Parimutuel horse race gamibling appeared headed for its 10th defeat in three decades

early Sunday

The vote count at the Texas Election Bureau was slow and tedious but throughout the night the margin of defeat steadily widened.

Opponents of the controversial measure had warned that gangsters and more crime would follow legalization of parimutuel wagering while its followers hailed it as a boon to the state treasury.

'We believe that the margin of defeat of the parimutuel referendum means that the voters of Texas are trying to tell the gamblers something," said Allan Maley, director of the Anticrime Council of Texas.

'They're saying that they are getting sick and tired of being forced to vote on this issue every four to six years. They are saying that they don't want organized gambling and the organized crime that accompanies it after nine defeats in 29 years. We hope that the message and administrator's reports.

Republican voters for a while were supporting the measure while Democrats turned thumbs down in early vote counting. Later, voters in both parties were obviously expressing strong opposition to it. Proponents were counting on heavy support from the major metropolitan areas like Dallas. Houston and San Antonio.

If the issue had found favor with voters in the non-binding referendum, it still would have had to face approval from the Texas Legislature then endure local option elections throughout the state.

Even then it would have likely had to weather any number of lawsuits challenging it on any number of grounds.

Democrats turned down higher interest rates on small loans in a second part of their referendum ballot

It was not so black and white an issue as God on one side and gangsters on the other, but there were extreme points of view which heightened its octane rating among political races

Strict moralists argued that gambling is the Devil's workshop and a fool's path to damnation while extremists of another stripe blamed Baptists and Methodists and other religious groups for blocking the state's progress toward more revenue and its manifest destiny as a Sun Belt mecca.

But most voters fell into quiet streams of antagonism along more rational lines.

Opponents claimed in dark terms that Texas would become a pirate's cove of organized criminals who would bring with them loan sharking, prostitution, dope and a cornucopia of other underworld staples. On the other hand, horse breeders and those who described themselves as practical-minded realists poohpoohed the crime threat while emphasizing the cash bonanza they said Texas would harvest. Mike Rutherford, vice chairman of the Texas Horseracing Association, said, "Oil and racing go hand in hand. Every barrel of oil we take from the ground is gone for good. The oil business is going out and we need other industries for Douglas McCrary, president of the racing group, said "We are not criminals like the churches are saying. We are proud of what we're doing. The Mafia is against our bill. We want the tracks to be run by the state thus it is the state which will make the money.

Dedicated opponents to horse race gambling are in the Anti Crime Council of Texas.

Democrats also voted on higher interest rates for small loans while the Republican referendum ballot also dealt with delegates to national conventions and constitutional lim-

Concern over inflation was highest among the poorest Americans - those making less than $5,000 a year - and among what might be called the middle class - those with family incomes from $15,000 to $25,000 is hollering like a caught hog over HEW-mandated changes from afar that are supposed to improve the equal education opportunities for all races.

If the several schools in the system do not comply. Mr. Joseph Califano (who is also toying with the idea of banning smoking in most places on campus) will see to it that some $90 million in federal funds is withheld

The "planners" are calling for a flat increase in black enrollment and for transferring some courses to other locations. But HEW, integration minded as it is, is not proposing any changes in the state's now traditionally black institutions. The basis for the edict is the 1964 Civil Rights Act. HEW does not see the law is like a seesaw and that to have balance you cannot pile all the weight on one end. That will leave the other still up in the air, out of touch with reality

It may not have been true 10 years ago, but it can be said now that the university system's doors are open to all with equal chance for entrance and scholarship. But suddenly Big Brother from afar has decided things are not to his liking.

So the state is groaning and complaining.

But, while the state has this big "itch" upon its back, the state is itself jumping on the back of the small, private schools, saying they must have state approval of credentials and curricula before they may be "licensed" to teach children.

This latter issue has caused the North Carolina Association of Christian Schools to take a stand saying they will not submit to state sanctioning of

The state does not see the parallel between its actions and that of the federal government

But in both cases, there is an "outside" force acting on a smaller force to make change by coercion of law that can set the errant "child" in a corner for noncompliance.

The Rev. Kent Kelly, administrator of Calvary Christian School in Southern Pines, takes this view: "We will not surrender the minds of our children to state education or state - fined deducation! We will not surrender to the claim of the state to have life or death approval power

The point is well taken. The first schools in North Carolina were church schools and for 225 years the state never had any control over church schools. So why should it now? There are those who argue, yes, but if the state doesn't approve those schools, how do we know the children will be getting a quality education? The proof, as they say, is in the pudding after it comes out of the oven. The product of the private academies and private nonsectarian schools in North Carolina has been tested and as a whole those students do better than those from the tax - supported schools

In addition, if state - approved education is some mysterious precursor of good education, then how is it that scores on achievement levels tests have been slipping here and all over the country for 12 consecutive years? They have not slipped in the private schools. That should give some pause for thought.

Yet, in the name of finer glories, the feds are jumping on the state's back, and the state is jumping on the back of the little, private schools - the schools that for better than two centuries bore the weight of educating those who would

Now the state is saying to those schools we shall decide if you're fit

And the federal government is saying to the state, we shall decide if you're fit.

Perhaps the secret to the action lies in the Elizabethan lines: "Great fleas have little fleas upon their back to bite 'em. And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so on ad infinitum

Land and law

Preserving farm land

By BERNARD SIEGAN

The late Sen. Everett Dirksen was fond of talking about ideas whose time had come. By the same reasoning, there are ideas whose time has gone. One of these is zoning laws seeking to preserve prime agricultural land by forbidding its use for other purposes. Our current agricultural problems have to do with the availability of too much acreage. This is hardly the time to prevent this valuable resource from satisfying more urgent needs. Yet, had such laws been enacted, they would have had this effect

Over fifty years of zoning experience shows that government is a very poor allocater of land use. Thus, as I have suggested, it operates more rigidly than the market and does not respond well to changing conditions. Moreover, when government becomes involved in this process, a host of influences inevitably arise which have little to do with the objectives of its intervention.

Consider the situation in Hawaii which in 1961 adopted state land use regulation, under which a regulatory agency decides, among other things. how much land to restrict for agricultural purposes. Among the strongest supporters of this provision are conservationists who view it as a means of maintaining open space. On the other side are those from industry and organized labor who benefit from urban development and tourism. The concern overagriculture and the food needs of society frequently become subordinate to the battle between open space and development; growth and no-growth.

However, regardless of their dedication to such laws, the regulators will confront serious difficulties in holding the line. There are two reasons for this. First are federal and state constitutional provisions limitiong the extent to which the use of private property can be curbed. and second, the regulatory process itself is unable to withstand pressures for development

Prime agricultural land usually sells for much less than land suitable for urban development. It is not unusual for the disparity to be on the range of one-tenth or even one-fiftieth the development value. Consequently, restricting land to agricultural use can be exceedingly harmful to those whose acreage has such potential. Serious diminutions in value might cause courts to find the agricultural restrictions confiscatory and, therefore, unconstitutional

Holding back urban development also adversely impacts groups with considerable political muscle: builders, the business community, construction unions. As economic pressures intensify, the use of land will become increasingly dependent on the political strength of the various competing forces.

The regulators will not lack the power to respond to these demands. Zoning authorities abound in discretion, and controlling agricultural land will be no different. For instance, the very definition of the land to be preserved raises considerable difficulties. Proponents generally agree that the target of such programs should be prime land. The most productive land would fit this definition, but how far down the line of productivity should it extend? Should land vielding particular produce be favored? And, of course, when should variances be permitted? Such important decisions may turn on the voting mixture of the day Those concerned with conserving prime land should consider that zoning and other land use regulations probably have acounted in the 1970s for a greater amount of land use conversion than in any prior period. Pressures for bigger lots, together with local growth and open space restrictions, have increased the use of land for urban purposes

When towns or state authorities reject growth. they force some of it into places that would otherwise be used for farming, grazing and mining. Consider two examples of how land use regulation has caused the spread of urban development. The first is provided by the following comment about Austin, Texas, from a 1977 issue of Texas Monthly

"The irony is that the most antigrowth council in Austin history may have done more to bring about urban sprawl than did any of the pro-developer councils that preceded it. Over 75 percent of the homes built in the Austin metropolitan area last year were outside the city's extraterritorial jurisdiction.

The operation of California's coastal zoning law presents another illustration. The coastal commissions control development of land within a prescribed distance from the coast. They approve the vast number of building applications that are submitted, but usually only at densities below those requiested.

A builder petitions to erect, say, 100 units and after many months and numerous changes (and possibly a nervous breakdown), eventually emerges with permission to construct 60 or 70. Reducing density means that more land will be needed to accommodate the same amount of housing. More spread and sprawl is likely to Agricultural land conservation would be aided by dismantling rather than increasing, existing SECOND MISTAKE WAS IN SAVING...

Killing the economy, silently

(Mobil Oil Corp. Ad)

Some 20 million Americans suffer from "The Silent Killer" (high blood pressure) and are essentially unaware of it. . . In a like manner, almost 220 million Americans suffer from a lack of awareness of the capital and job formation 'disease.

This grim analogy is drawn by Charles D. Kuehner, editor of a new book of essays entitled 'Capital and Job Formation: Our Nation's 3rd-Century Challenge," (Dow Jones-Irwin, 1978, $15). The essays are by people who deal with the problem every day - Treasury Secretary W. Michael Bluementhal, for example, and such chief executives as John D. deButts of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Reginald H. Jones of General Electric Company, Irving S. Shaprio of E.I.du Pont de Nemours & Co., Inc., and Rawleigh Warner Jr., of Mobile.

But the tone is set by Dr. Kuehner, an executive with AT&T and an economist. Dr. Kuehner is a worried man. His concern is that capital formation - "the process of channeling investment into new plant and equipment" - is well down on the list of national priorities, and is hindered by government policies. The process, he points out, "is crucial in creating new and better jobs, goods, and services. Capital formation is also essential in combatting inflation, cleaning up the environment, increasing productivity, and raising our time."

Why does it cost so much to have your older, out - of warranty TV set, hi-fi, radio or tape recorder repaired?

Claim many repair shops: because they are forced to contains a provision implicitly overcharge the cash - paying customer to make up the losses arrangements' for they incur repairing new compensating their authorized products still under manufacturers' warranties. Argue service dealers the nation over: because they are compelled to sign warranty service contracts with many manufacturers who pay them less than the actual cost of the repair work. Thus, merely to stay in business, many dealers must raise their prices to you, owner of out - of - warranty goods. You, this type of customer, in short, must not only make up the difference on what the reapir shop loses from its in-warranty service but also must pick up the tab for the shop owner's profit

Explains Harry Midkiff. executive director of the California State Electronics Assn. (a servicé dealers trade association), many electronics manufacturers pay only about one-third of the service dealer's cost of doing repairs, not including any profit.

If, say, a repairman fixes a TV set that is still under warranty at a cost to him of $15, the manufacturer might reimburse him with only $5. To make up his loss, he will add the $10 difference plus some figure for profit to the bill of a customer with an older TV set. You, that customer, subsidize the repairs done under warranty

Service dealers try to make up their losses from warranty work in other ways as well, according to warranty experts. Those who are also retailers raise the purchase price of new TV sets. radios, etc. Those who only service products sometimes assign warranty repair jobs totheir least experienced and thus least costly repairmen.

The rates of these least experienced repairmen will be closest to the amounts the dealer gets as reimbursement from the manufacture. The result: you, the consumer, may get poor repair work and be pushed into repeated trips to the repair

Some service shops feel, too, that they are paid so little that they may at times submit false warranty claims to manufacturers.

"It's a nasty game," an attorney specializing in the warranty field told my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer. "Manufacturers feel their rates are justified because of the volume of business they provide service dealers. The dealers' attitudes are the citizens' standard of living." Carrying his medical example to its logical conclusion, Dr. Keuhner notes that just as high blood pressure weakens the heart and other organs, the "capital and job formations disease" spreads throughout the - It widens unemployment, or underemployment relative to the skills or training of each individual - It leads to demands for greater government intervention. If government spends more, and there is no corresponding expansion in private industry, inflation further weakens the economy. American industry loses ground to foreign competitors in domestic and world markets. As industry weakens it spends less for research and devlopment, and additional capital formation problems appear. Industry is less able to cope with problems of pollution and more inflation, demand still more government intervention,

Consumers, buffeted by controls and spending. Few people are even aware of the problem, let alone its magnitude, Dr. Kuehner says. He does point out that where governments give the issue top priority - in Japan and West Germany, for example - the result has been hailed as an economic miracle. In the U.S., on the other hand, "when an investor accumulates the $30,000 needed to finance a job in private industry, government policy then says 'We will penalize you by, (1) taxing your dividends twice and, (2) if you make any capital gains we'll tax that also - even though much of the gain merely reflects the impact of inflation and is not a true capital gain at all." The book cites the specifics of many industries. But just as important as the insights it offers is the fact that the book was written at all. When people talk about a silent killer, economic or physical, then the silence is penetrated, the mystery falls away, and remedies become possible

Remedies to the capital formation dilemma are long

'Dust power' harnessed

After hearing for decades of the different kinds of "power" being used politically for the benefit of one group at the expense of another, it is refreshing to hear of a new kind of power which will:

a. Threaten no one. b. Help to solve the energy

c. Enhance the environment. Plaudits go to a plywood plant in Eugene, Oregon, which has successfully harnessed the high combustion power of dust to replace fossil fuel and electricity as industrial power sources.

The "pilot plant," a large Georgia - Pacific Corporation plywood mill that makes factory finished wall paneling, is already converting the dust from its sanders, formerly a problem, into 40 million BTUs an hour. The heat is used to dry plywood veneers and the coating applied to finished panels. Prior to harnessing "dust power." the plant had used natural gas and electrically powered infrared heat lamps for these functions, routine in the industry.

Power now produced in one hour from dust combustion is equal to electrical requirements of the average American home fof 16 months, according to Vincent Tretter. G-P's chief engineer for energy and the environment. The idea is working so well, he tell us, that the company now plans to begin using it at its other plants, as part of its nationwide energy and environmental program.

No government agency dares try to tell this business how to run its business

Most of us in business are regulated by a host of government agencies. Since the National Labor Relations Act of 1935 through the Equal Pay Act of 1963, the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 and the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972 - bureaucrats have come to decree whom we must hire, how much we must pay and what we must do to protect the health, welfare and safety of our employees. Professions are largely selfregulated through the American Bar Association, American Medical Association and various other groups. Many professions have state organizations that set ethical standards under guidelines suggested by the national groups.

Whatever government regulation there has been generally came at the state level. But state regulatory boards that determine rules of practice frequently are made up of members of the profession regulated.

Critics, such as consumer advocate Ralph Nader, say professional groups often adopt rules of practice that are designed to keep outsiders out and prices high. Advertising of prices and cut-rate methods of delivering services are discouraged, the critics say.

Chairman Michael Pertschuk of the Federal Trade Commission says professional groups

Wall street watches search for oil

On Friday morning, a Continental Oil foreman told reporters in Atlantic City, N.J., that early exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon off the coast had encountered "very promising" rock formations.

When the story reached financial news wires, it touched off a brief but spirited rally in stock prices. While oil issues were notably strong, the advance also extended into a broad range of other stocks.

Continental Oil officials shortly afterward said the foreman's statements gave a "misleading and premature" impression about the prospects of the drilling efforts. But the Dow Jones industrial DALLAS (AP) - Candidates. racing for the right to carry the Texas banner in the U.S. House of Representatives were kept on edge Saturday night as primary election results trickled in without much impact.

At stake were seats belonging to some old and new state power brokers who chose to quit the House because of old age, ill health or ambition.

Some 152 years of experience, two committée chairmanships and three subcommittee top spots were lost with retirement announcements by Reps. W.R. "Bob" Poage, Omar Burleson, George Mahon and Olin "Tiger" Teague.

Former Rep. Bob Krueger ran successfully for the Democratic nomination to take on Republican Sen. John Tower in November, and Rep. Barbara Jordan decided to end her House career because of "personal" reasons.

Those vacancies created spotlight congressional battles. and Democratic pretenders to those offices flocked in to file.

In those races, the only one that showed much disparity in numbers was in the District 19 contest for the office of Mahon, the dean of the Texas delegation and the House. Kent Hance led evangelist Morris Sheets by more than 2-1. Republicans targeted this race as one of their "best bets," but GOP ballots were also being tallied slowly.

Teague backed former aide Chet Edwards in his District 6 contest, and Edwards held a slight lead over co-favorite Phil Gramm

US supports Moro hold out

States supports the Italian government's "courageous" refusal to negotiate with the Red Brigade kidnappers of Aldo Moro and probably would do the same in a similar situation, _U.S. cabinet member Joseph Califano said Saturday.

"The fundamental issue is that you cannot give in to terrorism," the American secretary of Health, Education and Welfare said in an interview here with The Associated Press. He relayed the message of Carter administration support to Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti

As the hunt for Moro continued, police arrested 22 suspected leftists but reported no breakthroughs one day after a message attributed to the Red Brigades said they were carrying out their "death verdict" on Moro, the five-time former Italian premier

Several Italian newspapers reported that Moro, who is president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, . had sent a "goodbye" letter to his family Friday night "written in a tender and loving tone."

In the northern Italian city of Novara, the doctor at a local prison was shot in the legs by an unknown gunman who fled in a car. No one took responsibility for the shooting. But prison officials have been a frequent target of the urban terrorist Red Brigades.

Moro's kidnappers maintained a day of silence after anonymous callers Friday directed reporters in Rome and other cities to copies of a 1,400word typewritten text which investigators said appeared to be an authentic document from the Red Brigades.

"We conclude the battle which began March 16 by carrying out the verdict to which Aldo Moro has been sentenced," it said.

Moro, 61, was kidnapped 52 days ago and his five bodyguards killed in an ambush on a Rome street. The Red Brigades said he was sentenced to death at a "'people's trial" for crimes against the proletariat.

The Red Brigades said they were executing the death sentence on Moro.

Carter urges lawyer competition

By JEFFREY MILLS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - While President Carter is urging greater competition within the legal profession, others in the government are taking major steps to provide cheaper, more efficient legal services to the "Free and open competition services within the reach of average citizens," Carter said Thursday in a speech to the -Los Angeles Bar Association.

The president pledged to expand such innovative approaches as storefront legal clinics, prepaid group plans and other low-cost alternatives to traditional legal services.

Carter said the legal profession is over-protecting the interests of the privileged few at the expense of other Americans. "Ninety percent of our lawyers serve 10 percent of our people. We are over-lawvered and under-represented," he

"I also ask that lawyers join the effort to stop inflation by following the example we have asked of every group in our society by decelerating the rise in fees," he said.

The Supreme Court, Justice Department and the Federal Trade Commission already are moving to require the greater competition that Carter is seek-

Before the recent push, lawyers and bar associations had written the rules that defined their work

One of the most cherished traditions was that lawyers do not commercialize their work by advertising. Other rules limit opportunities for new ways to deliver legal services.

In recent years, critics have charged the restrictions are devices intended to eliminate competition and keep fees high. Consumer groups say that if lawyers had to compete with each other, especially through advertising, prices to consumers would come down and more people would be able to afford legal advice.

The most important step toward such a change came last June, when the Supreme Court ruled that lawyers have the right to advertise their fees for such routine services as drawing up wills and handling uncontested divorces.

Even before the decision, bar associations had been yielding to pressure and rewriting their guidelines on advertising.

Since the June decision, the Justice Department has since been trying to get legal advertising expanded. In addition, it has filed a ma jor antitrust suit against the American Bar Association, saying that its remaining restrictions on advertising violate antitrust laws

The FTC, taking a different tack, has begun a nationwide investigation that could result in eliminating some state bar association and state court rules that handicap lawyers who want to provide cheap services.

Kent State investigation 'upset' Nixon

NEW YORK (AP) - Former President Richard Nixon did not want an investigation into the Kent State University shootings and was very upset when a federal grand jury eventually got the case, according to NBC News.

Four students were shot to death eight years ago Thursday by National Guardsmen during anti-war demonstrations on the Ohio campus.

The network said Thursday that it obtained a memorandum by former presidential aide John Ehrlichman which showed Ehrlichman tried to block the investigation and attributed the decision to Nixon.

Interviewed on the "NBC Nightly News," Arthur Krause, whose daughter was among those killed, said Ehrlichman called him shortly after the shooting and told him that "there'll be a complete investigation... I promise you, there will be no whitewash."

I'm Your Neighbor...

But a few months later, with public outcry for a grand jury inquiry at a peak, Ehrlichman sent a memo to then Attorney General John Mitchell. NBC obtained a copy of the memo, which read in part: "In your office the other afternoon, I showed you the President's memorandum on this subject and it was my understanding that you understood that the President had decided that no such grand jury would be sought. In 1973, under a new attorney general, Elliot Richardson, the Kent State case was sent to a federal grand jury. As a result,

NBC said, "Richardson was told that Richard Nixon was so upset, 'They had to scrape the president off the walls - with a

In a report that appears to conflict with assumptions of President Carter and most members of Congress. the agency concluded:

Though the costs of college attendance have risen faster. than the cost of living (as measured by the Consumer Price Index), this increase in costs has been offset by an even-larger increase in family income. As a result, student costs for both the public and private sectors of higher education have declined slightly as a proportion of family income."

The report found that while the median income of a family with an 18-to-24-year-old in college increased 87.3 percent between 1967 and 1977, total student charges increased 74.2. percent in public colleges and

76.7 percent in private schools. The report is based on an analysis of rival tax-credit and scholarship programs that are aimed at helping middle-income families pay for a college education:

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) Affirmed, ridden by 18-year-old Steve Cauthen, took charge on the turn for home and held off arch-rival Alydar through the stretch Saturday to win the $239,400 Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Affirmed, close to the pace through the first mile of the famous 11/4-mile race, brought Cauthen a victory in his first Derby, just six days shy of two years from the date when he began his spectacular riding career at this renowned track.

The victory for the Harbor View Farm colt also foiled the bid of the legendary Calumet Farm to win a ninth Derby and its first since 1968.

It was a spectacular victory on a pleasant, sunny afternoon before an estimated 130,000 people. And it was accomplished in 2:01 1-5 on a fast

It was Affirmed's fifth victory in seven meetings with AlBarrera's second Derby triumph. The affable native of Cuba won the 1976 running with Bold Forbes.

Vietnamese soldiers turn welders for Pampa Cabot

By CHRIS EDWARDS Pampa News Staff

Pampa is the new home of two South Vietnamese, Khiet Van Vo and Hit Van Ngu, new welders at the Cabot Machinery

Through language and cultural differences as high as Mount Evans, the two men communicated an unwavering dedication to one idea: hatred of Communism.

Ngu fought in the South Vietnamese Army and Vo in the Air Force. And our former allies are now our neighbors, with Ngu at home at 932 S. Wells and Vo next door at 929.

Pampa is new to the men who were recruited from the Western Oklahoma Area Vocational School as welders by Phil

United States is not. Both men have been in the United States since 1975, coming by sea through Guam, the Phillipines, Iceland, Thailand and Arkansas before settling in Oklahoma. Exactly how they came - or how they got out in the first place - remains a mystery because of what both men cited as their biggest adjustment problem - language.

The work at Cabot, however, is no problem. Pirkle said the men were "excelent" welders and read blueprints

Connunity profile: Jana Buzzard

Junior not afraid of involvement

By CHRIS EDWARDS Pampa News Staff

Participation. Discipline. Responsibility Old fashioned virtues, no? Perhaps old fashioned to some, but the traits show through the actions and words of Jana Buzzard, a 17 - year - old junior at Pampa High School.

Jana, dressed in a natty gray pantsuit, would have no problem passing as a 25 - year - old junior executive. An executive, however, might not come rushing in from a special session of the Pride of Pampa Band like Jana did last week.

The band's just one of the many things in which Jana participates. She plays bassoon, flute and drums, not to mention a little piano, "by ear." And as a result of that participation, she met relatives in Ireland when the band traveled there last spring.

Participation in the Office Education Association at the high school gained Jana four awards related to business education. She recently won the National OEA Ambassador Award for Outstanding Student Activities, the first student in Pampa to be so named. In addition, she was named Outstanding Lab Student for Vocational Office Education and won both local and area OEA contests for information communication

Jana hopes to major in business and minor in history, her favorite subject, at Angelo State University when she graduates from high school. One of her dreams is to own her own business, perhaps a boutique or wedding gown shop, but she also wants

"four to six kids." The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mark A. Buzzard, Jana comes from a family of five children. She has her own car, a Mustang II which her parents bought, but as part of the Buzzards' "responsibility" training. she will pay for the car, and in fact has already paid for "almost $1,000" by working part - time.

Jana said one of the biggest problems at Pampa High School is the lack of discipline and commented that the discipline needs to be consistent.

"There's no respect for the teachers," she said. "They're going to have to lay down some rules."

But Jana, a member of the Central Baptist Church, said she was amazed at the attitude change at the high school since a recent revival at the First Baptist

"It makes all the difference in the world," she said. "Everybody's getting involved. A lot of the kids have quit drinking and some that were selling pot won't sell

And besides the new and old fashioned virtues of participation, responsibility and discipline, the tall, slender, model-type Jana advocates sincerity.

"I think it's important to be yourself and not put up a front," she said.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Gambling is not simply a "weakness"—it's an illness for which treatment is available in Gambiers Anonymous. And for the family and close friends of the compulsive gambier there is a group called

The following questions may help you to decide whether you are involved with someone who is a compulsive

1. Are you haunted by bill collectors? 2. Is the person in question often away from home for long, unexplained periods of time?

3. Do you feel that he or she cannot be trusted with

4. Does he or she promise faithfully to stop gambling; beg, plead for another chance, yet gamble again and again?
5. Does he or she borrow money to gamble with or to pay gambling debts? 6. Have you noticed a personality change in the gambler as his or her gambling has progressed?

7. Have you come to the point of hiding money needed for living expenses, knowing that you and the rest of the family may go without food and clothing if you do not?

8. Do you search the gambler's clothing or go through his wallet when the opportunity presents itself, or otherwise check on his or her activities?

9. Does the gambler hide his or her money? 10. Does the gambler lie sometimes compulsively, avoid any discussion of his or her debts, or refuse to face the realities of the situation?

11. Does the gambler shift the responsibility for his or her gambling upon you, or try to make you feel guilty?

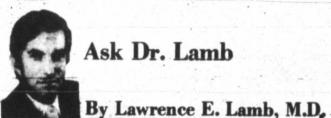

12. Do you attempt to anticipate the gambler's moods, or try to control his or her life?

13. Do you feel that your life together is a nightmare? If you have answered "yes" to six or more of these questions, I urge you to contact Gam-Anon. It's free, and there is nothing to "join." It's simply a fellowship of men and women who are relatives and close friends of compulsive gamblers. There you will learn effective ways of coping with the gambling problem from those who have lived through it.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I saw an article in the paper that said that the old iron kettle was a nutritional bonus and it tripled the content of iron in food cooked in it. I have always passed this off as nonsense but is there any

DEAR READER - Yes. The switch to other forms of kitchen utensils did eliminate one of the major sources of iron in the diet. As the iron dissolved in the food being cooked it served a real nutritional purpose. Of course you don't get that effect from glassware, stoneware or aluminum

DEAR DR. LAMB -About a year ago my husband broke out in tiny red bumps. They looked like measles. A couple of days later these bumps turned into little blisters. The itching was unbearable, and it spread all over his body in a week or so

A dermatologist took a biopsy and diagnosed it as "lichen planus." He told us that there was no known cause or cure for this, that all he could do was give my husband something for the itching. He also said this was neither contagious nor hereditary. My husband took everything possible, we used many different kinds of creams and even wrapped him in Saran Wrap after applying the cream. Nothing

Then he went to more dermatologists and they all agreed with the diagnosis. Finally after six months he quit going to the doctors and quit taking the medicine. Little spots over his body began to go under the skin. They never went away.

Now it's nearly a full year and my husband is breaking out again. We haven't been able to find any information whatsoever on this disease. If you have any information, suggestions or some kind of material on this will you please answer my letter?

DEAR READER — There are certain disagreeable illnesses that medical science really has no miracle for and lichen planus can be one of them. This generalized skin eruption is as you have described it and it does itch. Your doctors have told you the truth, the cause is not known and as you have discovered, the treatment is often unsatisfactory. The disease is not always gener-alized and may involve the wrists, lower legs or even the mouth. Treatment commonly consists of a long list of different salves that may be used to control the itching and hopefully to control the rash. These are not as effective as one might hope.

However, I can offer one good thought. Most of these will clear up anyway in a matter of a few months to at most a few years. A common time frame is one year to 18 months. Since it has been over a year since your husband started having prob-lems it may not last too much longer. This spontaneous remission also makes it difficult for the doctors to evaluate treatment as they never know whether the medicine did it or if the patient got well in spite of the medicine — just one of the little problems doctors have in dealing with such complex variables as human beings and what happens to For information about the skin, readers can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer. Send your request to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR POLLY — Please tell me of something that will fight dampness in a clothes closet that is near the wall of a brick house. Mildew is beginning to form on shoes and clothing. —NEIL shoes and clothing and then keep a low-watt light bulb burning in the closet all the time. Be sure it is not near clothing or anything that might become too hot. If you have a ceiling light in the closet, that is usually out of the way of anything that could cause a fire hazard. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY - You will have no more annoyance with a slipping rolling pin cover if you sew elastic thread around each end of the cover. This works perfectly. — AMELIA DEAR POLLY — Recently while we were on a vacation with another couple the husband had a rough edge on one of his fingernails. He used the striking surface of a match book for filing off the rough edge. I thought that an excellent idea for an emergency. — EDNA

Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

I got a letter recently from a young reader in California who wrote, "As you are a mother, perhaps you could define the phrase, 'Someday you'll thank me for this.' When I confronted my Mom with this question she replied with a age - old cliche, 'You're too young to understand. Wait until you grow up and have kids of your own."

"Somehow, I can't conceptualize myself ever thanking my Mom for wrenching a jelly donut out of my mouth and throwing it into the neighbor's yard. I can picture the neighbor's cocker spaniel thanking her, but not me." - Sincerely, Gayley S. (San Francisco)

How we mothers love it when you ask questions. You exhibit the kind of spirit that got my kids eight - hour naps when they were 17. (But then I never had kids who used language like conceptualize.)

Now, indulge me, Gayley, while I give you a little background. The phrase "Someday you'll thank me" was uttered by a housewife in Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 6, 1934, who had one of those kids you couldn't discipline and get a reaction out of. She'd send him to his room, take away his desserts, withhold his allowance, make him wear hard shoes in the summer. Nothing. Finally, one day after she had exhausted every threat she knew, she socked him on a chair and shouted, 'One of these days, You'll thank me for punishing

The child looked up, stunned. Now he knew what he was dealing with - an incoherent, irrational, weird mother who had inhaled too much laundry bleach and sucked on too many wet shoestrings. He never misbehaved again.

The phrase is a last resort for mothers. It is never used lightly or indiscriminately, but only when reason fails. It is reserved for those moments when a child is about to have a wonderful time and a mother is about to put a stop to it. At a time when she is about to inflict pain on your backside and feels there's a dead space in the conversation. It makes a mother feel forgiven for what she is about to do.

Thanks to that housewife from Des Moines, Gayley, there are 18 million mothers sitting

Superbabies learn swimming survival skills

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) -Six-month-old Christopher Deveigne can't walk, but he is well on the way to learning how to swim

Three-times a week his mother takes him to a Sydney swimming pool and tosses him in fully-clothed.

It's a heart-stopping event for those who see it for the first time, as fair-haired Christopher sinks to the bottom of the pool.

It's all part of a controversial survival course which has brought thousands of suburban mothers and their babies to half a dozen swimming centers around Sydney and which may soon be taken to the United

The backyard pool is a muchsought-after status symbol for the middle-class families of Sydney's sprawling suburbs. In New South Wales, Australia's most populous state with about one-third of the country's 14 million people, officials estimate there are about 600,000 private pools.

Until two years ago, an average of 30 children under the age of 5 drowned each year in New South Wales. Officials said this figure had now been halved to about 15 a year. They attrib-

Bory and his wife Eva. 40, came to Australia as champion swimmers on the Hungarian team in the 1956 Melbourne Olympic games which coincided with the abortive revolution in their home country. About half the 110-member team defected in Australia and the couple found themselves looking for work.

After a few years of coaching and teaching, the pair opened their first swimming center in Bory said the object in the course was for the babies "to learn a respect for the water, to feel at home and relax. Much of the fear of water, Bory said, is planted into children by their own parents.

Bory and his wife said they'd never had a superbaby who didn't learn how to float. "Some children take three weeks, others six weeks," Bory said. "But we offer a guaranteed 100 percent result.

The Borys' program is not without its critics, however, who say that throwing a youngster into a pool can permanently traumatize a child They also say the program gives a false sense of security to parents, especially around unheated pools in the cold win-

Texans conserving gas; but are other states?

HOUSTON (AP)-A Texas official says the state cannot allow Texas consumers to make economic sacrifices to conserve natural gas only to see the gas wasted in other states.

Jon Newton, a member of the Texas Railroad Commission, the state's oil and gas regulatory authority, said it seems, at times, at least, that Texas is alone in its conservation ef-

Newton says some states apparently want to take advantage of the commission's statewide rule to phaseout natural gas as boiler fuel in Texas.

"This order alone will release 500 billion cubic feet of gas to higher and better use," he said. That, Newton added, is enough gas to supply the current residential needs of Houston, the nation's fifth largest city, more than 15 years.

But Texas utilities are going to do even better than that," he only 15 percent of our electricity in Texas will be generated by natural gas. That's a 74 percent reduction from 1977

But he said California already is making plans to use the gas Texans are saving under their boilers.

"The Air Resources Board of California has proposed a rule which would prohibit the burning of liquid or solid fuel if natural gas were available." Newton said.

"After a study of the gas supply situation in Texas, the California agency predicted our coal and nuclear conversion programs, spurred by our order, would create a continuing surplus of gas in Texas which would be available to Califor-

"Obviously it is unfair to the people of Texas for the Railroad Commission to mandate a costly change-over to coal or nuclear if the gas is going to be wasted," he said.

"We cannot allow Texas consumers to make the economic sacrifice necessary to replace existing facilities and then watch the freed gas be piped to California or any other state to be burned in their boilers."

"We cannot allow the State of Texas to be put at a disadvantage because our own conservation measures are more stringent than those mandated by Washington," Newton

By DAVID ESPO Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Edward J. Markey, a 32-yearold Democratic congressman from Massachusetts, is still paying off a loan from his college days. Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., a millionaire, made more than $100,000 last year - on top of his congressional salary.

Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., like many Americans, owes money to Master Charge and BankAmericard. In his case, he owes at least $2,500 each.

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., unlike a lot of Americans, has $1,500 in a Swiss bank account. Markey, Richmond, Foley, McClory and hundreds of their colleagues in the House of Representatives disclosed their personal financial holdings on Thursday under a new House requirement for detailed reporting of wealth. The Senate also has a financal disclosure code but those reports have not yet been made public.

Despite the financial statements, it is not possible to determine exactly how much each House member is worth, because the rules require reporting only a range of financial worth up to "$100,000 or more" rather than a precise value.

The reports show that not everyone in the House is rich.

By DAVE GOLDBERG AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The poet's picture is on the back cover, a sensitive half-smile on his face, a work shirt on his back. The introduction describes him as a modern Renaissance Man, uplifted from a poor urban childhood to athletic stardom, with a love for the outdoors, a poetic sensitivity for his surroundings, a desire for public service.

The poet is a congressman, William S. Cohen of Maine. His book of poems just happens to be published as he prepares to undertake a campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Cohen is a Republican, one of the Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee who voted in 1974 to impeach the Republican president, Richard M. Nix-

This year, he is seeking the Senate seat held by Democrat producing the routine, hackwritten campaign biography, he has written a book of poems.

Such is "Of Sons and Seasons," by William S. Cohen, described on its cover as "Poetic reflections on the beauty of America, on childhood and patriotism, family and government, by the perceptive and sensitive Congressman from Maine.

There are, to be sure, other politician-poets. Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy was one; so, in a lighter vain was former Rep. William Hungate, a colleague of Cohen's on the House Judiciary Committee, and so was a neighbor, former Sen. Norris Cotton of New Hampshire. And Rep. Andrew Jacobs. William Hathaway. Instead of in fact, he has had to take time out from politics to put in personal appearances to plug it.

But the timing is certainly political, and the contents can only show the most attractive of candidates: A loving husband and father, sensitive about death, patriotically concerned about his country's future; concerned about his friends, faithful to his roots in the old neighborhood; worried about the commercialization of Christmas and depredation of the environment.

And not without a certain whimsy.

As in "The Plagiarist," about an unnamed colleague who told Cohen how much he admired his speech in Maine on the reasons for his anti-Nixon vote.

"I offered to let him use as a guide the speech I had just made,"Cohen writes in introducing the poem. "He apparently found it suitable for his needs since he simply deleted the references to Maine and substituted the name of his own state. Overall college enrollment drops

EDITOR'S NOTE - Posh private colleges can still pretty much pick and choose, but they're finding the ranks are thinning among low- and middle-income students. One school attributes the trend to changing family values: Parents don't want to sacrifice for their kids so much any more.

By JON HALVORSEN

Associated Press Writer BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) -On May 1, thousands of high school seniors will be making one of the most important decisions of their young lives which of the nation's elite private colleges to attend.

For some, the day of acceptance may mean fulfillment of an ambition - theirs or their parents. For others, the decision may already have been made for them. Either they were rejected by the schools or they didn't apply because they're part of a growing group whose parents decided against making the huge fiancial sacri-

Although there are fewer lowand middle-income applicants and the overall percentage of high school graduates enrolling in four-year colleges is declining, the top-notch private schools have no shortage zof candidates.

Last year, Stanford and Dartmouth accepted only one in four applicants; Harvard, less than one in five; Amherst, less than one in six. The cost of attending such institutions is staggering. At Bowdoin College, the 184-yearold alma mater of Hawthorne and Longfellow, next fall's 380 freshmen - of 3,600 who applied - will pay $7,250 each, up from $6,550 this year, for tuition, room and board, fees, sup-

But at Bowdoin and other private schools, the proportion of students from low-and middleincome families is dropping.

Fewer families who "fall into what the sociologists call the middle class are even applying to places that are very expensive," says William R. Mason, Bowdoin's director of admissions. His office defines middle class as families earning $15,000-$25,000, "and you might even push it up as high as $30,000."

A Bowdoin study comparing its freshman classes over an eight-year period - as the student body increased from 955 to its present 1,350 - shows a growing number of well-to-do students and a decreasing proportion of those less affluent:

The effect of soaring costs on families of modest means hasn't gone unnoticed. At Bowdoin, three alumni, each acting independently, set up substantial scholarship funds earmarked specifically for "middle-income" students.

"That's a new phenomenon," says C. Warren Ring, vice president for development.

In his annual report a year ago, Bowdoin President Roger Howell Jr., noted that given inflation generally and the increased costs of attending Bowdoin, "there is nothing mysterious about the growing need to provide aid to students from upper middle-income families.

'We continue to be troubled, however, about the decreasing numbers of low and lower middle-income students...and we will continue to direct our recruiting effort to lower iNcome students of high ability."

Says Mason: "What we're trying to do here is admit a class without any notion as to whether they can pay" - and then aid every student who needs it. About a third at Bowdoin receive financial aid.

Since 1972-73, the college has met the "calculated financial need" of every low-and middleincome student who qualified academically. In previous years, some students had to be put on a waiting list for financial aid

In 1968, 35 percent of Bowdoin's freshman aid recipients came from families earning $15,000-$25,000. Now, more than half fall in that bracket.

Walter H. Moulton, director of student aid, says Bowdoin families in the $15,000-$20,000 bracket received average financial aid of $3,450 toward this year's cost of $6,550. The net cost to parents was $3,100 compared with $3,205 for instate students living on campus at the University of Maine at Orono.

Families earning $20,000-$25,-800 received an average of $2,-750, leaving them with a net cost of $3,800.

But even with the financial aid available, Bowdoin and similar institutions see a "declining public" among low-and middle-income families.

One reason, Mason says, is that middle-class values have changed - parents are less willing to make the great financial sacrifices they once did to

One survives family suicide

TOKYO (AP) - A Japanese taxi driver fearing his wife had terminal cancer drove off a pier today, drowning himself, her and two of their three sons. The third son survived the suicide plunge, which took place on Children's Day, a national holiday.

The survivor, 16-year-old Toshio Izutzu, gave police this account Shizuo Izutzu, 43, took the family for a drive through the port city of Kobe because his wife, Kanako, 40, was going to be hospitalized later in the day. Izutsu was obsessed with the idea that his wife's colon cancer was incurable. He suggested to his family during the drive that they should die together, but the family refused.

Mason, who has spent 11 years in admissions work at Yale, Williams and now Bowdoin, adds: "The ethic that prevailed (among parents) when I first started was, 'Don't worry, we'll make the sacrifice.""

Now, he says, more and more middle-class families are using their disposable income "as a kind of payment back for all their hard work" by spending it on themselves.

The study surveyed 10,000 families who applied for student financial aid for the current school year. The higher the parents' income, the study found, the less willing they were to contribute what was

Joe Paul Case, associate director of the College Scholarship Service, believes that middle-income families' ability, or willingness, to pay for a college education "perhaps is influenced by their own expectations of what is, for lack of a better term, 'the good

Case says it's a myth "that middle-income families don't qualify for aid - they do," but when it comes to applying for admission it often is the parents' perceptions that count.

"If they're perceiving they're less able to pay, then the perception becomes the reality.

Ehrlichman points at Nixon for Ellsburg siewicz to Chappaquiddick on Enrlichman, newly released from a prison term for his role in the Watergate coverup, says he is convinced his erstwhile boss, former President Richard Nixon, set in motion the burglary at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

9:00P.M. - (Ch. 7): ALAN KING'S 2ND ANNUAL FINAL WARNING Alan's quests include John Aspen, Dick Van Patten, Nancy Walker and Susan St. James.

By Joan Geoghegan

They'll be candygrams galore when Oscar-winner and former shark tamer Richard Dreyfuss hosts NBC's "Saturday Night Live" on May 13. Jaws will probably be dredged up from the deep of the Not Ready for Prime Time Players' zany repertoire.

Celebrities galore is the game at ABC on May 7 when "Battle of the Network Stars: Net-War IV" airs. ABC, NBC and CBS will match the stars at Pepperdine University in Malibu, California. The ABC team will be lead by Gabriel Kaplan, Debby Boone and model Cheryl Tiegs; Tony Randall, Jimmie Walker and Mackenzie Phillips will tow the line for CBS; and Dan Haggerty, Arte Johnson and Jane Curtin will be pitching for NBC. ABC Sports Commentator Howard Cosell will host the program, along with Suzanne Somers and Olympic decathalon gold medalist Bruce Jenner.

John Jakes' Bicentennial blockbuster, "The Bastard" will air on - in two parts beginning on May 22. Keenan Wynn plays a tory, Andrew Stevens stars, William Shatner is Paul Revere, and Buddy Ebsen is a sympathetic Boston printer in the upcoming event. Still another best seller, Irving Wallace's "The Word," is being produced as a miniseries at CBS for an eight-hour fall premiere. David Janssen and Florinda Bolkan will have the leads. Geraldine Chaplin, John Huston, Kate Mulgrew, Janice Rule and Nicol Williamson have the backups in this intriguing story of a public relations executive's discovery of a "lost Gospel," in a Roman ruin.

The NBC six-hour miniseries "Studs Lonigan" has signed on a cast. Collen Dewhurst, Charles Durning and Harry Hamlin (as Studs) will star in the TV adaptation of James Farrell's trilogy.

A romantic pair in the past, Robert Young and Dorothy McGuire will star as Grandfather Laurence and Marmee in NBC's production of the Louisa May Alcott classic, "Little Women." Also at NBC, Lloyd Bridges will play Parker Memorial Hospital director, Dan Lassiter. He becomes concerned when several of his doctors fall victim to a prosecuting attorney who never loses a malpractice suit. No, it's not "Sea Hunt," but "The Critical List," a four-hour miniseries.

Slow talking film star Jimmy Stewart will be all heated up on May 10 when he's the roastee on "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast." Some of his riling roasters will be: Milton Berle, Lucille Ball, Sen. Barry Goldwater, Mickey Rooney, Janet Leigh, Henry Fonda, George Burns and Orson Welles.

While there's no sense in waiting for Christmas in May, two networks are pumping up their fall football schedules. Due to the expanded NFL schedule, 'ABC's Monday Night Football" has got 16 games on line for the September 4 kick off. The Super Bowl champs, the Dallas Cowboys, will face off against the Baltimore Colts.

NBC will have the final football say, however. They'll telecast 99 NFL games, including exclusive coverage of the Super Bowl. On September 3, they'll air a rematch of the 1977 AFL Championship game between the Denver Broncos and the Oakland Raiders

An out-of-season greeting from NBC: O. Henry's the "Gift of the Magi" will be a 90-minute Christmas special. It's the story of a struggling young couple who sacrifice their dearest possessions to buy each other a Christmas gifts.

County Extension Agent Home demonstration clubs are having programs on food safety and cancer in May. The food safety program stresses safe handling of food. Basic food safety will help prevent food poisoning. Remember keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold and live longer in good health. Specifically cook foods thoroughly and serve them hot, prevent recontamination through cleanliness and use of sanitary utensils, promptly cool or freeze foods after preparation to retard bacteria multiplication, and, fully reheat stored foods to destroy bacteria.

In a survey of 2,503 households, 63 percent of those sampled used at least one high risk practice in handling, preparing and storing selected meat and poultry products.

households left fresh meat poultry or fish out at room temperature for more than two hours thinking it was safe to eat. They were wrong - meat is a haven for bacterial growth.

Over two and one-half million people were affected in 1976 by Salmonellosis, one of the major food borne illnesses affecting man. Many more cases go unreported because people assume they have a "bug" or the flu.

Salmonella — a group of bacteria almost worldwide in distribution - may be found in water, poultry, meat and meat products, eggs and egg products, fish shellfish and oysters. Freezing does not kill salmonella - it only prevents multiplication.

Many homemakers are not aware of the problems involved with handling food safely at home. Food handling in the home is extremely important and one most consumers can correct. Follow strict sanitation measures because cleanliness in food handling is the most important way to prevent the bacteria from being carried.

with the Couty Extension Agents to plan, implement, evaluate and report the accomplishments of the Committee as related to the County Extension program. Raymond Maddox is Chairman of the Program Building Committee. Subcommittees include Horticulture - Mrs. Mary Ann Boehmisch; Family Living - Mrs. Janice Carter: 4-H and Youth - Mrs. Billie Lowrey; Community Resource Development — Melvin Kunkel: Crops - Earl Smith; and Livestock - Rex McAnelly. The Committee meeting will hear reports of subcommittees and discuss educational programs for the coming year. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Modern Oven-cleaning Options Today's consumer has three oven-cleaning options to choose from. These options include the standard porcelain-enamel oven, the self-cleaning oven and the continuous-cleaning oven. Actually, each type is a porcelain-enamel oven but differences involve performance as well as required

The standard oven uses a conventional porcelain-enamel finish. There is only one way to clean this type oven - manually using a homemade or separate cleaning cycle is used. The door is locked and controls set to permit the oven to heat to temperatures around 900 degrees F. In the two to three hour cleaning cycle, food spatters and spills are oxidized or burned off with only a small amount of white or gray ash remainig. After the one to two hour cool-down period, unlock the door and wipe up the ash residue leaving a spotless clean

With the continuous-cleaning oven system, oven soil is gradually reduced to a "presentably clean" condition through the specially treated surfaces activated during normal baking or roasting procedures

Shinoak Control Demonstration In early April we established a result demonstration on the Tony Smitherman ranch about 5 miles north of McLean on the east side of Highway 273.

The purpose of this demonstration is to determine the effectiveness of pelleted herbicides to control sand shinoak. The demonstration contains three treatments with rates on a per acre basis as follows: (1) Tordon 10K at 21.5 lbs.; (2) Spike 20P at 7.5 lbs.; and (3) Spike at 1.75 lbs.

These plots will be evaluated over the next few years to determine the rate of control resulting from each treatment.

Landscape Gardening Home gardeners should be making plans to accomplish the following list of activities during the month of May.

(1) Perform any necessary pruning of spring flowering trees and shrubs as soon as they finish blooming.

(2) Check gladiolus for thrip infestations and spray if needed. (3) Prune climbing roses as soon as they pass the peak bloom period to insure a good supply of new wood for next year's flowers. (4) Bermuda grass lawns can be seeded now. Use good seed, plant in a well-prepared bed, roll or pack soil after seeding, and keep surface moist until germinated. (5) Fire blight season on pear.

(13) Caladium tubers can be planted anytime the last two eeks in May or in early June.

(14) Grass turning brown? Check mower blades for sharpness. Dull blades tear rather than cut resulting in a brownish descoloration shortly after cutting.

Thin Fruit

Peaches naturally produce four time as many fruit as the tree normally can bear. We have not had a hard spring freeze and the peach set is very heavy. You need to thin the crop to have good quality fruit and healthy trees. Remove the extra fruit when it is 1/4 to 1/2 inch in diameter. Bump the limbs with padded pole and follow up with hand thinning. The peaches should be no closer than 6

This peach crop has a high number of double or twin peaches. This is when two fruit develop from the same flower. These fruit will not develop normally and should be removed. This is the result of our hot-dry September in 1977 or the cool spring in 1978.

SCS workshop will explain new law

The Gray County Soil Conservation Service (SCS) has available a new leaflet explaining the Resources Conservation Act of 1977 and the public role in its implementation. Under the new law, SCS will appraise the nation's soil, water and related resources; develop a comprehensive 5-year strategy to guide conservation efforts and evaluate the effectiveness of ongoing conservation programs.

SCS will carry out the work in cooperation with appropriate citizen groups; conservation districts; and other local, state and federal agencies. The appraisal and program will be completed by the end of 1979 and updated every five years.

The Gray County SCS office will sponsor a workshop concerning the new law at 8 p.m. Friday in the Courthouse Annex. Copies of the leaflet can be obtained by calling 665-1751.

Allergies: your personal poisons

World dangerous for sufferers

BY JOHN BARBOUR The Associated Press

CHAPTER ONE

In her variety of poses, Mother Nature endows people with brains, agility, strength, keen eyesight, acute hearing, all of the physical blessings that enhance life.

But for what may be as many as one in six Americans, she has tucked in one little flaw. She has made them sensitive to one or another of the thousands of innocent substances on

In short, she has endowed them with one or more very personal poisons. They suffer from allergies.

Their personal poisons are called allergens, and they may be as common as house dust, as subtle as pollen, as cuddly as a cat, as tasty as a tomato, as necessary as penicillin, as cheap as potatoes, as expensive as lobster, as comfortable as a pillow, as pungent as an onion, as avoidable as a radish, as unavoidable as sunlight.

Further, these personal poisons are not in themselves poisonous. But nature has given some unlucky people a kind of super-sensitivity to otherwise innocent agents.

She has created a dangerous world for allergic people out of the very things that make the world comfortable for others. And quirky as it may be, it is a world of torture and misery. It leaves some of its victims with periodic or constant battles with an unseen enemy that leaves them itching, sneezing, coughing, wheezing. For a few it may mean limited vitality, limited scope, perhaps even a shortened life.

Not everyone who is allergic knows it. For some, contact with their personal poison is so rare that they pass off the symptoms as a transient bout of sneezing, or a passing case of diarrhea. "Something I ate," the victim might say.

Some people break out in hives after too much sun. Some get sick to their stomach after eating a sandwich, and blame the meat when the culprit might be the bread. Some awaken sneezing and coughing after a night on a soft down pillow. Some make it a practice never to visit friends who have dogs or cats. Some wonder why they are sneezing after a new carpet has been laid in the of-

For many, however, the torture of allergy is so severe or so constant that they seek medical aid. It may be only then that the personal poison

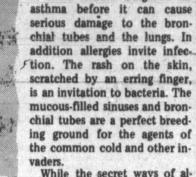

It is easy to test for allergy. The doctor simply scratches the skin and applies a small amount of the potential allergen, whether it be house dust or chocolate. If an itch or a welt or a lump develops, the test is positive.

The difficulty lies in the wide range of things you might be sensitive to. Generally the doctor can narrow the suspects down by investigating when and how you had allergic at-

A similar method is used to desensitize a person to allergenic agents. The doctor simply inoculates the patient bit by bit with the substances to which he is allergic. The body responds by building a tolerance for these agents. But this treatment, like some vaccine, works for a limited period of time and must be repeated over the

The surest way of avoiding allergic attack is to avoid the thing or things you are allergic to. That may be simple when the culprit is shellfish, but very difficult when it is house dust or pollen.

Allergies are often belittled, and the plight of the allergic patients is sometimes the subject of a kind of sick humor. But there is nothing humorous about the pain and suffering of the allergic person. Allergies cannot be ignored.

While the secret ways of allergy response are not well known, research in recent years has uncovered some interesting mechanisms. And as researchers learn more about the ways the defense system goes astray, they will be able to tailor-make specific chemicals against abnormalities, and still let the body do its work.

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) - Gov. Robert Bennett cut through red tape to liberate 15 cases of French wine, five days before the French delegation that sent it to Wichita was to arrive in the city.

The wine - a gift of Wichita's sister city, Orleans - became entangled in Kansas's complicated liquor laws.

The 180 bottles of French Vouvary Mousseux white wine were impounded by the U.S. Customs Service because the gallonage and enforcemen taxes had not been paid. Wichita officials offered to pay the $50 in taxes. But an attorney for the state Alcoholic Beverage Control office said the state's liquor law prohibited approximately 4.4 million fat Bennett then signed a bill forwarded to him by the legislature Thursday that allows the city to pay the tax.

The French delegation is coming Tuesday for an Orleans art exhibit at the Wichita art

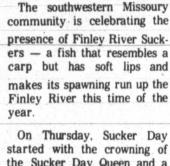

LOUISVILLE (AP) - The mint julep, for years the official drink of the Kentucky Derby, now has a non-alcoholic counterpart named for teen-age jockey sensation Steve Cauthen.

The drink was listed with other Derby concoctions in a story by John Finley in the Louisville Courier-Journal. Called simply the "Steve Cauthen," it is a mixture of orange juice and ginger ale with sprigs of mint.

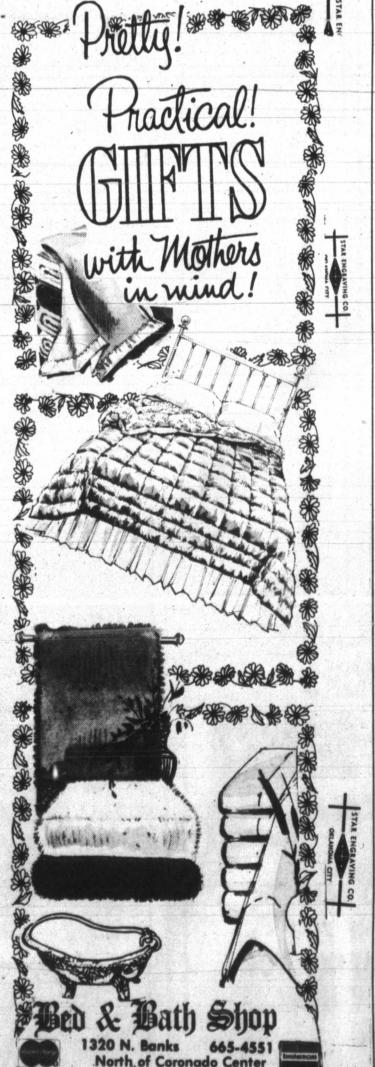

Cauthen, who turned 18 this week, still is not old enough to buy a drink in his native state of Kentucky.

He'll have his first Derby mount Saturday when he takes Affirmed to the starting post.

NIXA. Mo. (AP) - San Juan Capistrano might have its swallow, and Hinckley, Ohio, its buzzards, but Nixa has its suck-

Berry Month of May

Strawberry

The Furr's Advertising Committee worked day and night to decide on just the right berry to feature during the month of May. One member was pushing the Pokeberry while another was holding out for the Whortleberry. The Buffaloberry and the Cowberry were running neck and neck when the boss walked in and said, "How about the Strawberry? It's a very merry berry, they say, for the merry merry month of May." It was unanimous.

So, all month we're proudly featuring the Strawberry in a variety of good tasting ways to complement your other good cookin' favorites. Look for the specially priced "Strawberry Features". Here are this week's suggestions as Furr's Salutes the Strawberry.
