A sticky situation

Local residents are finding the going a bit sticky in some sections of the city as above average rainfall has caused quagmires like this one in the 500 block of Finley. City Manager Mack Wofford said city trash collection is lagging behind schedule as city trucks are having tough tredding through Pampa alleys. ROME (AP) — Scores of doctors declared themselves "conscientious objectors" to this Roman Catholic nation's first abortion law as it took effect today, denounced by the church and facing the possibility of a repeal referendum.

Voters in eight states pick candidates today, but no officeseekers are involved in the contest of most interest - the vote by Californians that could drastically reduce their property taxes.

Besides California, balloting is under way in Iowa, Mississippi, Montana, New Jersey, New Mexico, Ohio and South Dakota

Several primary races involve public personalities basketball star Bill Bradley's race for the U.S Senate in New Jersey and Wayne Hays' comeback attempt in Ohio are two. The Jarvis plan has played a role in the four-man Republican gubernatorial primary. Attorney General Evelle Younger and former Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis, the front-runners, both support it. Assemblyman Ken Maddy's fast-starting campaign leveled off after he came out in opposition and San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, running last in most polls, is also against it.

The government for some time has toyed with lifting the gas price ceiling. President Gerald R. Ford sent to Congress a similar decontrol proposal on his last day as president. But President Carter withdrew the proposal and ordered it to be further studied.

Carter promises to back western water projects

ident Carter, who last year infuriated Western governors by attempting to kill 30 federal water projects, today promised to back an unspecified number of new projects.

The new projects were part of the administration's announcement of a new federal water policy designed to give Western governors greater influence over dams and irrigation projects in their states.

Carter proposed that states pay from 5 percent to 20 percent of the cost of federal water projects. This would be the first time that the states would pick up a portion of the cost, financed almost exclusively by federal taxpavers.

But the administration's proposal also would permit governors and legislatures to "vote with their dollars" for projects they favor, an idea the governors themselves have endorsed.

Carter also promised to propose to Congress starting construction or planning on an unspecified number of new proj-

'This is the first time the Executive Branch has proposed new water project starts since fiscal year 1975, four years ago," Carter said in a message to Congress announcing the new water policy.

The new policy is aimed in part at controlling some of the political damage that Carter caused himself in the watershort West last year through his effort to kill 30 politically popular water projects. The 30 the cost of water projects for public comment into Noprojects became known as Carter's "hit list," and Congress forced him to restore most of

The president's broad new policy also:

-Put new emphasis on saving water where it is scarce. "Using water more efficiently is often cheaper and less damaging to the environment than developing additional supplies." the president said.

-Directed the government to draft new rules that would make it more difficult to justify new water projects through a number of changes, including more stringent analysis of the benefits claimed for them

 Directed the interior secretary to begin charging more. when possible under existing authority, for water which the government now sells at bargain rates to many irrigators and other users. In the Central Valey of California, the federal government sells irrigation water to farmers for as little as $3.50 per acre-foot, while the state sells water nearby for $22

The cost-sharing proposal would require states to share costs of all new projects. It would give them the option of winning expedited consideration of projects which Congress has approved but not funded. There are more than 800 such projects now on the books, some of them approved as long as 30 years ago

Proposition 13 is strongly supported by homeowners, because would slash the average annual property tax bill from $1. 400 to $600. It also would mean enormous tax savings for some of California's biggest landowners, the public utilities. Three companies alone - Pacific Telephone, Pacific Gas & Electric and Southern California Edision - would get a combined tax cut of $280 million.

But because the tax cut would reduce property tax revenue for cities, counties and schools from $12, billion to $5 billion annually, the issue has been critized by many labor and business leaders.

Filibuster imminent over federal natural gas price controls

HOUSTON (AP) - Senator John Tower says a filibuster is possible against the House-Senate confrence committee compromise that would extend federal natural gas price controls to intrastate markets.

The Texas Republican told the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners convention Monday he would join such a fight if a filibuster becomes feasible

"An extended educational dialogue on the subject would see unlikely allies getting together, some for the wrong reasons, some for the right reasons," Tower said

Senator Bennett Johnston D-La., a member of the conference committee, earlier had told the independents he thought a filibuster could be overcome but that defeat of the compromise would merely delay extending the controls to intrastate prices.

"If the bill is defeated, we will have intrastate gas regulation before the spring of next year because Congress will react by passing intrastate controls, supply allocation, and the works," Johnston said.

Policy committees of the trade group placed no recommendation before the convention to endorse or oppose the compromise. Instead, it was suggested the association merely reaffirm its support of natural gas price deregulation and opposition to intrastate controls.

Final action on the matter was postponed until today's concluding session of the threeday meeting. Floor discussions Monday in

On to Waterloo

Joseph Califano Jr., perhaps the most Napoleonic of the President's aides, recently offered some public musings about future problems of the aged and future ways to expand his HEW domain.

His address, to the American Academy of Political and Social Science in Philadelphia, attacked the no-growth ethic as a threat to the elderly, and for that he deserves praise. Unfortunately, the rest of the speech was a no-growth prescription.

In particular, the Secretary wondered out loud if the American future will have room for private pension funds. "Do we wish to continue to encourage the cration of this layer on top of Social Security?" he asked. Why not remove tax benefits for private pensions and use the revenues to expand Social Security? Mr. Califano was only asking, you understand, but it was not hard to follow the train of thought.

As it happens, the Social Security amendments adopted last year, calling for some $227 billion in additional payroll taxes over the next 10 years, may already be sufficient to badly damage the private pension system, without any further tax changes. As taxes and benefits go up, and given the stringent requirements of the Employe Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA), there will be an increasing disincentive for private pension

Will that be good for the country? The answer, if Mr. Califano really wants one, is no. The Secretary suggested that the private pension system is unsound by mentioning that private programs have unfunded liabilities of some $200 billion. In fact, a study by pension experts Kenneth K Keene and Sandra M. Kazinetz published recently in Pensions and Investments shows private plans to be surprisingly well funded, with 30.7 percent of the major companies surveyed having no unfunded vested liabilities at all. A broader study last year by Investors Management Sciences Inc., showed that the average company could pay off its unfunded liability with just three months of pretax earnings.

Security, which Mr. Califano calls "probably the grandest and most successful social experiment of our age." He told his audience that the recent tax increases will "ensure the fiscal integrity of the Social Security System into the next century" another 22 years. Yet the system is promising workers who will retire and collect benefits over the next 75 years some $3.4 trillion more than it can deliver at resent tax rates. That means future Congresses will either have to boost taxes further or cut benefits further, or both, further tarnishing the grandeur

Contrast that with Social

Mr. Califano contemplates. Future federal, state and local administrations also will have to face up to as much as $700 billion in unfunded public employe pension liabilities.

By suggesting that unfunded government income transfers be substituted for funded private pension plans, Mr. Califano was we hope unconsciously proposing a two - pronged lunge at the heart of the economy the capital supply By destroying private pension funds he would wipe out a major source of investment in corporate securities. And by further expanding Social Security, he would add o the alread huge claims of government tax collectors on the future earnings of business, thus discouraging investment in income - earning assets, such as corporate stocks. Stock prices already suffer badly from this disability, as does the ability of the economy to create new jobs.

Mr. Califano, who already commands a budget far larger than that of either Napoleonic or post - Napoleonic France, is not the first man to dream of a vaster empire. Unfortunately, the victim of his conquests would be his own country.

The Secretary told his Philadelphia audience that a 'no-growth policy for America is a no-win policy." It's too bad he doesn't have some better ideas for avoiding the economic

The winter wheat crop, which generally accounts for abot three-fourths of the total U.S. wheat production, was planted last fall and harvesting recently began in Texas and some states in the Deep South. The Agriculture Department early last month estimated the winter wheat crop at 1.28 billion bushels, off 16 percent from the 1.53-billion-bushel harvest in 1977. The farm agency is scheduled to release a revised forecast this Friday.

Your money's worth Profile of the timid U.S. investor, mid-1978 Sylvia Porter

Is the following an accurate profile of you - manager of your family's (or you own) finances in mid-1978? As the 1975-78 expansion reaches a treacherous late middle-age, the overall stock market remains way below its peak of a full decade ago, interest rates climb to dep essingly high levels and inflation accelerates, do you:

Deeply resist taking risks with your money and become more and more preoccupied with preserving your capital? Fear inflation, expect it to worsen and increasingly worry about maintaining your own dollar's buying power? Adopt a cool attitude toward buying stocks, not because you anticipate a business downturn, but because you are unwilling to assume what you perceive as even "moderate" risks?

Nevertheless, still investing is important and don't have a "live for today" attitude?

If this is indeed you, then you are a typical American financial decision-maker in 1978 according to an Opinion Research Corp. survey of public attitudes toward investment, conducted for the New York Stock Exchange and released today. The survey findings are applicable to 61 percent of all U.s. households.

Among its most significant disclosures to me was that if you have a household income of $10,000 or (middle-class) you now value income over potential gains - and preservation of your capital and purchasing power above all else. And this theme dominates the entire American scene. Even though most of you are not pessimistic about the future and on the contrary expect business profits to climb in the next few years (perhaps sharply), you don't plan to participate in these profits through ownership of common stocks. Your financial goals are modest, defensive, and your preferred investments are insurance, passbook savings accounts, a home, U.S. savings bonds, employee savings plans. Savings certificates rank sixth. Way down in ninth place are listed common stocks!

Less than half of all you are still intent on long-term capital gains; less than a third of you are tempted by short-term profits; a mere 27 percent of you are intent on accumulating money for large purchases.

Inflation's impact on you has been deep and bitter. Now, your key goals are keeping up with climbing living costs, protecting your family, providing an estate - and that attitude crosses all age groups, all income brackets. Inflation has so viciously undermined your confidence that you shrink from any risk-taking.

Yet, your very avoidance of risk-taking could ultimately turn out to be your riskiest choice if inflation continues to erode the buying power of our dollars as in the recent past. What does all this really mean to you and me and policymakers in finance as well as in the White House and Congress? First, any lingering doubts that inflation is our basic evil should now be wiped out completely. This is the No. 1 challenge of the 20th century as it draws to a close. We must tackle it with new and bold ideas. We must vow to conquer it and NOW!

Second, your lack of investment knowledge, and what are or are not risks, is abysmal - reflecting a failure among financial leaders to provide you with appropriate educational tools and your own failure to try to understand what are the relative risks and rewards of different types of investment mediums. This vacuum in the financial sphere must be filled and this clearly calls for broadly based educational programs designed to give you the basic knowledge you must have for your own protection as well as the survival of our unique private enterprise system.

Third, your indifference to investing in stock calls for changes in our tax laws to encourage you to take a more positive view - such as more liberal tax treatment of capital gains and losses, elimination of double taxation of dividends, etc. instead of the harsher treatment being recommended under the guise of tax reform. Our equity capital plays a critical role in our economic growth, technological advances, more job opportunities.

This is, in sum, a profoundly disturbing profile of you in mis-1978. Our greatness as a nation was founded on our willingness to take reasonable risks to gain worthwhile rewards. If we shift to the economic timidity that this survey underlines, we ourselves will be destroying the system we profess to love so much.

A long way to go

By D.R. SEGAL The only thing I know much about is eating, having done it for a long time and under every conceivable circumstance; and it has been the tragedy of my eating career that so much of my best work was done in the old skillet - oriented South. For years Southern cooks fried everything that couldn't out run them, the undoubted winners of the Super Ulcer Bowl. Many Southern boys had to go to school up nawth to find out that steaks could be broiled and so could pork chops. Honest! It was a revelation.

A turn for the better In the past 20 years or so, Southern cuisine has taken a turn for the better. Almost everybody broils steaks now. One reason is education and the other is that cattlemen feed their stock some kind of sissy hormones that turn a steer into a suitable for broiling. You don't have to cut meat thin as paper and fry it any more. It's 'tenderized.'

But as soon as we figured out that meat could be prepared by means other than incineration, we turned our talents to vegetables. We'd done okay with okra and corn and beans and peas. We simply boiled hell out of them and served the resultant glop as filler material so's the plate wouldn't look so empty. I submit that you cannot overcook blackeyed peas or corn. But then we discovered fancier and, alas, more fragile vegetables like Brussels sprouts and asparagus.

Now these two are not hardy, imperishable cellulose. They take meager cooking, preferable steaming, and they demand to be served when firm and half alive. There is nothing mushy mound of soft beefsteak, much worse than Brussels sprouts which have been stewed. They turn into a sort of gelid green glue. Asparagus which has been boiled like an old sheet in an iron kettle gives up altogether and collapses into a despondentsemi - solid.

> I recently have treated myself to doses of these two vegetables at local cafeterias and there is nothing remotely resembling them unless it is broccoli which has been boiled out of its skull.

Guilty knowledge Cafeteria people seem to have a guilty knowledge that they have destroyed broccoli and Brussels sprouts by putting them in the steam sterilizer, so they in undate the remains in a pale yellow mess completely devoid of taste, which they falsely identify as hollandaise sauce. It is so unreservedly awful you forget how rotten the stuff under it is, so I suppose it serves its purpose. I am only just now recovering from what was billed in a buffet luncheon as Brussels sprouts and I think they'd better stick with the black-eyed peas and corn for a while longer. We've come a long way, baby, from the skillet but we still have a way to go with the steamer.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coveting Commandment.

and it can turn to shooting. Over the last 26 years, most of the major maritime nations have extended their fishing zones, usually to 200 miles. What they created is a new system for conserving the fish off their shores - and a host of problems. A U.S. fisheries official, William G. Gordon, predicted trouble between the United States and Canada in 1976, as the two adjacent nations readied 200-mile fishing zones. Even then, the neighbors were finding it difficult to pick a dividing line, particularly off the intricate East Coast.

"I think this can be resolved, but not necessarily without considerable pain," Gordon said then. "It's a very crucial issue because the fish out there don't understand where that political boundary is."

Now, after two years of temporary treaties, Canada has cut off the interim pacts and barred U.S. fishermen from its waters. Washington has retaliated by closing its waters to Canadian fishermen. Starting Monday, fishermen who stray into the wrong waters could be arrested All this recalls other recent British trawlers kept returning and trouble continued. By 1975, Iceland had a 200-mile limit and its gunboats were cutting away British nets. Three Royal Navy warships were sent in and became involved in collisions with Icelandic gunboats. At one point, the Icelanders fired at a trawler, but nobody was hurt. By then however, foreign vessels were overfishing off the U.S. coast, and Washington was changing its position, too. The new hope was that the U.N. Law of the Sea Conference would write a 200-mile treaty for all nations. But the conference failed, and U.S. fishermen were howling that foreign fleets were raiding their waters.

The U.S. limit took effect last March 1 - and a Soviet ship was boarded and warned about violations the first day.

Postal workers say

U.S. attorney's office has asked that bond of $1 million each be set for two Colombians arrested in a $15 million cocaine smuggling attempt - which resulted in the largest cocaine seizure in local history.

Three Equadorian seamen arrested in that case were assessed bonds of $250,000 apiece by U.S. Magistrate Ingard Johannesen Agents seized 28 pounds of highly refined cocaine, the Drug Enforcement Administration said Monday. The five were arrested without incident after an undercover agent picked up 12 packages of the drug at a ship docked in New Orleans, agents said.

In a separate case heard Monday, Johannesen set bonds of $100,000 for three men arrested on a shrimp boat loaded with 35 tons of marijuana valued at $24 million.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in reference to the letter from the young girl who said that her foster father had been making advances toward her. You advised her to tell her foster mother at once!

Abby, I know you meant well, but I have learned after many years of experience as a child protection worker in a public welfare agency that telling the mother is useless. In most cases, the mother would think the child is lying.

And in other cases, if the girl is believed, the mother will refuse to bring charges against her husband for fear of the family's reputation and what the law might do to her husband. Then, too, if he's sent to prison, her breadwinner is gone! So she resolves all this by pronouncing the girl a liar and ingrate.

I would recommend that the girl tell her social worker or school counselor. They are trained to help the girl and her foster family.

N.Y. SOCIAL WORKER

DEAR SOCIAL WORKER: Whether she is believed or not, I still think it is imperative that the child tell her foster mother first. Then, if the situation doesn't improve, I always advise the child to seek help from a trusted teacher, adult relative, school counselor, clergyman or neighbor. Otherwise, when the father is confronted, the mother will know that the child has gone to "outsiders"—instead of coming to her—which could create even more difficulties in the home.

DEAR ABBY: What is your opinion of a woman who would take a job as a "housekeeper" for a single man? Part of the deal is that the housekeeper has to LIVE on the

DEAR ABBY: Some new neighbors moved into our area, and we share a two-party line. Abby, this woman speaks as good English as I—I have heard her. But when she talks on the phone she always speak a foreign language! I consider this an insult to me. What do you think of a neighbor like this?

INSULTED IN PENNA.

DEAR INSULTED: She's smart. She speaks a foreign language because she suspects that someone may be listening. And obviously she's right!

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I read in your column about Tagamet being available in the United States. My son is 24 years old and has had a duodenal ulcer for at least four years. I suppose because he is a worrier (inherited from me). He is an accountant and just finished getting his masters degree. Is his ulcer the same as a peptic ulcer?

I would appreciate it if you would send me some information about this new treatment

DEAR READER -Tagamet, also known as cimetidine, is being used extensively in the treatment of peptic ulcer. By the way duodenal ulcers are one form of peptic ulcer. A peptic ulcer can occur in either the duodenum, which is the first part of the intestine just outside the stomach, or inside the stomach itself. Most ulcers, even if they are called stomach ulcers, are really duodenal ulcers.

Tagamet has a different action from antacids. Basically it inhibits the stomach's ability to form excess amounts of acid rather than neutralizing the overproduc-tion of acids. It was used extensively in England before it was approved in this country and received good reviews there.

I'm certain that your son's doctor knows all about it since Tagamet has been the subject of a heavy promo-tional campaign both in the lay and medical press. In fact I have seldom seen a medicine given so much promotion and publicity. Perhaps because of this it received unusually rapid ap-proval from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Ordinarily the FDA is rather cautious about approving new medicines until they have been completely evaluated by scientists in the United States.

While it appears that the drug has a very good place in medicine and probably has few side effects, there have been a few warnings. One of these is a suggestion by a Baltimore physician that Tagamet might affect the bone marrow and its ability to produce blood cells. This was discounted by the pharmaceutical firm marketing Tagamet.

However, the doctor's suggestion as published in Lancet Medical Journal raises some questions about how thoroughly the adverse effects of Tagamet have been studied. An earlier question about Tagamet concerned its role in the cause of tumors in rats. However, this data was reviewed by the FDA before they approved the drug for public use. It has also been reported in Lancet that Tagamet was ineffective in stopping bleeding, a complication of peptic ulcers.

I am a bit concerned about the way many medicines produced by drug compa-nies are studied before marketing. Often the scientists and laboratories involved are not totally without bias as often they are investigators one way or another for the drug company involved. I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-5, Ulcers: Duodenal, Stomach, which will give you the basic information about ulcers. Others who are interested in this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, selfaddressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspa-per, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY

Tagamet or other medicines are not a substitute for proper living which is essential to the management of all peptic ulcer cases. That in-cludes removal of stress and the eliminations of ulcerogenic habits such as the use of coffee, alcohol and smoking cigarettes.

Your Personal MONEY Management

If you're one of millions of Americans who will buy a new car this year, you'll welcome these important Do's and Don't's from the Consumer Credit Institute, a counseling service of consumer finance companies.

DO decide on the maximum price you can afford for a new car and how you intend to pay for it. If you intend to borrow, borrow only as much as you need to make the purchase. Contact a reliable lender, such as a sales finance company, for your automotive loan.

DON'T buy without checking with friends regarding each dealer's reputation for fair dealing, dependable service, honoring of warranties and additional conveniences offered.

DO buy a new car during the best car-buying seasons: Late summer-early fall, just before next year's models roll in or during sluggish winter months, when inventories are bulging.

Jogging; a growing s

Thousands of people have turned to jogging as an alternative to traditional exercise programs and the number of runners is still growing.

In 1974, the National Jogging Association had 3,500 members: last year, it had 10,000 members. Today, says Bernard L. Gladieux Jr., editor of the group's newsletter, "We've got 25,000 and we're going strong."

Jogging is an aerobic exercise. It requires the use of a lot of oxygen over a relatively long period of time. That helps put the circulatory system in

It is sometimes hard to tell where jogging ends and running begins. Most experts, however, agree that the main difference is speed. If you are going a mile in seven minutes or less, you're running. If it takes you more than seven minutes. you're jogging.

Jogging is NOT for everyone. If you are over 30, you should check with your doctor before you begin any exercise program. If you're over 40, take a treadmill test to make sure you're in shape.

Joggers can face several physical problems including pulled muscles, nerve irritation and shin splint, a tearing or stretching of the tendons which produces pain in the lower leg.

The most insidious problem of all," said Gladieux, "is the overuse syndrome." It strikes people who run too long, too the full length of the shoe. Soles fast and too often and occurs because the body tissues do not get enough rest. If you start suffering, consider changing your schedule. "Someone who runs seven miles every day might be better off running 15 miles every other day," Gla-dieux said. You also can lessen your chance of trouble by doing a series of long, slow stretches before and after you jog.

The only equipment you need for jogging is a pair of shoes, although many people buy special clothing as well. You don't necessarily have to spend a lot of money; the jogging association recommends a shoe that sells for just under $20. The main thing to remember. Gladieux said, is to get a shoe with plenty of cushioning in the heel. Look for shoes with soles of a tough outer layer of rubber and a softer mid-sole that runs

Tooth of the matter is, side-effects may result

CHICAGO (AP) - Marijuana and dental treatment don't mix. say two dental researchers who warn that marijuana users may suffer serious side-effects because of reactions to drugs, used in dental treatment

For that reason, they advise habitual marijuana smokers to abstain from use of the substance for a period before and after treatment

The reseachers review marijuana in relation to stress in dental treatment in the June issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association. They are Drs. Leonard G. Horowitz of the Eastman Dental Center in Rochester, N.Y., and Robert R. Nersasian of Tufts University school of dental medicine

They point out that about half of college-age Americans used marijuana in 1972, with 8 percent smoking it daily. And they say it is projected that 66 percent of young adults will use it

For this reason, they advise dentists, more young dental patients will be seeking elective or emergency dental treatment while under the influence of marijuana.

Marijuana, they say, "is a potent, pharmacologically active agent that could affect and complicate a dental procedure" and it needs further study as it relates to dental treatment.

They say it interferes with normal cardiovascular mechanisms and those responses involving the involuntary nervous

They caution that cross-reactions between the active chemical breakdown products of marijuana and drugs used in pain killers and as stimulants in dental treatment.

Patients who have used marijuana may develop irregular heartbeats and may experience drops in blood pressure to the point where they faint, Horowitz and Nersasian say.

The chemically active ingredients in marijuana alone are capable of inducing a number of abnormal responses involving the heart, lungs and blood vessels, as well as other physiologically dangerous

They cite a study that concluded medicines commonly used in dental treatment containing atropine or epinephrine in patients who use marijuana could intensify and prolong abnormally rapid heartbeats "for a dangerously long period of

Movement to cut taxes, bureaucracy is afoot

LAGUNA HILLS, Calif. (AP)

— Tax crusader Howard Jarvis says his initiative to cut California property taxes $7 billion a year will start a national movement to cut taxes and the power of bureaucrats.

'This amendment doesn't solve all the problems in the world, but it's going to send a message around the world," the 75-year-old tax gadfly told a cheering audience of 500 supporters Sunday in the affluent Orange County suburbs south of Los Angeles

"In the last few days I've talked to people (in radio interviews) in Michigan, Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Arizona and Utah, and they're going to introduce this amen-

The polls say the vote in Tuesday's primary election will be between 55 percent and 70 percent in favor of Jarvis' Proposition 13. In some suburbs where assessments have been raised recently, majorities of 4-

An Associated Press survey last week found property tax reform is an issue in 39 of the 50 states. Legislators in more than a dozen states already have acted on the issue, although the scope of the changes varies widely. Proposals include market value reassessments, rebates, exemptions for owner-occupied homes, help for the elderly and doing away with property taxes altogether.

The amendment, which Jarvis put on California's ballot by collecting 1.5 million voter signatures, would limit annual property taxes to 1 percent of market value. Currently, they range from less than 1 percent in some rural areas to almost 3 percent in some urban areas.

It also would roll back assessments to 1975 figures and then allow increases of no more than 2 percent a year except when property is sold. Assessments in some areas have doubled recently.

The effect of those limits property tax bill in California percent, or from $1,400 to $600 for the average California family, whose home is now appraised at about $60,000.

That would cut property taxes revenues for schools, cities and counties from $12 billion annually to $5 billion, and by some estimates it would require laying off 300,000 of California's 1.4 million state and local government workers.

Critics, led by Democratic Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., say the Jarvis initiative will cut government programs for the poor. But Brown, who faces a re-election campaign this year, says if that is the will of the people, he will carry it out without increasing other taxes.

"I will vote no on 13," he told a rally of Democratic supporters in Los Angeles on Sunday.

Cubs win 2-1 squeaker, Lemongello is ejected

AP Sports Writer CHICAGO (AP) - Mark Lemongello was furious and at first insisted "I'd better not say anything or I might never play baseball again.'

The 22-year-old Houston right-hander had been ejected from the game Monday by umpire Dutch Rennert for questioning a fourth-ball call to Gene Clines which loaded the bases in the ninth inning.

After Rennert gave Lemongello the thumb, Joe Sambito came in from the bullpen and vielded a run-scoring single to Ivan DeJesus which gave the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the Astros.

"He said he had warned me previously but he never said anything to me," fumed Lemongello. "All I did was take he threw me out. All I was go- ty well figure out what he was ing to do was ask him where the pitch was.

"I ask one question in a crucial situation and he throws me out of the game," said Lemongello. "I've never been kicked out of a game before. I know they're going to miss a call now and then but are they that great that you can't even question them?

Rennert, very calmly, explained, "The minute he charged off the mound was when he got ejected. It's automatic. It's in the rules. He had asked me about pitches earlier and I had signaled to him where they were. All pitchers do that.

"But when he shot off the mound, that was it," said Rennert. "he didn't have to say anything and if he had, I couldn't hear him over the roar of the crowd. But you can pret-

saying even if you have to be a lip-reader

Houston Manager Bill Virdon also was calm and said, "I think he (Rennert) missed the pitch. But the rules say you can't argue over a ball or strike call whether you are the pitcher, the batter or the man-

"I think Mark might have been asking him where the pitch was but the way he went about it was wrong," added Virdon. "It was a good game and it will bring the people back, I guess.

The Astros scored a run in the third on a double by Art Howe and a single by Terry Puhl and the Cubs tied it in the fifth when Manny Trillo singled for the first hit off Lemongello, went to second on a sacrifice and socred on Dave Rader's Cub ninth with a single and took second on a sacrifice. Jõe Wallis was given an intentional walk before Clines ran the count to 3-2 and took a walk on the questionable fourth ball to set the stage for DeJesus' winning blow.

It was a bit of deja vu for DeJesus, who also came up in the seventh inning with the bases loaded and one out only to hit into a double play.

"Everytime you come up it's new time at bat," said De-Jesus. "You can't worry about what you did before.'

The victory was the fouth straight for the first-place Cubs, who now have won 12 of their last 15 games and nine in a row at home. They close their Houston series Tuesday when they send Dave Roberts, 2-0, against Joaquin Andujar, 3-2.

For the Sonics, it's nothing new ation the Seattle SuperSonics fect. have faced before in National Basketball Association playoffs - being crushed by a foe on the road and needing a win at home to come back.

They were in a position to oust the 1977 NBA champion Portland Trail Blazers from the playoffs on April 30 in the Portland Coliseum, but lost by 24 points.

They could've finished off Denver in Game 5 of the semifinals in Denver on May 14 but the Sonics were never in it and trailed by as much as 18 points in that game.

In the case of Portland and Denver, the Sonics returned home and played near-flawless ball to win the NBA Western Division crown

On Sunday, the Sonics were beaten badly by Washington, 117-82, to tie the series. The b e s t-of-seven championship series is down to the final game, Wednesday night.

The Sonics consider Sunday's embarrassment a temporary setback, like 24-hour flu, that will go away.

"We'll have the advantage playing at home," said Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens. "And you can be sure we'll play better than we played Sunday. That was the worst game we've played in a long time and it's not going to happen again. We had nothing, but we were so bad, it's easy to snap out of a game like that.

"They've still got to win one more," said Sonics forward Paul Silas. "And ain't no way in hell they're going to do

"Maybe we needed this to bring out what kind of team we are." Hayes said. "In any case, they'll have to think about it. They'll have to think about a lot of things.

Bullets Coach Dick Motta went into Sunday's game with a last-minute change that helped - a lineup of one guard and four front-courtmen. It was a move of necessity because guard Kevin Gravey's sprained

The strategy confounded the Sonics, who shot 33.7 percent and were outrebounded 69-49

'We had used that alignment during the regular season. said Motta. "But we didn't practice it for this series. We decided to go with it at the last minute, because Gravey had spent some time in the hospital and his arm was so stiff. We hadn't practiced it before, but we will on Tuesday - and will probably mess it up.

Gibson named Amarillo coach

Sterling Gibson, formerly head basketball coach of Eastern New Mexico University, and for two seasons 1968-70) the coach of Pampa's basketball squad, has been appointed head coach of the Amarillo High School basketball program.

During his five year reign at ENMU, the Greyhounds managed a 53-74 record. They finished with a 13-7 performance last season.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) - Scotland's soccer team has saved itself from possible disqualification from the World Cup by sending home Willie Johnston, the star who took forbidden pep pills.

"I don't think we could take any action against Scotland now, since the Scottish football association itself has punished the player," said Helmut Kaeser, secretary general of the International Soccer Federation (FIFA)

"It was an exemplary decision by Scotland, and the most logical that we could have hoped for."

Johnston was ordered home Monday and told he would never be allowed to play for Scotland again. He admitted taking two pills before his team lost to Peru 3-1 in Group 4 of the tournament at Cordoba last Satur-

Doctors had reported traces of fencafamina a forbidden drug, in a urine sample taken from Johnston after the match. The World Cup organizing committee had the power to disqualify Scotland. But the Scots jumped in quickly, conducted their own investigation and dismissed Johnston.

Kaeser said that if Scotland had defeated Peru, and the doping offense had been proven. Peru would have been awarded the game.

"Scotland has taken the right measures against a player who could have done much harm to his team." Kaeser said

The doping discovery occurred after each of the 16 teams had completed one game. Already two Hungarian players had been ordered off the field at the end of a savage match against Argentina, so the image of the tournament is

The two teams concerned are the ones to suffer Scotland will miss Johnston's brilliance in attack as it tries to recover from the upset by Peru. Hungary was to face Italy in Group 1 today without Tibor Nyilasi and Andras Torocsik, who were ordered to stop suspensions after being expelled from the field against Argentina

Meanwhile, some lively attacking soccer was expected today as France, Hungary and Mexico sought desperately to win and redeem their bad starts. All needed victories to have any chance of advancing to the second round.

"I've really had a blow since this was dictated,' Harry Truman added on April 13, 1945 to a letter he had begun a day earlier.

'But I'll have to meet it." President Franklin Roosevelt, who had seemed a fixture of American life, had died in between. And so Harry Truman, a rather obscure politician from Missouri, who had been vice president barely three months, suddenly found himself catapulted into the most powerful job in the world. And it was at one of the most difficult moments in American history World War II was coming to an end and an unknown postwar world waited beyond the victory. Truman's reputation went through a series of ups, downs and ups. He barely won reelection in 1948. The national joke was "to err is Truman." At the end of his presidency, his approval rating in the Gallup Polls had dipped into the low 20s. Yet it would be no understatement today to point out that he is in the first rank of our national heroes. During the 1976 presidential election, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter fought over who was more in the Truman tradition. Both claimed Truman as their favorite president. Why this interest in Truman? Partly it is Truman's character, which has proved highly relevant, even healing, as we have sought to recover from Watergate. In addition, Truman was the first president to face the contemporary agenda of national and international problems.

Born into a Baptist family in 1884, Harry Truman had grown up in Independence, Mo., a few miles to the east of Kansas City. An unusual eye ailment, known as flat eyeballs, forced him to start wearing thick glasses at the age of 5, and so kept him out of boyhood games and turned him into a voracious reader

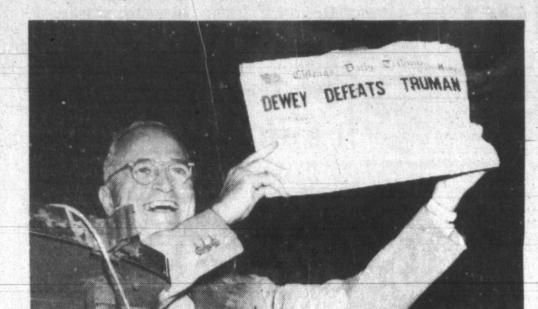

History became his lifelong love, in particular the biographies of great men military chronicles. Even as a practicing politician later in life, he would often be reading five or six books at once. He was a farmer until the age of 34, when he left the family farm to fight in France during World War I. After a brief postwar venture in business, as a haberdasher, he turned to politics. A loyal Democrat, he won election as a veteran's candidate to the administrative position of judge in Jackson County.

Thereafter, his course in many ways mirrored the changes in the Democratic Party in the 20th century. He came to the United States Senate in 1935, at age 50. Some thought, unfairly, that he was an errand boy for the Kansas City Democratic machine. National prominence came when he proved to be an effective chairman of a Senate committee that investigated defense industries during World War II. His experience had been broad, though in some ways limited. He was industrious, with a strong sense of duty and responsibility to the nation, but also with a temper, and without the patience of a negotiator. But Truman was "more learned and perceptive than even his admirers understood," Alonzo Hamby observed in his study of the Truman administration.

Truman's reverence for the office of the presidency bordered on the religious. He was awed and uncomfortable to find himself in it. He missed the easy amiability of his Senate life. "I am the lonesomest man in Washington," he confided not long after becoming president. "I have nothing to do but walk around here all by myself.

He had to battle to get on top of the job. Roosevelt had made little effort to inform him of the range of complex foreign and domestic issues. He stayed up late, reading as many as 30,000 words of memoranda a night. He told the director of the budget bureau that he was staying awake nights, worrying.

At the beginning of this decade, many people were concerned with the growth of what was becoming known as the Imperial Presidency under Johnson and Nixon. Truman provided a refreshing contrast.

There was clearly something attractive about a president who could offer this job description of the presidency for his daughter: To be a good president I fear a man can't be his own mentor. He can't live the Sermon on the Mount. He must be a Machiavelli, Louis XI of France, Caesar, Borgia, Talleyrand, a liar, double-crosser, and an unctious religio (Richelieu), a hero and a what-not to be successful. But I probably won't be.

thanks be to God. But I'm having a lot of fun trying the opposite approach. Maybe it

While Nixon established vacation palaces and contemplated dressing the White House guards in comic-opera uniforms, Truman had been plain and direct, reverent about the American institutions, content to spend his vacations in the family house in Independence. He made a point of not confusing himself with the position he occupied.

Truman was not the saint that would some have us believe. He was a pragmatic politician with an earthy vocabulary. The last years of his administration were tarnished by some minor scandals that were blown all out of proportion, and certainly did not involve him. The national politics of those years were corroded by McCarthyite hysteria.

But Truman remained, throughout his political life, a man of character, and simple virtues. "As long as I ave been in the White louse," he once explained, 'I can't help waking at 5 a.m. and hearing the old man at the foot of the stairs calling and telling me to get out and milk the cows.'

He did not leave the White House a rich man. And he did not have that obsessive drive for power and mastery over others that motivated some of his successors. Perhaps he was the sort who would never have made a run for the presidency on his own in the first place.

There is an irony in all of this. For Richard Nixon rose to sudden prominence in the late 1940s and then campaigned for the vice presidency in 1952 by attacking Truman for corruption and for being soft on commu-nism. Then, in the early 1970s, it was Nixon who was going to Peking and pursu-ing detente with the Soviet Union. And while the corruption of the Truman years in retrospect seems trivial and rather distant from the president, it was, in the Nixon years, a scandal of great dimension, involving the president himself.

What Truman has taught us, as we look back, is that it is possible for a good man to be president, to say what he means, to attempt to do what he says, and to resist the temptations and corruptions of the very great power of the presidency.

Family wants death probed despite report

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) -The Immigration and Naturalization Service has cleared its officers of wrongdoing in the recent death of a Weslaco woman - but an attorney for the woman's family wants the urts to look into the matter

INS officials started the investigation after the May 16 death of Maria Contreras, 36. The pregnant woman died of an apparent heart attack after she was stopped at the Progreso International Bridge.

"The investigation has revealed no impropriety or misconduct on the part of the officers," the report, issued here Monday by acting district director Perry Steele, said. "The investigation shows that the officers were acting in a normal and routine manner of investigation.

Steele's report states that the Contreras family was stopped for questioning when officers discovered an alien in their van. The alien and one family member were taken into the INS bridge office for questioning.

The family member and the alien "almost immediately admitted" the alien was carrying false identification, according to the report.

Mrs. Contreras entered the office and "became nervous and began to display phsycial distress with apparent nausea." the report states.

Steele said officers quickly called for an ambulance and Mrs. Contreras died in the ambulance a few blocks from an area hospital.

He said a justice of the peace indicated heart faulire was to be listed as the cause of death. No autposy was requested by civil authorities due to the absence of indication of foul play, according to the report.

However, Mrs. Contreras' family has said INS officers 'intimidated" the woman.

Attorney Jim Harrington representing the family, said monday he had prepared legal action on behalf of the survi-

Harrington said a suit mailed to federal court in Brownsville seeks $1.8 Million from the INS officer who questioned Mrs. Contreras.

The lawyer also said a tort claim was to be filed with INS Director Leonel Castillo.

No space man

Six-year-old David isn't dressing up in a spacesuit for a costume party. A victim of severe combined immune deficiency disease, he wears the NASA-developed mobile isolator system as protection from the germs his body cannot fight. Since the suit was delivered late last year, David has been able to explore his back yard for the first time, accompanied by his mother, 9-year-old sister Katherine and family dogs. (David's full name has not been released.)

New stamp could make us pennyless

The new 15-cent stamp for firstclass letters may 'soon make this country penniless.

The old bronze Lincoln penny can scarcely withstand another snub. The rarer Indian head, if any are still in circulation. awaits its final scalping. No more pennies pushed across the post office counter to send a letter by what used to be called the penny post. Now a dime and a nickel will do the job. And a dime will send a postcard; no pennies need apply. Sad. It was such a bright, promising coin.

A penny for your thoughts. offered Dean Swift, the satirical sage, when pennies and thoughts were worth more.

In my youth, only vesterday, you could buy a stick of gum or a tiny slab of chocolate on a subway platform for a penny, or, an even sounder investment, get yourself weighed and your fortune told.

On rainy days at the beach, you broke open your piggy banks to visit a marvellous institution called the penny arcade. For a penny you could play pinball machines, see a risque card-flip film, pop away in a shooting gallery, visit the flea circus, excavate gum balls and valuable prizes like a comb and fountain pen from the scoop derrick ma chine, race simulated racing cars, test your muscles and have your handwriting analyzed.

The penny tabloid, before it went up to two cents, was the bed rock of our free (in ideas)

'The penny-papers of New York do more to govern this country than the White House in Washington," thundered the reformer Wendell Phillips more than a century ago. About the same time, across the pond where the penny got its start, Lord Cecil asked on the floor of the House of Commons

"Can it be maintained that a person can learn anything worth knowing from a penny paper? It may be said that people may learn what is said is Parliament. Well, will that contribute to their education?"

Court deals union efforts blow

Supreme Court today left untouched a ruling that unions said could deal a severe blow to labor's efforts to organize and represent agricultural workers.

The justices refused to review a decision reached by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last December in a case involving East Coast apple pickers.

At issue was whether government officials may exclude as . unavailable for temporary work U.S. residents who seek from more benefits from agricultural level guaranteed by the govern-

Recruitment for apple pickers by East Coast growers occurs from April to July each year. In 1976 and 1977, as many as 5,000 Jamaicans were hired under a federal program allowing for importation of foreign workers if U.S. workers are "unavailable.

At the same time, from 2,000 to 4,000 Puerto Rican farm workers were ready to help pick the apples - but under Puerto Rican law the island's secretary of labor is barred

WASHINGTON (AP) - The employers than the minimum from releasing Puerto Rican residents for itinerant work for less benefits than a prescribed 'wage benefit package.'

That package averages out to about five cents an hour more per worker than the minimum required by the federal government. It includes provisions for three hot meals a day, an employer performance bond and non-occupational group health insurance for the workers.

Because the Puerto Rican workers were not willing to work for the compensation specified under certain federal regulations, the Labor Depart-from the "available" domestic work force when fixing a quota of foreign workers to be temporarily admitted. A group of Puerto Rican farm workers sued the government in late 1976, and in 1977 sought an injunction barring the Labor Department from excluding the workers. A federal trial judge issued the injunction. The 1st Circuit Court overturned it.

'If workers demanding more than the federal minimum level of benefits were included in the "available" work force under ment in 1976 excluded them federal regulations, the inclusion "would be used to re- contended that the Labor Dequire employers to meet whatever demands might be made by domestic workers," the appeals court ruled. In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the Puerto Rican workers argued: "This decision permits all agricultural employers to substitute temporary foreign workers for U.S. workers at wage rates and conditions lower than those sought by U.S. workers.'

They said the loss in pay to U.S. workers in 1977 was some partment's procedures are unconstitutional and illegal In a friend-of-the-court brief siding with the Puerto Rican workers, the United Farm Workers union said the government's program and recentcourt decisions "have paved the way for increased importation of temporary labor.
