

Final preparations made before summit meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaders of Egypt, Israel and the United States, searching once more for ways to bring peace to the Mideast, made final preparations today for the Camp David summit meeting.

President Carter, who is hosting the politically risky meeting at his Maryland mountain-top retreat, prayed for peace during a Sunday School session at First Baptist Church here.

"Let every heart involved be cleansed of selfishness and personal pride. Let us all turn to thee, God our father, for true guidance, wisdom, forgiveness of others, in the search for common ground," Carter said.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, upon arriving in New York City, declared "We want peace more than any nation on earth."

And President Anwar Sadat, still in Egypt, said he considered the conference "a turning point" in Mideast history.

Begin and Sadat will arrive Tuesday afternoon at Camp David, where Carter will be waiting for them. In that secluded atmosphere, U.S. officials hope Begin and Sadat will be able to make the compromises necessary to give new impetus to the stalled peace process.

To help them, the Carter administration has prepared dozens of options and proposals for possible compromises on difficult points. But U.S. officials are trying not to arouse public hopes, only to have them dashed by a less than successful summit.

State Department officials said their only goal for the meeting is keeping the peace process going. Simply doing that forestalls a wide range of dangerous consequences that could arise if it breaks down, the officials theorize.

The officials, declining to be identified publicly, say they do not expect anything like a complete settlement to emerge. They attribute this in part to the fact that neither Begin nor Sadat has given any indication of willingness to compromise on crucial issues like sovereignty over the territory on the West Bank of the Jordan River which Israel captured in the Six Day war of 1967.

One State Department official said the administration would be gratified if Begin were to recognize that Israel must withdraw from at least part of the West Bank in order to have peace. Thus far, the Israeli leader has not done so.

The Israelis also are minimizing their expectations for the summit.

Earthquake hits Germany, Europe

TUEBINGEN, West Germany (AP) — A strong earthquake centered in the sparsely populated Swabian hills damaged many buildings in the southwest part of West Germany but caused few injuries and no deaths. The quake shortly after 6 a.m. Sunday also was felt in parts of France, Switzerland, East Germany and Austria. There were three main shocks and 60 smaller aftershocks.

The quake registered between 5 and 7.5 on the Richter scale at seismological stations in West Germany and France. The Central Observatory in Erlangen, West Germany, said it was the strongest quake ever recorded since the Germans began measuring quakes 100 years ago.

The damage was heaviest in West Germany, where 15 persons were reported injured. Areas near the Black Forest were hit hardest, and the Interrior Ministry of Baden-Wuerttemberg state estimated the damage in the millions of dollars.

Police said the Hohenzollern Castle, ancestral home of the Kaisers, was damaged extensively and would be closed for up to six months for repairs. They said the quake toppled chimneys, ripped open the walls and tore roofs off some of the buildings.

The ministry said hundreds of homes in villages around the castle were badly damaged by the strong initial shock and the 60 smaller aftershocks.

Police in Frankfurt, about 150 miles north of the epicenter, said burglar alarms were set off in stores and banks. In the Swiss border state of St. Gallen, police received more than 100 calls an hour from worried citizens.

Officials in the Austrian states of Vorarlberg and Tyrol said the tremor shook buildings but caused no major damage. East Germany's official news agency ADN said the shocks were felt around Erfurt and Suhl but did not mention damage. Officials at the French seismological station in Strasbourg said the tremors were felt as far west as Nancy.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one whole number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

An earthquake of 5 on the Richter scale can cause considerable damage while one with a 7 reading is a "major" quake capable of widespread heavy damage. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

Before eviction notice takes effect

Striking migrant workers plan Labor Day march

BELMORE, Ohio (AP) — Striking tomato pickers say they will begin a 100-mile march to Columbus today, hours before an eviction notice to force them from their tent city takes effect.

Members of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee say they want to take their campaign for better migrant labor wages to Gov. James A. Rhodes.

"We want the governor to see how bad the tomato industry is in his state," said Baldemar Velasquez, 31, president of the Toledo-based committee.

Until now the strikers have traveled from field to field in caravans, urging pickers to join them and let the state's multi-million dollar tomato crop rot.

Farmers have responded by forming caravans of their own to stand between the strikers and the pickers, honking horns, sounding sirens, and shouting.

Mayor William L. Kelley of Belmore said he was pressured by threatening phone calls into evicting the migrants from the four acres he rented to them.

The notice is scheduled to take effect at midnight, but Velasquez said there will be no one, only eight 15-by-20 tents and a big top, left on the land by then.

The strikers planned to walk about 25 miles a day after leaving nearby Findlay, where they scheduled a news conference.

They planned a rally in Columbus on Friday.

Velasquez said the decision to leave the tomato farms for the Ohio Statehouse came because strike leaders feel they have saturated the two-county target area in northwest Ohio, the nation's second largest tomato growing region.

"The biggest thing we've done is take the people away," Velasquez said.

An estimated 8,000 migrants came to Putnam County to harvest the tomato crop, and more than a fourth of them have already left, Sheriff Bob Beutler said. No figures were available for adjoining Henry County.

"What's happening in this area, I think, after looking at some of the fields, is that some tomatoes are rotting on the vines," he said.

Some farmers agree that they have been hurt by the strike, but many say they will be able to harvest most of the crop, despite the labor walkout. Some migrant crews did not leave the fields, and local high school students and farm families began picking on Sunday as a two-week peak period started.

Velasquez, however, claims his movement has stunted the harvest on 40 percent of the more than 6,000 acres in Putnam and Henry counties where tomatoes are growing.

Two canneries, Libby, McNeil & Libby Inc. and Campbell Soup Co., are targets of the strike. The canneries contract with the growers, who hire the migrants. Farmers say at current prices they would only break even if they paid the strikers what they're asking — 35 cents a 30-pound hamper, a dime increase, and a minimum wage of $3.25 an hour, a 60-cent hike.

The strikers also want to be included in negotiations between growers and canneries.

Explosion disrupts Pope's first day

VATICAN CITY (AP) — A powerful bomb blew a hole in the gate of Pope John Paul's Lateran Palace early today, four hours after his inauguration as pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church at an open-air Mass in St. Peter's Square.

The explosion also broke windows in the palace, the pope's residence as bishop of Rome, but no one was hurt. The pope was at the papal apartment in the Vatican, three miles away, where he lives.

Ten thousand Italian police guarded the hotels and embassies where foreign delegations to the pope's coronation were staying. A heavy guard was ordered for the Vatican, where the pope was to receive the visitors, including U.S. Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

Police said they believed the attack on the Lateran Palace was the work of extremists who demonstrated in Rome and in St. Peter's Square Sunday against the presence at the papal inaugural of Argentine President Jorge Rafael Videla.

The Lateran Palace adjoins the Basilica of St. John Lateran, the pope's titular basilica as bishop of Rome. The palace is occupied by Cardinal Ugo Poletti, the pope's vicar for Rome, who was awakened by the explosion and inspected the damage.

Investigating officers said passersby saw a young man in a white jacket running away and a French-made car speeding off shortly before the blast.

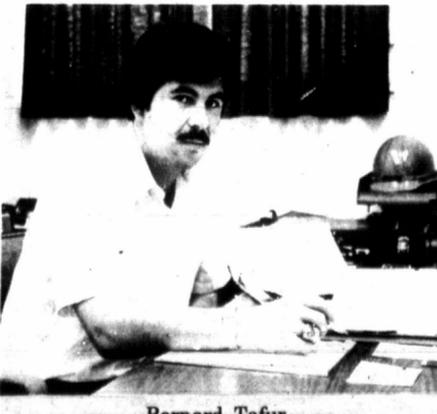

Police said 282 persons, including 30 Argentine exiles opposed to Videla's right-wing military government, were taken into custody after the demonstrations Sunday. All were released later.

The demonstrators scuffled with police and waved banners in St. Peter's Square but did not disrupt the ceremony on the steps of St. Peter's Basilica. The police acted so quickly that most in the crowd of 250,000 did not realize the demonstration was going on. One small group unfurled an anti-Videla streamer. Others raised balloons with posters reading "Videla Executioner" and "Videla Assassin."

Leftists threw firebombs at an Italian cardinal's car near the Vatican after the ceremony and set several cars afire in and around the Piazza Navona, on the other side of the Tiber from the Vatican. No serious injuries were reported.

Like his predecessor, Pope Paul VI, Pope John Paul chose to have his installation on the steps of St. Peter's instead of inside the basilica. But in keeping with the simplicity that has marked his first days in pontiff, he refused to be carried to the ceremony on the portable throne, and the traditional beehive-shaped tiara was replaced by the white wool stole or pallium embroidered with seven crosses that symbolizes the pope's role as patriarch of the church.

Bernardo Tafur

Bernardo Tafur-business came easy

Bernardo Tafur went into the cattle business early.

When he was born in 1948 in Cali, Colombia, Tafur's godfather gave him his first calf. As he grew up, he acquired more cattle through "wheeling and dealing", so that by the time he was 17 and a senior in high school, he had about 30 head.

The sale of that small herd paid for his first year of school at Purdue University in Indiana.

Tafur recently came to Pampa as an industrial relations manager for Celanese Chemical Co. When he first arrived in the U.S. in 1967, he didn't speak any English. He was awarded a Purdue International Scholarship and jumped into his studies, learning English as he went along. "It was an experience," he says, adding that putting himself through school has been his most satisfying accomplishment.

When he left Purdue in 1973 to return to Colombia, Tafur took a bachelor's degree and masters degree in industrial management, a command of the English language, and an American wife, Anne.

Colombia is a South American republic of 26 million people with a land surface of 1,138,914 square miles. The country is primarily agricultural (coffee, sugar cane, cotton and beans), but has undergone extensive industrialization since the 1950s. Celanese has two or three plants there, Tafur said. Colombia, Mexico, Costa Rica and Venezuela are the only Latin American Countries to determine their governments through popular elections.

Tafur comes from a large family — eight boys and four girls. As a boy he grew to love horseback riding on his father's 11,000-acre ranch, he says it is still what he likes to do most. In May 1966, he participated in a bullfight in Cali, which he said is the most daring thing he has done.

His most frightening experience was being "very close" to a guerrilla ambush by his parents' farm in 1965. That sort of activity was not uncommon in Colombia between the 1950s and the late 1960s, Tafur said. He speaks authoritatively on the political situation in his native country.

"People become fanatically involved with political ideas," he said. "There are extreme radicals on the left and right. Politics are built not on programs but on individuals. It's because the same political bosses try to keep it that way. Many people are not educated enough to think independently."

"During the last 10 years there is a very large silent emerging middle class that will be heard in a few years. It can turn the political picture around," Tafur said. There is a tendency among this emerging middle class not to care which party is in power as long as they are provided with health care, public works, education and social security.

About 95 percent of the people in Colombia belong to the Catholic Church, which is "very conservative and very powerful," Tafur said. "There are no independent Catholic movements of any kind I know of," he said.

"Unlike most Latin American countries, Communists are allowed political expression in Colombia," Tafur said. There are Communists and Socialists in both the national Senate and House of Representatives. But

The high today will be in the low 80s. The low tonight will be in the mid 60s. Winds will be from the south at 10-15 mph decreasing to 5-10 mph tonight. There is a 30 percent chance of rain today, 30 percent tonight and 20 percent chance tomorrow.

Ella disrupts vacation plans

CAPE HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Ella disrupted the vacation plans of some beach-goers over the weekend but caused little disturbance other than high waves and rough seas along North Carolina's Outer Banks.

A hurricane watch was posted along the 100-mile ribbon of islands off the North Carolina mainland Friday as Ella brought its 120 mph winds up the Atlantic to less than 300 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

But the storm stalled there Saturday morning and weakened before turning to the northeast and into the open Atlantic.

The National Weather Service said late Sunday night that Ella was continuing to regain strength, with winds reaching 115 mph and gales extending 125 miles from the center. The storm was located at latitude 36.6 north, longitude 67.4 west — about 325 miles northwest of Bermuda and was expected to begin weakening today.

Wreckage of missing airliner spotted

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — The wreckage of a Rhodesian airliner missing with 56 persons reported aboard was sighted by military spotter planes today in bushland in northwest Rhodesia, the military said.

There were no reports of any survivors.

Although the pilot radioed five minutes after taking off that his two starboard engines had failed, there was speculation that a guerrilla missile hit the Viscount turboprop.

Police and military planes joined ground searchers in the hunt for the wreckage.

The plane disappeared Sunday afternoon on a flight from Kariba, a resort near the border with Zambia, where guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union operate.

French cabinet locked away from world

PARIS (AP) — The French Cabinet spent the weekend locked up in a 450-year-old chateau 38 miles from Paris, cut off from the world, denied aides and secretaries, forbidden to take notes part of the time or use the telephone.

It was reminiscent of beleaguered President Carter's recent retreat to Camp David, except that French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing was not under any pressure from the National Assembly, the media or the polls when he sequestered 17 of his cabinet ministers in the Chateau de Rambouillet.

Doctors to teach in China

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Kansas City doctor has selected a team of prominent American cardiologists to join him in accepting the Chinese Medical Association's invitation to teach at major heart centers in Peking and Shanghai.

The invitation for a three-week teaching stint beginning Sept. 24 was sent from the association to Dr. E. Grey Diamond, provost for health sciences at the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Taxation and movement

When a good climate for industry deteriorates in any area, that region can expect to begin to lose some of its vital business base. If some other areas offer a brighter climate they will attract industry both old and new.

Sometimes it can be a life or death decision for a business when it faces competition from those in a more favorable area.

As the Southwest attracted new industry it also put a competitive bind on counterparts in the Northeast and some were forced to move their facilities or go under.

Some industries in parts of the Northeast were first welcomed, then later neglected and even tax-exploited, with little or no thought of the eventual exodus which might sometime ensue.

Government at all levels appear to have only one solution for all impending problems: more taxation. This solution is used even though the problem was caused by excesses in taxation.

Some states, now hard-pressed by the industrial move toward the Southwest and other areas, are or have contemplated a move which is much in the manner of Russian Roulette.

This move is in the form of exit tax penalties for any industry which has the temerity to seek an area more favorable to their operation.

Maine already has a law which requires firms that leave the state to make high severance pay to all workers left behind. Ohio is working on a law which in addition to requiring lump sum severance payment to workers, will extract a contribution to a community fund equal to a tenth of a year's total payroll.

The Ohio fund, if used as now stated, would retrain workers and offset lost property taxes. Retrain them for what? The penalty itself will just be one other reason for industry to bypass Ohio.

These anti-exit tax ideas may spread if it appears to politicians that such penalties will solve the problem. Like the attitudes which created the problem in the first place, the self-defeating tax penalty method has a delayed fuse which may not appear until it is way too late to do anything about it.

There is most always some pressure group behind every new law that is proposed. We would guess that these punitive attempts to keep industries in a location where they do not care to be are sponsored and pushed by labor unions.

Union membership in the private sector has been on the decline for a number of years. We believe that much of the dissatisfaction among workers toward their union masters has been in the states where forced union membership has been abetted by the political sector.

An attitude of giving workers choice in whether or not they join a union has been prevalent in the very states which are now gaining an industrial base.

Freedom-loving Americans, owners, managers and workers alike have been drawn to these areas. Since labor unions represent such a small percentage of American workers, it might behoove labor union officials to make a switch in their stance. If they stood for a choice instead of a captive membership they might gain more support.

We don't expect any such change, since force has been the hallmark of most all union activities. We suspect that the idea of trying to force a business to stay in an area by tax penalties is the brainchild of the labor union bosses.

Northeast civic leaders better take a long hard look before they go along with much of this type coercion. Some businessmen believe that these laws will be declared unconstitutional. Whether this is so or not is not the crux of the problem.

Changing the business climate to attract and hold industry is the only long-range method which holds any hope for success.

Nation's Press

A 'banner year' for the political ethic

(Wall Street Journal)

Recently New York's junior senator proclaimed that his state had "a banner year" — not, as one might hope, because New Yorkers were more virtuous, free, or productive or because they were more equitably or efficiently governed, but because federal subsidies, grants and contracts to and in the state increased by $7.7 billion over the previous year, presumably as a consequence of the change of administration in Washington and - or of New York's election of a new junior senator.

With his great gifts of self-expression, Mr. Moynihan has put more clearly than his colleagues a political doctrine he shares with most of them: that the function of government is to distribute money; the efficacy of government is measured by the sums dispensed, and the worth of politicians is weighed by how much is spent in their turn by the feds.

The attitude is of course nothing new, but think on it. Politicians proudly boast of their accomplishments — i.e., mostly what they have gotten for various interests — and make promises of more goodies to come. A candidate who offers a corporation favors in return for campaign contributions or buys an individual vote is corrupt, but if he openly says vote for me and I will get you this or that, he is applauded for smart politics.

What is the difference? The politician cannot be personally involved in a financial transaction. He cannot accept money or pay out his own money, but he can collect power and pay out public money. He cannot slip a derelict a fiver for a vote, but he can buy office by legislating billions of dollars.

The politician must take care not to crudely offer money for votes, but has to fake at separating the voting from the benefits. And it seems to be more ethical to make offers to nonprofit interests (e.g., "education") than to profit-making industries. And a general rule is that the larger the group that is offered money, the more acceptable is the transaction.

Now, every polity has its own rules and conventions. What constitutes corruption varies with time and place. Witness the difficulties generated by trying to apply contemporary American standards to foreign countries or to U.S. companies doing business abroad. Many political practices now considered unacceptable were once ordinary behavior. Perhaps our descendants will marvel that we tolerated an ethic of government - as - cow and politician-as-milkmaid.

And perhaps our posterity will rediscover the ideal of the statesman, whose ends, according to Samuel T. Coleridge, ought to be:

1. Security to possessors;
2. Facility to acquirers; and
3. Hope to all."

Labor Day is such a familiar fixture on the national calendar that it is somewhat surprising to realize it is one of our more recent holidays.

To realize it is one of our more recent holidays.

True, the first observance in honor of labor was held in New York City as far back as 1882, and by 1894 Congress had given the occasion official status in the territories and District of Columbia. Yet only for the past half century have all the states officially observed it.

This is a short time in the life of a nation, even one so young as the United States. But Labor Day is now firmly established as a national habit.

Undoubtedly this is because the holiday has come to mark the end of summer in our minds, with schools starting up immediately afterward and families split up into their various pursuits.

Hats off to us all

Not labor's day alone

It's the last holiday until Thanksgiving, a long three-day weekend just made for a short trip or an outing, or perhaps it's an opportunity to finish those chores around the house that have been put off all summer.

This is so much the case that most of us never think of the original reason for the day — that it was established as a recognition of and tribute to the American laboring man. But though we still call it Labor Day, it is no longer labor's day.

Very few, even those who carry union cards, will attend a labor rally today. Few cities have parades any more. Yet at one time, Labor Day was a magnet drawing folks downtown to the park to listen to the band and speeches and shoot off the fireworks left over from the Fourth of July.

On one hand, it is regrettable that the American scene has changed so much, that Labor Day has become a private public holiday. On the other hand, this change is part of the success of the labor movement. With recognition has come the loss of a certain militancy, a sense of separateness from "other" Americans.

No this is no longer labor's day alone. It belongs to all Americans, for all of us are laborers in the sense that the work we do contributes to the country's strength.

Perhaps the name "Labor Day" is a little anachronistic today, almost a misnomer. The word "labor" is not quite broad enough to encompass the meaning the holiday has acquired.

The name for this day should express how we honor the working, doing, accomplishing man by casually taking a day off from the routine.

Still, a new name would not change anything really. We all know what Labor Day means.

The future is purchased today

by HANS SENHOLZ

There is something thrilling and exalting in the thought of the future. It elevates human nature and makes man happier and better. The present does not satisfy; man reaches out to the future with its immitation of eternity and immortality.

Man does not have a knowledge of things to come. And yet, his blindness to the future does not deter him from preparing for it. Standing firm in the world of daily tasks, he is making preparations in all his aspirations, be they religious, cultural, social or economic.

In the sphere of business all future-oriented activity is often called "speculation." The businessman who is building a plant or store speculates on future business conditions that will hopefully permit him to retrieve his investment. The merchant who places a purchase order for future delivery speculates on future demand for his merchandise. Even the young physician who chooses to settle in a certain community to build his practice speculates on the economic future of his community and the demand for his services. They all lack the knowledge of things to come, but are hopeful that future changes and developments will reward their present decisions. And they all are taking various measures of risk that flow from the uncertainty of the future.

And yet, all such future-oriented activity has come under a dark cloud of suspicion. It is more popular to live in the present for instant gratification of wants and desires. Public policy promises benefits and services now — even at the expense of the future. He who steadfastly keeps his eyes on the future faces censure and condemnation as a "speculator." In a strange twist of terminology the "now-generation" questions his motivation and denounces him as a "self-centered," "greedy" monster seeking profits from changes. Countless laws and regulations aim to seize his rewards and restrain him from searching for the future.

The conflict is as old as man himself. It arose on his first day on earth when he became aware of tomorrow. Was he to allocate his labors to the urgent needs of the moment or to the demands of tomorrow? The answer to this question provides an important explanation of wealth and poverty. Present-oriented societies linger in perpetual poverty always living from hand to mouth, while future-oriented societies soon prosper and multiply. It also gives rise to great differences in individual income and wealth, which in turn breed envy and covetousness and bring forth countless schemes and policies toward a new redistribution. It makes the successful entrepreneur a favorite target of envy to present oriented individuals who fail to comprehend entrepreneurial and speculative activity. Preoccupied with the present, and chronically poor and always unprepared, they tend to suspect all those individuals who differ in outlook and life-style.

Athwart The Planners

Speculation also upsets those politicians and officials who would like to guide and direct society. They are eager to direct the destiny of all, which they call "central planning." When some individuals shape their own plans and act independently of the central planners, it is "selfish speculation," "unplanned," "atomistic," "harmful," and "chaotic." When central planning fails dismally and inflicts great harm on countless victims, the blame is laid invariably on "speculators." When the stock market crashes and economic depression seizes the country, the speculators caused it. When the U.S. dollar falls in purchasing power and sinks to lower levels in world money markets, the speculators sold it. When central planning creates an energy crisis, the political planners denounce the speculators and impose more stringent controls on individual initiative. In fact the speculator is depicted as the personification of all human vices and failings.

Such diatribes merely reveal the great schism that separates the two conceivable systems of economic and social organization: the private property order with its individual freedoms, and the command system with its political coercion in many aspects of social life. Man always must choose between these two modes of organization. For long periods of time he chose the command system under such labels as feudalism, mercantilism, fascism, socialism, or communism. But occasionally Western man chose to be free and independent, unconfined by political limitations and controls. The history of the United States provides a splendid example of such an order.

The free order is also a future-oriented order inasmuch as it permits its members to save and invest for a better future. It liberates man from ancient restraints and limitations that shackle his initiative and create energy. In a free society the future takes the deepest root, and is most discernible, in the plans and aspirations of the great entrepreneurs and geniuses of enterprise. Through their actions and provisions for the future they greatly affect the daily lives of their fellowmen. Their names and exploits are familiar to most Americans. John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie, J.P. Morgan and Henry Ford were dramatic leaders, bold and original with vision of change and a better future. Under their leadership and that of many other exceptional men the U.S. had become the most productive country on earth by 1893, and American wage rates and standards of living soared to the highest levels in human history shortly before World War I.

And yet, these men have become important symbols of an economic order that stands condemned in the eyes of many of our contemporaries. Textbook writers utilize them to illustrate personal greed and lust for power that allegedly characterizes the period of "unbridled capitalism." Contemporary literature censures them for the poverty and misery of their workers from whom the great fortunes allegedly were taken.

'Unbridled'

We need not dwell here on the great achievements of those exceptional men who affected the economic lives of so many Americans. Nor need we analyze the motive powers that drove those men to such performance. Their motives probably did not differ from those of most other men in other ages and places. But we need to be mindful that their very appearance presupposed a climate of individual freedom that is so rare in human history. Surely, they were "unbridled" with political edicts and controls, confiscatory taxation and regulation, and many other manifestations of the command order. They were left free to try and experiment, to save and invest for a greater future. No matter what we may think of them as individuals, we must admire the society that set them free and let them pass unencumbered by the strictures of envy and the demands of the moment.

Present-day Americans would never tolerate the exceptional man who creates new industries on the ruins of old production. There can be no Henry Ford in the present climate of our political economy. Under the influence of ancient ideologies modern man is suspicious of individual freedom that gives rise to economic inequality. He uses his political apparatus of coercion to maintain and restore some measure of equality. His tax collectors seek to extract the lion's share of "unearned" individual income and wealth. And his numerous officials in a host of regulatory agencies seek to restore equality and provide equal opportunity through stringent supervision and control.

Under the influence of old suspicions and prejudices modern man prefers to rely on political action rather than on voluntary cooperation. In the command order every individual is a wheel in a giant political machine and every sphere of his social life is politicized. And even where modern man has retained some democratic institutions, politics plays an important role in his life. Parliaments, which were originally set up to limit the profligacy of the rulers, are incurring huge expenditures on behalf of the electorate. To be the favorite of an envious multitude, a politician must be on their level. He must desire what they desire, yield to their prejudices and substitute them for principles. Instead of enlightening their errors, he must adopt them. As a political leader he merely furnishes the sophistry that will defend and propagate those errors.

Man of Prey

When he must choose between the needs of the moment and the demands of tomorrow, modern man opts for instant gratification of his wants and desires. He wants social benefits and services now through political redistribution and transfer. He preys on the richer members of his society, and when such revenues no longer satisfy him, he embarks upon massive deficit spending. That is, he consumes the savings of his more

Cowboys slap leather in meet

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Two scowling cowboys faced off outside a Houston bar, their quivering hands poised over six-shooters holstered at their sides, apparently ready to slap leather in a duel to the death.

Suddenly, a police car, with its lights and siren, blaring, squealed to a halt next to the gunslingers and the officer leaped out, ready for action.

"He took one look, got a disgusted expression on his face, got back in his car shaking his head and drove off," said Bob Graham, grinning ear-to-ear at the recollection. "Someone in the apartments next to here saw what we were doing and called the cops to tell them there was a gunfight going on."

What the person saw was competition in the South Texas Fast Draw Championship being held at the Candyman's club in southwest Houston during the Labor Day weekend.

About 20 shooters from Texas and Oklahoma participated in the contest, which was held as part of a charity fund-raising effort for the battle against muscular dystrophy.

The cowboys weren't facing each other, but were standing side-by-side, shooting at timing devices with blanks.

When a light flashed, both would react like striking rattlesnakes, flipping the guns out of their holsters and fanning the hammers. A blink at the wrong time and an observer would miss it all.

The explosion from the blank would break a six-inch balloon held in a waist-level cylinder about eight feet away—if the shot was on target, that is. The breaking balloon stopped a digital timer, recording the instant between light and shot.

"This is a non-violent sport. We never shoot at each other," said Graham, a 46-year-old insurance salesman who is the current Texas fast-draw champion and three-time world champion. His wife, Diane, is the women's state champ.

It takes less than a third of a second for each to draw and fire specially made .45-caliber revolvers, and Graham consistently hits times of a quarter second or less.

"The world record in the Guinness book is 209 seconds," he said.

"We have about 2,000 members in the World Fast Draw Association, from the United States and all over the world," Graham said. "We have all types of people competing, and everyone does it part time. There is one guy here who looks like Mr. Peepers—a real milquetoast—but he sure can shoot."

Spectators are always asking him how today's fast guns would fare against the legendary names of the Old West such as Wyatt Earp or Billy the Kid. Graham doesn't think the desperadoes of yesteryear would stand a chance.

"In the old days, the guns would stand there and empty their guns at each other and never hit each other," he said.

"Now we have specially made guns and use a highly refined technique. It's like comparing the Indy 500 racers to the Model T Ford."

First Lady starts campaign swing

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter embarks here today on a hectic three-city Labor Day campaign swing through Texas on behalf of Democratic congressional candidates and U.S. Senate nominee Bob Krueger.

Bexar County Democratic Chairman Joyce Peters said Mrs. Carter had unexpectedly offered to campaign in Texas at the Democrats' traditional Labor Day campaign kickoff for the November election.

"This is a beautiful bonus and will be a big help to our efforts," said Mrs. Peters.

The First Lady, who arrived in San Antonio on Sunday night, was scheduled to visit the Southwest Craft Center this morning before appearing at a $25-per-person Bexar County Democratic brunch in the downtown Menger Hotel.

Fired San Antonio garbage-men and their supporters vowed to stage a protest rally during Mrs. Carter's downtown appearance here. More than 180 garbage-men, dog catchers and airport maintenance workers were dismissed after staging an illegal walkout in July over wages. About half were not rehired.

Mrs. Carter was also scheduled to take part this afternoon in the Garland Labor Day Parade and make an appearance at a North Dallas shopping center.

The Dallas-area visit was aimed at aiding first-term Congressman Jim Mattox, who

Pampan injured

An accident occurred at 8:05 a.m. Saturday in the 800 block of S. Cuyler. Jack Elton Lathrop, Star Rt. 3 in Pampa, was traveling north in the outside lane and swerved in front of two vehicles traveling north in the inside lane of Cuyler, according to police reports. The vehicle driven by Lathrop then swerved to the right of the road into a dirt lot and came to rest under a semi-trailer, the report said. The semi-trailer was parked approximately 40 ft. east of the roadway, police said.

Area farmers file civil suit

STINNETT — A group of Hutchinson County farmers have filed a civil suit in 84th District Court against the county judge, commissioners and the tax assessor-collector contending the county officials have wrongly assessed their land.

In the lawsuit the 140 landowners charge that the county board of equalization "wholly failed and refused to value and assess the land of each plaintiff according to the provisions of the Texas Constitution."

They contend that the county officials instead attempted to value and assess the property of each landowner "according to methods and standards not in compliance with those required by said constitutional provision."

Contending that the present valuation of their farms is excessive, the farmers are seeking temporary and permanent injunctions against the board of equalization.

Officials paint wrong picture

DETROIT (AP) — The average bookmaking parlor is a smalltime business, and the image of a huge, sinister organized crime gambling industry was created by law enforcement officials trying to explain their failure to stop illegal gambling, a new study suggests.

Preliminary versions of the first two sections of the detailed, 10-year study, scheduled for release this fall, have been made available to the Detroit Free Press, the newspaper reported today.

The study, financed in part by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, is based on federal and during national elections, held every four years, "not even four percent of the people go Communist, and maybe another four percent go Socialist," he said.

Tafur described himself as a "progressive conservative."

"Progressive means steady, gradual change," he said. "I don't think Columbia should be run by Communists, Socialists or liberal Democrats. I think they should provide incentives for foreign investment from the Western Hemisphere."

Tafur lived and worked in Colombia for another five years after graduating from college. During that time he bought a 300-acre farm in 1975 and served as a city councilman from 1976 to 1978, which he describes as the most challenging thing he's ever done.

Tafur decided to come back to the U.S. this year, and arrived in Houston, his wife's hometown. He interviewed with several firms and then joined Celanese.

He's been in Pampa for about a month. "I like what I've seen so far," he said. "The people are nice. The weather is nice when you compare it to Houston weather," he smiled.

The Tafurs and their three-year-old daughter Latalia are temporarily living in an apartment while they look for a house. The house-hunting process has been "slow," Tafur said.

He is looking forward to participating in community activities, Tafur said. He played soccer at Purdue for four years, and said he plans to contact "some people or schools" about starting some kind of youth soccer program as a volunteer.

"It would be something to keep me busy, get me in shape and help kids," he said.

Being able to obtain U.S. residency has been the most gratifying experience to date for future citizen Tafur. Currently, he said his number one goal is to "continuously gain knowledge and experience so as to do a good job for Celanese and apply myself to the community."

National briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Hyman Rickover contends that Americans expect their president "to be perfect, even more perfect than the Lord."

In an interview Sunday, the 78-year-old military leader also said, "We don't understand, we put a man in a job with little power, little authority and we expect him to do everything that every citizen wants."

In a stormy appearance on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," Rickover charged that U.S. citizens "have a pretty good life," and have become lackadaisical. During one heated exchange, he denounced the panel of reporters' questions as "stupid" and "pseudo-political."

Rickover is deputy commander of the Naval Sea

System Command for Nuclear Propulsion.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is emphasizing that he is philosophically opposed to mandatory wage and price controls and that he would resist using them except in the event of a national emergency.

"Whatever we might do in the future, it would be short of any mandatory wage and price controls and it would be carefully worked out if things should get worse on inflation so that the interests of the working people and consumers would be protected," the president said in an Aug. 18 interview with editors of labor union publications. The White House released a transcript of the interview on Sunday.

Carter did, however, hint that the administration may take stronger action against rising prices if inflation worsens.

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Those who favor temperance may call it good news, but those who keep track of tax revenues call it bad news.

Maine's beer tax take will be off by a million dollars this year, predicts Louis Page, who oversees the Malt and Wine Division in the state's Bureau of Alcoholic Beverages.

Maine beer distributors pay the excise taxes — 56 cents for a case of 24 twelve-ounce cans — as they buy beer from the breweries. An increase in the legal drinking age from 18 to 20 and a law requiring deposits on bottles are believed to be contributing to the flatness of beer sales.

Most didn't survive goodwill mission

TOKYO (AP) — "Mommie, is it true that dolls like these were burned?" asked the little girl, clinging to her mother's hand.

"Yes, Mari-Chan," the mother replied. "I was about your age when it happened. It was sad and disturbing..."

The child and mother were among a crowd at a popular exhibition of some "blue-eyed dolls," survivors from a vast number sent from the United States in 1927 as a gesture of goodwill.

Most of the original delegation did not survive World War II. They were tiny, curious victims of the war's hate and anger.

Those at the exhibit here had such names as Alice, Ruth, Virginia, Patricia and Mary. They had big blue-eyes with long lashes and blonde curly hair. Each carried a U.S. passport and a message of goodwill.

The 12,000 original dolls made up the largest peace emissary of its kind ever sent from the United States. It was designed to strengthen friendly ties, with an exchange later of Japanese dolls in colorful silk kimonos representing 68 cities in Japan.

Some of the Japanese dolls are believed to be in American museums now. The exhibit here included a photo of a display of Japanese dolls in Riverside, Calif., shortly after they arrived in the United States.

The arrival of the American dolls in Yokohama on March 1, 1927, sparked parades and exhibitions and a song by noted composer Ujio Noguchi that became a bestseller. With its lyrics about "honorable blue-eyed dolls," crying because they "don't understand a word of Japanese," the song is still a nostalgic favorite.

The dolls, which could close their eyes and say "Mama" — something Japanese dolls could not do then — were sent to kindergartens and schools where they were treasured. Some even went to the imperial family's palace as "state guests."

But war clouds eventually engulfed Japan, and the dolls became victims of a "hate-America" campaign.

Two years after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the war began turning in America's favor. In 1943, Japanese military authorities issued an order — fantastic as it may seem — that the dolls be destroyed in public. It was reminiscent of Nazi book-burning.

The orders were obeyed almost to the letter. The dolls were removed from honored places and destroyed. One report gave this description:

"The dolls were dragged out onto the school grounds, pierced or smashed with bamboo spears, doused with gasoline and burned together with their passports and other belongings in a ritualistic display on how to loathe the enemy..."

Miyuki Hoshi of Aizu-Wakamatsu recalls "the pain in my heart" when teachers at her school burned the students' doll in front of them. She secretly saved the doll's clothing and wishes she'd had the courage to save the doll.

Chiyoko Ota of Yamagata recalls being told to destroy her school's doll. "But I couldn't do it. I hid the doll and was reprimanded by the principal, and again told to destroy it. This time I sank it in a swamp after covering it with a red mantle."

Despite the wartime animosity, there were others who secretly defied the order and saved some of the dolls.

The dolls' story came to light when Ayako Ishimaru, a teacher, read a news report five years ago about an American doll treasured by a school in Kofu, 150 miles from Tokyo. She visited the school and learned the doll's name was "Ginella, 3-years old" and its donor was a Dr. James Wilbur Hondorf of Rochester, N.Y.

Ms. Ishimaru says she wrote a letter and later visited Rochester, where she learned there had been a Dr. Hondorf but he had moved away and not been heard from.

Ms. Ishimaru returned to Japan determined to locate other dolls that may have survived. Her search uncovered 16 dolls.

Advice

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a farmer in Francesville, Ind. Soon I will be out in the fields harvesting the corn I planted last May.

That doesn't sound like a very important statement for a farmer to make, but it's important to me because it means that I can again provide for my wife and three children—something I wasn't able to do before my recent cornea transplant operation.

Nineteen years ago I lost one eye in a farm accident. Then last year, lightning struck twice, and I seriously injured the other eye in another farm accident. This left me legally blind. I prayed for a cornea transplant, and God heard my prayers.

I am grateful to God, and to my very dedicated eye surgeon, Dr. Louis Girard of Houston, who performed the miracle of restoring my sight.

I wish I could thank the unselfish donor who thought beyond his own life and made provisions to pass on the gift of sight to a stranger. But since that is not possible, I pray that the Lord will bless the family of the donor who cared enough to share.

Abby, please continue to urge your readers to donate their eyes at the time of death so that someone who has lived in darkness will be able to see again, as I am now privileged to do.

PERRY NEIHOUSER

DEAR PERRY: Your letter made my day. And anyone out there who wants a donor card may obtain one free by writing to THE LIVING BANK, BOX 6725, HOUSTON, TEXAS 77005. They are a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. God bless you and He will.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I can't solve alone. I am very much attracted to a handsome New Hampshire state trooper I've seen, but I don't know how to meet him.

His license number is 206. Do you think if I were to speed and get stopped the next time I saw him, it might help? I don't want to be tacky.

DESPERATE IN KEENE

DEAR DESPERATE: I don't recommend breaking the law in order to break the ice. If you don't want to be "tacky," you'd better find someone who knows him—and something about him. Your handsome No. 206 may have a wife and six kids at home.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HUNGRY FOR MAIL ABOARD THE USS ENTERPRISE CVN 65": Next time you write to someone, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. It will double your chances for a speedy reply. And if that doesn't work, write to me (and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please). I'll answer quicker than you can say "shore leave!"

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am a 27-year-old male with a problem I don't want to take to my family doctor because his nurse has a big mouth and she is present during all of his examinations.

Over a year ago I developed a lump in my left testicle. It seems to be swollen a little. It doesn't hurt much but every so often I get a shooting pain there. It drives me crazy because it is very itchy and it seems to sweat a lot. The left side is wet but the right side is not and there's a red spot over the lump but that might be from scratching.

I have no unusual discharge and I do not have any troubles with sex. I've had a blood test for V.D. and it came out negative.

I also have to lift heavy objects so maybe it's the strain. I hope it's not cancer. I'll be looking for your advice in the paper.

DEAR READER—Any lump, regardless of where it is, deserves identification and that requires an examination. As long as you've had this lump, I doubt that it's cancer but it's certainly true that a little lump on the testicle can be a sign of cancer of the testicle and cancer of the testicle does occur in young men.

You could also have had inflammation of the epididymus which is the vein, tube and artery area that attaches to the main body of the testicle. Epididymitis can occur as a complication of many different infections. I might add that it can follow gonorrhea.

Your letter makes me wonder if you know everything you need to know about venereal disease. At this time a common blood test is used for syphilis. Syphilis is not associated with a discharge. Gonorrhea is. Gonorrhea is not detected by a blood test, although there is some research work on developing a method to do so.

At the present, gonorrhea is detected only by locating the bacteria in the discharge, so a negative blood test doesn't necessarily mean that you're not carrying around some bacteria that you don't know about. In any case, I feel that you have to see a doctor. If you don't want to see your family doctor, maybe you can find another one.

I have a sympathetic understanding for your problem about the office nurse. Even though your doctor may honor your professional confidence, it's quite true that other personnel around offices do have an opportunity to cause any patient social embarrassment. That's why doctors try to use reliable people who can work in such an environment.

I guess your best bet would be to tell the doctor that you want to see him privately and perhaps he will get the message that you would like to talk without anyone else being present.

I really would like to encourage you to have an examination, though, because you may have a condition that needs treatment.

The prostate gland can be infected in young men, enlarge and obstruct urinary flow in middle-aged to older men and, if you live long enough, may develop cancer. Cancer of the prostate is the third most common cause of cancer deaths in men. It can be cured if detected early enough.

Readers who want more information about the prostate gland can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 1-6. Address your requests to Dr. Lamb, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY—After I had an embarrassing baking failure because the baking powder was old a professional cook told me to always stir the powder before using. There will be no more failures because the baking powder has been standing too long. —RUTH

DEAR POLLY—The lady who placed a very hot pan on her counter top and is left with a black stain about seven inches in diameter should have a hardwood board cut to the proper size. She can set it on her counter top for a cutting board that will serve many purposes. —ELIZABETH

DEAR POLLY—I have an easier way to get rid of mice than the one suggested in the column. Simply spread moth balls around the openings where they are coming in. My Pet Peeve is when people are invited to weddings—people who have not only bought a wedding gift but probably at least one shower gift—yet are expected to buy their own drinks. There are those who say "Everybody does it" and I reply that I have yet to be invited to a wedding put on by people with good taste where we have been expected to buy anything. —CECILE

Clothing Care ALERT!

Clothing Care Requires Know-How

You can learn something about removing stains on clothes from professional cleaners. Removing stains is a science for them, and they call on special techniques and equipment to deal with different types of stains. You can apply some of their techniques to remove stains from your clothes at home.

Professional cleaners still base their cleaning procedures on whether a stain will dissolve in a drycleaning fluid or in water and detergent.

The International Fabricare Institute (IFI), an association of about 10,000 professional drycleaners and laundresses, recommends two different spot-removing agents for the two different types of stains when you try removing spots from clothes at home.

Soap and water is best for stains that dissolve in water, including stains from most foods and drinks, grass, urine and washable inks. Cleaning fluids and powders work best on oily, greasy or waxy stains—including makeup, ball-point pen ink and printing inks, carbon paper, cooking oil and grease, candle wax, crayons and salad oil. Both liquid and powdered spot removers contain drycleaning solvents. In the powdered spot removers, solvents draw the stain from the fabric so the powder can absorb the stain.

If you're not sure whether the stain will dissolve in water or in cleaning fluid, you may damage the fabric by using the wrong method. For example, some inks can be removed with water, but water actually sets some ball-point pen ink. When you are unsure what method to use have a professional cleaner remove the stain.

The home method works best on fabric that isn't fragile or highly sized. Satins, furs, suede and vinyl all require professional care. Check care labels. Although labels don't give spot removal information, they can give you clues. Don't use cleaning fluid on clothing labeled "Do Not Dryclean." Be careful about using water on clothes labeled "Dry-clean Only."

Whether you attempt to remove the stain yourself or entrust the job to a professional cleaner, act quickly. Stains are harder to remove the longer they have set. Stains take time to remove though, so be patient and work the stains out slowly when attempting home cleaning methods.

KNITKNACKS

Dear Judy Love: Like all people who knit or crochet I end up with lots of leftover yarn. I never really know how much I have. Therefore, I can't tell if there is enough to make something else. Is there any way to determine how much yarn is left over? —M.F., Pennsylvania

Fashion and Beauty Tips

Best bet

Is there an old busboy's jacket lying around the house? Wear it, with slacks, and sport the latest look.

Unpolished look

When there's more polish off your nails than on them, get rid of it. Half-done manicures do no one any good.

Rope is right

If an old jump-rope is no longer used, add wooden baubles to the ends and use it for a new belt. Shorten it, if need be.

Rolled right

Jeans with rolled hems look fine, provided the hems stay rolled. If they start sneaking down, baste them with a stitch or two.

Better bra-ed

Peasant blouses are fetching, but not when they slip off the shoulder to reveal bra straps. Strapless bras work well here.

Make-up might work

If unsightly veins make you uncomfortable on the beach, try covering them with make-up.

Woe unto slob who drops that gum wrapper

By GREG THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Woe unto the slob who drops so much as a gum wrapper on the sidewalk. He'll probably be spotted by 81-year-old O.P. Schnabel, who'll leap from his Cadillac "trash truck" and shame the offender into becoming a "Cleanup Crusader."

body thought I was nuts. Now that I have some prestige, they just say I'm eccentric."
The cherubic, energetic "Old Pushbroom" Schnabel, a prominent insurance salesman and the founder of the Beautify San Antonio Association, needles, cajoles and hounds city leaders and businessmen into cleaning up sidewalks and streets.
He wears the "world's only" diamond-studded, gold pushbroom tie tack on a gaudy clasp that proclaims "Nice People Don't Litter."
He has passed out more than 200 full-size, gold-painted, glittered pushbrooms to governors, mayors and five presidents and has handed out more than six million lucky pennies on his insurance company Cleanup Crusader business cards.

He offers $25 rewards for catching anyone who illegally posts political or garage sale signs and personally patrols sidewalks and neighborhoods for litter.
He makes sure each downtown block has at least one trashcan — more than 6,000 currently carry his name. And he causes traffic havoc when he screeches his blue-and-white 1976 "trash truck" to a halt in the middle of a busy downtown street, jumping out to yank down an illegal poster.

"The only trouble with this," he said as he picked up a paper cup from the curb in front of the posh St. Anthony Hotel, "is that I have to wash my hands about 20 times a day. If germs would really kill anybody, I would have been dead 30 years ago."
As it is, Schnabel has survived three heart attacks and outwitted the doctors and insurance underwriters who denied him a life insurance policy 33 years ago. "I'm too ornery to die," he proclaims. "The doctors tell me I should rest two hours at noon. I say that's for the birds."

And if, by some chance, O.P. Schnabel should ever really die, he wants his gold-painted, glittered, ribbon-covered pushbroom on his casket in lieu of flowers.
"Who knows? Maybe they'll see it and I'll get a convert. There's no use doing this unless

I can get some converts," he said.
Believe it or not, there was a time when Schnabel was just like the rest of us. He didn't worry too much about litter and occasionally even threw a candy wrapper out of his car window.
But that was before his 1947 trip to Switzerland, where he saw the neat and clean streets and a thriving tourist industry.
"That's when the beauty bug bit me. My attitude changed about litter," he said.

At that time, San Antonio had no public trashcans and only a few downtown street sweepers who used old-fashioned pushbrooms.
With the help of "Mrs. O.P." — Lillian, his wife of 40 years — he undertook his crusade, providing 25 trash receptacles and rounding up hundreds more. Now more than 6,500, almost all carrying Schnabel's name, dot downtown.
And San Antonio, now a thriving tourist center, has won 27 state and national beautification awards.

"I advocated that everybody get a pushbroom and use it on their curb. You know the old proverb, 'If everybody sweeps in front of his doorstep, the world would be clean.' That's how I got the name 'Old Pushbroom,'" he said.
"One day back then, I was up on a stepladder taking down a poster when some fellow asked my wife, 'Is that guy nuts? My wife said, 'No, he's just fool enough to think he can clean up this dirty city.'"

Oil refineries processing more foreign oil

By MAX B. SKELTON—
AP Oil Writer—
HOUSTON (AP) — After sharp cutbacks earlier in the year, domestic oil refineries are processing larger quantities of foreign crude oil. Foreign crude runs at U.S. refineries in each of the past eight weeks have ranged from 6,000,000 to 6,500,000 barrels a day. This compares with a cutback to 5,135,000 barrels daily in late April as Alaska's North Slope production approached capacity limits of the Trans-

Alaskan pipeline. Prior to the late April low, the foreign runs had fallen gradually since the week ending July 29, 1977, when they averaged a record 7,162,000 barrels a day. That was just a week before the first tanker of North Slope crude moved out of Valdez on Alaska's south coast. Crude oil imports peaked in June 1977 at 6,947,000 barrels a day and then gradually fell back to an April average of 5,360,000 barrels daily. By however, the average had climbed back to 6,212,000 barrels a day.

The American Petroleum Institute reports, however, that January-July crude imports of 5,827,000 barrels a day were still 13.6 percent below the same 1977 period. None of the averages include the foreign crude being purchased for the Department of Energy's strategic petroleum reserves program. Heavier reliance on foreign crude can be traced to increased demand for petroleum products and to record or near record levels of operations by domestic refiners. Chase Manhattan Bank, in its study of January-June domestic operations, also says North Slope crude oil production has stabilized at about 1.2 million barrels a day and crude imports can be expected to start increasing again. January-June demand for domestic petroleum products has been estimated by the API at 19,261,000 barrels a day or 2.4 percent above 1977. The Chase Manhattan report estimates the requirements at 19,321,000 barrels, a 2.7 percent increase.

Most growth rates prior to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74 were in the 4 to 5 percent range. Chase Manhattan says the continuing trend toward lower levels of oil demand growth is a result of long-run forces within the United States that arose after the oil price hikes of 1973. "Substitution away from oil products, lower levels of long-run economic growth, and explicit government oil conservation policies all have contributed to this trend," the bank's report states.

The report adds there were, however, some surprises in the composition of the January-June growth even though total oil demand behaved as anticipated. "Gasoline demand did not reflect federal auto efficiency standards to the extent expected, and distillate and residual fuel oil demand was forecast to increase faster than actually occurred," the report said. "The strong performance of new car sales may have added to miles driven, offsetting gains in the efficiency of the automobile fleet. Also, secondary stocks could be absorbing higher than expected levels of gasoline production, which should be worked off in the second half of the year." Chase Manhattan said that in the case of residual fuel, with more than one-half of it being used by electric power plants, the lower than anticipated growth undoubtedly reflects the modest growth in electricity demand. "In addition, since both residual and distillate fuels are highly substitutable with natural gas in industrial boilers, the current excess supply conditions the major intrastate natural gas markets would be expected to reduce growth in oil demand," the report said. "This condition will probably continue the rest of the year." Argentine meat exports totaled some $359 million in the first six months of the year, a 26.6 percent increase over the same period of 1977, according to the National Meat Board.

Upsets abound in first day of NFL

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
Now, as the Denver Broncos were saying before they were so rudely interrupted...

The Broncos, beginning the defense of their American Football Conference championship, started where they left off in the West, beating Oakland, 14-6 in their opening game of the National Football League season Sunday.

"It's about time people started believing Denver is for real," said defensive tackle Lyle Alzado.

"I still don't think people believe us yet," added safety Bill Thompson. "But I don't care."

Clutch interceptions by safeties Thompson and Bernard Jackson keyed Denver's victory over its chief rival in the AFC West. Nine months ago, the Broncos beat the Raiders 20-17 to cop the title in a major upset. But if it was upsets you wanted the NFL was the place to find them Sunday.

Saints 31, Vikings 24
Turnovers spelled the difference for New Orleans with safety Tommy Myers intercepting three passes and returning one of the thefts 97 yards for the winning touchdown over Minnesota.

Bears 17, Cards 10
Walter Payton, who agreed to contract terms on the eve of the game, rushed for 101 yards and Roland Harper's 1-yard plunge with 1:56 remaining supplied the winning TD as Chicago topped St. Louis.

Steelers 28, Bills 17
Terry Bradshaw threw a pair of TD passes while Franco Harris and Sidney Thornton rushed for two others as Pittsburgh defeated Buffalo.

Browns 24, 49ers 7
Rookie Ozzie Newsome scored the tie-breaking touchdown on a 33-yard end around just before halftime as Cleveland sank San Francisco.

"The Bear (Alabama Coach Paul 'Bear' Bryant) is going to give me hell for spiking the ball after the touchdown," said Newsome, "but it was a professional spike."

Green Bay 13, Detroit 7
The Packers got field goals of 41 and 23 yards by Chester Marcol to defeat Detroit.

Quarterback David Whitehurst, nursing an injured shoulder, piloted Green Bay to its victory.

Chargers 24, Seahawks 20
Dan Fouts threw a pair of TD passes to John Jefferson, leading San Diego over Seattle.

Fouts found Jefferson with a 29-yard pitch and a six-yarder while tackle Gary Johnson added another Charger TD, returning an intercepted pass 52 yards.

Chiefs 24, Bengals 23
New Coach Marv Levy retrieved the Wing-T formation from pro football's moth balls and Kansas City rode it past Cincinnati.

"It's basic football... run and block," explained fullback Mark Bailey, who gained 106 yards as the Chiefs set a club record with 69 rushing plays.

Jets 33, Dolphins 20
Richard Todd stung Miami

for three TD passes and Pat Leahy kicked four field goals as New York surprised the Dolphins.

Falcons 20, Oilers 14
Atlanta's defense recovered two fumbles, made two interceptions, recorded four sacks and turned a blocked punt by Tom Pridermore into a touchdown by Tom Moriarty to beat Houston.

Redskins 16, Patriots 14
Linebacker Brad Dusek took a recovered fumble 31 yards for the winning touchdown with 2:40 remaining as Washington stung New England. Dave Butz stripped the ball loose from Horace Ivory and Dusek pounced on it, although not immediately.

"I was playing outside and when I saw the ball hit the ground, I hesitated," Dusek said. "I wanted to make sure I could pick it up on the run."

Steve Grogan threw a pair of TD passes and Harold Jackson caught seven aerials for 124 yards.

Rams 16, Eagles 14
Rookie Frank Corral's third field goal of the game, a 46-yarder with just seven seconds left to play, carried Los Angeles over Philadelphia.

The Eagles had taken a 14-13 lead on Wally Henry's 57-yard punt return with less than six minutes to play. The Rams started their winning drive from their own 12-yard line with less than two minutes left. "I can't believe it," said Corral, who also connected from 29 and 49 yards. "This is about the best thing that ever happened to me so far."

Larsen leads by two at tourney

Ladd Larsen of Tulsa, Okla., fired a two-under-par 69 Sunday to grab the second round lead at the 41st Top O' Texas Golf Tournament.

Going into Monday's 36-hole Championship Flight finale, Larsen held a two-stroke lead over Pampa's Dob Hudson, Steve Whiteside of Midland, Richard Ellis of Dallas and Lamesa's Jay White. Hudson and Whiteside matched Larsen's 69, but opening-round 73s kept them two shots back of the leader, who had a 71 Saturday.

Jess Claiborne and David Parker were well within striking distance at 143 and three players, including defending champion Jim Haren of Borger, were at 144.

Haren and Amarillo's Johnny Goodwin matched 75s Sunday after both shot 69 on the opening day to tie Pampa's Wiley McIntyre, who cut down to a 70 after a 74 Saturday.

Another Pampa, Eddie Duenkel, tied Arlington's Mike King at 145. Duenkel went from an opening 70 to a 75 Sunday, while King has gone 73-72.

Rounding out the 16-man field, cut from over 20 after Sunday's rounds, are Tommy Tomlinson and Greg Weathered at 146, Mark Wyatt at 147 and Jackie Coffey at 148.

Lubbock's Alan McAnally came in at 147 to tie Amarillo's John Floyd for the lead in the first flight.

Trailing McAnally by a stroke were Glen White of Amarillo and Skip Warren of Houston. Pampa's Jerry Larson and Scott White were tied at 149 and Elmer Wilson and Clint Ferguson matched 150 totals.

Still in the chase at 151 were Terry Jones, Pampa's Gene Barrett and John McCrotty.

Larry Tripplett, Tom Rose, Ricky Roach and Tom Fulton were tied at 152 and Andy Sanchez and Chunky Leonard survived the cut with 155 totals.

Kite leads B.C.

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Kite had a 5-stroke lead entering the final round of the $225,000 B.C. Open golf tournament and still wasn't satisfied.

"It's a good lead, but no lead is big enough until you're finished," Kite said. "I'd like to have a 6-shot lead going into the last hole."

Kite shot a 3-under-par 68 on the 71-par, 6,915-yard En-Joe Golf Club course Sunday, opening a commanding lead over Mark Hayes in quest of the $45,000 first prize.

Septien to get quick test

DALLAS (AP) — The newest of the Dallas Cowboys gets a quick pressure test tonight in the opener for the defending National Football League champions.

With millions of national television viewers looking on and some 65,000 fans in Texas Stadium, young Rafael Septien will be introduced as the Cowboy placekicker.

If past jousts with the Baltimore Colts are any indication, Septien will also get a quick introduction into high drama.

Baltimore beat Dallas in Super Bowl V with a late field goal and two years ago Efrén Herrera tripped the Colts 30-27 on a last-second field goal.

Herrera was traded to Seattle after a salary fuss with Cowboy management. Dallas went through three more kickers and finally released rookie free agent Jay Sherrill to make room for Septien Wednesday.

Progress hits pork barrel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sooner or later it had to happen. The pork barrel has been computerized.

This latest marvel of the computer age may have reached its height of folly when the White House released a list of 12,000 counties, cities and villages that might be eligible for aid under President Carter's new national urban policy.

A list that size brings new dimensions to pork barrel — projects included in a bill that provide money for home districts and assure that enough members of Congress will vote for the bill to get it passed.

The urban aid would provide funds for such things as neighborhood rehabilitation and industry recruiting. The hope was most congressmen would be pleased to grab some of this for their districts.

In hindsight, however, some White House strategists concede the list may have been a mistake that helped dig a grave for key portions of the program. But they say it was nonetheless unavoidable.

Only a computer could have produced such a list. It screened every community in the United States according to the eligibility criteria in the Carter plans, and then printed out the 12,000 that passed.

Immediately the list caused problems. Places like Shaker Heights and Mercer Island showed up on the list of eligible communities. Shaker Heights, outside Cleveland, and Mercer Island, a Seattle suburb, are two of the best heeled communities in America.

This was all the excuse needed for the program's critics to man the torpedoes.

In fact, there were several hundred wealthy communities on the list, a result of a fluke in the formula for determining the need.

One test of need was a slow growth rate, on the assumption that a community with a static population and economy is in trouble. But some communities plan it that way and have practiced deliberate no-growth or slow-growth policies for years — not because they are poor but to keep the poor out.

When the loophole created some embarrassing anomalies, the White House moved quickly to fix it.

Economists spot trouble in spending

NEW YORK (AP) — Economists mulling the outlook for signs of a business slowdown have sighted evidence of possible trouble in the area of consumer spending.

Their accounts differ considerably, however, on whether this dark speck on the horizon is likely to become any kind of serious navigation hazard.

After a strong early spring showing, retail sales have flattened out recently, rising by just 0.2 percent in May, 0.1 percent in June and 0.2 percent in July.

"Consumer spending has undergone a discernible change over the past few months," New York's Bankers Trust Co. noted.

"But whether the consumer will continue marking time for a while, as has happened on several previous occasions since the current business expansion began, or whether a real retrenchment in buying lies in the offing is far from certain."

The available data aren't much help in making the picture clearer. On the plus side, government figures showed personal income — naturally a central factor in spending plans — rising faster than inflation in July, following slight declines in the inflation-adjusted figures for the two previous months.

Less favorable indications come from the survey of consumers sponsored by the Conference Board, an independent business research organization. Its index of buying plans, calculated from a survey of 5,000 households nationwide, dropped last month to its lowest level in more than three years.

forecast on the tendency of both consumers and businesses lately to accelerate their spending in anticipation of continuing inflation — buying to beat expected future price increases.

The firm foresees a sharp slowing of consumer spending, leaving businessmen with excess inventories by the end of the year. The likely result, it says, is a recession in 1979 "of about average duration and magnitude for the post-World War II period."

Bankers Trust economists, though they use softer language, agree that retail sales are likely to be "less than exuberant" in the coming months.

These kinds of warnings, of course, does not sit well with many businessmen who feel that gloomy forecasts can be self-fulfilling.

An executive of one consumer-goods company, when asked recently if he was worried about a possible recession, replied: "No. And if everybody would shut up, there wouldn't be one."

Parents hope to defy officials with living room schools

EDITOR'S NOTE — Millions of kids will be trooping back to school after Labor Day — but not the tiny minority whose parents are keeping them at home, some quietly evading the law, others openly defying it. Here's an unusual closeup of these educational dissenters and what makes them go against the mainstream.

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

They dare not entrust their children to the schools, public, private or alternative.

For some, the reason is as straightforward as the quality of education. For others, it's what they see as a premium paid in conformity as the price of success. For still others, it's values taught or flouted.

They have turned their living rooms into school rooms, teaching their own children at home and defying convention.

Besides society's disapproval, they also invite lawsuits under state compulsory education laws. To avoid detection, some never register their children in school. Others resort to ruses. Most fear publicity and won't be named.

Whatever their number — and guesses place the number between 5,000 and 10,000 families — they are a frightened few among millions of parents who send their children to school and many others whose children are taught at home because of handicaps, for example.

"Most of the people that I'm aware of are quite scared," says a New Jersey mother who is reluctant to discuss the subject for fear that authorities will be reminded to clamp down.

She's 40, the wife of a plumber and herself a former teacher. She keeps her 6-year-old at home because she thinks schools are "stifling," not because of fundamentalist religious or moral principles that underlie the majority of similar parental decisions.

"Most people like the system, and I guess that's why I decided to get out rather than to try and change it," she says.

School, she adds, "is not a nourishing place for my son to be. It decides too much for him. It decides at what level, what subject, what pace he'll learn."

She says she hasn't thought ahead to any problems that could result from her son's lack of formal credentials, and she sees home study as an outgrowth of having had natural childbirth, nursed her son and, later, prepared his baby food at home.

There are dozens of children on their street and she doesn't worry about his ability to get along with others in his age group.

"The social life that kids get in school is mean anyway," she insists. "They certainly don't work out problems for themselves."

The New Jersey mother keeps in touch with like-minded parents through a kind of underground newsletter. She tells about one couple who took their children out of school because they felt the kids were getting dumber every year, and a Texas policeman who wanted his children to learn that God created life.

In Utah, John Singer is under a court order to send his five children to school but says he'd rather die than expose them to the sex, drugs, homosexuality and venereal disease that he fore, question the qualifications of the teacher, the content of the curriculum and the chances for social interaction, Schimmel says.

"For those who do proceed in this way," he observes, "it's a tremendous undertaking."

Those who do beggar classification.

"There doesn't seem to be any easily grasped common denominator, except by definition they seem to be independent-minded, stubborn people," observes John Holt of Boston, author of several books on education and an advocate of home instruction.

Holt runs a newsletter, "Growing Without Schools," that reaches 700 subscribers. He thinks the number of keep-the-kids-at-home parents is probably below 10,000.

The New Schools Exchange in Pettigrew, Ark., dedicated to "humanizing education," says it's receiving "hundreds" of letters every year. The Seventh Day Adventist's Home Study Institute says 600 of its home students pass up its religious courses. This suggests home instruction unrelated to the denomination's religious purpose.

Mary Royer of Portland, Ore., head of the National Parents League, says she has been helping half a dozen families a week set up schools for their own and, sometimes, other children as well. She puts the total at 275 schools in 28 states over the past decade.

Behind it all, she sees the "determination of many parents who refuse to be further intimidated and who are protecting their children from the incredibly immoral incursions persistently thrust into the family structure and into the minds of the innocents."

An Illinois woman with seven children at home asked that her name not be used because "I don't want to make waves." She says her disaffection with schools began when a daughter she considers gifted was put into a class for problem children. Her daughter became passive and suddenly hard to manage, the woman says. Now 14 and the family's oldest child, she hasn't attended school since sixth grade.

The mother says she supervises her children five hours a day, instructing them as they cook, clean and do laundry. Her 8-year-old son, for example, learns percentages while figuring the sales tax during shopping trips. The children also read histories and biographies and attend classes at a natural history museum.

"Education is supposed to be an aid for life," she says. A conservative Roman Catholic, she insists parochial schools teach "heresy."

Parents have varying systems. A New York father began teaching his son about botany in Central Park, then advanced to chemistry and physics when the boy happened on a periodic table of elements.

In Washington, D.C., the mother of 8-year-old Susan makes the nation's capital into a school, taking the girl through the Smithsonian Institution, attending mime shows and jazz concerts and watching nature movies.

"Susan can drag you through the history of the universe, through natural history on up to the latest Mars landing," boasts her father, a pediatrician.

For him, the joy of home study is the joy of watching his daughter blossom. For a Roman Catholic in Chicago, it's "the need to inculcate her children with her religious precepts. For a dropout professor in a Pennsylvania commune, it's the desire to emphasize values other than competitiveness, possessiveness, regimentation and achievement."

Behind it all, she sees the "determination of many parents who refuse to be further intimidated and who are protecting their children from the incredibly immoral incursions persistently thrust into the family structure and into the minds of the innocents."

Poorest counties battle site

WASHINGTON (AP) — The poorest counties in the country have become key political battle sites as incumbent Sen. John Tower and his Democratic challenger — Rep. Bob Krueger — race toward their November shoot-out.

Both campaigns are attempting to enlist the support of predominantly Mexican-American South Texas, an area saddled with the nation's lowest per capita income but capable of enriching the political fortunes of the U.S. Senate hopefuls.

Tower's campaign has invested heavily in advertisements on Spanish radio and television in the area while Krueger has called on Vice President Walter Mondale and first lady Rosalynn Carter to bolster the Democratic standing among Mexican-Americans.

Both campaigns agree the key in a tight race although hispanics comprise less than 20 percent of Texas' voters.

After releasing the results of a Tower poll last week that indicated the senator was leading, Krueger by 13 percentage points, campaign manager Ken Towery noted that the "hispanic vote is crucial but not so much so with a lead like we've got...I'm not going to say the race is not going to get extremely tight and we are making efforts toward the hispanic community."

"We've gotten a foothold over the years and we've built on that to the point now that we've got about 40 percent (of the Mexican-American vote)."

Krueger campaign manager Gary Mauro quickly disagreed.

"Tower's demographics on the brown vote are all screwed up," he said bluntly. "We'll get better than 70 percent. Jimmy Carter got 86 percent of the (Mexican-American) vote in 1976 and you can't name me a Mexican-American leader that didn't support Gerald Ford and is now supporting Tower."

August brings some relief

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
August brought a little bit of relief to consumers struggling to make both ends meet at the grocery store, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows. The cost of a selected list of products dropped by an average of more than 1 percent at the stores surveyed.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973 and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list at the end of November 1977 because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

The latest survey showed general declines in regular prices last month as well as a number of special sales. In Providence, R.I., for example, the regular price of coffee at the checklist store declined from $3.05 a pound at the start of August to $2.95 a pound today. Shoppers taking advantage of a pre-Labor Day sale at the store could buy coffee for $2.19 a pound.

The AP found that the marketbasket total increased at the checklist store in five cities during August, up an average of 1.9 percent. The bill decreased in eight cities — including Providence — down an average of 3.1 percent.

On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill at the 13 checklist stores was 1.2 percent lower at the start of September than it was a month earlier. During July, in contrast, the marketbasket bill rose an average of half a percent.

The August decrease was not enough to offset earlier rises in food costs. Comparing today's prices to those at the start of 1978, the AP found the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores had increased an average of 5.1 percent. The ups and downs of retail grocery prices this year generally can be traced to ups and downs in supplies. Beef prices, for example, rose sharply because fewer cattle came to market. Coffee prices dropped because of an abundant supply of green beans.

Harvest operations continue but crops yields low across state

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Harvest operations continue across the state, and except for some irrigated areas of South and Southwest Texas, the result is the same — low crop yields.

The hot, dry weather has had a devastating effect on most crops this year, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton, corn and sorghum harvesting continues in Central, North Central and East Texas, and the cotton harvest is the main activity in South Central and Southeast Texas. Cotton is almost in in South Texas and the Coastal Bend. Most of the first rice crop has been harvested in the Rice Belt and the second crop is making good progress.

Cotton and sorghum in the Plains and West Texas continue to suffer from drought except in irrigated areas, Pfannstiel said. Much of the dryland cotton has been plowed up so that farmers will be eligible to collect disaster payments.

In many areas, the hot, dry weather is causing pecans to shed, and most are smaller than normal, Pfannstiel said.

He said peaches also have been smaller because of the drought, but the crop just in across the state has been good in many locations, including the Gillespie County area.

Livestock conditions continue to deteriorate due to lack of forage and stock water, he said. Marketing is still heavy and prices are holding steady. More supplemental feeding is under way where grazing is short.

District Extension agents report the following conditions:

PANHANDLE: Corn and sorghum are maturing, with some corn harvested for silage. Irrigated cotton has set a good crop. Potato and onion harvesting is about complete. Wheat sowing is beginning. Light stockers are anticipating fall wheat grazing.

SOUTH PLAINS: Irrigated cotton continues to grow well, though bollworms are widespread, but much of the poor dryland crop is being plowed up. Corn and sorghum are maturing rapidly. Harvesting of onions and potatoes is about complete. Ranges are poor.

ROLLING PLAINS: Much of the poor sorghum and cotton crop is being plowed up. Some early planted cotton is beginning to open. Land preparation continues for fall wheat. Irrigated hay crops are producing good yields but little dryland hay has been made. Grazing is poor.

NORTH CENTRAL: Cotton harvesting is under way, with the first bale reported in Kaufman County. But the crop is poor due to drought. There is some early planting of small grains although soil moisture is short. Most livestock are receiving supplemental feed because of poor grazing.

Foreign briefs

BERLIN (AP) — American officials say the East German who hijacked a Polish jetliner to the U.S. air base in West Berlin on Wednesday used an unloaded starter's pistol, a "weapon" capable of firing only blanks.

U.S. officials said the question of charges and jurisdiction is still under consideration, but extradition has been virtually ruled out. They said if the hijacker, identified as Detlef Alexander Tiede, is tried, it will be by American or West German authorities.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Dutch development aid to Cuba will end at the end of the year because of Cuban military involvement in Africa, the government said Thursday.

Development Minister Jan de Koning told Parliament Thursday there has been "no modification in the nature and size of Cuban action in Africa" since the government announced in February it would review the program. Dutch aid to Cuba has totaled about $26 million since 1975, mostly to help Cuba buy Dutch medical equipment. This year's grant was $6.8 million.

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A rock cut a one-inch gash in External Affairs Minister A.B. Vajpayee's forehead during a student demonstration Thursday protesting police failure to solve the kidnap-murder of two teen-agers.

The stoning disrupted a peaceful demonstration by several hundred students, most of them girls. Two male students were arrested.
