Singlaub to quit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outspoken Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub agreed today to retire from the Army after his second public blast at President Carter's policies.

Brig. Gen. Robert Solomon, the Army's information chief, told reporters that Singlaub "agreed to retire" following a meeting that Singlaub had this morning with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff. The Army officials had ordered Singlaub to fly to Washington after they learned that Singlaub in a speech Thursday had blasted Carter's decision not to produce the neutron warhead and had disagreed publicly with the Panama Canal treaties.

Last year, Singlaub was reassigned from a top job in South Korea after criticizing to a newsman Carter's decision to withdraw U.S. ground troops from Korea.

Solomon said Gen. Frederick Kroesen, Singlaub's boss at the Army Forces Command headquarters in Atlanta, had recommended to Alexander and Rogers that Singlaub "be permitted to retire."

The Army spokesman did not say what Alexander and Rogers did after receiving Kroesen's recommendation, but it was evident that all parties had agreed to resolve the situation in that way. Kroesen accompanied Singlaub to the Pentagon.

The much-decorated Singlaub, a combat veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam, is 56 years old and has completed more than 35 years of military service. He is eligible for retirement at three-quarters of his active duty pay for life.

Solomon indicated the date of Singlaub's retirement was not yet definite. Having suffered wounds in battle, he could claim some degree of disability benefits and this normally is determined by a medical board before a military officer actually retires.

Singlaub's remarks on the neutron warhead and the Panama Canal were made Thursday to ROTC cadets at Georgia Tech.

Pampa freshens up, fixes up

Beginning Monday, people throughout the city will be working to make Pampa "fresh as a daisy," said Mrs. Thelma Bray, chairman of the civic improvements committee of the Pampa Chamber of Commerce.

"Pampa — fresh as a daisy," is the theme of the annual clean-up, paint-up, fix-up month this year.

City sanitation department workers will begin the special pickup service Monday. Residents in Ward 1, the area west of Mary Ellen and north of Foster Street will be provided the extra services Monday through Friday.

Dates for the special pickup service in the other wards are May 8-12, Ward 2, east of Mary Ellen and north of Foster; May 15-19, Ward 3, east of Barnes and Cuyler and south of Foster; and May 22-26, Ward 4, west of Barnes-Cuyler and south of Rham — Foster Streets.

During the special trash collection periods, city employees will pick up items such as old hot water heaters, old furniture, and other items as long as they can be handled by one or two men, said City Manager Mack Wofford.

A map of the ward divisions may be found in the "Sun Spectacular" special tab section of Sunday's edition of The News.

Also included in the tab will be information concerning the annual contest sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce aimed at recognizing the city's most attractive homes and yards. There also is a blank for nominating homes for the competition.

Houston officer provided 'throw down'

HOUSTON (AP) — The father of a 17-year old Louisiana youth killed by police in February 1977 wants to return to Houston to face the police officers and former assistant district attorney he says scoffed at his attempts to determine how his son died.

John Webster of Shreveport, who waited outside a hearing room one day last June where a county grand jury no-billed a police officer who said he shot Randall Webster in self defense, learned another officer admitted Thursday in federal court to providing a gun police later planted in his dead son's hand.

"I just want to look in the faces of all the detectives and sergeants who scoffed at me and asked 'what the hell are you doing here' when all I wanted to know was how my son died," Webster said Thursday. "Most of all I want to look into the face of Tom Dunn."

Dunn was the assistant district attorney who brought the shooting case before a Harris County grand jury.

Officer William E. Byrd, 24, pleaded guilty to providing the "throw down" gun later found beside Webster's body. His admission was the first public confirmation that a gun had been planted on Webster's body after he was shot by police following a high-speed chase through southeast Houston Feb. 8, 1977.

Byrd's name did not appear in the original police report as being one of the officers present at the scene.

Meanwhile, The Houston Post reported today that papers signed by Police Chief Harry Caldwell firing three former police officers claim a police sergeant planted a pistol at the scene of a July 1975 police shooting of 18-year-old Billy Keith Jovivies while two other officers looked on.

No officers have been charged with violations of the law in the Jovivies case, but Caldwell said Thursday he would turn the matter over to the district attorney and the Justice Department once his own investigation was completed.

Police told the grand jury that Webster had stolen a van and pulled a gun on them. Two civilian witnesses testified that Webster did not have a gun. Webster also appeared before the grand jury.

"I'd have stood in that hall for a month," said Webster. "I could tell what side I was on. I was the outsider and they (the grand jury) weren't, for the most part, going to believe me."

Dunn, who is no longer with the district attorney's office, said Thursday he had given Webster every courtesy but was in no position to say anything now about the case.

Byrd, who Caldwell said will be fired if he does not resign, waived grand jury action in a plea bargaining agreement with the U.S. attorney's office.

Asst. U.S. Attorney Lupe Salinas said Byrd, who pleaded guilty to concealment of a crime which allegedly involved the deprivation of Webster's civil rights and his resulting death, will be immune from further prosecution in exchange for his testimony in the federal investigation of the incident.

The maximum penalty on charges to which Byrd pleaded guilty is three years in prison and a $500 fine.

Norval W. Holloway Jr., the officer Byrd testified placed the gun in Webster's hand, and Patrolman Danny Mays, who told the grand jury he shot the youth in self-defense, are both still on active duty although Mays has a desk job.

Officer John T. Olin, 27, has been granted immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation with the federal investigation. Olin and officer James A. Estes, 28, have been relieved of duty in connection with the case.

Caldwell, who was not chief when the shooting occurred, said Thursday he would take disciplinary action against all officers involved in the Webster case as soon as the federal investigation is completed.

Caldwell fired Sgt. Walter

Plaster and officers John S. White and Clarence Burkett Wednesday in connection with the Jovivies killing.

A county grand jury had no-billed the officers in connection with that shooting, and medical examiners ruled Jovivies' death justifiable homicide.

Jovivies' parents and a girlfriend who was in the car when the youth was shot all said at the time he did not own a gun.

According to the Post, the dismissal papers said after Plaster arrived at the scene of the shooting he searched Jovivies' car and found no weapon or cartridge hulls.

"Plaster then spoke with officer J.S. White who, along with his partner, officer C.M. Burkett, had been the chase," the papers say.

The papers claim White took a pistol from the trunk of his police car and handed it to Plaster who then placed it with several live rounds in the Jovivies vehicle.

Carter eyes gas rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A standby gasoline rationing plan expected to be announced next week by the Carter administration would distribute fuel in a national emergency based on the number of cars a business or family owns, congressional sources say.

Rationing is not being advocated by the administration at this time. However, a 1975 law requires a rationing plan to be on hand in the event of a national energy emergency.

Under the proposal, the more cars an individual, family or business owned, the more coupons that could be obtained. The plan does not spell out how much gasoline would be allotted for each car, other than to say the car's fuel economy would be a factor.

Energy Department officials recently briefed Senate staff members on the plan. A summary copy of the plan was obtained by Associated Press Radio.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger has frequently said the administration views rationing as an unattractive option — one that would be considered only in an emergency or as a last resort.

The Carter plan differs markedly from one submitted by former President Ford in January 1977, shortly before he left office. It would have based gasoline coupon allotments on the number of drivers licenses in a family.

A memo prepared by Max Friedersdorf, director of the Senate Republican Policy Committee, questioned the fairness of the Carter plan.

"If you can afford to own several cars, does that mean you should be allocated more gasoline during a shortage than someone who may be able to afford only one car?" he asked.

His memo also said that persons might buy old junk cars just to enable them to purchase more gasoline. But Friedersdorf conceded cheating could be a problem under the Ford plan, too.

Once Carter's plan is formally submitted, Congress must act on it within 60 days. If he — or a future president — decides to activate the plan, either house of Congress has 15 days in which to disapprove it.

Through a bureaucratic quirk in the Senate, Ford's rationing plan was never formally received on Capitol Hill and the 60-day period never began. Carter withdrew the Ford plan, and the administration has been working on its own version ever since.

Meanwhile, the president's troubled energy program hit more rough going in Congress.

In what was billed as a protest vote, the House energy and power subcommittee agreed 8-1 on Thursday to block a $13 billion bill needed to keep the Energy Department functioning during the upcoming fiscal year.

And, the Senate Finance Committee voted 11-6 on Thursday to go on record against presidential imposition of a tariff on oil imports as an alternative to the proposed crude oil tax.

The White House has suggested it might impose such a tariff if Congress fails to pass the tax.

Injured man satisfactory in HP hospital

A Panhandle man who was admitted to the emergency room of Highland General Hospital Thursday following an industrial accident was in satisfactory condition today at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

The man, Lynn Lynch, age and address unknown, reportedly had leg fractures and severe lacerations. He was transferred to Amarillo Thursday at 1 p.m.

Details were not available to the News at press time, but Lynch was reported injured while working with equipment belonging to Leanco Bearing Co.

Inflation fighters gather

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is asking both executives and workers to make sacrifices as it tries to determine if inflation is getting worse.

After rising an average of 0.5 percent each month last year, consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in January and 0.6 percent in February. The Labor Department was releasing March price figures today.

The worsening inflation prompted President Carter on April 11 to announce a ceiling on federal pay increases and a plan to slow the government's contribution to inflation. He also said he would try to per-suaide unions and businesses to hold down their own pay increases.

Presidential aide Robert S. Strauss, who was named to head the anti-inflation program, said Wednesday he is asking "each American to insure that he makes some contribution to lowering inflation rates this year."

As one step, he asked businessmen to hold down their own pay increases. And Barry Bosworth, director of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, said inflation cannot be checked soon unless big labor unions hold back their demands.

Early bird gets the . . . delay

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Paul Waliga found an unexpected nest egg in his tool shed — half a dozen bluejay chicks who had hatched in a nest in a bag full of financial records. They won him a delay of a tax audit.

"Well, I looked in and saw these twigs and everything. I was getting ready to throw them all out when I looked a little closer and saw all these little heads sticking out. This is really something. I feel like a grandfather," Waliga said.

But good feelings aside, Waliga had a date with an IRS auditor to go over his 1976 tax return May 12.

"If the IRS wants to come out and evict them, that's up to them," Waliga said.

But there wasn't so much as a peep from IRS officials, who Waliga said found the whole story quite amusing.

Waliga said when he explained his dilemma to an IRS secretary, she started laughing and was still laughing when she transferred the call to auditor Eric Roberts, who also laughed until he agreed to reschedule the audit for late May.

That should give the birds enough time to leave, according to a Florida State University ornithologist, Dr. Frances James.

"It's 10 or 12 days in the egg stage, two weeks that they're fed by their parents and then they blast off," James said.

Besides a lesson from Mother Nature, Waliga said he learned something else from the experience.

"It's good to be able to put the IRS off for a while," he said. "I'm still going to put my receipts out here. I may even put some bird food in them."

Keep the door closed

The three years of scheduled federal loans to New York City will end June 30. By then the government will have lent $2.3 billion in all. Seasonal financing is what this was originally called — based on the idea that the city had only a temporary cash flow problem.

But New York City officials again have been banging on the U.S. Treasury door, asking for federal guarantees of long-term bonds they would like to sell. This exposes the seasonal financing scheme as pure pretense. New York has had much more than a cash flow problem all along.

The immediate problem is the need for credit, which gross mismanagement has forfeited. The city is simply not credit-worthy. The budget deficit is at least $1 billion and even larger budget deficits are in the offing. New York's budget remains in this perpetually red condition because city politicians simply refuse to make hard political decisions, like being tough about unreasonable wage demands and paring down municipal services.

These root causes are plain to see, yet the Carter administration proposes that American taxpayers guarantee some $2 billion in New York bonds. And who does Washington suggest as the lucky purchasers of these bonds? The city's employees, that's who, through their pension funds. But the employees aren't fools; already they've announced they're not buying.

The very idea of the federal government guaranteeing city bonds is a silly subterfuge to have Washington bail out a bankrupt municipality. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, the architect of the administration's proposal, might as well propose an outright grant of $2 billion to the city.

Meanwhile, New York City officials have been engaging in a little sly blackmail, warning the nation that if the city government is permitted to go under, it will drag down some important U.S. financial institutions in a national chain reaction of disastrous proportions.

In reality, it is the other way around. The more likely way to hard times for the nation is through a federal bail-out of New York City. This will open a door that cannot be closed. Other mismanaged cities will get the message. They will cease to worry about the consequences of their politically motivated excesses. They can assume they, too, can successfully beg in Washington.

Some appreciation for unwashed autos

By THOM MARSHALL
Pampa News Co-Editor

I was out in the front yard the other day, playing another round in a long-running sort of mumblety-peg game with the dandelions — they are winning, by the way — and I happened to glance over to a neighbor's driveway.

I jumped up and ran crying aloud into the house.

"Come quick," I hollered at the co-ed. "You aren't going to believe this."

She came bounding out the front door, eyes wide, alert and ready for some exciting sight.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Don't stare at him," I said, but look over at Whatshisname's driveway. He's watering his car. You don't reckon he thinks it'll grow? Wonder why he didn't just buy a bigger one to start with instead of the little foreign job? Surely he doesn't think watering it will work."

"Why he's not WATERING his car, darling," the co-ed explained to me in a patient and understanding tone. "He's WASHING it."

(Editor's note: Readers may notice my use of "Whatshisname" instead of using the neighbor's proper appellation. That is for my own protection. Also, folks who live within a couple of hundred yards of our house may not remember the co-ed's tone as patient and understanding and they may remember hearing me referred to as something other than "darling." My description of the event and the substitution of terms of endearment are perfectly legal. I have a valid poetic license.)

"What do you mean, 'washing'?" I asked. "Why would somebody wash a car? Cars don't get B.O."

"No, darling," (remember the poetic license) she explained. "But they do get dirty. Why, you can just look at our cars there. See the difference between them and Whatshisname's."

Enough of this simple drive. I know people wash cars. I've even done it myself, though recollection of the most recent occurrence of same is quite dim. But I don't believe in it.

To each his own. Some look upon a clean car as a matter of pride. They would be embarrassed to go about in a dirty auto same as they would in dirty clothes or if they, themselves, were unbathed.

And that's fine. For them. But as for me, my friends, I look upon a car as a kind of scrapbook. Bugs on the front grill remind me of last summer's trip to Colorado when we passed through a stretch of country heavily infested with grasshoppers.

Bits of mud still clinging to the tire well areas remind me of the Panhandle country's last appreciable moisture. (And with this clue, you should really be getting some idea as to how long it has been since our vehicles have been bathed.)

The practice extends to the interiors of the conveyances. I've got such a collection of ticket stubs and nametags and such in the glove compartments... and the trunks — there's still some walnut wood in one of them that was put in there back on the Kansas farm where the co-ed's folks live. We haven't been back there to visit in about two years.

If more than two people ride in either of the vehicles, the back seat must first be cleared of old papers and dusted with one of the rags kept handily stuffed under each of the front seats.

"Oh, let's just take our car," prospective passengers generally offer. It can be quite a fuel-saving device, a cluttered and dusty backseat.

And as for watering the car's exterior with any regularity, that H2O is, after all, quite a precious commodity in this portion of geography.

It's like I was telling the co-ed, we should do what we can to conserve water. And besides, a person goes to pouring that Lake Meredith variety of wetness around on one of those metal car bodies and a severe case of rust could set in.

Controls stifle growth

Full employment is a major goal of the Carter Administration, so the president has said, and if that means more people working at productive jobs — rather than increasing the payroll of government make-work programs — it is a commendable policy.

Productive jobs must come from private industry, however, and that being the case, the administration can best achieve its goal only by doing whatever it can to encourage business expansion.

Obviously, it is not doing that.

In a poll of business decision-makers conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the Gallup Economic Survey, more than half of the 1,200 respondents said they expect the government to do a "poor job" over the next two years in fighting inflation and unemployment.

In the same survey, businessmen reported that the greatest obstacle in running a profitable business was government and its persistent flood of stultifying regulations.

It is not only the chronic energy sapping resulting from attempts to comply with government edicts that bothers business. The increasing costs of conforming result in less capital for business expansion. Close to 95 percent of the business leaders responding to the poll noted that compliance with government regulations costs more in employe time and company funds than it did two years ago, and 72 percent of them said it costs "much more."

It is surprising to find that the regulations given so much publicity — those involving environmental and employee health and safety regulations — are not, according to the poll, the most serious restraints. A catch-all list termed "other government regulations" took the lead.

If private industry has no confidence in government programs designed to curb inflation and unemployment, the resulting pessimism does not provide an economic climate encouraging to prosperity.

The poll of the private industry decision-makers was the first by the chamber and Gallup. Their major conclusion, based on the poll, was that the ability of private industry to operate profitably is declining, due in large part to the government's economic policies.

Only those who favor government expansion can take heart from that conclusion.

exchange markets; and then the magic wore off. And the polls believe not only in magical cures but in mythical causes, the problem of the dollar is caused by "the Arab sheiks" and the new high oil prices.

But ten years ago, long before the "oil crisis," an editor of NR wrote a book, "Death of the Dollar," prophesying exactly the current chain of events. Correct prophecy suggests correct analysis (ancient non-magical rule in experimental science). Then, as now, analysis says: dollar will stagger toward ultimate collapse (and world depression) unless U.S. reverses trends of inflation, union-induced inefficiency, governmental hobbles on enterprise, paying for non-work, and tax penalties on investment and honest labor.

We are about $600 billion beyond the abracadabra point.

the absence of such an emergency, one must assume that the chief executive is blissfully aware of the control which taxes, regulations and import restriction exert over prices and wages.

And, finally, still confusing inflation, the cause, with prices, the effect, the President proceeded to shift the monkey of inflation from the government's back to the backs of workers and the business community. Said Mr. Carter: "Let me be blunt about this point. I am asking American workers to follow the example of federal workers and accept a lower rate of wage increase. In return," he continued, "they have a right to expect a comparable restraint in price increases for the goods and services they buy."

As an example, The President said, he would seek to limit federal pay raises to about 5.5 percent this year.

That, mind you, after having given his White House staff a pay boost of up to 25 percent in March of last year and another pay hike of 7.5 percent in November.

Some "example," that! Some "inflation fighter," he!

The truth about taxation

By Anthony Harrigan

At this time of year, Americans are especially mindful of oppressive taxation. They are experiencing considerable anguish as they realize what federal and state governments are taking from them in the way of income tax.

Public anger against oppressive taxation is on the rise. Undoubtedly, many citizens are indignant when they hear government officials, such as Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal, talk about tax "loopholes." Mr. Blumenthal and other officials speak as though government had a right to the incomes of private citizens.

What's needed are leaders of tax protests. Iowa is a state with an outspoken and energetic tax protester. As the Des Moines Register said recently a lot of people complain about taxes but "few ever go to the lengths that Robert Hengerer has."

Mr. Hengerer, a writer for a Davenport advertising agency, is the founder of a non-profit educational foundation, Truth About Taxation Inc. It endeavors to persuade businesses, large and small, to post signs in their stores and stick tags on their products of Truth About Taxation in every state in the nation. In this election year, politicians will be promoting all sorts of goodies for the public. One can be sure that they won't spell out the new taxes necessary to provide that government "benefits."

Mr. Hengerer rightly declares that the American consumer, "who is now paying more than $200 billion a year in hidden taxes and government-mandated business costs, is entitled to know how and how much he is being taxed when he buys anything." This sum, he notes, "amounts to an average tax of about $910 per year for every man, woman and child, regardless of their income or economic status."

Exposing the cruel tax burden on the American people is a socially useful crusade in which many citizens may want to join. The address of Truth About Taxation is P. O. Box 923, Davenport, Iowa 52805. More power to Mr. Hengerer and his associates.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, April 28, the 118th day of 1978. There are 247 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1952, war with Japan officially ended as a treaty which had been signed by the United States and 47 other nations went into effect.

In 1220, work was begun on Salisbury Cathedral in England.

In 1788, Maryland entered the Union as the seventh state.

In 1789, the mutinous crew of the British ship, Bounty, set Captain William Bligh and 18 sailors adrift in a launch in the South Pacific.

In 1876, Britain's Queen Victoria was declared Empress of India.

In 1945, in World War II, Italian dictator Benito Mussolini and his mistress were captured and executed near Lake Como as they tried to escape to Switzerland.

In 1965, U.S. Marines were ordered to land in the Dominican Republic during a revolution.

Ten years ago: Police in Tokyo restored order after 5,000 people demonstrated for the return of Okinawa to Japan and an end to the Vietnam War.

Today's birthday: Playwright Robert Anderson is 61.

The divorced executive and his career

Sylvia Porter

A $100,000-a-year executive found his career at a giant blue-chip company just about ended when he told his wife he wanted a divorce. She immediately enlisted the wives of his superiors to convince their husbands that he was not worthy of the company's confidence. She did this even though at stake was not only his career but also his subsequent alimony payments to her.

Another divorced executive who was uncomfortable with his life at an old-line company said he took a new position paying $90,000 a year for which he was recruited by an executive recruiting firm only after he checked and discovered that the new company president was himself divorced. This made the climate more comfortable.

One divorced wife said to her then-executive husband, "I can compete with any woman, but not with your career."

"At least 50 percent of the executives we screen for client assignments are divorced or separated," says O. William Battaglia, head of Battaglia, Lotz & Associates, a New York-based executive recruiting firm. "The stigma of the divorced man has practically disappeared." Battaglia admits there are still a few very conservative companies that silently subscribe to the theory that if "a man can't manage his own affairs, how can he handle company business?" But attitudes have changed dramatically in this area.

Divorce has long been accepted in U.S. society and, as always, this cultural change has followed into the business fabric.

What is the prime advantage of being a single, highly-paid executive in a big company (earning on average between $55,000 and $75,000 a year)?

Recognition by top management that you are able to move quickly in a given situation. As a single executive, you are considered unusually hard-working, ambitious, flexible. If there's a key problem that needs instantaneous action in an out-of-town branch, the single man often can move right in and tackle it until it's solved.

"Of course, this very quick and deep commitment to work might mean he's a workaholic, which could have contributed to the breakup of his marriage," Battaglia points out. "Ironically, this characteristic might also have contributed to his job success."

Workaholics aren't necessarily better executives, but they usually do get a lot of work done. "They can drive their subordinates crazy, just as they probably did their wives and kids," he adds.

And the worst disadvantage of being divorced or single? The view (still held by some, although clearly obsolete) that a single man "doesn't need as much money as his married counterpart, or that he doesn't need as much of a raise in salary." This attitude, Battaglia concedes, is difficult to fight.

As for the problems of married men as compared with singles, both in general have much the same. An unhappy single man is no better a manager than an unhappy married man. Nor is a happily married man a better manager than a happily single person. And the single man is not necessarily a heavier drinker than his married counterpart, more of a woman-chaser or more conservative or radical in his business practices.

If you're changing jobs or searching for new opportunities and if you're divorced or single, some key guides for you are:

Don't volunteer your marital status. But if asked, answer the question honestly and openly.

Be direct and brief about your current status.

Don't volunteer why you got divorced. It's no one's business but yours.

Don't criticize your former wife or complain about excessive alimony or other payments.

Express concern about the welfare of your children, and of your former wife, too.

If you plan to remarry, let that be known in advance.

A provocative finding is that most divorced executives remarry much sooner than expected. Is it that company life is still much more comfortable for a married man than a single person? Or do the frustrations of corporate life make the need for a comfortable home environment all the more imperative?

And what about divorced women executives? "We don't come across them often," says Battaglia, "so really can't say." (But I can. The pros, cons, and problems are the same for women as for men.)

Uranium boom returns to Elliot Lake

EDITOR'S NOTE — Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is rising, traffic's snarling and workers worry about cancer. Uranium is being mined once again. And the folks who've been through the ups and downs before prefer boom to bust.

By DAVID GERSOVITZ
Canadian Press Writer
ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (AP) — A boom town in the 50s, a bust in the 60s, Elliot Lake is once again basking in uranium prosperity. Some citizens worry it won't last. Others worry it'll last too long.

"There's a smell of money in the air," one citizen says happily. But there's also uneasiness, among miners especially, about greater hazards that expanded mining may bring — increased radiation, for one thing.

The three hotels in town are usually booked full, as are all the rental car services. Most of the visitors are consultants, contractors, engineers and skilled tradesmen associated with the boom brought on by expanded uranium mining.

Elliot Lake — with its modern homes, wide, clean streets, hospital, theater, community center and recreation facilities — is an oasis of prosperity in a troubled part of Ontario. Just 100 miles to the east, at Sudbury, 4,000 nickel miners are being laid off and other resource-based industries in the rolling hills north of Lake Huron have fallen on hard times.

But uranium prosperity has its complications.

Radioactive waste from the mines has increased fivefold, and environmentalists warn that things could get worse. Miners worry about radon gas — a radioactive, cancer-causing element — and silica dust in the mines. Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is going up and traffic's getting worse.

And finally, people worry that the money will dry up again.

The Latin grammarian Terentianus Maurus wrote his treatise "De Litteris, de Syllabis et de Metris," ("On Letters, Syllables and Meters") in the second or third century A.D. The volume, written entirely in verse, was discovered in 1493 at Bobbio and was first printed in 1497.

Elliot Lake was founded in the 1950s, when the United States discovered it needed $1 billion of Canadian uranium to expand its nuclear arsenal. But affluence lasted barely five years. In 1960, the market for uranium began to sour and the population dropped to 6,000 from 25,000.

In 1973, the Arab oil embargo led to an increasing demand for uranium oxide. In five years, the price of uranium has gone from $6 to $40 a pound, and Rio Algom Ltd. and Denison Mines Ltd., who own the mines here, have contracts stretching into the next century.

About 300 men worked the mines at Denison in 1975. Now there are nearly 1,000. By the time expansion is complete, the figure may be 3,000. Rio Algom will double its 1,200-man work force by 1980 and Preston Mines Ltd., a Rio Algom subsidiary, will create 1,000 jobs by reviving its Stanleih operation, dormant since the 1960s. Another 1,000 men work on the expansion and housing.

All of which makes Elliot Lake a magnet. The population is 12,000 and government projections say it may reach 30,000 by the 1990s.

"People are coming in every week to set up dental clinics, jeans shops, pizza parlors, taverns, restaurants," says Don McKay, manager of a local real estate office.

The mining firms recruit across Canada for experienced miners, attracting them with subsidized housing. The mines own houses and apartments and are building hundreds more to rent to employees at bargain prices.

But newcomers who don't work for the mines must fight for the few vacant apartments with rents that start at $200 for a basement flat. Single-family houses, which went begging during the back years, now go for three or four times their original value.

Some families live in trailers, hoping the housing supply will catch up with demand, and there are people who say they know of 10 men sharing a basement. While the companies have built about 700 subsidized units in a new subdivision, the province won't let people move in until each unit passes a special test for radon gas, minute quantities of which were found seeping into basements. The companies are installing special ventilation to reduce the hazard.

With the boom, too, thefts and burglaries have soared. But the town's 13-man police force can't grow fast enough to keep up with the crime rate because Chief Nick Cooke has trouble finding housing for new officers.

"This town is full of transients, some with a criminal past," says Cpl. Ted Hydman of the six-member Ontario Provincial Police detachment. "They get out of stir, they hear there is soe work at Elliot Lake, so they come here and rip off some of the contractors and rip off some houses."

But the biggest problems, most agree, are side effects of the uranium. Homer Seguin, staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America, thinks residents will be paying a price for prosperity long after the ore runs out.

Seguin contends that 20 years of mining uranium have already caused serious damage to the environment, and also accuses the companies of ignoring safety and environmental standards to cut costs and boost production. And he says environmental considerations are taking a back seat to mining company needs in government plans.

Company spokesmen say they are doing everything possible to reduce radioactivity and protect the environment and that pollution has been reduced to a minimum. But Seguin wants all pollution eliminated.

"For example, there's radium in my drinking water at home," he says. "Now they say it's within provincial standards, and I guess it is, but it's pollution, it's cumulative."

But Mike Quinn, who heads a group sent by Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board to assess the hazards, puts it this way: "You have to consider what is practical. We know we can't get the radon level down to zero... every part of this region has radon, some in lower amounts some in higher amounts. So the question is, where is the trade-off point? As far as I'm concerned, we haven't reached the point with the people of Elliot Lake where we are trading off their health."

One Elliot Lake resident who knows the problems first hand is Gus Frobel, who worked in the mines 2 years ago and lost a lung to cancer.

"I was a hidden victim," says Frobel, 53. "When a policeman dies it makes headlines, but when a uranium miner dies nobody cares." A 1976 report by an Ontario royal commission into mining health and safety found 8.9 percent of Elliot Lake miners surveyed had silicosis or symptoms of it.

The commission estimated the number of lung-cancer cases from 1955 to 1974 at 36, more than twice the average for the country. James Ham, the report's author, said his estimate was conservative.

Is it all worth it? Mayor Roger Taylor worries a little — "It's in the back of my mind" — that the boom could disintegrate as it did before. But overall, he says, the mining is a plus.

"The whole of the country is in a terrible state," he says. "If you say we're not going to get the ore or as long as there is any pollution, you might as well say that Canada as a nation is finished."

None escape scaffold alive

WILLOW ISLAND, W.Va. (AP) — Witnesses said it looked like an apple being peeled, watching a skeleton of scaffolding drop away from the inside of a huge tower and break off a ring of concrete, taking 51 men screaming to their deaths 170 feet below.

George Pepper was 200 feet from the tower when he heard something "that sounded like a big train roaring by."

"The next thing I saw was a pile of dust. All I could see was heads burst up, legs out of socket, arms scattered around. It was just a mangled-up, God-forsaken mess. I'll see that scene the rest of my life," he said.

The accident occurred Thursday as workers prepared to make the 29th of 82 concrete pours on a giant cooling tower being built at a $680 million coal-fired electrical generating plant overlooking the Ohio River here.

Federal inspectors moved in today to investigate reports of faulty scaffolding and the possibility that the huge catwalk on which the men worked was moored in still-wet concrete.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said 13 inspections of the Pleasants Power Station site since 1973 had revealed "numerous violations, both serious and non-serious," but he said he did not know what they were or whether they involved scaffolding.

OSHA spokesman James Foster said the most recent inspection was a year ago and that the operations of Research Cottrell Inc., the Bound Brook, N.J., subcontractor building the tower, had never been inspected.

But Thomas Buontane, director of corporate communications for the company, said the scaffold was inspected daily. He said it was "a complete mystery how this could happen... It's impossible."

"I heard a loud roar, rumbling and rumbling," said Yales

Seils, an asbestos worker. "I looked up and saw the top of the cooling tower fall inside and the scaffolding peel away. You could see the men running ahead of it as it was peeling. It just went faster and faster and overtook them."

Rescuers, using cranes to untangle the debris, found no signs of life among the tons of twisted metal, splintered wooden planks and rope safety net. "If they lived through the fall, they didn't have a chance in that stuff," said one witness.

"There wasn't a sound coming from it," said Bill Hess, a 22-year-old laborer. "They were torn up so bad I couldn't tell looking at them if any of my friends had been killed."

Lee Steele, a retired laborer suffering from cancer, lost four sons, a brother, two brothers-in-law and three nephews. Steele was one of dozens of people who waited in a little white steepled church near the temporary morgue set up in a firehouse in nearby Belmont, W.Va. Names of the victims were called out one by one.

The cooling tower is one of two under construction for Monongahela Power Co., which serves 22,000 customers in West Virginia and southeastern Ohio. Workers had poured a four-foot layer of concrete Wednesday and were working on the next layer Thursday when the collapse occurred about 10 a.m., Monongahela spokesman Lyle Corder said.

"As it was being poured today, the 28th (layer) disintegrated and the bolts that were holding the scaffolding pulled loose away from it," he said.

John Peppier, a laborer standing on the ground in the middle of the tower when the disaster occurred, described what happened next:

"The first I heard was concrete falling. I had just sent a basket (bucket of concrete) up. I looked over my left shoulder and I could see it falling. I could see people falling through the air and everything falling." Another witness said the workers "knew what was happening but there wasn't anything they could do about it."

Doughten in California to arrange band trip

Jeff Doughten, director of the Pride of Pampa High School Band is in California today, making final arrangements for the band's trip to Pasadena to march in the 1979 New Year's Day Tournament of Roses Parade.

Doughten left Thursday morning and will return Sunday. While in California, he was to secure motel accommodations for the group, arrange for air transportation and set up the various tours — Disneyland, Universal Studios, and Knotts Berry Farm. He also was to make arrangements for meals.

The band had returned from a trip to Kansas City only a couple of days before Doughten left for California, but he told The News it was the only time he had to make the necessary arrangements since he is under contract to judge a band contest in Ireland this summer.

Arthur D. Welsh, president of the Tournament of Roses Association, will be in Pampa on Tuesday, the final stop of a tour for Welsh which includes visits in Florida, Indiana, Missouri and Texas.

Purpose of the visit will be for Welsh to answer questions about the annual celebration and to preview bands to march in the 1979 edition of the parade.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Widely scattered thunderstorms were expected across most of the state today.

Forecasters warned of the possibility of severe thunderstorms in Northeast Texas during the afternoon and evening. Forecasts called for fair skies in West Texas and partly cloudy skies over the remainder of the state.

Highs were expected to be mostly in the 80s with a few readings reaching the 90s in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas.

Amarillo had the only rainfall during the night, but only a trace was reported. Fog was reported early today in the areas around Austin and Victoria.

Early morning temperatures ranged from near 50 in the Panhandle and Northeast Texas to the upper 80s in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extremes ranged from 46 at Lufkin to 70 at El Paso.

Some early morning readings included 60 at Amarillo, 59 at Wichita Falls, 60 at Texarkana, 55 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 57 at Austin, 49 at Houston, 64 at Corpus Christi, 69 at Brownsville, 67 at Del Rio, 64 at San Angelo and 62 at Lubbock.

Red Brigades called off attack

ROME (AP) — The Red Brigades planned a widespread "terrifying" attack 24 hours after it kidnapped Aldo Moro to "bring the country to its knees," but the leaders of the terrorist army called it off, the conservative newspaper Il Tempo reported today.

Il Tempo said the disclosure came from Cristoforo Piancone, 28, a Red Brigades member who was wounded and captured after the ambush of a prison guard in Turin April 11. He was quoted as saying, in what it called an "exclusive dialogue" from his hospital bed.

"In connection with Moro's kidnapping, 24 hours later we should have carried out a subversive plan aimed at bringing the country to its knees, something terrifying... But those at the top level in the organization stopped it because it was felt to be politically inopportune at the time."

Il Tempo said Piancone did not elaborate on the plan. But it said he gave this detailed description of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist organization, which kidnapped Moro, the president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, on March 16.

"We are 1,500 all told, divided in four local squads — one independent from the other, and based in Milan, Genoa, Turin and Rome — 1,500 persons dedicated to a revolutionary cause and for whom death is not an obstacle, committed to killing and aware of the risk of being killed."

The members are recruited from all social classes, but most of them are young workers and students. Training may take several years.

"When one is asked whether he wants to join the Red Brigades, his reply must be satisfactory beyond any doubt, and the organization takes no risks."

"After a period of small actions, car thefts and the like, one goes on to real and true terrorist training for about one year and almost always outside Italy."

Il Tempo said Piancone did not locate the foreign training sites. Other newspaper reports have mentioned Palestinian guerrilla camps, Cuba, Czechoslovakia and Angola. The New York Times reported today that the U.S. government is particularly interested in reports that Czechoslovakia's Communist party provided money, arms and training for the Italian terrorists.

"What you call dens are real and true military barracks to us." Each member gets $275 a month for food, transport, newspapers and similar expenses, while "the organization" takes care of lodging, clothing and weapons.

Two Texas labor leaders indicted in manpower

By LEE JONES
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — District Attorney Ronald Earle says the indictment of South Texas labor leaders Clarence and Don Gray marks the close of his three-month investigation into state manpower funding agencies.

The Travis County Grand Jury named them Thursday in an indictment alleging conspiracy to steal more than $10,000 from the state of Texas.

"This represents the conclusion of a three-month investigation of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs (GOMA) and the Texas Department of Community Affairs (TDCA)," Earle said in a statement.

"No more state indictments are anticipated at this time," he said.

The probe was carried out by

Earle's office, with help from the attorney general's office and investigators hired by Gov. Dolph Briscoe — including former District Attorney Robert O. Smith.

Smith received more than $14,000 for his efforts, at $100 an hour.

The Gray brothers also face indictments growing out of a court of inquiry into alleged misuse of federal manpower money conducted by State District Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville.

Don Gray heads Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823 in Harlingen. Clarence Gray ran the manpower program started in the union's name and funded with federal money flowed through GOMA and TDCA.

Steve Brittain, who headed Earle's task force, said the indictment "involves the fact the (job training) contract was written between Local 823 and TDCA but the union didn't authorize the Grays to contract on their behalf and never received any money."

"In effect, we've alleged a misappropriation of state funds in excess of $10,000. It was really $129,000," Brittain said.

He said $129,000 in state checks were deposited in the bank account of South Texas Building Trades Education Services, Inc., rather than in that of the union local.

Last year, the Grays had the manpower training contract with TDCA changed from the union local to South Texas Building Trades.

Earle said nothing more had turned up that could result in prosecution arising from the manpower scandal that has been a major issue of this year's Democratic contest for governor.

"We've run down all the information accumulated in the investigation," he said.

When asked whether any culpability had been found against any officials of TDCA, which approved, monitored and renewed the Gray brothers' job training program, Brittain replied, "No."

He said suspended GOMA officials Rogelio Perez and Joaquin Rodriguez of GOMA gave statements to the district attorney's task force.

Both officials were named in bench warrants from Brownsville alleging forgery of a GOMA evaluator's report on the Gray brothers' operation, but no indictments were returned by the Travis County Grand Jury.

"They answered the questions we asked them," was all Brittain would say concerning the forgery allegations.

Bodies reported sprawled on streets of New Delhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More fighting was reported today in Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, despite broadcast claims that rebel troops led by an air force commander had "eliminated" President Mohammed Daoud.

Afghanistan's borders and airports closed, and all commercial communication channels were cut. But Western diplomats in New Delhi said their embassies in Kabul reported about 200 bodies were seen in the streets.

There was no report on the situation in the important military centers of Kandhar and Harat, and one diplomat commented: "To seize Kabul is not to seize Afghanistan. Resistance in the form of guerrilla warfare could continue for months."

The rebels led by Lt. Gen. Dagarwal Abdul Qadir launched the coup Thursday with tanks and jet fighters, ringing key government buildings and capturing the Defense Ministry, the diplomats said.

Fierce fighting raged through the night in sections of the city where two army divisions are based, the sources reported. By sunrise it had subsided somewhat but small-arms fire could still be heard.

Meanwhile, the air force's Soviet Su-7 fighters fired rockets down Darulaman Road in the center of the city toward the Justice Ministry and the headquarters of the army central corps. The informants said the planes encountered heavy anti-aircraft fire, and one plane was shot down.

A heavy pall of smoke hung over the city of 500,000, and no civilians were seen out of doors, the sources said. Rebel troops surrounded some Western embassies and refused to permit diplomats to leave their compounds.

In Washington, the State Department said there are about 1,300 Americans in Kabul, and it had no reports that any of them had been injured.

Diplomats in New Delhi had no concrete information on the fate of the 69-year-old president, who took over the government in a military coup in 1973, or his family. But the news announced on Radio Afghanistan today declared: "Daoud is gone forever. Daoud has been eliminated forever by the will of the people of Afghanistan."

Unconfirmed reports said the former royal palace in which the president lived had been reduced to rubble by fire from 50 tanks.

A broadcast said the new Military Revolutionary Council abolished the 1977 constitution and ordered top military officers to report to the Defense Ministry and "be punished by military law."

Abdul Qadir said in an earlier broadcast that the new government will follow a foreign policy of "strict" non-alignment, but diplomats in Delhi refused to speculate on the political orientation of the Military Revolutionary Council.

Surrounded by the Soviet Union, Pakistan and Iran, landlocked Afghanistan has traditional close ties with its big Communist neighbor, and the Soviet Union is its major trading partner. But it also receives aid from the United States.

An Afghan diplomat in New Delhi said Abdul Qadir is about 40 and took part in Daoud's 1973 coup. At that time he commanded an air base.

Authors to be honored Sat. in Perryton

An autograph party honoring John Erickson, writer, and Bill Elizey, photographer, will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at Bell's Books 400 S. Main in Perryton.

"Through Time and The Valley" is a record of their trek 12 years ago.

They left Plemons on horseback to follow the Canadian River through the Panhandle to Canadian. The trip covered 140 miles and took 15 days. Elizey collected more than 1000 color transparencies and Erickson conducted more than 100 personal interviews.

Erickson is a graduate of the University of Texas and Harvard Divinity School. He grew up in Perryton and now manages a ranch in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

Elizey works on the LZ Ranch and is a freelance photographer.

Bloodied climber wants burgers

By BILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — Their hands bloody, their bodies exhausted, mountain climbers George Willig and Steve Matous celebrated their conquest of Angels Landing with meals to order.

It was not the first time a Willig climb was witnessed by a crowd. Last May 26, he scampered up New York's 110-story World Trade Center and gained instant fame.

Willig fell when the rock ledge he was standing on gave way at about 1,350 feet up. He fell straight down, turned head over heels, and was caught by an anchored rope held by Matous.

It appeared Willig struck his head as he was jerked against the cliff face by the sudden stop.

"Just knocked the wind out of me," he said a second or two later. "I'm OK." He resumed climbing within minutes.

About two hours earlier, Willig had slipped but caught himself during a free climb. "I almost bought it," he said.

"Bought the ranch, eh?" replied Matous.

"Man, I almost died," Willig said.

Willig and long-time friend Matous, 23, a professional guide now living in Boulder, Colo., were paid by ABC-TV, which sponsored the climb for its "Wide World of Sports."

Portions of the climb were telecast live — including Willig's dramatic fall — on Saturday and Sunday. The network also extended its Sunday show to televise the two climbers reaching the top.

That raised questions about

ABC's involvement, such as whether the network controlled the schedule so the climbers would reach the top during live coverage.

Matous's brother, Ron, noted that the climbers risked a night climb — they went about 200 feet between 7 p.m. and 1 a.m. Saturday night — because they "thought they were behind schedule."

The nighttime climb was possible because there was a full moon and the climbers wore helmet lamps.

Larry Kamm, who directed the "Wide World of Sports" segments, said before the climb on Friday that the network "in no way, absolutely no way, would ... interfere with their climb. This is a sporting event, a happening. We just record it."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — After watching a parade of hipster belts, bandolier shawls, slinky pants, plunging necklines and see-through blouses, Joan Mondale said she would stick to "high necks, long sleeves and full skirts."

But "I loved it," she added. "It was fabulous."

It was the opening show for designer Eleanor Brenner's fall fashion collection on Seventh Avenue. When Walter Mondale became vice president, Mrs. Brenner designed Mrs. Mondale's inaugural gown.

Guests were handed a brown bag lunch of ham and cheese on rye, a macaroni, mineral water and a liqueur. Mrs. Mondale passed on the liqueur.

LONDON (AP) — Bob Dylan's first London appearance in 12 years is such an attraction that sponsors are forbidding mail orders for tickets and limiting box-office purchases to four per person.

Six concerts at Earl's Court begin June 15, and box offices open May 7. Prices range from about $9 to about $13.50.

NEW YORK (AP) — She may be 66, but Ginger Rogers isn't ready to hang up her dancing shoes.

Miss Rogers told a press gathering at a mirrored Manhattan discotheque on Thursday that she plans to begin a North American nightclub tour next month. And this fall, a record album "of songs associated with my career" will be released in England.

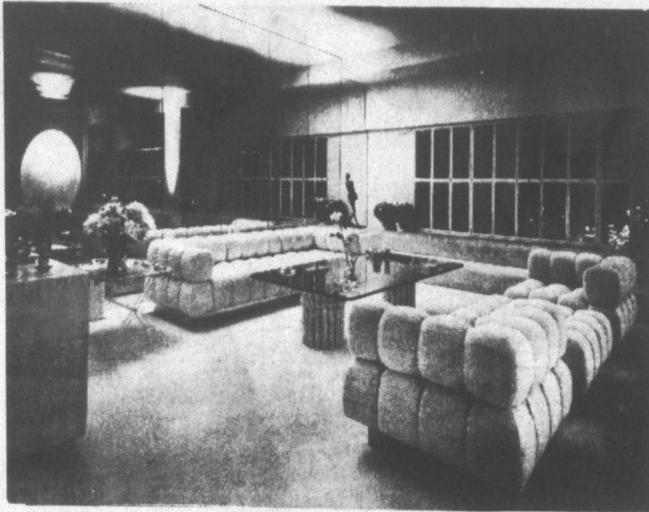

That career took flight in the 1930s, and in 40 years she made 73 movies — 10 of them in which her dancing partner was Fred Astaire.

Miss Rogers' new stage show, which premiered at London's Palladium in March, is "a joyful one hour and 10 minutes" of singing, reminiscing and dancing, she said.

Winning room features simple decor

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The mystique has been removed from art and it is coming through in the environment — people have become more sophisticated about interiors. So says designer Susan A. Forbes of New York in discussing her first-prize-winning residential room in the 20th annual S.M. Hexter awards program for interiors of the year. She and her partner, Joel M. Ergas, put together a pied-a-terre in New York with emphasis on maximizing space, lighting and architectural form, plus a view of the skyline.

It is an uncluttered look that includes multilevel steps to provide seating along a wall of windows. White shutters at the windows are designed to be completely removable.

"People want environments they can control as opposed to the bright colors and strong materials that have been used in the '60s and '70s. Color palettes are softer, which indicates people are surer of themselves. They don't want environments that dictate to them. They want softer spaces," she said.

Their prime desire in the winning design was "to create a soft, simple oasis in the middle of the busy city." The very simple treatment of the room — floor-to-ceiling egg-shaped light sculptures project light on one wall, casting reflections on the high-gloss, white lacquer raised ceiling — was heightened, she points out, by the monochromatic color scheme: white carpet, walls, seating components.

"Something you can almost immediately comprehend is the highly technical treatment. At one time we had seven trades represented in the room as we discussed its development. The telephone, stereo, and everything like that is hidden," Miss Forbes said.

The firm usually concentrates on contract (non-residential) design, she explained, one reason they could bring a flexible look to residential design. The lack of clutter is very apparent. "In fact, the original concept of the client was to use French antiques furniture but when the architectural touches were observed they began to see that they did not want to continue along traditional lines," she said. "They wanted to heighten the simplicity that was becoming apparent. But the room is flexible so that paintings and other things can be incorporated at any time."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 47. We've been married for 20 years and have a fine family. I have known for many years that he is a transvestite. He enjoys dressing in women's clothing (only in private)—a practice which I tolerate but do not encourage.

He saw a psychologist for two years in an effort to overcome this urge, but decided not to fight it any longer. For the last six months, he's been taking hormones, and he applies hormone cream (10,000 estrogen units per ounce) to his chest area daily. I think he is beginning to develop breasts, but the change is so gradual and subtle that it's hard to tell. Also, the hair on his hands and arms has become finer and thinner.

Abby, I don't want a female-shaped husband. What do you suggest?

HUDSON, MASS., MRS.

DEAR MRS: From what you tell me, you are going to have a female-shaped husband whether you want one or not, because that's the way things are developing.

You should be aware that your husband is a transsexual who appears to be preparing for a sex-change operation. I recommend some candid dialogue between you and your husband in order to plan your future—and his.

DEAR ABBY: I answered an "ad" in a magazine for information about joining a flower club. All I wanted was information about the club, but before I knew it, they started sending me all kinds of seeds.

I don't want these seeds and didn't order any, so I just put them aside. (I may have even thrown some away.) Now I am getting letters from this flower club telling me that if I don't send them the money or return the seeds they are going to sue me!

Abby, I am worried sick. Can they sue me? Please help me! I have four children and no money to go to court to fight this thing.

SCARED

DEAR SCARED: Throw their letters in the wastebasket. No one is obligated to pay for—or return—anything that has been sent to him unsolicited.

DEAR ABBY: My sister has a son (I'll call him Jason) who was born out of wedlock. He is 6 years old. About 4 months ago, my sister married a man who refuses to take Jason into his home, although he pays for his support. Jason now lives with our parents and he can't understand why his mommy "visits" him at Granny's but won't take him "home" with her.

My sister hasn't told Jason anything. I think he should be told something. But what? I have a right to ask this question because my mother is in poor health, and now my sister wants me to promise that I will look after Jason in case something happens to our mother.

I am 26, have been self-supporting since I was 17, and plan to be married in August. Please withhold my name.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: Jason should be legally adopted by someone who wants him—ideally you, since you appear to be the only one who is concerned about what the boy thinks.

Under the circumstances, the child should be told the truth. No one can be forced to raise a child he doesn't want. And if he could, I'd pity the poor child.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am so desperate and heartbroken. My husband had a bypass operation and now they tell me he has accelerated atherosclerosis. The surgery was six months ago. He is only 41 and had always been in perfect health.

Please could you help me by letting me know where and who I could possibly see to get help. Two other lives depend on his.

DEAR READER — I know how frightening it is to learn that a loved one has a serious and perhaps fatal disease. But there are things you can do to help your husband live a longer and useful life.

He has fatty-cholesterol deposits in his arteries and there is some evidence that the process can be slowed, stopped or even reversed. The two most important things to do are to not smoke and to get really thin. The latter has to be done gradually, but I don't think many of the special diets help much if a person doesn't get rid of all the excess fat under the skin. Unfortunately, too often both the patient and the doctor stop short of the real goal of ideal weight reduction.

Get your husband down to the point that there is no more fat around the small of his back than you ordinarily find under the skin over the back of the hand. That means no significant fat deposits around the waist anywhere. Anything less than that means you have not done all you can do. We do know that in monkey experiments the fatty-cholesterol deposits will disappear if the monkeys are put on a low-calorie, low-fat, low-cholesterol diet.

If your husband happens to have elevated blood pressure that should also be controlled. Weight reduction and elimination of salt help here too.

His diet should be low in fat (that helps control the calorie intake too) and low in cholesterol. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-3, Diet Preventing Atherosclerosis, to help you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

If his condition permits he could start daily walking. He should not overdo the exercise and should progress in this department at a rate his own doctor permits. But the more he is able to walk the more help he will get in reducing his body fat and improving his condition.

These are the measures that help most in reversing the process of fatty-cholesterol deposits. If the cholesterol level is high or there are other indications of abnormal blood fats in the blood sample then his doctor may wish to give him some medicines to help also. If his blood pressure is high and remains so there are medicines that will help, which your doctor can give him.

Bike-a-thon begins May 6 in Lefors

The Lefors Cystic Fibrosis Foundation will sponsor a Bike-A-Thon Saturday, May 6, to help raise funds for children afflicted with the crippling disease.

The Bike-A-Thon will begin at 9 a.m. in front of the Lefors fire station. Sponsor sheets may be picked up at the Lefors School Library.

The first three finishers in the Boy's Division will be awarded a Treasure Locator, a Zebo "3006" rod set and a Casio Calculator respectively.

In the Girl's Division, the first three placers will receive a $40 gift certificate from Alco, a Polaroid camera and a Casio Calculator respectively.

There will also be cash prizes for best decorated bikes. The Lefors Art and Civic Club will furnish refreshments for a bring-your-own sack lunch at the conclusion of the Bike-A-Thon.

Sponsors for this year's Cystic Fibrosis fund drive include: Floyd McMinn Welding; Padgett Construction; Earl's Steam Service; Adams and Frank's Contractors; Ralph Alexander's Office Machine Service; Blackwell Land Development; Curly's Roustabout Service; Edd's Engine Service; William's Welding Works; Will-Mart, Copan, Alco; Citizen's Bank and Trust; and Lefors Western Auto.

listening, writing home and falling face down in the cold, wet stuff.

When you told me your rats expired from saccharine, cyclamates, X-rays, booze, cigarettes and too much sun, I swore off all those things.

Now I must insist that you arrange a meeting between a bleached blond rat with lipstick on her teeth and myself or it's all over.

Frankly, I'm beginning to feel like I'm in a Mel Brooks movie and Marty Feldman just issued a story to a newspaper warning, "Two bleached blond rats died mysteriously today on two little bar stools in Transylvania. Dom DeLuise, a bungling researcher, says their deaths could be the result of hair bleach—however, their sugar-free root beer and their rouge containing No. 2 red dye are under investigation."

I am not the only one who is becoming suspicious of anonymous rats. We sit around in groups and ponder where are the people who make their little cigarettes? Their little cocktail glasses? Who does their makeup? Sews their little beach towels?

And if no one has questioned it — they should — why is it only the wonderful things of life are hazardous? Why don't rats succumb to mince pie? (I hate mince pie.) Or rhubarb? Or working Saturdays? Or seeing your dentist twice a year? Or sweat? Or fresh-cut grass or castor oil?

I'm sorry to be a doubter, but you researchers have to understand there's a lot at stake here — my ultimate will to live.

I respectfully request that at some date in the near future you arrange a meeting between your research rats and myself. Even if they have expired, but have a smile on their faces and look terrific... that's good enough for me.

'If my wife finds out...'
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A Knoxville man who lost his pants, wallet and $180 because of an "encounter" with a woman may still have his marriage, thanks to a judge.

The 46-year-old man testified in General Sessions Court that he met the woman in a bar last Friday and that after the two of them went to a motel together, she ran off with his trousers, the wallet containing $180 and his car. When the car was found, its hubcaps were missing, he said.

His complaint against the woman was dismissed at his request Tuesday by General Sessions Court Judge Jewell K. Watson.

"I'm afraid my wife will find out if I prosecute," he said. "I've been making up stories for four days."
"I don't want to run the risk of your wife finding out," the judge said. "After all, you've had your car, hubcaps, money and pants stolen. Case dismissed."

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

GOD'S WILL

The greatest commandment is that we should love our God. This is a free choice that man has, but it is God's desire that all would seek Him. He is our heavenly Father, and desires only the best for us.

ATTEND CHURCH

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Tallgrass park proposed

By BAYARD WEBSTER
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times
News Service

NEW YORK — For the last half century, proposals for a tallgrass prairie national park have sprung up like wildflowers, only to wither or be cut down by those who had other uses for the land.

Now proponents of the idea are employing a new tactic that may eventually result in preserving an eastern Kansas sample of the sea of six-foot-high grass that once covered a Middle Western region one-and-a-half times the size of Texas.

A few centuries ago, American prairies extended from the Eastern forest westward to the Rockies and from southern Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. There were three main types of grass: short grasses and midgrasses (ranging from a few inches to several feet tall) in the Great Plains regions, and tall grasses as high as a horse in the central lowlands of what is now western Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and eastern Kansas, where more abundant rainfall and a salubrious climate fostered their growth. All told, the grassland covered more than a million square miles.

Plant scientists estimate that while about 50 percent of the short grass and midgrass prairies are left, only about 4,000 square miles of the tall grass prairie remain, 1 percent of the original 400,000 square miles. The rest has fallen to the plow or to the demands of urbanization.

Cattle ranchers, farmers and others, fearing that preservation would force them out, restrict their activities or reduce their incomes, have made their objections known to Congress, which has yet to hold hearings on the prairie park bills offered in past years.

In attempt to counter this opposition, the latest bill, introduced in the House of Representatives last fall, takes a new tack: Having half the area declared a park and the other half a national preserve. The latter designation permits more types of land uses, within a time limit, than does a national park.

The entire protected area would be called the Tallgrass Prairie National Park and Preserve, the first national sanctuary to have such a combined title.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Larry Winn Jr., a Republican from Kansas, which has about 90 percent of what is left of tallgrass prairie. It calls for federal protection and supervision, in varying degree, of 300 square miles of grassland about 20 miles south of Emporia, Kan., an area now grazed down that scientists have recommended as the best place for restoring a tall grass prairie.

The bill designates 58 percent of the site as park and 42 percent as preserve. The preserve designation would be for the eastern part of the site, where there has been cattle ranching, farming and oil and gas production for years.

The prairie bill is supported by several major environmental organizations and, for the first time, has Congressional cosponsors. It would permit the pumping of oil and gas from the preserve section until there is no more; ranching, farming and cattle grazing could continue at the discretion of the Interior Department, pending land acquisition by the National Park Service. Persons owning homes within the park or preserve could stay for 25 years or until the death of the owner and his spouse, whichever they choose.

"I don't know whether we'll get action," Winn said in a telephone interview. "But I'm trying to inform members of congress how important and how beautiful a prairie is. We want to protect it now before it's too late."

According to Lawrence Wagner, a director of the Save the Tallgrass Prairie organization in Shawnee Mission, Kan., present plans call for pedestrian trails and loop roads in the prairie project. Easement provisions would forbid building or development in a five-mile-deep protective strip around the park preserve, providing land for observation sites, prairie information centers and resting places for visitors.

Mystery cash prompts claims from several

WACO, Texas (AP) — Two Texas teenagers who found $500,000 buried on a South Texas ranch gave depositions Thursday to lawyers for the city of Waco, which has put a claim on the mysterious money.

Two suitcases of cash came to light Jan. 31, 1977 after James Dean Bridges and Percy Allen Garcia were stopped in Waco on a traffic violation. They were in a new Thunderbird they had bought in Dallas using a man as intermediary.

Keith Farr, a lawyer representing the city of Waco, notified U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts he would question the two boys in the presence of a court reporter. Their answers will be used in a trial in Roberts' court.

Bridges, who lives in Robstown, and Garcia, an Alice resident, gave the depositions in a Corpus Christi law office.

After 46 years, Acuna can see

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — After 46 years, Pete Acuna can see for the first time.

And he hopes people will be patient. He has visions of asking, "What's that?" and being told, "That's a doorknob, dummy."

"I've walked around all these years with my eyelids closed. Now I have to concentrate on keeping them open," he says.

Acuna can see, thanks to a cornea transplant performed Saturday at the University of Arizona Hospital. Born blind, he developed a sense of humor in the interim.

"Wouldn't it be something if I thought I was chasing a woman, and I was really chasing a bus?" he jests.

But there are obstacles, too. "I'm worried about seeing me," he said. Before the operation, he jokingly threatened to "break every mirror in the house."

His first look at the world was from a hospital window.

Freedom Singers perform tonight

The New Freedom Singers, a singing and instrumental group from Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho, will be in concert at 8 p.m. Saturday at the M.K. Brown Auditorium. The group will sing about "What's Right With America." Admission is $2 for adults.

"There was nothing to see but a bunch of lights, but it fascinated the hell out of me," he said.

It is not known yet just how much he will be able to see. "I'm curious about seeing everything," he said.

He especially wants to see musical scores after learning to play four instruments at the Arizona School for the Deaf and Blind and writing several songs.

Optimists will meet in Pampa

The Pampa Optimist Club will be host to the North Texas District third quarter board meeting today and Saturday.

Highlight of the meeting will be the District Oratorical Contest. A boy and a girl from each of 15 zones will compete for a $500 scholarship. Preliminaries will be at 9 a.m. Saturday at Pampa High School. The finals will be during the noon luncheon at the Pampa Optimist Club. Calvin Lacy is the district chairman.

A ladies style show will be Saturday afternoon at the White Deer Land Museum. The convention will culminate with the Governor's Ball and Banquet Saturday evening.

Piano recital Sunday

Miss Katherine White will give a piano recital at 2 p.m., Sunday at the First Baptist Church in Pampa. Miss White, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. White, 2364 Aspen, has received numerous critical awards and is planning to continue her musical study at Baylor University. Assisting Miss White will be Vici Bailey, flutist. She is a student of Bill Haley.

Three say, 'I'll win'

By The Associated Press
As politicians approached the final week of campaigning for the May 6 primary elections, three candidates for statewide office predicted victory.

The victory predictions came from Gov. Dolph Briscoe, attorney general candidate Mark White and from former long-time Texas Land Commissioner Jerry Sadler, who is seeking a post on the Railroad Commission.

As campaigning approached what will likely be a hectic final week, Briscoe and Attorney General John Hill continued their heated verbal assaults.

Grain-haulers not available

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Grain and feed dealers from seven states have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to extend an order diverting more grain-hauling equipment to country elevators.

The April 17 order, designed to alleviate a severe shortage of such equipment, will expire Sunday. Dealers from the seven states are asking that it be extended to May 20.

The states include Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas, according to Robert Anderson, executive vice president of the Nebraska Grain and Feed Dealers.

The ICC order followed hearings held in Omaha, Des Moines and Salina, Kans., earlier this month.

In its original order, the ICC mandated that 11 railroads serving the area use 70 percent of their jumbo and narrow-door boxcars to ship grain from country elevators.

The order was later modified to a 55 percent figure for the carriers in Nebraska, Anderson said. The Nebraska carriers include Union Pacific, Burlington Northern, Chicago & North Western and Missouri Pacific.

"The order has had very little effect in Nebraska thus far, but we should see some perhaps by the next week," Anderson said. "We want to keep the order in effect so we can clear some of this grain out."

They accused each other of being big spenders Thursday.

Former Gov. Preston Smith, a third Democratic gubernatorial candidate, got the highest rating in responses to a questionnaire distributed by the Texas Environmental Coalition.

The former governor "correctly" answered 18 of 21 questions posed by the environmentalists and Hill 11.

The governor did not respond to the questionnaire, according to coalition president Richard Shannon.

Shannon told an Austin news conference that Republican Ray Hutchison had four "correct" answers. He said Hutchison's opponent, Bill Clements, did not return the questionnaire.

Speaking at a Dallas news conference, Briscoe described Hill as a "big-spending fiscal liberal" whose promises could result in a state income tax in 1979.

Briscoe drew endorsements Thursday from five West Texas House members. They were Reps. David Stubbeman of Abilene, Tom Massey of San Angelo, Mike Ezell of Snyder, Joe Hanna of Breckenridge, and Elmer Martin of Colorado City.

Speaking at a luncheon in Longview, Hill said "We've never had a governor who missed so many opportunities to help the people."

The attorney general said "Our school property taxes are increasing at twice the rate of the national average of property tax increases. Our utility bills have doubled in most parts of the state in the last five years. Our state budget has doubled in the last five years," said Hill.

Texas is losing $500,000 a week in interest because treasurer Warren Harding has failed to switch some state money to interest-bearing accounts, according to Harry Ledbetter, who opposes Harding in the race for state treasurer.

Officers and directors of 201 banks had donated money to Harding's campaign, Ledbetter said. Of the 201 banks, he said, no checks were drawn on 184 of them by the treasury during a recent four-week period.

Rev. Koerselman to give sermon to Presbyterians

The Rev. Lewis Koerselman Jr., guest minister from Independence, Mo., will present the sermon "The Compliment Nobody Wants" Sunday at 10:45 a.m. at the First Presbyterian Church, 525 N. Gray.

He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Koerselman Sr. of Amarillo. Text for his sermon is John 15:12-17.

The Chancel Choir will sing "O Thou Sweetest Source of Gladness" by Vetter for the morning anthem and Doris Goad, organist, will present "Our God, to Whom We Turn" for the offertory.

Church school starts at 9:30 a.m. Nursery facilities are available.

Youth fellowships meet at 5:30 p.m. at the church on Sundays. The worship and sacrament committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the west room. Choir rehearses at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesdays in the sanctuary. The Diaconate will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the west room.

Bell goes after FBI leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — An aide to Griffin B. Bell says the attorney general stands by his decision not to prosecute middle-level FBI officials for illegal surveillance activities but instead to go after their superiors.

Terrence B. Adamson, Bell's assistant, said the attorney general "was handed a difficult task when he arrived, he gave it his full attention and his best efforts and he did his duty as he saw fit."

The decision against prosecuting the officials is in line with Bell's "philosophical framework" for handling the case, added Adamson. "He gave the highest priority to those with the greatest degree of culpability."

Adamson stood in for Bell, who is out of town, to reply to accusations Thursday by a team of Justice Department lawyers who told a Senate subcommittee the attorney general undermined their investigation of the FBI.

William L. Gardner, head of the Civil Rights Division's criminal section, told senators that Bell blocked efforts by prosecutors to seek perjury indictments against an unspecified number of FBI officials and to charge eight mid-level agency officials with conducting illegal wiretapping, mail theft and break-ins.

Gardner headed a task force of five lawyers who resigned from the FBI investigation last December because of their differences with Bell.

Under Bell's direction, the Justice Department obtained indictments on April 10 against former FBI Director L. Patrick

Gray and two top assistants on charges of conducting illegal surveillance against the radical Weathermen underground in New York.

FILMETER

FILMETER is compiled by Dick Kleiner in Hollywood and the N.E.A. staff in both Hollywood and New York.

NEW RELEASES

CROSSED SWORDS (PG) — Oliver Reed, Raquel Welch, Mark Lester. Romantic adventure. This is pure escapism, another version of "The Prince and the Pauper," with a fine cast and rousing action. Don't take it seriously, just relax and enjoy all the derring-do and derring-don't. GRADE: B.

AMERICAN HOT WAX (PG) — Tim McIntire. Musical. The '50s, and the beginnings of rock 'n' roll are the setting for this small-scale offering. It is supposed to be the story of disc jockey Alan Freed, who first made rock 'n' roll big. If you like the music, you'll like this, because there are many musical numbers that really jump. GRADE: B.

GENERAL RELEASE

THE BETSY (R) — Laurence Olivier, Robert Duvall, Katherine Ross. Romance. This is taken from the Harold Robbins novel about love and intrigue among Detroit automobile manufacturers. It's all pretty shoddy and not really very interesting. Olivier is wasted, but does his best. GRADE: C.

CASEY'S SHADOW (PG) — Walter Matthau, Alexis Smith, Michael Hersheve. Horse story. Boy (Casey) loves horse, etc., but is that enough to win the big quarter horse race at Ruidos, N.M.? Matthau, as usual, is impressive in the unlikely role of a Cajun quarter horse trainer on a run-down Louisiana farm. The supporting roles are equally successful — so successful that you can ignore plot weaknesses and just sit back and enjoy the ride. GRADE: B-plus. (Drake)

AN UNMARRIED WOMAN (R) — Jill Clayburgh, Alan Bates, Michael Murphy. Drama. The title is a misnomer, because the film is about a very-married woman and the trauma she goes through when her husband divorces her. A brilliant performance by Ms. Clayburgh in a film that would have been better had it been cut a little tighter. Caution: nudity reigns supreme. GRADE: A-

GRAY LADY DOWN (PG) — Charlton Heston, David Carradine, Stacy Keach. Adventure. A nuclear sub gets rammed and sinks and the problem is how to rescue the crew. It's a pretty good yarn, with nice underwater effects, but somehow never generates much real suspense or excitement. GRADE: B-

THE FURY (R) — Kirk Douglas, John Cassavetes, Carrie Snodgrass, Charles Durning. Horror. This is an attempt to bring you another "Exorcist"-type of film, but it just doesn't have the stuff. It's about two young people who have supernatural power, and what they do to others, and what others do to them. Some pretty gory scenes, so be warned. GRADE: C.

HOUSE CALLS (PG) — Walter Matthau, Glenda Jackson, Art Carney, Richard Benjamin. Comedy. A successful surgeon tries to make it as a swinging widower but gets hooked by a not-so-gay divorcee. Humor sways back and forth between broad parody of the medical world and lighthearted look at middle-aged romance, but the performances are excellent. Pleasant entertainment. GRADE: B-plus. (Handler)

JOSEPH ANDREWS (PG) — Ann-Margret, Peter Firth. Romantic comedy. Tony Richardson's long-awaited successor to "Tom Jones," this is a bawdy, frantic, funny look at merrie olde England. Excellent vignettes by some of England's great actors enliven this, and the evocation of a long-gone period is fascinating. GRADE: B.

A HERO AIN'T NO THIN' BUT A SANDWICH (PG) — Cicely Tyson, Paul Winfield, Larry B. Scott. Drama. The seamy story of a city kid and his introduction to, and battle with, drugs. A fine look at ghetto life, with some excellent characterizations, but it's all pretty heavy. GRADE: B-

COMING HOME (R) — Jane Fonda, Jon Voight, Bruce Dern. Drama. One of the new wave of Vietnam war pictures, this is a strong, emotional story about a shattered man, the woman who waited for him, and another man. It is very strong stuff, but will leave you quivering. GRADE: A-

A SPECIAL DAY (PG) — Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroianni. Romance. In World War II Italy, the "special day" is one on which Hitler visits Rome. And an unhappy housewife and her homosexual neighbor discover each other in a film that is tender and heartwarming. GRADE: A-

SEMI-TOUGH (R) — Burt Reynolds, Jill Clayburgh, Kris Kristofferson. Comedy. With a pro football background, this tells the raunchy story of two grid stars and the girl they sort of love, after their own fashion. It has some good laughs, but it is awfully earthy. Caution: Bawdy in the extreme. GRADE: B.

CHIK, U.S.S.R. — Winter buries the 79,000 acres of Chik State Farm under a sea of snow whose undulating swells stretch endlessly across the Siberian plain. The snow started falling in October; it will not melt until April.

At this time of year it is hard not to believe that Soviet agriculture would probably lurch from feast to famine even without the problems of forced collectivization.

"On a recent day when the temperature stood at a 'quite normal' zero degrees Fahrenheit, Aleksandr Kuznetsov, deputy director of the farm, described this region two days' journey from Moscow on the Trans-Siberian Railroad as a 'marginal agricultural zone.'"

"We do not have enough rainfall," he explained. "Only 12 to 14 inches a year, and most of that usually falls in August and September, in the middle of the harvest."

As in most of the Soviet Union, farmers here have only 20 days to bring in the crops before the soil turns hard as rock under the frost. If the rainfall comes during those 20 days, it spoils the harvest; where the rains are more plentiful, the land is less arable.

Last year was a bad year, Kuznetsov said — "we had a drought" — and the flat fields produced 19 bushels of spring wheat an acre though the farm's five-year plan had foreseen 27 bushels an acre, which would have brought Chik up to the productivity in the grain belt of North Dakota.

The grain harvest last year fell below 195.5 million metric tons, over 28 million less than 1976. About 12 percent of the crop is grown here in Siberia; about a third of the rest was spoiled by rains in Kazakhstan.

which begins a few hundred miles south of here. Officials are trying to make up for the losses by buying grain from the United States — at least nine million tons so far.

Chik is a model farm — the Russians did not bring a group of Western correspondents here to show them what was wrong with agriculture under Communism — and a lot of what is wrong is simply the weather. Long before Communism and collective farming came to these latitudes, Russian farmers had to try to get all their field work done in only four to six months, compared with eight or nine for farmers in the West.

With water so scarce, the state farmers dig some of their biggest tractors out of the drifts and plow windrows in the empty fields to try to keep some of the snow from blowing away.

"There is not enough rainfall in the growing season for fertilizer to be very effective," Kuznetsov said in explaining why only about a ton of organic fertilizer was used per acre. "After plowing," he continued, "we roll the soil to try to keep some of the water in."

The short working season means, among other things, that during the rest of the year the state-farm employee has little to do. Though every family has almost a quarter of an acre of land from which to sell privately raised produce, the plots are buried under the snow.

More households have television, beamed from Moscow by satellite, Kuznetsov. There are 60 autos for private use by farmhands and there is a waiting list of 50 for new ones.

Your Birthday

April 29, 1978

Transforming old methods into new ways of doing things will awaken ambitious interests in you this coming year. You'll be prepared to go all the way for that to which you aspire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Using rash or erratic methods will produce results opposite from what you're hoping for. Only the slow but sure procedures will work today. ## Whoops! one name left off ballot

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — There's a five-man race in the Democratic primary from Texas' 21st District, but you couldn't prove it by some Kerr County ballots.

San Antonian Steve Clark's name was left off the official ballot in that Hill Country county, and the omission has officials in somewhat of a predicament.

By the time Kerr County Democratic chairman Donald Oehler found out about the problem, voting had already begun and some 120 ballots had been cast.

Oehler went to work to try to solve the problem.

He said he contacted local printers and had a corrected list of the five candidates printed on gummed labels to be applied to official ballot forms.

"While we will count the votes for all other offices, no vote will be counted for the congressional race on erroneous ballots," Oehler said.

Clark said he contacted election officials in Austin and was told that while there was no precedent for the situation, it could make a "valid election contest," meaning Clark could challenge the outcome.

Clark said that election bureau chief Robert Lemens told him a three-man runoff could take place if Clark came in third by the difference. Clark said the difference could be defined as either the number of incorrect ballots cast or the number of people exposed to an incorrect sample ballot published either by the Democratic party or by newspapers.

Meanwhile, absentee votes cast have been segregated while political officials ponder the problems involved.

Other Democrats seeking the nomination are Nelson Wolff, Paul Dahlgren, Joe Sullivan and Woody Glasscock.

General Singlaub scolded for criticizing Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outspoken Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub was called to account today for the second time in less than a year for publicly criticizing President Carter's policies.

The heavily decorated Singlaub, a combat veteran of three wars, was summoned to the Pentagon from his Atlanta post to explain to Army leaders his blast at Carter's decision not to produce the neutron warhead and his public disagreement with the Carter-backed Panama Canal treaties.

The 56-year-old Singlaub, chief of staff of the Army Forces Command, told ROTC cadets at Georgia Tech on Thursday that Carter's shelving of the neutron warhead was militarily unsound.

"I think the decision not to produce the neutron bomb with some compensating concession from the other side is like throwing your trump card away in a game of bridge," Singlaub said. "I think it's ridiculous."

Singlaub also told the cadets that the Panama Canal treaties, ratified by the Senate after months of intense lobbying by the administration, were unnecessary. He said he was concerned about ties between Panama and Cuba and worried that Panama might put restrictions on use of the canal.

About 11 months ago, Singlaub was ordered home from South Korea by Carter after the general publicly opposed the president's plan to withdraw U.S. ground troops from that country. Singlaub said the plan would lead inevitably to war.

The general, then chief of staff of U.S. forces in Korea, had a 30-minute meeting with Carter and several days later was reassigned to the comparable job at the command headquarters in Atlanta.

The president said at the time that Singlaub "was not being chastized or punished" for the comment, but transferred because his Korean post would have directly involved him in the policy he was criticizing.

"We are now in the process of carrying on this policy," Carter said last May of the Korean withdrawal. "And I don't believe that Gen. Singlaub could have effectively carried out this policy when he had publicly been identified as being opposed to it."

Carter also said then that Singlaub had committed a very serious breach of his responsibility by making "an invitation to North Korea."

It was uncertain whether Singlaub, meeting with Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff, would get off as lightly this time.

Judge eyes desegregation in school near Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge supervising Houston's eight-year-old plan to desegregate its public schools has asked for information about possible violations of desegregation laws outside the school district's boundaries.

Such information would allow U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan to consider implementing a metropolitan-wide desegregation plan, according to a Justice Department attorney at the federal hearing Thursday.

"Nobody has ever seriously contended any outlying district is guilty. Unless the effort is made, how can I sit here and determine serious constitutional violations," Cowan asked attorneys.

Joseph D. Rich said it would take the Justice Department six to eight months to assess the issue of multi-district desegregation in the Houston area.

"Before metropolitan relief can be requested by this court, constitutional violations have to be established," Rich said.

The multi-district desegregation issue — usually associated with older cities in the North — arose in the hearing when an attorney representing the Houston Teachers Association pointed out that white student population in the district has fallen from 53 to 33 percent since 1970.

"And the trend is continuing," Robert E. Hall said. "We are talking about the rich abandoning the poor. It is naive, based on past history, to expect that white taxpayers will tax themselves to provide quality education for black and brown children attending separate schools."

Houston Independent School District Attorney William Wilde said HISD has never found evidence of discriminatory conduct by neighboring districts.

Federal authorities must demonstrate that school boards purposely intend to perpetuate patterns of segregation in schools before they issue desegregation orders.

The so-called white flight to areas outside the HISD has resulted in increasing numbers of black and Hispanic students concentrated in inner city schools.

Although still physically within the city of Houston, other independent school districts levy their own school taxes on residents within their boundaries.

Wilde said one of the HISD's most critical problems is the consequences of a court-ordered teacher assignment plan which is resulting in experienced black teachers going to schools in more affluent neighborhoods while inexperienced white teachers tend to end up in largely black and brown schools.

The plan — referred to as the Singleton plan after U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton — originally established district-wide racial ratios for teachers that would be the same for all schools. The initial ratio was 70 percent white teachers and 30 percent black teachers. It has subsequently been altered to 60 and 40 percent with a 15 percent variance allowed.

Minority community groups have complained their children are being taught by inexperienced staff. HISD says the situation leads to very high rates of teacher turnover.

Fire destroys Nassau building

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Fire, driven by winds of 25 mph, destroyed at least ten buildings in downtown Nassau early this morning, and was reported spreading.

Officials said the fire broke out in a furniture shop on Bay Street, a commercial section of Nassau, about 2 a.m. EST and rapidly spread, destroying five adjacent shops. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

The wind-blown fire reportedly jumped across the road, gutting several other shops and forcing the evacuation of two apartment buildings. Firefighters, plagued by hydrant problems, called for help from other fire units on the island.

Sparks from the fire reportedly traveled three-quarters of a mile from the heart of the fire to set the Ministry of Education building ablaze.

Judge deals out DWI sentences

Twelve persons recently were sentenced for driving while intoxicated in Judge Don Hinton's county court, and the court returned a judgment for the Fatheree Insurance Agency Inc.

Bobby Allen Teague received a three-day suspended sentence to three days in the county jail and was fined $50 for driving with a suspended license.

The court ordered Tom Acherson to pay $697.89, interest and attorney fees as a judgment in a suit filed by the Fatheree Insurance Agency Inc.

George Randy McClelland pleaded no contest to driving while intoxicated. He was fined $150 and given three days credit for time in the county jail.

Those pleading guilty to driving while intoxicated, sentences and fines were:

Billy Don Bybee, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Scottie C. Herring, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Harry John Dulaney, 30 days probated to six months, $50; Jack Elton Lathrop, 30 days probated to six months, $150; Thomas Arthur Taylor, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Ronald Allen Boaz, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Robert Francis Barclay, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Mark Lee Miller, 30 days probated to six months, $100; Joe Dehorney, 30 days probated to six months, $50; C.L.

Why Should Dolph Briscoe Be Governor for 10 Years?

There is no good reason!

No other Texas Governor has ever asked for 10 years, much less been elected for 10 years. Dolph Briscoe's record does not merit 10 years in office:

- ★ Yet Briscoe has spent more than $2 billion in this campaign — including $900,000 his supporters borrowed from 13 banks — to get 10 years in office.
- ★ Property taxes have increased by 1 BILLION DOLLARS since Briscoe was elected; so far, he has done nothing to provide property tax relief.
- ★ Welfare costs have more than doubled under Briscoe, without a fair increase in benefits for those people who really deserve them. The reason is waste. The worst example is Briscoe's own Office of Migrant Affairs, which spends $8,000 for each person it helps find a new job.
- ★ Utility rates have skyrocketed while Briscoe has been governor, without a single sign of concern by the Governor.

Elect a New Governor

Endorsing John Hill, the Kilgore News Herald said:

"He fought Southwestern Bell all the way to the Supreme Court to stop an unfair rate increase. He appears to have beat the Howard Hughes empire over millions in inheritance taxes. And he cleaned up Duval County."

Endorsing John Hill, Fort Worth Star-Telegram said:

"In two terms as state attorney general, Hill has shown himself to be energetic, articulate and assertive. He can make firm decisions and work persuasively to see them carried out. As governor, he would be an active, accessible chief executive projecting a strong leadership image."

Endorsing John Hill, the Dallas Times-Herald said:

"John Hill has been an outstanding attorney general. He has made impressive progress in making the office what he has always said it should be—the people's law office."

Rangers topple Indians, 3-1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — If a two-run home run wasn't enough Thursday night, Mike Hargrove ruined Rick Wait's whole day with a devious hidden ball maneuver to pick off a napping Paul Dade and help blunt a sixth-inning Cleveland uprising.

Hargrove clubbed a Wait's fastball in the fifth inning for his third home run in as many games and Jon Matlack turned in a strong pitching performance as the rejuvenated Texas Rangers edged the Indians 3-1.

A tiring Matlack had walked Dade to lead off the sixth inning. On a pickoff attempt, Hargrove simply kept the ball in his glove instead of throwing it back to Matlack.

Meanwhile, Texas reserve Claudell Washington distracted Dade by yelling at him as Dade stroled off the bag. Hargrove simply applied the tag as the embarrassed Dade stood speechless.

The Indians went on to get three consecutive singles in that inning and scored their only run. Dade would have meant at least one additional run.

"Claudell gets an assist," said Texas Manager Bill Hunter with a smile. "It happened at the most opportune time."

"I just noticed that the time before, when I went to throw the ball back to the pitcher, he (Dade) walked off the bag. I just thought I'd try it the next time," said Hargrove.

"You kind of hate doing it because you hold him up to ridicule," he added. "But you've got to do it if you want to win."

"I was just teasing him. He was grinning, turned around and stepped off the mound," said Washington.

Wait's 1-1, had sailed through the first four innings, surrendering only a single and retiring 12 of 15 Texas batters. He gave up a leadoff triple to Jim Sundberg in the fifth and was nicked for an RBI single by Bert Campaneris, mired in an .073 slump.

"It was just that one pitch," Wait said of Hargrove's homer. "You shouldn't lose a game on one pitch, but that's what happened. I thought I pitched pretty good tonight."

Wait's, a former Ranger who had shut out Texas on two hits last week, gave up only five hits and struck out seven in his eight innings.

Matlack 2-3, who had lost three consecutive games after a 2-1 Opening Day verdict over the New York Yankees, scattered eight singles in the eight and one-third innings he pitched. Len Barker finished the game in relief.

Shell-shocked Texas pitchers had been pounded for 25 runs in 31 innings before Ferguson Jenkins gunned down Kansas City 4-1 on four hits Tuesday night. Doyle Alexander then followed Wednesday night with a six-hit, 3-0 shutout of the slugging Indians, who have been hitting

Alydar set for roses

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
AP Sports Writer

LEXINGTON, Ky. — "We are ready now for the big one, for the roses," said jockey Jorge Velasquez following Alydar's rout of eight other 3-year-olds in the $119,000 Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland.

On May 6 at Churchill Downs, Velasquez will wear the most famous silks in the history of the Kentucky Derby — the Red and Blue of Calumet Farms — when he rides Alydar in his highly anticipated Derby showdown against Affirmed.

Alydar remained the major challenger to Affirmed, the 1977 2-year-old champ, by romping home in the Blue Grass Thursday 13 lengths ahead of Raymond Earl.

"He did just fine," said Alydar's trainer, John Veitch. "It was just what we wanted to do. He (Velasquez) rode him out and he did just fine. It was what I expected."

Before a record Keeneland crowd of 22,512, included Calumet owners Admiral and Mrs. Gene Markey, Alydar broke poorly and was sixth after the first half-mile.

"Any worries?" Velasquez asked later in answer to a question about Alydar's position on the backstretch. "I have the

Champ Duran wins

NEW YORK (AP) — Roberto Duran has a problem that most boxers never have to face — one most boxers would love to face.

"I love to fight," says the world lightweight champion from Panama. "But they've turned me into a singer and a dancer because the guys I fight are running all night."

Duran accused Adolfo Viruet, a New York-born Puerto Rican, of contributing to the champion's career as a hooper. But it really wasn't so.

Duran, at 142 pounds 7 pounds heavier than the normal lightweight limit of 135, won a 10-round, non-title decision Thursday night over Viruet, who weighed 141½.

Though thoroughly beaten, Viruet showed stamina and courage, several times exchanging punches toe-to-toe with the man they call "Stone Hands" and never really in serious danger of being knocked out.

Viruet, a 26-year-old left-hander, kept away from Duran's powerful right much of the night by circling to his own right. The maneuver also

Player on minds at tournament

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lee Trevino took a long look over his shoulder at his friend Gary Player, four shots back going into today's second round of the $200,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament.

"He's gonna be a tough man to beat," Trevino said. "He is the perfect example of determination. He never gives up."

"A lot of us out here, we're start playing bad and we're Hollywooding it, back-handing putts and just trying to finish and get off the golf course and go home. And there's little Gary out there grinding away, trying to hole it from the fairway for a 12."

"He never quits on you, no matter what."

"His motto is, 'It's never over until the last ball is in the hole.' He just keeps trying, just kept coming at you. He's tough. And he's tough to beat."

Trevino took advantage of ideal playing conditions and a manicured 7,000-yard Lakewood Country Club course to fire a spectacular, 7-under-par 65 that put him a single shot in front of the field and four ahead of Player.

The South African didn't make a bogey on his way to a 69. "I'm quite satisfied," he said. "I didn't hole as many putts as I have been lately, but I'm not complaining. It was a nice, round of golf."

Player came into this event with three consecutive comebacks under his belt and seeking to become only the third man in PGA Tour history to win four consecutive tournaments.

"He's got it going and he's got all the confidence in the world," Trevino said. "They talk about pressure. He doesn't have any pressure, because nobody expects him to win four in a row. He can free-wheel it. He's gonna be a tough man to beat."

Trevino's 35-foot birdie putt on the final hole lifted him a single stroke ahead of soft-spoken Mark Hayes, who would have had a share of the top spot but for a three-putt bogey on the 18th that left him with a 66.

Tied at 67 were Ray Floyd, Bob E. Smith and Horner Blancas, who one-putted 11 times. In the big group at 68 were former New Orleans Open winner Miller Barber and Andy Bean, a runner-up to Player last week in Houston.

Tom Watson took a triple bogey-7 on the first hole and finished with a 73. The two-time winner this season was tied at that figure with defending titlist Jim Simons.

Pigeon Club races

The Top O' Texas Racing Pigeon Club of Pampa completed its second and third races of the Old Bird Flying Season recently.

Alva, Oklahoma was the site of the April 15, A and B races. 42 Birds were liberated for the A race at 6:45 a.m. The morning was clear with winds of 5 to 10 mph.

The B race was flown with a field of 43 birds released at 7:45 a.m. The B race was a benefit for Pampa's Genesis House. $50 were donated on behalf of the club.

April 22 was the date of the third race of the season, also flown from Alva. The 200-mile boasted a field of 81 birds. 20 to 35 mph winds were present when the birds were liberated at 6:30 a.m.

Wichita, Kansas will be the site of Saturday's 300 mile event, the fourth race of the season.

Rusty Ward

Pampa's Ward signs

Pampa's Rusty Ward has signed a letter of intent to enroll at Southeastern Oklahoma State University located in Durant.

Ward, a 6'4½" forward for the Harvesters visited the campus recently and came away favorably impressed.

"The full-ride scholarship, 'will make it possible for me to attend college,'" he said.

Ward was particularly interested in playing his first year.

"The opportunity to play is there. The second guard slot is up for grabs," he said.

Ward also noted the interest coach Mike Martin had shown him during his recruitment.

Martin will be in his fifth year as mentor of the basketball squad.

Ward had an exceptional career with the Harvesters and was a member of the All-District team twice as well as All-Tournament at the Loughton, Midwestern and Clovis tournaments.

What's up in golf

So what if your golf handicap is higher than Jack Nicklaus's average score? You can convince the gang at the 19th hole that you know what you're doing if you use the proper language.

Here are some examples of "golf talk" offered by Dick Haskell, executive director of the Massachusetts Golf Association, in Golf Digest magazine:

You, too, can talk like Nicklaus.

- Bird dog: Excellent cad-die.
- Fried egg: Buried in a sand trap.
- Hickories: Golf clubs.
- H2O'd it: Ball in the water.
- In the spinach: In the rough or woods.
- Juiced it: Hit the ball too far.
- Knee knocker: Tough short putt.
- Nooded it: Curved shot out of woods.
- Ocean liner: Long putt across the green.
- On the beach: In a sand trap.
- Oscar Brown: Out of bounds.
- Out on the fluffy: In the fairway.
- Pill: Golf ball.
- Rain maker: High shot.
- Recovery room: Scorer's tent or 19th hole.
- Shooting gallery: Easy birdie course.
- Smoke City: Well-hit drive.
- Van Gogh it: Artistic shot or round.
- Worm burner: Ground-hugging, poor shot.

Greats will golf

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For the first time in his career, last place looks mighty good to Jimmy Demaret.

The 67-year-old Demaret, three times winner of the Masters, will cash a $20,000 paycheck if he and his partner, Lionel Hebert, finish last in The Legends of Golf beginning Friday.

"Dead last is three times more than I ever won in a tournament," said the feisty Demaret Wednesday. He was the leading money winner in professional golf in 1947 and won the grand total of $27,936.

"I remember Byron Nelson won 11 tournaments in a row and it didn't even total up to $20,000," said Demaret.

Demaret said, "I think it's just fantastic that for once we have a chance to play for that kind of money. I mean $400,000... that's a lot of bread. And $100,000 to the winners—that's something."

The unique 54-hole tournament will be played over the friendly fairways of the Par 70 Onion Creek Golf Course under a two-ball format. In other words, Demaret and Hebert will be matching their best score per hole against the field.

The field does not include Ben Hogan, who declined to play, but it has Sam Snead, indeed a legend, who won only $35,000 in 1950, the last year he was the leading money winner.

"And I never hid my money in tomato cans either," said Snead. "All that bull was started by Demaret."

The players, all over 50, will be given their choice of walking or riding electric golf carts in the tournament. Saturday and Sunday rounds will be nationally televised by NBC.

Australian Kel Nagle shot a one-under-par 69 to lead his team to a best-ball 55 in the Pro-Am.

Gene Sarazen shot 73 and, with some help from University of Texas Athletic Director Darrell Royal, came in second with a best-ball 58. Snead and Julius Boros also had groups at 58.

The players scheduled practice rounds today over the short, narrow course, which has lush fairways and a near-perfect putting surface.

Tommy Bolt, Mike Souchak and amateur Dale Morey turned in Wednesday's lowest rounds with four-under Par 66.

"I imagine 15-under will win it," said Demaret. "I can see a team being say like 5-under par each day under almost perfect conditions like we had today."

Wilson nabbed

HOUSTON (AP) — A 15-year veteran punter who has been with the Kansas City Chiefs since they were the Dallas Texans has been acquired by the Houston Oilers for an undisclosed 1979 draft choice.

The deal is contingent on Jerrel Wilson's making the team.

Oiler coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips said Wilson's acquisition has nothing to do with Oilers' punter Cliff Parsley, a second-year man who punted 77 times last season for a 39.4 average.

Wilson's career average is over 42 yards.

"He's got a helluva leg," Phillips said. "Having two good punters is better than having one good punter. It has nothing to do with Cliff. We just would like to give him (Wilson) a chance to play here."

The Oilers tried unsuccessfully to obtain Wilson in 1977, but last year he expressed interest in a trade to be near his ailing adoptive parents, who run a ranch 60 miles north of Houston.

One-armed outfielders saga told

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — When historians speak of baseball's mountaintop performances, they zero in on the 755 career home runs of Hank Aaron, Cy Young's 511 pitching victories, Joe DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak and Lou Gehrig's unbroken string of 2,130 consecutive games.

Yet hidden in the dusty archives lies what in our opinion is the most fantastic phenomenon the game has known — the one-armed outfielder who made the major leagues.

The dramatic story of Pete Gray is resurrected in William B. Mead's lively book on "the zany, true story of baseball in the Early Forties." The World War II years, entitled "Even the Browns."

Nearly a full chapter is devoted to the gritty, determined Gray, and it brought back memories of the handicapped athlete's struggle in the minors before he graduated to the remarkable, pennant-winning St. Louis Browns.

Gray, whose real name was Peter J. Wyshner, was born in Nanticoke, Pa., a grim, scruffy coal-mining town near Wilkes-Barre. Pete's father was a miner of Lithuanian descent who changed the family name to "Gray."

We are indebted to author

Mead for these early details of the ball player's life.

When he was six years old, Pete Gray hopped a farmer's provision wagon, fell off and caught his right arm in the spokes. The arm was mangled and had to be amputated above the elbow.

Gray was intent on playing professional baseball. Although right-handed, he learned to bat from the left side. While his right sleeve dangled empty and useless, his left arm grew in strength.

He had a superb batting eye. Lean and quick, he mixed line drives with well-executed bunts, mostly down the third base line. He dragged others past the pitcher.

With keen eyesight and a powerful left arm, he also managed to hit for distance. He rapped out doubles, triples and even home runs.

It was at Memphis that Gray began receiving nationwide publicity. In 1944 he batted .333, stole 63 bases and was voted the league's Most Valuable Player. In two seasons, he struck out only 15 times. The War Department made movies of his play to be shown wounded soldiers in army hospitals.

The Browns, 1944 American League champions, bought Gray for $20,000. The one-armed outfielder, swinging a 35-ounce bat, had his dramatic moments in 1945 but wound up batting .218 with six doubles and two triples, mostly as a pinch hitter.

SOMETHING FOR THE U.S. OLYMPIC ATHLETES... A $1,000,000 DONATION.

As you may know, our Olympic athletes are not government subsidized. So they need money to train now if they're going to win in Moscow in 1980.

Here's our plan: Toyota and your participating Toyota dealer will make a donation for the U.S. Olympic team every time a new Toyota car or truck is sold through June 30th, 1978. Help us make our sales goal, so we can give $1,000,000 or more, to help build a tough U.S. team. When you buy a new Toyota, you'll also get a specially designed Olympic pin, patch, and a certificate thanking you for your support. Now you can get a tough Toyota, and a tough Olympic team.

Legal leaf is black Africa's cheap pep pill

By Richard G. Zimmerman

NAIROBI-(NEA)-President Jomo Kenyatta, with a sweep of his dictatorial pen, last year legalized the sale and use of a cheap, readily available amphetamine-like drug throughout Kenya.

And nothing very much happened. There were no published reports of half-crazed, sleepless zombies wandering the streets in increasing numbers, although the crime-loving national tabloid press here would have drooled over such stories.

Long-haired youths from around the world did not troop to Kenya seeking a cheap, legal high.

And there was little public outcry, other than some letters-to-the-editor both supporting and opposing the legalization of the drug.

The effect of chewing miraa is akin to that obtained from overuse of the more refined forms of amphetamines.

That Kenyatta was able to unilaterally legalize a primitive yet potent form of pep pills without even the advice or consent of the Kenyan parliament, with few serious repercussions in this comparatively conservative black African country, is a testament both to the venerable old president's personal prestige and to the rather widespread acceptance, if not universal approval, of the drug's use in Kenya.

The fact that the production of the green, leafy dope for both export purposes and domestic use had become a highly profitable enterprise in this thoroughly capitalist country, and that the ubiquitous and influential Kenyatta family had a piece of the action, also no doubt helped clear the way for unopposed legalization.

The drug involved is known as "miraa" (pronounced near-rh) in sub-Saharan Africa and as "khat" or "cat" in the Middle East. It is well known, if not always exactly legal, even in some of the most conservative Arab countries where dealers and users of less indigenous drugs are dealt with draconian dispatch.

To obtain maximum effect from miraa the leaves of the chewed, still moist plant are chewed into a large cud and the resulting bitter juice is swallowed.

According to Kenyan physician, C. K. Maitai, the effect of chewing miraa is akin to that obtained from overuse of amphetamines or "uppers" — euphoria, restlessness, loss of appetite, (forms of the drug often are prescribed in the U.S. for weight loss) and, in some cases, a later phase of usually mild but potentially debilitating depression.

While the effects of miraa are not as severe as those of amphetamines, the history of this comparatively popular drug in Kenya should be of interest to those both opposing and supporting the legalization and decriminalization of marijuana in the U.S.

The European colonial masters of both Kenya and neighboring Somalia, who seldom if ever sampled the drug themselves, did their best to stamp out its use, mainly as a result of the rather self-serving fear that its use might undermine the blind discipline of "native" troops. What remained of colonial law was clear enough for the attorney general of Kenya, just prior to Kenyatta's edict, to warn that "it is a criminal offense... to sell the stuff here or even chew it here."

As in the case of marijuana and other drugs that are not demonstrably physically habit forming, as opposed to opium and its many derivatives, there is no general agreement as to how dependent a user of miraa may become on the drug. Dr. Maitai and other medical observers, including a UN team asked to investigate miraa by the Arab League, believe the drug is "associated with mild to severe forms of mental dependency, as evidenced by a strong desire to continue taking the drug."

Those inclined to take a more anthropological view of miraa, such as Nairobi University's Dalles Browne, assume a less severe stance. Browne argues that many, if not most, users of miraa in Kenya are moderate, weekend consumers who chew wads of dope only in quiet, social settings. Even Dr. Maitai concedes that historically the use of miraa played its most important part in ceremonies involving births, deaths, circumcisions and weddings. Indeed, many westerners have had their first — and often only — encounter with miraa at an Arab wedding reception, where sugar may be added to the cud to lessen its bitter taste for the neophyte.

While miraa is comparatively cheap (a fresh kilo costs under 40 cents in Nairobi) and, according to Browne, a moderate user may consume only four kilos over an entire weekend), heavy daily use by a head of a household who may bring home the equivalent of $12 a week can prove to be a heavy financial burden on a family. Also, the lack of appetite induced by the drug can lead to chronic malnutrition, especially in a poor environment where the less a member of a family eats the better it is for the family budget.

Some wives and lovers of heavy miraa users have publicly complained that their partners have become more interested in their daily dose of the bitter leaf than in wholesome sex. But others, such as several letter writers to local newspapers, claim the drug rather acts as an aphrodisiac.

News watch

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — The University of California is studying ways to develop the retired cruise ship Mariposa into a floating home for the elderly.

Donald Turner, director of the Environmental Design Research Center at UC-Berkeley, said Thursday it would cost an estimated $3 million to convert the ship to 400 apartments. The 20,000-ton vessel, now anchored in San Francisco, is up for sale. In addition to rooms with private baths, it also has a theater, library, medical facilities and restaurants.

NEW YORK (AP) — Babies born in the United States last year will live an average of 73 years, an all-time high, says an insurance company report.

Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. said the figure of 73 years for 1977 is 0.2 years more than the life expectancy computed for children born the year before, and 2.3 years more than for those born in 1969-71.

The decline in mortality in the first year of life was responsible for most of the gain in longevity, the bureau said, pointing out the infant mortality rate fell from 20 per 1,000 live births in 1969-71 to 15.1 in 1976 and 14 in 1977, another record low.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — United Farm Workers President Cesar Chavez says his union may resume its boycott of Gallo wines if the state does not order the world's largest winery to bargain with the union.

Chavez demanded Thursday that the state Agricultural Labor Relations Board grant the UFW a bargaining order for Gallo field workers because of "massive law violations" stemming from a 1975 representation election.

"If they don't order the bargaining order, maybe we'll have to go back to the national boycott," Chavez told a news conference. Chavez ended the boycott of Gallo wines, table grapes and lettuce in January.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A federal judge issued a 32-day restraining order that bars Akron's new abortion ordinance from taking effect Monday.

U.S. District Judge Leroy Contie Jr. granted a request by lawyers of the American Civil Liberties Union Thursday. Conti said he wants to analyze the effect of the ordinance, enacted Feb. 28 by the City Council, before issuing a final ruling.

The ordinance requires that women considering an abortion be told 24 hours before the procedure that they may suffer emotional problems, sterility or complications as a result. It also requires parental consent for females under 15 and notification of the parents of females under 18 before an abortion is performed.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Teh Sin Tong, a laborer, was hanged at Changi Prison today, the first person executed in Singapore for drug trafficking, a government official said.

Teh, 28, was caught trying to sell nearly nine ounces of heroin in 1976 and was sentenced to death by the High Court that year. His appeal was dismissed in November.

Nine other people are awaiting execution for drug act violations.

LONDON (AP) — Chambermaids, bellhops and porters are going to have a say in the operation of a chain of British hotels, in what the company calls a "far-reaching advance in industrial democracy."

Grand Metropolitan Ltd., which employs 6,000 people in its 53 hotels, and the General and Municipal Workers Union announced that two staff representatives would attend board meetings as observers, and employees' representatives will be members of staff committees for each hotel and of regional committees.

"We believe the master-and-servant era is over," said David Hutchins, the chain's personnel director.

TOKYO (AP) — Half of Japan's 275 major Japanese corporations have reached wage settlements in this year's annual spring labor offensive of brief strikes, the employers' federation announced.

It said raises so far averaged 6.1 percent, or $42 a month. Last year the average was 9.1 percent or $58.

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union and Morocco signed a fishing treaty Thursday that the Moroccans say amounts to de facto Soviet recognition of their title to the disputed Spanish Sahara.

The treaty provides for joint fishing operations off the coast of "all Moroccan territory," said Aziz Bel-Riti, director-general of the Moroccan fishing office. Afterward, Bel-Riti said because of the comprehensive wording of the treaty, he interprets it to mean the Soviet Union recognizes Morocco's claim to the region it took over from Spain in 1976.

Since then the Moroccans have been fighting rebels of the Polisario Front, which is backed by Algeria.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ontario (AP) — An application by an Ontario company to establish a currency exchange depot on the International Bridge between the upper peninsula of Michigan and Canada has been turned down because it might cause traffic jams.

A spokesman for the bridge authority said Blue Water Currency Exchange Ltd. of Sarnia, Ontario, asked to set up a depot on a traffic island on the Canadian side of the bridge. He said the company may submit another application for an alternate site.

BELMONT, W.Va. (AP) — Adrian Hays went home early, his face worn by the mountain sun and the worst day's work of his life.

Hays, a volunteer fireman at nearby Belmont, helped dress 51 shattered bodies in plastic Thursday, helped tag each with a number, helped deliver them to the families who were led one at a time into the black-curtained booth to affirm their loss.

"Fifty-one," he whispered. "Fifty-one men in bags. Thank God I can go now."

Slowly, hearse after hearse be they Cadillacs or panel trucks, inched past the willows on Main Street to the Belmont fire station, just around the corner from a ramshackle City Hall.

Through an open window, the clatter of a typewriter, methodically cranking out death certificates, punctuated the hush.

An older woman stood outside the United Methodist Church and mourned the loss of her favorite grandson, who had only last week given her a birthday gift, a chandelier that she had wanted for years.

Inside was the dead man's wife, in near faint, under the arm of Pastor Amos McVey. "We knew he was dead when we were called to the armory at Parkersburg and they began reading the list," said the grandmother. "We heard the name of his supervisor, so we knew he was gone, too."

Parkersburg, Belmont, Schultz, Sistersville and St. Marys. Most everyone in these little towns, just on the West Virginia side of the Ohio River, knows one of the men who died when the scaffolding collapsed Thursday morning in a Monongahela Power Co. cooling tower. Lee Steele of Schultz lost four of his five sons, a brother, two brothers-in-law and three nephews.

Dale Johnson, working on an already completed sister tower, saw the accident that killed his brother-in-law, Emmett Steele, who was Lee Steele's brother.

"Just a rumbling noise, no screams, just a rumble," he said.

"The scaffolding just unraveled from one end to another all the way around the tower. And those men tried to run ahead of it."

No one survived the fall, a drop of 168 feet.

"We worked too fast," Johnson said. "They jacked up the forms (for pouring concrete) too fast."

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is investigating. OSHA said scaffolding specialists had visited the site all along.

"Let me tell you about OSHA," said Roger Miller, a second cousin to the Steeles and himself a construction worker. "Those damned inspectors come around and ask about hand rails and that's about all. They don't know a thing."

With that, Miller resumed his drink, one of several he intended Thursday night.

He sat in Rose's Chalet, open for business as usual, barely 100 yards from Gate No. 6 and the rubble left from the morning's horror.

Just within that gate, amid the clutter and gray of the concrete tower and gravel beneath, fluttered a single splash of color, a large banner, emblazoned in blue and red and yellow, with the words "Make Safety a Bell-Ringer This Year."

The Tom Sawyer sunny day fun ploy: Matt Simon, 9, son of Mrs. Lois Marie Simon, appears to be swapping a fishing rod and bicycle ride for a chance to paint a bit. Jeff Sumpter, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Sumpter, appears willing to make the trade. The dog, Buffy, appears unconcerned. Buffy belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Allred and their daughter, Paige Allison.

BIG BOUQUET—Flowers planted in a half barrel and set in full sun are a good way to provide color in a limited space. The Texas Department of Agriculture has designed this numbered guide to help gardeners choose and arrange their plants. Three Shasta daisies (1) are planted in the center of the barrel. A circle of four large yellow marigolds (2) is placed around the daisies, and outside of it another circle of four multicolored zinnias (4) alternated with four small yellow marigolds (4). Four sweet alyssum (3) are bunched at either side in groups of two, while four purple petunias (5) cascade front and back, also in groups of two. Though well-balanced, the arrangement is informal enough to suggest the spontaneity of wildflowers. The container should be lined with gravel and filled with approximately 50 pounds of porous soil.

Nature's rainbow is in plants

Nothing provides color like a mass of bedding plants in bloom. One of nature's most vivid gifts, these flowering plants will last through summer and into fall if certain varieties are planted and properly cared for.

Bedding plants can be purchased by the flat and massed for colorful effect across lawns and backyard gardens. With the proper care your yard will be blooming with color. Here are a few tips from the Texas Department of Agriculture:

Transplanting is the first important step in the proper care of bedding plants. More than one young plant has died of shock on its way from flat to garden. When the plant is purchased, it is removed from the carefully controlled environment of the nursery or greenhouse to the drier climate of the home. To protect plants from even this mild shock, water them well and keep them in a shaded location until ready to transplant.

Transplanting must be done under favorable conditions. This means avoiding the hottest time of day, mid-afternoon. Early morning, late afternoon or days that are foggy or cloudy are ideal.

Make sure the earth around the plant's roots is damp. Tap the pot gently, taking care to leave as much soil around the roots as possible when the plant slips from its casing. A small putty knife is helpful for loosening small plants from their pots.

Place the plants in holes that have been dug large enough to permit the roots to grow outward into the soil. Cut the sides of the holes vertically to approximate the shape of the small root ball. Place a soft mound of soil at the bottom of the hole to cushion and protect the root system.

Set the plant slightly lower than ground level. Fill in around it with soil mixed with fertilizer, and leave a shallow basin around the stem for water.

Fix up to modernize

Modernize, renovate and do-it-yourself appear to be the watchwords this year for many homeowners who see that remodeling or expansion can make basic improvements in their home lifestyles.

Adding a bedroom, enclosing a porch, modernizing a kitchen and bath, finishing or insulating an attic or basement, laying a patio, or building a garage are home improvement projects often undertaken now to keep up with the growing family.

Fortunately, most home plans are basically sound, and often a coat of paint inside and out can work wonders in chasing the "maybe-we-ought-to-move" blues.

Sometimes rejuvenating a single room that has become dingy and dreary can change the owner's entire outlook on the old homestead.

The key room as far as most women are concerned is the kitchen. A homemaker probably spends more waking hours there than anywhere else, and if the decor is depressing or the appliances outdated, it is not surprising if she's a candidate for the "I hate to cook" school of homemaking.

Revitalizing a kitchen can sometimes be accomplished with just a few dollars and a lot of elbow grease, reports Jean Mattingly, kitchen modernization manager for Hotpoint appliances. Among the simplest ways to put new life in your kitchen, she says, is to re-accessorize.

New hardware for cabinets, shiny copper pots and kettles to hang on the wall, and colorful spice charts all can add sparkle. If you have reversible insert panels in your cabinets, reverse them—or cover them with a new pattern.

A coat of paint and new curtains also will work wonders, and if you want to go first class on redecorating, try fresh wallpaper or re-finish the cabinets to help create a like-new appearance.

These are projects, of course, that require more time and energy than money. Replacing out-of-date appliances can bring a fresh, new look and a host of time- and energy-saving convenience features.

Most appliances today can be installed by the home handyman, or for a small additional charge by an installer. Some Hotpoint food waste disposers have complete installation instructions, and there are installation kits for dishwashers that give step-by-step instructions and include all parts for replacing an old built-in dishwasher with a new one.

A Hotpoint trash compactor can be placed under-counter in place of a standard 15-inch wide base cabinet, or can be used free-standing in the kitchen with a chopping block top as an accessory.

Newer products, such as microwave ovens, are available for the modern homeowner to place on a countertop, install on a shelf, or to build in with the use of an accessory trim kit. A double built-in oven with one unit being a microwave model also can replace old double-oven units.

An old cooktop can be supplanted by a modern glass-ceramic unit that has a smooth surface so it can be wiped clean in a jiffy, and many old manually cleaned wall ovens can be replaced by self-cleaning models that clean themselves electrically.

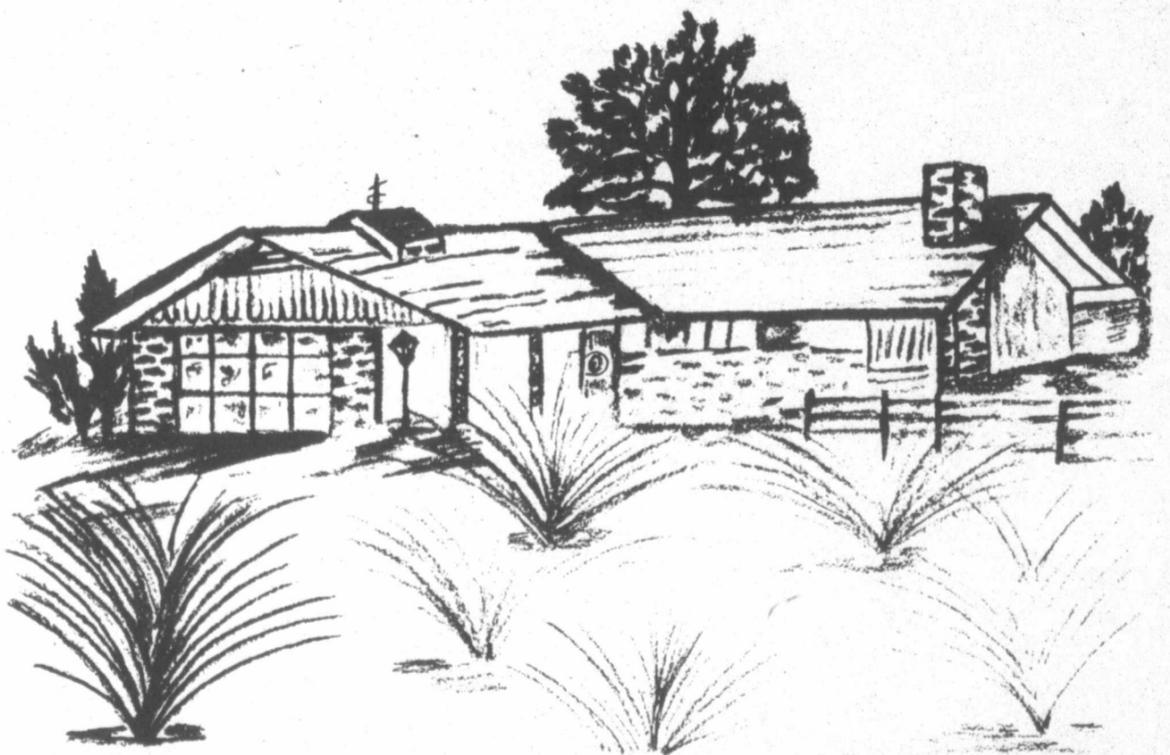

New sink fixtures and countertops, a luminous ceiling, kitchen flooring, and a meal-planning and communication center with built-in cookbook shelves are other ways to update a kitchen.

Let your imagination—and your budget—be your guide, says Miss Mattingly.

City offers clean-up help

With spring upon us, can summer be far behind?

Schools soon will be out for summer vacation, days are getting longer and with the switch this morning to daylight savings time, there is another hour of sun to light after-work outdoor diversions.

It's a time for boating and fishing, camping and touring, and, as the Tom Sawyer scene on the cover suggest, it's a time for painting and cleaning and fixing up around the house.

Some folks find home improvement projects quite enjoyable, others consider work around or on the house to be drudgery. But once the painting or repairing or cleaning is accomplished, few would not admit to a feeling of accomplishment and pride. And the improvements add to the value of the property.

When enough people in a community work to dress up their homes and yards, the whole becomes greater than the individual parts — the entire city becomes a better place to live.

So when making plans for summertime fun, don't forget the enjoyment to be gleaned from living in a neat and clean home in a neat and clean city. Do what you can to help make Pampa fresh as a daisy.

Each year, to encourage citizens to clean up around their homes and to assist them in the projects, the city provides extra trash pick up services.

Beginning Monday, city employes will pick up items such as old hot water heaters, old furniture, "almost anything," said City Manager Mack Wofford, "as long as it can be handled by one or two men."

Wofford said that smaller items should be grouped in bags or boxes for easier handling. And limbs — "it's better if they are cut and bundled," he said, "but maybe that's not possible and we are pretty loose about that."

Don't expect collectors to pick up your grass clippings if you simply dump them in a pile in the alley. They should be bagged.

The schedule for the special pickup will be Monday through Friday for Ward 1; May 8-12 for Ward 2; May 15-19 Ward 3; and May 22-26 Ward 4.

Chamber urges beautification

As part of the annual emphasis on beautifying Pampa, the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a contest aimed at recognizing the city's most attractive homes and yards.

For purposes of the competition, contest officials have divided the city into five sections with a winner to be selected from each of them.

Section one is the area north of Harvester Avenue and west of Mary Ellen. Section two is north of Harvester and east of Mary Ellen. Section three is the area west of Mary Ellen and Cuyler Streets between Harvester and U.S. 60.

Section four is east of Mary Ellen and Cuyler Streets, between Harvester and U.S. 60. Section five is the area south of U.S. 60.

Nominations of houses and yards for the contest may be sent to the Chamber of Commerce, Box 1942, Pampa 79065.

Those nominated will be checked by contest officials and will be designated for the judges' final consideration by a sign in the front yard bearing the slogan of this year's cleanup campaign: "Pampa, fresh as a daisy."

Winners will be selected in mid May by a panel of out-of-town judges.

Make workroom workable

Here are some ways you can make your workshop more functional:

Save empty jars and cans. When they are clearly labeled and arranged on shelves or in cabinets, glass jars allow you to quickly spot easily misplaced small items, such as nails, tacks, and screws. You might want to nail the jar lids into a shelf board or low beam to keep them handily at your fingertips.

Empty coffee cans and other tins make perfect holders for small tools, such as an assortment of wrenches or screw drivers. Label the tins according to contents so you can quickly locate these often-used tools when they're needed.

Basic tools fall into five main classifications: cutting, gripping, measuring, fastening and striking. A mounted peg board with S-hooks can be used to keep many of the larger tools stored safely and neatly. Remember to hang the board in a convenient spot, yet out of children's reach to avoid injury to curious hands.

CITY OF PAMPA CLEAN-UP, PAINT-UP, FIX-UP 1978

Use right filler

By Herb Alexander

There is no lack of materials to serve as fillers for cracks and holes in wood. But to make the patching of furniture, trim and cabinets the neat job it should be, you must pick the right type and apply it properly.

Putty and plastic wood fillers should not be confused with the wood filler used to seal open grain wood. The latter is brushed across the grain of the wood and then the excess wiped away before finishing. The fillers in question here are used for cracks, nail holes and such.

Sometimes old-fashioned linseed oil putty is all that you will need. Do not use it to repair a broken corner or to build up an edge since this sort of putty does not get really hard.

It also does not adhere as well as some of the other fillers. You will find it useful in filling cracks and holes in exterior surfaces. The expansion and contraction due to temperature changes will not hurt this flexible substance.

Putty-like are the plastic compounds available in tubes and cans. These consist of wood powder mixed in an adhesive. They dry quickly, almost too quickly if you are not careful. When dry the material is dense and hard and can be cut and sanded. Some brands are somewhat coarse so make it as smooth as you can while it still is soft.

These fillers are non-porous. If you are repairing wood with a stained rather than painted finish you will not be able to stain the filler once it is dry. Try to buy a filler that matches the wood. If you cannot, color the filler before filling the crack. Use powdered pigments to get the right color.

Home remodeling continues

American homeowners are remodeling at a frantic pace. If industry projections hold true, that pace is likely to remain fast and furious into the foreseeable future.

Though the National Home Improvement Council previously estimated that home modernization would be a $35-billion industry by 1980, Council President Edward A. More now labels that forecast "conservative."

Just last year, More predicted at the Council's convention in San Francisco, "We could reach as high as $35.5-billion for home improvements in 1977."

"Even with the housing recovery," More said in a speech before NHIC members, "the new construction segment of the total construction industry has dropped to about 60 percent and home improvements have risen to 40 percent of total construction expenditures."

"As recently as 1974," the Council president added, "home improvements accounted for only 29 percent of total construction activity, or $18.5-billion and new construction accounted for 71 percent."

What's behind the spectacular rise in the home modernization industry? "In 1970," More said, "there were 38 million homes in this country 21 years old or older. By 1980, there will be 47 million homes in this same aging bracket. That means that about one million homes annually are moving into this

Others in the field see the residential remodeling market growing to a $45-billion industry by 1980. If that forecast proves accurate, it will mean the home improvement market has tripled in volume in the decade since 1970.

A study of the home remodeling and repair market by the brokerage house Goldman Sachs tends to confirm this assessment. In a recent report, the firm said, "... based on the likely strong demand for existing homes, together with the fact that most recently purchased existing homes tend to be upgraded by their occupants, our projections imply a continuation of the modestly favorable real growth patterns in this sector."

Other factors contributing to the remodeling boom include rising family incomes, rapid growth in the 25-44 age group, new family formations and the high cost of new housing.

By itself, the rising cost of new housing is enough to convince many homeowners to remain where they are and improve their properties. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports the average price of a new home has reached a record $55,900.

Another aspect of rising new home costs is the price of land. Recent Commerce Department figures say a typical improved lot now represents about 17 percent of the cost of a new home.

When a homeowner decides to modernize, he only has to pay the cost of labor and materials since he already owns the land. He also saves on the cost of moving, which experts estimate at about 10 percent of the cost of a new home. And his present mortgage probably is less expensive than what he would have to pay for a new mortgage.

Good kitchen design is personalized

A CLEAN, CONTEMPORARY DESIGN is this General Electric "European-look kitchen"—says its designer, Bill Ketcham. It is a contemporary kitchen in the popular U-shape design to describe how appearance flair can be added while still incorporating design efficiency.

No room in the house requires as much attention by the builder, or generates as much excitement in a home shopper, as the kitchen.

After all, a homemaker probably spends more waking hours there than anywhere else. That's why this key room should provide the right extras and features, an efficient and practical layout, and a decor that you can live with.

Since the kitchen is such an important factor in making everyday living easy and enjoyable, the following pointers from W. J. Ketcham, CKD, General Electric's kitchen design manager, can the function of the kitchen. The three main centers form a "work triangle" that should measure between 13 and 22 feet.

Ideally, the sequence of work in the kitchen moves from storage, mixing, and other preparation, then to cooking and serving, and finally back to the sink, disposer, and dishwasher for clean-up. There is, or should be, a continuity of functional design in all kitchens. Although we talk of "work centers" as though they are separate and alone, they are not. They should be reasonably close to each other, and in most cases the counters between work centers can and will be shared.

The basic layout of the kitchen is the most important consideration. First, check the location of major appliances; often what is an attractive area is in reality a well-decorated kitchen that camouflages poor planning and common design flaws. Check for basic flaws such as a refrigerator installed so that it won't fully open to its built-in stops, a range and refrigerator placed side by side, or an open dishwasher door that can block access to the sink or the kitchen aisle.

Refrigeration: Obviously built around the refrigerator, this center should be located near the door through which the supplies enter and should have sufficient drawer, shelf, and counter space to handle the numerous kitchen utensils, food-stuffs, and small appliances in common use in today's kitchen. There should be a minimum of 15 inches of work counter at the opening side of the refrigerator; more, if possible. Today's modern side-by-side refrigerator-freezers can be used more efficiently with work space on both sides of the appliance.

Clean-up: This center handles chores performed in the kitchen during meal preparation and the subsequent clean-up. It is best located in an ample area between the range and refrigerator, and should have at least 24 inches of counter space on each side of the sink, whether the sink is double or single bowl. In addition to the dishwasher, a low-cost, highly efficient food waste disposer is recommended to take care of most "wet" garbage, while a trash compactor is an effective means of handling solid, nongrindable wastes such as milk containers, egg cartons, cereal boxes, and the like.

Cooking: An ideal location for the cooking center is near the dining room and breakfast area. A counter at each side of the range is important for efficiency as well as safety. There should be a minimum of 12 inches of counter at the side away from another major center, and 24 inches minimum between the range and another major center, and 24 inches minimum between the range and another major appliance or the sink.

Kitchen shapes—which one is the best for you?

Kitchens come in five basic shapes: One-Wall, Corridor, L-Shaped, U-Shaped, and Four-Wall. There are almost endless variations of each of these plans, caused by door and window locations, but each basic shape retains its essential advantages. Consider the following descriptions to help you determine what shape you should consider.

The One-Wall kitchen, as the name implies, has all the kitchen elements along one wall and is suitable for studio apartments or vacation homes.

The Corridor, or Two-Wall kitchen, is practical in apartments and in any home in which space usage is important.

The U-Shaped kitchen is generally most popular and efficient and serves well when integrated with an open plan that flows to the family room or dining room. The L-Shaped kitchen thus far has been considered by many kitchen planners as allowing the greatest efficiency for use by more than one cook, and when a breakfast space is necessary within the same room.

The Four-Wall kitchen is a new concept. It incorporates the use of all available wall areas for the greatest space efficiency, casual traffic control, and functionalism, while offering an opportunity for styling with flair.

Brightening basement

By Herb Alexander

A basement need not be expensively paneled to be attractive. Nor need it be left as the builder finished it just because a recreation room or some other basement room is not planned.

A coat of paint on basement walls will make the area attractive for both work and play and will brighten the basement at a minimum of expense and not too much work.

Painting a basement is no more complicated than doing any other room. Remember that you are painting over masonry surfaces which require special paint and certain preparation.

Aside from appearance, paint will make a basement drier. Heavy duty waterproof coatings will retard slight moisture and seepage. Major seepage, however, cannot be prevented from the inside. A properly constructed foundation will be waterproofed from the outside.

If there is a major defect in wall or floor, this must be corrected before inside surfaces can be refinished.

Assuming that walls are sound, preparation consists primarily of cleaning. Remove all dust, dirt and other foreign material. Use a brush and water, add detergent if dirt and stains are stubborn. Scrape away coatings that are flaking or peeling. Paint applied to loose material will fall off with falling particles.

New masonry is often beset with a condition called efflorescence. This is a powdery coating that must be scrubbed off. There are special masonry conditioners that you can coat over the wall to end the problem. Mildew should be scrubbed with a solution of household bleach and water. Repeat several times, rinsing with clear water in between and allowing to dry thoroughly.

Ordinary paints will not serve for covering masonry. They must be alkali-proof and must be permeable so that a slight amount of moisture can breathe through the paint without causing it to peel. Buy a paint specifically designed for this job. The likely types are Portland cement paints which are dry and must be mixed with water, or water-thinned latex paints. Read instructions carefully. Generally, the powder paints may be applied only over unpainted masonry or over coatings of similar paint. Surfaces must also be thoroughly wet and kept that way while you work.

How to grow a tree: a simple guide

Planting a bare-root tree: From the book "The World of Trees" comes the suggestion to dig a hole at least 12 inches wider and 6 inches deeper than the spread and depth of the root system.

Whether they're majestically tall and imposing, or short, sprightly and sassy—whether they produce sweetly-perfumed flowers, or luscious-tasting fruit—all trees have their own personality, and can add something special to the landscape.

So, it's important to select a tree carefully to make sure it will create the picture you have in mind. And, it's even more important to make sure you plant them correctly, or you'll end up with no picture at all, according to the new Ortho book, "The World of Trees."

If you're careless, you'll probably have to bury your tree before you get the chance to plant it! Most trees are watered every day, while at the nursery, and they should receive the same consideration once you bring them home.

When you're ready to plant, prepare a hole at least 12 inches wider and 6 inches deeper than the spread and depth of your tree's root system.

While digging, set aside the top 6 inches of soil in one pile, and most of the subsoil in another; then place the last few shovelfuls of soil into a third pile which will later be used for building a dike around a watering basin.

The next step is to mix "root zone" soil for your tree by combining equal parts of organic matter, like moistened peat moss, with the top soil you have saved. You must also mix a "transition soil," using one part organic matter to four parts of subsoil.

Before adding any of the mixtures, loosen the soil in the bottom of the hole to allow for root penetration and better drainage—then, line the hole with 4 to 6 inches of "transition soil."

Next, using the "root zone" soil, make a cone-shaped mound directly on top of the "transition soil," and set the roots of your tree over this mound.

Now that your tree is positioned in the planting hole, make sure that it's placed at the same depth at which it originally grew, which will be evident from the soil-stained ring at the base of its trunk.

Then, work 2 or 3 shovelfuls of "root zone" soil under and around the roots to eliminate air pockets in the planting hole.

Before you add more soil, you'll have to stake your tree for support. Simply drive a stake that's approximately 2 inches wide, 2 inches thick, and about 6 to 8 feet long, into the soil about 6 inches away from the trunk, on the side of the prevailing wind. Then, fill the rest of the hole.

Build a watering basin with the soil you've saved by placing a dike 4 to 5 inches high in a circle 2 to 3 feet away from the tree trunk.

Finally, secure your tree to the stake by threading a 12-gauge wire through a short length of garden hose and twisting the wire around the trunk of the tree and the stake already placed, in the form of a figure 8.

Now that your tree is securely planted, it's a good idea to prune it, according to Ortho's "The World of Trees" not only for beauty's sake, but to balance the top of the young tree with its reduced root system.

Truck camper, trailer or fold-down

... traveling piggyback

The pickup truck camper put the term "recreational vehicle" in the American leisure-lifestyle language... and opened the road for the motor homes, mini motor homes and vans that were to follow in droves.

In fact, this vehicle (which rides piggyback on a standard pickup truck) became a status symbol when John Steinbeck wrote about his camper in the popular "Travels with Charlie."

Until recently this versatile RV had been overshadowed by more luxurious units. However, within the past several seasons the original self-contained, self-powered camper has seen a resurgence.

Combined with a rugged four-wheel drive pickup truck, the slide-in camping unit offers an off-the-road camper that can take you and most of the comforts of home almost anywhere.

In this manner the pickup camper has found a new popularity with hunters, fishermen, backpackers and others who want a mobile base camp that can get them back into the country.

Most slide-in rigs provide water system, sink, gas range, self-contained electrical systems, and commodious bunks in the cab-over section. Depending on need, the camper can be equipped with a furnace, water heater, toilet and holding tank and a long list of luxuries to take the edge off roughing it.

There is a wide variety of truck campers available for the standard eight-foot pickup truck bed. A typical line is available from Coachmen, the largest selling brand of all types of recreational vehicles.

This company offers slide-ins from eight through 11 feet long (measuring from the front of the truck bed back). All have a spacious cab-over double bed, convertible dinette and plenty of storage space. Coachmen even has a special lightweight model for compact trucks.

The type of unit right for you depends on the carrying capacity of your pickup truck and personal taste. For proper installation you will want to use chain or cable tie-downs that attach to the truck frame, and perhaps a shock absorber system.

The correct mating of pickup and camper does not produce the type of vehicle that charges up mountains.

Once you get the bug to go camping, the big decision is: what kind of camping outfit to buy?

There are two basic types of camping units that tow behind your car. Campers fold down tidily into a compact box on wheels; travel trailers are stand-up, stay-up units ready to live in when you open the door.

A list of pros and cons for both kinds of equipment has been compiled by Starcraft Corporation of Goshen, Ind., a firm which has manufactured both campers and travel trailers for many years.

Camper advantages: easy towing, thanks to low height and light weight; easy storing; plenty of open, living area with roomy end-bunks; and sleeping and dining room for up to eight people. Campers can be pulled with a small auto, even a compact, and so gasoline costs are low.

Life in a camper can be a far cry from roughing it. Luxuries available include a built-in shower, gas/electric refrigerator and gas range and oven, even a kitchen that swings out for outdoor cooking. There's a new device called StarRise, a set-up system that effortlessly raises the roof to a living mode at the touch of a button.

Setting up is something travel trailer owners don't need to think of. Everything is in place, ready to use at all times. Other travel trailer pluses are better insulation for cold-weather outings, built-in range and oven, eye-level refrigerator and hot water as standard equipment. And travel trailers are self-contained; you need no electric or water hookup.

Having the comforts of a travel trailer doesn't mean being shut away from nature, either. Some models come with StarDome, a big skylight, which brings the sun and moon into your living room whenever you wish.

Your choice need not depend on price. There is a middle ground of about $3,300 to $4,500 where you can choose your unit by preference alone. In this price range, you can get a deluxe, fold-down camper or a more modestly equipped travel trailer.

The best way to make the best decision for your family is to examine both kinds and make your own list of "wanted" features.

You can believe these signs

Heading for the road this vacation season? You'll find many facilities available along the way, if you keep a sharp eye out for signs as you travel the highway.

A sign with a question mark, for instance, denotes a place where you can get information regarding roads, lodgings, and recreational facilities.

APR78

Lodging and eating facilities are indicated by a reclining figure and plate with knife and fork, respectively. The outline of a deer denotes an area where you can view deer, and a sign with a wrench means there's a mechanic nearby.

The outline of a camera alerts drivers to the fact that there's a good viewing area coming up, and a hiking figure means there are hiking trails ahead.

Boating enthusiasts will want to watch for these signs: an anchor denotes a marina... a boat on a trailer indicates the site of a launching ramp... a motor boat or sailboat sign indicates where either sport can be enjoyed, as does the figure of a man rowing, and a water-skier.

Various points of interest are indicated by these signs: a fish denotes a fish hatchery, a bear means there's a bear-viewing area nearby, and an auto circled with arrows indicates an interpretative road for automobiles.

It's important to be aware of what signs to look for in an emergency. A large "H" means there's a hospital in the vicinity; and of course, a cross on a white background denotes a first-aid station. Telephone and gas station signs are easily recognizable, as are restroom signs.

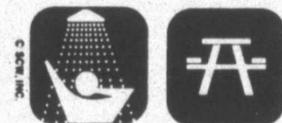

Sports enthusiasts will want to watch for their favorite recreation: a fish with a hook indicates there's fishing nearby... a horse with barn indicates stables... a figure with a rifle means there's hunting in the area... there are self-explanatory emblems for surfing, scuba diving, swimming, and diving... a horse and rider denote nearby horse trails... and a bicycle means there's a bicycle trail in the vicinity.

Availing yourself of that nearby picnic area or swimming pool can make all the difference between a good trip and a really great one... let the youngsters make a game of spotting facilities along the road, for the best possible family vacation this season.

For those who want to travel in style, motorhomes are available in 22½, 20 and 18-foot lengths with choice of floor plan arrangements and optional equipment. Rear bath is one of the features of this front-lounge model.

Travel trailer lets you follow sun

Following the sun was once the exclusive privilege of the rich, but thanks to the modern travel trailer, year-round resorting is within the reach of the great majority.

The proof can be seen on the nation's highways and in the hundreds of recreational vehicle campgrounds that populate every warm weather spa.

Coming in out of the cold can be as simple as reserving your campsite. Rates at the most deluxe campgrounds at the height of the season run from as low as $5.50 per night in Tucson, Ariz., to $7.75 in Miami, Fla., including electrical and water hook-up for your trailer.

Kampgrounds of America, Inc. (KOA), is one of several networks of franchised campgrounds across the country. KOA has a nationwide reservation service that guarantees you a site at any of its locations.

In addition, there are many good independent campgrounds, not to mention state and national parks, available to the cottage on wheels. Several excellent directories list them all and rate the parks as to facilities, location, rates, cleanliness, etc.

Of course you must have access to a travel trailer to take advantage of this economical form of vacationing. However, the initial investment is more reasonable than most people imagine . . . and remember, the trailer pays for itself in savings on motel rooms and restaurants.

The Coachmen Cadet, one of the most popular travel trailers on the market, retails at just over $3,000 for a 16-foot model to $6,000 for a spacious 29-foot version. These units are completely self contained with galley, water system, toilet and shower—what RV makers call a full life support system.

Interiors are bright and roomy, with the emphasis on trouble-free upkeep. Virtually every inch of today's travel trailer is designed for quick and easy clean-up—to keep the crew out of the camper and into the fun.

Most family automobiles easily can be equipped for travel trailer towing. For approximately $400 or less, an American car can be fitted out with the most advanced towing package, including trailer hitch, transmission cooler, and wiring for trailer lights and electric brakes.

Concerned about driving a car and trailer combination? The surest way to overcome your apprehension is to talk to a veteran travel trailer camper. He or she once felt the same way, but believe the experienced camper when he tells you how easy it really is.

The golden age of travel has not left us. Summering in the north and wintering in the south is a reality for more North Americans than ever before. The travel trailer and the most extensive campground system in the world pave the road for economical and carefree going.

Try trailer towing tips

If you have never towed an RV before, remember that all aspects of driving—handling, steering, braking, accelerating, riding—are altered. Before you head for the superhighway, practice with your 4WD/RV rig near your home until you feel comfortable. Better yet, have an experienced trailer tower "check you out" at regular intervals in your learning process.

Where to get help? Many International Scout dealers are graduates of special "trailer towing seminars" which are conducted regularly.

BASIC PROCEDURES:

- Brake well in advance when towing. The weight of the smallest camper increases the stopping distance.

- Save your brakes by using the engine. Shift to a lower gear when descending grades.

- Also remember that the increased length of your combination means you need more room to pass other vehicles safely.

- Since you are driving a rig, rather than a vehicle, you must be courteous in your own driving.

- Rolling resistance and air turbulence will put increased horsepower requirements on your towing vehicle. You should be able to maintain legal highway speeds, but

- larily throughout the country by experts. State highway or tourism departments can provide valuable information. Know the laws regulating RV operation. They can vary from state to state.

Recognized national publications for trailer towing include Woodall's Trailer and RV Travel and Trailer Life. Both are monthly magazines containing a wealth of information on towing. Of course, The Recreational Vehicle Industry Association, Box 204, Chantilly, Va. 22021, is an excellent source for all types of towing information.

ON HIGHWAY

road conditions, weather, traffic and other influences may slow you down. Don't force your speed.

- On hot summer days, climbing grades may increase water temperatures. Downshifting can reduce the likelihood of overheating.

- A load equalizing hitch transfers trailer tongue weight (load) from the rear wheels of the towing vehicle to the front wheels of the towing vehicle and the trailer's axle. Use this type of hitch for trailers in excess of 2,000 lbs.

- Always check trailer brakes and lights for good working order and proper connections.

- Start in low gear and accelerate slowly to avoid "jackrabbit" starts.

- Backing a trailer takes practice, but a simple method for backing into the spot you want is to turn the steering wheel in the opposite direction from the way you want the rear of the trailer to turn.

- A trailer 2,000 lbs. or less can be safely towed without an independent brake system. Larger trailers must be equipped with their own brakes. Power brakes are a must for the tow vehicle.

OFF HIGHWAY

Towing a trailer, a boat or almost anything in the boon-docks is possible if certain "Rules of the UnRoad" are followed:

- Remember your total length of your rig. There is a considerably longer wheel-base to consider while negotiating rocks, stumps, sand, mud and an assortment of bumps and potholes.

- The trailer axle usually is the point nearest the ground on the undercarriage. And the trailer weight may drop your vehicle's rear axle.

- Wrap the trailer's electrical wiring with tape into a loom, then secure the loom above the trailer frame rails where it won't snag on underbrush.

- Everything inside the trailer must be lashed as securely as possible.

- "Take it slow" is the best off-road towing policy.

- Four-wheel drive is mandatory for off-pavement towing.

- All vehicles to be used for trailer towing should be specified with a heavy-duty alternator, heavy-duty battery, Class III equalizer hitch platform, six-way trailer wiring, and a heavy-duty flasher.

EXPLORING

Whether exploring means rock hounding, skin diving, treasure hunting, soaring, ice boating, rafting, photography, back packing, four-wheeling, snow camping, or bike riding—a 4WD vehicle such as the International Scout can be "one of the family" since its towing ability and rugged mobility will support so many of these outdoor pastimes.

Greeks grew savory

If you want to savor a flavor that set ancient civilization on its ear, it's time to develop recipes with one of the oldest herbs.

Savory was used for centuries by the Greeks and Romans; then, while conquering Western Europe, the Romans brought savory with them to England. After taking over all that territory, they had to make some contribution to the Anglo-Saxons, so why not a plant with leaves that not only tasted good but would one day be used to relieve the pain of bee stings?

Though most of the world has already been occupied, you can still make conquests when you cook with savory. Its peppery flavor is excellent in lamb and other stews, as well as chicken fricassee.

Plan ahead for camping

Camping of any kind provides you and your family with an economical and enjoyable vacation. There are so many possibilities, that it is best to plan such outings as early as possible.

Government agencies will be happy to send free listings of campgrounds and other services. Many families set aside an entire evening for the purpose of planning their special camp trip.

Once a camp route has been mapped and space reserved at the campgrounds you choose, you'll want to draw up a list of equipment needed to complete your campsite. This list should be kept and each item checked when packed so that nothing is forgotten.

Most items on your camp list will be already found in your home. Others are easily available in department or sporting goods stores.

It is important to test all equipment before packing. Tents should be inspected for rips, tears, and weakened seams. Erect your tent and check its stakes for cracks and breakage before you head for the wilds.

Light all lanterns, and cook a backyard "bon voyage" meal to try your gas stove. Fuel clogs and cleaning procedures have kept some unfortunate campers hungry and, literally "in the dark" for hours. Testing equipment beforehand should prevent these situations from interfering with your camp enjoyment.

Prior to departure, have your mechanic put your car on a lift and inspect it. A car that seems safe under regular conditions may need some adjustment for traveling through mountains or at increased speeds on highways.

All campers should do something about preparing themselves physically for their trip several weeks in advance of vacation. If your family has any medical or dental problems, take care of them before you leave home.

You can help your body adjust more easily to the rigors of outdoor life by increasing the amount of walking you do each day. Many doctors agree that even the most able-bodied hikers can prepare for the long trails ahead by climbing several flights of stairs regularly.

Expert gives advice on outdoor pictures

By JACK ENGLERT

Senior Photographic Specialist, Eastman Kodak Company
One of the many joys of vacationing and picture-taking in the Great Outdoors is the variety of lighting you encounter. From the subtle, misty colors of dawn to the rich, golden light of late afternoon, light and color are constantly changing.

Nowhere is this truer than in the red rock country of northern Arizona where the play of light on the towering buttes changes dramatically from hour to hour. Equally dramatic is the change from stark desert to the sun-dappled shade of the wooded canyons.

Capturing this spectacular beauty on film is a fascinating challenge for the photographer. This year when you venture out with Kodak's new Kodacolor 400 film in your camera, you can expand your picture-taking to include deep shade, sunsets, and campfire light as well as daytime full-sun.

For sunset shots, remember that a branch, or a person, or a tree in the foreground silhouetted against the sunset will enhance the composition of your picture.

In fire light, be sure that people are placed so that the rich glow of the fire catches each face. Try to snap the picture when the group is engaged in an activity—laughing, singing, or about to dive into their chow.

During the day, experiment with back- and sidelighting. Backlighting, with the sun shining from behind your subjects, creates a halo effect that brings out the richness of animal fur and human hair and emphasizes the translucence of leaves and petals. Be sure the sun is not shining directly into your camera lens.

Crosslighting—with the sun low in the sky—will add contours and depth to a scenic as the long shadows throw the rocks of the desert into high relief. Remember that foreground foliage—and people—will stand out more distinctly from the background buttes in a sidelighted picture because the edge or "rim" lighting visually separates them from the background.

Travel medical kit can save trip

There's nothing like a badly blistered toe, instant indigestion, an unexpected cold, or motion sickness to ruin the most intrepid traveler's high spirits. And, on your last trip, did you forget to take along your prescription aids? There is hardly a traveler—even the most experienced—who is not plagued with some kind of surprise discomfort. Being prepared for these unpleasant eventualities makes a good trip better.

Be travel-wise when packing your luggage and make room for a small, well-organized medicine kit.

Select those medical supplies you normally use, including prescription items. When buying other medical aids to include in your prepared kit, remember to get the smallest size. If you choose right, you will travel light.

Eating new or strange foods not usually encountered at home can sometimes cause indigestion.

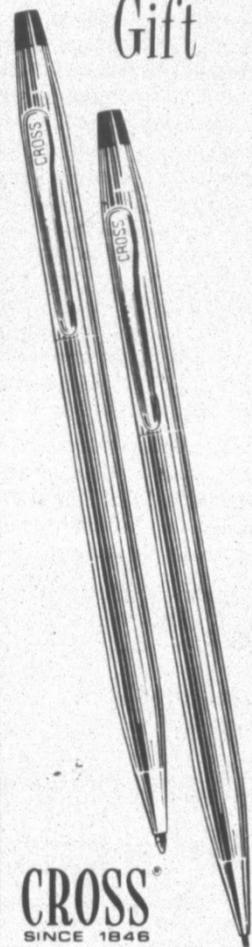

Unexpected discomforts—When minor ailments crop up on your trip, these items will prove a boon for quick, easy relief:

- Aspirin
- Calamine lotion

- (for insect bites, rash)
- Motion sickness tablets
- Antacid pills
- Soothing eye drops for eye strain
- Cold capsules
- Premoistened towelettes
- Thermometer
- Ammonia tablets for fainting

Although many of these essentials are available in major cities abroad, having a medicine kit readily at hand will save many sight-seeing hours and eliminate unscheduled stops at drug-stores while on your trip.

Greenhouses come on several styles

Today, more and more gardening enthusiasts are adding greenhouses to their "growing domains," believing they provide a stable climate for plants by maintaining a controllable amount of light, providing proper humidity, temperature, and limiting exposure to disease and insects. For many, the convenience a greenhouse affords is equal to the relaxation of putting in plants and the farming of a home-grown harvest.

In choosing the size of a greenhouse, home gardeners should keep in mind the type and size of the desired foliage and required upkeep.

City dwellers, and others with limited space, might consider a small, inexpensive window greenhouse. These are installed inside or outside a window frame and hang over the window like an air conditioner.

Those desiring more space may prefer a larger, tri-walled greenhouse. Three walls are connected to an existing structure, usually the rear of a home or a garage. This model affords gardeners considerable savings owing to the existing pre-structure and omission of one wall.

Freestanding greenhouses, which are separate from other buildings, are the most expensive as they must be formed from a newly-created, four-walled structure. These models provide slightly more space than their tri-part descendants, and foliage housed in them grows straighter and faster due to increased light.

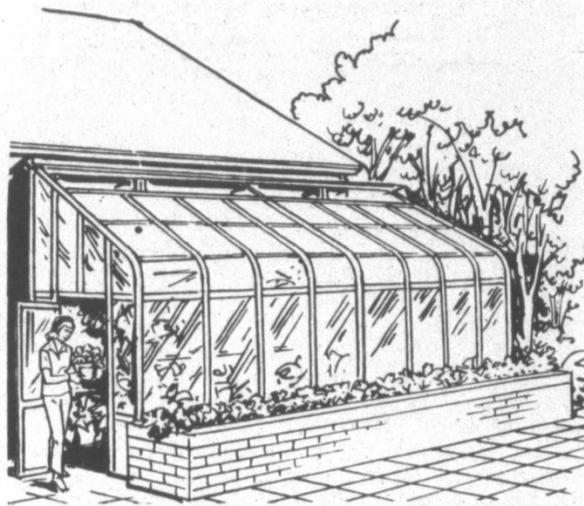

Greenhouses arrive in parts or assembled sections. Many models are designed for do-it-yourself installation, but ambitious gardeners may want to build from scratch using scrap wood, glass, and plastic. All installations require electrical, plumbing, and heating work. If the foundation is of brick or stone, masonry work is necessary. A heater, ventilator, and plant benches add increased value to ground-level greenhouses.

Heating is the largest greenhouse operating cost. Those attached to a heated building save 20% fuel cost over freestanding models. General savings in heating bills is accomplished by stretching a layer of plastic over the entire greenhouse interior, omitting only ventilator openings.

Additional fuel costs can be minimized by choosing plants requiring low minimum nighttime temperatures of approximately 50 degrees. Plants requiring higher temperatures should be placed near the greenhouse heater and heating cables.

Nature's palette colors gardens

For the creative imagination, gardening with color is as challenging a project as painting the finest landscape.

Yet, planning the colors of your garden is not quite like working with a painter's palette, because you are faced with built-in restrictions—the permanent colors that were painted by Nature before you arrived on the scene.

That's why, when considering the colors for your garden, you should plan them carefully around the colors already there.

One of the most dominant features of the background is the sky, which is rarely the same blue twice, depending on the season, the weather and the time of day. A blue sky in the morning can turn to a deep gray, forewarning a storm, or melt to a myriad of pastel shades at sunset. At midnight, the same sky becomes black and sprinkled with stars—your background has changed as quickly as the sets in a theater.

The color green is also too often taken for granted, when actually it is very complex and comes in a range of many shades even within the space of a single lawn. When viewed from a distance rather than close up, even the green of a plant seems to change, and the same color is also greatly affected by degrees of light and shade, according to the new Ortho book, "Gardening With Color."

Browns and grays are as fundamental to the backdrop of your garden as green, though they are usually associated with the structural or architectural features of the garden, like tree trunks, fences, porches and wooden decks.

The important thing to remember when planning your garden around these colors is that nothing stays the same. On rainy days the browns and grays will change, usually becoming darker when hit by water. Bricks fade, wood mellows, and colors you've never seen before will be exposed in tree trunks once the leaves fall off.

Like wood, brick, and other natural materials, painted surfaces also affect the overall look of your garden, though their colors can be more easily controlled by any gardener who is handy with a paintbrush. But if repainting the house or the garage is too forbidding a task, you can soften their impact by planting more of the same color near these structures, or you can camouflage parts of them with masses of foliage plants.

Contrast also makes for interest when you're planting close to the house, so don't be afraid to use unconventional color combinations which will stamp your garden as uniquely personal.

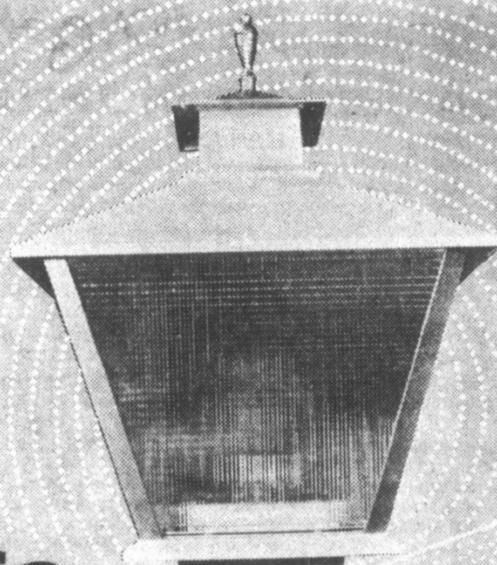

If you're working against structures whose color you find particularly attractive to begin with, you can emphasize the scheme with similar tones in the flowers you plant.

Aside from its color, the design of your house and its relationship to the surrounding landscape affects your garden because it determines the amount of space you have to work with. If you find the space unsatisfactory, here is where the use of color can get you off the hook.

Soft colors planted far from the house can make a garden feel larger, according to Ortho's "Gardening With Color," but to make the same space seem smaller you can plant bright colors at the rear of your garden.

When using color to achieve certain special illusions, make sure that you account for shadows and shady areas, which have the power to absorb the colors in your garden as well as affect the growing conditions of your plants. There are many plants with colorful foliage that will thrive in these areas, but if you're looking for annuals or perennials to add color, your choice will be more limited.

Conditioners help get-away hair

Whether you're off to laze in the Caribbean sunshine, tour Tasmania or skeet-shoot in Scotland, you can get there and back this vacation season with shining, healthy hair.

Before you start packing, the hair-care experts at Helene Curtis suggest you take a good look at your hair. A visit to your hairstylist might be in order to trim away dry, split ends or to turn unruly hair into a maintenance-free coiffure.

sun's rays, salt from the ocean and chlorinated pool water all take their drying toll.

To keep hair in great condition and to put a little extra into your vacation "mad money" kitty, select an economically priced, top-quality product like Suave Balsam & Protein instant hair conditioner. It's enriched with moisturizers that condition dullness and dryness away. Plus, Suave Balsam & Protein instant hair conditioner gives hair extra body and fullness for a thicker look and feel after just one application.

Go "lightweight" with your conditioner, too. Just fill a travel-size, plastic bottle or two with the amount of conditioner you think you'll need while away, or look for sample-size bottles when doing your pre-trip shopping.

While away, shampoo and condition hair often to keep it in tip-top shape. In fact, you can revitalize your hair right at the beach. Just put conditioner on your hair; wrap it with a terry-cloth towel and let the sun's warmth do its work.

Remember to tuck a few brightly colored, cotton scarves into your suitcase to protect hair from sun and wind. And, for change-of-pace, night-time glamour, bring along decorative hair combs or gold cord to twine through braided locks. ## Wooden deck works wonders

It's not often a single home feature can create exterior elegance, add outdoor living space, enhance a view, and increase property value—all for relatively little money and virtually no maintenance.

But a wood deck will do it. A deck is also unique because it benefits all members of the family and is suitable for almost every family activity. It's a functional and fun place to eat, nap, play, party, read, relax, and work—on a job, a hobby or a suntan.

A deck of western wood has the additional advantage of long life and easy care, provided it is properly installed and has good drainage. Competent do-it-yourselfers can usually handle the job.

Support posts and other sections of the deck that have direct contact with the ground need to be treated with preservative or a water repellent. Otherwise, no special finish is required for a wood deck. It can be painted or stained if that's desired, or allowed to weather naturally. Upkeep is limited to an occasional sweeping or a quick hose-down.

Decks are sometimes thought of as backyard features, but are actually appropriate to a number of locations. For example: off the kitchen for convenient dining, off the master bedroom as a private patio, off the children's bedroom as a play area, or adjoining the living room to allow indoor-outdoor entertaining.

To provide easy access to the deck and take full advantage of the view, sliding glass doors and large windows should be installed in the wall of the adjoining room. For privacy and a measure of climate control, use sunshades, opaque screens, fencing or trellises.

A variety of deck patterns are possible with the various species of western wood. Long boards can be set flat or on edge. There's a choice of slat widths. Or parquet blocks can be used to achieve eye-appealing designs. Decks can also be topped with handsome and useful structures, such as a gazebo, a screened-in sleeping "porch" or a shed for storing outdoor accessories.

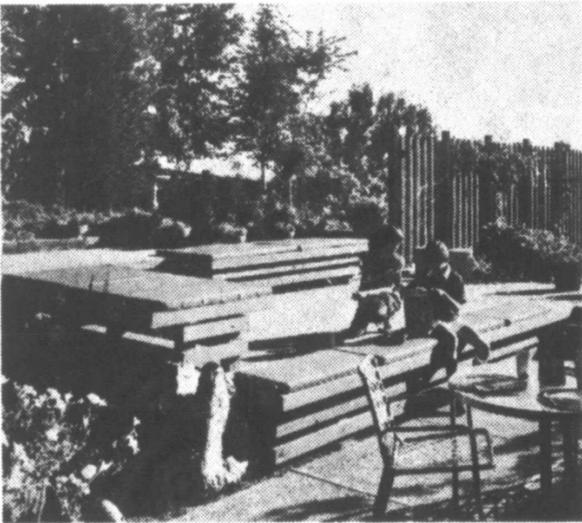

Other ideas on deck uses, installation and accessories can be obtained from local lumber dealers and building supply centers. For a booklet on "Outdoor Rooms" send 35 cents to Western Wood Products Association, Dept. SR-548, Yeon Building, Portland, Ore. 97204.

Growing tomatoes

To remain both beautiful and productive, most tomato plants should receive 6 hours of continuous sunlight daily. If proper exposure is a problem where you live, your best bet is to grow tomatoes in mobile containers so they can follow the sun.

Watering should take place regularly and the supply should be consistent. However, keep in mind that too much water will drown the plant roots, and too little can cut off tomato production.

Make sure your growing soil is loose enough to permit rapid drainage after watering, so that enough air will be left in the soil.

ADDING AN OUTDOOR ROOM as a home improvement can benefit everyone in the family. A deck of western wood can be functional as well as a fun place for leisurely enjoyment. And it has the advantage of being easy to care for provided it is installed properly and has good drainage.

Don't wreck your deck

Part of the charm of this lovely house is its spacious deck — the perfect place to group container gardens and sunbathers on a lovely summer day. And you don't have to sit back and admire your neighbor's deck, or wish you had the money to get one built, because if you can hold a hammer and saw, you can build your own, says the Ortho book "Garden Construction Know-How." It can be a simple ground level deck or an ornate creation raised to the level of your house. And, it can be created with any and all types of material — concrete, wood, bricks, etc. — in a variety of decorative designs. Before you drive your first nail, though, it's a good idea to check with your local lumber yard for specifics, or a good book on the subject, like Ortho's "Garden Construction Know-How."

Salad, chicken make summer

A crackling crisp salad is an ideal accompaniment for cold cuts, fried chicken, fish or any kind of sandwiches.

Combine fresh mushroom slices, cucumber slices, green pepper strips, onion rings and tomato wedges as a start. For variety you may add crisply cooked or raw snap beans or green peas, broccoli spears or raw cauliflowerettes. Top all with your favorite dressing.

MUSHROOM GARDEN SALAD

- 1 pound medium-sized fresh mushrooms
- 1/4 cup oil
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1/4 cup sliced scallions or green onions
- 1 tablespoon basil leaves, crumbled

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground cumin seed
- 1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 tomatoes, cut into wedges
- 1 green pepper, seeded and cut into chunks

Rinse, pat dry and halve mushrooms (makes about 5 cups). Place in a large bowl. Combine oil, lemon juice, scallions, basil, salt, cumin and black pepper. Pour over mushrooms; toss well. Add tomatoes and green pepper. Toss well. Cover and let stand at room temperature for 15 minutes. Serve in lettuce-lined salad bowl, if desired. Makes 8 portions.

(NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

FRESH mushrooms, cucumbers and other vegetables are treats.

On the beach or poolside, the prettiest swimwear looks are covering up. Hooded shirts vie for attention with 1978's one piece swimsuits.

Coverups get big

Fashion "hits the beach" in a big way this season as swimsuits get competition from other wear as well. Shorts, jogging suits, and big shirts are some of the beach looks taking their place in the sun for summer.

The sarong look is making a comeback, worn either as a dress or skirt, over the latest swimsuit style.

The sweatshirt top, usually hooded, is a favorite way to cover up after a swim, as is the oversized shirt.

Long or short shifts, kimono jackets, tunics, T-shirts, and blouses are other toppings, worn over suits or with shorts, pants, and skirts.

Swimwear's making news, too, as bikini, strapless, and maillots suits get updated for '78.

Bikinis tend to be more covered-up this season, with bandeau tops and less-revealing bottoms making the difference.

The strapless look continues to be seen in maillots, now newly sleek and often influenced by the racing suit.

Reflecting the racing suit look are the newest swimsuit leotards and slick, tank-type suits.

What makes a straw hat special?

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Over at Makins New York on West 39th Street, you can get the grand tour from Marsha Akins and watch one of her straw hats come into being.

It only takes a few minutes, lots of steam and admirable patience on the part of the laborers.

First, there's the blocker who, if he's good, can "hustle" his salary above union scale, which is about $215. That's because the blocker exists in an atmosphere of unrelieved live steam and humidity, even in the summer. "You can't air condition this unit," Ms. Akins explains, "because then all you're doing is fighting the steam. So it's not a job you want."

Tony, one of two blockers, is 30, a smiling, good-looking man who is happy to demonstrate the first steps while she narrates.

"To make a straw hat, he takes what we call the body — which is like a crazy, unshaped coolie hat — and puts it on a live steam grill to loosen up the bias weave. Then he sits it on a wooden block or hat form which is the exact shape of the hat he wants to make. He steams it again by holding an iron over it or lifting the block and dropping it on the grill," she jokes, "and then he molds the body on the block."

That's accomplished by cording the hat onto the block wherever there's a rope mark to follow — around the head size and the brim, say. When it comes to the smart crease in the center, though, he simply pushes his hand down in a tender karate chop.

"Then he steams the body again and removes it from the block," she says, triggering images of moors and nasty deeds. "From here the body goes into what we call a dry box or hot oven where it dries."

Now to an old man sitting several feet away at a machine that looks like one of Singer's rejects. It's his job to sew down the outer hem on the brim. Using a foot pedal to operate the machine, he manipulates the brim under a small rotary blade to cut away the excess "welt" or hem, leaving a narrow edge. "He'll sew this down next on the machine and cut away any excess by hand," she says.

On to a woman at a special sewing machine who puts in the all-important sweatband. At one time, Ms. Akins says, the sweatband may have had something to do with sweat. "All I really know now is that it holds the size of the hat in place."

Trims come into play next, each sewn on by hand by an old woman who, today, is working with the ribbon that circles the straw hat. Before it gets sewn on, though, she cuts a swirl into it because the circumference of the hat is wider at the bottom than the top and the ribbon must fit perfectly.

In another corner of the loft, "hot blocking" of the hat on a metal head follows — to take out any wrinkles, press in the sweatband and make sure the head size is right, and then the label is glued in.

One more steaming for a final shaping, a quality check (one of several along the way), and it joins a multitude of others in big boxes for shipping.

"You know there are so many steps that go into a hat," says Ms. Akins.

Pack scrapbook for the kids

Taking children on vacation gives them valuable experience, considerable education, and a new outlook on life. Most children enjoy camping, museums, zoos, Indian villages, parks, battlefields, factories, mines, tourist farms, historic buildings, and the unusual atmosphere of big hotels.

Your vacation will be easy to plan and relatively trouble-free if you think of the trip from both your and your children's point of view.

When packing for your vacation, be sure to include an empty scrapbook and plenty of see-through tape. Children can be kept busy making a scrapbook of postcards, napkins, and other remembrances of the places they've visited. Be sure to include a few favorite toys and a deck of cards if you anticipate long-distance travel.

In case of accidents, keep an extra set of clothing handy for each child. For clean-ups, include a package of pre-moistened wipes, plastic bags for waste, and a well-stocked first-aid kit.

Driving with children requires a small amount of special preparation. The ride will go smoother for everyone if mileage and stops are planned around the children's regular eating and sleeping habits.

Family game activities provide relief from tedium, and great enjoyment can be derived from singing in "rounds" and "counting" games, such as counting stop signs, parks, and identifiable highway markers.

'78 sees youngsters' summer togs with more dash, detail, and soft touches.

Terry cloth makes a comeback and is featured in all children's sizes. Most outstanding are infant and toddler beach togs in prints and multi-colored terry piping.

Youngsters will take the plunge into one-piece swimsuits, complemented by longer, two-piece suits with blouson tops. The featured T-tanks and blouson styles will be of softer look and material. You'll find a predominance of nylon, spandex, and terry fabric and accents.

Sundresses will feature floral pastels, cotton chintz, white lace frills, and ribbon accents. Gauze and burlap are natural get-togethers. Coupled also are navy flounces, stripes, and dots.

What's new? Why, it's a straw hat

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK—NEA)—Three summers ago, Marsha Akins put on her six-inch platform shoes, a copy of a designer denim suit she'd made, and began walking from one end of Manhattan to the other.

When she passed a boutique that looked "likely," she stopped in. Did they want to see her hats, the lightweight, easy, "really get down into" hats she was making at home, fitting, steaming and baking on wooden blocks in her kitchen where it seemed like 4,000 degrees because she kept the oven door open so the blocks wouldn't crack? (And where she wore just what you'd wear under the circumstances.)

"I would just ask, I was too shy to take any hats with me," she says, her Goldie Hawn green eyes wide and staring.

Four people out of 50 said yes, and she limped home estatic.

Two days later, she says, "I spent three hours in the pouring rain selling a boutique four hats. But the following night a man who ran the hottest store in the city ordered 35 pieces just like that. He had to carry me out because of the shock."

And that's how Marsha Akins, 33, the winner of a '77-'78 Coty Award for men's hats, started Makins New York which produces men's and women's hats in a narrow, midtown loft.

The phone doesn't stop ringing here and the door is constantly knocked at. Ms. Akins gets the door because her cluttered desk is behind it, and she encourages her assistant to handle the phone. "You're the one who's screaming. I could scream, too, but I'm not," he says hotly to the caller while his boss smiles upliftingly at him.

Auburn-haired, plump and sensitive about it, she wears lots of eye-liner over and under, mauve lipstick and a deadpan expression which underscores her dry sense of humor. She's the mother of a new baby whose birth in January was so difficult she still feels faint. And she's a native New Yorker who knows what it is not to have money or respect.

What hurt most was the lack of respect she felt, while putting herself through school at night by working days as an administrative assistant in advertising.

"I was a glorified secretary," she says. "Did you ever work as a secretary? Do you remember how badly you were treated? And no matter how many brains you had, you weren't able to move out of it. Well, I'm a human being," she says, getting emotional even now. "I'm somebody, not just someone's 'girl.' After awhile, my confidence wasn't there. You get beaten down long enough and you start believing it. Finally, somebody really did break my back, so three years ago I started hunting for a job I could lose on August 1. I succeeded and got laid off on July 29. I took my first unemployment check and called myself a hat-company."

Why hats? Just because, she shrugs. "Ever since I can remember, I've loved them. I bought Adolfo's hats for $20 when I was 12." Which was something considering she had no money. The family up there in the Bronx wasn't wealthy; her father worked as a foreman for a cab company.

But the hats made a difference. They gave her pleasure. "I was always collecting wooden blocks (hat forms) and old fur felt bodies. When I started going to FIT (Fashion Institute of Technology) at night to study fashion design, which I did because at least girls who go to FIT come out with skills, I started working with a blockmaker who didn't charge me much for a block. Because I didn't have it to pay."

So that summer three years ago, with the blocks and her skill and drive, and the unemployment checks, she began working 20 hours a day, seven days a week. "It's amazing how you can survive on very little sleep if you want something very badly," she says.

Little by little, boutiques, department stores — even men — began buying her simple, tailored hats. "I filled a void for soft easy hats," she explains. "Nobody was doing hats people could relate to. One of my favorite lines is that my hats DEEP CROWN hat in hand-blocked raffia straw is accented by huge silk rose. Beanie at right, also in hand-blocked raffia straw, has deep crown and thick rolled cushion brim. Both are available in natural (about $18) and black, navy, brown, rust and beige (about $20). By Makins New York.

Cool off with coolers

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

If you're in the mood to experiment, whip up some refreshing coolers for warm-weather drinking. Two strawberry treats are easy to make and definitely provide variety in the flavor department. An orange-berry cooler or a strawberry-lemonade will please the palates of young and old. For a strictly adult drink, add red wine to the strawberry lemonade for a different Sangria.

ORANGE BERRY COOLERS
6 scoops orange Hawaiian punch drink mix
6 cups water
1 package (10 ounces) quick thaw strawberries, partially thawed
1 cup pineapple juice ice cubes

In large bowl; combine the orange punch drink mix, 2 cups of the water and the strawberries. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Pour into punch bowl or large pot, add rest of water. Stir in pineapple juice. Add ice cubes. Makes about eight 8-ounce coolers.

STRAWBERRY LEMONADE
2 pints fresh strawberries
1½ cups sugar
3 cups water
1½ cups lemon juice

Puree strawberries in electric blender or force through food mill. Sieve to remove seeds. Combine sugar and water in saucepan. Stir and heat slowly until sugar dissolves. Mix with strawberry puree and lemon juice; chill thoroughly. Serve in glasses with crushed ice or ice cubes.

Garnish with strawberries, lemon and mint, as desired. Makes about 1½ quarts.

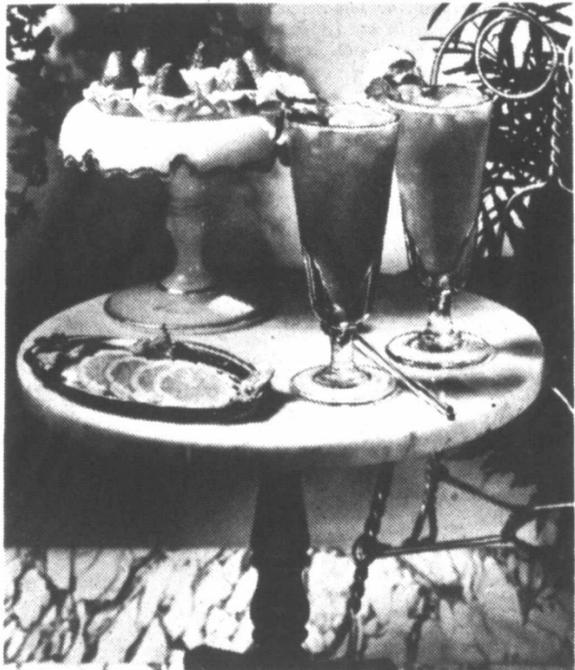

Variation: To make a Sangria, add 2 cups Beaujolais or Claret wine to the strawberry lemonade.

Pork chop and pineapple stuffing special

To create the special, drain the juice from one eight ounce can of crushed pineapple and reserve the juice in small saucepan. Add two tablespoons honey and ½ teaspoon mint leaves to pineapple juice and cook slowly three to five minutes, stirring occasionally. Place six pork rib or loin chops, cut oneto one and one - fourth inches thick, over ash - covered coals or on rack in broiler pan so that the surface of the meat is four to five inches from heat. Broil eight minutes. Season browned sides of chops with salt and pepper and broil on second sides eight minutes. Season second sides with salt and pepper. Brush with glaze and broil five to 10 minutes or until done, brushing with glaze and turning occasionally. While chops are broiling, prepare one six - ounce package of stuffing mix. Stir in crushed pineapple and heat through. Serves six.

PUNCH DRINK mix and strawberries make a different summer cooler.

Right way to barbecue

Part of the fun of outdoor living is barbecuing — to get the most enjoyment from those backyard meals, be sure you follow these basic rules for charcoaling:

To "light your fire", line the barbecue grill with heavy-duty aluminum foil, for faster cooking — and easier clean-up later on.

Stack the briquets in a pyramid, so that air can circulate around them; they'll light faster this way.

Be sure and use a good starter. There are electric or chimney types, as well as liquid, jelly or solid fibrous cubes.

Don't rush the briquets — let them burn to just the right stage before adding food. Generally, they'll require from 20 to 40 minutes.

How do you know when coals are ready? In daylight, coals are ready for cooking when they are covered by a layer of gray ash ... at night, they'll have a bright red glow. When they reach this stage, spread the briquets into a single layer with tongs and place food on grill.

To judge the temperature of a charcoal briquet fire, hold your hand at the cooking height, palm side down. If you can keep it in position for 2 seconds, the temperature is high or hot; 3 seconds indicates it's medium-high or hot; 4 seconds, it's medium; 5 seconds, it's low.

To lower the temperature, raise the grid or spread out coals. To raise the temperature, tap ash from coals, or push them closer.

If you need to add more coals, add them to the outer edge of hot coals.

To prepare, combine in small saucepan 3/4 cup vinegar, 1/4 cup plum jam, 1/4 cup soy sauce, 1 small minced onion and 2 tablespoons margarine. Bring to a boil. Add 1 bay leaf and 1 teaspoon salt. Place 10 to 12 broiler-fryer chicken thighs in shallow dish; pour hot sauce over chicken. Cover dish and refrigerate. Allow chicken to marinate overnight. Over ash-colored coals place thighs on grate about six inches from heat. Turn and baste frequently. Grilling should take 40 to 60 minutes depending on the size and thickness of thighs. Place grilled chicken into scooped-out pineapple halves and garnish with pepper slices. May be served hot or cold. Serves six to eight.

Chicken-stuffed tomatoes

By Aileen Claire

Stir in 1/2 cup bread crumbs and chunky chicken spread. Spoon mixture into tomato shells. In a small bowl, mix together remaining butter and bread crumbs. Sprinkle onto filled tomatoes. Bake 25 to 30 minutes. Garnish with chopped parsley. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN-STUFFED TOMATOES

- 2 tablespoons butter or or margarine, divided
- 1/3 cup chopped onion
- 3 tablespoons chopped scallion tops
- 4 large tomatoes
- 1/2 teaspoon dried parsley
- 1/8 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
- Dash cayenne pepper
- 1/2 cup plus 3 tablespoons soft fresh bread crumbs
- 1 can (4 3/4 ounces) chunky chicken spread
