said:

"Other treatments have been evaluated a found unsuitable for David at this time. A bone marrow transplant offers the best hope, but of more than 10,000 potential donors tested, none has proved a good match."

Dr. Feigin said, "David is exceptional in that he is not critically ill or suffering from recurrent infections. Not only is he the longest surviving patient with this disease, but he is strong, healthy and has never had a sick day in his life."

Town buyers plan big

ROCKERVILLE, S.D. (AP) — Rockerville was quite a town a century ago, the local folks say, full of saloons and shops and the hustle and bustle that goes with a gold rush.

Today it is a sleepy little place — population 10 — an assortment of storefronts nestled in a valley between the lanes of a highway that takes the summer flood of tourists from nearby Rapid City to Mount Rushmore.

Except for an ancient black pickup and faint strains from a radio, few signs of life greet the stray visitor.

But big things are in store for Rockerville, or so say the two men who bought the town at auction last October for $550,000.

Banners proclaiming the sale are still plastered to some Old West buildings. They will disappear with the overall facelift promised for Rockerville Gold Town in an effort to divert the tourist stream.

The owners of Rockerville Gold Town — Jon Cochran of Rapid City, a former car dealer, and Ken Andrews, a Phoenix, Ariz., land developer — say they want to restore the town to its original Old West flavor without making it so historical that it would be dull.

The town was born when gold was discovered. By 1880 more than 1,000 people lived there. But water was needed to mine the gold, and when a plan to bring water to the mines died, the town slowly died, too.

By the time Rockerville was developed into a tourist attraction in 1953, little remained of the original boom town but an old log cabin.

The Gold Town is divided into three major parts along a single street — a cluster of rustic mining buildings, a business lane with turn-of-the-century storefronts and a restaurant and theater.

But most of the antiques for sale were bought by Andrews and Cochran, according to the real estate firm that handled the sale.

Andrews said one reason he bought the town is because of the ever-declining value of most everything but antiques, land and gold, "and I've got all three right here."

Andrews, interviewed at his home in Arizona, talks about the town with the enthusiasm of someone who has found a new toy.

He said new storefronts are planned, vendors and artisans will be invited up from the Southwest and other areas, and shootouts will be scheduled for the main street every day.

Andrews said the costs of the improvements would push the total investment for him and Cochran to about $800,000 for the first year.

There are no easy answers when the problems concern our children.

Don't be misled by the promise of easy answers to Complex problems.

School finance is a complicated matter and it takes experience to gain understanding.

We are following the mandate of the voters in the "pay-as-you-go" method of school renovation. The bond election was the means of giving the voters a chance to say whether they wanted the school buildings repaired at once or over a period of time.

The present board members have already begun making needed repairs as the money becomes available.

Astro - Graph

by Bernice Bede Osol

Trips that you have to make this coming year for business purposes could turn out to be as much fun as they will be profitable. Valuable contacts will be made on route.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Regardless of what others do for you today, it may not seem quite enough. It could be due to the example you set yourself. Find out to whom you're romantically suited by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 469, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Rather than face issues squarely today, you're apt to dwell on clever ways to dodge them. Don't outsmart yourself in the process.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you're promoting some type of speculative enterprise today it's best you don't involve close friends. Should it fizzle, they will sizzle.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Instead of meeting opposition with equal force today, turn the other cheek. Tolerance will tone temperaments down and sooth hostile associates.

your own devices you'll be a productive worker today, but if someone tries to tell you what to do or how to do it, you'll strike.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be possessive of one you love today. If he or she is admired by others, instead of being jealous, consider it a compliment to your good taste.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) The work-a-day world may treat you a little abrasively today, but this is not a valid excuse for taking your frustrations out on your family.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Unless you're well organized and self-disciplined, today you'll have trouble getting back on course if something unexpectedly disrupts your agenda.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your most vulnerable area today is your pocketbook. When you're not impulsively dipping into it yourself, the slack will be taken by freeloaders.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Others will try to take over the reins of something you feel you should have control of today. Handling them properly will test your diplomacy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) There is a certain type of person you have to stand up to or else he'll try to walk over you. If you meet one today, call his bluff.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Before committing yourself to social arrangements with friends today, check the costs in advance. The tab may take the fun out of it.

Stripper bids goodby

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A packed house whistled and howled as stripper Marilyn Marshall set her tassels twirling for the last time at a special farewell for the Troc, one of the nation's oldest burlesque palaces.

here," said the 42-year-old exotic dancer, who first graced the stage of the once splendid Trocadero Burlesque Theater when she was 18.

But the splendor is gone, and the 106-year-old Troc is in a state of ruin. A local restaurateur who bought the Troc for $78,000 last July plans $40,000 in restoration work before reopening it as a theater for Chinese-language films.

"Television and porno movies killed us. What you can see on TV now is what these people used to come here to see," said Ms. Marshall, awash in a sea of sequins and turquoise feathers.

"In the old days we had couples come here. It was a classy audience. It was more fun, and you were treated like a lady. Guys would send roses back to the dressing rooms and not expect something in return," she said.

Many of those couples were back Thursday night.

"When I was a youngster, I used to have a lot of fun down here. I just came tonight to say goodbye," said Nick Otto, 65, a retired businessman who brought his wife, Anne, 62.

"Oh, the tassels twirlers," Mrs. Otto said with a slight blush when asked what she remembered most about the old Troc. When she asked her husband the same question, he joked: "I'm not telling."

"The Ottos said they could remember going to the Troc in 1938 as part of a night on the town. They would get dressed up, go to dinner and then to the Troc, she said.

Businessman Marvin Savage, 42, said he came to the farewell "to relive my childhood. I used to get to school to come down here." He said that 18 years ago he and his wife, Sandy, went to the Troc on Friday nights.

On stage was Maxie Furman, a burlesque comic and former Troc manager for 15 years.

"The old days were wonderful," said Furman. "This was the poor man's musical comedy...."

"I'd say the Troc was a victim of TV and the dirty movies. Striptease just became too tame," he said.

News watch

CINCINNATI (AP) — Christians are being encouraged to wear Star of David armbands and ring church bells to "steal the show" if American Nazis march in predominately Jewish Skokie, Ill.

"Imagine the force of reputation of Nazi ideas if millions of Christians would wear the Jewish Star April 20 in acknowledgment of our Christian debt to the Jews," wrote Barbara Beckwith in an editorial carried in the April edition of the St. Anthony Messenger, a national Roman Catholic magazine with 280,000 subscribers. She grew up in Skokie.

enforcement public administrator in the nation" at a news conference Thursday. Jackson said Brown turned down a $50,000 job as deputy director of the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to take the Atlanta job.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A Charleston woman was hospitalized with a neck wound after a .22-caliber bullet that was raked into a pile of burning leaves exploded.

Georgia Warder, 49, was wounded Thursday while raking leaves in her yard, authorities said. She was reported in satisfactory condition Thursday night in Roper Hospital in Charleston after surgery. Eugene Windham told police he was helping his sister rake the yard when he heard a fire-cracker-like sound. A spent shell was found in the fire, he said.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Gwinnett County Police Chief John Crunkleton says finding the person who shot Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt and his attorney is going to be a long process, "if we even solve it."

Crunkleton also discounted on Thursday theories that an anti-pornography fanatic or the CIA was involved. "I cannot in my mind conceive where they (the CIA) would be interested in Larry Flynt," Flynt and Lawrenceville attorney Gene Reeves were shot March 6 as they returned to a courthouse where Flynt was being tried on obscenity charges.

ATLANTA (AP) — Lee F. Brown, 40, county justice services director in Portland, Ore., is the new commissioner of public safety for the city, succeeding A. Reginald Eaves, forced out of office by a police examinations cheating scandal. Mayor Raymond Jackson described Brown as "probably the most superbly qualified law en-

Hillside strangler suspect booked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 37-year-old maintenance man has been booked on investigation of murder in two of the 13 hillside stranglings after his childhood friend told police he watched while the man killed three women.

"It is a major break," said Police Chief Daryl Gates, "and we're very hopeful that it will successfully conclude at least those two and perhaps more" of the slayings attributed to the Hillside Strangler in which the bodies of female victims were dumped onto roads and hill-sides. Many were nude and sexually molested and all were strangled.

"We have sufficient information to believe that one or both of these suspects are involved in these murders," Gates said. Neither man has been charged.

Los Angeles police arrested Beverly Hills maintenance man Peter Mark Jones, 37, on Thursday at his apartment.

George Shamsk, 27, now in the men's prison on Los Angeles' Terminal Island, reportedly told police about Jones and the killings when questioned in February at Walpole State Prison in Massachusetts.

Shamsk had escaped on Oct. 24, 1977, from the state Correction Department's pre-release center in Shirley, Mass. He had been serving a four-to-five-year term for armed robbery.

He was recaptured in Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 9. Two days later, authorities said, Shamsk told Massachusetts state police in his cell that he had watched Jones kill three women in a Ford van in Los Angeles.

Shamsk said one woman was stabbed, one strangled, and one hit on the head with a blunt object, according to a story in the Boston Herald American. Shamsk said he drove Jones' van during the three murders, the newspaper said, and lie detector tests confirmed parts of his story. Shamsk was brought to Los Angeles March 17.

White neighbor to pay

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal jury has ordered a white neighbor to pay a black couple $63,101 after he was found guilty of trying to stop the couple from buying a home in a Cleveland suburb.

Milton and Emma Sutton were awarded the money Wednesday after the jurors found that Phillip Bloom had violated their civil rights in 1973. The award includes legal fees, moving expenses and punitive damages.

Young lads charged in 'contract'

NEW YORK (AP) — Two boys, aged 13 and 14, have been arrested and charged with accepting a $500 "contract" from a numbers collector to kill another reputed numbers dealer because of a territorial dispute.

Police said the victim, Elijah Smith, 36, was slain by a blast from a sawed-off shotgun in the back of the head at about 1 a.m. Wednesday in the first floor hallway of his apartment building in the Bronx. The shotgun was found nearby.

Police said the boys, who knew Smith, had hidden in a vacant first-floor apartment, waiting for him to come home. When he entered the hallway the boys shot him, police said.

At about 5 p.m. Wednesday, a detective from the Ninth Homicide Zone arrested the 13-year-old at his home. The 14-year-old was arrested at his home a few hours later. Their identities were withheld by police because of their ages.

Both boys were charged with homicide and held at the Spofford Youth House.

Police said Wednesday night they were seeking the unidentified numbers operator who wanted Smith killed because he believed Smith was cutting into his business. Police said Smith handled about $10,000 a week in numbers.

Police said the man who ordered the killing gave each boy a $50 "deposit," the rest of the $500 to be paid when Smith had been killed.

At wit's end

By ERMA BOMBECK
A year ago last December, our college son borrowed $600 from us to buy a second-hand car. We wired the money to him and it cost $3.00.
In January of the next year he wrote us a check for $100 as payment on account. The check bounced.
He called us (reversing the $1.80 phone charges) and said we'd better cover it or he'd look bad at the bank. We wired him $100 to cover the check which cost us another $3.00.
He wrote us back and said, "I had to pay a service charge because you processed the check in the first place so you owe me $5.00."
He came home for the Easter break and said he was crediting his account with $105 because that's what he saved us by not flying. He also subtracted $1.35 as a gas allowance because he drove his sister to the dentist.
In September, he made another payment of $35. However, he called again ($1.80 collect) to report that the $35 depleted his checking account balance to 87 cents and the bank insisted he have a $5.00 minimum and due to the payment we received we owed him $4.13.
In November, he sought our advice on what to do about "our" investment. We could either write the car off as a loss as it no longer ran or put it in running order to keep our investment alive and productive. To be "alive and productive" would cost us $311.00. (Phone consultation $5.40)

In December he called ($2.30) to tell us a tree had thrown itself in front of his right fender and caused him $56 worth of damages. However, he could live with the dent and was sending the $56 check to us from the insurance company as payment on his debt.
The insurance company, however, raised our rates and we were obliged to pay an extra $3.00 per month on the premium.
Last week, he appeared with a ledger and said, "Counting the $400 I saved you in air fare, the $56 from the insurance company, the $15 I spent getting estimates, the $75 worth of aggravation of maintaining my own transportation, the $30 errands I've run for you and the $24 worth of car washes, we'll just consider the debt paid in full. And don't think about the break on the income tax I give you because I'm dependent. After all, you ARE my parents." Somehow, I always imagined we'd feel better when he paid the car off.

Pentagon nixes boob photos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, responding to protests from a Pennsylvania feminist, say "demeaning" pictures of big-breasted women have no place in a magazine for Army reservists.
As a result, editors of "Army Reserve" have been directed to "depict men and women in the same way, professionally," says Robert L. Nelson, an assistant secretary of the Army.
Nelson's directive was announced today by Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa. The senator initiated the protest last September when he passed along concerns voiced by Carol Swaim, executive board member of the Pennsylvania chapter of the National Organization for Women.
Barney Halloran, the magazine's editor, said he thought some of the complaints were justified and that he would comply.
"We talked about it and concluded that if we must in fact be very mid-Victorian and lean toward putting skirts on the furniture... we would do that," he said.
Ms. Swaim first approached Schweiker about the magazine after seeing a copy that had been sent to her son, a reservist.

In a continuing desire to serve our community, we are proud to announce the addition of "Musical Presence" to our facility. Spurs take division

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Champagne dripped from the tip of George Gervin's nose as the San Antonio forward basked in the glow of the Spurs' first National Basketball Association division crown.

The former American Basketball Association team came from behind Thursday night to spill the Cleveland Cavaliers 99-95 behind Gervin's 28 points and deadeye foul shooting in the late going.

That triumph ended Cleveland's three-game winning string and gave the surprising Spurs the undisputed NBA Central Division title.

"Winning is a kick," said the skinny, bearded Gervin as corks popped and champagne splashed freely in the Spurs' dressing room.

"Winning is better than being the number one scorer," explained the NBA's leading scorer. "You can be the number one scorer in the NBA and be on the bottom. But winning is what it's all about."

The Spurs spent nine mostly unsuccessful years in the ABA before entering the older, more established NBA two years ago.

"When we came into the league it was a joke," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, smiling proudly. "We were nothing. But I'm ABA all the way and this is a thrill for me and a thrill for the players."

"We're in the NBA now, but I'm still loyal to the people and the players from the ABA who suffered for so many years. This means a lot of us and to them. We're fortunate to be where we are. You have to play good and be lucky to get here."

Reserve guard Louie Dampier, the last of the original ABA players still active, stood off to the side smiling and calmly sipping his champagne from a paper cup.

"It really feels good," he said. "Being an ABA team and winning the division is a great feeling. Most people picked us for fourth or fifth. We were a dark horse and that's what makes it so satisfying."

Cleveland, which plays the Bulls tonight in Landover, Md., then comes back to take on Detroit here Saturday night, had nothing to celebrate after losing a 12-point halftime lead.

"They're over there cracking champagne and we have a whole season next week," said Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch, whose team stands in the precarious third place in the Central Division and has not yet clinched a playoff berth with six games remaining.

"We just stopped rebounding (in the second half) and that stopped everything else," Fitch added. "But this is no time to have a drop in confidence. They (the Spurs) are a very good team and my guys know we can't afford to let this get us down."

Gervin's two free throws with 2:28 remaining pulled the Spurs into a 90-90 tie. San Antonio built a four-point, 94-90 lead, but Cleveland's Jim Chones scored five straight points to give the Cavaliers a 95-94 edge.

Gervin then put the Spurs ahead to stay on another pair of free throws with 39 seconds remaining.

Elmore Smith led Cleveland with 24 points and Chones added 21 points and 16 rebounds. Larry Kenon had 18 points, including 12 in the fourth period, and Billy Paultz came up with 14 points and 15 rebounds for the Spurs.

Top drivers to race

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — For a few golden hours this weekend, the national speed limit will no longer be 55 tedious miles per hour.

All of the X-band, K-band, multi-band scanning multi-directional, aircraft mounted, electrically calculated radar in the world won't make a bit of difference to Mario Andretti and a few of his friends as they roar through the streets of Long Beach at better than 180 mph.

Andretti and the Formula 1 crowd will impudently ignore all the traffic lights, turn lanes, stop signs, yield, no u-turn, two-way traffic and no right on red signal warnings as they turn a 20-minute drive through two miles of downtown into an 80-second kamikazi flight.

The Long Beach Grand Prix, the only known legalized street racing in the United States this side of Burt Reynolds movies, comes to town for a third year riding a crest of popularity that has buried its history of financial disaster, spectator malaise, resident opposition and media hostility.

Andretti, a genuine Italian-born American folk hero who turned this race into a nationalist rallying point with a scarring come-from-behind victory a year ago, leads an interesting entry list of more than two dozen of the world's top drivers competing for a share of the $400,000 purse. Only the Indianapolis 500 and Daytona 500 pay more.

Practice sessions get underway this morning, as soon as authorities can clear the area of commuters, freeloaders and others. More practice and qualifying to determine the starting field of 22 is scheduled Saturday.

CBS will televise the 160-mile race from start to finish, beginning at 1 p.m. PST.

Shorty died

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Everybody here knew Shorty. For 14 years, he was a fixture around the shady courthouse square in this East Texas town. Folks say Shorty drifted into town about 1949. He didn't talk much. The kids loved him, but truthfully it was a one-sided affair. He died of old age one August morning and the town grieved. The town fathers gave their permission to bury him on the town square beneath his favorite shade tree. Graveside services were attended mostly by his old plaza buddies. A friendly monument company even donated a headstone which is still there. The gravestone's inscription was simple as befitted his life. "Shorty the squirrel, 1948-63."

Model to be message

The Youth Fellowship will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The Worship and Sacrament Committee will meet in the West Room of the church. Choir rehearsal will be Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the sanctuary. Church school for all ages begins at 9:30 a.m. Nursery facilities are available.

'Alleluia' to be sung

The sanctuary choir of Central Baptist Church will present Bill and Gloria Gaither's "Alleluia", at 7 p.m. Sunday in the church sanctuary. Bass, Sara James and Lyndon Fields under the direction of Jason Lee Luck Jr. Main narrator will be Jerry Guinn.

Women's Aglow Fellowship has scheduled a Panhandle retreat for April 14-16 in Amarillo. Guest speakers will be Barbara Ann Chase, past international vice-president and Pernie Dunson, regional director. Woman interested in attending should contact area president, Carol Peet, at 665-4993. Registration must be mailed by Tuesday.

Youth sponsor paper drive

The Youth Council of Central Baptist Church is sponsoring a newspaper drive to raise money for summer trips and activities. Call the church office at 665-1631 or 665-1632 to have someone pick them up or drop them by the church at 513 E. Francis between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. daily.

Family meeting set

The Full Gospel Business Mens Fellowship will meet at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Senior Citizens Center, 500 W. Francis, for a family meeting. Speaker will be Harold Foster with special music by Bryce and Shelia Wormsbaker.

Missionaries will talk Sun.
