US to swap atomic fuel for promise

Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — In a secretive deal the United States may be preparing to swap nuclear fuel for South African guarantees not to produce atomic weapons.

A week-long visit by America's top nuclear negotiator. Gerard Smith, has been kept so quiet that the U.S. Embassy only grudgingly admitted he was here.

the result of negotiations that began in August 1977 after the Soviet Union raised an international alarm by claiming South Africa was about to test an atomic bomb in its western Kalahari Desert, South Africa denied the claims. South Africa's signature on the international nuclear nonproliferation treaty would be a major achievement in President Carter's campaign to stem the spread of nuclear arms But reviving the dormant U.S.-South African nuclear cooperation program, even to supply enriched uranium to South Africa for peaceful uses, would anger international opponents of South Africa's policies of racial segregation.

The South Africans, too, are saying little about the visit. A.J.A. Roux, president of the country's Atomic Energy Board said the talks were too important and sensitive for comment. But he described them as "very constructive."

changed their insurance plan. Scott said that the basic reason for the increase was due to the fact that the company was having to pay out $1500 more in benefits than they were receiving in premiums. She said that presently the county is paying $19.52 per employee. The rate hike will increase that amount to 25.13, an increase of $5.61 per employee. Scott added that presently 102 of the counties employees are covered under the system.

If the county decides to continue with this policy the new rates will go into effect on

In other action, the board approved a motion to give Hinton permission to write a joint letter with Carson County to ask the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Tulsa to find out if McClellan Creek is navigable.

Hinton said, "This is just a formality that has to be gone through." He added that if the Corps of Engineers does find this stream navigiable, the area will fall under community property. Budget forms will be passed out soon, and are due at the August 16 meeting. The board also approved the payment of salaries and bills as approved by the county auditor.

Specifically, Colvin, president of the Texas Criminal Defense Lawyers Association, is disturbed over the high tribunal's 'assault upon the Fourth and Fifth amendments.

In one of the most provocative statements emerging from the recently concluded State Bar of Texas convention, Colvin criticized both the court and the press regarding the controversial Zurcher ruling.

He said "human freedom" is at stake in that case, citing the Fourth Amendment protection against search and seizure and the Fifth Amendment safeguard against self incrimination.

The only expressed concern of the media was a selfish one dealing with the invasion of the newspaper office under a

Colvin said the high court brushed this aside by saying the "hazards of such warrants can be avoided by a neutral magistrate carrying out his responsibilities

This, the attorney contended, is unmitigated hogwash.

He said police officers know that when they don't have good grounds for a search they must avoid the neutral magistrate and find one who will sign any search warrant presented, even a blank one that could be filled in later

Fireworks illegal in Pampa

Fireworks, like liquor and firearms, can be hazardous if used carelessly, and the potential hazards include more than burnt fingers. Just ask police and fire department officials

"It is illegal to discharge or sell fireworks in the city," said Police Chief Richard Mills. If apprehended, juvenile violators face the juvenile laws, he said. Penalties for adults range from an oral warning to a written warning to a trip to jail with a fine of $200 to $350.

"It depends on the circumstances - where they are discharged, how many complaints there are, and so on," Mills said.

Citizens, as well as officers, may file such complaints in municipal court, Mills said. "Judge Martindale has informed me he will try any cases like this brought before him," he said.

"This year has been relatively quiet, but it will get worse in the next couple of days," Mills said. 'It will intensify. We're getting a slight pickup in complaints about fireworks disturbances." A serious problem associated with fireworks, particularly in dry areas like Pampa, is fire. Captain Ken Kirby of the Central Fire Station said therehave been fewer fires resulting from fireworks this year that in the past. 'We've had two or three small Question: What spends $500 million a day and has more people to help spend it than the U. S. Army? Answer: HEW — the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare — the largest bureaucratic arm of the federal government.

Question: What wastes, according to the U. S. inspector general, $6 billion a year? Answer: same as above Imagine ... What HEW purportedly wastes in each year is more than double the entire budget of the state of North Carolina.

Health...Education...and (our) Welfare...When the wrods are said slowly they seem innocuous enough; they sound noble enough. But HEW is a veritable monster. With a budget of 182 billion smackers, it ranks as the third largest budget of any country in the world. The $182 billion is a jump of $17 billion in one Senators Harry Byrd of Virginia, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Sen. Hodges of Arkansas have proposed a budget cut of a mere $2.1 billion and guess what - the shriek of Oh, golly came piping down the halls from Mr. Joseph Califano's sumptuous office.

Concerning the alleged wasted amount of funds, Sen. Hodges relayed this anecdote to his Senate colleagues: (The Congressional Record, April 26, 1978) "The amount of fraud and mismanagement in HEW programs is astonishing... Where I lived, considering the amount of money that earned, and the amount of money available in my state, $6.3 billion is a considerable amount of money, although I am aware that it is not a large amount in Washington,

"I was also concerned about the Senate's approach to this problem and the arguments which were made. I was reminded os a story of a stranger who stopped at a small country store. As he walked up the step to go onto the porch an old man was sitting there. Next to the old man was a dog. The dog was in front of the door. As the stranger came to the door the meaner the dog got until his teeth were bared and the hairs were raised on his neck "So he asked the old man, Does yourdog bite?

"The old man said No

"So the stranger started to go through the door and the dog bit at his leg and almost got him. He jumped back angrily and said, I thought you said your dog didn't

"The old man replied, Mine doesn't. This isn't my dog.'

And that is like the situation at HEW. It has so many programs that when a Congressional committee asked last year how many, exactly, it took the agency six months to come up with the figure 400.

Sen. Byrd, is a letter to this newspaper drawing attention to the HEW ripoff, wrote it is imperative that we get some control over excessive government spending."

But the confusion among the distinguished Senators is where to cut. Ask any HEW bureaucrat - it's all necessarey To that argument, Sen. Hodges produced another story with which we will close:

"As we look at the broad outlines of the budget, I am reminded of a second story, a famous Jerry Clowers story, of a man who went coon hunting one night.

"If you are not familiar with coon hunting, the coon is in the treetop, and someone has to go up in the tree and knock the coon out. This man took a stick and climbed the tree, and got involved with something a lot larger than a coon. It was snarling, and growling, and screaming, and hollering, and the man down below had a gun. The man in the tree kept yelling, Shoot, shoot the coon! Well, because the man in the tree was turning around in the top of the tree so much, the man down below could not get a clear shot, and he yelled back, I can't get a clear shot.

"Finally the man in the tree said, "Just shoot up amongst us, then, because one of us has got to have some relief.

Auto irresponsibility?

Sensation seeking TV commentators in their attacks upon business often exhibit the very irresponsibility they accuse their targets of displaying.

For instance: Sunday night the program 60 Minutes accused Ford of ignoring safety when the Pinto was designed. This type of accusation has been made by other irresponsible critics of automobile manufacturers time and again.

If automobile manufacturers ignore safety, why have the following improvements in automobiles been made

Too much oil

The good news is that the price of oil on the world market is going to remain at $12.70 a barrel for a spell.

That is about five times what it was five years ago when the oil producers liberated pricing from the restrictions of supply and

The not-so-good news is that price stabilization is only temporary. It could last out the year, but certainly not much longer.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries councluded its recent Geneva pricing session with good guys from the Western point of view - Saudi Arabia and Iran carrying the argument for a price freeze. Libya and Algeria, among others, had pushed for an immediate boost to counter the erosion of oil income which is a result of continuing depreciation of the dollar - a situation, it should be noted, to which ever-higher oil prices have made their very substantial

This is Western oil, and should improve the West's position in dealing with OPEC. But it is also very expensive oil to produce. It is economic in very great part because of the artificially high price the OPEC countries have set for their lose.

If OPEC is in a situation to raise prices when supply and demand are in balance, it conceivably could also drop them in a price war that the new Western producers would quickly lose.

It is a situation fraught with possibilities, none particularly encouraging for Western

Unhappily, when the amateur fighter lands a lucky punch and scores, he is both so surprised and pleased that he is apt to turn his back on his erstwhile opponent in order to accept the plaudits. As I see it, that is just what the electorate in California is doing. They are bowing and accepting applause instead of preparing for the

The public at large hasn't done its homework. The major gain was not in the saving of money but in the psychological victory of withdrawing approval from the government. I was never so proud of my fellow Americans as I was in California when the politicians began reciting all the woes that would befall if Prop. 13 was approved and the voters said in effect: "Okay. Let the chips fall where they may. We want taxes down." That was excellent. But it was still not good enough.

to strike blow number two, but it was muffed. When the politicians said, "If Prop. 13 passes, we will have to fire teachers, reduce school sessions, increase class sizes," and so on, the proper response should have been a helpful one. The public should have said: "Beautiful. The schools have done an incredibly bad job anyway. Why not close them altogether? Then we can put in private schools that are responsive to parental influence and control and handle the problem ourselves.

That would have provided a one - two

And when the bureaucrats said, "We will have to reduce police and fire fighting forces, "the response should have been: "Excellent! The finest fire fighting establishment in the country is a private company in Scottsdale, Arizona. We'll ask for their counsel and get private firefighters set up in California. As for the police, and without wishing to downgrade their heroie efforts in the least, the fact is that the police agencies for the past several years have been saying that they can't protect us. We want protection. So we'll be happy to replace the police - retaliatory agencies with private protection agencies.'

Had the public done its homework, that could have happened. And then the politicians would have not only gotten the message, they'd have knuckled under and learned something. As it is, the pols have

That was the time for the private sector only learned how to strike back. And now the backlash is coming.

The public is already learning that the pols weren't just using scare tactics. Layoffs are already taking place. Not that the politicians have to do this. They don't. But they will. When Milton Friedman, an economist who invariably wins my cheers when he sticks to economics, stated during the campaigning that the government wouldn't lay off anyone, he was revealing his consistently naive political stance. Of course the government would. They could, they would and they are. Milton should have said, "The government doesn't have to lay off anyone." Dr. Friedman, like so many economists, presumes that politicians are going to behave themselves and do what is right by the public. Not so. The politicians will always do what is right for politicians. The public is nothing but a mindless gang of sheep to be herded about at will by political shepherds. Dr. Friedman has not done his political homework. But we are only at the beginning of the backlash. As one tax-funded project after another is reduced, shut down or reassigned, the politicians will make certain that the pressures against the public are increased, not lessened. The government is about to unleash a program, calculated to prove that the public at large cannot possibly survive without tax-funded programs.

Even B'rer Rabbit understood and should have been on hand to guide us. When the fox threatened him, B'rer Rabbit pleaded not to be thrown into the thorn bushes. Naturally, that is where the fox threw him. And that is how he escaped.

Whenever the government threatened the public with a disaster, the cry should have been: "Marvelous. That's exactly what we want. Shut the schools, we'll manage without gun-run education. Close the police agencies. We'll have our own private protection. Let the firefighters go. We'll pay for our own companies which will do as we please and not as the politicians

So, in the midst of what many still proclaim a great victory, I find myself with growing apprehension. The true advancement of our species comes as we develop our understanding. The public at large does not understand the nature of government. And, to date, they have shown little inclination to learn. They want to believe that a normally greedy and avaricious person can somehow be hired by the state and be instantly transformed into an altruist who is only interested in the well-being of the public. This is a delusion. Politicians are as normally greedy as anyone else. And when they get their hands on the public purse, the greed is not cured but augmented.

on the basis of zero-risk and absolute safety. A free people provides for national defense on an ample scale, but even spending on defense has its limits. A father endeavors to protect his children, but he realizes they must go out into a world that is full of dangers.

So it is with society and environmental problems. Judgements on society have to be made in terms of national priorities and needs. A country can't do without steel mills and basic chemical plants, much as the most arbent environmentalists would prefer that we live in wilderness purity.

In America today, the government and the people need a clearer perspective on environmental hazards or supposed hazards. For more than a decade, the country has been inundated with allegations that the air and the earth are being made uninhabitable by industrial activity and by invisible biohazards such as radiation. Scores of anti-nuclear protest groups generate fear of atomic power, charging that the reactors produce wastes that can't be disposed of safety.

Dr. Margaret N. Maxey, professor of bioethics at the University of Detroit, is a scholar who is attempting to counter the scare atmosphere. In an essay entitled "Technology And A Better Environment" (National Council For Environmental Balance, Box 7732, Louisville, Ky. 25 cents a copy). Dr. Maxey points out that "We need to restore some historical perspective to the mounting crescendos of fearful

She noted that "we are reminded of what a life without advance technology was really like - spoiled food, impure water, boiling laundry kettles, and the backyard lye pot. Fatal diseases were not leukemia or Hodgkins disease or subtle forms of cancer. They were pneumonia, influenza, tuberculosis. Average life expectancy was 40-45 years at the turn of the century more than 13 per cent of all infants died before their first birthday... Have environmental hazards increased in fact, only our levels of perception?"

Dr. Maxey rightly observes that we have the most anxiety-prone, exhorted and guilt-ridden of cultures. Projected catastrophes invariably are described as global. Fears are cultivated by the dramatic medium of television. The public also seems to have, as Dr. Maxey says, an insatiable thirst for bad news

The environmental crisis mentality has resulted in legislation that mandates colossal anti-pollution expenditures by steel companies. These expenditures are non-productive. They don't create jobs. Indeed because steel companies are required to spend millions on non-productive facilities, they lack funds to modernize production machinery. The result is that the American companies find it difficult to compete against foreign steel producers.

The demand for a zero-risk society has produced fantastic delays in licensing new nuclear power plants. In fact, the impossibility of creating a zero-risk situation has virtually halted new nuclear power plant construction. This, in turn, has made the nation more dependent of expensive, imported oil and retarded employment.

No one wants the health and safety of the American people to be endangered. But a high technology society requires balanced judgment on the use of machinery, chemicals and nuclear energy. To date, this balanced judgment has been obscured by emotionalism.

Pension plans facing financial problems Guaranteed benefits provided by those plans total $8.3 billion.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress was warned Saturday that pension plans covering 1.3 million persons could fold in the next 10 years because of financial problems, forcing a government insurance program to assume liability for billions of dollars in unpaid benefits. In a report to Congress, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp. called for major changes in private pension plans operations and the way government regulates them.

The corporation also urged Congress, in a separate report, to abandon a proposed insurance program that would protect employers from obligations they might face if their pension plans folded with insufficient assets to pay benefits to all workers and retirees.

The pension corporation. created by the pension law of 1974, has established an insurance plan guarantees benefits for 33 million workers and retirees who participate in about 80,000 private plans.

The law also forces employers to eventually build a fund sufficient to pay pensions for present and future retirees.

In its report, the federal corporation said a study showed serious problems with a number of so-called "multiemployer

Wall Street is eyeing Congress

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer NEW YORK (AP) - Wall Street is watching with particular interest as Congress works on a variety of bills that would lower taxes on capital gains. Measures proposed in the House by Rep. William Steiger, R-Wis., and Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., and in the Senate by Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., would reduce to varying degrees the tax on profits from investments.

Naturally, the financial community is enthusiastically behind the idea. Wall Streeters argue that 1969 and 1976 laws that scaled down the tax breaks available on capital gains have hurt not only the stock market but the economy as a whole.

"Investors have had their capital expropriated by inflation, double taxation of dividends, a 70 percent maximum tax rate on 'unearned income' and a doubling of the tax on capital gains (under the 1969 law)," said Leslie M. Pollack. chief investment officer at Shearson Hayden Stone Inc.

"A reversal of this trend would be one of the most favorable things that could happen to the stock market and would be a step towards curing the chronic capital shortage."

President Carter has been sharply critical of the proposals, however. At his news conference last Monday Carter maintained that they would provide a "windfall for millionaires and two bits for the average American.

The following day. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal labeled Steiger's proposal a "millionaire's relief bill."

While the debate continued the stock market posted a modest loss during the past week in reduced trading as the Independence Day holiday period approached.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .24 to 53.66, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was off 1.72 at 145.55

Big Board volume averaged 24.31 million shares a day. against 27.64 million the week before.

For the first half of 1978, which ended Friday, the Dow chalked up a decline of 12.22 points, having recovered most the spring rally that set trading-volume records.

The debate over the capital gains tax proposals has set up a classic confrontation of liberal and conservative economic idealogies.

Those who favor bigger tax breaks on capital gains generally acknowledge that large investors would get most of the original, direct benefit. But they maintain that the resulting stimulus to investment would lead to new jobs and spread its effects throughout the economy. Arthur Levitt Kr., chairman of the American Stock Exchange, told a Senate subcom-

Couple held in abusing child

AMARILLO - A Tucumcari, N.M., couple was being held in the Potter County jail Saturday in lieu of $50,000 bonds each on New Mexico warrant charging child abuse.

Mike Sanders, 22, and his wife, Rosemary, 16, are accused of child abuse in connection with the beating of their 10-month-old daughter, Minnie

The child was reported in serious condition at Northwest Texas Hospital with head injuries. Authorities in Tucumcari reported the child apparently was abused in Tucumcari, but was taken to the Amarillo hospital by the parents because the Tucumcari hospital is small. No details of the abuse were authorities.

"We don't know what happened." Rowane said. He said that no arrests had been made by Saturday afternoon and that police knew of no motive for the shootings.

Police said, however, they were working on the theory the shots were fired at random.

Rowane said shots were fired from M&M Garage, a towing service, and from another direction, possibly J.C.'s Lounge, which he described as a local haunt for drug-dealing and the scene of numerous arrests in the past

Police said they found both live and spent rifle ammunition on the roof of the garage across the street from the fast-food restaurant. Witnesses said other shots apparently were fired from lounge.

Guardsmen become city firefighters

By JERRY GRAY Associated Press Writer MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) -About 400 National Guardsmen joined Fire Department supervisors Saturday to operate fire stations in Tennessee's largest city after firemen went out on strike. The strike, called at midnight after a contract with the firemen had expired, ended a decade of occasionally strained peace between the city and its municipal employees unions.

"If one life is lost, the union and its membership must live forever with that death upon their hearts," Mayor Wyeth Chandler said after members of the International Association of Fire Fighters Local 1784 left their posts.

Union vice president Sam Posey said the union had established 11 emergency units vehicles equipped with radios but no life-saving equipment to help rescue persons who might be trapped in burning buildings.

"Anywhere there's a fire where people's lives are involved, we will respond," Posey said. "But we aren't lifting a finger to help fight any fires otherwise. The mayor fired union president Kuhron Huddleston and members of the local's executive board, and threatened similar action against other striking firemen. About 1,400 firefighters - virtually all of the force below the rank of captain - are union members. City officials said about 175 firefighters, mostly supervisory personnel, were not covered by the union contract.

Contract talks broke off Friday when city negotiators refused a union demand for shift differential bonus pay. Base pay for a fireman is $1,108 a month. The city has offered an immediate 6 percent pay boast, a $30-per-month raise in April, and a 71/2 percent increase in October, 1979. The full package would be worth $1,295 a month. Meanwhile, negotiations continued with the Memphis Police Association, whose members remained at work past midnight when their contract ex-

Plea made to motorists: slow do

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer Slow down America!

That's the message authorities are spreading on the eve of the July Fourth weekend, a four-day holiday during which an estimated 650 to 750 people will die in traffic accidents. The plea is combined with a stepped up campaign to enforce the 55-mph speed limit. The efforts are heightened by the fact that the highway death toll for the three-day Memorial Day weekend - 528 - was the worst since the lower speed limit took effect in April 1974.

An Associated Press spot check showed special enforcement programs across the country, some geared to holiday periods, others in effect all year round. The AP survey also showed that average speeds are lower than they were before the nationwide 55-mph limit was imposed, but are creeping back up in a few states.

The most widespread special enforcement plan is CARE -Combined Accident Reduction Effort - to set uniform enforcement standards in participating states and put extra troopers on designated major roads during the Memorial Day. July Fourth and Labor Day weekends.

Wayne Gregory of the National Safety Council, which is predicting the 650-to-750 death toll for July Fourth, said it is hard to compare year-to-year totals because of the steadily increasing population, the weather and the varying lengths of each holiday. The council has been unable to provide a firm explanation for the high Memorial Day death toll.

Gregory said the death toll during the last four-day July Fourth holiday - in 1974 was 549, just under the council's maximum prediction of

Why is this year's estimate so much higher? "People are just on the road more." he said, adding that Americans drove an estimated 15 billion miles during the 1974 holiday and are expected to drive 18.4 billion miles this year.

Enforcement policies for the 55-mph limit vary from state to state and even from trooper to

We have told our troopers to enforce it just like they enforced the old 70 mph limit," said Al Newport, assistant chief of the Oklahoma Highway Patrol. "Each trooper decides when to issue a ticket and we told them if they strictly enforced the 70 limit, then they should strictly enforce the 55 limit. If they allowed a 5-mile violation under the old law, then they should allow the same under the new one." He said few tickets are issued to motorists driving between 55/ and 60 miles an hour, "but

Church thefts increasing in Spain, Italy

EDITOR'S NOTE - Religious artifacts that adorn churches in Europe are disappearing at an alarming rate. Experts blame the thefts on a poor economy and a lack of security. Few treasures are recovered and even fewer cases prosecuted.

By FENTON WHEELER Associated Press Writer

MADRID (AP) - The serenity that draws weary souls to the old cathedrals and churches of southern Europe is increasingly being violated by a different kind of visitor — thieves. They are lured by the jewels. paintings and objects of gold and silver, many antique and priceless, that adorn these cool, dark sanctuaries, protected if at all by little more than glass

"Looting is going on everywhere from the Alps to Sicily, says the Rev. Pietro Garlato, secretary of Pope Paul's commission for sacred art. Garlato has been touring the countryside teaching priests how to install burglar alarms and urging them to remove valuable objects from isolated, unguarded churches.

Italy records the highest number of thefts from churches - 12,000 items were stolen in that country last year, Garlato says - followed by Spain and France.

Minor thefts are discovered by the dozens, but others are spectacular

In northern Spain last year, a lone burglar entered the cathedral at Oviedo. He felt so confident that he took time to eat a can of sardines. Then he left with an estimated $5 million in jewels from 9th century crosses.

It was the third burglary in six years at the cathedral and the 20th major church theft in Spain in the past decade. Archbishop Gabino Diaz called it an "incalcuable historic loss."

This case was unusual. An arrest was made. When Jose Dominguez Saavedra was seized in Portugal several days later, police recovered the jewels that had been bashed out of the Cross of Los Angeles and the Cross of Victories, but church officials worry that the crosses may never be completely restored.

Not much has changed in the six months since the crime.

tide, looting continues. Garlato links the wave of stealing with economic conditions in Italy and Spain. "More jobless and needy means more thefts, and churches have become another target in a world where sacrilege is no longer feared," he says.

Church thefts aren't so widespread in northern Europe, where economic conditions are better, he says.

High demand brings smiles to Texas dairymen

Dairy farmers leveled rifles at calves and shot them, burying the carcasses in bulldozed ditches in a grandstand media play protesting low milk prices. The price back then was around $8.50 per 100 pounds.

"That was just a few guys," Odom said. "Most of us thought it was wrong and still think it was wrong. Management was and is the key to operating a dairy, and if a man is not a good manager he has no business being a dairyman."

The thirtyish Odom is a casting director's stereotype of an East Texas dairy farmer.

His jeans, work shoes, shirt and hat complement red, nearly curly hair. His speech is open and friendly and he drives the required air-conditioned pickup truck, riding high above the ground for easy clearance of obstacles encountered on his 300-acre spread.

"I've been milking cows since I was 2," Odom said. "I was raised on a dairy and I wouldn't do anything else. It's like being paid to have fun. I drove back and forth to East Texas State University at Commerce (about 50 miles to the north) and milked every day then, too."

Odom paid $134,000 for his land and dairy equipment, more than $70,000 for necessary 000 for each head of cattle. "I figure that note will be paid when my son is 25," he said. "He's 5 now."

He has a hired-hand to do the actual milking, and a high school student helps out. After each milking, the barn must be cleaned and other chores fill in the time until the 3 p.m. milking. "There's always plenty to do around here, from cutting and baling hay to scraping manure," Odom said.

He belongs to a cooperative that picks up his milk daily, processes it and sells it. He is advanced some money each two weeks, with the rest paid after the milk has been paid for, some 45 days later. "I really couldn't tell you how much I get for a given load of milk on a given day," Odom said. Inevitably, the discussion turns to the increase in milk prices at the consumer level.

"I really couldn't put my finger on any one thing that's causing that," Odom said. "I think it's probably a matter of everyone involved along the line getting a little bit more money, and I don't think that's wrong either." When the point was pressed, he said the biggest increase is probably at the handler level, which is the supermarket or other retailer who sells to the consumer.

"I really didn't even know it had gone up that much," he said. "But people have to un-derstand that the dairy farmer has to work hard and long to get that milk. They have to understand that milk doesn't come from Safeway."

Milk pricing is a maze that originates in the Wisconsin-Minnesota region. Average prices increase with mileage from there, so that milk would cost more in Houston than in Dallas. Nor is milk sold as a single

American eagle - holding its own

EDITOR'S %NOTE - "He draws great lines across the sky. Dignity, elevation, repose are his," wrote John Burroughs of the eagle, a creature that has inspired man's imagination since Ancient Egyptian times. The Fourth of July is his official day, the day the eagle screams.

> By JOE WING For The Associated Press

If you are lucky enough to hear the American eagle scream this Independence Day as tradition dictates, you migh be disappointed.

This mighty symbol of our country emits "a creaky sort of yelp like the sound of a rusty hinge or a small puppy," according to one authority.

But the yelp might be one of optimism. The big birds are holding their own against extinction in the Great Lakes states and in the Pacific Northwest, and there are up to 7,500 in Alaska, says Lynn A. Greenwalt of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

"I am confident they will sursavs Greenwalt even though the American, or bald, eagle is officially listed as endangered in 43 states and threatened in five others.

Hawaii has no eagles. Alexander Sprunt IV of Tavernier. Fla., research director of the National Audubon Society, believes there are lots of threats to the eagles in the lake region. "You can even make a case for saying that the Alaska birds are endangered because of oil spills and other ocean contamination.

He does concede that the eagles of south Florida and the Chesapeake are doing "reasonably well' despite Disney World and other development in central Florida. He also notes that the long-lasting effects of the outlawed pesticide DDT are wearing off.

The eagle was designated the national emblem by the Conti-Ben Franklin's vigorous lobbying for the wild turkey. (Had Ben won, there would be turkeys on dollar bills, uniform buttoms, flagstaffs and the presidential seal.)

The mystique of the eagle was well established long before the Continental Congress . gave it the nod

The Greeks thought of eagles as thunder-bolt bearing attendants on Jove: Roman legions cried "Forward the eagles" as they advanced their eagle standards, and Persian armies carried eagles into battle.

Ancient Egyptians depicted the great bird in art, early Christians made it a symbol of St. John the Evangelist, and Napoleon favored the eagle motif in decorations.

Russia and Germany adopted the eagle as a national symbol before the United States did. and most states still have at least one town with "eagle" in its name. Texas has three.

"Flying is one of the few pursuits you can use both in business and for personal and pleasure aspects," Miss Coyle said in an interview. "You can get more places and do more things in less time, stopping anywhere you want - with close to 14,000 airports to choose from - not having to depend on scheduled aircraft. Miss Coyle, who lives in Washington, D.C., flies a singleengine, four-passenger plane around the country, speaking before civic, high school and college groups in her work as manager of the TakeOff program for the General Aviation Manufacturers Association.

"General aviation," she explains, "is flying all aircraft except commercial scheduled and military aircraft. People from every walk of life fly - a beautiful cross section of the population is flying. I know pilots from a 14-year-old boy too young to solo to a 94-year-old grandmother."

Miss Coyle, who was wearing a gold skirt that matched her shoulder-length hair, a goldand-brown blouse, gold earrings and a tiny gold airplane pin, got her first taste of air travel at 15 when she visited an aunt in Minnesota. She fell in love with O'Hare airport in Chicago.

"I'd always had a love for organization, and O'Hare seemed extraordinarily efficient people moving, coming from everywhere, going everywhere, and all those beautiful airplanes around."

She decided to become an airport manager, enrolling in the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks, which offered the only business degree in aviation in the country at that

Severed hand re-connected

HOUSTON (AP) - Johnny Pena still isn't sure what happened. Early Sunday someone cut his left hand off. By late afternoon it was connected to his wrist once again by surgeons who performed the operation under a microscope.

Pena, a 22-year-old sheetrock worker, said the operation at Ben Taub Hospital was a routine affair. But the doctor who helped reconnect his hand said the surgery was possible only at the Texas Medical Center and four or five other medical facilities in the country.

Dr. Don Parsa, a plastic surgeon training at the Baylor College of Medicine, said Thursday microsurgery is the "most recent refinement in plastic surgery" and only a few such operations have been performed.

Pena cannot remember exactly what happened to him but said he and his brother were coming home from a party when they were attacked in their car by unidentified assail-

Pena said he was asleep at the time but awoke to find his hand had been cut off. A man returning to a nearby house found a severed hand in his front yard and called police who made the connection with Pena and rushed the hand to the hospital.

Parsa said microsurgery allows surgeons to view and repair the tiny nerves and blood vessels damaged when a limb is severed, thus increasing the patient's chances of regaining full or near full use of the limb.

Parsa said Pena would begin a physical therapy program in four to six weeks which would first seek to restore sensation in the hand. He said the outlook for the hand and the patient are excellent.

"I was 17 and a freshman when I soloed," she recalled. "It was total, absolute exhilaration; I think I was floating 10 feet off the ground for weeks.'

During her college career Miss Coyle flew a night airmail route, taking the job to build up multi-engine time as well as for the salary. Three nights a week she took off from Grand Forks at 9, making various stops to drop off mail en route to Minneapolis. There she and her copilot "had a cup of coffee, loaded another ton of mail and headed back, making stops along the way, got home about 5 a.m., slept till 7 and got up for an 8 o'clock class."

Miss Coyle, a member of UND's flying team, received the National Intercollegiate Flying Association's Outstanding Woman Pilot Award in 1975. She has a commercial license with instrument rating and multi-engine rating and is a certified flight instructor. She has 1,650 hours of flying time.

"To learn to fly you must have the ability to absorb knowledge and the intelligence to utilize that knowledge. You 4 have to have a degree of selfconfidence, since you are in an environment initially alien," she says, stressing the word "initially" and adding, "Flying to me is like getting into my

The residents of this rural Washington town are ready to go to "war" with the state in order to get the speed limit within their city limits lowered. They want the 55 mph speed

County Extension Agent I have been getting several calls about grasshoppers, mainly around gardens. However, there are some "hotspots" of heavy grasshopper populations in surrounding counties on rangeland. Crop and garden margins need to be checked frequently and control measures applied to prevent economic losses from these grasshopper infestations. Insecticides recommended for control of grasshoppers include: malathion, sevin, toxaphene, or diazinon

Wheat disease A good many wheat fields have had disease problems this year, late in the season, We have had two new diseases attack and infect wheat this month in the Gray County area. Powdery Mildew and Septoria Glume Blotch.

These diseases are gong to cause a lot of yields to be greatly reduced where fields are heavily infected with them. Also a lot of shriveled grain is going to result which will lower test weights. -

The most prevalent disease we are seeing is Septoria Glume Blotch. This disease gives a blackish appearance to the heads and affected areas on the stems. This is a fungus which causes a blackening of the plants where it attacks. Lodging may also result as the stems become weakened.

The Glume Blotch has been known to occur in 1941 and 1957, when cooler than normal spring temperatures were accompanied by higher than normal rainfall. This also fits the pattern in 1978, so the weather conditions have certainly played a part in June.

However there is the possibility Glume Blotch can be carried over in the soil from one year to the next through old straw and seed. I tend to dicount this possibility because of the rare occurence of Glume Blotch in the past. Nevertheless I would be very careful in selecting fields I saved seed from. Try to select disease free fields to save

Wheat storage

How much does it cost to store wheat one month when you borrow money for ten percent interest and the wheat price is $2:50 per bushel? per bushel? According to Ray Sammons Area Extension Economist, the interest cost is $.0208 or 2 cents per bushel per month. Ray has compared various interest rates and wheat prices. If you would like a copy of this chart, call the County Extension Office.

WASHINGTON (AP) - "Purchasers with little or no mechanical information about particular vehicles have been assured by salesmen of the quality of the vehicle they are buy-

'Later, when defects are discovered and the buyer returns to the seller seeking repairs, he learns not only that his sales contract fails to hold the seller responsible, but also that the assertions about the mechanical condition of the vehicle may have been untrue.

Sound familiar? James P. Greenan, a hearing officer for the Federal Trade Commission, says he repeatedly heard this complaint against used car dealers and salesmen during 35 days of hearings he conducted in six cities between December 1976 and May 1977. Thngs were held in Boston, Cleveland, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., on a proposed FTC rule which would require special window stickers on every vehicle on used car lots. The commissioners will decide later this year whether to require posting of the stickers. The stickers would tell potential buyers such things as the total mileage a car had been driven, the major repairs performed on it and whether it previously was used by police or as a rental car.

The proposed FTC rule on the window sticker disclosures would apply only to businesses that sell used cars. More than half of all used car sales are private transactions between individuals, and they would not be covered by the rule.

Greenan's conclusion, published in a 250-page report on the testimony of 244 witnesses, is that many used car dealers misrepresent the mechanical condition of vehicles they are selling to unsuspecting consumers.

A spokesman for the National Automobile Dealers Association was unavailable for comment. In the past, spokesmen for the used car industry have complained that the proposed FTC rule would jack up their costs and mean higher prices for used car buyers.

Reed T. Draper, president of the dealers association, testified during the hearings that dealers must make sure customers receive satisfactory service to keep them returning for future purchases. Greenan said the bulk of the complaints concerned misleading oral representations by salesmen about a car's condition and the seller's responsibility after the sale.

Many dealers are eager to go beyond any legal requirement in fixing problems in cars they have sold, Greenan said.

However, he added, "many dealers and their salesmen display little reluctance in making general assertions about mechanical condition for the purpose of encouraging the buyer's favorable disposition toward a particular vehicle."

Gary Stevens, left, manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone in Pampa, was recently installed as the new president of the Pampa Rotary Club by past-president Ray Morrison.

Hot air fills the sky

By TERRY LEONARD Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) - Like ideas drifting through an open mind. 13 hot air balloons floated effortlessly across the Dallas sky Saturday in what had been billed as the "Great Dallas Balloon Race

But for the pilots, who came from as far away as North Carolina, the race was simply another opportunity to navigate their brightly colored crafts above the envious looks of the spectators

"It's like being able to walk across the sky," said Portis Woolley, a former member of the U.S. team that captured the World Championship in 1975.

Woolley, a Dallas native who now makes his home in Statesville, N.C., said it's the peacefulness and the camaraderie of ballooning that attracts new participants to the sport.

Mariners on a sea of air, pilots navigate their balloons by choosing different wind speeds and directions at various altitudes in order to steer toward their target.

The huge balloons, some streching 75 feet, dance soundlessly on the wind, with only the occasional roar of burning propane to break the silence

To a very large degree they are hitchhikers on the wind with only limited control over their destination.

Yale beat its Connecticut neighbors, Trinity College, Hartford, by 11/2 lengths, a though Yale at one point seemed intent on sinking Trinity by steering straight at them. luman Rights: Who's keeping score

EDITOR'S NOTE - Human rights advocacy around the globe is a policy the Carter administration has made its own since its fledgling days. Few quarrel with the ideal behind it. but what are the practical results? An AP diplomatic reporter assesses the record in the following account.

By ROBERT B. CULLEN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - It's been a year and a half since President Carter walked up Pennsylvania Avenue on his Inauguration Day and, a few weeks later, wrote a personal letter of support to embattled Soviet dissident Andrei Sakha-

Carter doesn't walk around in Washington anymore, having long since given in to the circumstances of security and convenience which dictate that he ride in a motorcade. Nor does he write letters o Soviet dissidents.

Like his travel arrangements. Carter's human rights policy, the first foreign policy initiative of his administration, has been tempered. Some critics charge that its chief purpose was public relations, just like his wellphotographed stroll from the

The human rights advocates Carter has planted in the foreign affairs bureaucracy argue to the contrary. They say that Carter's policy has made human rights a worldwide issue and improved the lives of thousands of people who might otherwise be forgotten and left to sit in jail for political crimes. It's hard to keep an objective scorecard on the relations with the Soviet Union since detente and the slow pace of arms limitation talks are more to blame than the human rights initiative

In the Middle East and Southeast Asia, the administration has found that strategic considerations limit its ability to push for human rights. There has been no official American criticism, for example, of the dictatorial ways of the Saudi Arabian ruling families. The proud and sensitive Saudis wield too much power over world oil prices and other Arab nations to risk annoying them. Authoritarian regimes of Latin America have been the most frequent targets of administration criticism, and they have not appreciated it. The U.S. military aid programs with Brazil, 'Uruguay, El Salvador and Guatemala were ended at the request of their indignant governments. Congress voted to cut off aid to Chile and Argentina, and the administration cut military aid to Nicaragua to little more than a trickle. Balanced against those disturbances in friendly relations, several years been passing laws like the one requiring the State Department to publish annual evaluations of countriesreceiving American aid. But for many people, Henry Kissinger embodied foreign policy from 1969 to 1976 and Kissinger laid no stress publicly on human rights. While he would sometimes intervene quietly on behalf of individual victims of repression, he believed there was no practical way for the United States to influence another nation's internal conduct, least of all by public pressure. Against this backdrop, Carter's human rights initiatives represented a radical change in American policy from the last Kissinger years. And that, say some critics, was the point.

'Kissinger's amoral realism was not going down very well with the American people," Norman Graebner, a diplomatic historian at the University of Virginia, told a reporter. "Carter, as a new and relatively unknown quantity in foreign affairs, needed to create a foreign policy consensus.

CB's are choking cars

host of unexpected interference problems is accompanying the rapid growth of CB radio.

Much has been said and written about CB interference with television sets, radios and other home electronic entertainment equipment such as stereos and electric organs

CB interference even has invaded the sanctity of the church, occasionally interrupting sermons as radio signals are picked up by public address systems.

Television interference, or TVI as it's called, is so prevalent that the Federal Communications Commission said in a recent report, "CB related television interference produces the largest number of complaints to FCC field offices.

Not so widely publicized. however, are occasional reports that some European-made cars with fuel injection systems act erratically when operated near CB radios. And just last month, three women reported CB interference with their heart pacemakers.

The Exxon Co. recently warned its customers of the interference potential for fuel injection-equipped cars. The fuel injection system controls the flow of gasoline to the engine through electronic signals, and it can't tell the difference between a valid engine signal and one coming from a two-way radio," it said.

"In its confused state, the system either speeds up or cuts the fuel flow," Exxon added, occasionally causing problems for motorists trying to pass trucks or cars whose drivers are talking on their CBs.

Exxon said, too, interference could come from the driver's own CB

At any rate, it continued, "if you are having this kind of trouble, check both your radio antenna to make sure that everything the manufacturer recommended was done.

"A good antenna ground is essential. Sometimes, it is necessary to run a grounding line between the antenna base and some point known to connect in "The final injection unit may be corroded where it mounts to the car. Clean the ground connection and tighten the screws. 'The final alternative in any case of such trouble is to have the car equipped with radio frequency filters - a job for a professional two-way radio

Prompted by complaints from three women, the FCC is considering a nationwide study of the effect of CBs on heart pacemakers

> Engineers in the FCC's Detroit field office said tests showed one woman. Helen Hinderer of Marysville, Ohio, became dizzy, nearly fainted and had to be placed on oxygen when a neighbor three blocks away keyed his CB micro-

Wheat belt harvest less than last year

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — This year's wheat production in the major southwestern winter wheat belt could be 16 percent or more below 1977's harvest, the Santa Fe Crop Report for July says.

The report, made public today, said the states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico could produce 590 million bushels of winter wheat this year, down from the 703 million bushels of 1977.

However, the report, published by the Santa Fe Railway, also hedged its forecast, saving the 590-million bushel estimate is possible, "if losses from wind, hail, rain, diseases, weeds and insects are not greater than normal. The winter wheat harvest is entering its late stages, with Kris Richardson...

Enroute with a dream

After what seemed to be an endless amount of time and preparation, a young woman's dream finally began to come true about one year ago. Since then her days have become busy, and her nights are full.

The young woman is Kris Richardson, Miss Top O' Texas. Kris, a Pampa native, was Kris. a Pampa native, was crowned Miss Top O' Texas on July 22, 1977. Since that day she has been busy preparing for the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant which began today in Fort Worth.

"I knew one hour after the Miss Top O' Texas pageant was over what my talent would be for the Miss Texas pageant." Kris, who will do a classical ballet number for the talent competition, received criticism from the judges immediately after the competition. They asked Kris if she had ever done any point work (a type of ballet) and suggested that she try that for her talent number, because of its high degree of difficulty.

After the pageant was over Kris began collecting her wardrobe for the Miss Texas pageant. She also started working on her dance routine, and began to budget her time.

"I guess that I was able to take it easier at first. Things became real hectic after I got home from school."

Kris, an energetic 19-year-old sophomore at Texas Tech, said that a typical day for her begins at 6 a.m. and may end anytime between 6 p.m. and midnight.

She begins her day by jogging for about 20 minutes. "After that I just go from one place to another, and I usually don't have a chance to eat lunch." Part of her day includes working two or three hours on her ballet routine.

Since Kris was crowned Miss Top O' Texas she has attended several other pageants that were preliminaries for the Miss Texas pageant. Kris has modeled at the Pampa Club, spent time in Fort Worth with a costume designer, and in Dallas with a dress designer.

Serving as Miss Top O' Texas this past year has made several changes in Kris' life, and in her outlook on life.

She said that her appearance has changed since she cut her long brunette hair to a shoulder length style. "This year has been a tremendous learning experience. It has helped me mature in a lot of ways, Kris said, "It has helped me learn to schedule my time, and I think I'm able to talk to people easier."

Since the pageant ended Kris said that she has gone through a variety of emotions. "Sometimes I get uptight because it's so hectic." She added, "I've been worried and nervous, I've cried, and I've had sore muscles."

Will her daily routine and her hectic pace of life change after the Miss Texas pageant is over? "There will be a change, but it won't be drastic," Kris said.

This week at the pageant Kris will be going through another hectic schedule until the pageant ends on Saturday night. If she isn't involved in an interview she may be at rehersal, attending a luncheon, or changing clothes getting ready to go again.

While she is at the pageant Kris will be judged on four different things: interview, talent, (which counts the most) evening gown competition and swimsuit competition.

What does she see for the future? After studying dance for 11 years, Kris is presently a sophomore dance major at Texas Tech University, and sees her future headed in that direction.

Kris said that after she completes her education at Texas Tech she would like to travel to New York "just to see it."

'I want to dance professionally. I wouldn't be where I am if it wasn't for my dance."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a 32-year-old man for the last 10 months. I am 23. He's nice-looking, well-mannered and can afford to show a girl a good time. He has brought me some rather expensive gifts (a stereo for my birthday and a color TV for Christmas). He tried to give me a diamond for St. Valentine's Day, but I wouldn't

I just don't love him and he knows it, but he says he's desperately in love with me. I never tried to lead him on. I told him from the beginning that I didn't love him and didn't think I ever could. I've even asked him to quit calling me, but he calls anyway, and if I have nothing better to do,

I go out with him. I have acted bored in his company, and I've even been rude to him, but he can't be discouraged. Any suggestions?
BORED IN BURLINGAME

DEAR BORED: If you really don't see any future with this man, don't go out with him again. The more you see of him, and the more you accept from him, the harder it will be to get rid of him. He plans to "wear you down." And if he succeeds, you'll both be sorry. A one-sided "love"

DEAR ABBY: Elaine (not her real name) and I have been married for 14 years and have five children. We are both 36 years old.

A while ago Elaine joined a therapy group. (You know, they just sit around and talk about sex. Well, Elaine is the only married person in the group. One evening a fellow from the group picked Elaine up and drove her to one of the meetings. He brought her home at 1:30 a.m. Elaine said they stopped for a drink on the way home. Another time Elaine accepted a dinner invitation with another man from the group.

She says she is innocent of any wrongdoing. I believe her, but I feel her conduct is a potential threat to our marriage. Am I wrong to object? OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: No. Every therapy group has a "therapist." Talk to Elaine's and ask him how you should handle this problem.

DEAR ABBY: Saw the enclosed in a Knights of Columbus newsletter and thought, "How true it is." If you think it's good enough for your column, be my guest.

DANIEL H. MILITELLO, WESTFIELD, N.Y.

DEAR DAN: I do, and here it is: "Someone has said that there are four kinds of 'bones' in

There are the WISHBONES, who spend their time wishing someone else would do the work.

There are the JAWBONES, who do all the talking, but very little else. Next, there are the KNUCKLEBONES, who knock everything anyone ever tries to do.

And finally, there are the BACKBONES, who get under the load and do the work."

Ask Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB Please tell me what would be your advice to parents of bright son who has turned to drugs — mostly marijuana but other things as well. He was once ambitious and hard working. He dropped out of college and began to travel. He hasn't worked since and he is now 27. He is in another state and maintaining communication is extremely difficult, although maybe no harder than when he was living at

I know other mothers and fathers in the same situation. People I used to sit beside at ballgames, when I meet them on the street I can see in their eyes the hope that I won't ask about their son, just as I hope they don't ask about mine and they usually don't. Living in a rural area we are cut off from groups that might help.

I have tried the conventional means - positive communications, having him home and supporting him at school and nothing helps. We have looked forward to the years when our children would be raised and we would have a little extra money and time to do the things we hadn't been able to do. Now I find myself nearly a prisoner in my concern for him. It is affecting me both physically and emotionally.

DEAR READER - Of course you can't be certain that the problem is caused by marijuana or even other drugs. It may be a problem associated with his development and his relationship with you, plus his response to the kind of environment that he wishes to associate birnself with

Nevertheless, the problem exists and it is causing you considerable difficulty. I wish I had a good solution for the numerous parents who find themselves in similar situations with a breakdown in communications with their children.

About the only answer I can give you is to tell you that parents should learn to live their own lives. It's fine to do all the things you can to help your children during their growing years but you also have to continue to do things to help yourself. That means to help yourself be a reasonably self-sufficient, independent, intelligent, constantly improving person. Perhaps you should look to your own life rather than trying to live your life through your son. I think many parents make this

Clearly you do have a problem even though you may feel that your situation justifies it. If you want to feel better I would suggest that you obtain some professional counseling. That might be hard to do in a small community but it still would be very worthwhile. It would help you learn to rearrange your life so that you're not so easily victimized by the situation or perhaps by other personal rela-

Through professional counseling you may find a way to be more independent, feel better, look better and enjoy some of the things you previously had looked forward to doing. You probably realize by now that your present approach to the problem is not helping either you or your son. Perhaps it's time you did something for yourself. If you're successful in doing that, the change may also be beneficial for vour son. It might help you if you understood more about moods and depression so I'm sending you The Health Let-ter number 10-10, Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Pregnant women and sports

If tennis champion Evonne Goolagong and marathon runner Mary Jones are right, the days of the bed-ridden pregnant woman are over - even in the ninth month.

According to the July issue of Ms. Magazine, Goolagong continued her tournament tennis play until her fourth month of pregnancy, maintained a regular program of physical exercise tennis, cycling, swimming and long walks - throughout her entire pregnancy, and was back on the tournament circuit just six months after childbirth.

Jones ran the "half marathon" - 13.1 miles in two hours and five minutes when she was almost nine months pregnant. Just 10 weeks after her childbirth she was back in her running "Pregnancy is not a disease," Jones says. "I listened to my body and let it dictate what I could do. And I'm the healthier for it."

Jones could very well be right about her health according to reports cited on female athletes. Of those studied, 87 percent had faster deliveries than nonathletes. In another study, women reported little pain and shorter convalescences, which are said to be due to improved circulation and muscle tone. can cry out, "No, it isn't!" but we're telling this story, and bull is the word. First of all, you know what flounce is because it's flaring out all over the place this summer. It comes on skirts in tiers, one after the other, or sometimes just hangs there by word for flounces is "bull."

The people who potsy itself on the bottom. Well, we contend this terracing touch came from a bull. The pottery people are going to say there are cave drawings around showing women wearing long, bellshaped fur or skin skirts and that flounces started then.

Or that the people running around the Near East when Sumer was the going civilization started it because they - "they" often being men - liked to climb into sheepskins sewn up in one fleecy flounce after another.

Then they're going to say the idea was copied when people started making clothes out of cloth because you could weave that and didn't necessarily have to hit an animal over the head to

They can nit-pick all they want. As far as we're concerned, you can credit the ladies on Crete when the island was sitting there snug and arrogant in the Aegean from around the 18th to the 15th century B.C.

Flounces new look Of course, it's still sitting there, but in those days it was sending ships out all over and saying "pay up" to everybody they ran into. Paying tribute was what they called it, but it was more severe than a Dean Martin roast because they made off with all the good stuff, since they had the muscle behind them to get it.

In any case, the Cretan ladies got up in the morning and put on a flounced, bellshaped skirt with checks or waves or stripes or squares in bright colors all over the

On top, they'd lace on a short-sleeve bodice that covered everything except the parts you'd think would be covered. And then they'd put on a wide, padded belt to pull in their waists and they came out with some figure, let me tell you.

So there they were, bare-breasted, bell-hipped, flaunting their flounces and sometimes wearing a couple of inverted pots on their heads for added spark.

The bull comes into the picture because at that time the big thing in Crete was earthquakes. No one knew when one was coming, but everyone knew what was causing them: that big bull, the earth-shaker who'd moved in under the island, who knew when, without even signing a lease.

your imagination and insight will help advance you rapidly this coming year. Don't be afraid to draw upon your talents and apply creative effort. CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is a holiday weekend. Having a good time at the family picnic is fine, but overindulging will make your stomach or head or both - ache this evening. Find out to whom you're romantically suited by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your dramatic personality will shine for most of the day, but as evening wears on you could become grumpy. Try to go home early.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your aims and ambitions can be satisfied today without resorting to methods you wouldn't be proud to tell others about. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's safe to open up in front of your close friends today, but avoid talking about confidential matters in front of casual acquaintances. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll have an opportunity to profit with another by relying on your instincts to guide you. Blowing things out of proportion, however, could cause you to lose out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're apt to misinterpret the motives of one who is being very cooperative. It's not like you to be this suspicious without cause

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Individuals you can usually rely upon may be unable to help you today, so if you expect them to be around when you call you could be disappointed. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Discrimination in selection of friends is called for today. You're so easygoing that one with few scruples could take advantage of you. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)

Stick within your planned activities today. Getting sidetracked and going to an unscheduled place could make you feel very uncomfortable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might have second thoughts about something that you feel you hastily agreed upon today. Don't fret, everything will work

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Know what your entertainment will cost today before you commit yourself, or you'll spend the evening kicking yourself for your foolishness. ing for a while," Hugh Downs said when he signed the lease on an apartment in San Francisco last year, after uprooting himself from his desert spread in Arizona to host the PBS series on aging, "Over Easy." He chuckles when he recalls telling Ruth, his wife of 30 years, "This is a new beginning," then carrying her over the threshold the day they moved in. Now the happy word is that the Downs will be staying on a while longer because "Over Easy" has been renewed. The series travels occasionally for "location" shows (off to Plains, Ga., to see Miz Lillian Carter, for instance) but most of the programs are produced in the Bay City.

Would you believe that "The Drunkard," that theatrical relic from the horse and buggy era, may be due for another revival ... and this time in New York? choreographer Judy Haskell is reported trying to pull off the dial that could make it happen. If she gets the star of her choice, Berndette Peters, who knows? It might prove as great a success as it did in Los Angeles where it ran for years and years and exterior and warm heart in a new production of "Heidi," being readied as an NBC special by Pierre Cossette. . . . David Frost rates a couple of cheers for signing the real Kelly Garrett to sing up a storm each week on his summer series. Meanwhile, Jaclyn Smith - who plays the fictional Kelly Garrett in "Charlie's Angels" during the winter season - has been spending her hiatus from the show starring in a made-for-TV movie (set for ABC in September) based on Joyce Haber's novel, "The Users," all about the Hollywood you love to hate.

"We hope we'll be stay- aren't the only ones who start thinking about Christmas in July. So must the networks, which is why crews are assembling in London to film the first scenes for a new version of Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors," which is scheduled to air on NBC on Chistmas Eve. Giorgio Tozzi stars. The opera was actually written (in 1951) for television, although it has since become a popular vehicle on the stages of college auditoriums and regional theatrs. Twelve years have passed, however, since the last TV producion got its last repeat showing.

> Telly Savalas is reported miffed at, but not crushed by, the cancellation of his "Kojak" seris. You see he's not so miffed that he isn't continuing to do business with CBS ... and they have another potential series for him now being devloped for a trial run as a TV movie. Telly's cast as big league gambler in the new opus.

> Bill Bixby is telling folks that his instinct tells him his new series, "The Hulk," is going to be renewed. And early Neilsen ratings seem to back him up. CBS slated the far out sci-fi show opposite James Garner's popular "Rockford Files" and the numbers indicate that some of the Garner fans defected.

If you're wondering what Rowan and Martin are doing these days, the word is is all amicable but the funny men are travelling separate roads. Dan Rowan is on the talk show circuit doing serious public educatin job on the subject of diabetes and how, with proper care, it need not be a handicap. He's an inspiration as well as an expert since he himself is a diabetic and a few years ago undertook a hazardous long-distance yachting adventure. Dick Martin, meanwhile is busy with his new career behind the camera and will direct Joe Namath in his new NBC series, "The Waverly Wonders."

LATIN LOVERS — I know that Rudy Nureyev played Rudy Valentino in the film "Valentino," but my neighbor tells me there was a TV movie about Valentino also made recently. Is this correct? If so, who starred in it - she can't recall. Mrs. Rhonda Bantell, Norfolk, Va.

Score a half point for your neighbor. Before Rudy II played Rudy I, the Latin lover was given the once over in an ABC movie called "The Legend of Valentino," aired in late 1975. The best thing you can say about the picture was at least they got an authentic Italian for the role - Franco Nero, who you may recall as Lancelot in "Camelot." He'll be seen again in CBS' miniseries of "The Pirate," Harold Robbins potboiler. SINGING KING — Please help! I need to know where I can write to the famous songwriter, singer, Carole King. R. Godfrey, Crown Point, In.

I'll try. It might be possible to reach one of the early writing machines of rock 'n' roll (starting with Will You Love Still Me Tomorrow?") through Ode Records or A&M Records, both at the same address - 1416 N. La Brea Ave., Hollywood, CA. 90028.

SWOON — I was in New York on a holiday some weeks ago and had the wonderful opportunity to see Frank Langella in "Dracula." I realize he's busy on the play, but might he be appearing on TV in the near future? I would give anything to see him again. Jackie Dunlop, Dayton, Ohio

Would you offer him your neck? Seriously, Langella will be seen on PBS stations in a repeat per-formance of "Theatre in America" "The Prince of Homburg," on July 19th. You'll have to check locally to be sure of that

You know Mike is moving the show from Philadelphia to Los Angeles this summer, so you can write the show at CBS Television City, Los Angeles, CA. 90036. Give it a while until they set up before writing. MARRIED BLUES - Has Paul Michael Glaser gotten married? I heard he got married in Israel. I hope not. M. Heinritz, Watrbury, Conn. Glaser's trip to Israel with his lady love was described as a "pre-honeymoon" trip - whatever that means. But, no, he is not yet married, as of this writing.

MARRIED BLISS - Can you tell me something about Lou Ferrigno, like what body building titles he's won and stuff. Mike McGreevey, Rogersville, Tenn.

Lou is 6 foot 5 and 275 pounds of solid stuff, although he started out in life as one of those skinny weaklings you see on the back of comic book ads. But when he took up body building he did it with a passion that even the Hulk couldn't compete with winning Mr. America, Mr. Universe and Mr. World. Ferrigno just got married, too, to Susan Groff, a psych major at UCLA.

NOT AGAIN! - Who is the actor who plays the cowboy in the Schlitz Light beer commercial? James Coburn? Morgan Woodward? Steven Harris, Springfield, Utah. No matter how many times I answer this question, 10 more like it come back to haunt me. Well, Steven, you were right the first time. It's James Coburn racking in the bucks with his spurs and sneers. I never knew he had such a low recognition factor that people can't tell it's the old knife fighter from "The Magnificent you forward me the ad- Seven" pushing the brew.

What's up in advertising

Commercials - like the television and radio programs that interrupt them - can be hits or flops. In an effort to produce more of the former than the latter, the Atlanta advertising firm of Tucker Wayne & Company has studied the public's attitudes toward commercials.

Here are some of the findings. 1. "People find news more interesting than advertising. Therefore, new products and services should be advertised as news.

2. "People like advertising that's a little different - but are disoriented if the advertising is too different."

3. "People won't believe a promise that sounds too good - even if it is true." 4. "People know that the differences in some products and services are extremely marginal." 5. "People know that personalities used in advertising are paid for their services."

"People in the lower socio-economic strata endow some brands with magical properties.' 7. "Music — even background music — can be the strongest communications element in a radio or television commercial." 8. "It is hazardous to try to sell serious products and services with humor. 9. "A person's memory bank of brand names has a limit. In order for new names to be stored, older ones must be shed. 10. "Television advertising that shows people is generally more interesting than advertising that does not. Especially if the viewer can identify with the person or persons being shown." 11. "Women and men see advertising very differently." 12. "People prefer advertising messages that are

And, note the researchers somewhat wistfully, "people are becoming increasingly skeptical. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

The Moveable Signs are: Cancer. Gemini, Libra and Pisces. The Moveable Signs are used for transplanting. The Fruitful Signs are the Wet Signs The Barren Signs are the Dry Signs. Altho the early part of June gave us rain, lot of rain, the last half with its searing heat and hot drying winds, has the gardener discouraged and frustrated. But take heart there is tomorrow. So water well, pay the water bill with a groan and a grimace, you may have to go without that something extra you were planning, to keep everthing alive. There will come cooler days and your garden will bloom again, and give you beautiful color and enjoyment.

Someone has said if you don't have a riot of color in your garden in July, then your fingers are not green.

Crepe Myrtle will remain in bloom longer if faded blooms are picked off promptly time to sow seeds of pansies, violas and lupins. They should be sown in seed flats or clay pots and kept in a cool place until germination, then they should be brought out and placed in a bright situation but not in direct sun-light. As soon as they are large enough to handle they should be set in pots of good potting mixture until they are ready to be planted in the garden in late September.

Asters, marifolds and quick-maturing annuals can be sown to fill gaps where bedding plants have failed. Do this the 14th or 15th for better results.

After you have harvested the peaches from your trees it is time to treat them for borers. The moths are seen flying about now. They have clear wings which spread about an inch wide. They fly to the bases of peach, cherry and plum trees to lay their eggs. The eggs hatch out into worm like creatures that chew into the wood and develop into borers. To prevent this infestation, pull the dirt back from the base of the tree. with a wire or ice pick try to route out the worm, and kill it. Close the opening with borerkil, this can be bought at a local garden store. The fumes from the borerkil will kill the borers. Leave the dirt back from the base of the tree until cold

Continue to dig and divide iris. When resetting be sure the roots or rhizomes are covered with about one inch of soil. In some areas iris growers suggest leaving the top of the rhizomes exposed. But that is not for us here in the Panhandle, the rhizomes should be covered, because of our dry hot summers.

Someone said, my iris have all reverted back to one color. This does not happen. Some varieties are more vigorous than others. and so crowd out less vigorous varieties. When plants are allowed to become overcrowded due to lack of dividing and resetting, you may loose some of your better plants in this way. Irises do need fertilization, and they need care if you wish them to give their maximum bloom. We use bone meal when planting and feed them compost early in the spring when they are forming buds. We like to feed them again in the fall, when we can get it done

Prune wisteria severely. Flowers will appear on next year's new growth. Plants that do not bloom sometimes respond

Sow radishes and beets the 31st for fall eating. As soon as they are up side dress and mulch with compost.

Put down cuttings of roses and other shrubs the 30th. Cover with glass jars in a shady place and keep watered.

Plant strawberries the 30th. They will start flowering in a few weeks. If you plant the everbearing types these flowers can remain and fruit by September. We have had success with Ogallala and everbearing type. Mulching with pine needles is helpful. The mulch should be applied as soon as the plants become well established. The Ogallala plants can be ordered from Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co. Louisana, Mo. 63353.

Columbine are most rewarding. When once established they will bloom year after year with very little care. The seed can be planted now for next spring blooming. Mckana's Giant is a good variety. Sow seed in eight inch clay pot which has been filled with a good potting soil, the soil should be moist, before planting. Press the seed into the soil and sieve milled sphagnum moss over the top. Cover with plastic, we use bread wrappers for this. It will take about three weeks for germination, check during this time to see that they do not get too dry. When they develop their true leaves transplant to peat pots filled with good potting soil. The last of September harden them off by placing pots outside an hour the first day and increasing the time each day until they can be left out all day and night. Then transplant to the garden where you want them to grow, they do well or better in partial shade.

Our last planting of sweet corn and bush beans will go in the 14th of this month. We will fill the drill with water before these are planted to insure good germination.

After July 15 stop pinching back chrysanthemums and give them a side-dressing of rotted manure or rich compost and bone meal to icrease the size of the blossoms, they should be ready for showing early in October. This is when The Pampa Garden Club has their Flower Show scheduled.

During the hot days keep all newly-planted trees and shrubs well watered, a good mulch of hay or straw will also help.

Yankee Fourth of July set for China PEKING (AP) - A thousand China is expected to send hot dogs and hundreds of Yankee soft drinks shipped to Peking will give American tourists and diplomats a taste of home when they celebrate the Fourth of July in the Chinese capital

About 400 Americans and diplomatic guests are expected to attend the informal get-together Tuesday at the U.S. liaison office here, established in 1973 after Richard M. Nixon's historic presidential visit to Communist China

The American presence in Peking is tiny but growing from businessmen selling their wares, to American tourists, to academics curious about its culture, politics and science.

The liaison office isn't even listed in the diplomatic directory - officially it doesn't exist because the two countries do not have normal diplomatic relations. But the American flag flies in the courtyard, and the office is visited daily by dozens of American tourists and Chi-

Unlike most U.S. diplomatic missions, the office does not have Marine guards. Instead a young American secretary greets visitors.

The office is adorned with large color photographs of the Grand Canyon, the White House and Capitol Hill at night. There are two chairs in the lobby for visitors, who can flip through the latest J.C. Penny Co. catolog as they wait.

Officials say Americans are flocking to China in record numbers, with about 10,000 tourists and 5,000 businessmen expected this year. Last year, by comparison, about 5,000 Americans came to China

Earlier this year, the Peking government agreed to buy $130 million worth of U.S. wheat, boosting total imports from the United States to an expected $400 million this year, much of it in cotton, machinery and petroleum equipment.

some $250 million worth of textiles, handicrafts and other items to the United States this year, compared with about $200 million worth in 1977.
