board members and personnel of the local school district "should be thankful for the years he has been a part of the Pampa Independent School District." During the lengthy meeting at Carver Center, 321 W. Albert, the trustees voted to reject the single bid received on the vocational building trades house at 2230 Lea. The four bedroom house had been appraised at $53,460 and the lone bid, in the amount of $43,500, was nearly $10,000 below the appraisal.

In other action trustees approved payment of bills, including $42,585 to Wiley Hicks Jr. of Amarillo, general contractor on the Pampa Junior High School and other school construction projects now underway, as partial payment for work completed, and $15,642 to Brasher Goyette and Rapier, Lubbock architects on the project.

Review of the $7,012,756 budget for theyear ending Aug 31 showed that a total of $5,706,871 has been spent, including $688,134 during the past month, and another $62,255 is encumbered. Of the remaining $1,243,628, Phillips said "we are in shape on the budget. I feel we won't have any problems."

A written report of progress on the current school construction program was submitted by the architects and showed that while masonry work is three weeks behind schedule at the middle school library and classrooms and for the high school girl's dressing rooms, the work should be complete by the end of this week.

The roof structure and roof deck is slated for completion next week and finishing materials are to be delivered in July.

The report said that "unless there should be unforeseen delays, such as extended rain, this project should be ready for occupancy by Sept. 1."

'No impropriety' found in Tower-Park relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Adlai Stevenson says a Senate Ethics Committee investigating Korean businessman Tongsun Park and his dealings with senators has found "no impropriety" on the part of Republican Sen. John Tower. During a news conference Monday the Illinois Democrat who chairs the committee went on to compliment Texas' senior senator for cooperating with the investigation.

Sadat says Israel left occupied areas 'in air'

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat complained today that Israel "left things up in the air" in its reply to U.S. questions on the future of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

In his first public comment on the stand taken Sunday by Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government, Sadat told a meeting of top Egyptian political and legislative leaders Israel had been "non-positive and evasive."

Begin's Cabinet underlined its refusal to give back the West Bank and Gaza Strip, saying it sees limited self-rule — with a continuing Israeli military presence — as a permanent solution for the region's 1.1 million Palestinians. However, it offered to negotiate future sovereignty over the areas after five-years of interim autonomy.

Shot victims don't need negligence proof

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today that anyone who contracted a rare paralyzing disease after getting swine flu shots in 1976 will not have to prove negligence to collect federal compensation.

The action clears a major stumbling block in nearly one-third of the 1,483 claims that have been brought against the government for $775 million by persons or their survivors who claim they suffered injuries during the mass inoculation campaign.

Some 439 of these cases seeking $365 million in damages involve Guillain-Barre, a paralyzing disease that can be fatal.

Carter warns Russia about killer satellites

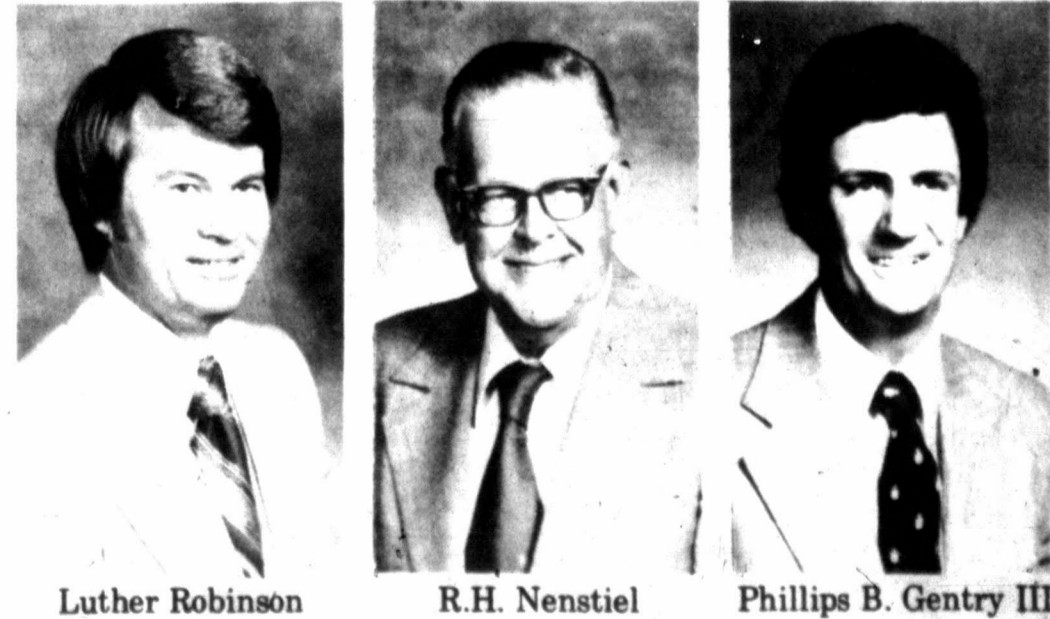

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is warning the Soviet Union that it must agree to a ban on killer satellites or the United States will not hesitate to escalate the arms race in space.

"We're the world's most technically advanced nation," an administration official said Monday. "We can achieve a system that is of higher quality and better than theirs."

He said he hoped the two countries would agree to curb anti-satellite systems before the superpowers engage in a new and "unhealthy" space arms race that could cost each nation billions of dollars.

First National makes three appointments

Three appointments to top positions at the First National Bank of Pampa have been announced by Floyd F. Watson, president. He said that vice president Luther Robinson has been named to the position of senior vice president. A finance graduate of Texas Tech, Robinson has been affiliated with First National since 1973. Also, First National named Phillips B. Gentry, III, as vice president filling the vacancy left by Robinson. Gentry holds a masters degree in finance from the University of Texas. Gentry, his wife Patricia Ann and their seven month old son will move to Pampa from Oklahoma City where he has been serving as National Bank Examiner since 1976. And long-time Pampa resident R.H. Nensiel has been appointed to First National's board of directors. Nensiel came to Pampa in 1938 and was the first certified public accountant in Gray County. He has served as auditor for First National since 1940. Nensiel and his wife Ruth reside at 1020 N. Russell.

Nothing charitable about big brother

Americans have long been noted for their tendency to assist other in time of need. Even now when so much of their income is being siphoned off to maintain and expand government welfare plans, they still donate to good causes.

There was 35 billion dollars donated to charitable groups last year by individuals and corporations. Individuals gave $29.5 billion and corporations $1.6 billion. This was just the recorded charitable gifts.

Gifts of time, effort and goods on a one-to-one basis, which goes on in thousands of ways in every hamlet and city, would probably add up to a staggering amount.

And all this goes in spite of the fact that government has been pouring more and more billions into its drone manufacturing projects, which come under the general heading of welfare.

Back about fifty years ago, before politicians began taxing citizens to sponsor institutionalized welfare programs, there was no dearth of real charitable effort on the part of individuals. Anyone who needed help to carry him over a rough spot and get him back on his feet could find many who were willing to help.

Even those who were prone to take advantage of their benefactor could get help — once. This was the effective control which kept charitable inclinations from perpetuating a situation which would produce drones on society.

People were always willing to help any deserving person as long as they deserved such help. When such a one no longer deserved help and failed to get it, his belly soon provided the incentive to help himself.

There is no such built-in control mechanism in the various "charitable" programs of the federal government. In fact, the incentives all lead in the opposite direction. Coupled with this is the human tendency for agency people to encourage the drone-making, since such action leads to bureaucracy growth which increases public career enhancement.

It is interesting to note that the $35 billion given in voluntary action was an increase of over 10 percent in 1977 over 1976. So even as taxes and other costs took more income, people responded to real need by a greater amount.

Also, it was shown that the most generous corporate givers were those in the petroleum industry (politicians who generate hatred for this industry, please note), second and third were the electrical equipment industry and the auto makers.

Those who promulgate the idea that only government can provide for people in the time of personal crisis fail to recognize some basic facts. First, the government has nothing to provide save that which is taken from all of us, either now or through debt, in the future. Second, Americans have a long history of aiding each other in time of real need without any compulsion.

Last, but not most important, when assistance is provided on as close to a one-to-one basis as is possible, the control of such aid is within sight of those who provide it. Only then can waste and the production of drones be held to a minimum.

The Big Brother approach we are seeing today leads only down the blind alley of a complete collective society where every American will suffer the greatest of all tragedies — the loss of personal freedom.

Is deregulation real?

Deregulation is becoming a byword among politicians seeking votes in their campaigns for office this year.

It seems that everyone is in favor of deregulation — except when it might involve them.

The move for deregulation is encouraging. It appears that there is still sentiment for a free marketplace. But while politicians espouse "deregulation" they turn right around and start to regulate the energy industry more strictly than in the past.

The call for deregulation of airlines is attractive to many. At the same time Gov. Jerry Brown calls for a public utilities commission to regulate hospitals.

In a real sense, there is very little left of the free marketplace in this country. Various economic sectors have become the captive of the business people that populate that sector. And they want to protect that sector and seek government regulation as their tool to keep out the competition.

Those in the real estate business are a good example. Many members of this fraternity call for freedom especially in the ownership of private property. They condemn moves to eliminate or change those rights.

At the same time, some members of this group call for stricter licensing requirements for those who want to enter the field. They call for tougher entrance requirements — more schooling and so forth. They say that doing this will bring a "better" qualified person into the field.

What licensing really accomplishes is to restrict the competition. If there was no law requiring license to sell real estate, then anyone could hang out his shingle and go into the business.

But, some say, "If that happens, then the buying public will get hurt because of unqualified sales people." Again — that is not an accurate statement.

If licensing, in some mysterious way, could guarantee proficiency, then licensing would be required for every type of business.

The licensing of real estate salespeople has not solved the problem. There are license holders who are highly qualified, and there are license holders who don't know how to calculate a sales transaction. If you don't believe this, just ask an escrow officer.

However, those favoring licensing, say that at least when an incompetent or crooked real estate salesperson comes on the scene, their license can be taken away and this will protect future buyers.

The history of licensing regulation doesn't show this to be true. How do you determine "incompetency"? It is a value judgment and what one person sees as incompetency, another ignores and uses different criteria for judgment.

Doctors are licensed. How many times have you heard horror stories about incompetent doctors who have seriously injured their patients — sometimes even causing the death of someone.

Attorneys are licensed. President Carter and Chief Justice Warren Burger have publicly exposed the problems in the ranks of attorneys.

If this is true, then why all the licensing? It is because the consumer has been sold a bill of goods. He is told that because he is buying a product of service from a licensed individual, he can rest assured that he will be treated "well."

He can trust that the licensed individual has met certain "minimum" requirements and can handle the job.

Many consumers have come to accept this as an act of faith, and blithely trot down the trail of misinformation.

Suddenly, the house he bought has a problem and the real estate salesperson denies any capability — or the doctor treats the patient for the wrong disease — or the attorney lets an important date slip by thereby denying his client redress.

The cosmetologist uses the wrong preparation and your hair turns the wrong color. Or the driver of the car in front of you does something "crazy" and you have an accident.

All of these people are licensed. But the licensing didn't prevent the disaster or trouble.

But the cost of licensing is paid by all of us. The millions of dollars that go into the process could well be used on productive things rather than keeping the competition out.

But some consumers will say — "How do I judge what the quality of the service to be performed? How will I know that the doctor is qualified to operate on me if there is no licensing?"

It will take work on your part. You will have to check qualifications of the person you are planning to do business with. You will have to check references provided by the seller.

Actually, most of these things are already recommended to the buyer. The old bromide of "buyer beware" is still valid.

An informed buyer can't be taken as easily and as an uninformed one.

Licensing provides a crutch for the lazy person. But the crutch has a way of breaking and causing more serious problem for the person using it.

Isn't it about time that all of us become responsible for what we do and quit looking to others to do it for us?

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, June 20, the 171st day of 1978. There are 194 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1867, President Andrew Johnson proclaimed the treaty for the purchase of Alaska from Russia.

On this date:

In 1632, the English Crown granted the colony of Maryland to Lord Baltimore.

In 1789, the French Revolution was beginning as the Third Estate defied the king and swore not to disperse until it had given France a new constitution.

In 1837, Victoria became Queen of England on the death of her uncle, King William IV.

In 1863, West Virginia became the 35th state to be admitted to the Union.

In 1898, the United States seized the island of Guam in the Spanish-American War.

In 1963, the United States and the Soviet Union agreed to establish a "hot line" communications system between Washington and Moscow to help prevent war.

Ten years ago: Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York launched a political attack against Richard Nixon, calling him a false prophet on the war in Vietnam.

Five years ago: Former dictator Juan Peron returned to Argentina, ending 18 years in exile. Twenty people were killed as violence broke out among the 1 million people who gathered to welcome him in Buenos Aires.

One year ago: Menahem Begin became Prime Minister of Israel and said his primary concern was prevention of war.

Today's birthdays: Playwright Lillian Hellman is 73 years old. Country music star Chet Atkins is 54. Thought for today: The only thing some people do is to grow older — Ed Howe, American writer, 1853-1937.

Civil Servants-Servants again

Your money's worth

Plain english trend progress

Sylvia Porter

Some of California's "civil servants" can't get used to the idea of being "servants" again.

They are so accustomed to throwing their weight around, demonstrating their arrogant authority, that they'd forgotten in this country they are not the government, we are!

What I'm about to say must be prefaced with some word of appreciation for the selfless employees of federal, state and local government who have worked hard, earned their salaries, performed their jobs well.

But they — the hard-working ones — must be more embarrassed than most of us when they see California's public service employees' unions pleading with that state's Supreme Court to outlaw Proposition 13 as "unconstitutional."

Soon, therefore, we can expect a court verdict on whether this really is a government "of, by and for the people."

Or whether it has become something less which some entrenched bureaucrats think they would prefer.

Only part of the public outrage is directed toward the size of recent property tax increases. Perhaps the larger part is directed toward the dictatorial tin gods often encountered by taxpayers when visiting City Hall or the County Building.

Farmers have seen "public servants" who don't know beans about farming intrude on their barns, barnyards and bookkeeping with arbitrary edicts. "Do it, this way or else!"

Taxpayers are fed up with picketing schoolteachers demanding higher and higher wages while delivering less and less education.

And the inexcusable waste and danger of cross-town school busing.

And with road repair crews growing at motorists as they tie up two lanes of traffic for half a day to put a shovelful of asphalt in a pothole.

That as their employers, we the taxpayers have earned more resentment than respect.

Taxpayers have seen featherbedding civil service employees daring anybody to fire them, government worker wages and pensions increasing higher and faster than anybody's, bureaucrats in HEW also collecting welfare checks on the side.

Government inspectors on the take. Food stamp recipients purchasing fancy foods that the rest of us can't afford.

This nationwide triggered June 6 in California is more than just resistance to high taxes — it includes resentment of the indignities and intimidation that taxpayers have had to take from public officials and employees who have tended to turn our representative republic into a bureaucratic dictatorship.

And the very idea that California's government workers and schoolteachers are now court-fighting for their right to continue riding the gravy train is the most certain evidence that mass firings are long overdue.

The "Dumb Electorate"

We hear reports from post-Jarvis California that state and local employees are going around grumbling about the "dumb electorate." In other words, the voters of California are so dumb they did not realize Proposition 13 would bring chaos to the state by collapsing revenues and forcing wholesale closings of vital public services.

On the other hand there is a report from the UCLA Graduate School of Management that the voters may not be so dumb after all.

Prior to June 6, a group of UCLA economists produced an elegant mathematical study, studded with eye-popping equations, that predicted passage of Prop 13 would mean the loss of 450,000 jobs, that unemployment would jump to 10 percent from 7.2 percent, and that it would further darken the business climate. Gov. Jerry Brown waved the study under the noses of the dumb electorate from one end of the state to the other.

After the voters had spoken, the economists went back to their equations. They plugged in some new ideas, and have now concluded that the net effect on the California economy will be "positive."

The new ideas that came to the economists resulted from the news that the state government, which has a $5 billion surplus, will be using that to ease the local revenue loss. It may have been that the voters of California knew of that $5 billion beforehand, and decided to plug it into their own electrical calculations.

We must say the UCLA economists deserve a round of rousing applause. In a cursory search of our files, we find this may be the first time in this century where an economist admitted error.

Gov. Brown deserves a cheer as well. Even before the UCLA economic model spit out its new findings, Mr. Brown was accepting as sound the judgment of the California electorate with not a hint of scorn for its collective intelligence. Our files show politicians acknowledging error from time to time, but that too is a relatively rare event.

The suicidal instinct

New Jersey, which consistently records one of the highest unemployment rates in the nation, also seems consistently intent on making matters worse.

It does this, for reasons unexplained and unexplainable, by trying to hold its minimum wage above the federal minimum. The effect is somewhat like serving notice on employers of unskilled labor to be out of the state by sundown.

The latest such effort, which has just passed the New Jersey senate and will soon go before the assembly, would put the state minimum 15 cents above the federal level.

That means as the federal minimum escalates as it will between now and 1981 under a 1977 law, the New Jersey minimum will remain 15 cents higher.

New Jersey labor leaders, who lobby for such things in order to jack up wage scales in the state, think this is dandy. Other states, along with Korea and Taiwan, who will inherit the jobs New Jersey loses, also think it is dandy. But we wonder how New Jersey senators can continue to wring their hands about the state's unemployment problems after passing such a bill.

New coping skills test covers everyday problems

By Science Research Associates

Americans today have more wealth, education, and leisure time than at any other time in the nation's history—but the ability of many persons to solve practical, everyday problems has declined.

This information comes from a special U.S. Commerce Department report titled "Social Indicators, 1976," released late in 1977. The report noted that although most Americans spend more time in school than their parents and grandparents did, their achievement as measured by test scores is not keeping up with their rising aspirations.

The report stated: — One out of every five Americans is seriously limited in the ability to function at everyday tasks. — An additional one-third of Americans function only at minimal standards of adequacy for dealing with everyday life; for example, they have problems completing income tax and insurance forms. — The median income of all families, after adjustment for inflation, is nearly double now compared with what it was in the late 1940s; for minority groups, it is nearly 2.4 times as large. — The amount of time spent on leisure activities increased 11 percent between 1965 and 1975, while time devoted to family care declined nearly 25 percent. Nearly one-half of Americans say television is their favorite pastime.

What does all this mean? In the light of this information, where are we as a nation headed? To analyze the situation, The Associated Press asked one of the nation's leading educational publishing houses, Science Research Associates, Inc., of Chicago, to develop a test that would help Americans assess their ability to cope with everyday problems.

SRA's senior consultant, Dr. Ralph Tyler, 76-year-old director emeritus of the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University and a leader in assessing the progress of American education more than 40 years, says information in the Commerce Department study is related.

Tyler, noting that achievement test scores have begun to push upward in the past several years, says they had been on the decline earlier because of the fact that many Americans are staying in school longer.

"Today's test scores include large numbers of people who, in previous years would have dropped out of school at an early age to go to work," Tyler said.

"Since today's scores include a much larger population than those from previous generations, it appears people are generally scoring much lower. But the fact is that the top 10 percent of students are achieving as well today as ever. — As for the ability to cope with everyday problems, schools have never been designed to provide a substitute for life experience and it would be unrealistic to expect them to do so. Schools are designed to teach intellectual skills and to open up for students important fields of knowledge. The ability to apply this knowledge to everyday life is best practiced through living—buying groceries, developing budgets, trying to find the best buys, etc. — "This is where Americans' increased income and their use of leisure time has made a big difference in their ability to cope with everyday problems," Tyler added. "For example, the American family now has the highest income in history and increasingly, it is being spent for recreation. — "Years ago, when less money was available, adults and children spent more time working around the house and in the community, and figuring out how to make their limited dollars go further. They were coping with life in a very real sense. — "Last year, the average American child spent 1,100 hours in school and 1,500 hours watching television," Tyler said.

Because Americans seem to need more practice at coping with life, The Associated Press asked SRA to develop a test that would enable Americans to assess their practical knowledge and to pinpoint specific trouble spots. The test, called the SRA Coping Skills Test, covers problems that arise as people try to earn a living, live within budgetary restrictions, maintain a home that is safe and comfortable, safeguard their health, protect their rights, deal with one another, and plan for the future. In short, it covers most areas that affect the quality of one's life.

The test has been divided into eight parts that will appear in this newspaper beginning tomorrow. Each segment of the SRA Coping Skills Test should take only about 20 minutes for you to complete. — "This test is designed to help people assess for themselves whether they possess—or know where to obtain—knowledge to meet commonly occurring demands of everyday life," Richard A. Giesen, president of SRA, said. "It's designed so that, even if you pick an incorrect answer, you will still have learned something. — "We feel the purpose of educational testing is to aid the learning process, not to sort people into categories that break down into 'winners' and 'losers,'" he said. "We hope that after taking the test, readers will feel motivated to seek ways to expand their skills and information—to improve their ability to think through problems critically. Then they may be able to select better courses of action in dealing with daily problems."

The first segment of the SRA Coping Skills Test deals with coping with the world of work. Succeeding installments will deal with one's knowledge of community resources, consumer economics, household management, health and safety, personal law, government, and a special category dealing with stress. All segments of the test can be self-scored, and a Coping Tally form will be printed each day to give you a convenient running account of your skill at dealing with everyday problems.

would not be willing to pay any extra for chicken or would balk if prices went up more than three cents a pound. — "On the whole, consumers have little concern about accurate net weights," the council said. "Respondents were asked if they believe the weight stated on chicken and chicken-part packages accurately reflects the weight of the contents, and 74.1 percent said yes. Just 23.9 percent said no. 1.2 percent had no answer, and 0.8 percent said they didn't know."

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman, in a recent speech to a food and nutrition conference here, said that "the weight expressed on the package should be, within a very small tolerance, the accurate drained weight" of the product when it is sold in stores. — "It seems such a basic piece of information that I am astounded it could be an issue," she said. "But it is." Ms. Foreman said that "the meat and poultry industry views our proposal as their armageddon or at least their ar-

Farm roundup

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. farm exports to African nations totaled more than $1.36 billion in calendar 1977, up almost 16 percent from 1976, the Agriculture Department said today. Wheat was the leading export dollar earner, totaling $388.3 million, followed by rice, $178 million; cottonseed oil, $120.9 million; and tallow, $106 million, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said in a weekly report. Ag officials in no hurry on regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is still months away from a decision on whether to require more accurate net weight information on packages of meat and poultry sold in grocery stores. — As proposed last Dec. 1, the regulation would require that net weight as stated on labels be the weight of the product when bought by consumers. Certain meats and poultry lose moisture during transportation and storage, sometimes resulting in products in containers being less than their indicated weights. — Meat and poultry processors have raised objections to many of the proposed changes in regulations, and there is some concern within USDA itself that, if rigidly drawn, the rules could mean somewhat higher prices for some products.

Meanwhile, the department's Food Safety and Quality Service, which includes meat and poultry inspection, has signed a $24,000 contract with the Consumer Federation of America for a study of the proposed net-weight regulations. — The study is supposed to be completed by Aug. 31 and will help determine the economic impact of the net-weight proposal. — An analysis by the National Broiler Council shows that the net-weight proposal would cost the industry an estimated $210 million a year and result in broiler chicken prices going up an average of 3.2 cents a pound at the retail level. — A survey paid for by the council showed that 93.3 percent of 5,000 families surveyed

GI's Stars and Stripes in financial trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Stars and Stripes, the American GI's daily newspaper abroad, is in financial trouble and may have to carry commercial advertising to avoid possible extinction. — But a congressional committee must first give the go-ahead. — The newspaper, remembered by millions of veterans of four wars, has not carried advertising except for a brief period shortly after its birth more than 60 years ago. — "I'm trying to save the newspaper," said Air Force Maj. Gen. Guy E. Hairston, commander of the American Forces Information Service, who wants a one-year test of advertising in the newspaper. — Stars and Stripes is unique for a government-sponsored publication. Although under military command, it is regarded as the "hometown newspaper away from home" for hundreds of thousands of servicemen and women stationed overseas. — Produced by a mixed military and civilian staff, it carries stories and features furnished by civilian news services and its own reporters.

Worn out horses rescued by former English jockey

PALATINE, Ill. (AP) — Most broken down horses make a quick trip to the dog food plant. But thanks to 60-year-old Art Thompson, worn out livery horses, old track ponies and gimpy thoroughbreds get a chance to grow old gracefully, frolicking in a lakeside pasture.

Thompson, a leathery-faced little man who was a jockey in his youth in his native Britain, is stable superintendent at Arlington Park. A couple of miles away he has operated his old horse retreat for 19 years at a rented farm, which is home now to 13 horses. — "I wish I could take in more of them and it makes me sad that I can't, but space is limited and so is my money," says Thompson. "I spend $7,000, about half my yearly salary, to keep and feed the horses so they can live out a carefree life. I've always loved horses. It's as simple as that. I can't bear to think of them being carted off to be ground into pet food after they've broken down and are of no more use."

Seven horses that died of old age while on the farm have been buried secretly by Thompson around the countryside.

His "family" consists of track ponies that are bowed and no longer can accompany skittish race horses onto the track, worn out livery saddle horses and thoroughbreds, all geldings, that broke down racing and were to be destroyed. — His favorite is Francis, a livery horse he rescued from a van of old nags being hauled off to be killed. — Francis is 36 years old and I've had him eight years. He was just plum worn out," said Thompson. "He loves bread and gets two loaves a day. — Two of the thoroughbreds broke down right on the track and Thompson got them before the meat wagon could. He paid the owners for their papers.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press Clear to partly cloudy skies were the rule over Texas Tuesday morning, but some thunderstorms were expected to interrupt the calm later in the day for parts of the state.

The forecast called for scattered thunderstorms in the Panhandle, along the northern border and the coast, and in extreme South Texas.

Early morning temperatures were generally in the 70s. Readings in the upper 50s were reported in the western mountains, and in the Panhandle temperatures in the 60s prevailed.

At 7 a.m. temperatures around the state included Wichita Falls, 75; San Antonio, 75; San Angelo, 72; Port Arthur, 78; Lubbock, 72; Del Rio, 74; Amarillo, 68; Corpus Christi, 79; and Tyler, 72.

Winds around the state this morning were southerly. Wind speeds were 15 to 20 mph in the west and 5 to 10 mph elsewhere.

National weather

By The Associated Press Following a spate of tornadoes in the Midwest, thunderstorms continued this morning over the Midwest, extending from the upper Mississippi Valley across the Central Plains into the Panhandle of Texas.

Sixteen tornadoes were reported Monday — 10 in Nebraska, four in Kansas and one each in Iowa and Minnesota. The storms also brought hail, damaging winds and locally heavy rains. However, there were no reports of injuries or of major damage.

No extra Social Security checks for older teachers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Summer is near and that means no more pencils, no more books for school children. For some of their older teachers, it means no more Social Security checks, too.

In the past, a quirk in the law allowed active teachers aged 62 or older to obtain So-

Vietnam accuses China

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam today accused China of systematically seeking to destroy relations between the two former allies following Peking's closure of Vietnamese consulates in three Chinese cities.

The Chinese government announced Monday that it ordered the consulates in Kunming, Nanning and Canton shut down "as soon as possible" amid growing tension between the neighboring Communist countries.

The note on the consulates was delivered Friday, a day after two Chinese ships sailed to evacuate some of the thousands of ethnic Chinese who are leaving Vietnam because the Communist regime has abolished private enterprise.

Hanoi's Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan said the closing of the consulates was "another unilateral action aimed at worsening relations."

Rodeo group sets contest

The Top O' Texas Rodeo Association will sponsor a window painting contest in conjunction with the Top O' Texas Rodeo.

Various merchants will volunteer their windows to be painted with western scenes. The contest is open to entrants of all ages, and contestants must furnish their own paint. The windows may be painted by any one person or a group of people.

Entry blanks are available from the Chamber of Commerce, and are limited to first come first serve.

cial Security checks for July and August even though they worked the rest of the year.

But a recent change in the law ends the payment, and also forces some teachers and others who retire this year to wait until January to draw benefits.

An estimated 250,000 persons are losing $159 million in benefits this year.

The government reduces Social Security benefits by $1 for every $2 a retired person earns over an exempt amount, which is $4,000 this year. Benefits are not reduced during a person's first year of retirement, or after age 72.

The 250,000 teachers, farmers, seasonal workers and some self-employed persons used their grace period either by receiving Social Security checks on a part-time basis previously or simply by signing up for Medicare when they turned 65.

The government now considers that a person's retirement year begins with any month in which he earned less than $334 (one-twelfth of $4,000), even if he did not seek retirement benefits.

"Teachers who decide to retire this year at age 67 or 68 are getting shafted out of six months of benefits," charged Byron Spice, a retirement expert with the National Education Association.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. in April decided that the stricter retirement test would be applied to the 250,000 who had received part-time benefits previously, as well as to those signing up for the first time.

"That's a lot of people on whom to change the rules of the game at the last minute. I think it's an outrage," said

The divorce between Joe Allen Grayson, and Pamela W. Grayson was erroneously reported by the Pampa News on Sunday. The information supplied to the News by the District Court clerk was in error. Court records show that the divorce had been granted several years earlier.

July oil allowable

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission today routinely set the statewide oil allowable for July at 100 percent and decided to switch next year from monthly to quarterly allowable hearings.

A commission staff member said the oil and gas regulatory agency has held monthly allowable hearings since prorations was started in the early 1930s.

Under law, the commission can hold as many oil allowable hearings a year as it desires. A hearing examiner can hold the required monthly hearing.

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil asked the commission for 3,521,607 barrels a day in July, a decrease of 23,780 barrels daily from June nominations.

Chairman Mack Wallace noted in announcing the allowable that crude and petroleum product imports into the United States totaled 7,743,000 barrels a day for the four-week average of June 2. He said this represents approximately 42 percent of the nation's demand.

As usual, the commission restricted the East Texas field to an 86 percent allowable to avoid possible waste.

stroying democracy in Egypt, letting the armed forces run down and pursuing a peace policy that has made Israel "more intransigent than ever."

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel fired Ambassador Saad el Shazli and ordered him home "immediately" because he "gravely violated his duties."

The agency said Shazli, 56, would be tried according to "the diplomatic laws" when he returned to Cairo. But the ambassador said earlier in Lisbon that whether he went home would depend on Sadat's reaction to his criticism.

The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram launched a campaign of vilification against Shazli, who was military chief of staff during the 1973 war with Israel.

It accused him of collaborating with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, Sadat's arch foe in the Arab world, and said Sadat replaced him in 1973 because he failed to prevent Israeli troops crossing the Suez Canal.

Shazli made his condemnation of Egypt's president in a three-page, handwritten letter delivered to news agencies in Lisbon Monday and in an interview with the Portuguese news agency ANOP.

Under the ambiguous phrases of national unity and social peace, Sadat is driving now all his political opponents to the prison," he wrote.

He said Sadat's "autocratic regime" is hiding "behind a facade of powerless democratic institutions."

Post office boxes damaged at Lefors

The Lefors Post Office reported Monday, that 18 of their postal boxes had the glass broken out of them on Friday, June 16.

R.E. Bartlett, the postal inspector from Amarillo, said, "Breaking into post office boxes is a federal violation and the penalty carries a felony conviction. Title 18 of the U.S. code, section 1705 states that a person can be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than three years."

Norma McBea, the postmistress at Lefors, said, "I would like to impress upon the citizens in this community the seriousness of tampering with post office boxes and to contact me if I can be of help in explaining to our youth the importance of this situation."

McBea also stated that there had been previous break-ins at Lefors but none had been as serious as this.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Can a person get poison oak through his clothes? My boyfriend got the most terrible case you ever saw. (I don't even want to mention where he got it the worst.)

Answer right away, Abby, because if he couldn't have gotten it through his pants, it is all over between him and me. Thank you.

MISSY

DEAR MISSY: My medical experts tell me it's not easy to get poison oak through one's clothing, but it's possible. Don't scratch him off your list.

DEAR ABBY: I am married and have two small children. I also have a loving and devoted husband. What more could a wife want, right?

Well, for the last year I have had a secret desire for another man. I never dreamed that such thoughts would ever enter my head, and my husband would die if he knew it.

The other man doesn't know how I feel about him. I see him often (he's a butcher at the supermarket where I trade), and the thrill I get out of just looking at him makes me ashamed. I know he's married and has a family, so nothing could ever come of this, but I can't help how I feel.

The Good Book says that to lust after someone is the same as committing adultery. I feel so ashamed and guilty. What's wrong with me?

LUSTING IN MY HEART

DEAR LUSTING: There is nothing "wrong" with you that isn't wrong with the rest of humanity. You are indulging in fantasy, which is normal—and harmless. The guilt feelings over your daydreams are doing you more harm than the daydreams. Don't dwell on them.

Now, go scrub the kitchen floor and take a cold shower—you'll feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I have preschool children and a large home to care for. But I schedule my time so that everything gets done. When the children nap, I read, write letters, watch TV or just relax.

However, lately nearly every afternoon a certain neighbor barges in on me. She helps herself to refreshments, then settles down for an endless outpouring of gossip, unasked for advice and a monologue of opinions on various subjects. She is tiresome, boring and a vicious gossip.

I would pretend not to be home, but she can see my car in the carport. At first I found her entertaining, but she comes so often, I've taken a dislike to her. What should I do? No names or location, please. She has a sharp tongue and would make a better friend than an enemy.

NEEDS HELP

DEAR NEEDS: People who open their doors to bores and tolerate their company day after day have only themselves to blame. By your failure to discourage her, you encourage her.

If I had to make a choice between having a vicious, gossipy, gutsy pest for a friend or an enemy, I'd opt for the latter.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MEL TORME: I seldom read novels, but I picked up "WYNNER"—written by you—and I couldn't put it down until I finished it. What a fascinating experience! I was truly sorry when it ended. You are a gifted writer as well as a talented musician, and your "Wynner" deserves to be a winner.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I found your columns on high blood pressure helpful and I reduced some 15 pounds and got off high blood pressure medicine. With my normal blood pressure I suspect I wouldn't have needed to take medication in the first place if I had done this earlier.

I have a different opinion about your remarks about lecithin. You state that lecithin is a combination of triglycerides and choline. That is all. I believe lecithin also contains inositol and other B vitamins. Although I realize that the lecithin is digested before it can be absorbed in the blood stream, meaning it is broken down into the fatty acids and choline, I think we probably need the choline and the inositol.

It is true that choline is found in meat, eggs and livers but many doctors advise us not to eat too many eggs or liver because of their cholesterol content, so how about using lecithin as a good source of choline and inositol?

DEAR READER — I'm glad you benefited from your weight reduction and wish more people would do the same. I can't say that I'm so pleased about your lack of knowledge about lecithin. Lecithin does not contain inositol and it does not contain any B vitamins whatsoever. Wherever you got that information, you should discard it. Lecithin is lecithin just as I have described it in the past.

It's true we do need choline but I suspect that you do not realize that choline is present in many other foods. There is an abundant amount of choline in lean

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — I would like to share some of my proven Pointers with my friends. Tree sap on your car windshield can be removed with a liquid glass cleaner.

Plants absorb sound waves. A thick row of them in front of your home will deaden the street noises.

To prevent freshly cut tulips from opening wide drop one or two tiny blobs of wax into the center, or put a copper penny in the water.

When you cut a melon and discover it is not ripe enough wrap it in foil and store out of the refrigerator. It will ripen nicely without discoloration and the foil will contain strong odors. My children and I use many of the Pointers so keep up the good work. — MRS. W. R.

DEAR POLLY — When dusting small delicate antiques I use my hand-held electric hair dryer on low heat and hold it back far enough so it dusts but doesn't disturb my collectibles. This also works on silk lampshades. — JUDI

Womens repair manual

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Women often are amazed to find they are capable of performing repair tasks that formerly were earmarked for appliance shops.

With the number of small appliances in the home proliferating — along with the inconvenience of delivering or mailing such objects to a repair center — it is time to learn how to do it yourself.

Then, too, many people discard potentially good articles, because the things grew old-looking while waiting to be repaired. In addition to toasters, blenders, mixers, waffle irons, can openers, coffee makers and the like there are those chairs that might need re-caning or a table that might need a patch of veneer.

Putting it all together is the "Fix-It-Yourself" manual which is crammed with encouraging solutions that make the job easier. For example, "a bit of chewing gum on the top of a screw driver will hold a screw long enough to start it in an inaccessible hole." (You also get the pleasure of chewing the gum.)

It's a little hint but it might come in handy when trying to cope with a tiny screw in fit a tiny hole.

And there are the surprises. If your coffeemaker produces only weak perked coffee, you may not be using it with water of the proper temperature.

For example, the tap water for a coffee brewer should be between 40 degrees and 50 degrees (Fahrenheit), using 1½ tablespoons of coffee for each six-ounce cup, the manual points out. Switch to cold water for electric percolators. If they are filled with warm water, the coffee brew will be too weak. (Other problems could include a clogged perk valve, valve cover and basket, which might require cleaning.)

You can learn how to fix doorknobs, hinges and locks. In fact many lock problems can be solved by a simple repair or adjustment.

Bookbinding, china, porcelain, glass and jewelry repair can be intriguing — you can learn how to make new links, close old ones or repair a ring.

You may want to delegate messy jobs — plumbing or repairing dishwashers, dryers, ranges, ovens, waste disposals, washing machines — to a favorite man. You can take over the chair caning, rushing or upholstery of chairs. Then, too, there are the audio and visual repairs and the servicing of pools and other equipment.

As for fishing tackle, snow blowers, lawnmowers, chain saws, women may not have the interest. But bicycle repair may be something that intrigues you. At least, you'll learn what makes the wheels go around as you pedal up the road.

This book also provides a run-down on adhesives, their properties and uses. The applicators' setting time, strength and flexibility are listed and may save you lots of time and anxiety. Everyone has adhesive problems that just weren't solved the way the label on the bottle or tube suggested, but they may ultimately be useful in repairing another object of different material.

(The "Fix-It-Yourself" Manual is published by Readers Digest.)

Questions ondeck

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

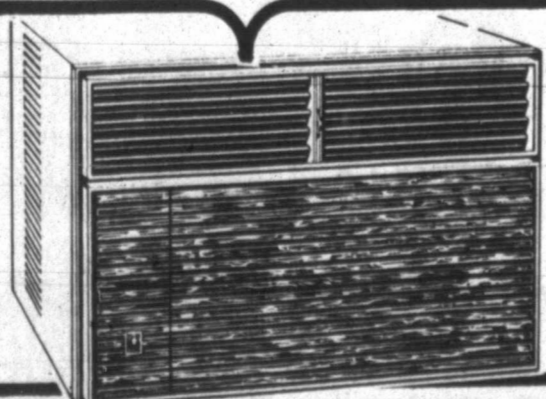

Q — I have heard considerable discussion about whether or not felt underlayment should be placed on a wood deck prior to the installation of asphalt shingles. Should the underlayment be used? If so, what is the purpose of it?

A — In new construction, you may occasionally run across a roofer who says that the underlayment is unnecessary. It is. It has a number of purposes. One is to insure that the shingles will be applied over a dry roof deck, thus minimizing the danger of buckling and distorting of shingles caused by application over a wet deck. Another is to prevent the entrance of wind-driven rain onto the deck in the event that the shingles are lifted up, damaged or torn by abnormally high winds. Still another is to prevent direct contact between the shingles and resinous areas of the wood deck which, because of chemical incompatibility, would damage the shingles. Failure to provide adequate ventilation in the attic space under the deck is another probable cause of trouble. This can be done with louver vents or exhaust fans placed high in the gables. A cupola also can be used. When there isn't enough ventilation, condensation and buckling problems are likely.

FIX IT

Herb Alexander

By Herb Alexander

Reupholstering your dining room chairs is a job you might consider doing even if the old fabric isn't too worn.

You can choose from cotton, synthetic or plastic material that you can buy by the yard.

First job is to remove the seat of the chair. Flip the chair over. Remove the screws that hold the seat to the frame. These are generally in the corners.

Number each seat and frame. They may look the same, but you'll get a better fit if you put each seat back on its original frame.

With the seat out of the frame, you can remove the old covering. Use a chisel to lift the tacked-down fabric so that you don't tear it or splinter the wood.

Under the fabric is padding, generally fastened right down to the seat. If you haven't let the job go too long this should be in good condition. But if the cover was worn, chances are the padding is worn as well. A layer of cotton felt will correct this.

Next you're ready to begin cutting the new covers. Use the old cover as a pattern. Place it on the wrong side of the new material and trace with a crayon. If there's a pattern in the new material, make certain it is straight. Once you've traced the pattern, cut the cover with scissors.

Place the seat on the wrong side of the new cover, centering it on the fabric. Make certain the padded side of the seat is down.

Tack down one side of the material with a single tack in the center of that edge. Then draw the material tight and place a tack in the center of the opposite edge.

Then draw up the other two sides and tack the same way.

Complete the tacking of each side, but leave the corners free. Tack to within 2 or 3 inches of the corner. Be sure to continue to draw the material tight as you tack. Use upholsterer's tacks. Although you don't need a tack hammer, you'll find this type easier to use for the job than the conventional type.

The corners are the toughest part of the job. The excess material must be folded neatly so that the fabric doesn't pucker. Make certain the corners are flat and not bunched. The old seat cover may provide a clue on folding.

With the seat covered as tightly and neatly as you can make it, you are ready to reassemble the chair.

Place the seat in the frame and put the screws back in. If the screws seem to vary in length, and you didn't keep them separated, make sure that none of them is so long that it might poke through the cover.

RECOVERING A CHAIR?

If there are any sharp corners on seat or splintered edges, sand first.

Funk's 102F Grain-Rich High-Tonnage Silage

Big, broad leaves on 9- or 10-foot stalks mean top yields of high-quality silage from Funk's 102F. Cattleman have come to rely on this high-tonnage producer with a high degree of tolerance to head smut. Protein content averages around 10 percent. White grain turns tan as moisture goes down. The grain has excellent weathering qualities and moderate tolerance to bird damage, so you can let 102F reach its full maturity and maximum feeding quality before harvesting. Fits almost all silage areas except the far northern portion of the sorghum belt where growing seasons may be too short.

Together again

Peter, Paul and Mary, the folk trio of the 60's have announced plans to record a studio album soon. The group, famous for such songs as "Blowin' in the Wind" and "All over this Land", have not worked together for seven years.

Folk singers are back

After seven years apart, "The First Family of Folk Music," Peter, Paul & Mary, are once again back on the same track. At a recent press conference the trio announced the immediate plans of their reunion, which includes a new studio album (to be produced by George Martin of Beatles fame, and released this summer), a concert tour and resulting live album.

Mary Travers, still as stunning a blonde as ever, noted that "it's nice to be with Peter and Paul again. We are having a great time, and some philosophical arguments about words," she said, referring to their search for 10 new songs that will fit the trio's special style.

Peter Yarrow commented on how "exciting" it was to be back together again, even though he has been commuting weekly from his home in California to rehearsals in New York. Yarrow is not one to rest easy. Lately he's been busy with songwriting and record producing ("Torn Between Two Lovers," by Mary McGreor was one of his projects), and the preparation of a TV special based on the famed P.P. & M song "Puff the Magic Dragon," which is set

Jail fire kills McAllen man

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A 23-year-old prisoner died in a fire at the Hidalgo County jail here early Monday.

Officials said the body of Daniel Perales of McAllen was found in his cell after other prisoners complained of smoke billowing through the jail. Four other prisoners were sent to a local hospital for treatment of smoke inhalation.

Chief Investigator Cito Luna said Perales had apparently started the fire in his cell.

Sheriff Brig Marmolejo said Perales had been held here since June 5 on charges of carrying a prohibited weapon.

Justice of the Peace Matias Morin has ordered an autopsy on Perales' body.

Where there's smoke, there's fire

NEW YORK (AP) — "Smoking should be confined to consenting adults in private." "I don't spit in your face, please don't blow smoke in mine."

As these slogans from a national anti-smokers' campaign suggest, life is becoming more difficult for smokers as their habit clashes with ever more outspoken non-smokers. The non-smokers are beyond the dirty-look stage and do not hesitate to speak sharply on planes, buses or restaurants. Sometimes arguments get fiery.

More and more, it also is becoming illegal for smokers to light up in public. Only eight states are without some kind of ban on smoking in public places, anti-smoking forces say. Some 100 cities, 25 counties and 15 universities have separate rules against it. And more bills against smoking are expected before legislatures this year.

On the federal level, the Civil Aeronautics Board is considering a ban on pipe and cigar smoking on airliners. The board is tied 2-2 and the fifth member has asked for more time to study the question. Should the ban pass, a rule against all smoking on airplanes would be proposed, opened to public comment and probably voted on next year.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, an outspoken non-smoker after years of cigarettes, supports a total ban on airplane smoking and has pledged to help cure the country's "most preventable health problem."

And though he thinks "education and not regulation" is the answer, he said in an interview, the bans against smoking in public places "are a healthy trend."

They prevent those who object from becoming "involuntary smokers," he said. "Consenting adults can smoke in their own home...."

Califano also said the smoking bans mesh with his proposed $30 million anti-smoking campaign for fiscal 1979 and the new HEW division on smoking and health. He said he does not object to the "freedom to smoke ... But I am saying we've got to put money into education to combat the tobacco industry's image of the Marlboro man and the glamorous woman."

Others are trying to do the same. There is ASH, the 10-year-old, Washington-based Action on Smoking and Health, which is fighting to increase existing bans. There are the American Cancer Society and state lung associations, which are preparing new anti-smoking commercials to be broadcast this summer.

Non-smokers, Stewart added, "can live their lives by avoiding places with smokers if they so choose. I'm going to continue refusing to give up anything, because this is an invasion of my individual rights."

ASH director John Bahnzaf disagreed. "There is an old legal maxim — my right to swing my fist ends where your nose begins," he said, adding that smokers are "not given a constitutionally protected right, but a privilege."

One third of all American adults older than 21 are smokers, according to government statistics. Federal regulations now ban smoking on buses, planes and trains except within specified areas. The government also prohibits smoking in coal mines, oil and gas wells and caves.

Caves became off-limits after a study showed that cave guides and other employees who smoke on the job faced a higher risk of cancer because of the combination of smoking and high radiation levels in the caves. The high levels were found to pose no danger to visitors.

"YOU LIGHT UP my mouth," is the song this woman might sing to her dentist. That is, she might if his "optic transilluminator" were not in her mouth. The device shines an ultra-high intensity light through teeth to provide information even an X-ray cannot. The transilluminator may soon help examine the mouths of dental patients across the nation.

News watch

CHICAGO (AP) — FBI and postal officials are investigating a child pornography and prostitution ring that authorities said is based in Chicago and may have involved transporting boys across state lines and to some foreign countries for purposes of male prostitution.

Investigators began examining an extensive card file that police said lists the ring's customers and their sexual preferences. From 50,000 to 100,000 pink file cards were among evidence seized in a north side apartment, authorities said Monday.

ATLANTA (AP) — Unsafe rail lines will be closed, if necessary, to protect the public from derailments of tankers and boxcars carrying dangerous substances, a federal transportation official says.

Chester C. Davenport of the U.S. Department of Transportation told a workshop at the U.S. Conference of Mayors on Monday that railroads are being warned to repair substandard lines. But, he said, "if they don't do that ... what we're going to do is close down the railroads. We've done that in a number of cases already."

He declined to say which lines have been closed, but he said about 300 to 400 miles of track are involved.

CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — Samford V. Wagoner, 75, finally got around to collecting his college degree after a 50-year break from the academic world.

Wagoner, a retired hardware store owner, left Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., in 1925 to take a high school teaching job. At the time he was 12 credit hours short of receiving a bachelor's degree in business administration.

When he contacted college officials last fall, they said his experience as an accountant could be substituted for the needed school work and they allowed him to graduate with the class of '78. He received his diploma on May 20.

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) — A dozen women softball players were injured when lightning struck a nearby oak tree, officials said.

The women, members of the Old Lyme and Madison YWCA softball teams, suffered second- and third-degree burns, officials said.

Rain had delayed the game at the Mile Creek School when the lightning struck Monday night, throwing most of the women to the ground. They were taken to area hospitals for treatment.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court is studying a Labor Department suit to force trustees of a Teamster fund to turn over information for a department investigation.

The department filed suit Monday in Chicago against the Central States health and welfare fund. The department is investigating alleged mismanagement of the fund, based in Chicago.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $68.2 billion appropriation for the Housing and Urban Development Department and a number of independent agencies is now before the Senate.

The measure passed the House Monday by a 332-47 vote after members rejected a proposed across the board slash. The bill includes $32.2 billion for HUD and its various programs, $18.4 billion for the Veterans Administration and lesser sums for a variety of smaller agencies. It applies to the year beginning Oct. 1.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proponents of continued use of saccharin are getting another chance to argue that the benefits of the artificial sweetener outweigh the risks.

Trade associations, medical groups and those concerned with obesity and diabetes testified Monday before the National Academy of Sciences, which is working on a detailed study of saccharin for Congress. Speakers attacked a Canadian study linking saccharin to bladder cancer in male rats, as well as several other studies that indicated there may be a link to human cancer as well.

Economic debate now is when will a downturn in the economy occur

NEW YORK (AP) — In its fourth year, old age for an expansion, the economy is getting puffy with high prices and interest rates that, say those who claim to know, means the onset of tougher times.

And that means it's time again to wonder what will happen to housing, which in past years always has been hit the first, the hardest and the longest by inflation and the downturns that follow.

Will it happen again? Maybe not. But a little background first.

The economic debate now is not whether a downturn will occur but when, and whether it will be a "rolling adjustment," as the economists call a spell of uneasiness, or something more like a fall on the face.

Samplings so far show an inclination toward the former, although some have dared use "recession," but like a doctor uncertain of his prognosis, pre-facing their verdict with "brief" and "mild."

When? Nothing precise yet; maybe 1979, or perhaps not until 1981. The former seems to be nearer the consensus, but one very large bank maintains the odds favor a decline no earlier than 1980.

As usual, the housing markets need not wait. An economy that refuses to acknowledge its weakness always produces a temperature change, measured by the thermometer of interest rates. They are headed up now.

Home mortgage rates have risen in every month this year, and those for conventional loans — not backed by government — reached 9.37 percent in May, matching the highest ever recorded by the Federal Home Loan Bank.

Since mortgage expense often is the biggest factor in homebuying, sometimes doubling the basic cost, it is no surprise that housing starts fell 4.9 percent in May, though remaining at a relatively high level.

But this first symptom could be portentous. In the multifamily market, for example, Advance Mortgage Corp., a Citibank affiliate, forecasts a sharp decline in unsubsidized activity late this year.

Housing's sensitivity is not just with rates themselves, but with the drain on funds such rates produce, because money that in other times would be available for mortgages seeks higher rates elsewhere.

That process has not yet produced an outflow from the traditional mortgage lenders, the savings banks and savings and loan associations, but already it has restricted the funds avail-ownership as an inflation hedge.

And, says the National Association of Realtors, "Neither the shrinkage of mortgage credit nor the corresponding boost in interest rates has shown any sign of dampening the existing home market."

Again, the question: Will housing be dumped off its foundation again this year or next, as it has been during other inflation-downturn economic cycles?

It could be, yes, but this time there is a fighting chance it can maintain balance in relation to other sectors of the economy. The public seems eager, and the thrifts seem better able to hold onto cash.

But there is no question at all about costs:

—You will pay more for houses for months to come, and most likely for years and perhaps forever if serious recessions do not result in price deflation.

—You will pay higher and higher rates for mortgage loans — and may not get them at all where usury rates forbid higher rates — until inflation is brought under more control.

Dirt exploding at construction site

WASHINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — The ground erupts like a miniature volcano when a bulldozer scrapes it. Turning the soil with a shovel sends sparks flying.

The dirt is radioactive, and both federal officials and the L.B. Foster Co., whose pipe-making plant is over the patch of ground, want to get rid of it. But how?

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission says the soil is laced with thorium — plus zirconium.

Lone Star rate request denied

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The railroad commission Monday denied Lone Star Gas Co. a temporary gas rate increase in Fort Worth but authorized the company to reinstate rates that were in effect before the city council reduced them May 2.

The old rates date back to Aug. 6, 1977.

Hearing examiner Glenn Johnson told the commission that under the rates established May 2, Lone Star would have had a $1.6 million reduction in gross annual revenue.

The commission said it rejected the rate increase because Lone Star "failed to show a negative cash flow in its operations in Fort Worth."

Jurist named GOP treasurer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The New state treasurer of the Texas Republican party is W. St. John Garwood, retired associate justice of the Texas Supreme Court and prominent Texas jurist.

State GOP Chairman Ray Barnhart said Monday that Garwood, 81, would replace Donald Flanagan, Austin, who resigned recently.

Garwood was an associate justice of the state supreme court from 1948 to 1958. He is presently affiliated with the Austin law firm of Graves, Dougherty, Hearon, Moody and Garwood.

a non-radioactive but highly combustible substance.

"If this was just radioactive thorium, you could just dig in and move it," NRC spokesman Ken Clark said Monday from Atlanta.

Workmen experienced the combustibility when they tried to install a machine in the Foster building. They were digging a hole when there was an explosion followed by a flash fire. Sparks shot up 30 feet, singeing the ceiling, said Walter Pavlo, plant manager.

"It's a spewing effect — throwing out rocks or anything in its path. How would you describe lava from a volcano?" The ground around it is blazing hot for two hours," Pavlo said.

Several weeks later another explosion boomed when workers tried to dig up some of the radioactive soil.

According to Wood County emergency services director George Fox, once "they had a bulldozer in there and it was doing some grading and it got into it and it melted the tracks right off of it."

The NRC says the level of radiation presents no immediate health hazard to the 70 workers at the plant. But "it is high enough that it can't be allowed to stay in there for long," Clark said.

Foster also wants the contaminated soil removed. The company has been forced to suspend a $2 million construction project while investigators try to find a way to remove the dirt.

The investigators also want to know how the thorium got there.

Since 1957, three companies have owned the property just south of Parkersburg on the Ohio River, and all three — Foster, Amax Inc., and Carborundum Co. — disclaim responsibility for the dumping.

The property was a farm before Carborundum built a factory in 1957. Amax bought half interest in 1965 and took over ownership in 1967. Amax stopped production in 1974 and sold out to Foster in 1977.

Astro-Graph
By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

June 21, 1978

This coming year an interesting new acquaintance will form a strong attachment for you. She will introduce you to fresh interests and a happier way of life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In partnership arrangements today you're likely to find yourself in the giver role, with your associates as the takers. Strive for a fairer balance. Find out to whom you're romantically suited by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Someone will be looking to dump their woes on your broad shoulders today. It could be far more straws than any camel could carry.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This may be one of those days where it may appear everyone is ganging up against you. You'll suspect even your close buddies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give credit where credit is due today, but also appraise the opposition realistically. Don't concede their strengths they don't possess.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Normally you're not very glib and it's difficult to pull the wool over your eyes. Today, however, you may take what you hear verbatim.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For someone who takes pride in his or her independence, you could be cast in the unfamiliar role of leaning too heavily on others today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Poor judgment today could lead you into involvements where the odds are against you. Size situations up carefully before you leap in.

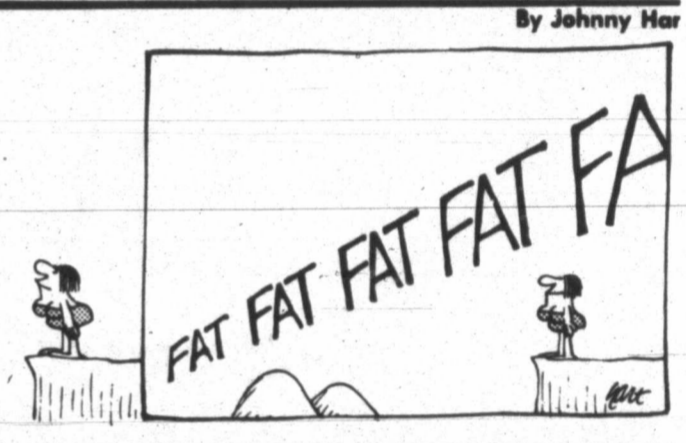

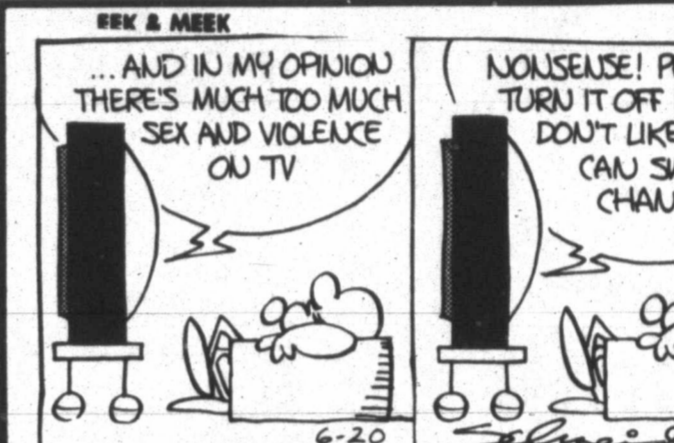

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) True humility is a noble virtue, but today you could humble yourself unbecomingly. Let at least a portion of your ego shine through.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) There are times when it is absolutely necessary to be assertive. Today you might be so with the wrong people, under the wrong circumstances.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful today lest you enter the fray feeling you have strong forces behind you. The ranks following your banner may be quite thin.

TAURUS (April 20-May 10) There is a danger today that you might formulate plans based upon exaggerated information. Make no moves till you're absolutely certain of the facts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone with financial problems may be looking to you to bail them out today. Unfortunately, you may not have enough buckets aboard to do the job.

Polish protest would cause Argentine uproar

Buenos Aires, Argentina (AP) — The Polish soccer team, claiming to speak in the interest of fair play, wants Argentina to play a vital World Cup game Wednesday in the afternoon instead of at night.

If the request is granted it could cause revolution. The national team plays its matches at night, unlike the other competing squads, so that the whole nation can watch on television without closing down shops and factories.

While Argentina's games are in progress, the streets of Buenos Aires are empty. You don't see a car, or anyone on the sidewalks. Everyone is at home in front of their screens.

There is some logic behind the Polish protest, which has been sent to the International Soccer Federation (FIFA). Argentina and Brazil are racing neck and neck for top place in Group B, and Wednesday's games will decide which team wins the group and gets a place in the final.

Brazil is set to play Poland Wednesday afternoon, and Argentina faces Peru in the evening. If Brazil and Argentina are still even on points, the team with the better goals record goes into the final.

The argument is that Argentina will go on the field knowing the result of Brazil's game and knowing exactly how many goals it must score.

Brazil was the first to object. But Poland is involved too because theoretically it could still reach the final or more likely, the play-off for third place.

"Both games should start at the same time," said Claudio

Coutinho, coach of Brazil, "otherwise it will give a decided advantage to Argentina."

Brazil thought of filing a protest but dropped the idea after consulting a FIFA official. The Poles decided to go ahead.

FIFA was not expected to do anything about it. Arrangements for the World Cup were made months ago.

Wednesday's games in Group A, involving all European teams, both start in the early afternoon. The main clash is at Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium between Holland and Italy, joint leaders with three points each.

Holland, which has a much better goals record than its rivals, needs only a draw to reach the final. But Dutch Coach Ernesto Happel promised his team will continue to use attacking tactics, as it has done throughout the tournament.

West Germany, the defending champion, has two points and plays Austria. The Germans could still get to the final, but they would need to beat the Austrians by five goals or more and it would be necessary for Holland and Italy to tie.

It's all Lopez

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, the hottest item in professional golf in the last 33 years, is trailing sparks with her meteoric success this year.

The entire Ladies Professional Golf Association is benefitting from the 21-year-old record shattering rookie, already the richest rookie player — male or female — to use a set of golf clubs.

Lopez, fresh off her fifth triumph in a row, a two-stroke victory over Jane Blalock and Debbie Massey at Rochester's Locust Hill Country Club, leads the field for this week's LPGA event.

"It's given us a superstar, a real celebrity," said Betsy Rawls, a Hall of Famer and now the LPGA tournament director who is setting up this week's Lady Keystone Open.

"The women's tour had been growing by leaps and bounds without her. But she's really given us a boost. People come out just to see her. She's got a quality that attracts people. They like to watch her play," said Rawls, winner of 54 tournaments in her 25 years as a touring pro.

With Arnold Palmer-like flair, Lopez has won five straight tournaments, more than any other woman in the 28-year history of the LPGA. Only Byron Nelson, who won 11 straight events in 1945 on the men's tour, has won more in succession.

Lopez, who's been at par or better in 16 of her last 17 rounds, has won a total of seven tournaments and earned $153,336 since turning pro last July. That's $234 more than previous record holder Jerry Pate, who won two tournaments as a rookie on the men's tour in 1976.

Renko pitches A's past Rangers, 2-1

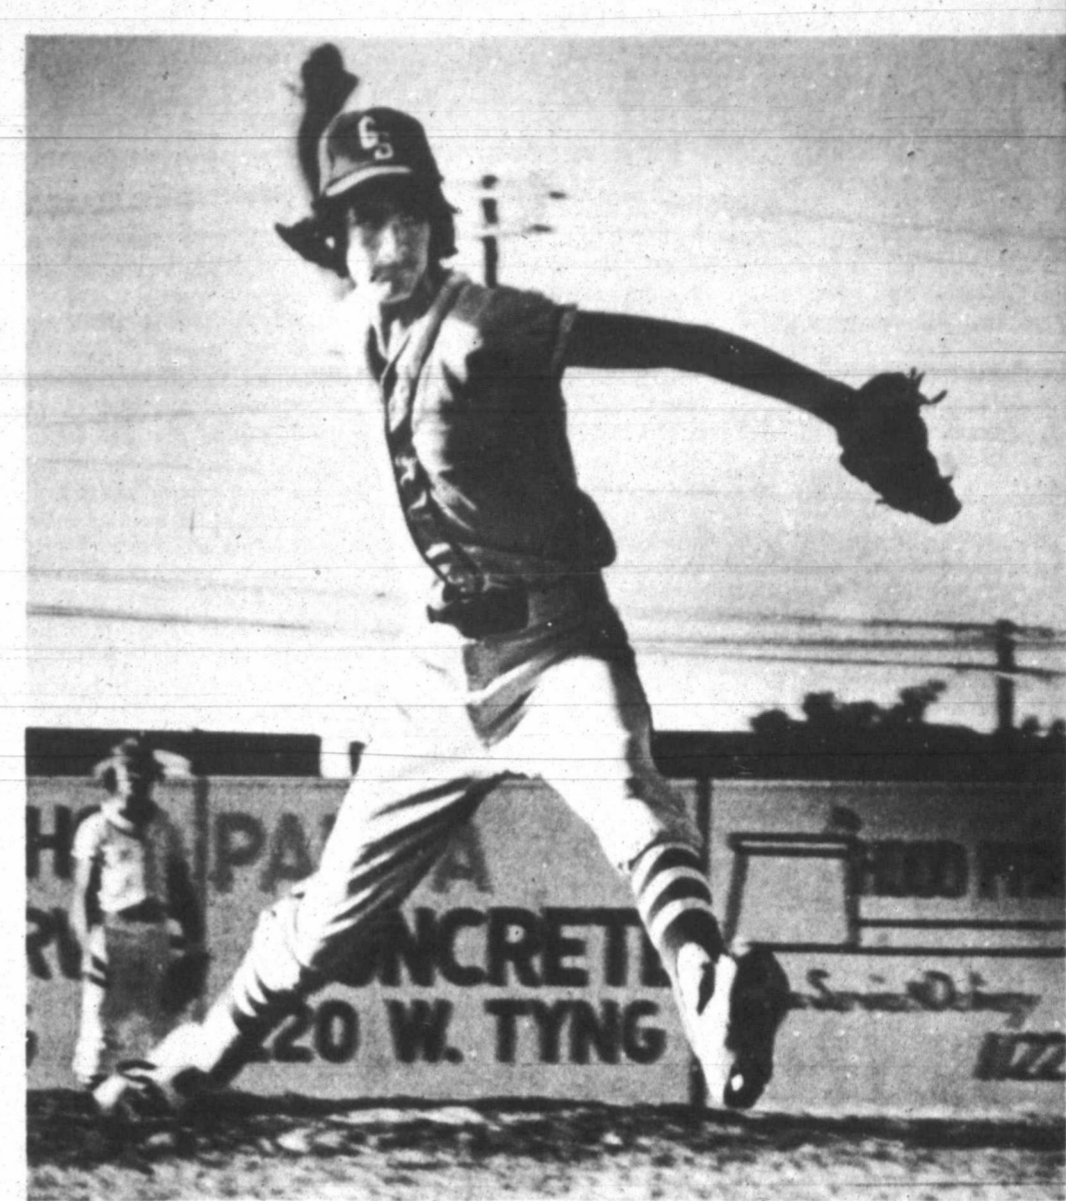

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Oakland's Steve Renko had a two-hitter going against the Texas Rangers and would have preferred to pitch a while longer when manager Jack McKeon gave the signal in the eighth inning.

"You want to go nine innings, but Jack made the right move. Lacey came on, and then Sosa did a heck of a job in the ninth," said Renko, who evened his record at 2-2 with the A's 2-1 victory Monday night.

Catcher Jeff Newman delivered the game-winning blow, an eighth-inning home run into the left field bleachers, and Oakland ended its losing string at 11 games. Texas got just the two hits from Renko and one hit the last two innings off Bob Lacey and Elias Sosa.

Renko had retired seven batters in a row going into the eighth, but manager Jack McKeon called for Lacey when second baseman Mike Edwards bobbled a ground ball and let a runner on first. Mike Hargrove bunted to Lacey for a double play, and Bert Campaneris grounded out to end the inning.

With one out in the ninth, Richie Zisk walked for Texas and McKeon made another change, bringing Sosa in to face Bobby Bonds. Bonds singled, and both runners advanced on a ground out Sosa walked Jim Sundberg to load the bases and then got Toby Harrah on a grounder to end the game.

It was Sosa's 10th save of the year.

"We've been letting the pitchers stay in too long, then the next guy hits it and it's gone. We were going at it hitler by hitler, after the sixth really," McKeon said.

Renko got an early 1-0 lead on Joe Wallis' single on the first pitch of the game. Dell Alston's sacrifice bunt, and Taylor Duncan's single.

The Rangers tied it in the fifth when Harrah walked, stole second and scored on Hargrove's single.

Besides the ninth, the Rangers loaded the bases one other time but couldn't score. Renko walked three batters in the third, but got Bert Campaneris to hit into a double-play that ended the inning.

Matlack allowed Oakland only six hits, and had retired 16 of 17 batters before Newman hit an ankle-high change-up out of the park for his fourth homer of the season.

Matlack lowered his earned-run average to 2.79, best on the ball club, but saw his win-loss record drop to 5-8. It was the fourth time in the past six outings that he got two or fewer runs to work with.

"The thing that bothers me, I don't know how many games I've got in me, and I hate to see them go by the wayside," Matlack said.

Just ask Leo Durocher

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
Lunch for Leo Durocher was a plate of vanilla ice cream and a glass of milk, a kind of bland combination for the guy who once was baseball's most combative personality.

But there is still some pepper left in Leo, and it doesn't take much effort to find it. Just knock the All Star vote process, the way Cincinnati Manager Sparky Anderson did last week, and Durocher is all over you, ready to attack.

How about it Leo, don't you think the players would do a better job voting for the teams than the fans do? That's what Anderson said last week.

Durocher frowned at the question and you got the feeling that if there were dirt around to be kicked, your shoes and pants would have been awfully dirty at that particular moment.

"I like the system the way it is now, with the computer card voting," he said. "What's Sparky's beef? Doesn't he think the team the fans name is good enough?"

Well, essentially, what Anderson is saying is that the fan vote is influenced by expanded media exposure of certain teams. "Anybody that's been in the playoffs or World Series the year before, I promise you, look at his ballots the next year. Television exposes them to 90 million people."

That's why players like Greg Luzinski wandering through a so-so season, and Johnny Bench, who's been out of the lineup for three weeks with back woes, still lead in the vote totals.

Man to revive USS Houston

By ROY WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — It was shortly after midnight Feb. 29, 1942, when the heavy cruiser USS Houston, out of ammunition, her number two turret wrecked, fires raging uncontrolled, her commanding officer dead, sank beneath the warm Java Seas in Sunda Strait.

A youngster that morning near the barren West Texas town of Fort Davis, sat on a hillside and watched the military planes soaring overhead, making mental notes of the crafts, and thinking of the battles that had been fought and were to be fought in the South Pacific during World War II.

The USS Houston, along with the Australian cruiser Perth, sank after sailing into a large Japanese landing force. The two ships refused to retreat and stayed to fight, although outnumbered and outgunned. The enemy lost an estimated 17 ships.

Of the 1,084 crewmen on the USS Houston, only 368 survived and were captured by the Japanese. Of this group 76 died in prisoner-of-war camps.

Sam Redford, now a 42-year-old rancher near the Central Texas community of Hamilton, has remembered

He knows where the USS Houston rests and he believes this is the time for a documentary film showing the battered hull of the ship and revealing the stories told by survivors of that fierce battle.

Redford has spent about $8,000 of his own money on research and now is looking for additional funds to finance an exploration expedition and then a documentary film.

His interest in naval warfare, sparked during his boyhood years, increased as time went by.

After graduation from Texas A&M University, and serving in several jobs as an instrumentation engineer, Redford went to the South Pacific island of Kwajalein with the RCA Service Co.

During that time, he used his hobby of SCUBA diving to explore for the many ships he had read about in those news accounts of major sea battles.

He said in a recent interview, "I once led an expedition of divers to the Truk Lagoon and found a record number of seven sunken and previously unlocated Japanese ships."

Redford said, "It was some Indonesian divers who located the wreckage of the Houston in 1973. Since then I have talked to some of the survivors and it has been almost an obsession with me to record on film the wreckage and tell this proud history of a proud ship."

Redford said the USS Houston was known as the Galloping Ghost because the Japanese reported it sunk so many times before it finally went down.

Redford, with the tan of a man who has spent months in the water and with the bow-legged walk of a man who has spent years in the saddle, said it wasn't so unusual for a landlocked "boy to have an interest in Naval history. It was just something that stuck with me. Once I heard the story of the USS Houston and the battle those men waged, it was something I could never forget."

While working his land in the rolling hills and mesquite trees of Central Texas, Redford admitted he could only think of getting back "to the Java Sea and filming that gallant lady who went against impossible odds but fought until the end."

He hasn't had much luck coming up with the necessary $10,000 for an exploration, but hopes to make it this year or perhaps in 1979.

"I don't want a thing out of this except to record on film the story of this ship. The best time for diving in the Java Sea is July, August, September and October. So if I don't come up with the money now, I'll keep on trying for next year."

Redford likes to point to part of an article written by retired Cmdr. Walter G. Winslow, who was assigned to the USS Houston. He wrote:

"By the glare of Japanese searchlights, I saw the Houston roll slowly over to the starboard, then, with her yardarms almost dipping into the sea, she paused. A sudden breeze picked up the Stars and Stripes still firmly blocked on the mainmast, and waved them in one last defiant gesture. Then with a tired shudder Houston vanished beneath the Java Sea."

Redford said the USS Houston was known as the Galloping Ghost because the Japanese reported it sunk so many times before it finally went down.
