

School discriminated against white

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today ordered a California medical school to admit Allan Bakke, deciding that the school had illegally discriminated against him because he is white.

The court, in a splintered decision that yielded six separate opinions, ruled that the University of California's medical school at Davis is not barred from taking race into account in a future admissions program.

Bakke successfully sued the university after his application to the university's medical school at Davis was rejected in 1973 and 1974.

He charged that the medical school's special admissions program which reserved 16 of the 100 openings in each entering class for "disadvantaged" students was really only an impermissible racial quota.

Under it, Bakke charged, less academically qualified blacks, Hispanics and Asian-Americans were admitted ahead of him.

Bakke, a 38-year-old civil engineer who lives in Sunnyvale, Calif., and works for the nation's space agency at the Ames Research Center in nearby Palo Alto, never had to prove that he would have been admitted if the school had not had a special admissions program.

The university conceded that it could not prove Bakke would have been excluded if the program had not existed.

A state trial court ruled that the special admissions program violated the Constitution's guarantee of equal protection and also the portion of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 that outlaws racial discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds.

The California Supreme Court upheld the trial court's ruling in favor of Bakke on the constitutional grounds only, choosing to ignore the federal law question.

Bakke's vigil has not been a lonely one. The ruling was anxiously awaited by civil rights leaders and constitutional scholars who claimed it could be the court's most important edict on race relations since segregation was outlawed 24 years ago.

At stake, they said, might be the future role racial minorities play in American society as well as billions of dollars worth of programs in government, education and private business aimed at making up for past injustices.

Bakke's case, one of the most publicized ever to reach the nation's highest court, began in 1974 when he sued the University of California.

Rejected as an applicant to the university's medical school at Davis in 1973 and 1974, Bakke charged that he had been turned down solely because he is white.

He claimed that the university had made him a victim of illegal and unconstitutional "reverse discrimination" by accepting less qualified minority applicants.

In 1969, one year after it opened its doors, the medical school launched a special program to "increase opportunities in medical education for disadvantaged citizens."

No whites have been admitted under the special program, although 245 asked to be considered. School records show that the program has accepted only blacks, Hispanic or Asian-Americans.

Bakke charged that the school's affirmative action program precluded his competing for 16 of the 100 seats open to first-year students each year he applied.

A state trial court and the California Supreme Court agreed with Bakke. They said the school's program amounted an impermissible racial quota, and that Bakke would have to be admitted.

Now 38, Bakke has remained on the outside looking in. The Supreme Court postponed the effect of his victory while it considered the pros and cons of government's taking race into account while trying to help disadvantaged minorities.

The Yolo County trial judge who first heard Bakke's case ruled that the school's "race-conscious" program violated the Constitution's 14th Amendment and a portion of a 1964 federal law. The constitutional amendment, passed after the Civil War to grant full rights of citizenship to recently freed slaves, says that no state "shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." The medical school at Davis is a state school.

Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 says "no person in the United States shall, on the ground of race, color or national origin, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

Like most state colleges, the UC-Davis medical school receives federal funds.

Vietnamese troops in Cambodia launch major border war offensive

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thai military sources report 60,000 Vietnamese troops in eastern Cambodia, and Washington sources say they have launched a major new offensive in the border war between the two Communist Indochinese neighbors.

The Washington sources, who asked not to be named, said they believe the goal of the current Vietnamese drive is to wipe out base camps used by Cambodian soldiers to infiltrate Vietnam. The U.S. and South Vietnamese armies invaded the same area in the spring of 1970 in an unsuccessful hunt for the Communist Vietnamese headquarters. U.S. officials claimed was there.

Five bodies discovered in Boston

BOSTON (AP) — The bodies of five men who were apparently shot to death were found early today in the basement of a bar and grill in the heart of Boston's main shopping district.

The Washington sources said the Vietnamese control Mimot, about six miles inside Cambodia, and that they are operating around the Chup rubber plantation deeper in Cambodia.

Washington sources also said the Vietnamese control Mimot, about six miles inside Cambodia, and that they are operating around the Chup rubber plantation deeper in Cambodia.

Washington sources also said the Vietnamese control Mimot, about six miles inside Cambodia, and that they are operating around the Chup rubber plantation deeper in Cambodia.

The bodies were found grouped in the rear room in the basement of the Blackfriars Restaurant on Summer Street, at the hub of Boston's bustling shopping area and two blocks from the city's two largest department stores.

Police Lt. David Silverman said the victims died "apparently of gunshot wounds." There was no immediate identification how times the men were shot.

Police were unable to identify the victims immediately.

The discovery came at the height of the morning rush hour, and a crowd of curiosity seekers soon formed as police cruisers and ambulances converged outside the five-story office building where the lounge is located.

Violence erupts again in riot-torn Matamoros

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Violence erupted again early today in this riot-torn border town as a group of students stormed Boys Town, a red-light district on the outskirts of Matamoros, burning one night spot and causing heavy damage to two others.

A few miles away, helmeted, machine-gun wielding federal troops continued their vigil in the charred, debris-strewn site of a student riot Monday night that caused an estimated $2 million damage.

Police said only one person was injured in the Boys Town incident when a group of youths stormed the Golden Palace night club, ousted customers and set fire to the building.

As they fled, they hurled rocks, bottles and other items through the windows of at least two other night spots, police said.

Demos surprised by McAnelly act

Former Gray County Democratic Party Chairman Rex McAnelly "surprised" party leaders Tuesday when he announced publicly his support of Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

McAnelly stated Tuesday night during a barbecue picnic at the George Arrington ranch southeast of Canadian, in honor of Clements who was campaigning earlier that day in Pampa, that "I will do everything I can to help him (Clements) in Gray County."

McAnelly said he made his decision to support Clements after studying the issues and the candidates.

Reacting to McAnelly's statement, Mrs. Ruth Osborne, current chairman of the Gray County Democratic Party, said she was "Real surprised by his (McAnelly's) endorsement of Clements."

Plainview death is being probed

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP) — The FBI, the Texas attorney general's office and a Hale County grand jury will all take part in an investigation of the fatal shooting of a Mexican-American man Sunday by a reserve sheriff deputy.

An FBI spokesman in Dallas said Tuesday that his agency joined the probe when asked by Hale County Sheriff Charles Tue to investigate the incident for possible civil rights violations.

Charles Cyfert, suspecting a driving-while-intoxicated case, stopped a car driven by Tim Rosales at a rural intersection because it was missing two tires and was running on the wheel rims.

According to Tue, Cyfert pulled his gun when he found a "taped pipe" in the car. The sheriff said Rosales bolted, and when Cyfert caught him, the two struggled for the officer's automatic pistol, which discharged and killed Rosales.

Republicans betting on Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican National Committee is putting its money on at least 10 Texans, betting the GOP can make substantial gains in the Lone Star State this election year.

Atop the list of hopefuls is Mason rancher-attorney Tom Loeffler, who surprised fellow Republicans in the May primary with a sweeping victory in the 21st District, garnering almost 60 percent of the vote in a four-man race.

The 31-year-old former University of Texas defender back carried all but one of the 16 counties in the sprawling district that includes such far-flung cities as San Antonio, Fort Davis, Del Rio and San Angelo.

He is opposed in the November election by Nelson Wolff, a state senator from San Antonio.

Welfare board approves plan

The Gray County Welfare Board met last night and discussed the adoption of a public relations program called "Parenting Project."

The program deals with making the community aware of foster care needs. Bob Carmichael, chairman of the board, said that the material would be available for organizations in the community.

The film material that the board is currently looking at is geared toward junior and senior high school students, showing them what marriage is like.

The board decided to look at the material closer, and possibly preview the films in August. They hope to present the material to the community in September or October.

Longings

In these times? In these times of turmoil felt more than seen, the beauty of life prevails over all the mere things societal, political. Over the mere configurations of the ways and the methodologies and the systems that humankind uses to order and arrange itself according to described, proscribed and proscribed patterns.

But crossing the lake slowly on a sunny afternoon, the water glinting, white waves breaking before the bows, sails leaning to the "other" thing disappear...even in the hardest molded heads. An emergence of some other meaning of life is in the portrait. It is man doing the same things he has been doing long before he was ever governed and during the longest times of peace — He was fishing. He put oar to water. He took out under sail. And he played and learned to love the water.

So, perhaps, it is also that we look upon the lake tranquility, and long for a time we cannot remember.

Forget the Alamo?

Canadians are now phlegmatically chomping through the fine print in the constitutional reform bill revealed by Prime Minister Trudeau last week. Enough is already known, however, to make us doubt if this measure can solve the problems plaguing our northern neighbor and largest trading partner.

This is the third time Mr. Trudeau has made essentially the same proposals, and it reflects weakness rather than strength. He is compelled to act because of a general feeling that something must be done to deflate the separatist Parti Quebecois, which has been happily ensconced in Quebec City plotting its referendum on secession since November 1976. At the same time, he hopes to relieve the profound sectional antagonisms building up within English Canada, which are little-known and have no real parallel within the U.S.

Mr. Trudeau wants to move in two phases. First, he will make such changes as can be legislated by the federal government, giving Canada's 10 provinces a direct say in appointments to Canada's Senate and Supreme Court and making symbolic changes in the monarchy's role, designed to emphasize Canadian independence. Second, Ottawa and the provinces will discuss redistributing and rationalizing their respective functions.

Scrutinizing the wording of any constitutional change is, of course, a wise precaution. No matter how noble the intention, the ultimate and often unforeseen consequences of reform flow frequently from details of draftsmanship. Some attention is rightly being focused, for example, on the clause in the proposed Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms which would justify abrogation of those rights for numerous rather vague reasons.

But it is on the general level that the flaws are already apparent. Fiddling (if we might be so bold) with the queen, or the Senate and the Supreme Court, is not likely to impress the separatists. There are few further powers which can be devolved upon Quebec, short of making it a sovereign state. And to raise the subject at all is to risk a fist fight with all the provinces, all increasingly assertive and resentful of Mr. Trudeau's use of federal tax revenues to impose policies upon them, which is why he has consigned it to Phase Two.

Yet the continued presence of Quebec in the confederation is vital to Mr. Trudeau's Liberal Party. It has become the perennial governing party of Canada by standing astride the two founding nations like a circus stunt rider, telling the French that it is their champion and the English that it alone can speak to Quebec. Its formula for keeping the two horses on parallel courses has been bilingualism, the insistence that the federal government and its agencies be able to deal with all Canadians in either official language, and that substantial numbers of government employees must actually be French.

This formula did not prevent Quebec from electing the separatist. But Mr. Trudeau has no alternative, and so he has resolved to play it again, louder.

Politicians do not need good ideas, let alone new ideas, to run a country. Mr. Trudeau may be successful in wearing separatism down, and possibly these constitutional reforms will help, although getting the Canadian economy moving again by reducing government interference would probably help more. Unfortunately, many of Mr. Trudeau's programs have been designed to subsidize inefficient sections of Quebec industry, a political ploy of dubious value and ultimately self-defeating impact on overall national welfare.

The difficulty with any purely political solution to the Canadian problem can be found in the official document published in support of his scheme. "Let us," it implores passionately, "forget once and for all about the Plains of Abraham — the battle in which the British finally broke French power in North America. Canadians cannot call upon their common experience of the past, precisely the bond which holds most human groups together, because it inconveniently consists of the subjugation of one ethnic group to the purposes of the other."

This is equivalent to rallying Americans, perhaps on the grounds that anything else would distress our Hispanics, with the cry "Forget the Alamo!" It would indeed be a unique nation which is founded on such a historical lobotomy. By contrast, the Parti Quebecois has insisted on inscribing every new automobile license plate in the province with the old Quebecois nationalist slogan "Je me souviens" — I remember. The French, at least, have a simpler and more stirring tune to play.

The Mondale Mission

By JAMES RESTON

WASHINGTON — As originally planned, Vice President Mondale was to make a quick trip to Israel at the end of this month, mainly as a friendly and ceremonial gesture, but more serious problems have developed in the Middle East over the last few weeks, and the administration is now changing its mind about his mission and thinking he should go to Cairo as well.

Israel and Egypt have both seemed to be hardening their positions on the West Bank and the Gaza District recently, and the fear in Washington is that they will get locked into irreconcilable policies unless something is done quickly to keep the peace negotiations going.

In the frustrations of the moment, it is not only Prime Minister Begin but also President Sadat who is rejecting the compromise suggestions of the United States. Both are under intense political pressures in their own countries, and are making extreme and even provocative public statements, which blur the possibilities of a step-by-step accommodation.

For example, Sadat has been suggesting recently that he is running out of patience, when patience in this crisis is probably more important than anything else. In a Cairo news conference on May 30, he said: "I hope on the next 23rd of July there will be a surprise. I think in these two months we shall reach a result — either the peace process gains momentum again, or it proves to be a failure."

In a speech to the Egyptian Air Force units on June 11, Sadat said: "I told him (the Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman) verbatim: 'I want you to know that if you open this subject (the Israeli settlements) in front of me again, I will fight you to the ends of the earth.' This is what I said, my sons."

Begin, meanwhile, has told the United States government in an official statement that he will make no promises to trade territory for peace, but that if he gets a peace treaty with his Arab neighbors he will consider a permanent settlement on the West Bank, the Gaza District, and with the Palestinians after five years.

There is reason for saying here that these are not fixed positions, but tactical moves to satisfy the military pressures on Sadat and the political pressures on Begin. In terms of propaganda, this seems to be the end of the "peace process," but in political terms, there is clearly still room for negotiation, not much but some.

For example, the Israeli government's answer to Washington's questions about the future of the West Bank, the Gaza District and the Palestinians made no reference to the U. N. Security Council Resolution 242, which proposed a trade of land for peace, and the absence of any reference to 242 in Begin's reply to Carter was noted here, with some sadness.

But, in later private explanations it has been made clear by the Israeli government in an official document that "Israel's position of Resolution 242 is that it accepts all the principles of 242 including, the element of withdrawal, as a basis for negotiation with all the neighboring Arab states, including Jordan..."

Meanwhile, Sadat has said (May 31) though it was barely noticed in the press, that he understood Israel's anxiety over security, and would agree to demilitarize border zones, an area of limited armaments, U. N. troops in the border areas, and early-warning stations.

So there is still many things for Mondale to discuss in Cairo as well as in Jerusalem. Washington didn't like Begin's answers but it now wants to put the same question to Sadat, and Mondale's mission is being revised to include experts who can explore these questions of substance in both Jerusalem and Cairo.

Nobody here expects that Mondale can do anything more than play for time, but time may be more important than almost anything else at this particular point. His mission is to break the present momentum toward a collapse of the peace talks and get Begin and Sadat back into negotiations.

The official Israeli explanations of their answers to President Carter's questions are more flexible than Begin's negative response.

For example, the Israeli government is now opening up other alternatives. It is stressing, not only that it will "consider" after five years the future of the West Bank, Gaza and the Palestinians, but will "agree" on a permanent settlement.

"It will be recalled," an official Israeli memorandum says, "that President Carter had suggested that after five years, three options should be decided upon: a link with Israel, a link with Jordan, or a continuation of the status quo."

What is new and interesting is that the Israelis are now also beginning to talk about "a joint relationship among the three" which is explained to this reporter as a fourth option, namely some kind of political confederation for the political control of the disputed areas.

So the latest crisis, if it is handled carefully, could move the question away from "deadlines" and "surprises," and threats of war, and out of propaganda back to negotiation. This could be a fundamental test of Mondale's political and diplomatic skills, but as the Carter administration is beginning to realize, he cannot stop the drift unless he goes to Cairo as well as to Jerusalem.

'Taxflation'

(W.R. Grace and Co. Ad)
A recent issue of a major business publication carried this statement:

"Stockholders be damned: Some big firms oppose tax relief for shareholders. Congress has practically ignored a proposal to end 'double taxation' on dividends: once as corporate income, again as dividend income to shareholders."

The article then quoted a congressional committee aide as saying:

"Corporate managements don't have shareholders' interests at heart."
Well, here's one corporate management that does have its shareholders' interests at heart, especially when taxation and inflation are striking at the very roots of our society and our economy.

We believe that shareholder tax relief is urgently needed.

And double taxation of dividends isn't the only problem. For certain tax brackets, capital gains are taxed three times.

They're taxed once through the computation of regular taxes. Then because they're a tax preference item, they're taxed again — this time by reducing the amount of salary or wages eligible for treatment as earned income subject to the advantages of a 50 percent tax ceiling. Finally, they're taxed a third time through the so-called minimum tax.

To make matters worse, inflation erodes the real value of dividends or capital gains. As a result, much of what the shareholder receives is nothing more than illusion.

Taxflation — the combination of taxation and inflation — is destroying all we work for:

— If income stays the same, purchasing power declines. A dollar put away in 1965 buys only 50 cents today.

— If income keeps pace with inflation, the wage earner finds himself in increasingly higher tax brackets which more than offset gains in purchasing power.

What's our program for stopping inflation? We suggest you write the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, the Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, or your elected Senators and Representatives, and tell them to:

1. Stop the unprecedented government deficit spending which has become a major cause of inflation.

2. Stop double taxation of dividends by excluding dividend income from federal taxation — at least to some reasonable annual amount, like $1,000 or $2,000 per taxpayer.

3. Reduce short-term capital gains tax to a maximum of 25 percent and, on a sliding scale, lower that tax rate to zero for assets held over ten years.

An economy which depends on private capital for growth can't afford to bite the hand that feeds it. And taxflation is doing just that.

Writing you Congressmen to stop taxflation is one way to make sure our economy continues to make sense.

Your money's worth What has happened to dentist costs

Sylvia Porter

(Second of four columns)

In a letter which could be a top accolade in 1978's inflationary atmosphere, President Carter recently wrote Dr. Frank Bowyer, president of the American Dental Assn.:

"While seeking deceleration in the medical care sector, we note favorably the more moderate behavior of dentist fees which have increased at significantly lower rates than physicians' fees and most other medical care prices... We recognize that this more moderate trend in dentists' fees is in part related to substantial increases in dentist productivity and the relatively greater responsiveness of dental fees to competition."

A few statistics confirm the White House's assessment. Against an increase of 7.7 percent in prices for all consumer services last year, dentist fees rose 7.5 percent, physicians' fees jumped 9.3 percent and the cost of semi-private hospital rooms soared 11.5 percent.

In the longer 10-year span between '67 and '77, the overall rate for consumer services was up 94 percent, dental fees were up 85 percent, physicians' fees zoomed more than 100 percent, and semi-private hospital room rates skyrocketed 200 percent.

Today, you, an average American, pay 0.6 percent of your personal income for dental services, virtually the same percentage as 10 and 20 years ago.

As a percentage of total health care costs, dental expenses have actually been declining — from 10.9 percent in 1950 to 7.5 percent in 1960 to 7 percent in 1965 to 6.5 percent in 1970 to 6.3 percent in 1975.

Dentists are "the professional group which has had the smallest increase in their fees," says Barry Bosworth, director of the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability. "They're more willing, perhaps, than some other groups to cooperate in trying to do better." And all this has occurred while the cost of maintaining a dental practice has soared, fringe benefits for employees have risen rapidly. Outlays for consumable supplies and services have climbed substantially — and in fact, average expenses for operating a dental office have ballooned 100 percent since 1967.

How come? How has the profession achieved this record of holding the line while all other health costs have exploded?

(1) Greater productivity. Dentists now treat 43 percent more patients and handle 18 percent more patient visits than a decade ago — and the key reason is due to the auxiliary personnel they employ. A dentist with a full-time assistant raises his productivity by around one-third, while a dentist with a hygienist and a full-time assistant can boost his productivity by 100 percent, American Dental Assn. studies disclose. On top of this is the development of modern instruments which speed up the dentist's work as well as make the patient's visits more comfortable.

(2) Preventive dentistry, which has cut back on the patient's need for extensive reparation and restorative treatments. Frequent exams equal fewer major dental problems, since disorders are diagnosed early when they can be corrected easier.

"The design and administration of the dental component of a national health program should take into consideration the differences between the delivery of dental care and other health services," says the ADA's president Dr. Bowyer. "However, dental benefits in a national health program should be clearly delineated and mandated in a manner identical with all other health benefits."

But whatever lies in the future, the recent past does underline the bright fact that dental care costs have indeed risen less in proportion to other health costs than you probably have believed.

(3) Still another factor in moderating dental care costs has been the fact that 95 percent of all these costs are paid privately, compared with 45 percent government funding of other aspects of health care. Dentists want any national health plan to include dental care, particularly for children. But they want to focus the use of limited public funds (coming from taxes) only to those unable to afford dental services.

The ADA also stresses that these dental services should be provided through a private system of delivery and the benefits should be administered in the private sector.

Some early morning cloudiness was reported in West Texas, but most of the state had continued clear skies and quite warm temperatures. Extremes ranged from 62 at Dalhart in the Panhandle to 81 at Galveston.

Thunderstorm activity was reported during the night in West Texas and some activity continued during the pre-dawn hours over the mountains of Southwest Texas. The heaviest rainfall, however, was in Eastern New Mexico where some areas got more than half of an inch of rainfall.

Highs were expected to be mostly in the 90s today with some areas of Central Texas and the lowlands of the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas expecting highs above the 100-degree mark.

Early morning temperatures included 64 at Amarillo, 75 at Wichita Falls, 77 at Texarkana, 75 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 73 at Austin, 70 at Lufkin, 78 at Corpus Christi, 80 at Brownsville and McAllen, 78 at Del Rio, 76 at San Angelo and 72 at El Paso. Rain was reported at El Paso and Amarillo reported cloudy skies. Skies were clear to partly cloudy at the other reporting points.

National weather

By The Associated Press

Storms appeared for a third straight day over Ohio, across northern West Virginia and southwestern Pennsylvania and into western Maryland.

Showers and thunderstorms also continue from Arizona and New Mexico through eastern Colorado into the central and northern plains.

Hospital workers on strike

TEXARKANA, Texas (AP) — Members of Local 11271 of the Communications Workers of America called a strike early today at Wadley Hospital here.

A hospital spokesman said the picket line was set up at 4:40 a.m. today.

There was no indication as to how many of the about 500 union members would walk off their jobs in what is said to be the first hospital strike in Texas.

The strike was set for 4:30 a.m. today, union negotiator Dale Magee said.

Union negotiator Dale Magee said union members will picket all eight entrances to the 358-bed hospital during the strike.

Several hours before the picket line went up, Magee said "The only thing that can stop the picket lines would be contact from the hospital and complete agreement on the contract."

Hospital spokesman Charles Stuart confirmed early today that the pickets were in place.

"We have three shifts, so it will take awhile before we know what kind of impact the strike will have," he said.

There were less than 200 patients in the hospital Tuesday night, Stuart said.

Magee declined to estimate how long the strike could last.

Negotiations between the union and the hospital administration broke off in a stalemate Saturday. A strike was planned for Sunday, but the picket lines did not materialize.

Magee said at the time, the local felt that having its members report to work as scheduled would have a greater economic impact on the hospital than the scheduled strike.

He said earlier that employees would strike if the hospital resumed admitting non-emergency patients, which it did Sunday morning.

Texarkana Police Chief Harold McGee said he expects no trouble from the picketing workers.

"From talking with the hospital and the union, we are not expecting any violence. Of course if any law is violated, we will approach it in a normal manner," McGee said.

THIS LION SUNDIAL may not be as handy as an ultramodern digital wristwatch. But it is certainly a lot more formidable. The gilt sundial, dating from China's Ming Dynasty (16th-17th centuries), is among the items on display at the Smithsonian Institution's Hall of Timekeeping.

News watch

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Most of Australia's trains were halted today by a 48-hour strike of engineers demanding higher pay. Roads leading into Sydney were jammed with cars for more than seven miles, and rain added to the traffic jams.

PORDENONE, Italy (AP) — Workmen restoring the 15th century cathedral in the nearby town of Sacile, badly damaged in a 1976 earthquake, have uncovered a hidden fresco.

Art experts said the work was extremely interesting and planned tests to determine the artist and when it was painted.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain (AP) — Gunmen believed to be Basque separatists killed a policeman and wounded three others seriously outside San Sebastian.

The four were in a jeep when they were machine-gunned Tuesday from a speeding car by several men who escaped.

It was the 16th killing blamed on ETA, the Basque separatist organization, since the beginning of the year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government restriction on worker exposure to benzene is temporarily being relaxed pending the outcome of a court fight.

Benzene is a chemical linked to leukemia in laboratory tests on animals. The Labor Department said Tuesday trace amounts of benzene in liquid mixtures will be exempted from a permanent restrictive standard for three years. The oil industry and several large chemical, rubber and steel companies contend the standard is unnecessarily strict and economically unfeasible.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government land no longer needed for highways will be used for such projects as parks, schools and housing.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said Tuesday states deciding not to complete federally aided highways will be able to switch use of the land without having to repay federal highway funds put up for original acquisition.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of organizations is on record with the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee in opposition to lifetime federal job preference for veterans.

Patrol to be out in force

Operation Motorcade, an effort by the personnel of the Texas Department of Public Safety to reduce highway slaughter will be underway in the Panhandle during the Independence Day weekend.

Major C. W. Bell, regional DPS commander, said, "Traffic speeds are up and more people are expected to be on Texas highways this Fourth of July holiday."

The weekend effort by the DPS is to begin at 6 p.m. Friday and end at 11:59 p.m. Tuesday, July 4.

Bell said that all deaths resulting from traffic accidents during this period will be reported to Austin DPS headquarters immediately.

During the 102-hour period, every available trooper will be on the road at all times, Bell said.

Drivers license, motor vehicle inspection and license and weight troopers will assist the Texas Highway Patrol in an all out effort to assist and aid the motorist, the regional commander said.

The DPS personnel will be on the alert on all highways in the area to control traffic, lower speeds and get the drinking driver from behind the wheel.

Bell said.

He said it is anticipated that with all uniformed troopers on conspicuous patrol, that traffic violations will be greatly deterred throughout this Fourth of July holiday.

He urged each and every driver to do his or her part this holiday by not drinking and driving.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How can someone tell a good friend or lover that his breath would knock over a herd of buffalo? I am speaking of my future husband. He sleeps with his mouth open, and in the morning I can't even get near him! I'm afraid that after we get married I won't be able to give him a good morning kiss without gagging.

He is a very sensitive person and I don't want to hurt his feelings. HELP!

CANT TELL HIM

DEAR CANT: If you can't tell him, who can? If you won't tell him, who will? TELL HIM! Halitosis is a pothole on the royal road to romance.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something about people who punish their children and then won't let them cry. I am of the opinion that crying is a normal outlet when a person is angry, hurt or frustrated, and children need to cry to get it out of their systems.

I have a relative who increases the punishment if a child cries. (He says it's a sign of weakness, and he doesn't want any weak kids!)

I would like your opinion.

TENDERHEARTED AUNT

DEAR AUNT: To punish a child for crying is cruel. Children (and adults, too) need to express their emotions freely without fear of being shamed, ridiculed or punished further.

Please tell your relative that tears are as vital to the emotional growth of a child as laughter, and crying is a normal response—not a sign of weakness. Your relative is guilty of child abuse!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a big, handsome, vigorous-looking man of 29. He's a loving father, but due to a chronic back problem he can't lift anything that weighs more than four or five pounds, much less his 13-month-old son.

While taking a Sunday walk, I was carrying our husky child, when a total stranger asked, "Why isn't that strong young man carrying that baby instead of you?"

I can't tell you how humiliating this was to a man who has already suffered much pain and has had to limit his activities because of his unseen handicap.

Please, please print this so ignorant busybodies (even well-meaning ones) will realize that things are not always as they appear. Believe me, my husband, and many others in his predicament, would like nothing better than to carry the baby, carry out the garbage, carry in the groceries, etc.

HAPPY TO CARRY THE LOAD

DEAR HAPPY: And I'm happy to carry your worthwhile message to my readers.

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'CANT FORGIVE': He who cannot forgive others destroys the bridge over which he must pass himself; for every man needs to be forgiven.

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am on a diet and I have been trying to walk for 30 minutes a day. I have been walking for five days and I haven't lost any yet. Does it take longer than 30 minutes a day?

DEAR READER: It's probably going to take a lot longer than you had anticipated. Walking when you're on a diet helps to prevent loss of muscle mass which is important. What you really want to lose when you're on a diet is fat, not muscle. In addition it does burn up calories and if you add them up over a year's time it does become significant.

You shouldn't think of the time it requires to walk so much as the distance you walk. Walking a mile, for most people, is equivalent to using about 50 or 60 calories. If it takes you 30 minutes to walk a mile you'll only be using about 50 calories. There are 3,500 calories in a pound of body fat.

At that rate it would take you 70 days to lose one pound of body fat if walking is all you're going to do. Even so, with that little effort of walking one mile a day you would get rid of a little more than seven pounds of body fat over a year's time. If you're able to walk a little more each day of course you'll get more benefit out of it.

The best program for most people is a combination of sensible exercise and modest reduction in calories. When both are done consistently over a sufficient period of time this usually produces results. But it does require patience and that means that you'll have to wait more than five days to see the results. To give you such a program I'm sending you The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I read your column about low sperm count. I have a suggestion for the couple that might work. I know of one couple who had a similar problem and the man had been taking extremely hot showers. Apparently the heat had something to do with the man's infertility. I don't know whether this would help or not but it's just a suggestion.

DEAR READER: And it's a good suggestion, because it's true that excess heat can cause sterility. There have even been studies done applying heat to the testicles as a means of birth control. I hasten to add that these studies are experimental. I don't want to trigger any strange fads that might result from that idea.

There are many causes for a low sperm count. In some instances the count can be improved and in others it cannot. Regarding temperature, I might point out that a varicocele, which is literally varicose veins of the testicles, is a factor in causing sterility in some men. Why? Because the normal circulation keeps the testicles somewhat below normal body temperature. With large varicoceles and the circulatory stagnation that results, the normal temperature control mechanism is sometimes out of kilter. In these instances correction of the varicocele may improve the sperm count and fertility of the man involved.

The avoidance of heat and, for that matter, light underwear or any other factor that interferes with the normal temperature control is sometimes useful in helping to improve male fertility. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Polly's pointers

By Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY: I am answering Mr. H.K.B. who wanted to know what could be done with bathroom and kitchen rugs when the rubber backing starts to come off. Having been a nurse for years I try to practice safety first in regard to throw rugs and hall runners — I have had patients who fell and fractured a hip or leg on newly waxed floors or throw rugs that slid.

When the backing starts to go I buy rug grip in 24 or 27-inch widths. This is sold by the running foot in small mail order catalogs and is placed under such washable rugs. The rug grip can be cut to any shape or length and mine has lasted years and years. — FRANCES

DEAR POLLY: My Pet Peeve is with the boxes our breakfast cereals come in. With the inner waxed bag it costs us a needless amount of money — I am sure such boxes are far from cheap. We go to a store that has puffed rice and wheat in plastic bags. The contents keep fresh and it costs a lot less than the fancy packaged kind. I do hope you will promote this among the proper people. — ROGER

DEAR POLLY: I hated to throw away my half slips that are now too short. The other day I took an old pair of briefs, used them as a pattern and made myself briefs from all those short slips. — J.L.

Tips on water safety

By JANE E. BRODY

New York — Each year in the United States, 6,000 to 8,000 people die from drowning and more than 3 million have close calls. Small children wander off and fall into unattended pools and ponds. Boats overturn, fishermen lose their footing, swimmers panic when struck by a cramp or caught in a current, young and old alike swim out farther than they should.

The majority of these drownings and near-drownings are avoidable. If people understood the risks of water sports, followed some basic rules of safety and learned how to save themselves when in trouble, the joys of a refreshing swim or a relaxing boat ride need not be marred by tragedy.

All types of water sports — from sailing, skiing, snorkeling and scuba diving to canoeing, fishing and swimming — have become so popular that well over half the population faces the risk of drowning this summer. Here are some tips on making a splash safely.

When Swimming
If you can't swim or are a weak swimmer, don't go out into calm water deeper than shoulder height. The rougher the water or stronger the current, the more cautious you should be. Children who do not swim well should never be allowed to float out over their heads on a raft or in a tube. The device might deflate or the child slip off. Children who cannot swim should wear a life jacket whenever near water. Many drown after falling off docks.

Never swim alone. Even a strong swimmer should have a companion along when swimming in deep water. If you are in the water alone, stay near the shore and be sure that someone on shore who is a good swimmer is alert to your presence. At beaches and public pools, swim only when and where there is a life-guard on duty, and even then small children should be supervised by a responsible adult.

Don't swim right after eating a meal. An hour's wait is a good general rule. After eating, your blood tends to pool in your gastrointestinal area, causing a relative shortage of blood in the muscles of the limbs. This increases the likelihood that cramps will develop in your arms or legs. Abdominal cramps may also result from too-vigorous exercise soon after eating.

Don't plunge directly into very cold water. This causes the blood vessels in your arms and legs to constrict and may cause cramping. Instead, slowly acclimate your body to the cold water by vigorously rubbing your extremities with the water and jiggling your arms in the water up to your elbows. And no matter what the water temperature, leave the water when you feel cold or tired.

Don't do deep-breathing exercises before taking a swim underwater. While such exercises can increase the time you can swim without seeming to require a breath, they can also fool your body into thinking your brain has enough oxygen when it doesn't. As a result you may black out suddenly, without warning, and drown.

Don't dive into water of unknown depth or bottom. Many an unwary diver has been permanently crippled by striking his head on a submerged boulder or tree trunk. Above-ground pools are too shallow for safe diving. Dive only into water that is six or more feet deep.

All pools should be protected by a high fence or gate (preferably six feet high and a type that can't be scaled by a child) that can be locked when not in use. If you plan to be away for an extended period, the pool should be emptied or covered securely.

Your pool should be clearly marked as to depth at various points and a buoyed rope placed across the middle. If a diving board is in use, swimmers should stay clear of the diving area.

Stay out of the water in a electric storm. Also, keep portable electrical equipment away from poolsides.

Don't attempt water sports like skiing or scuba diving without lessons from a qualified instructor.

At the beginning of the swimming season, children should not assume they can swim as well or as far as they did at the end of the previous season. At any time, every swimmer should know the limits of his ability and endurance and not try to exceed them.

Children should be taught to swim early, preferably before they enter school, but swimming programs for children under three years old are not advised.

According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, infants may be able to learn to swim and to keep their heads above water, but they cannot be taught water safety and proper reactions to emergency. Very young children can rarely swim far because they don't learn how to breathe properly. Swimming instruction for older children and adults is available at Y's, Red Cross chapters, many public pools, camps and schools.

At any pool or swimming area, keep some sort of rescue equipment handy, such as a long pole or shepherd's crook and a life ring on a rope. You can make an excellent rescue device by attaching a gallon plastic jug for ballast that has been filled with about an inch or so of water for ballast to above 40 feet of rope.

When Boating
Never overload a boat. If there is no stated loading capacity, a good rule is one person to a seat. In calm water, in a small craft there should be at least six inches of freeboard above the water. In rough water or waves, a larger freeboard allowance is necessary to prevent swamping. The boat should be balanced from side to side and from fore to aft.

A boat should be operated only by someone totally familiar with how it works and how to handle it under a variety of conditions. The boat should be in top working order, but small motorboats should always be equipped with oars, just in case.

There should be a life preserver or safety cushion on board for each occupant, and anyone who is not a good swimmer should wear a Coast Guard-approved life jacket at all times. Life belts or jackets should always be worn by water skiers.

Be aware of and guided by weather conditions before going out in a boat. If a storm approaches, get back to shore immediately. If necessary, wait out a storm before attempting to return home.

Know boating "rules of the road" to avoid collisions.

If your boat should swamp or capsize, stay with it unless it is heading toward danger (such as a dam), the water is very cold or safety is near enough to swim to. Know how to swim to shore in or on a capsized or swamped boat.

What to Do if...
The most common cause of drowning is panic. A swimmer struck by a cramp, tumbled by a wave, caught in a current or too exhausted to continue will stop thinking and perform motions that accomplish little and waste his remaining energy. The panicked swimmer swallows and inhales water and drowns.

To relieve a cramp, float on your back (your body's natural buoyancy will keep you up), relax and try to massage the cramped area. Avoid stretching a cramped limb until the pain eases.

If you are tumbled by a wave, don't fight it. You'll soon resurface right where you started from, since the water in a wave does not move in and out but rather up, down and around in a circle.

Don't try to fight a current. If an ocean current is carrying you out, swim parallel to the beach until it dissipates. In a river, always swim diagonally across the current in the direction of its flow and walk back along the shore to reach your destination.

Many drowning accidents could be avoided if more swimmers knew and used a technique called drownproofing. It allows you to stay afloat for very long periods with a minimum expenditure of energy. It is much easier than treading water or even floating horizontally. It is a skill that every swimmer should learn and practice.

Floating upright (vertically) with your arms dangling at your sides, take a deep breath, hold it and hang there with your face underwater. When you need a breath, exhale slowly through your nose, raise your arms and cross them in front of your face. Then move your arms apart and when they are fully extended, push downward with your palms, tilt your head back and when your mouth comes out of the water, take a breath. Then lower your head and arms again and bob until you need another breath. When you feel able, you can move into a horizontal position and start kicking toward shore, repeating the drownproofing technique whenever needed.

If someone has been rescued from a near-drowning, he must be brought to a hospital for observation for at least 24 hours. Many "saved" persons die from the delayed effects of near-drowning, which can only be detected and treated effectively in a hospital.

TIPS FOR HOMEOWNERS

SPRINKLING YOUR LAWN
You can save money, water and precious leisure time through a new way to water your lawn. An automatic traveling sprinkler allows you to walk away and enjoy your day while it does the job for you.

It gives you the same result as an expensive underground lawn system at a much lower cost. It works by walking around your lawn while it waters it, reeling in its own hose as it goes.

It follows any area pattern you lay out with your garden hose on any size or shape lawn, goes around corners, into hard-to-reach areas, climbs up hills, walks everywhere and, when it gets to the point you've set for it to stop, shuts itself off automatically.

Called the Travel-Matic sprinkler and made by Melnor in five different models for different size lawns, it's solidly constructed and gives years of reliable, trouble-free service.

In addition, because it accurately applies the proper amount of water, it's good for helping your water bills grow less and your grass grow more.

Lightwave communications

Tripping the light fantastic

In an age when the latest scientific discovery is often yesterday's news, Bell Laboratories scientists think they have an old idea that could be tomorrow's news.

According to Gary Stevens, manager for Southwestern Bell in Pampa, "The re-discovery is light, particularly light to carry sound. In the not too distant future, controlled light may be carrying million of phone calls in Pampa and other cities throughout the United States."

The major advantages of using light to carry calls, versus conventional copper cable, Stevens said, are:

— Greater capacity in a smaller cable thus relieving underground congestion already prevalent in many cities.

— Greater availability and lower cost of materials that would go into a lightwave system.

— The possibility that the system would make Picturephone service economically feasible for residential customers.

The manager said the idea of using light to carry telephone conversations came from Alexander Graham Bell more than a century ago. At the time, however, the inventor of the telephone found that, because lightwaves are easily interrupted, sound would not carry for great distances.

"Today, Bell Labs scientists are taking the original theories and putting them into a practical application," Stevens said.

According to Stevens, the world's first lightwave system was installed in Chicago's downtown business district a year ago. The system is carrying voice, data and video signals for about one and one-half miles.

"This pilot system has exceeded objectives," Stevens said. "After a year of steady operation, the system has provided dependable service with virtually no downtime. Not a single customer phone call has been interrupted by the lightwave components. And transmission errors total less than one second per day."

"The initial breakthrough in lightwave communications came with development of the laser at Bell Labs in 1960," Stevens said. "During 20 years of research, Bell Labs technicians developed glass fiber lightguides to carry signals through cables installed in standard telephone manholes and ducts. These hair-thin fibers, which look like nylon fishing line, are produced by Western Electric, the manufacturing arm of the Bell System."

Explaining lightwave communications, Stevens said that sound waves are converted into electrical signals as they enter a telephone transmitter. The signals are then converted into electrical pulses, which switch a light source on and off. These pulses interrupt a light beam that travels through a glass fiber, so the light travels in a series of pulses, much like Morse Code.

"The light pulses are picked up by a photodetector, which converts them back into electrical pulses, like those used in a conventional telephone system," Stevens said.

The manager added that lightguide cables offer two major advantages over copper cables — smaller size and greater call-carrying capacity.

A lightguide cable less than one-half inch in diameter can transmit 50,000 telephone calls at once — the equivalent of six 3-inch copper cables," Stevens said. "A single glass fiber can carry up to 672 simultaneous conversations."

In addition, Stevens said, the basic material of lightguides is silica, which comes from one of earth's most abundant resources — sand.

"And, although we may someday run out of copper, it is doubtful we will ever run out of sand," Stevens said. "That doesn't even take in the difference in cost."

Stevens said the most exciting aspect of lightwave communications could be its impact on Picturephone service.

"At present, the majority of telephone users cannot afford the service," Stevens said. "But we are hoping lightwave systems eventually will make the service affordable. Experiments with Picturephone service in Chicago also have surpassed expectations."

Based on the Chicago experiments, the Bell System has committed itself to having the first lightwave communications link in regular service by the end of 1980.

"We tested the equipment in a working environment," Stevens said, "and now we will move ahead to integrate this system with the other components of telecommunications."

"That doesn't mean this is the final solution," Stevens said. "Even between the experimental stages and the Chicago installation, many factors were improved. And changes will be on-going based on technological developments and customer needs."

"But it may not be too many years before Picturephone service makes its way to Pampa — on a beam of light."

More is less

Jack Atterberry of Illinois Bell compares a half-inch lightguide cable with a standard type cable used to connect telephone switching offices. The new lightguide cable will be utilized to carry voice, data and video signals. In Chicago, a test system has "exceeded objectives."

For wife-beaters, the heat is on

NEW YORK (AP) — Discarding its policy of having officers try to mediate family disputes, the New York Police Department has agreed to begin arresting men who beat their wives.

The agreement came Monday in an out-of-court settlement of a suit filed by 71 women who claimed police ignored their reports of being repeatedly beaten by their husbands.

Under the new policy, at least one officer must respond to every report of a wife-beating or threatened beating and a husband must be arrested for assault if there is reason to believe a crime has been committed, unless there is justification not to do so.

The agreement makes clear the justification cannot, as in the past, rely on the fact that the attacker and victim are married or that the police officer thinks they should reconcile.

The agreement was worked out by lawyers for the 71 women and City Corporation Counsel Allan Schwartz, with the cooperation of Police Commissioner Robert McGuire.

Schwartz said the consent judgment signed by the opposing lawyers does not change any existing laws, but recognizes that in practice in the past, married women in assault cases have been treated differently from unmarried women."

Laurie Woods, an attorney for the suing women, hailed the agreement as "the first official recognition by any law enforcement agency in New York that wife assault is serious and pervasive."

She said battered wives "are now entitled to the same police protection as other victims of crimes."

The 71 women filed the suit in 1976 with the help of the Legal Aid Society, the Center for Constitutional Rights and lawyers from federally financed legal services groups.

Sentences out in dorm rape

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Riley County District Court Judge Ronald Innes sentenced Kirk Boykin, 20, of Houston, the last of the defendants in the Kansas State University athletic dormitory rape case, to five years in prison.

The judge then suspended the sentence and placed Boykin on probation for a year.

Carter testing the water on taxation issue

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
There's nothing like a tax bill to arouse Jimmy Carter's populist instincts and elicit presidential outrage against martini-swilling businessmen and tax-dodging millionaires.

But he seems to be having trouble convincing the American people, all those middle-income, burden-bearing taxpayers, to share his outrage and transmit it to Congress.

Last winter, he took out after businessmen and their now legendary three-martini lunches.

"I don't care how many martinis anyone has for lunch, but I am concerned about who picks up the check," said the president. "I don't think a relatively strong minority has some sort of divine right to have expensive meals, free theater tickets, country club dues and sporting event tickets paid for by heavier taxes on everybody else."
But the American people didn't use up and march on the saloons.

"Now it's 3,000 millionaires who are staying rich at the expense of the rest of us."

"The American people want some tax relief from the heavy burden of taxation on their shoulders, but neither they nor I will tolerate a plan that provides huge tax windfalls for millionaires and two bits for the average American," Carter told a news conference on Monday.

His target this time was proposals to reduce the rate at which profits on sale of such items as houses and stocks is taxed.

Carter's rhetoric emphasized the rates at which capital gains are taxed.
He singled out the proposal being pushed by Republicans on Capitol Hill, with growing Democratic support, to cut the tax on capital gains from a maximum 49 percent to a top of 25 percent.

The president's numbers sounded politically irresistible.

"Three thousand millionaires would get tax reductions averaging $214,000," he said. "The other 99 and one-half percent of our taxpayers would not do quite so well."

That's pretty strong stuff.
But one may get an uneasy feeling that a high percentage of those middle-income families did not pay any capital gains taxes unless they sold a house without buying a more expensive one.

And those people who did get hit with capital gains taxes on the profit from the sale of the family homestead or think they might sell it soon might end up sympathizing with those 3,000 millionaires.

gust are honey-gathering time for beekeepers.

Ruling bothers media

WASHINGTON (AP) — News executives are telling Congress that a Supreme Court decision on police searches of news-rooms is drying up confidential sources. One news director said the decision "has scared a hell of a lot of reporters."

And an attorney from the Justice Department, which backed the right of police to search newsrooms, admitted the decision "has the potential of having a chilling effect" on the news media.

The court ruled police can obtain warrants from local judges to search news offices even if there is no evidence that a reporter or editor has any direct connection to the commission of a crime.

News executives and prosecutors on Monday told a House Government Operations subcommittee why they opposed the ruling.

William Small, news director of the CBS television network who remarked that reporters were "scared," said newsmen have found it more difficult to develop confidential sources since the May 31 decision.

Louis D. Boccardi, executive editor and vice president of The Associated Press, told of a prosecutor in Helena, Mont., who obtained a search warrant against the AP. The prosecutor, Charles A. Gravelly, was seeking a recorded phone conversation between an AP reporter and an accused killer of a policeman.

Boccardi said that the prosecutor demanded "that we open our news bureau and our files" instead of seeking a voluntary turnover of the tape or obtaining a subpoena which could be challenged in court.

Gravelly told the committee that he considered charging the AP reporter under a Montana law which prohibits tape recording a phone conversation without obtaining permission of the other party.

Gravelly acknowledged under questioning that he considered filing charges only because of the refusal to turn over the tape.

Robert Healy, editor of the Boston Globe, said one source ended his contacts with a reporter on the paper because he feared that law enforcement authorities could learn his identity through use of a search warrant.

Acting Assistant Attorney General John C. Keeney, speaking of the potential "chilling effect" on the press, said the Justice Department only would use search warrants against news offices in the most extreme cases.

Billy (the Kid) Martin will die with spikes on

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — That was no vote of confidence bestowed on firebrand Billy Martin in his 2½-hour confrontation with his Yankee bosses last Monday.

It was a moratorium. It was a decision by all principals to "cool it" for the remainder of the season. Win, lose or draw in 1978, the Yankees will have a new skipper in 1979 by mutual agreement.

Owner George Steinbrenner and President Al Rosen would like to have Dick Williams. He fits their mold. The question is: How are you going to get Williams away from Montreal without inviting tampering penalties?

There were two keys to the formal 150-word announcement relating to Martin's latest reprieve.

One was the opening sentence: "Billy Martin will remain as manager of the Yankees this year." What about next year? He has another year to go on his $100,000-a-year contract. What if Billy rallies his forces and pulls off another World Series coup?

No matter. He is out. He hinted an out for himself — the second key — when, in discussing his future, he confided to reporters: "There is a health matter. I will have something to say about it later." Next October, maybe?

Martin is a scrappy, highly efficient field general — an ability proven with three other teams which fired him before he came to the Yankees. If his security depended on his managerial genius alone, he could have the New York job for life. It's in other areas — his brawling instincts, a tendency toward arrogance, open defiance of his bosses and sometimes a failure to communicate with his men — that has alienated him with the people who pay his salary.

Billy's career, both as player and manager, is something that should be preserved in Ring

Amarillo hits and misses

By The Associated Press
Bob Clark's 18th home run of the season paced the El Paso Diablos to a 7-6 Texas League baseball victory over the San Antonio Dodgers Tuesday night. In other Texas League action Midland defeated Amarillo, 11-5. Tulsa shut out Shreveport, 6-0, and Arkansas edged Jackson, 5-2.

El Paso pitcher Chuck Porter picked up the victory, his fifth straight without a loss. Rick Sander, now 4-6, was tagged for the loss.

Amarillo batters slugged 10 hits, including two sixth-inning home runs, but could not overcome four errors as the Gold Sox lost to the Midland Cubs. Dane Ilertson and Paul O'Neil had homers for Amarillo in the sixth inning. Jeff Albert, now 4-5, was the winning pitcher. Gary Pickert, now 5-7, took the loss.

Don Rainer hurled his fourth shutout of the year as Tulsa's Drillers whitewashed Shreveport, 6-0. Dave Rivera helped by slugging his 10th homer of the year for the Drillers in the eighth. The two-run blast was the fifth Rivera has hit off of Captains pitching so far this season.

Dave Bialas raced home from first base when Dave Pennill stroke a double in the seventh inning as Arkansas defeated Jackson, 5-2. The run gave the Travelers the lead to stay. Brett Houser, now 2-1, picked up the victory. Dennis Solari, now 0-1, was the loser.

Rangers make it seven

OAKLAND (AP) — Things are starting to fall into place for the Texas Rangers.

"We knew if our pitching held up long enough, we would start to get some key hits," Manager Billy Hunter of the Rangers said following a 3-1 victory over the Oakland A's Tuesday night.

The victory was the seventh straight for Texas and gives the Rangers a one game lead over the Kansas City Royals in the American League West. Oakland fell to five games behind.

Dock Ellis, with relief help from Reggie Cleveland in the ninth inning, stopped the A's with a five-hitter. The Texas pitching staff has not allowed an earned run in four of its last five games.

"We knew we would start hitting sooner or later," Hunter said. The key hits Tuesday night were provided by Bump Wills, Jim Sundberg and Bobby Bonds.

Wills singled to score a run in the third inning. Sundberg singled to drive in the go-ahead run in the fourth inning, and Bonds provided an insurance run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning.

Ellis, now 7-3, said he tired a little in the late innings. "I asked to come out because we had a good man in the bullpen," Ellis said.

He gave up an unearned run in the first inning and then held the A's to a pair of singles before leaving the game after eight innings.

"We can still win this thing," Ellis said. "It's too early to say but after the All-Star Game we will have a pretty good idea what our chances are. It was only a matter of time until we started putting together a winning streak."

Things were not quite as bright for the A's. Starting pitcher Rick Langford gave up only six hits in the seven innings he pitched. But he walked four batters and an error by catcher Jim Essian gave Texas its last run in the eighth inning.

Manager Jack McKeon of the A's said he would continue to use the same lineup despite a batting slump that has resulted in only three victories in the last 19 games.

"We have our best ballplayers on the field in every game. We just are not hitting," McKeon said.

The A's scored their only run on a single by Tito Fuentes. An error by Texas third baseman Toby Harrah and a single by Mitchell Page.

Page was caught stealing to keep the A's from possibly scoring another run.

Texas made two double-plays and pinch runner Miguel Dilone was caught stealing to prevent the A's from scoring runs later in the game.

The A's and Rangers play again tonight with Doyle Alexander (6-4) pitching for Texas against Pete Broberg (7-6).

Borg and Connors on crash course

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Bjorn Borg and former champion Jimmy Connors continue on their collision course today after another ex-Wimbledon champion, Arthur Ashe, and a youngster with a rosy future both crashed.

Last year, 19-year-old John McEnroe had to pre-qualify and shocked the tennis world by reaching the semifinals. This year things were different as the youngster, in only his second week as a tennis professional, lost to Erik van Dillen, a 26-year-old Californian better known as a doubles player.

Another American teen-age star, 15-year-old Tracy Austin, also discovered how difficult life can be when you are expected to do well. She took nearly two hours, and three hard-fought sets, to overcome a relative unknown — Dianne Desfor — in her first-round match.

Top-seeded Borg of Sweden meets Peter McNamara today while second-seeded Jimmy Connors will go up against another Australian, Kim Warwick.

Van Dillen, out of the game for four months last year with a leg injury, had to pre-qualify this year. But he responded by dumping McEnroe, seeded 11th, out of the tournament after five pulsating sets, 7-5, 1-6, 8-9, 6-4, 6-3.

Austin overcame Desfor 6-1, 6-8, 6-4.

Afterwards, Austin, who has three years of high school still left and is still an amateur, said: "There is more pressure on me than a year ago, but I try not to think about it."

Unlike McEnroe, although seeded No. 9, Austin is not expected to do tremendously well.

"I would like to win a few rounds," she said, "but if I play as long as Billie Jean (King), I could be coming back for 20 more years."

The pressures on McEnroe are far greater. He reached the final at Queen's Club last week in his first-ever pro tournament, and many felt he could have done even better at Wimbledon this year than he did last.

After his match, McEnroe still looked shocked at having been knocked out so early.

Steve Docherty, ranked No. 33 in the United States, upset

An inside glimpse at the Texas lobbyist

EDITORS' NOTE — How does a lobbyist operate? Does modern lobbying fit the stereotype of the bloated gladhander passing out big bills outside legislative chambers? Which lobbies carry the most clout in Austin?

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — "If I could get everyone of 'em out on the golf course, I would do it," railroad lobbyist Walter Caven says of the 181-member Texas Legislature.

Caven, a lobbyist for 19 years, exemplifies the old pro who uses a generous expense account and an easygoing manner to make friends with legislators.

Golf games, lunches and drinks at the Headliners Club are part of Caven's repertoire. He's affable but also canny, with a sense of timing like a switching yard dispatcher.

"We hit the bill early — on introduction almost. If we get a commitment early, it goes a long way. Most members don't have any interest in 95 percent of the bills. They'll do what you ask if you get to them early," Caven said.

But lobbying today is more than charm and the one-on-one persuasiveness of pros like Caven who wait outside House and Senate chambers at lunch time.

It involves big bucks and volunteers for political campaigns, big crowds to pack galleries and hearing rooms, mobilization of legislators' home folks and offering nuggets of compelling information at strategic moments.

Some say it also involves red herrings and intimidation. Over 3,000 persons registered as lobbyists during the 1977 session, says Terry Goodman, chief of the secretary of state's enforcement division.

"That's the most in the nation. And the No. 2 state had only 400," said Ms. Goodman.

Your kid's teacher or your barber might be in Ms. Goodman's file. Texas' rather wierd Lobby Control Act says they're lobbyists if somebody else — such as a professional association — paid their expenses to come to Austin and buttonhole legislators.

Until they cancel their registrations, they must file regular reports on spending to contact lawmakers.

Those reports — only the tip of the lobby iceberg — show entertainment is the biggest expenditure. A Harte-Hanks newspaper chain reporter read all the reports last year and found lobbyists spent $400,000 wined and dining legislators last session.

Caven's $4,810 was piddling by comparison with the $15,407 spent by Phil Gauss of the Texas Trial Lawyers Association, which offered a daily lunch spread at its headquarters across from the Capitol.

Lawyers and doctors were locked in combat over medical malpractice at the time. The doctors' lobbyist, Ace Pickens, spent $1,031.

Texas State Teachers Association lobbyists Callie Smith and Jim Hooser spent only $895. Highway lobbyist Eugene Robbins, who scored with over $500 million in new road appropriations, spent a modest $2,532. Harry Hubbard and Sherman Fricks of the Texas AFL-CIO spent $7,737.

Real estate lobbyist Gerhard Schulle said his $6,883 in entertainment tabs were worth every penny.

"It makes it easier for you to communicate, not because you're buddy-buddy but because you understand the person," he said.

But the new breed of young, issue-oriented legislator is not always eager to socialize with lobbyists.

"I appreciate people who come to the point rather than talking business over a two-or three-hour lunch or an evening at the Caucus Club," says Rep. Chase Untermeyer, R-Houston.

Entertainment costs are gnats alongside the silver eagles of the lobby's campaign political action committees (PACs).

The Texas Medical PAC spent $536,642 in 1977 and 1978 on legislative, congressional, state and national politics. The trial lawyers' Lawyers Involved For Texas (LIFT) spent $188,676; realtors (TREPAC) $262,877; highway builders a surprisingly low $3,373; nursing home administrators (NAPACT) $60,453; undertakers (Morti-PAC) $14,500; teachers (TEPAC) $11,950, and the AFL-CIO, $19,887.

Morti-PAC gave $500 to Meier, who chairs the commission that will recommend whether the Legislature should phase out the undertakers capitive State Board of Morticians. Is the campaign contribution that valuable as a lobbying tool?

"To say yes would be to say a guy did something because of that contribution. I don't think that is true," said medical lobbyist Pickens.

But Caven says, "They listen to a $1,000 contribution more than a $100 contribution. I don't know how much the trial lawyers give, but they give too damn much. There are some senators that do anything they want."

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, claims the Texas Real Estate Association, which helped kill his property tax "reform" bill last year, controls several Senate votes through contributions.

"Senate members are more inclined to go with the big contributors because it takes so much to run a Senate race. In the House... you can run a campaign on shoe leather," he said.

Realtors did make the big contributions — such as $10,000 to Lombardino. Schulle said his organization sought to "elect people who share your basic philosophy."

They obviously when legislation comes up that is important to your industry, they are going to be more understanding because their philosophy is more in tune with yours."

When there's not much money, campaign volunteers are almost as good — some say better — at winning legislative friends.

"I think the candidates know who's a teacher," says the TSTA's Smith.

Some lobbyists and legislators say a lobbyist's success hinges on even less tangible things. "The truly most effective method of lobbying is friendship. — 'Can I do this to ol' Joe Smith, he's my good buddy?'" said Rep. John Wilson, D-La-Grange.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, says effective lobbyists are at it year-around — like Harry Whitworth of the Texas Chemical Council and his annual, dove hunts.

And anybody who thinks lobbying begins and ends with the pros is naive at best.

Lobbyists speak for business, labor, professional and other special interest organizations with members scattered throughout the 181 House and Senate districts.

The savvy lobbyist knows how and when to mobilize these people into formidable armies of letter writers, phone callers and button-holders — even down to mass appearances in the Capitol.

Getting a piece of the-(sigh)-pie

By JIM ALLEN

Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Ark. (AP) — Homemade pies, with thick, flaky crusts chock-full of apples, peaches and pecans, have become the bread-and-butter of this tiny Ouachita Mountain valley community.

They've been used to pay for street improvements and new lighting for the town ballpark and are helping finance a new health center.

Pie in the sky, you say? Far from it, answers the mayor, Norma Michael. Since the pie sales began in 1975 as part of a Bicentennial project, the town has raised $6,000 to pay for several improvements.

Hartford, population 660, is a former mining town situated in the shadow of Sugarloaf Mountain. It is located about 150 miles northwest of Little Rock just east of the Oklahoma border.

The pie sales are sponsored by an organization called "The Hartford Boosters" — a group that includes members of the Women's Auxiliary, Blue Star and Masons.

"The Boosters was formed in 1975 as a Bicentennial committee to raise funds for the W. J. Hamilton Mining Museum," the mayor said. "We did so good, we started searching for other things to do" with the proceeds.

The next project is to build a health clinic in hopes of luring a doctor to Hartford, which has been without a physician since 1952.

The pies go for $2.50 each and are purchased mostly by town residents. And the Boosters have combined volunteer labor with the pie sales to sweeten the pot.

"By working together, we found that we can accomplish many things. The Boosters brought people together like never before. Folks are cleaning up vacant lots and hauling off their old cars. . . We're making Hartford a good place to live," she said.

Hartford was once a larger town, but many people left when the coal mines to the south closed and World War II claimed some of its young men.

"They may have called us a ghost town from 1940 on, but they can't anymore," the mayor said.

Do Hartford residents ever tire of buying and eating pies? "Yes, I guess they do, but that's only natural. To tell the truth, a lot of people just buy the pies so they can have the feeling of giving," she said.

realtors' viewpoint in Austin. "We also tell our members to contact their representatives. They collaborate our story."

Mass appearances are part of the game, too, like the time the TSTA half-filled Memorial Stadium with 35,000 teachers wanting more money.

Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, credits a letter-writing campaign with House passage of a bill (which died in the Senate) exempting church-related child care centers from state regulation.

"On House Bill 900, legislators voted for it who I characterize as clearly philosophically opposed to them (the letter writers). . . It was a way for them to get brownie points," she said.

But grassroots tactics can backfire.

"There is a circus atmosphere," gripes Untermeyer. "When the horse racing people came in, the uniform of the day was a white cowboy hat. . . The people running it conveyed the idea that this is what you have to do to catch the attention of the typical dumb legislator."

Caven prefers a rifle to a shotgun — such as a letter from an influential and well-informed person in a district.

"For example, the tie plant at Somerville is the basis for the whole economy in Somerville, so the manager would be listened to," he said.

Then there are tactics that alienate, lose votes.

All legislators interviewed said lobbyists caught in a lie don't get a second chance. Bryant said he is turned off "when they suggest that your position is going to ruin your chance for re-election or higher office, when they presume your motives are just as base as theirs."

Caven said lobbyists have everything to lose if they employ unscrupulous methods. "A lobbyist would lose the best job he ever had in his life. . . I am proud of my profession," he said.

Beef price warfare is continuing : prices will rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Psychological warfare for the hearts of beef consumers continues between the administration and the cattle industry, but the pocketbook economics are still jumbled almost three weeks after President Carter opened U.S. ports to a little more foreign meat.

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, at a dairy farm in Copake, N.Y., said on Tuesday the administration was "deeply concerned" about the 15 percent drop in major livestock prices since the June 8 announcement of added beef imports.

The National Cattlemen's Association says the administration cannot be that concerned, because Carter "continues to ignore" association president Richard McDougal's request for a post-decision meeting.

Said Bergland: "The market apparently has overreacted to the administration's decision... to permit additional imports of beef to cope with sharply rising domestic meat prices."

The secretary said he expects farm cattle and hog prices to go up again. He encouraged packers and retailers to pass the recent decline in prices on to consumers, a move that most government and private economists think is unlikely.

The NCA newsletter lamented the "devastating adverse psychology" of Carter's move to allow an additional 200 million pounds of imported beef into the United States under voluntary agreements with other countries.

Most of the new beef imports will come from Australia. The total will add less than 1 percent to the beef supply available to U.S. consumers, who still face retail beef prices this year averaging 16 percent to 23 percent higher than 1977 averages.

At the time the import decision was announced, several government and industry statistical sources indicated that supermarkets and other retailers were lagging behind the traditional pass-through to consumers of the rapid rises in livestock prices that had occurred since last summer.

The conventional course for year" is a finding that consumers spent 2.27 percent of their income on beef this spring, compared to 2.13 percent late last year and early in 1978 before prices really took off.

However, it noted that retail sales have dropped off in the past two weeks with an upsurge in consumer buying of sides of beef and other bulk amounts, which will cut further into sales.

The association said there was "individual pocketbook resistance" rather than organized boycotts, but that "the positive factor is that consumer price resistance has been less than fundamentals would have suggested."

Bergland, noting that none of the extra beef had arrived yet, said normal economic conditions suggest that the import decision would have no significant effect on prices, especially at wholesale, because supply and demand have not changed that much.

Both sides tentatively forecast some stability in the beef markets. They say returns to producers — and prices for consumers — should rise once buyers and sellers again are guided by such factors as a smaller-than-expected hog crop and the failure of cattle producers to make a major move toward rebuilding their herds.

In Australia, consumers are organizing to protest a reported 30 percent boost in beef prices there, triggered partly by the Carter's June 8 decision.

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Farmers increased the size of the corn reserve by 11 percent last week, bringing it to nearly 100.2 million bushels, according to a telephone survey by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Agency administrator Ray Fitzgerald said that as of last Friday, there also were 351.2 million bushels of wheat, 25.7 million bushels of barley, 27.8 million bushels of oats and 14.3 million bushels of sorghum in the farmer-owned stockpile.

Getting your two cents worth

WASHINGTON (AP) — You can influence public policy. But most people don't take advantage of their right to do so.

Under the law, federal agencies are required to give the public a chance to comment on proposed rules and regulations. Only the most controversial plans draw more than a few dozen letters and, even then, the number is tiny by comparison with the overall population.

Officials generally say they believe they are getting more comments than they used to, but no one could provide any figures. The number of people interested depends on the subject — only five comments were received on a plan to set new standards for canned clingstone peaches; almost 5,000 came in when the Department of Agriculture proposed letting meat contain tiny pieces of ground bone.

The record shows that public participation CAN influence public policy.

When the Federal Highway Administration, for example, proposed converting road signs to metric measurements by Dec. 31, 1979, at a cost of $100 million, it got 5,000 comments, nearly all negative. The idea was shelved. A USDA proposal for grading ice cream also was dropped, when it became clear from the comments that people did not understand what the plan would mean.

The first indication that a rule is in the offing comes when the proposed regulation is published in the Federal Register, a daily newspaper issued by the government. The more controversial issues generate publicity in the news media and from consumer groups. That publicity pulls comments.

Clingstone peach standards were not controversial. Hence, five letters. Four of the comments were in favor; the fifth was from a letter writer who complained that peaches stored in the refrigerator after opening often spoil. The standards were approved.

Ground bone was controversial. The USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service got 4,532 comments on the plan to allow meat to be mechanically deboned — leaving some ground bone in the meat. There were 3,826 comments from individual consumers. Their major concerns were that the meat be clearly labeled and meet certain nutritional requirements. The USDA decided to okay the plan, but included labeling and nutritional requirements.

Here's a look at some other proposals, the number of comments received and the results:

— A Federal Trade Commission rule allowing price advertising in the eye care industry: 1,000 comments received, mainly in favor. Pending.

— A Treasury Department regulation allowing sale of wine in bottles larger than 3 liters: 89 comments, 95 percent in favor. Approved.

— A National Credit Union Administration rule letting credit unions make long-term mortgage loans: 70 comments, all consumer comments in favor, a few, from banks, opposing. Approved.

— A Consumer Product Safety Commission plan to exempt some powdered aspirin products from child-resistant packages: 36 comments, more than half in favor. Approved.

Farm roundup

retailers catching up with previous price increases has been to wait for a period such as now, when prices of raw products are slipping, and refuse to lower prices accordingly.

Nonetheless, the NCA's "Beef Business Bulletin" said grocery stores should soon reflect the sharp decreases in wholesale prices by offering more specials on beef.

The newsletter, which reports far more frequently on consumer behavior than Bergland's economists, said the "most significant and positive development for the beef industry this
