

Berkowitz pleads guilty to killing

David Berkowitz

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — David R. Berkowitz pleaded guilty today to gunning down 20-year-old Stacy Moskowitz last July 31 in the sixth and final murder attributed to the "Son of Sam" killer.

"It was wrong," the pudgy, 24-year-old former postal clerk from Yonkers told Judge Joseph R. Corso in Brooklyn Supreme Court as he entered the plea in the killing of Miss Moskowitz and wounding of her first-time date, Robert Violante.

It was not immediately known if he would follow through with his plan to plead guilty to the five other Son of Sam killings.

Berkowitz, dressed in a blue suit and white open-neck shirt, stood before Corso and answered a long series of questions designed to see if he understood the consequences of his plea.

"Do you know the penalty for first-degree murder?" Corso asked.

"Twenty-five years to life," Berkowitz answered in a clear, firm voice.

Seated at the front of the courtroom were judges and district attorneys from The Bronx and Queens, on hand to accept Berkowitz pleas if he admits guilt in all the Son of Sam killings.

Justice Corso set sentencing for Berkowitz on the Moskowitz case for May 22 and declared a 15-minute recess before continuing with the unusual proceeding.

Also on hand were hundreds of police officers and an additional 35 court officers stationed on the floor of the building where the trial was scheduled.

Berkowitz was brought about 10 miles from a Brooklyn psychiatric prison ward in a Correction Department van, escorted by a heavily armed cordon of police vehicles and a police helicopter.

The proposal for the unusual courtroom procedures—secret for three months until details were leaked to the press last week—could only be employed as long as Berkowitz exercised his off-stated intention to reject his attorneys' insanity defense and plead guilty.

Having been ruled competent to stand trial twice—last October and again in April—Berkowitz had a legal right to overrule his attorneys and change his plea from innocent by reason of insanity to guilty.

Berkowitz's attorneys and members of his family have frequently noted his instability, as have some of the psychiatrists who examined him since his arrest last August.

Berkowitz was accused of killing six people and wounding seven others with a .44-caliber revolver. "Son of Sam" was the name the killer adopted in signed letters to the press and police.

Last year, the defendant demanded a trial so he could warn the world about the demons and promised he would "have a lot to say." Berkowitz also has said he wanted to plead guilty to add credibility to his warnings about the demons.

On tape recordings played at Berkowitz's first competency hearing, the suspect was heard telling a psychiatrist that he committed the killings to satisfy the desires of blood-thirsty demons that continually haunted him.

Officials said last week that the special arrangements were devised to save the expense of transporting Berkowitz from one courthouse to another.

Briscoe concedes gov's race to Hill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe sent a four-word telegram to Attorney General John Hill today conceding he lost the Democratic race for governor.

"Congratulations and best wishes," said Briscoe's telegram that Hill read to a news conference.

"I appreciate that very much," Hill said simply.

Hill said he had already received congratulations Sunday night in a telephone call from President Carter. The two men discussed a possible meeting either in Washington or Texas within several weeks, Hill said.

Hill said he probably will go to Washington a week from this Wednesday to spend several days discussing crucial matters, including energy legislation, with key congressmen.

Hill said he and his wife were leaving this afternoon on a four-day, out-of-state trip to get some rest but he would be back shortly to start planning his Noember campaign against Republican nominee Bill Clements and, he said, "his taking over the Texas governor's job."

"I've been trying this case for 10 years," Hill said, smiling during late vote counting early Sunday.

Votes continued to trickle in today at the Texas Election Bureau but officials said there was no question that Hill had grabbed the Democratic nomination without a runoff.

Voters in the Republican primary nominated Bill Clements over Ray Hutchison and both parties defeated the non-binding pari-mutuel referendum.

The Democratic race for the right to meet U.S. Sen. John Tower in November was won by U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger, who led former Texas insurance commissioner Joe Christie all night.

Tower was unopposed in the Republican primary.

Incomplete race tallies Sunday included reports from 246 of 254 counties with 198 complete.

Krueger received 55.01 percent with 44.99 percent going to Christie.

Hill, 54, narrowly escaped a runoff, gathering 51.26 percent of the vote in the five-man race, according to returns Sunday.

Briscoe was at 41.66 percent. Texas Election Bureau officials said the few remaining votes still uncounted would have no effect on the race other than to simply increase Hill's margin of victory.

Latest figures showed Hill with 824,845 votes; Briscoe, 670,424; and Smith 83,895.

Clements, a wealthy Dallas businessman and former deputy defense secretary under Presidents Nixon and Ford, had no trouble defeating Dallas-lawyer, Ray Hutchison, a former state GOP chairman. The oilman garnered an even 73 percent of the ballots to Hutchison's 24.28 percent. A third candidate, Clarence Thompson of Fort Worth, took the remaining 2.71 percent without campaigning.

Former Texas Gov. Preston Smith, who had been considered by many the man to force Hill and Briscoe into a runoff, finished a poor third with 5.22 percent.

Smith was beaten by Briscoe six years ago.

Donald Beagle, a Nederland welding shop owner, and Ray Mayo, an author-publisher from San Juan in the Rio Grande Valley, received mostly local votes and were not factors in the statewide race.

Beagle received 81 percent and Mayo, 1.05.

One surprise result of the balloting was Mark White's victory over Price Daniel Jr. as the Democrat's choice for Texas Attorney General.

White collected 52.36 percent of the vote. Daniel claimed 47.64 percent.

Houston attorney Jim Baker was the unopposed Republican winner.

White, appointed secretary of state by Briscoe, dashed Daniel's comeback hopes, defeating the former Texas House speaker by about five percentage points.

The pari-mutuel referendum failed for the 10th time in three decades. The Democrats knocked it down hard, but the Republicans appeared more lenient.

The Democrats voted against the referendum by a 52-48 percent margin. The Republicans, however, turned the proposal down by a difference of less than one percentage point.

Allen Maley, director of the Anti-Crime Council of Texas, said he hoped "the gambling promoters get the message."

Maley said Saturday's defeat, which would not have been binding on the 199 Legislature, meant "that the voters of Texas are getting sick and tired of being forced to vote on this issue every four to six years."

Pampan wins by 650 votes

Foster Whaley thinks there are too many laws governing the lives and businesses of Texas residents. He hopes to remedy this situation in Austin.

The Gray County farmer and former Extension agent is one step closer to the state capital today following his successful bid Saturday for the Democratic nomination for state representative from the 66th District.

A latecomer who did not enter the race until January, Whaley accumulated 7,895 votes to defeat Glenn Conrad, a young Armstrong County farmer, who polled 7,241 votes.

Leads in Gray, Floyd, Wheeler and Childress counties—the most populous in the district—pulled Whaley ahead of Conrad who led in the other seven counties.

Officially, Whaley spent $7,020.85 on his campaign compared to Conrad's $11,174.36. Whaley raised $4,580 for campaign expenditures while Conrad raised $3,460.95.

A 19-year veteran as Gray County Extension agent, Whaley also spent six years as Armstrong County Extension agent. He now farms west of Pampa.

However, he told The News today that he currently has his farm land leased out.

As for future campaign efforts, Whaley said he plans "to meet key leaders in every county of the 66th District." He said he will continue his "personal contact" campaign approach.

Whaley, with his wife Lois, acted as campaign managers doing all the promotion work themselves. He said they will continue this campaign policy in his state representative bid against Republican Bill Hale of Floydada. They will meet in the general election this November.

He said he will campaign for the office and not against the person "between now and November."

Saturday's official Democratic primary vote, with Whaley's vote listed first, was Armstrong, 336 to 459; Briscoe, 297 to 406; Childress, 824 to 795; Collingsworth, 633 to 696; Donley, 547 to 670; Floyd, 1,118 to 820; Gray, 2,403 to 1,621; Hall, 493 to 526; Motley, 306 to 329; and Wheeler, 938 to 919.

A special public participation meeting will be conducted at the beginning of tonight's board meeting immediately before the regular business session.

Also, the commission will consider an agreement with the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission concerning acquisition of surplus property, and conduct public hearings on proposed annexations and the city's application for Federal Community Development Block Grant Program funds for city water line repair.

Monday's weather will be clear becoming warmer on Tuesday. The high this afternoon will be in the low 70's and the low will reach the mid 40's. Winds will be west, north westerly 15-25 mph becoming westerly 5-10 mph tonight.

22 jailed after looting in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Police patrolled a predominantly Mexican-American area on the near north side today after a fight broke up a fiesta celebration Sunday and led to a near-riot accompanied by looting, arson, and gunfire.

While more than 100 policemen were at the scene, all other officers were kept on standby alert more than eight hours.

A police car and a television mobile unit were burned.

In the early morning hours, two convenience stores were looted and a fire caused heavy damage to a bakery, variety store, and a laundry in a shopping center.

"It was the good guys and the bad guys," said KPRC-TV reporter Jack Cato, who was struck on the forehead with a brick and stabbed in the back.

"One Latin American helped me get out and others were still throwing rocks at us."

The initial outbreak occurred as police sought to break up a fight that developed as about 1,500 persons were attending a fiesta celebration at Moody Park in a predominantly Mexican-American community that has been upset since Joe Campos Torres, 23, a young karate expert, died a year ago while in police custody.

"A couple of people got into a fight and some people jumped in," said State Rep. Ben Reyes.

"When the police came, people reacted to their being there."

Four hours after the initial outbreak, police reported scattered looting, said one store was set ablaze, and that no one was injured as several shots were fired from an apartment building. Police in riot gear escorted firemen into the area.

An hour later, police reported the situation was under control.

Police answering the initial fight were pelted with rocks and bottles.

Reyes said there has been "a very volatile situation" in the Mexican-American community ever since U.S. District Judge Ross N. Sterling gave probated sentences to three former policemen who were convicted on charges of violating the civil rights of Torres, whose body was recovered from a downtown bayou last May 8.

It is very easy at this point to agitate, Reyes said.

"People feel like they can't get any justice and they didn't get any justice. Folks have been very upset."

Reyes had no criticism for the police.

"I certainly don't believe the police department was in the wrong," he said. "It is my understanding they were trying to break up a disturbance and were victims of circumstances."

Rachel Lucas, one of the organizers of the fiesta, said several people had been circulating among the crowd talking about the Torres case.

"Someone grabbed a microphone and started screaming for justice for Joe Campos Torres," she said.

"These were all young people unknown to us. They were not our people. They were not fiesta people."

Reyes said it was his understanding four or five people ran around telling the crowd how they had been kicked around by police.

"The police didn't know that had been going on and it exploded on them," he said.

Handbills distributed among the crowd by the People United to Fight Police Brutality organization were headed "Stop Police Terror."

"This has been a year of tremendous struggle against police terror," the handbills said.

Miami group petitions against superintendent

A citizens petition requesting the immediate discharge of Superintendent Bill Daugherty will be presented during the regular meeting of the Miami Independent School Board tonight.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Miami High School auditorium.

Spokesman for the petitioners John Smith of Miami, said more than 200 persons have signed the dismissal petition. Smith said he expects more signatures by tonight's meeting.

This will be the second time in Daugherty's four-year tenure with the Miami school system that a petition requesting his dismissal has been presented, Smith said.

A special public participation meeting will be conducted at the beginning of tonight's board meeting immediately before the regular business session.

Also, the commission will consider an agreement with the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission concerning acquisition of surplus property, and conduct public hearings on proposed annexations and the city's application for Federal Community Development Block Grant Program funds for city water line repair.

Kissinger urges sale of fighters to Israel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told a Senate committee today it should urge the Carter administration to increase the number of jet fighters it proposes to sell to Israel.

Kissinger told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the number of planes for Israel in the administration's proposal is "at the very lowest end of the spectrum."

The package submitted to Congress by the Carter administration includes 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s for Israel, 60 F-15s for Saudi Arabia and 50 F-5s for Egypt.

Kissinger appeared on Capitol Hill while reports were circulating that the administration was ready to submit a compromise that would increase the number of planes for the Israelis.

A prominent Senate backer of Israel said such a compromise would be welcomed on Capitol Hill, where the proposed sale of the sophisticated F-15s to Saudi Arabia has drawn strong opposition.

Kissinger said that while he was in office, the numbers discussed in terms of modernizing the Israeli air force "were several orders of magnitude" higher than the Carter administration proposal.

"The original discussions did not take into consideration arming of Arab states," the former secretary of state added.

While urging an increase in the number of planes for Israel, Kissinger also endorsed the sales to Saudi Arabia and Egypt and said both countries "deserve our support."

Kissinger acknowledged that while he was in office there were "technical discussions" with the Saudis about possible sale of jet fighters. But he added, "all the political decisions with respect to the timing, the numbers and the package were made in the current administration."

As for the sale of the less-sophisticated F-5s to Egypt, Kissinger said it would have only a marginal effect on the military balance in the Middle East and was largely a symbolic gesture of U.S. support for Egypt.

Kissinger was the last scheduled witness before the Foreign Relations Committee acts on Carter's proposal.

As White House sources said the president is open to a compromise with opponents of the sales to Saudi Arabia and Egypt, a prominent Senate backer of Israel predicted the reported offer would be well received.

Members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, meanwhile, were preparing to ask Henry A. Kissinger why he did not tell them three years ago that he had promised advanced U.S. fighters to Saudi Arabia.

The former secretary of state, scheduled to testify before the committee today, was the final witness before it acts on Carter's proposal.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said last week he was unaware Kissinger had made a commitment to Saudi Arabia. Church, who opposes Carter's plan, said such a promise would not be valid unless Congress approved it.

An official of the General Accounting Office told the panel last week that the original promise of advanced fighter sales to Saudi Arabia was made in 1974.

Appearing on a television interview program Sunday, Church predicted that the committee would reject the president's package unless Carter makes substantial compromises.

Earlier in the weekend, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said he thinks any move to disapprove the three-nation deal would be rejected on the floor.

And Sen. Jacob Javits, a prominent backer of Israel, said a reported administration compromise offer — involving additional jet sales to Israel in future years — would be well received on Capitol Hill.

Such a proposal was said to be under consideration by the White House to offset criticism from Israel's supporters in Congress.

The House International Relations Committee, meanwhile, was opening four days of hearings of its own into Carter's plan.

Unless both houses disapprove the proposal by May 28, the administration may go ahead with the sale of 60 F-15s to Saudi Arabia, 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s to Israel and 50 F-5s to Egypt.

Elsewhere in Congress this week, the Senate plans to complete action on two nominations.

Pretzel twisting 'lost art'

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — When Dick Mastromotto gets started he looks like a windup toy.

Bent over a wooden table, he picks up a measured piece of dough, rolls it twice, picks up the ends and, with a quick twist of the fingers, ties a knot. In the same motion, he plunks it on a wooden tray — all at the rate of about 20 a minute.

Mastromotto twists pretzels for a living, a job that he calls "a lost art."

It's a fitting profession for a man born in Lititz, the Lancaster County town that gave birth to America's first commercial pretzel bakery.

Mastromotto, a compact man with muscled arms, never misses a beat as he talks to a visitor. He works with a rocking, back and forth motion, rather like the toys that bounce in the rear windows of cars.

"It's rhythm, strictly rhythm. If you didn't have it, you couldn't keep up the pace," he says, in the same breath creating two more pretzels.

Mastromotto, 49, recalls how he first learned the trade 37 years ago, when he was a boy who could barely see over the twisting table.

"An 80-year-old man was teaching me. I told him I couldn't do it, and he gave me the back of his hand and knocked me across the room. I can't ever remember not making pretzels after that."

Mastromotto is one of 13 pretzel twisters at the Hammond Pretzel Bakery, an operation started by Carol Hammond Nicklaus' great-grandfather about 100 years ago. In an age of machine-stamped pretzels, she and her husband Tom keep up the hand-made tradition in a simple, one-story building nestled in a back alley.

Pennsylvania has at least 60 of the 80-odd pretzel bakeries that produce $160 million worth of pretzels each year in the United States. Although Reading, Pa., makes most of the state's pretzels, the Lancaster area is where the hard pretzel industry was launched.

As one legend goes, apprentice Julius Sturgis fell asleep in his Lititz pretzel bakery and put his soft pretzels through the oven twice, creating by accident a pretzel that could be shipped and stored for long periods without going stale like soft pretzels.

Costs of gun control

For a government agency to gather "facts" to support a preconceived concept is not unusual. The Government Accounting Office (GAO) has been considered fairly on target in most of its cost-benefit analysis efforts.

A recent GAO study, "Handgun Control: Effectiveness and Costs," has drawn deserved fire from the Second Amendment Foundation (SAF). This organization has published a rebuttal written by David T. Hardy, attorney for the SAF.

"The GAO study," Hardy says, "is more an affirmation of an ideological concept than a cost-benefit analysis of a concrete, prospective statute." The critique claims that the GAO study has made no case for stricter firearms control and concludes that through design or ignorance, the GAO has ignored important studies and facts which would have changed their results if applied without bias.

Hardy cites several studies of which the GAO made no use. He says that these refute the conclusion that access to firearms causes crime and that limitations of access will reduce it.

He says the GAO study "seriously underestimates the fiscal cost of gun control by omitting the most serious costs. It also omits the non-fiscal costs of self-defense, civil liberties and alienation of tens of millions of citizens who will resist a ban on handguns."

Other weaknesses noted by Hardy include: — In discussing the rising crime rate, the GAO study cites 1967 figures. In fact the number of murders involving a handgun dropped by 17 percent between 1974 and 1976 alone.

— Reports show no relation exists between the number of guns bought outside a jurisdiction and the homicide rate. This invalidates the claim that federal control could reduce crime by reducing interstate firearm commerce.

— In its final cost analysis, the GAO fails to consider the important factors of overhead costs, capital costs for expansion of facilities, strain on the judicial and correctional systems. These could exceed $4 billion per year.

The SAF will release the complete critique to members of Congress in preparation for President Carter's anticipated gun control proposals due later this year.

We feel the SAF has done a good job in answering the GAO study. However, it is our opinion that, at best, gun control would only be shotgun legislation aimed at the whole population in the hope that it might just hit a felon now and then.

There is a general tendency among government regulators to remove our freedom bit by bit by reducing our choices. We do not suggest that there is at present any conspiracy to disarm the people in anticipation of complete Big Brother control. However, our founding fathers gave this contingency credence when they framed the Constitution.

We do not favor anything which might lead to a people disarmed. For it will be the law-abiding who will be deprived of their guns. Felons will get them. They are getting illegal weapons by theft from military installations all over this nation.

Sensing the news

By Anthony Harrigan

If you follow the counterculture press, such as "The Real Paper," published in Cambridge, Mass., you will discover that the antinuclear extremists will be back in business again this summer.

For instance, the Clamshell Alliance, a mishmash of radical protesters, is hoping to block shipment of the nuclear reactor core to the new Seabrook nuclear plant in New Hampshire.

This opposition to nuclear power is all the more absurd in that the nuclear generating units were vital in getting the country through this winter's terrible strike by the United Mine Workers. Nuclear power also saved the country from disaster in the fierce winter of 1976.

Nevertheless, the anti-nuclear protesters persist in their opposition to the atom. As Dr. Petr Beckmann of the University of Colorado points out in the April edition of "Access To Energy" (Box 2298, Boulder, Colo., 80306), "the Clamshell Alliance and other graduates from America's best boutiques and discotheques believe it can all be done by sunbeams and conservation."

Saved by the Nukes

Dr. Beckmann cites the contribution made by nuclear power this year, when the striking miners proved no more reliable than the sheiks of the Middle East. "Almost all of the 67 nuclear plants have been running at near capacity," he reports, "and there would be a hundred of them if they hadn't been sabotaged by the wreckers and obstructionists."

Among the principal obstructionists are President Jimmy Carter, who has done everything in his power to halt the Clinch River fast breeder nuclear reactor project, and Gov. Jerry Brown of California who wants to outlaw the safest and most effective power system man has devised.

Nuclear power now provides 12 percent of the nation's electric generating capacity. Given America's dependence on foreign oil — and the disastrous outflow of dollars for that oil, and the proven irresponsibility of the union miners, America must turn to nuclear power for increased generating capacity.

Fortunately, the Clamshell Alliance types are being countered by sensible voices around the country. In Indiana, for instance, Prof. Phillip Powers, director of Purdue University's Engineering Center, recently urged increased development of nuclear power. "There will be more interest in and development of nuclear power," he predicted, "most of the fear is centered in small minority factions. Most people, surveys show, want more nuclear use."

Prof. Paul Lykoudis, head of the School of Nuclear Engineering at Purdue, said that nuclear power is "safe, clean and not influenced by weather. He added: If we had had nuclear power in Indiana, the coal strike would have passed like a breeze." These advocates of nuclear power aren't urging that the nation put all its eggs in one atomic basket. Serious students of America's power needs realize that energy is needed from a variety of sources. They don't neglect proposals for experimentation with solar power or any other futuristic source. But they know that the nation must use the energy-producing resources and systems that are available now. One of the most important of these is nuclear power production.

The American people ought to know, Dr. Beckmann explains, that "only emergency injections of nuclear power" prevented an energy disaster this year and last. If this fact is understood, the American people also will understand that the actions of the Clamshell types threaten the well-being of the public.

Pension 'Integration' Fight Heats Up

Sylvia Porter

Ed Smith, the 52-year-old president of a modest Chevrolet dealership in upstate New York, recently wrote members of Congress saying that he would be forced to terminate his 14-person pension plan if a provision in President Carter's already badly battered and bent tax "reform" package becomes law.

Under the proposal, the way many private pension plans — especially small ones with fewer than 25 employees — now operate would be drastically revised to affect the size of the pension check (if any) many of you will receive at retirement.

As of today, if the business for which you work has a private pension plan, it may "integrate" it, meaning it may count part of your Social Security benefit when figuring how much you will get from your private plan. Under Smith's Chevrolet plan, for instance, covered workers retire with benefits equal to 40 per cent of their final average salaries minus or "offset" by slightly more than 66 per cent of the primary amount each gets in SS benefits.

A mechanic earning $8,000 a year who retires today with a right to a pension could expect benefits totaling roughly $515 a year. When combined with his SS benefit of $4,028 at present rates, his retirement income would equal about 57 per cent of his pre-retirement earnings. A sales manager, though, earning $25,000 a year would retire with a total package less in percentage terms (47 per cent of his salary) but $7,000 more in dollars than the mechanic's package.

The reasoning behind "integration" is that all individuals, regardless of pay level, need roughly the same percentage of pay at retirement to avoid "financial stress," and that combining public and private benefits helps correct the SS system's "bias" in favor of the lower paid. Carter's tax experts argue that 57 per cent of the mechanic's $8,000 salary or $4,543 a year is not enough for him to live on and that tax subsidies are given to private plans to help provide lower-paid employees with a pension to supplement SS.

Under the Carter plan, Smith could still integrate his plan, but he would have to provide more in pension benefits to lower paid workers. If he wanted to keep his pension maintenance cost unchanged, he'd have to cut the benefits of higher-paid workers. Smith also fears that Bravo for this bowing out...

The great American humorist Mark Twain wasn't particularly fond of Congress and took delight in baiting the boys in Washington.

He once said the only distinctly criminal class in America is its congressmen. On another occasion he wrote: "Reader, suppose you were an idiot. And suppose you were a member of Congress. But I repeat myself."

While we certainly don't contend that all congressmen are idiots or crooks, we believe Congress during the last few decades has chosen the wrong path for this country, an avenue of fiscal irresponsibility and big brotherism.

But we have been editorializing along those lines for years. What we would like to offer our readers today are some excerpts from the observations of Rep. Otis Pike, (D-N.Y.) an 18-year congressional veteran who decided this year not to run for reelection.

Here are some of Rep. Pike's reasons for not continuing in Congress, from a recent issue of Nation's Business.

"I feel increasingly uneasy with the never ending fiscal irresponsibility of the majority of my own party and the absolute indifference of both political parties to inflation, the size of the annual deficit, our national debt, or any obligation to pay our bills and balance our budget."

"The Republicans pay lip service to these things and then vote overwhelmingly to increase defense spending, start new pension programs, increase tax credits, and increase tax cuts, every one of which must, of course, increase both the deficit and the debt.

"The Democrats vote to increase welfare programs, education programs, and health programs. They recognize every national need except the need to pay our bills.

"In any event, neither the Democratic Party nor the House of Representatives is a comfortable place for a congressman who believes that people should earn what they can, save what they can, pay their bills, and balance their budgets. And that nations should do so, too.

"I am tired of pretending that the accumulated wisdom of the ages has been secretly entrusted only to Democratic candidates and officeholders.

"Some Republican congressmen are great... I would like to feel free to say so without being accused of treason or ingratitude.

"The work of a Congressman has increased greatly, and that's okay. So has our pay. But so much of the work is nit-picking trivia...

"Will I miss it? Lord, yes, I'll miss it. Congressmen are treated like little tin Jesuses in Washington at least. Seven employees are there to fetch me a cup of coffee, get me a hamburger, look things up, take dictation, pamper me, flatter me... and generally ease my way through life.

"It's a real ego trip, but I've taken the trip and it's time to cruise on other waters."
Bravo, Mr. Pike, Bravo!

For too long our thinking in the United States has accentuated the negative. It is time — long past time — that we turn around the negativism fogging our minds and reassume the attitudes and actions of the great nation we are fully capable of continuing to be.

Let's, for starters, get rid of this defeatist syndrome that permits us to consider putting an okay on a treaty that not only gives the Panama Canal away, but pays the recipient to take it.

When propagandists in a few Latin American countries — augmented by some of our own visionless Weeping Willies and orchestrated by Communists — call our construction, operation and continued control of this great sea trade artery "imperialism," let's consider the sources.

Let's quit making our future energy needs a wailing wall. There's energy above us.

below us, around us. We live in a universe exploding with energy. We live on a globe which, under its thin skin, has enough energy to supply all humans on this planet — 10 times over — for thousands of years. Let's turn U.S. scientific research and industrial know-how loose to make that energy available to us — the sooner to quit paying blackmail prices for imported fuel, the sooner to defeat our horrible trade balance deficit, the sooner to make our dollars sound once again and wanted.

Let's stop thinking that the U.S. is no damn good anymore, is over the hump, on its way down and has no future.

If the truth could be verified in this age when untruths blow across us in gales, it undoubtedly would indicate that more people admire and respect the U.S. than any other country — capitalism or socialism — oriented. As each year goes by, evidence compounds that Communism will never bury free enterprise, whereas Communists may bury themselves under the red tape of their own five-year plan failures.

And most of all, let's shuck off the daydream that any of us at any level of business, industry, professions or the government can get or is entitled to something for nothing.

Let's recognize as baloney the fluke premise that we can put out less and get more. If all of us will simply go back to hard work — or harder work — we will get a handle on inflation, maximum employment and fiscal integrity.

Let's quit rationalizing our failures. Let's quit kicking every problem of our public and private and workaday lives around today in hopes it will somehow get lost before tomorrow.

Let's grab the spirit of the tune done by the late great Bing Crosby a few decades back called "Accentuate the Positive." That was a very good song and a very good idea.

Dear Editor: An article appeared in the Pampa Daily News on May 1 about Leisure Lodge. Some of us are very pleased with the administrator Mrs. Phyllis O'Dell and her staff. We are thankful we have as clean a place as this to have our parents in. It is not what we all want to have our parents in. It is not what we all want to do, or this is not the wish of our parents. The time comes in our lives this step has to be taken. The nurses has a lot to put up with, from our little people, the nurses have feelings too. They are doing a beautiful job. Yes, some of the nurses have to work double shifts, the Lodge needs more people to work, it is hard to find efficient people to work.

One thing every one could do and all of us should do is give a helping hand instead of criticism. A few minutes a day, a few hours a week, would help the Administrator, nurses. Most of all it would help our little people. A smile, a pat, is what these people need and want.

In the article of May 1, Phyllis O'Dell invited any one to come out and have a meal with them. Come out and visit and give the patients a minute of your time.

Spring fever appreciated

Spring fever, it appears, can be dangerous to our health. This is the time, with winter behind us and the prospect of ever-better weather ahead, when everything is supposed to be looking up, psychologically speaking.

Not for all of us, however, advises a University of Chicago psychiatrist. According to Dr. William W. Weddington, for the externally directed individual affected psychologically by his environment, spring does generally mean a time of increased vigor, a sense of excitement and optimistic expectation.

It can be something else for the inner directed, depressed or confined, however. The arrival of spring without a consequent improvement in mood or condition may have a negative effect, making an individual feel worse and triggering psychiatric disorders.

What spring fever really adds up to is an intensely individual experience. And one not to be taken for granted by those fortunate enough to experience its positive aspect.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP 'O TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment. Clayton confident about third term as speaker

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton says Saturday's primary elections guaranteed him an unprecedented third term. He planned to turn his cards face up today to prove it.

Clayton scheduled a news conference to make public the names of enough supporters to show he has the votes to beat Rep. Buddy Temple, D-Diboll, in the speaker's race.

A majority of the 150 House members elect the speaker.

The primaries resulted in the defeat of one senator and three representatives, the smallest legislative turnover in years.

Many of the 89 unopposed incumbents received committee chairmanships or choice assignments from Clayton. Only 19 representatives did not seek reelection.

A few incumbents could be defeated in the November general election, but most of the damage normally is done in the primaries.

Sen. Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio, was the sole casuality in the Senate. The heavy set ex-policeman, a lawmaker for more than 11 years, polled 13,612 votes to 19,471 for Rep. Bob Vale and 15,836 for lawyer Phil Harjoberger.

Vale and Harjoberger will meet in a runoff June 3.

Other lawmakers defeated Saturday were Reps. John Biggam, D-Belton; Abe Ribak, D-San Antonio; and Chris Miller, D-Fort Worth.

Biggam, a nine-year House member, fell to William Messer, a former municipal court judge in Belton.

Ribak, first elected in 1974, was one of the House's more outspoken liberals. He was defeated by George Pierce, who had twice lost House races to Ribak.

Ms. Miller was defeated by Rep. Gib Lewis, with whom she was paired in a court-ordered redistricting plan to give Tarrant County minorities and Republicans greater representation.

Lewis, chairman of the House Intergovernmental Relations Committee, beat the ardent feminist almost three-to-one.

Sens. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth; Bill Meier, D-Eules; and Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, all won their contested primaries, and Brooks has no opposition in November.

In the race to fill the Senate seat now held by Kent Hance, D-Lubbock, Texas Tech Regent Don Workman of Lubbock and Rep. E. L. Short, D-Tahoka, will meet in a run-off. The GOP candidate is Rep. Joe Robbins, Lubbock.

Hance won the Democratic primary for congressman from the Lubbock area Saturday.

There will be 11 runoff primaries for the House on June 3 and 62 contested elections in November. Republicans and Democrats will square off for six Senate seats in the fall.

Sensors who won their primaries without opposition and have no opponents in November are Peyton McKnight, Tyler; Roy Blake, Nacogdoches; Lindon Williams, Houston; Lloyd Doggett, Austin; Pete Snelson, Midland; Raul Longoria, Edinburg; and Ray Farabee, Wichita Falls.

Clayton said he thought the large number of unopposed representatives resulted from the 1977 Legislature's having dealt with "some things the people are concerned about."

"If we hadn't handled medical malpractice or if we had produced a school finance bill favoring one area over another, we would have had lots of incumbents opposed," he said.

Betting loses again

By The Associated Press

Texas voters-voting once again to keep the underworld under wraps—have turned down for the 10th time in three decades a proposal to legalize horse race gambling.

It was not for many a black and white issue of God and the good guys against the gamblers and nogodniks. But for some the betting issue was a starkly clear morality play set against a backdrop of Bible Belt Texas and its growing urban centers.

The Texas Election Bureau was to continue tabulations today but with 246 of 254 counties reporting, 198 complete, the Democrats turned thumbs down on the non-binding pari-mutuel referendum 52.20 to 47.80 percent. The Republican vote was 50.39 against, 49.61 for.

It was the 10th time in 30 years that pro-bettors have attempted to get a measure across that at least would have put legalized race betting on a local option ballot. It's failed every time.

Allen Maley, director of the Anti-crime Council of Texas, said Saturday's vote "meant that the voters of Texas are getting sick and tired of being forced to vote on this issue every four to six years."

"We hope the gamblers get the message," he said.

But Doug McCrary, president of the Texas Horseracing Association, said, "We're not ready to throw in the towel yet."

"Having lost on previous occasions, we knew this would be an uphill fight," he said.

Both sides reportedly spent thousands of dollars to promote their causes. The Horseracing Assn., said the state was losing $30 million annually by not having racing.

The anti-bettors, however, had people like Dallas Cowboy football coach Tom Landry, saying betting had done nothing for sports.

Texas has not allowed betting on horse races since 1937, when the last legal race was won.

At that time one of the members of the Texas Racing Commission was Dolph Briscoe Sr., the father of the governor.

Sadler, Poerner must runoff

DALLAS (AP) — Despite competition from four opponents, it came as no surprise that Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby claimed the Democratic nomination in Saturday's primaries.

With 246 of 254 counties reporting and 198 complete in statewide races Sunday night, Hobby had received 69.59 percent of the vote — almost 4-1 over his closest competitor, John Westbrook. Republican Gaylord Marshall ran unopposed and will face Hobby in November.

Veteran campaigner Jerry Sadler found himself locked in a runoff with John Poerner for the unexpired term on the Texas Railroad Commission.

Sadler received 45.55 percent of the vote in the four-man race to Poerner's 28.62 percent.

Poerner was recently appointed to the post by Gov. Dolph Briscoe to fill an unexpired term created by Jim Langdon's retirement.

Unopposed Republican James W. Lacy of Midland will face Poerner or Sadler in the November election.

Reagan Brown kept an early lead in his race to remain in the agriculture commissioner's office and staked himself to the job with 52.55 percent of the vote.

Brown was a Briscoe appointee to the agriculture office after former commissioner John White took a post as assistant to U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

In the race for state treasurer, recently appointed Warren Harding won the nomination for a full term, defeating challenger Harry Ledbetter by a nearly 2-1 margin. Harding received 53.36 percent to Ledbetter's 32.79.

Democrat Mack Wallace was nominated for a full term on the railroad commission. In late returns, his tally was 61.26 percent, far ahead of challenger John Henderson's 38.74 percent.

In races to fill Texas judgeships, Franklin Spears moved ahead to take the nomination in the Democratic race for Place 1 on the Texas Supreme Court with 73.15 percent of the vote, and Democrat Robert Campbell widened his lead over Supreme Court Associate Justice T.C. Chaddick to take the Place 4 nomination with 60.01 percent to Chaddick's 39.99.

In races to fill seats on the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, Sam Houston Clinton won over Briscoe-appointed Judge Jim Vollers to take the Place 2 Democratic nomination with 58.20 percent of the vote, and W.C. Davis defeated Marvin Teague for Place 3 with 55.12 percent.

Red River agreement ready

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Officials from Oklahoma and three other states will meet Friday to sign an agreement they say may begin the move to keep Red River Basin water from being drawn off by arid regions seeking relief through federal courts.

But the signing will be only the first step and officials of Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana say that final implementation may be years away.

The Red River Compact, a 31-page document 22 years in the making, provides for "equitable distribution" of water from Oklahoma's southern border and its tributaries should the four states decide to tap the river's vast potential.

"It divides up the water where everybody is guaranteed some," said James Barnett, acting director of the Oklahoma Water Resources Board. "It's a tradeoff of sorts between the states."

The signing at Denison Dam on the Oklahoma-Texas border is expected to attract officials from areas all along the 1,300-mile river. But it will be years before the plan goes into effect.

Moro's fate unknown; terrorists shoot doctor

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Terrorists shot and wounded a doctor in the legs in Milan today as Aldo Moro's kidnapers were silent on the fate of the Christian Democratic Party's president.

The Red Brigades did not immediately claim responsibility for the attack on Dr. Diego Fava, 52. But it was the fourth kidnapping in five days, and the terrorist organization that kidnapped Moro March 16 claimed it was responsible for the other three.

Fava was employed by a government agency to check on workers' absenteeism for medical reasons. Police reported three men fired several pistol shots at him as he arrived at his office by car. His assailants escaped by car, and attending physicians said his condition was not serious.

Meanwhile, the hunt for Moro continued with the arrest of 26 persons police said were suspected supporters of the Red Brigades and a sweep by more than 300 police of farmhouses and isolated villas between Rome and Viterbo, 48 miles to the north. But the police failed to turn up any clues to the missing political leader or the terrorists who have been holding him for seven weeks.

The last word from the Red Brigades came Friday in a message saying because the government refused to negotiate on their demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists, they were "carrying out" the death sentence they imposed weeks ago on Moro. But the kidnapers "Communique No. 9" did not say specifically that he had been killed.

Officials said a two-page handwritten message signed Red Brigades that said Moro had been executed was a hoax. It was found in Mestre, on the mainland across from Venice, after an anonymous call to a local newspaper Sunday night.

Informal sources confirmed a newspaper report that the former premier had written his family a farewell letter and that his wife, Eleonora, appeared Sunday to President Giovanni Leone and Premier Giulio Andreotti.

The Rome newspaper Il Tempo said Moro wrote his wife: "Dear Norina, I was told that soon they will kill me. I kiss you for the last time, kiss the children."

However, the government gave no sign that it might modify its rejection of the Red Brigades' demands. Flaminio Piccoli, the party's parliamentary leader, said the nation cannot give in to terrorist blackmail, but he reiterated that the party could seek "the proper form of magnanimity" if the Red Brigades freed Moro and agreed to cease their escalation of terrorist violence.

Christie urges support for Krueger

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The U.S. Senate race which was overshadowed in the Democratic primary by the governor's race will be the most important campaign in November, Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Texas, predicted Sunday.

"We now have a race against an incumbent and it will be one of the most important in the union," Krueger said.

Krueger and Joe Christie, loser in the hot primary race for the Democratic nomination, held an unusual meeting Sunday morning in Democratic nomination, held an unusual meeting Sunday morning in Christie's Austin apartment where the loser congratulated the winner, and vice versa.

Krueger now meets Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who had no Republican opponent.

Krueger and Christie sat side-by-side on a sofa, exchanging friendly remarks, as reporters and cameramen crowded around them.

"First, I want to congratulate Bob on a tremendous win and well-deserved victory," Christie said. "Second, I want to call on my supporters to unite behind the Democratic nominee and retire a man (Tower) who has needed retiring for 17 years."

Christie said one of his first jobs would be to convince Texas AFL-CIO leaders, who had endorsed Christie, to support Krueger. "and I don't think I will have any problem there."

Krueger called Christie "a courageous and generous man... a solid Democrat, and I will be calling on him."

Krueger said he hoped his campaign people would learn to spend money in the November campaign the way Christie's organization did. Christie's finances were considerably behind Krueger throughout the campaign.

Christie was asked about the repeated charges he made against Krueger, including claims that federal money was used to campaign workers.

"I think that was fully explored in the campaign and the voters have given their decision," Christie said. "That's all behind us now."

Christie also said "my political itch has been cured." He said he has no future plans for political campaigns and will move a branch of his El Paso law office to Austin to handle oil and gas business.

County may oust PRPC on Thursday

Gray County Commissioners will consider eliminating the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission as a step toward receiving funds from the Panhandle Community Action Corp. at 9 a.m. Thursday in a meeting in the county courtroom.

Also to be discussed will be: — The granting of permission for Hood Abstract Co. of Canadian to make microfilm copies of county records in order to open a new abstract office in Pampa.

— Open bids for road repairs in precinct two, Pampa, and consider bids for precinct two roadwork near Celanese Corp.

— Recess as a commissioner's court and organize as a board of equalization.

— Consider the approval of a radio for the Gray County sheriff's office.

— Consider a Salvation Army allocation.

Commissioners also will pay bills, consider time deposits and transfers of funds as recommended by the county auditor and consider the treasurer's report.

First Lady to attend Costa Rica inauguration

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Rodrigo Carazo, who has promised to kick fugitive American financier Robert Vesco out of Costa Rica, becomes this Central American nation's 36th president today with Rosalynn Carter heading the U.S. delegation to the inauguration.

Outgoing President Daniel Oduber surrenders the red, white and blue silk presidential sash at noon in the national soccer stadium, officially signaling the transfer of power.

Fireworks lit up the skies over San Jose Sunday night, and the city was decorated with Costa Rican flags and portraits of the president-elect. A whirl of inaugural parties got underway to continue into Tuesday, and horn-blowing caravans of cars toured the city.

Mrs. Carter, who arrived Sunday afternoon, attended a reception at the residence of U.S. Ambassador Marvin Weissman, where she is staying, and another at the Foreign Ministry.

Mrs. Carter also spoke Spanish at the airport when she arrived and said her visit "demonstrates U.S. backing of the democracy that exists here."

Hill said he had given no thought to resigning his attorney general's job before, and if he is sworn in as governor in January 1979, "I have been able to carry out duties of the attorney general while waging this campaign," he said. "and I think it will be even easier going into the fall. I don't believe I will have to campaign on an actual day-to-day basis."

150,000 votes still out

DALLAS (AP) — There may be as many as 150,000 votes still to be counted in Saturday's primary elections, according to Claiborne Johnson, the manager of the Texas Elections Bureau.

By the time the TEB closed operations Sunday, 1,609,111 votes had been tabulated in the Democratic governor's race alone.

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Daniel Ellsberg, the former Pentagon analyst, has returned with at least 20 other anti-nuclear protesters to the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

Ellsberg and the group set up camp Sunday just outside the plant.

Ellsberg and 27 others had been camped on the little-used railroad spur leading to the plant until Friday when they were arrested by sheriff's deputies. The group was booked on charges of criminal trespass and unlawful blockage of a passageway and released a few hours later.

The protesters are urging an end to the production of nuclear weapons components at Rocky Flats.

BOSTON (AP) — Joseph P. Kennedy III, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has bought a new home in Boston's Brighton section.

The light gray frame house is in the district of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., but Kennedy laughed off suggestions he might want to be O'Neill's successor someday.

Kennedy currently works in Washington for the U.S. Community Services Administration, but is frequently mentioned as the Kennedy family's next likely candidate for elective office.

Gossip columnists in Boston have said Kennedy plans to marry within a few months, but the bachelor kept quiet on that subject.

Hill credits voter contact

A prime issue of the campaign, Hill said, was Briscoe's asking for an unprecedented 10 years as Texas governor.

"Briscoe underestimated the voters' feelings on that," he said.

Hill said he probably would propose a constitutional amendment that will limit governors from now on to two four-year terms. "I think that probably

Texas weather

The remainder of the state was clear except for a portion of southwest Texas where there were some showers.

During the pre-lawn hours temperatures ranged from the 70s in South Texas to the 60s in the central part of the state to the 50s in the west.

Extremes ranged from 42 at Dalhart to 77 at both Brownsville and Corpus Christi.

The forecast called for clearing skies today with temperatures generally in the 80s.

National weather

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms that caused weekend flooding in parts of the central Gulf Coast states continued over sections of the Mississippi Valley and moved eastward today. Heavy rain fell from Missouri through Arkansas.

Flash flood watches were issued for southern Illinois, southeastern Missouri, Tennessee, northern Alabama and Mississippi. A tornado watch was issued for eastern Arkansas, extreme southeastern Missouri, northeastern Louisiana, western Tennessee and northwestern Mississippi.

Heavy weekend rains caused flooding in parts of Mississippi and Louisiana. Hardest hit was Shreveport, La., where police used boats to evacuate several hundred people from their homes after 5.27 inches of rain fell Saturday and Sunday. A temporary shelter was set up but most of the people had returned to their homes or those of friends and relatives by early today, authorities said.

Baton Rouge and New Orleans also had some flooding, but officials said it was mostly confined to low-lying areas and subsided quickly.

Storms also caused lowland flooding Sunday in southeastern Nebraska and eastern Kansas. A tornado tore a mile-long path through a rural area south of Parsons, in southeastern Kansas, uprooting trees, snapping power line poles and toppling fuel tanks at a mineral plant. No one was injured.

Although a storm that dumped three feet of snow over the weekend on the Rockies and northern Plains lost much of its punch, rain and snow continued to fall on parts of the area today. A travel advisory was out for southwestern South Dakota, while stockmen and travel advisories were issued for northeastern Wyoming.

The weekend storm closed roads temporarily, cut power lines, toppled trees and caused extensive lamb and sheep losses. At least two buildings collapsed in Colorado from the weight of the snow Saturday — the 106-year-old Armet Hotel and the Colorado Division of Employment Training building, both in Boulder.

Rain or showers also covered a large part of the east-central United States from the Virginias through the Carolinas and scattered portions of Kentucky and Tennessee today. Widely scattered showers also dotted central Florida and isolated thunderstorms roared through east Texas.

As the rain moved eastward through the Mississippi Valley, gradual clearing brought fog, with extensive dense fog forming in western portions of Iowa and Missouri and over eastern Nebraska.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that brides-to-be can write hundreds of invitations and wedding announcements to people they scarcely know, but after the wedding they can't write a simple thank-you note for the gift?

This has happened to me so often lately I am about ready to stop buying gifts.

You have a booklet on "How To Have a Lovely Wedding." How about writing one on what to do afterwards?

L.S. IN BOONE, IOWA

DEAR L.: I have. It's "How To Write Letters For All Occasions."

DEAR ABBY: The woman signed SICK WITH FRIGHT reminded me of myself not too long ago. I too was afraid to open my mouth in a group because I felt I had nothing important to say.

At age 43, I went back to college and earned a degree in accounting, but I was too shy and self-conscious to stand up and talk in front of a group. Then I joined Toastmasters Club 990 of TRW where I was employed—and still am. Three years later I was elected president of the club!

The first six times I stood before an audience (of only 20), I shook like a leaf. Today, I am calm and enjoy it!

Toastmasters is a club where we learn how to listen, think and speak better. There is a Toastmasters Club in nearly every city. Tell SICK WITH FRIGHT to look in the yellow pages of her phone book, or call the Chamber of Commerce. I know she can overcome her fright. If I did it, she can.

EVY IN HAWTHORNE, CALIF.

DEAR EVY: I know you're right. Some of the best speakers I've ever heard were once "sick with fright" but overcame it—thanks to Toastmasters.

DEAR ABBY: Last summer I read a very moving article in your column about a 17-year-old boy who had been killed in a car accident due to his own reckless driving. It made a deep impression on me. Little did I know that we would lose our own 18-year-old son in a car accident soon after. If this letter saves one life it will be worth writing.

Our son wasn't driving Mother's or Father's car, he was walking home from a party with a friend. A car stopped and the driver, a 19-year-old boy, offered the boys a ride home. They happily accepted.

The driver started to speed and the police took out after him. He refused to stop. Finally he struck a tree and his car was severed in half!

Our son was killed instantly and his friend died three days later without regaining consciousness. The driver survived with minor injuries. This happened only half a mile from our home.

We later learned that the driver of the car was on probation and the car was stolen, so he was afraid to stop. No alcohol was involved. And yes, Abby, he was our only son.

LONELY IN JOLIET, ILL.

DEAR LONELY: There is a valuable lesson to be learned here. Never accept a ride just because it's offered.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Are you familiar with chronic fatigue and do you know a possible cure for it? If so can you help me? Here's my problem. For the past seven years I have had chronic fatigue even though I pass all my physical fitness tests by many doctors. I am 19, eat a balanced diet, sleep eight hours a day and exercise. Is this fatigue all in my head? If so I am tired of it and want to get rid of it.

DEAR READER: Fatigue or being tired is a symptom, not a diagnosis. And 80 percent of people who have this symptom do not have a definable medical illness—that is, it is not caused by anemia, lack of vitamins, tuberculosis, or other clearly definable abnormalities of function.

There are many psychological factors that lead to fatigue. These include lack of goals. If you don't have something to look forward to you lose your zest for living; that applies to teenagers as well as senior citizens. I'm sure you know how much more energy you have if you have an opportunity to do something that you really enjoy. We are all like that. And we all know how tiresome it is to do something you don't enjoy. I'm sure that is why a number of housewives have fatigue—they don't enjoy house work and it is not sufficiently challenging to them.

Then there are basic conflicts in life that are not resolved and the teen years are full of them. Some of these conflicts may be beneath the surface and still sapping your energy. If you happen to have a basic conflict with your parents and are still living at home that can be a drag.

Habits may sap your energy—particularly excessive smoking. You would be surprised how many people have more energy when they quit.

So what can you do? I think a medical examination is important for everyone who really has persistent fatigue because one out of five people has an important underlying medical problem that is a contributing factor if not the sole cause. Since you have apparently been given a clean bill of health I think you should see a psychologist or psychiatrist for some professional counseling. He may be able to review your attitudes and find out what is missing in your life that would turn you on.

Sometimes you have to work at changing your environment or meeting new people or whatever is required to have a turnaround in your attitude toward life and your ability to enjoy it. Unless you are happy you can't feel energetic.

I am also sending you The Health Letter number 9-6, Fatigue: Feeling Tired and Weary. It will review the problem in more depth for you. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

While you are resolving your basic problem and getting help you might read just your diet. Try eliminating all the sweets and concentrate on proteins, fresh fruits and vegetables, whole grain cereals and dairy products. This may smooth out the way you absorb carbohydrates and improve your energy level some, but I don't want you to use that as a substitute for getting some professional counseling.

Allergies: your personal poisons

Spring spells hay fever sneezing

BY JOHN BARBOUR
The Associated Press

CHAPTER TWO

Springtime means rebirth to most of us. But for perhaps as many as one in 20 Americans, it is a rebirth of torture and a threat to a healthy life.

To the hay fever sufferer, there is nothing pleasant about spring, and it is a long wait for the first killing frost of fall. And even that may not bring immediate relief, since after a long summer of sneezing the hay fever sufferer's upper respiratory track may be chronically inflamed.

Hay fever is caused by pollen and molds and nature has provided a multitude of them. Oddly, it isn't the pollen of flowers that are the culprits. Most ornamentals rely on their pretty colors and pleasant aromas to lure insects which then pick up the heavy pollen on their legs and carry them to another flower to be mated. They are indeed innocent.

But the lighter pollens are designed by nature to be wind-blown, and these little offenders fill the air from springtime on. They are little more than dust. The pollen of the ragweed, for instance, is only 1/2500th of an inch in diameter, but it causes trouble far beyond its size.

Each season brings a new crop of pollen to harass the hay fever sufferer. In the spring, it is the airborne pollen from trees—birch, maple, oak, ash, poplar, elm, sycamore, walnut and cypress. In midsummer the big producers are the grasses, and from August to frost the world abounds in ragweed and its relatives. Ragweed is so common in the East and Central states that scientists estimate the fall crop produces a quarter million tons of the dust-like pollen. To the hay fever sufferer, it means paroxysms of sneezing. The roof of the mouth, the eyes and the nose become swollen and itchy. The nose runs and the eyes tear. The throat is sore. There is headache, irritability, no sleep, upset stomach and in some cases hives.

Like other allergies, hay fever takes months, even years to develop in the susceptible person. The body produces defenses to the pollen, but is overdefends. A number of chemicals are produced in the course of the battle, among them histamine. And it is the histamine that is the prime suspect in causing the irritations and the hives of hay fever.

The hay fever sufferer who tries to live with his malady is asking for trouble. Hay fever frequently leads to asthma, and asthma to severe lung damage and even a shortened life.

Antihistamines frequently provide some relief, but they are not the whole answer. The best defense is to avoid the things you are allergic to, but that is not always easy. While the air abounds in pollen the whole spring and summer long, there are some places that are safe—mountains, northern climes and the seaside or lake shore. But the hay fever sufferer still needs expert medical care to pinpoint the kind of pollen he is allergic to, and where he can go to avoid it.

Air conditioning helps, but it should be moderate. Doctors advise that the temperature should not be more than 12 degrees lower than the outside summer temperatures. Cold irritates the already sore nose and throat areas. Some electrostatic units are effective in removing dust from the air but, again, expert advice is necessary in finding the right machine.

The most effective method for the hay fever sufferer is testing to find out what allergens trigger the attack, and then a patient desensitization program, small injections of the personal poison to build up an effective defense to it.

For the most part, hay fever sufferers can do themselves a favor just by using common sense.

They should stay away from uncut and weedy fields. They should avoid any known nasal irritants—hair sprays, perfumes, wave lotions, tobacco smoke, insecticides, paint fumes, even the chlorinated water of the swimming pool. When it is not possible to avoid dusty areas, they should wear a nose mask.

They should avoid excesses—over-tiredness, overeating. They should cut down on alcoholic beverages since these produce mucus in the nasal passages. They should avoid severe air conditioning, and stay away from people with colds. A cold only adds insult to injury.

Above all, they should see a doctor—preferably an allergist—to develop a personal program against their personal allergies. They should be prepared for a long siege, but it will be worth it.

Allergy won't go away by itself, and untreated, it will likely become untreatable and lead to other debilitating diseases.

Next: Asthma.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

With all due respect to the long-range weather forecasters, I'm always interested in what the naturalists predict in regard to the weather.

This year, they all hit it right on the button. They knew back in early December that this winter was going to be wet and rotten because: The elk and deer came down early from the high country.

Mud - dauer wasps were building their nests higher. Skunk cabbages grew taller. Woolly bear caterpillars had heavy coats.

Bears were fat. Squirrels had ravenous appetites in the fall. They should have asked housewives. They also have an inside track on how the winter is going to compare with previous ones. I knew it was going to be a bruiser because:

This is the year eight pairs of boots in our house didn't match one pair of feet. This phenomenon occurs only once in every 72 years and can only mean that blizzard conditions are on the way.

This is the year we cleaned out the freezer—leaving only three snowballs from 1971, five packages of squash which everyone hates, and 12 packages of chicken innards to be thrown away on garbage day ... someday.

This is the year we got the puppy, rationalizing that we could watch him when he started to twirl around in a circle, grab him and put him outside.

This is the year we didn't buy firewood, because we figured it was too expensive and besides, we rarely used the fireplace as it smoked up the bricks.

This is the year we put the sleds up in the attic—on the far side where there is no floor and you have to crawl through the insulation and put the rope in your teeth and slide it carefully along the beam before you fall through the floor.

Yep, no doubt about it. When our 72-year-old milkman got new teeth and began to look more like Robert Redford every day, we knew it was going to be a cold winter.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) A serious dilemma can be solved today through discussion with several friends. Focus on the problem. Don't let unrelated riddles sidetrack you.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22) Don't make assumptions based upon partial evidence today. Take time to study conditions carefully. Your chances for success are excellent.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22) This is a good day to talk directly to persons who can help you achieve your goals. Don't deal with go-betweens.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) Be careful today with whom you share confidential information. Someone with selfish intentions may try to steal your thunder.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23) A meeting of the minds today concerning an important venture can be achieved provided you don't pretend to know more about a subject than you really do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) It's harvest time today for the fruits of your labors. The crop could be disappointing if you're convinced that more was due.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 21) Even though you'll be quite explicit regarding your aims today, a misunderstanding could still arise because of the unusual way you conduct yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) Don't be so wrapped up in your efforts to provide for your family that you ignore a plea from someone in urgent need of your help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 19) You might be in such a convivial mood today that you could take a flyer on a person you know little or nothing about. Don't.

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20) You can accomplish that which you set your mind to today with satisfying results, provided you remain realistic about your goals.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) You take a no-nonsense approach in your dealings today, which does get things done. However, you could offend someone if you're un diplomatic.

Bullets on top; Sonics even up

By The Associated Press
Elvin Hayes, sometimes playing like a man possessed, predicts the underdog Washington Bullets will finish off the Philadelphia 76ers on Wednesday night.

"I know we're going to win the next game," Hayes said after his 35 points and 19 rebounds paced a 121-105 victory Sunday and gave the Bullets a 3-1 lead in the National Basketball Association's best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals.

"When we won up there, I knew we had 'em," Hayes said of Washington's victory in the series opener at Philadelphia.

"I thought we had control of the series after the first game," said Washington Coach Dick Motta. "We play better together than they do."

The 76ers, who won the Eastern Division title handily and then demolished the New York Knicks 4-0 in the semifinals, insisted they weren't finished.

"We are not planning any vacation," said Coach Billy Cunningham, sounding the keynote. "We are not going to fold up."

But an observation by Philadelphia's George McGinnis sounded a bit ominous for the 76ers as about as logical as the team's play to date.

"It all boils down to a 2-out-of-3 series, and they've got to beat us one more game," he said, forgetting that the only time the 76ers will derive from just two more victories will be the early vacation Cunningham wants to avoid.

The Western Conference playoff series between Seattle and Denver, tied 1-1 after Seattle's win on Sunday, moves to Seattle Wednesday and Friday.

Fred Brown, a seven-year pro from Iowa, came off the bench to score 26 points in just 25 minutes of playing time and spark the SuperSonics to the 121-111 triumph over the Nuggets on Sunday.

Yanks cool Rangers

NEW YORK (AP) — It was not a time for finesse or a time to get cute or a time to go with anything but your best pitch. It was a tense extra-inning struggle between two of the hardest-throwing relief pitchers in baseball, 26-year-old Rich "Goose" Gossage of the New York Yankees, whose fast ball has been timed at 99 miles an hour, and 22-year-old Len Barker of the Texas Rangers, who boasts a 96-mile-an-hour clocking.

They were throwing smoke, these two tall right-handers.

"We're both power pitchers," Barker said. "He throws a fast ball and slider and I throw a fast ball and curve, but I don't think either of us threw anything but fast balls today."

Gossage pitched four hitless innings, walking four but striking out five. Barker came on in the 11th, retired the Yankees on three ground balls and struck out Reggie Jackson to start the bottom of the 12th. That was his second-biggest mistake.

His biggest one was a 2-2 fast ball he threw to Chris Chambliss, the next hitter, Jackson, who fanned on a high fast ball, had stopped to have a word with Chambliss on his way back to the dugout.

"He said Barker wasn't throwing very hard and his ball was straight," Chambliss reported.

Armed with that vital information, Chambliss jumped on a belt-high fast ball and drove it over the fence in right-center.

Ongais turns fastest lap

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson at the tender age of 28 has found the secret of taking pressure and recycling it into fun and $1 million.

"I didn't think about blowing that putt on the last hole. I thought about making it," said Watson, who captured his second Byron Nelson Golf Classic title Sunday with a typical pressure-proof finish.

Watson shot a final 4-under-par 66 to edge hometown hero Lee Trevino by one shot with an 8-under-par 272 over the soggy par-70 Preston Trail Golf Club course for the $40,000 final prize.

The freckle-faced Watson now has banked $1,013,226 lifetime to become the 17th million-dollar winner in tour history.

Watson's duel with Trevino was reminiscent of his head-tohead victorious battles with Jack Nicklaus last year in the Masters and the British Open.

"Pressure is what it's all about," said Watson. "You don't think on your backswing that you have to make birdie. You just don't think about it."

Trevino, who also shot a closing 66, made a tremendous back-nine run at Watson. Trevino eagled the 15th hole to pull even but Watson, watching from the fairway, birdied to go back ahead by a shot.

Undaunted Trevino birdied the 17th hole. Watson responded by stroking a 20-footer into the hole from the fringe for a birdie.

Then came the final test. After Trevino had parred 18, Watson hooked a 6-iron second shot that left him with a wedge chip over a yawning bunker.

"I felt I could get it up and down," said Watson.

And Trevino said, "I thought he would get it up and down. He wouldn't be the leading money winner on the tour if he couldn't. Nobody hits all the greens."

Watson's third shot was two feet below the hole. He made the putt just as he and Trevino knew he would.

Pirates swipe bases, win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
They used to be the lumber company, the guys with the booming bats. The Pittsburgh Pirates' idea of offense used to be waiting around for somebody to hit over the wall.

That's changed since Chuck Tanner took over as manager last year. The Pirates stole 260 bases in 1977, 73 more than any other major league team, and shortstop Frank Thomas led the majors with 70.

And they're off and running again this season. They swiped eight bases in eight attempts against Los Angeles Sunday, running left-hander Tommy John ragged and pinning the first loss of the season on the Dodgers' ace, 6-4.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Montreal Expos split a doubleheader with Cincinnati, winning 19-5 and then losing 4-2, the San Francisco Giants edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the New York Mets 8-5 and St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Diego Padres 8-4. Houston at Atlanta was rained out.

Expos 19-2, Reds 5-4
Montreal tied a club record by scoring 19 runs against Cincinnati in the opener, the most runs by any team in any game this season—it was Cincinnati's worst defeat in 10 years.

Montreal pounded four Cincinnati pitchers for 20 hits in the opener, including home runs by Andre Dawson, Ellis Valentine and Tony Perez.

An error by third baseman Larry Parrish on a double steal attempt in the sixth inning gave Cincinnati two runs and dealt Ross Grimsley his first loss after five victories.

Cincinnati's Pete Rose, who reached the 3,000-hit milestone on Friday, sat out the second game because of a stomach disorder, ending a club-record streak of 678 consecutive games, the longest of any active major leaguer.

"It's the worst I've felt in 16 years," said Rose. "I took every pill I could to get better."

Vida Blue won his fourth game in a row for the Giants after losing his season opener. He pitched no-hit ball for 5-2 1/2 innings and allowed four hits before being lifted in the ninth as Manager Joe Altobelli played left-righty percentages for the final two outs.

Right-hander Randy Moffitt relieved and retired right-handed Dave Kingman for the second out, then Gary Lavelle, a left-hander, came in and got lefty Bobby Murcer to end the game.

Willie McCovey drove in both Giants runs on an infield out in the third inning and a single in the fifth.
