

Hereford man holds off SWAT team

By The Associated Press
Police in San Marcos and in the Dallas suburb of Irving spent a tense Wednesday talking two armed men into surrendering during similar situations in which the men barricaded themselves behind locked doors for several hours.

Bob Collins, assistant U.S. Attorney for New Mexico, said Norbert Lynn Young, 27, of Hereford, will be returned to Albuquerque to face theft charges involving 72 stolen postal orders. Young held an Irving SWAT team at bay for eight hours after locking himself in a motel room and threatening to kill his ex-wife and two-year-old son.

The New Mexico jail escapee surrendered about 8:30 a.m. after a telephone conversation with his attorney, Charles Fairweather of Amarillo, who had flown to Irving to negotiate with the man.

Irving police said they don't plan to file any charges. Young escaped from Taos County Jail Dec. 17. He had been arrested Nov. 27 following a high-speed chase by officers who wanted to question him about the Nov. 4 burglary of a post office at McAlister, N.M. Fairweather said Young, with his ex-wife's consent, took his son from their Amarillo home about six weeks ago "but she didn't expect a five-to-six-week deal" and told Young she wanted the boy back.

"He (Young) said he was afraid to leave his son, but I told him 'He's going to need you all his life, not just now, so let's don't check it in just now,'" said the attorney. It was the same song, second verse, in San Marcos about seven hours later.

John Koch, 25, kept 15 law enforcement officers at bay for nearly six hours before giving up about 8:50 p.m. Authorities found eight rifles and three pistols in Koch's house. He was charged with two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon. Bond was denied on one of the charges that involved shooting at police officers.

Koch had to be bound hand and foot when he began screaming and shouting during his arraignment. Police said Koch apparently became angry at a woman who filed a weapons charge against him and went to her house about 3 p.m. where he fired several shotgun blasts into her pickup and wounded a neighbor's dog.

During a telephone interview with the Austin American-Statesman, Koch denied waving a weapon in the woman's face and said his neighbors were "just jealous" because he is a millionaire. Neighbors identified Koch as the son of a cosmetics heir.

Hayes County deputy Kerry Young said Koch left his house four times firing each time at state troopers, game wardens, sheriff's deputies and Texas Rangers who surrounded the residence. On one occasion, he said, officers returned fire.

Judges tour city yards, choose award winners

First prize winners, one in each of five areas of town, were named today in Pampa's Fresh as a Daisy campaign to clean up and beautify the city.

Winners were Mr. and Mrs. Tom Price, 1211 W. 18th St.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack McCavit, 1933 Evergreen; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Whately, 521 N. West; Mr. and Mrs. John Cox, 1309 Mary Ellen, backyard, and Mr. and Mrs. Marion Brown, 1025 S. Banks.

Those placing second were Mr. and Mrs. Jim Tripplehorn, 1616 Charles; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anderson, 1832 Fir; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Glaxner, 701 N. Gray; Mr. and Mrs. Barney Flynn, 529 Doucette, and Mr. and Mrs. H.H. Boynton, 1035 S. Hobart.

Honorable mentions went to the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Harold DeVore, 1721 W. 19th; Mr. and Mrs. J.E. Gibson, 501 Linda Drive; Mrs. Gladys Harvey, 1323 Charles; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hopkins, 1122 Mary Ellen; Mrs. Stella Shepherd, 416 Graham; and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thornton, 420 Graham.

Judges called the Cox yard "outstanding" and the Flynn backyard "unique."

Judges recognized several Pampa businesses for their landscaping. They are Thurmond-McGlothlin, Panhandle Savings and Loan, Coronado Center, Carmichael-Whately Funeral Home, Duenkel Smith Funeral Home, Burger King, First Baptist Church, Mary Ellen Harvest Church of Christ, Cabot Park, Security Federal Savings and Loan, Panhandle Insurance Agency and First National Bank.

The downtown fire station was complimented for its roses and the city was named for M.K. Brown Auditorium and the Hike and Bike Trail.

The competition was sponsored by the chamber's civic improvement committee.

Poll indicates Carter wouldn't win this time

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, whose popularity has dwindled steadily since he took office, could not now defeat Gerald R. Ford or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in a run for the White House, according to a new poll.

A separate study by the Brookings Institution concluded Wednesday that the president has been courageous in proposing major changes in federal programs. But the study said Carter's first 16 months were disappointing because he has not accomplished much.

The poll, conducted by Louis Harris and Associates for ABC News, indicated that if a presidential election were held now, 48 percent would favor Ford, the 1976 Republican candidate, compared to 43 percent for Carter. Nine percent of those polled had no opinion.

A contest between Carter and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan would be closer, according to the poll. Reagan, who lost the 1976 Republican nomination to Ford, was the choice of 47 percent, compared to 46 percent for Carter.

But Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, could whip Carter in a race today for the Democratic nomination and then beat either Ford or Reagan, the poll indicated.

The latest poll gave Kennedy a 60-35 percent margin over Carter, a 52-43 lead over Ford and a 54-42 margin over Reagan.

ABC News said the poll has a 3 percent margin of error. It was based on about 1,500 telephone interviews last week with those who said they voted in 1976 and with a few persons, too young to vote in 1976, who are now over age 18.

Claudia Townsend, associate White House press secretary, said the administration would not comment directly on the poll or the Brookings study. "The president believes he's doing the things that need to be done, but polls are bound to go up and down," she said.

Ford, asked about the poll at a meeting of Republican leaders here, grinned and said, "Well, let the polls speak for themselves." He added "the atmosphere is good" for a strong GOP showing in the fall congressional elections.

Crude oil tax may be ousted

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's long-delayed energy package is heading down the home stretch, but it may arrive at the finish line without the crude oil tax the president calls the centerpiece of the program.

With agreement on a natural gas pricing compromise, House-Senate conferees have now reached basic accord on all parts of the five-section program except taxes.

And there have been increasing expressions of doubt among lawmakers that the tax portion can be enacted this year — especially as congressional elections approach.

The crude oil tax — the most controversial part of the energy tax section — is designed to make U.S. oil as expensive as foreign oil over a three-year period.

Senate negotiators reached an accord on the natural gas portion of the plan late Wednesday, voting 10 to 7 to accept a proposed compromise that lifts price controls from newly found gas in 1985.

House negotiators broke a six-month deadlock Tuesday when they approved the natural gas measure on a 13-12 vote.

Carter and the House wanted to keep price controls on gas, but the Senate had voted for deregulation after two years.

The compromise is a middle ground which congressional analysts say will cost consumers some $9 billion between now and 1985 in higher heating costs.

The deal was framed in lengthy informal negotiations among key conferees and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

The negotiators will meet again June 6 to take up 33 relatively minor but unresolved issues on the gas legislation.

Lawmakers hope to get the gas compromise to the Senate floor — where it goes first — as soon as possible.

"We want to send a signal to the American people that we have accomplished something," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., one of three Republicans on the conference panel who voted for the compromise. The others were Sens. Mark Hatfield of Oregon and James McClure of Idaho.

But, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., a top House negotiator, said getting it to the floor could take "six to eight weeks" because of drafting difficulties.

And there is also the possibility the gas proposal will be filibustered when it reaches the Senate — by liberals who oppose deregulation, conservatives who don't think the compromise goes far enough, or by both at the same time.

Public TV stretches far beyond the classroom

By SUSAN LINNEE
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — When KUHT-TV was literally kicked on the air 25 years ago, many thought "educational television" would be an extended classroom — a revolutionary way to teach, perhaps, but one doomed to financial insecurity.

As the nation's first non-commercial television station celebrates its silver anniversary, public television — although still plagued by funding problems — has moved far beyond the confines of the classroom.

"Educational programming still plays a large part in our schedule, but since the late 1960s, the station has been heavily dedicated to the whole community," said station manager James Bauer.

The University of Houston, together with the Houston school district, applied for and received the first license to broadcast over one of 242 channels set aside by the Federal Communications Commission for non-commercial television.

W.W. Kemmerer, then president of the university, had seen televised sessions of Senate hearings on organized crime during a 1951 visit to Washington when the potential of television as an educational medium hit him "like a bolt of lightning."

KUHT-TV broadcast its first test pattern May 25, 1953. On June 8, after 90 minutes of power difficulties, an exasperated engineer kicked the transmitter, and FCC Commissioner Freida Hennock appeared on the air to dedicate the station.

"Back then student volunteers did everything. They stood in line to get into the studio," said Al Haubold, an engineer who was there when Commissioner Hennock, a short woman, kicked off her shoes and stood on a box to show up better. "Now many of those students are managing television stations around the country," he said.

Haubold and Bauer agree the advent of videotape marked a turning point at the station and in educational television.

"We went strictly professional when we got tape in 1958," Haubold said. "We needed fewer technicians and production people. And since February, we've been off the telephone long lines. Now all our feeds come via satellite."

The Public Broadcasting System began satellite distribution of programs at the beginning of the year to the more than 270 stations it serves. The Southeast is the first segment hooked into the system that is expected to be fully operative by January 1979.

Bauer said academic people grew disenchanted with education television when they realized videotapes of their classes could be used over and over again.

"Educational television was an administrative concept, and there was great academic resistance to TV as a formal instructional tool," he said.

KUHT plans to celebrate Thursday with a live local broadcast from the Houston Museum of Fine Arts featuring Eila Fitzgerald and Dick Cavett. A half-hour retrospective film beforehand will show viewers what the first 25 years were like — at the station and in the city.

"The station is just at the point where it is beginning to broaden its base. Houston is changing and becoming more sophisticated. And in our latest membership drive, we achieved 125 percent of our goal," said program director Virginia Mampre.

The nation's fifth largest city ranks 15th in the number of television-viewing households. Ms. Mampre said considering the size and wealth of the city, KUHT's $1.6 million operating budget is extremely small.

"The station needs to expand financially and physically," she said. "We want to do more local production, but money is always the problem."

Like many other public television stations, KUHT holds yearly marathon auctions and membership drives to raise money — and public consciousness.

Originally a private institution, the University of Houston went public in 1963 and under Texas law could no longer provide funds to KUHT. It does, however, furnish the station's buildings, and UH vice president for development, Dr. Patrick Nicholson, is the licensee representative.

The Association for Community Television was formed in 1969 to generate support for Channel 8. The ACT paid staff now makes up the station's development department.

His business is red-tape

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The red-tape tangle in this town may run second only to the frustrating mess of Washington bureaucracy. That suits David Alwadish just fine.

David Alwadish, fresh out of college, has one of those strokes of brilliance that makes people say, "Why didn't I think of that?" and has opened a business.

It is based on an obvious premise:

Dealing with a large city's institutions, the Motor Vehicle Bureau say, pushes a normal person's threshold of patience to its limit, induces trembling, ague and fits, provokes thoughts of mayhem and self destruction and causes ulcers — and that's just for openers.

"Take the simple matter of registering your car," Alwadish said.

"You get there, puzzled. You stand in a line marked 'Information.' There you learn the other three lines you need to stand in and in what order. That's right. You stand in line to find out what other lines to stand in. Are you getting the picture?"

"Then you discover you don't have the right forms. They aren't filled out correctly. The clerk makes you feel stupid. You've wasted half a day. You go back to your office snarling.

"Hasn't something like that happened to you?"

Of course. There must be at least 8 million such stories in the Naked City, which is why Alwadish's success is assured.

For a small fee, anywhere from one to five dollars, Alwadish will register your car for you, or get a duplicate of the driver's license you lost, or fight your battle with the parking ticket computer, or, in short, do all those wretched things that make your heart sink when the soulless telephone voice says: "You'll have to come in." Click.

"Right now I do all the work myself," Alwadish said, "but I envision supermarkets of services, offices all over town.

"The city ought to be promoting me. For every 100 customers I have, that's 100 fewer people in line. All my forms are in order. No aggravation. The bureau would be happier places.

"The name of my business is Services Unlimited. I want it to be that, unlimited. I want to take care of birth certificates, fishing licenses, passports, everything people need but don't know how to handle conveniently themselves."

Alwadish, who is 22, got the idea for his business while helping out at his father's driver's school. It was his chore to handle the paperwork for graduates getting their driver's licenses.

"I was standing in line one day with a half dozen applications, chatting with the man next to me. I told him what I was doing and he said, 'Wow, I would gladly pay somebody to do this for me.' I thought, well, why not?"

So he arranged for a small office, just a room, in the lobby of one of the skyscrapers in Rockefeller Center, the prestigious midtown complex where 60,000 people work. Not a bad location.

That was last November. Since then, his service has been so popular he had a second phone installed. "When the other phone rings I ask the person I'm talking to to hang on a minute. He can hear what I'm saying and isn't put off. I don't put people on hold."

How can he miss?

In a stew about crab pots

There is a kind of range war going on over the open water between the crab potters and the trawler fishermen.

Both sides say the other guy is cramping their style. To say the least. The commercial trawlers want to come in closer to shore, and they oppose any designated crab pot areas where the trawlers would be prohibited.

The water war brought an estimated 125 persons representing both sides to a meeting in New Bern, N.C., to make their views known in the courthouse before North Carolina's Division of Marine Fisheries. But the talk grew long, the hour late, and the Division decided to leave things at "open liberty" for the crabbers along the Neuse River and its tributaries.

There is a 96-page book called the "North Carolina Fisheries Regulations for Coastal Waters - 1978." Any plain old fisherman should be able to understand these rules, as long as he has a lawyer along in the boat to interpret.

A review of this regulation guide gives one the feeling of a hedge-podge, a mystery of finding where to fish more difficult than deciphering the tricky treasure directions in Edgar Allen Poe's "The Gold Bug."

The trawlers generally run the larger commercial hauls, and where their crabs go, we do not know, but some crab pot men say they go North. The crab potters are small and generally crab close to shore where it's supposed to be best.

The trawler chiefs want to move in closer but say they risk problems getting caught up in crab pot lines.

One would think there'd be enough crabs to go around, but apparently the catch is diminishing. Pollution, although not mentioned at this particular meeting, must be a factor. Neuse pollution has already made it dangerous for anyone to eat of the millions of the clams in the river. There is this little matter of crab cholera, of which seven cases were reported last year. Next in terms of infection will come the fish unless the trend is not reversed.

Meanwhile the crab pot war continues and, we admit, we don't know what to make of it, except that the trawlers are begging for tighter and more state regulation.

Also, it would seem like a man could jump in his skiff and throw a half dozen pots overboard near shore without upsetting the appellate. Not so, the trawlers seem to be claiming.

Indeed, in those 96 pages of regulations is one prohibition we find utterly unrelievable: It stipulates that between May 1 and Nov. 1, "an individual may take hard crabs through use of crab pots at any time for personal consumption, provided that no more than one crab pot is used and no boat is used in aid in the taking."

In other words, to feed one's family, regardless of the number of hungry mouths at home, the lone fisherman may drop one single little pot in the water — wade out — and to do more risk arrest by a Fisheries or N.C. Wildlife agent.

To our way of thinking, this is a reprehensible restriction that ought to be changed. Why should a family be denied the access to crabs for the table, while the state guarantees crab potters and commercial trawlers easier access?

We do not claim to be experts on the matter, but one can see there is obviously some hot blood between the potters and the trawlers. The matter will come up again, and we will be there to cover the action. In the meantime, perhaps we can learn more about the situation, and report with some knowledge to our readers on just what is going on.

There's a heck of a lot of water out there, as many fishermen are fond of saying, and it seems there should be ample space for each type of crab fetcher to do their thing. It would be nice if they could do it without state interference.

Capital gains tax making us poorer

(Wall Street Journal)

The classic debate of economic growth versus income redistribution now turns on the fulcrum of the Steiger amendment before the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. Steiger wants to reduce the capital gains tax to provide incentives and spur economic growth, and seems to be gaining rather than losing support during the delay designed to head off his proposals. The administration wants to increase the effective rate on capital gains to further "tax reform" and income redistribution, and threatens to veto any tax bill with the Steiger amendment.

There is one simple reason why the capital gains proposal has become the fulcrum of this epic debate, and why Mr. Steiger has gained such impressive support. This is the growing consensus among nearly everyone who has looked at the matter seriously that a reduction in capital gains rates, because of its powerful effect in spurring economic growth, will actually result in an increase in government tax revenues.

Chase Econometric Associates, for example, has explicitly studied the Steiger proposals. Their Michael K. Evans writes: "The reduction in the maximum rate on capital gains taxes from the current level of 49.125 percent to 25 percent on January 1, 1980 would have a positive effect on economic growth while reducing the federal budget deficit ... An additional 440,000 jobs would be created by 1985 ... The federal budget deficit would be $16 billion less by 1985 than would be the case without this reduction in the capital gains tax."

Data Resources Inc., agrees. It studied various tax proposals for the Securities Industry Association. One of the alternatives was the total elimination of all taxes on capital gains. It found that under this proposal, "Tax receipts are lower by $5.2 billion in 1978. In subsequent years, receipts are higher than in the baseline. The net gain in revenues for the five-year period is about $38 billion."

Nor do you need powerful econometrics to come to this conclusion. After simply looking at the actual results of the higher capital gains treatment since 1970, Oscar S. Pollock of Ingalls & Snyder concludes, "The record of receipts from the capital gains tax, related to changes in the tax, certainly suggests that going back to the provisions that were in effect before 1970 would be more likely to add to government receipts than to lower them."

The studies above concentrate on the effect of the capital gains rate on stock prices, and the powerful secondary effects of the stock market on the economy. The capital gains tax is also especially important to one particular economic engine, the high-risk enterprises so important in technological advance. It gives prospective entrepreneurs a big incentive to form their own companies, and investors a big incentive to back them with equity capital.

The American Electronics Association concentrated on these effects in surveying its own members on capital availability, job creation and tax generation by small but growing enterprises. Its task force chairman, Edwin V.W.

Zschau, testified to Ways and Means, "Because of the unique ability of long-term investment to generate jobs and economic growth, reducing capital gains taxes may not decrease federal tax revenues at all." In fact, data from the AEA survey indicate that a significant reduction in the capital gains tax rates could actually INCREASE rather than decrease federal tax revenues.

Theodore Levitt of Harvard Business School writes in The New York Times, "Tax reform" has so drastically cut capital gains and income - offsetting incentives that the flow of venture capital for nascent purposes has virtually dried up. In 1968 over 300 high-technology companies were founded in the United States; in 1978, none."

Rep. Steiger has this mounting array of evidence. Against it, the tax "reformers" offer their ideological bagatelle: All income, however derived, must be taxed equally. Yet the tax "reformers" typically refuse to take their own shining principle seriously. They want capital gains counted as ordinary income, but they do not want capital losses fully and simply offset against ordinary income. While the administration watered down this pristine proposal into jiggling to boost some capital gains rates, the principle remains its guiding light and explains its fervent opposition to Mr. Steiger. But the principle is naive in conception and hypocritical in application.

So the debate is clearly focused. Shall we cut the capital gains tax, spurring growth, creating jobs, boosting government revenues and otherwise building a bigger pie for all to divide? Or shall we boost the capital gains tax, closing a "loophole" and redistributing income, even if it makes us all poorer?

Private schools, lookout!

Why in the world would a college borrow money at a higher interest rate to pay off a low-rate loan? It happened.

Ohio Valley College, Parkersburg, W.Va., needed a new auditorium.

Government money seemed so easy.

Thus, with a federal government bond, Ohio Valley College built its new auditorium in 1969.

Then this Christian school learned that government money meant government restraints.

So this year the college borrowed money from a commercial source and paid off that government loan.

The college now has to pay a higher interest rate but the college is free again!

Now in that auditorium — for the first time in 10 years — prayer is permitted!

I have recited the experience of how a Christian college had to forfeit the right to pray in its own auditorium because that auditorium was partly financed by government money.

Now the Congress is contemplating federal funding of student tuition — and again it's going to appear tempting.

Admittedly, middle-income families are having a hard time keeping up with the soaring costs of higher education. The rich can afford to pay. The poor get direct student aid. It is middle-income Americans who are being squeezed out of the schools their taxes built.

Congress is considering helping that vast taxpaying majority with a hand up. But look out!

As surely as Title Thirty concealed a barbed hook, limiting the administrative prerogatives of private schools, this newest side-door assist may cost more than it's worth.

Emerging now from deliberations on the Hill is a tax credit for parents. Under this proposal, parents would be able to deduct from taxable income $100 for each youngster in a private grade school and up to $250 dollars for a son or daughter in college.

Another plan proposed would advance up to $5,000 a year to college students to be repaid by the student from subsequent income.

The history of the collectibility of student loans is not good.

Presently, a student has hundreds of scholarships, grants, low-cost loans and work-study programs from which financial help is available. But most of this money goes only to low-income families.

The average cost for a resident student at a private college is now $5,000 a year. More expensive private colleges top $8,000.

The pittance presently proposed in Congress would limit any family, however many children, to no more than $500 a year in tax relief.

It is difficult to imagine that thus to shake the government's piggy bank would justify the inevitable government snoops which will leave private schools as impotent as public schools now are.

MIND AJAR

By JANE P. MARSHALL

-30-

For the three years Mind Ajar has been published in The Pampa News, I have saved all these thoughts which I promised (or threatened, depending on who you ask) to write in the last column.

This is the last column. I can't think of any of them.

In fact, I get a bit choked up when thinking of leaving Pampa. That's understandable to some, astounding to others, I realize.

I have enjoyed living here. Some of the friends I have made are very precious to me and always will be. The spirit of community in Pampa is unequalled to any place I have ever lived. It makes for a strong city and a proud one.

I have enjoyed working in Pampa. I have learned what other journalism experiences and colleges can never teach, I have hurt unbearable, I have grown in ways only experience can teach. I have learned during interviews with Pampans who were so heart-warming and generous that it makes the war and hatred in the world almost dissolve. I've been so pooped I couldn't sleep.

I've worked with dedicated, spirited people who have tremendous understanding and patience.

I have learned to understand the fierce independence which Pampans, and those in the Texas Panhandle, feel. I have learned why they wince when their institutions, no matter how molded, are scrutinized. I appreciate their loyalty but, as a journalist, I think they are wrong.

What fun it would be to make lists, say special thanks, report special kindnesses and loves. But that is inappropriate. These people know who they are. I will miss you. I will always hope that the nation is made of places like Pampa and people like Pampans.

John Cox, the Irishman, was in Pampa last week to say hello to the Pampa friends he made when the Pride of Pampa band was in Ireland last year.

Now John is a great person and ranks right up there with Will Rogers and Hans Christian Anderson as a story teller. One of his best stories is about his flight across Texas when he started a conversation with his fellow passenger.

The man began telling John that he wouldn't go to Ireland for anything in the world. Too dangerous, he said. That misconception irks John and he was about to explain the situation to the traveler when a message came over the plane's speaker.

The plane was being forced into an emergency landing in Austin because one of the passengers had explosives in her suitcase and had threatened to blow the entire jet up.

After the passengers had regained their composure in the airport following the landing complete with escapes through sliding chutes, John turned again to the man who had been expressing the terrors of the Irish war and calmly said, "You were saying ..."

Another caller said the borrow ditch got its name because roadmakers used to borrow dirt from the ditch and pile it up on the grade. She said her father helped build many of the roads around here and "he taught me in 1919 that the word was borrow." She said the word had been corrupted over the years into "barrow."

Once a man decided to leave his home and search for another place to live. He came to the gates of a city and asked to enter.

"Why do you want to come in?" asked the guard.

"Because I want to find a new home," he said.

"What was the matter with your old home?" asked the guard.

"Oh, it was awful. It was full of ugly, selfish people and corrupt organizations and there was no place to go and nothing to do."

"Well, this city is exactly the same," the gatekeeper told the man. "You won't like it here either."

So the man went on to the next city and asked to enter.

"Why do you come here?" the gatekeeper asked him.

"Because where I come from the people are ugly and selfish, they allow corruptness and they are dishonest and unfriendly. There was nothing good to do and I didn't like it. So I'm looking for a new place to live."

"Well, if you didn't find what you wanted in your past town you won't find it here. We don't want you in our city," said the gatekeeper and turned the man away.

For those who need to be told the moral, here it is: much of the satisfaction with life comes from within and a person shouldn't expect his environment to provide it for him. A person usually gets what he thinks he'll get.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

What's up in making good

Poor — but plucky — boy makes good was the theme of most of Horatio Alger's 120 or so books. Since 1947, awards have been made annually to Americans whose lives have mirrored that theme.

Among this year's Horatio Alger Award winners are slugger Hank Aaron and jockey Willie Shoemaker. Past winners of the award include:

- Singer Johnny Cash (1977).
- Entertainer Danny Thomas (1977).
- TV personality Art Linkletter (1976).
- Singer-author Rod McKuen (1976).
- Francine Neff, former U.S. treasure (1976).
- Clare Boothe Luce, author and public official (1974).
- Commentator Lowell Thomas (1971).
- Supreme Court justice Thurgood Marshall (1969).
- Actor-politician Ronald Reagan (1969).
- Ambassador Arthur Goldberg (1968).

Comedian Bob Hope (1968).

Surgeon Michael DeBakey (1967).

Bandleader Lawrence Welk (1967).

Rev. Billy Graham (1965).

Col. Harlan Sanders, chicken mogul (1965).

Cowboy star Gene Autry (1964).

Author Pearl Buck (1964).

President Dwight D. Eisenhower (1961).

President Herbert Hoover (1953).

Norman Vincent Peale, minister and author (1952).

RCA Chairman David Sarnoff (1951).

Cosmetics magnate Charles Revson (1950).

Financier Bernard Baruch (1948).

But even the Horatio Alger Award isn't a guarantee of continued success. After winning the prize in 1951, Governor Harold Stassen went on to lose a record number of races for president.

But he wasn't faking

HOUSTON (AP) — David Fey's faked heart attack became the real thing.

Fey, 62, was reported in stable condition at Methodist Hospital today after suffering a heart attack about two hours after two men forced their way into his automobile at gunpoint.

Fey was stricken Monday night as he told police the men taped him and left him in a field after he faked a heart attack.

Officer J.E. Zelenske quoted Fey as telling the man "Look, boys, if you don't want a murder charge on your backs, you better let me out because I'm having a heart attack."

The police report said Fey's watch, gasoline credit card and automobile were taken. Fey managed to pull a small knife from a pocket and free himself.

One man was arrested early today as Fey's stolen automobile was stopped in Baytown for a traffic violation.

Kids: runaways or throwaways?

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Too often children on the streets are "throwaways" — not "runaways," says Ben Standley, the founder of Texas Foundation of Youth, Inc.

Standley plans to get experts together at the desert town of Terlingua, Texas, to decide what to do about it.

He recently spread a half dozen or more clippings on a coffee table that he had clipped from a single issue of a newspaper. Each clipping was about troubled children.

Violent children and violence against children have reached epidemic proportions, says Standley, a low-budget crusader for better youth care.

Standley spews statistics and flashes documentation such as magazine articles as swiftly as a dealer handling playing cards.

—The No.1 killer of children, ages 1-5, in the United States is child abuse.

—From 1964 to 1974 the suicide rate for youths 5-14 doubled.

—The FBI estimated three million runaways in 1977.

—School vandalism is costing taxpayers $600 million a year in repairs.

—There are 70,000 assaults against teachers each year across the nation.

His finger stabs at an underlined sentence in an April issue of U.S. News & World Report — "... the risk of violence to teen-agers remains greater in school than on the street."

For five days, June 1-5, Standley has arranged for an all-star cast of persons involved in youth care to meet in a symposium at Terlingua, 100 miles south of Alpine in the Big Bend country.

The program cover notes — "kids invited free." Standley estimates nearly 100 will be there.

"The idea (for the symposium) originated with the kids," says Standley. "They are concerned with the youth crisis. Each has his own problems and can see the problems of his peers."

Why Terlingua?

"We felt we had to get it out of the Hyatt Regencies and Ramada Inns," Standley said.

He says he is familiar with Terlingua since he worked for a weekly newspaper at Alpine and helped organize the 1977 World Chili Cook-off at Terlingua.

Those scheduled to participate include Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, chairman of a committee on juvenile delinquency, and Maureen Reagan, daughter of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and a member of the National Women's Political Caucus.

The others are not so well known publicly, but Standley says they are extremely important professionals in the area of child care.

Here are a few:

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, professor of education, psychology and psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Loretta Long, one of the hosts on the award-winning children's program, "Sesame Street."

Joseph Sorrentino, a former Brooklyn gang leader who was 1967 valedictorian at Harvard Law School and is now a professor at the University of Southern California and sits on the Los Angeles Municipal Court.

Michael Dann, formerly in charge of television programming for CBS.

Kenneth Wooden, executive director of the National Coalition for Children's Justice.

Caroline Hogue, director of Colorado Wilderness Trails, a therapeutic camping program for youths.

"We accept that we have a problem with youth," says Standley. "The speakers and workshops will concentrate on what we can do about it."

"At the most," he writes in the program, "it (the symposium) could produce the beginnings of a comprehensive direction toward nurturing children into sane, healthy adults."

"We can begin with childish steps and move forward."

No case of mis-identification

By CHRIS EDWARDS
Pampa News Staff

The scene was all set Tuesday in 31st district court for the trial of Ronald Dunn, 1041 Neel Road, who will be 34 Sunday. The identical twin was charged with two counts of delivery of marijuana for remuneration.

When jury members came in, they were questioned by both assistant district attorney Mark Buzzard and defense attorney James "Rowdy" Bowers. For two hours they were questioned, in the tedious but necessary manner lawyers use to pick an objective jury.

Buzzard wanted to know if the prospective jurors were acquainted with either the defendant or the defense attorney, and if that acquaintance would affect their judgment of the case. Bowers questioned if the testimony of uniformed men of law and the fact that the defendant was black would prejudice the mostly white members of the jury panel.

When it came time for jury selection, however, onlookers were in for a surprise. Dunn had been indicted for two felony offenses, but the marijuana involved in one indictment was only enough for a misdemeanor charge.

So Judge Grainger McIlhany declared a mistrial.

But justice will march on, and it did. Dunn pleaded guilty to one reduced misdemeanor charge, with the other indictment being taken into consideration during the sentencing as an unadjudicated offense. He said he was indeed guilty of delivering .89 ounces of marijuana to police officer Joe Mollinary on Aug. 15, 1977, and the equivalent of about two joints on Aug. 24.

He was placed on one year's probation and fined $2,000, the maximum allowed under law. As one of the conditions of probation, he will be required to report periodically to the Gray County probation office.

But Donald, Ronald's carbon copy twin brother, had best not try to stand in for his brother.

The judge and the two attorneys examined Dunn's head closely and found a small scar on his left temple to be used for identification purposes.

And for a strictly subjective opinion, luck shouldn't be pressed twice — even for twins.

Paratroopers leave Zaire

PARIS (AP) — French Foreign Legion paratroopers began their withdrawal from southern Zaire today, less than a week after recapturing the city of Kolwezi from invading rebels and aiding in the evacuation of trapped foreigners, the Defense Ministry announced.

Word of the withdrawal came on the heels of a Belgian proposal for an all-African peace-keeping force to ensure an uninterrupted flow of Zaire's mineral wealth to the West.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the French garrison in Kolwezi would be replaced by Zairian army forces "reinforced by about 100 Moroccan troops."

The 600 legionnaires parachuted into Kolwezi Friday and Saturday. Four of them were killed in fighting with the rebels who overran the city nearly two weeks ago, the Defense Ministry said.

The French troops abandoned their pursuit of fleeing rebels Wednesday night, although five or six companies of rebel forces equipped with heavy weapons remained in an area about six miles west of Kolwezi, the spokesman said.

"Maintenance of security in the Kolwezi area from now on is up to the Zaire army," he said.

The paratroopers will spend about three days withdrawing by road to Lubumbashi, the capital of the province, where they will be allowed to rest before being flown back to France, the spokesman said. Lubumbashi is about 200 miles southeast of Kolwezi.

Meanwhile, Belgium urged the creation of a Western-supported all-African peacekeeping force to prevent another attack into Zaire's Shaba Province and guarantee the continued flow of ore from the mineral-rich region.

"We should find a Euro-African formula of protection to assure the security of our people working there," Prime Minister Leo Tindemans told his parliament Wednesday.

"It could be done by the African states with logistic support of the nine members states of the European Economic Community," he said, adding that Foreign Minister Henri Simonet had been assigned to explore the possibility.

Many Western governments favor the idea of a special security force to help President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire, the former Belgian Congo, maintain order in the province, invaded May 12 by Angola-based insurgents. But few appear ready to volunteer.

France, which sent a 600-man force of foreign legionnaires to oust the rebels from Kolwezi and rescue about 2,500 stranded foreigners, has been an exception. But how much support other European countries would be willing to give is unknown.

Tindemans did not reveal details of his proposed force or what countries might be involved. However, he said organization would take time and other formulas must be considered for the protection of Europeans still in the province until details were worked out.

Half of the 1,200 Belgian paratroopers dropped into Kolwezi for the evacuation of foreigners pulled out Monday and the rest took up station at the Zairian air base at Kamina, 130 miles to the north.

Shaba Province is rich in copper, cobalt, uranium and tin and these metals are the main source of Zaire's foreign earnings. Mobutu's government already is deep in debt and a loss of mineral earnings could weaken his position.

Mobutu's rule often has been criticized as corrupt and incompetent and only two months ago, 13 people were shot for reportedly plotting against him. Mobutu was in Paris on Wednesday seeking support from African governments meeting there as well as from France and Belgium.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms roamed over West Texas late last night, but dissipated early today and partly cloudy to cloudy skies were the rule over most of the west part of the Lone Star State and fair skies in the east.

Warm, humid air continued to feed northward over much of the state from the Gulf of Mexico.

The National Weather Service predicted another day of warm temperatures. The thermometer recorded readings in the 60s and 70s statewide before dawn, and afternoon highs in the 80s and 90s were expected.

But widely scattered thunderstorms are expected to move across western and southern sections of Texas this afternoon and evening. The Panhandle and South Plains can expect a few severe thunderstorms later today, the weather service said.

Cubans may have prodded rebels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Evidence is piling up that shows Cuban forces in Angola — already accused of training Katangan insurgents — encouraged and instigated the rebel invasion of Zaire's copper-rich Shaba province, an administration source says.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said there was "considerable" evidence behind U.S. suspicions about Cuban support for the bloody, but brief takeover of the mining town of Kolwezi.

But the source added, "We cannot make a categorical statement (proving the Cuban role)."

Earlier Wednesday, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the United States has gathered new evidence suggesting the rebels had been trained by Cuban forces. Cuba denies that role.

But he was uncertain as to whether Cuban troops actually took part in the invasion, saying, "We just don't have enough information to prove it one way or the other."

So far there are estimates that as many as 120 Europeans — mainly Belgians and French living in Kolwezi — were killed by the invaders.

Nearly two weeks ago, the rebels crossed into southern Zaire across northern Zambia from bases in Angola. There are thousands of Cuban troops and advisers in that country which is governed by a Marxist regime that took control in 1976.

The rebels represent Lunda tribesmen whose traditional homeland lies in both Angola and Zaire. They were driven into Angola in the mid-1960's when the central Zairean government, with help from U.N. troops, crushed their secessionist rebellion.

Regarding Angola, Powell said that top administration officials are considering sending U.S. aid to guerrillas still fighting against the Angolan regime.

But Powell said President Carter has not decided whether to seek repeal of the Clark amendment which bars military assistance to any faction in Angola unless the aid is authorized by Congress.

As the United States considers what to do to prevent the situation in Zaire from becoming worse, State Department African experts say the country is plagued by corruption and inefficiency, still seriously threatened by the Katangan rebels, and near bankruptcy.

France proposes disarmament body

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France presents new proposals to the special U.N. disarmament session today after the United States offered to provide early warning systems to head off conflicts and be the "eyes and ears of peace."

France for years has boycotted the 31-nation Geneva disarmament committee out of dislike for the Soviet-American co-chairmanship, and is calling for a new body of 30 to 40 members with a chairman elected for two years from among all the members except the big powers.

The Geneva disarmament committee, established by the United States and the Soviet Union, is linked only informally with the United Nations. But France says the body it wants established should be responsible to the main political committee of the General Assembly, sitting as a disarmament commission.

Giscard d'Estaing, who speaks on the second day of General Assembly debate, also is calling for a European conference on disarmament which would consider problems relating to disarmament "from the Atlantic to the Urals."

Vice President Walter F. Mondale told the General Assembly Wednesday that the United States was ready to be the "eyes and ears of peace" in areas of possible conflict by providing the countries involved with monitoring services like the aerial photography and ground detection devices now working between Egyptian and Israeli forces in Sinai.

Mondale said countries wanting such help should submit joint requests, preferably through regional organizations or the United Nations.

He also proposed creation of a U.N. peacekeeping reserve force of national contingents trained and earmarked for U.N. duty that Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim could use whenever the Security Council established a new U.N. force as it did for southern Lebanon last March.

He also charged that the Warsaw Pact nations had built up an almost 3-to-1 advantage in tanks in Europe over the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And he said Soviet deployment of the SS-20, "a new, mobile intermediate-range ballistic missile... runs totally contrary to all this special session seeks to achieve." Mondale said the SS-20, each carrying the nucle-

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Salvador Dali has filed a $3 million suit against a Chicago firm he claims is engaging in the "commercial exploitation" of one of his original designs.

The artist-sculptor, now living in Spain, said in papers filed Wednesday in federal court in Manhattan that under a 1972 contract with Lincoln Mint Inc., the Easter theme design could be used only on plates and platters of precious metals.

Dali charged Lincoln Mint with violating the contract by using his design in an unauthorized manner on other items it manufactures for commercial use. The items include pendants, medallions and dinner bells, said Michael Ward Stout, the artist's lawyer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope says he knew the Congressional Club's annual breakfast for Rosalynn Carter wouldn't be a three-martini lunch — even though it was held at nighttime.

"I knew Mrs. Carter was here so I knew it wasn't a three-martini lunch," Hope said, poking fun at President Carter's attacks against excessive tax deductions for business expenses.

Hope, who was in Washington Wednesday to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the USO, said he visited the House and Senate but decided to drop in at the club's meeting, attended by 1,000 wives of politicians, because "I wanted to see the real power."

Mrs. Carter made the only serious remarks at the breakfast, calling on the wives of Cabinet members, Supreme Court justices, senators, congressmen and other politicians to help her do community work to solve urban problems instead of relying on the federal government to do the job.

ATLANTA (AP) — State Sen. Julian Bond, who was a major figure in the civil rights movement during the 1960s, has decided he would rather remain a politician than become a television commentator.

Bond, 38, who had said earlier this year that he was negotiating with ABC television for a job as a host on a projected magazine-type program, announced Wednesday that he will seek a third term in the Georgia Senate.

"I look forward to an exciting campaign," Bond said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending five months of freedom, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is scheduled to return to prison in Alabama on Friday.

Since his release last Dec. 28 from Maxwell Air Force Base prison near Montgomery, the 64-year-old Mitchell, has undergone operations twice — to repair a weakened artery in his abdomen and for hip surgery.

Mitchell is serving a sentence of one to four years for his involvement in the Watergate cover-up and for lying under oath to a grand jury. He becomes eligible for parole June 20.

Hidalgo now has two mayors

HIDALGO, Texas (AP) — Eneida Garza has taken the oath of office as mayor of this small border town but Ed Vela hasn't given up the post.

The dispute started in April when the incumbent Vela squeaked out a single-vote victory over Mrs. Garza.

But the challenger claimed there were irregularities at the polls and filed an election contest suit.

A spokesman for the secretary of state's office in Austin said Vela had 20 days to post a surety bond after the suit was filed. Vela apparently did not post the bond. Mrs. Garza put up her required bond and, following state law, Gov. Dolph Briscoe named her mayor pending the outcome of the election contest.

She took the oath here Wednesday. But Vela said he won't move out of the office he has held for six years — at least not yet.

"Until I'm officially notified by someone who has the authority to remove me I will continue to serve as mayor," he said in his office.

Jay Floyd of the governor's office in Austin said Briscoe had signed the commission naming Mrs. Garza on Tuesday. It was placed in the mail shortly after the signing.

"We don't have any discretion. The clerk of the court certified that the bond was not filed," Floyd said.

Mrs. Garza said Vela's decision is fine with her but she expects him to move out when the commission gets here.

Vela contends his lawyer did take all required steps in answering the suit.

"I have no knowledge that the bond wasn't filed," he said.

The bonds are required to cover any damage awards ordered by the court.

Vela's attorney was unavailable for comment late Wednesday.

Mrs. Garza credited two groups for her temporary victory — her supporters and her attorneys.

"If you have a good law firm behind you..." she said.

The suit was filed in the court of State District Judge Joe Cisneros of Edinburg — the judge whose court of inquiry led to criminal charges against Vela and his wife earlier this

Carter to go to Chicago

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has some fences to mend with Chicago Democrats, so he's going there on a political mission that can only warm their hearts. He'll be raising money for the fall campaign.

Carter, scheduled to arrive in Chicago late this afternoon, is holding a nationally televised regional news conference and addressing the local Democrats at their big pre-campaign dinner.

The still-powerful Cook County Democratic organization wasn't happy when Carter declined an invitation to a similar fund-raising affair last year.

And when the White House gave a noncommittal response to a January invitation to Thursday night's dinner, the political heirs of the late mayor Richard J. Daley invited California Gov. Jerry Brown.

Brown, considered a potential Carter challenger for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination, was not noncommittal. He declined.

So the Cook County Democrats sought help from Vice President Walter F. Mondale and the party's national chairman, John White. Result: Carter agreed to attend, and White snagged a share of the proceeds for the national committee.

Besides addressing the party dinner, the president agreed to attend a reception for Alex Seith, the Democratic candidate for senator. Seith, a Chicago attorney and specialist in international law, faces an uphill battle against Republican Sen. Charles Percy.

Carter, who will return to Washington on Friday via Springfield, Ill., and Charleston, W.Va., was following his frequent practice of spending the night at a private home — this time in the Chicago suburb of Elmhurst.

The president's overnight hosts are Jim and Mary Eleanor Wall, who were very active in his 1976 campaign.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: What happens to parents when they become grandparents? Mine are too young to be getting senile, but they certainly don't show nearly the good judgment in handling MY children that they did when they raised me.

My parents ruled their children with an iron hand. No back talk, we did as we were told, and if we forgot our manners, we heard about it. We weren't permitted to eat between meals, and we had to be in bed with lights out at a certain time, and no nonsense.

But you should see the way they handle our children! All rules and regulations laid down at home are out the window at the grandparents' house. The kids whine and beg until they get their own way. They talk back, and are fed soft drinks, candy and cookies—all they want at all hours. And they don't have to nap or do anything they don't want to do.

I love my parents, Abby, but I wish they'd realize how tough they are making it for me when they do this. It's difficult for children of any age to tell their parents anything, so even though this is from Iowa, I hope you won't think it's too corny for your column.

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR CEDAR RAPIDS: There's a kernel of truth in almost every corny letter. Let's hope your parents have ears, too. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: I am 28 years old, not married, and I work to support myself. I'm not bad looking and live a fairly normal, happy life, but I'm beginning to wonder if maybe I'm foolish to work the way I do.

What I'm trying to say is, I have a girlfriend who works part-time—like maybe four afternoons a week. She has had three husbands, and now she's single again. She has boyfriends for everything. One pays her rent, another lets her drive his car, another painted and papered her whole house and she bragged that all she gave him was lunch and a few daughterly kisses.

She sees the rent-payer on weekends, and she also has a truck driver staying with her off and on when he's in town. I don't know how she gets away with it. Shouldn't someone tell these chumps the score?

BABE IN B'HAM

DEAR BABE: Don't worry about the chumps. Some men don't care what the score is as long as they're in the game.

DEAR ABBY: I am in the United States Navy. I love the service, but most of all, I love my parents. Before I came into the service I felt I knew just about everything. I was sure my parents no longer needed me, and all I could think of was the day I would be "on my own."

The first time I realized how much my parents cared was the day they took me to the airport to see me off. When my father said goodbye to me, he broke down and cried. I had never seen my father cry before, and I won't forget it as long as I live. I have had a lot of time to think. I never told my father I loved him, and I gave both my parents a hard time when they tried to guide me for my own good.

Now I write home every chance I get, and I am trying to make up for all the heartaches I must have caused them, and for my failure to be a better son. When my next leave comes up, I am going home to get acquainted with my wonderful parents.

I have written this letter in hopes that other thoughtless teenagers will wake up before it's too late. Thanks, Abby, for letting me get this off my chest.

WISER NOW

DEAR WISER: And thank you for a wonderful letter.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M. D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a 51-year-old male. I have had high blood pressure since I was 18. At that time I weighed 145 pounds. Since then doctors have suggested I lose some of my weight to lower my pressure. Since it was high originally at 145 pounds I didn't think they know what they are talking about. Since my mid-30s I have weighed between 190 and 200 pounds.

After my 51st birthday I went on a 1200-calorie diet and dropped from 205 to 163 pounds. My blood pressure dropped from 130 over 90 while taking three Ser-Ap-Es per day to 118 over 69 on two a day.

A number of friends have cautioned me against losing too much but I think I may continue as I still have some fat on my lower abdomen. As you often remark in your column, how much fat you have under your skin is more important than what the scale reads.

My waist measure has dropped from 40 to 36 inches but I'm disappointed by all the fat I still have in that area and the loose skin. One doctor has warned me the loose skin will probably stay there — just part of the aging process. Can you recommend an exercise to help with this? Or does this have to be done surgically? I will be having a second hernia operation soon and it could perhaps be done at that time. I had the hernia repaired five years ago and it recurred in less than seven months.

I have been doing about 20 to 30 sit-ups a night and they seem to help the muscle above the waistline but not below.

DEAR READER — The high blood pressure seen in young men is often caused by reflex constriction of the arteries and may have been something different from what you developed later in life.

In any case many people who have high blood pressure improve markedly if they get rid of the excess fat. I agree with your idea of staying with a program long enough to get rid of all your excess fat. You might need to go on a maintenance diet for awhile then go back to losing weight.

Your results show what a person can do if he will. Many people who take high blood pressure medicine would not need to if they would only get rid of all the fat.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 3-7, Girth Control, Avoiding the Big Middle, to help you tighten up your abdomen. You have proved that the waist will shrink if you get the fat out and off. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will give you the exercise program you need.

You are right, the sit-ups are for the upper abdomen only. If you want to do something about the "pot" area below the belt you need to do a variety of leg lift exercises. These will tighten you up.

And I strongly disagree with that doctor who said your loose skin is "old age." That loose skin occurs in anyone who has had too much blubber and is fortunate enough to get rid of it. Stay with your program and after your fat is all gone wait a year. Then if you have too much skin have someone remove it if you really can't stand the sight of it. The skin will regain some of its original elasticity and shrink some, but once overstretched it may not snap back. This is particularly true as you get older.

Finally I'd like to point out that too much blubber inside the abdomen causing pressure helps cause hernias. The best results from surgery are obtained in people who are not obese.

Strawberry fest with freeze

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

No dessert we have made this spring has pleased our tasters more than Strawberry Freeze. Concocted with fresh strawberries, sugar syrup, egg yolks and half-and-half or light cream, it's lighter than old-fashioned strawberry ice cream. Because it's not overly sweet, the true flavor of the berry comes through. Really refreshing! And it's a marvelous candy-pink color.

This recipe was adapted from one in a delightful small cookbook called "Strawberries" by

Maggie Waldron with charming drawings by Rik Olson (101 Productions).

STRAWBERRY FREEZE

2 pint baskets (4 cups)

fresh ripe strawberries

1 tablespoon lemon juice

1 cup sugar

1/2 cup water

3 egg yolks

2 cups half-and-half or light cream

Rinse the strawberries, hull, wash coarsely; stir in the lemon juice; chill.

In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan over low heat, stir together the sugar and water until the sugar dissolves. Increase the heat and bring to a boil; boil gently until the syrup spins a 2-inch thread

when dropped from a fork or spoon (230 degrees on a candy thermometer) — about 20 to 25 minutes.

Shortly before the syrup is ready, in a medium bowl with an electric mixer at high speed,

beat the egg yolks until thick

Beat the hot syrup, at high speed, into the egg yolks. Continue beating until cool and thickened — about 5 minutes.

Stir in the half-and-half and the chilled strawberry mixture.

Chill.

Freeze in a 2-quart churnfreezer, following manufacturer's directions.

Makes about 1 1/2 quarts.

Potato salads go sophisticated

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE and PIERRE FRANEY (c) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — There is nothing in the world wrong with the traditional potato salad that grandma used to make.

Potato Salad with Fine Herbes

2 pounds small, new red-skinned potatoes

Salt

1/4 Cup finely chopped shallots

1 clove garlic, finely minced.

2 tablespoons chopped fresh chives

3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley

1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon (or half that amount dried)

1/4 cup dry white wine

1 teaspoon red wine or herb vinegar

3 tablespoons walnut oil (see note) or use peanut, vegetable or corn oil

Freshly ground pepper

Lettuce leaves, for garnish

1. Put the potatoes in a kettle and add cold water to cover and salt to taste. Bring to the boil and cook until tender, 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from the heat and drain.

2. As soon as the potatoes are cold enough to handle, peel them. Cut them into quarter-inch-thick slices and put them in a mixing bowl.

3. Add the shallots, garlic, chives, parsley, tarragon, wine, vinegar, oil, salt and pepper to taste. Toss well. Garnish with heart of romaine lettuce leaves or other greens.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

Note: Walnut oil is available in specialty shops dealing in imported foods.

2. As soon as the potatoes are cold enough to handle, peel them. Cut them into quarter-inch-thick slices and put them in a mixing bowl.

3. Meanwhile, cook the bacon on both sides until crisp. Drain on absorbent paper towels. Chop coarsely. Set aside.

4. Add the onion, parsley, salt and pepper to taste to the potatoes. Add the vinegar and oil and half the bacon and toss.

5. Spoon into a salad bowl and garnish with the remaining bacon bits and small heart of romaine lettuce leaves or other greens.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

Note: Walnut oil is available in specialty shops dealing in imported foods.

Shrimp divan

Prepare one pound of frozen breaded shrimp and 10 ounces frozen asparagus according to package directions. Combine 12 ounces of cream cheese or creamed cheese with chives and three-fourths cup sherry or milk in a small sauce pan. Heat and stir over low heat until smooth. Season as desired. For variation, add one to two tablespoons salad mustard to basic sauce or one-fourth cup cheese spread with bacon. To serve arrange three or four cooked and drained asparagus spears on top of warm rusks or toast. Spoon over sauce. Arrange several hot shrimp on top. Pass extra sauce. Serves five or six.

Assembly meatballs for fast meatball dish

By PIERRE FRANEY
(c) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Many Americans seem to look with disdain on dishes made with ground meats, relegating them to a low position in the hierarchy of foods that fit in the "gourmet" category. The foundation for this attitude probably lies in the fact that the dishes called hash are often made with meat of one sort or another that has been ground and served, so to speak, the second time around.

Ground meat dishes are by no means an American monopoly. Italy has its polpetta and polpettini; Germany its Klopfen; Sweden its Kottbullar and France's boulettes; Porjanski cut, one of the fine adaptations of Russian cookery, are made with ground meat such as veal, or salmon.

There are ways, of course, to elevate any dish, and some of the methods for upgrading ground meats are in the judicious use of certain herbs and spices, serving them in sauces that add character and interest.

The meatballs here (don't be put off by the number of ingredients; the meatballs can be made and cooked in much less than an hour) are stuffed with olives and served in a cream sauce delicately flavored with tomato and mustard.

As always, the best way to approach this recipe — in the conservation of time — is to assemble all the ingredients for the main dish. Chop, slice or otherwise get them ready and then set about making and cooking the meatballs. The total preparation time should be less than half an hour; the total cooking and finishing time, less than that.

The noodles to go with the dish take the briefest amount of preparation, and this can be done easily during the last few minutes of cooking the meatballs.

Olive-Stuffed Meatballs

- 1-1/4 pounds ground meat, preferably pork and veal
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 cup finely chopped onion
- 2 small cloves garlic, finely minced
- 1/2 cup bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup finely chopped parsley
- 1 large egg
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 16 small stuffed green olives
- 1/4 cup peanut, vegetable or

- corn oil
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 cup dry white wine
- 1-1/2 cups chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- Noodles with dill (see recipe)
- 1 tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf.

1. Put the meat in a mixing bowl.

2. Heat the butter in a small skillet and add half the onion and half the garlic. Cook until wilted. Let cool briefly.

3. Add the onion mixture to the meat. Add the bread crumbs, parsley, egg, half the cream, the nutmeg and salt and pepper to taste.

4. Mix well, preferably using the hands. Divide the mixture into 16 equal portions.

5. Flatten each portion into a small patty and place one small stuffed olive in the center. Bring the edges of the meat together and seal in the olive. Press into a ball.

6. Heat the oil in one or two skillets large enough to hold the meatballs in one layer. Do not crowd them. Cook, turning and stirring often so they brown evenly. When nicely browned, about 5 to 10 minutes, remove and keep warm.

7. Pour most of the fat from the skillet. To the fat remaining in the skillet add the remaining onion and garlic and cook, stirring, until onion is wilted. Add the flour and stir. Add the wine and let it cook about one minute, stirring constantly.

8. Add the chicken broth and stir with a wire whisk to remove any lumps. Stir in the tomato paste. When the sauce is thickened and boiling, add the meatballs. Cover and cook 10 minutes, shaking the skillet occasionally.

9. Meanwhile, cook the noodles so that they will be ready when the meatballs are ready.

10. Blend the remaining cream and mustard into the sauce.

Yield: 4 servings.

Noodles With Dill

- 1/2 pound thin noodles
- salt to taste
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh dill
- freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Bring enough water to the boil to cover the noodles when they are added. Add the noodles and salt to taste. Cook 9 to 10 minutes or to the desired degree of doneness.

2. Drain the noodles and return them to the kettle. Add the butter and dill, salt and pepper. Toss well.

Yield: 4 servings.

Next step: Noah's ark in space

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Animals used in future space experimentation will live in almost maintenance free containers during their trips into space, a space agency engineer says.

"We will try to do as much by automated fashion as possible so that the experimenters don't have to spend three-quarters or all their time taking care of the animals," said Cletis R. Booher, an engineer in the Life Sciences Project Division at Johnson Space Center.

"The basic problem in zero gravity (weightlessness) is how to get rid of waste matter and how to provide food and water in a way they can get to it."

The basic containers being developed for the early experiments will be for rats only but later systems could be developed for larger animals, Booher said.

"We should be able to feed it, water it, and take care of the waste production," he said. "They (containers) will be configured so you can keep track of food and water intake of each animal."

Booher spoke Wednesday at one of a series of mini-seminars at JSC on the final day of a two-day conference on life sciences and possible medical applications to space research.

About 350 doctors and scientists attended the event to see what experiments might be feasible when the space shuttle program gets under way in the 1980s.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston co-sponsored the conference.

The objective of the container is to eliminate handling of the animals except during experimental procedures.

Booher said there would be a surgical facility aboard the spacelab that would allow experimenters to dissect or operate on laboratory animals.

"There is a lot of experimentation, particularly when you talk about calcium loss, bone degradation and muscle degradation," Booher said. "If the experimenter wanted to see what happens after a couple of days of exposure to zero G, they could either examine or dissect the organism at various stages of the flight."

The containers would accommodate 24 to 36 rats for up to 32 days, Booher said. Animals would be visible without opening the units and the cages would be interchangeable to accommodate different sized animals.

Houston Hispanics organizing

HOUSTON (AP) — A community organizer who has been working in Houston's Northside Mexican-American barrio for nine years says a task force created in the wake of rioting in a neighborhood park is "the closest we have come to a united front since the school boycott in 1971."

"The Moody Park incident speeded up a process that is causing our people to realize they have to deal with their problems as a community," said Daniel Bustamante, a spokesman for La Raza Unida party.

Representatives of about 25 Mexican-American organizations have set up a community task force to impress upon city council members the need to tackle problems in the neighborhood which they say fostered frustrations that led to the fighting, burning and looting May 7.

Five persons were injured and substantial property damage caused during the violence that erupted during a Cinco de Mayo celebration. Three persons charged with inciting a riot are free on $25,000 bond.

Eduardo Lopez, a task force spokesman, called on council members Wednesday to allocate 40 percent of available federal community development, housing and job training funds to the Mexican-American community, estimated at anywhere from 15 to over 20 percent of the city's 1.7 million inhabitants.

Mayor Jim McConn told Lopez, the percentage was too high but said city departments will study the request for aid in dealing with drug traffic and abuse, a growing crime rate, unemployment, inadequate housing and social services and police harassment.

In 1971 the Mexican-American Education Council staged a boycott to protest a plan to pair 22 predominantly Mexican-American schools with largely black facilities to achieve court-ordered integration in the Houston school district.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Commissioner Leonel Castillo founded the MAEC which served as the base for future Mexican-American organizations in Houston and Harris County.

Some observers say the community has lacked leadership since Castillo went to Washington.

Bustamante, who works as a youth counselor, said there is very little coordination between the city and the school district in providing activities and recreation for young people.

"There is very little work done with young people in our community. There's a lot of tension and unemployment. These kids don't have any place to go," he said.

Bustamante also confirmed reports of tensions in the barrios between Mexican-Americans and Mexicans who are in this country illegally.

"It's a problem because there is a feeling of brotherhood on the one hand, but on the other hand, Chicano kids can't get jobs because people will hire illegals who work longer hours for less money because they can't complain," he said.

City accuses gas company

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The City of Willcox and a utility company have accused the El Paso Natural Gas Co. of Texas of engaging in a series of maneuvers that meant gas curtailments and surcharges of $45 million dollars to natural gas consumers in four states.

The suit, which seeks damages in excess of $83 million, was filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court. Joining Willcox as a plaintiff is the Arizona Electric Power Cooperative Inc., which buys gas from El Paso to generate electricity.

The suit says the surcharges were paid by consumers in Arizona, Texas, New Mexico and Nevada. But California consumers, it says, received fewer curtailments and surcharges.

The action claims El Paso illegally set up delivery priorities, allowing it to send more gas to California customers than to customers in other states between 1972 and last June.

Walter G. Henderson, an El Paso vice president, declined comment on the suit, saying he had not seen a copy of it.

El Paso is also accused of curtailing delivery of gas in 1974 to states other than California, discriminating against customers in those areas.

This was done, the suit says, when gas was delivered to and stored in California during the summer, so pipelines could be used to supply other states in the winter.

But rather than reducing the flow to California in the winter, the suit says, the supplies to other states were curtailed instead.

Surcharges resulted when El Paso overstated the requirements of states other than California, the suit says.

Additionally, El Paso is alleged to have failed to meet its obligation to serve customer needs by not spending enough to develop gas resources. As a result, the co-op said, it had to buy expensive fuel oil and electricity to serve its customers.

Curtailments were a major factor in its decision to build a $123 million coal-fired generator, the co-op reported.

Walter G. Henderson, an El Paso vice president, declined comment on the suit, saying he had not seen a copy of it.

Betty Ford makes hit on return to Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sipping ice water and turning over her wine glass so it would not be filled, former first lady Betty Ford has returned to the Washington party circuit for an evening with fellow Republicans.

"I'm really feeling very well," she told dozens of old friends and admirers who crowded around her Wednesday night at a cocktail hour sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy Research, a Washington organization with which former President Gerald R. Ford is associated.

Earlier in the day, at an unveiling of the Ford's official portraits at a White House ceremony, President Carter called Mrs. Ford "perhaps the most popular person in our country today... who has earned the admiration of our nation for her courage and complete candor."

Ford, moved by Carter's words, said Cuban-born artist Felix de Cossio, who painted Mrs. Ford's portrait, "did a beautiful job. I'm not only proud of the portrait but what it portrays."

Mrs. Ford, who is 60, was released this month after almost four weeks of hospitalization for what she described as an addiction to drugs and alcohol. The Fords are spending several days in the capital, scheduling a number of public appearances.

Speaking late Wednesday at a second cocktail party — this one a Republican fund-raiser — a tanned but tired-looking Ford told some 300 Republicans who had paid $100 to him him speak. "I can report to you Betty is doing great. She had a tough problem. She owned up to it and I'm very proud of her."

After loud applause, Ford continued: "She was always farther ahead in popularity than I. Now it's a landslide. She's doing beautifully." Mrs. Ford did not attend the second party.

Ford added that he is busy traveling around the country and that he would advise President Carter that retirement isn't all that bad.

"In fact, I suggest he try it at the earliest possible convenience," Ford said.

More patrol troopers, less pay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Department of Public Safety said Tuesday its average population per highway patrol trooper is much higher than in neighboring states.

The department also said its salaries fall short of those in major states, its share of the state budget has declined and its criminal law enforcement manpower has not risen as fast as the crime rate.

comparison states averaged from a minimum of $21,155 to a maximum of $26,433, the DPS said.

The DPS said its current two-year appropriation is $169.3 million, or 1.089 percent of the total state budget. In 1976-77, its budget was 1.258 percent of the total biennial appropriation. The drop in the DPS percentage share of the budget meant a loss of $26 million for the biennium in appropriations, it said.

"While we realize that many state agencies have valid needs for funds to serve the public, it is interesting to note that in the face of the rising problems shown in the preceding charts, the DPS share of the state dollars actually declined," it said. The charts included more crime, more motor vehicle thefts and more narcotics activities.

The DPS said while the crime rate in 1977 was 32 percent higher than in 1973, the number of criminal law enforcement personnel authorized for the state police agency rose only 10 percent, from 264 to 290.

In a "Workload vs. Resources" booklet, the DPS said Texas' average population per trooper is 9,504, compared with 6,749 in Louisiana, 5,869 in Oklahoma, 5,785 in Arkansas and 4,453 in New Mexico.

Salaries for uniformed personnel were compared with those of California, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Average minimum salary for a rank-and-file trooper is $11,816 in Texas and $12,879 in the eight states with which it was compared. Average maximum is $14,148 in Texas and $17,010 in the other states.

At the top of the scale, captains in Texas make $19,668, while those in the eight com-

Stood-up date sues

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 30-year-old accountant, angered by his date cancelling at the last minute, has sued her for $38, saying he won't take being stood up lying down.

Tom Horsley said he filed the suit in small claims court against Alyn Chesselet as a matter of principle, because she broke an "oral contract" to have dinner with him and see the musical "The Wiz" earlier this year.

Ms. Chesselet, 30, a waitress at the Vesuvio Cafe in San Francisco, said Tuesday that Horsley was "nuts" to think she would pay.

"He's blown everything out of proportion and he's just doing this to bug me," said Ms. Chesselet, who met Horsley eight years ago at Lone Mountain College.

"Most guys would be just as angry," said Horsley, who claims he spent time, money and energy to plan the date. "If I win in court, I'll feel I was right in principle."

Horsley, who lives and works in Campbell near San Jose, wants to be paid for two hours of driving to and from San Francisco at his minimum rate of $8.50 an hour as a certified public accountant and 17 cents a mile in car expenses for the 100-mile round trip. His claim is for $34 plus a $2 filing fee and $2 to serve court papers.

"She had 10 days to call me and cancel our date," Horsley said Tuesday. "And she promised to pay" his costs after she broke the date, he said.

Miss Chesselet said she had to cancel her date because of a sudden change in her work schedule and that she tried to reach him to let him know.

Neither seems to have learned from the past. Eight years ago, Horsley stopped dating Miss Chesselet after she broke a date to a University of California football game.

"She did it in such a nasty way, by sending me a Hallmark card announcing that she wouldn't go out with me again," he recalled.

As for Miss Chesselet, she said she had almost forgotten how jealous, stubborn and persistent Horsley was when they last dated. She vows she will never make another date with him.

The two are scheduled to meet in court July 24.

'Thrill killers' allude policemen

YORK, Ala. (AP) — Alabama and Mississippi authorities have called off their man-hunt for two Oklahoma convicts wanted in the slaying of four Texans, an Alabama woman and the wounding of an Alabama policeman.

The massive search along the Alabama-Mississippi border was halted Wednesday night when authorities received word a car belonging to the slain woman was found in Oklahoma.

The woman, Stacie Virginia Beavers, was found with her throat slashed Tuesday morning in her home near Cuba, Ala., where she lived alone.

Officers said the 68-year-old retired school teacher apparently was killed Monday night as she returned from a church social.

The escapees — Claude Eugene Dennis, 35, and Michael Lancaster, 25 — were traced by officers to the vicinity of the Beavers home earlier Monday night.

Two men who fit the description of the escaped prisoners were seen in Miss Beavers' car after the killing.

Stephens said the fugitives were "hemmed up for a while" Wednesday. But they managed to elude officers, he said, because "they're experts in the woods. They cover their trail."

He said the fugitive convicts are "thrill killers."

Miss Beavers' death terrified residents along the Alabama-Mississippi border. Fearful of more killings, many kept their doors locked.

Parents are jailed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The three young children of a married couple jailed on capital murder charges have only the state to support them, says a Bexar County caseworker, who has asked a state judge to appoint a temporary conservator for the children.

John Averitt, 31, and his wife, Susan, 26, are charged with capital murder in connection with the March 20 shooting deaths of Mary Venus, 25, and Andrea Millican, 21.

toys and shotguns loaded while others "moved in with relatives," said Stephens.

The escaped convicts also are wanted in the wounding of a Butler, Ala., policeman last week and for shooting at a state trooper. Trooper Maj. James L. Fuqua said the fugitives also may have been involved in other killings since their escape April 23.

Texas officers believe the two are responsible for the slaying of a Hemphill, Texas man, a Denison convenience store operator, a Garland service station attendant and a Garland minister.

Garland police say Lancaster has been "positively" identified as an assailant in May 2 shooting death of Mithal Thanmikal Mathew, 31, an attendant at the Shamrock Service Station in Garland.

They also are suspects in the killing of David Bobo, a Garland minister whose body was found May 16 in a heavily wooded area in eastern Collin County. His wallet, shoes, pants and car were missing.

The two escaped from the Oklahoma state prison at McAlester on April 23 by climbing through an abandoned utility tunnel.

Shortly after the break, they barged into the home of a prison guard held his wife at knife-point while they took some guns and the family car.

The Garland minister was reported missing six days later, although the man's body was not found until May 16 and not identified until May 18.

On May 2, Mathew was robbed for less than $100 and was shot in the side after he handed the money to the robbers.

On May 10, Lake Texoma bait shop manager Bobby Lee Spencer was shot to death and his wife was abducted, but later escaped.

A Hemphill, Texas man was reported missing the first week of May and feared dead.

Dennis was serving 35 years for manslaughter, Lancaster 25 years for robbery when they broke out of the Oklahoma State Prison at McAlester.

Even the visionary Leonardo da Vinci could not have imagined it: An amusement park has used his parachute design of five centuries ago to come up with the world's tallest thrill ride, the 250-foot Sky Chuter. Those with strong stomachs can experience the ride at Six Flags Over Mid-America in St. Louis.

Africans fight Soviet, Cuban aid in Angola

(EDITOR'S NOTE — White House spokesman Jody Powell says Carter administration officials have discussed possible U.S. aid to guerrillas fighting the Cuban-supported government of Angola. Here is a report on the situation now in that Marxist-led African nation.)

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two outgunned African movements are fighting a lonely struggle against Soviet arms and Cuban troops in an attempt to topple the Marxist government of Angola.

U.S. officials have discussed the possibility of sending aid to the two guerrilla forces but President Carter has not yet decided whether to ask Congress to repeal a prohibition against any such action, White House spokesman Jody Powell said Wednesday in Washington.

Together the two guerrilla groups claim the political-tribal support of roughly half the six million people of one of black Africa's potentially richest nations.

They are the loosely allied National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, known by its Portuguese initials as UNITA, the stronger of the two movements; and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

They oppose President Agostinho Neto's Popular Movement or the Liberation of Angola which took power in a three-way civil war in 1975 with massive Soviet military support spearheaded by Cuban troops. The war broke out after Angola gained independence from Portugal.

Once the jewel of Portugal's African empire, "revolutionary" Angola today is in economic shambles despite vast wealth in oil, diamonds, iron and other minerals and a once-booming coffee crop. There have been recurring but unconfirmed reports that Neto is in poor health with either a heart condition or cancer. He is 55.

UNITA is led by Jonas Savimbi, 44, who enjoys the strong support of his fellow Ovimbundu tribesmen in south-central Angola. The estimated two million Ovimbundu are the largest ethnic group in the tribally torn country, comprising about 33 percent of the population.

AP special report

The National Front, UNITA's ally of convenience, is the oldest liberation movement in Angola, founded by Holden Roberto in 1954 and then called the Angolan People's Union. It was initially formed to advance the interests of the estimated two million Bakongo people in northern Angola, which remains Roberto's political stronghold.

The Bakongo overlap into neighboring Zaire and the Congo Republic and are descendants of the largest tribal kingdom in pre-colonial Africa.

Neto's Popular Movement draws most of its support from the estimated 1.5 million Mbundu people of north-central Angola stretching from Luanda, the capital, eastward.

The Popular Movement clings to power thanks to the estimated 19,000 Cuban troops and some 6,000 Cuban, East European and Soviet advisers helping his Marxist regime.

Sunset group eyes end of rules

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Undertakers, employment agencies, architects, surveyors and landscape architects had a right to be uneasy today about the future of regulation of their businesses and professions.

The Sunset Advisory Commission planned to make tentative recommendations on whether eight state agencies should be eliminated or continued.

Among them were the State Board of Morticians, the Texas State Board of Landscape Architects, the Board of Examiners of State Licensed Land Surveyors, the State Board of Registration for Public Surveyors, the Texas Private Employment Agency Regulatory Board and the State Board of Architectural Examiners.

The commission won't take final action until this fall. It already has indicated a hard-nosed approach, however, voting to retire four state agencies at its April meeting.

Regulatory boards up for action today, and members of the professions and businesses they oversee all have testified before the commission in favor of continued operation.

If the next Legislature fails to renew them, they will expire automatically on Sept. 1, 1979, with a year to phase out operations.

recently described Neto as "desperate" but unwilling to seek a political solution to what is essentially a tribal war now in its third year.

Western analysis says UNITA has destabilized much of the southern third of the country. There also have been recent reports of heavy fighting in northern Angola.

At one point in the civil war in 1975, U.S. arms supplied by the Central Intelligence Agency were reaching UNITA and the National Front via Zaire, which provided bases for Roberto's movement. Savimbi insists on operating in Angola without external bases.

UNITA also received direct South African military support for a period in 1975.

Savimbi and Roberto are believed to be still receiving secret support from South Africa, France and Zaire.

Savimbi has repeatedly called for Western aid in the form of arms to match the firepower of the Soviet-supplied Popular Movement.

"No one can assure us that tomorrow (the Soviets and Cubans) will not intervene in another independent country," he remarked two years ago. "The face Russia is showing in Angola should be a warning to the continent."

Will Nome ban booze?

NOME, Alaska (AP) — A church-backed group, working on the premise that alcohol is the root of health and crime problems in this hard-drinking Gold Rush town, has gotten a proposition on the ballot that would ban the sale of liquor.

Disgruntled opponents of the proposal say the town has to live up to its wild and woolly past to keep the tourists coming.

The Rev. John Shaffer, minister to both the Presbyterian and Methodist churches here and prime mover of the proposition, said Nome has one of the highest alcohol consumption rates in the world — about four gallons a year for every resident over the age of 15. That is 57 percent above the national average.

Nome also has a suicide rate 10 times the national average, and Shaffer said alcohol is partly to blame.

Bill Dann, executive director of Nome's hospital, does not endorse the ban but said, "Alcohol usually figures in our suicides, homicides, emergency room visits, child beatings and wife beatings."

Shaffer organized a petition drive that gathered 264 signatures, 40 more than were required in this predominantly Eskimo town of 2,500 people. The proposal was certified Wednesday, and voters will make their decision in October.

"I think Nome will become a ghost town," said Albro Gregory, publisher of the Nome Nugget. "There won't be any tourism, property values will go to hell and taxes will go up sky-high."

Gregory said taxes from liquor sales provided $99,600 of the $443,500 collected from sales taxes in Nome in 1977 — 20.2 percent of the total.

In a compromise effort, two bar owners, a local minister and two other citizens have formed a committee to try to find ways to reduce alcohol abuse without banning it.

One of the bar owners is Greg Tabor, manager of the Anchor Tavern and president of the Nome Bar Owners' Association. "We've changed our hours, we're policing ourselves better," Tabor said.

Shaffer said he is encouraged by these efforts, but says that if no results are seen before October, "the chances of the petition passing are very high."

Connally ridicules Carter

DENVER (AP) — One-time Democrat John Connally, saying he has no plans to seek the Republican presidential nomination in 1980, has fired a broadside at President Carter, calling him inept, poorly advised, frequently misinformed and generally "not a good president."

Connally, in Denver to speak at a Colorado Republican function for persons who have given $1,000 or more to the GOP, met with newsmen Wednesday and accused Carter of believing "the siren sound of his voice would convince the Soviets to be good boys" about arms control.

Astro - Graph
 by Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
 May 26, 1978
 Your horizons will be greatly expanded this coming year and you are likely to attempt things you never dared to do before. You could even take that distant trip you've dreamed of.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 Someone presently separated from you by distance with whom you've neglected to stay in touch is worthy of a brief note or a phone call today. Find out who you're romantically suited to by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 You're a tough customer to deceive today. You don't take things at face value. However, if you catch someone telling a small fib, try not to embarrass him.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 Others find you an agreeable person today because of your strong desire to be cooperative. Each concession you make will be matched in return.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 Co-workers are likely to emulate your actions today because you'll handle yourself with such aplomb. You'll know what needs doing and how to do it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 You absorb knowledge quicker than usual today. You're especially adroit at picking up pointers from people you encounter face-to-face.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 The results you're hoping for today should work out, yet it would be wise to leave nothing to chance. Keep your hand on the tiller at all times.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 Sunshine will filter in today to several cloudy situations. This will be due more to the efforts of others than to yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Your material prospects look encouraging today, especially where you offer your expertise or services. Rewards will be proportionate to your productivity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
 You place a great deal of emphasis on personal interests today, yet you'll do so in a way to gain needed support without ruffling anyone's feathers.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 Making those you love happy is likely to be your priority project today. You'll find selflessness is compensation in itself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 This is a good day to launch new projects, especially if it's a venture where a close pal is involved. Be the one who kicks things off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Dealings today with persons who can do you good where your status is concerned should work out, and make you feel more secure.

Pilot shoots would-be hijacker

MARION, Ill. (AP) — A former Vietnam combat pilot wrestled a gun from a would-be hijacker and shot her to death while his helicopter reeled out of control 600 feet above the ground near the U.S. penitentiary at Marion.

Wednesday night in an exercise yard at the maximum-security prison where some of America's most dangerous criminals are confined.

He quoted her as saying they would be carrying off three convicts.

Celebrities fete Hope on 75th birthday

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Bob Hope's 75th birthday party attracted so many celebrities Wednesday night that comedian Mark Russell quipped, "Somewhere in Hollywood tonight there are two tourists from Alexandria wondering where all the stars are."

Elizabeth Taylor Warner called him "one of the most unique people in the whole world."

Hope and his wife of 44 years, Dolores, are in Washington for a series of birthday tributes including a Kennedy Center gala to be held Thursday night for the United Service Organizations. A tape of the gala will be televised May 29, which is Hope's actual birth date.

They came from Hollywood and elsewhere to celebrate at a noisy, happy party held in a local restaurant owned by a Hope relative. Earlier in the evening, Hope was honored by President Carter at a White House reception.

But Wednesday night the stars stepped out of limousines as hundreds of local residents stood in front of Peter's Restaurant, owned by Peter Malatesta, in this Washington suburb community. Malatesta is Mrs. Hope's nephew and a former aide to former Vice President Spiro Agnew.

"I love him dearly," Dorothy Lamour said at the party. "That's why I'm here."

"I'd go any place for Robert," said Lucille Ball.

Circulating among the 200 guests were actor Elliott Gould, singer Mac Davis, comedienne Phyllis Diller, retired Gen. Omar Bradley, former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford and retired Gen. William Westmoreland, who once commanded U.S. forces in Vietnam. Hope is famous for his Christmas season tours of American military bases overseas.

about 35 miles beyond the prison, which is about 90 miles by air southeast of St. Louis.

Some 30 to 40 minutes into the flight, he said, she pulled a .44-caliber pistol and ordered him to fly to the prison.

Less than three miles from the prison, Barklage saw his chance.

"She was trying to open the doors and she switched her weapon from her left hand to her right hand," he said. "She put her finger on the trigger guard and not on the trigger."

"I let go of the helicopter controls and let it do whatever it wanted," he said. "I grabbed for the gun and we had a 10- or 15-second struggle."

The Bell Jetranger II helicopter was pitching and turning wildly, he said. It was so erratic, "that I shot four times — shot all five times but one missed — and I only hit her once. And she was only two feet away from me."

Barklage righted the aircraft and set it down about 70 feet from the entrance to the prison administration building, which is linked by barred doors and a hallway to the main prison.

Leaving the helicopter with the dead woman slumped over the back seat, a bullet wound in her head, the pilot bolted for the administration building.

"I started running around looking for a guard. That was a mistake. The guards almost shot me because they didn't know what was going on," he said.

The FBI, which took over the investigation, refused to allow prison authorities to identify the convicts who were to be replaced out of the exercise yard. The yard was in use by other inmates at the time as part of the normal institution routine.

"It was related to me that one of the subjects either had on an orange or yellow-type jacket of some sort which would be easy to identify from the air," said warden George Wilkinson, who was attending a meeting in St. Louis when the drama unfolded.

Wilkinson said no charges were filed against the three men but they were separated from other prisoners.

Ronald Beal, a prison spokesman, said one of the trio was serving a prison term for hijacking an aircraft, another had been convicted of air piracy and the third was in prison for bank robbery.

House resolution will "do the job"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski didn't get what he wanted, but he says a watered-down threat to cut off U.S. economic aid to South Korea will "do the job," in getting testimony from a former ambassador about cash payoffs to congressmen.

Jaworski, special counsel for the House ethics committee, made that assessment after the House International Relations Committee voted 31-0 on Wednesday for a resolution that warns rather than promises to cut off aid if South Korea does not allow former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, to testify under oath to House investigators.

In Seoul, the resolution was criticized by both the ruling and opposition parties. The ruling Democratic Republican Party expressed "disappointment and indignation" at the "irrational pressure and threat" and said the resolution was a violation of an international agreement on diplomatic immunity. The opposition New Democratic Party said it regretted the passage of the resolution.

Jaworski reportedly told ethics committee members he has classified information that eight or more current House members may have received envelopes stuffed with $100 bills from the former ambassador.

Members said Jaworski told them at a meeting last week he could not release the names of the congressmen or the source of his information.

Jaworski would not talk about a report by the Cleveland

Plain Dealer, was intercepted by a U.S. intelligence agency.

Jaworski refused to comment on his information in a telephone interview except to indicate that the only ethics committee people who know its source are himself and two staff people.

"It'll do the job," Jaworski said of the committee resolution. "If the South Korean government does not respond favorably to the resolution, they would not have responded to the one we proposed."

Jaworski, House leaders and the ethics committee had asked for a simple threat not to approve any more economic aid for Seoul until the former ambassador answers the investigators' questions under oath.

News watch

HOUSTON (AP) — Space agency engineers are developing containers to house animals for surgical experimentation onboard what could be the forerunner of a space age Noah's Ark, a Johnson Space Center engineer says.

Cletis Booher, an engineer in the Life Sciences Project Division, said Wednesday that the experiments may include checking the effects of weightlessness on animal tissue. The preliminary containers would house up to three dozen rats, and later larger animals.

WELLINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Field trips in Lois Norton's class include visits to a funeral home, cemetery, mausoleum and crematory. The class is on thanatology — death and dying.

Mrs. Norton, an English teacher at Wellington High School, also is a licensed funeral director. About 20 juniors and seniors take her course.

HOUSTON (AP) — A task force representing 25 Mexican-American organizations has been formed to improve conditions in the Hispanic neighborhoods of the nation's fifth largest city.

Eduardo Lopez, a spokesman for the group, said Wednesday that the task force would attempt to try to find solutions to problems such as drug abuse, increasing crime, inadequate recreational facilities, poor education, unemployment and police abuse. The Mexican-American community makes up about 13 percent of the city's 1.7 million residents.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — County commissioners are trying to sidetrack a plan for a national advertising campaign to draw homosexuals to a newly refurbished, downtown hotel.

Kenneth Bray, owner of the Grand Central Hotel, said he plans to have a disco, lounges and boutiques in the 112-room hotel. But Orange County Commission Chairman Lamar Thomas wrote Mayor Carl Langford to express concern and offer county assistance "in discouraging this distasteful operation."

NEW YORK (AP) — A parade to commemorate the 95th anniversary of the city's founding will be held on Monday.

anniversary of the Brooklyn Bridge was rained out, so celebrants moved indoors to sing "Happy Birthday" to the world-famous structure.

About 100 people gathered in Brooklyn's Borough Hall on Wednesday to hear Borough President Howard Golden talk about the historical significance of the bridge, which opened to horse-carriage and foot traffic on May 24, 1883. These days, about 100,000 people cross the 6,016-foot span daily, most in automobiles and buses that carry them to and from jobs in Manhattan.

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Police raided a tea house and rescued 33 young girls who said they were sold by their parents and forced to work as prostitutes, authorities reported today.

Police said they went to the tea house Wednesday after workmen spotted the girls signaling for help from a window.

TOKYO (AP) — Police said they arrested 856 gangsters and seized 803 weapons in raids on 15 houses today.

Police said the raids were part of a campaign against underground organizations. Among the weapons were 145 Japanese swords, submachine guns, rifles and handguns.

SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD

... with a business of his own!

We'd like for you to meet the Executive Officer of a thriving business... the boy who delivers your daily newspaper. As the owner and operator of his newspaper route, this Junior Independent Merchant must solve problems and shoulder responsibilities, just like all other businessmen. He buys his product, your newspaper, at wholesale and then retails it to his customers. He must make daily deliveries, do his own accounting, billing, and even struggle with a collection problem here and there. He is discovering, through actual experience, the rewards for promptness, dependability, self-reliance and initiative.

One of the rewards is his profit, the difference between the wholesale and retail prices of the paper. His route means money for a savings account for college, a new bicycle, a week in camp, many things. But he is earning even greater rewards. As he learns about sales and salesmanship, he is equipping himself for the future. From boys who learned the principles of business as newspaperboys have come presidents, governors, mayors, industrialists and professional men... those who determine the quality of our civilization in their generation. It's his world to conquer... and he's off to a good start.

If you have a son that you think might be interested in a newspaper route, why not write or phone us.
