A NEW YORK SANITATION Department truck sprays water over pavement along 35th St. in the heart of Manhattan's garment district Thursday night. Earlier in the day, New York's Mayor Ed

Kock announced that calls to a central telephone number set up in the wake of an outbreak of Legionnaires disease, have revealed 34 more possible cases of the disease.

Three workers hurt in fiery explosion

McLEAN — An explosion of raw gasoline at the Warren Petroleum Co. gasoline plant northeast of here Thursday morning resulted in three workmen being critically burned.

William D. Clawson, 64, a 35-year employee of Warren, and Ernie G. Fry, 30, an employee of Nelson - Sikes Construction Co., both of McLean, were listed in critical condition this morning at Parkland Hospital Burn Center, Dallas.

Jim Mayberry, 37, of Pampa was reported in serious condition this morning in the intensive care unit of High Plains Baptist Hospital, Amarillo.

Parkland this morning said Clawson sustained second and third degree burns over 70 percent of his body and Fry received second and third degree burns on 39 percent of his body.

Mayberry, who has been employed by Warren for two years, was reported in serious condition at High Plains this morning where a hospital spokesman said he had received second and third degree burns over 32 percent of his body. The burns are on the upper portion of his body, the hospital reported.

The three men were first taken to the McLean Clinic following the 9:30 a.m. Thursday explosion, but were quickly transferred to Northwest Texas Hospital, Amarillo.

Clawson and Fry were transferred to the Dallas hospital about 3 p.m. Thursday. The Warren Petroleum Co.

plant is located in Wheeler County, between McLean and Kellersville. The firm is a subsidiary of Gulf Oil Corp.

Plant officials said the three men were attempting to repair a leaking pump, one of two at the plant which pump raw gasoline into a pipeline, when the explosion occurred.

Although it was not known what caused the explosion and resulting fire, it was believed a stray spark ignited fumes from the gasoline.

The initial blast engulfed the three men, but the flames quickly receded and only were about five feet in height when other workmen reached the scene, officials said.

After the injured men were moved from the area, the flames were quickly extinguished and repairs completed by other workmen. Damage from the explosion and fire was reported as minor.

The plant produces "raw product," commonly referred to as raw gasoline, which is part gasoline and part hydrocarbons. It is pumped to refineries for further processing into various petroleum products.

The raw gasoline is produced from natural gas and the pump involved in the explosion is reportedly a low volume pump with a capacity of 2,000 to 3,000 gallons of raw gasoline per day.

This morning plant officials were conferring with company safety representatives to determine the cause of the explosion, reportedly the first of its type at the facility which was constructed in 1933.

Hint of progress slips out of summit

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — A veiled hint of progress is slipping through the secrecy at the Middle East summit.

The meeting's official spokesman dropped the hint Thursday as President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat wasted no time getting to the thorniest issues in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, who has gone to great lengths to avoid pronouncements that would disclose anything substantial about the talks, seemed to slip as he argued that secrecy has been helpful to the summit participants.

"We have found this atmosphere to be helpful and conducive to the sort of discussions we wanted to have," Powell said. "And the gentlemen are pleased with this arrangement."

There was no word from the Egyptians, Israelis or Americans about whether Carter was making progress. Nor was Powell willing to characterize the mood of the discussions. But Powell's impromptu comment strongly suggested the U.S. president was not displeased with developments so far in the summit, which began late Tuesday.

As the summit began its third day today, Carter held a breakfast meeting with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Zbigniew Brzezinski, the president's national security adviser. It was described as Carter's weekly foreign policy briefing.

Mondale, Vance and Brzezinski then met with Begin's key advisers. The prime minister was not present, and an Israeli official, asking not to be identified, said he did not expect Begin to meet during the day with either Carter or Sadat.

At the same time, a coalition of Arab-American groups monitoring human rights for Palestinians in Israeli-occupied land distributed a statement to reporters urging Palestinians be included as "equal partners in the peace process."

It asked summit leaders to "end Israeli occupation of all Arab lands and to curb immediately Israeli violations of Palestinian rights." It said violations included expulsion from homes, denial of political rights and torture of prisoners.

A small aircraft flew over Thurmont, Md., near Camp David, late Thursday carrying an illuminated message proclaiming that Palestinians are the key to peace. A coalition spokesman said it had sent the plane aloft.

Carter accelerated the pace of his summitry Thursday evening, meeting with Prime Minister Begin and President Sadat for the second time in less than four hours.

In addition, Vice President

Walter F. Mondale was flown up from Washington for the second straight day. He joined Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, for mid-afternoon talks with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

Brown's presence revived speculation about possible defense links between the United States and Israel as part of a Mideast settlement.

But Powell dismissed the possibility of sending American troops to the Mideast as "one of the great non-existent stories of all time." He described as "hogwash" reports the administration might establish an American air base in territories won by Israel in the 1967 war.

Powell said "no specific occurrence" prompted Brown's trip here from Washington. He said Brown was summoned because of his "general role and expertise in the area."

Mondale and Vance, after the meeting with Dayan and Weizman, conferred for an hour with Egypt's foreign minister, Muhammad Ibrahim Kamil.

Carter, who spent about seven hours with Begin and Sadat during the first two days of the summit, has moved directly to the heart of the 30-year-old Mideast dispute rather than taking the easier course of beginning with peripheral and less controversial items.

GSA investigation stalled

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of the people who are supposed to be looking for corruption in the General Services Administration are spending more time wrangling among themselves than investigating, Sen. Lawton Chiles says.

As a result, the Florida Democrat said the investigation has stalled.

"Several rapidly progressing and very promising investigations have become bogged down in a three-sided name calling contest among the FBI agents, GSA investigators and Justice Department personnel," he said in a statement inserted Thursday in the Congressional Record.

In another development Thursday, Charles Kirbo of Atlanta, a close friend and trusted confidant of President Carter, said the president had asked him to keep an eye on the GSA investigations while Carter is tied up with Mideast peace negotiations at Camp David.

Kirbo met earlier this week with key investigators in the GSA case and, according to sources who asked not to be identified, strongly urged the various agencies involved to cooperate with each other.

Kirbo emphasized in a telephone interview Thursday in Atlanta that he was acting in a temporary and unofficial capacity and would bow out when Carter winds up the Camp David summit meeting.

Chiles, who has headed the major congressional inquiry into GSA irregularities, asked the top GSA investigator, Vincent Alto, and Assistant Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti to meet with him next week to try to stop the "intercine warfare between competing bureaucracies."

He commended Alto and Civiletti for their personal efforts to improve cooperation, but blamed their "squabbling subordinates" for the problems.

"Out on the street, various charges of ineptitude and incompetence are traded among the investigator staffs involved," Chiles said.

"As public interest in the GSA scandals rises, the race for glory becomes more intense. Unfortunately, this race is working to the detriment of the investigation itself."

Efforts to reach Alto and Civiletti for comment were unsuccessful.

Wide-ranging investigations by U.S. attorneys in several cities, federal grand juries and a GSA task force headed by Alto have turned up evidence of corruption in many areas of the agency.

GSA Administrator Jay Solomon said last week he expects 50 indictments in the near future.

Some sources, who asked not to be identified, have said indictments originally were expected last month, but now are not expected before October. They cited friction among the agencies as one reason for the slowed pace.

Chiles refused to identify which agency he thought was most responsible for the problems. But he promised to cite specific instances of "squabbling and time wasting" if the interagency conflicts are not resolved.

Administration, labor headed for inflation clash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration and organized labor appear headed for a clash over a tougher anti-inflation program that is being developed to include specific guidelines for wage and price increases.

President Carter's top economic advisers met quietly with AFL-CIO leaders on Thursday to sound out labor's attitudes about the program, which is still being shaped.

As now contemplated, the proposed new guidelines would be voluntary and would limit unions to pay increases of no more than 7 percent or 8 percent a year, according to sources who asked not to be identified. For price increases, a 5 percent or 6 percent annual limit is being considered.

Labor's response, according to the sources, was unequivocal opposition.

AFL-CIO President George Meany complained that a government-suggested limit on the size of negotiated wage increases is a move closer to mandatory wage controls, which Meany bitterly opposes, said the sources.

Labor, however, is not opposed to guidelines limiting price increases. The AFL-CIO contends that rising prices, not wages, have been a principal contributor to inflation.

The administration had no comment about the unannounced, two-hour session. An AFL-CIO spokesman said only that the participants had a "good discussion."

Those attending besides Meany were five AFL-CIO executive council members; Labor Secretary Ray Marshall; Robert Strauss, the administration's chief inflation counselor; Charles Schultz, the president's chief economic adviser; and Barry Bosworth, head of the government's inflation-monitoring agency.

The administration has been working for weeks to complete a new anti-inflation policy to replace the unsuccessful program President Carter unveiled last April.

Some government officials have complained that one reason for the current program's failure has been Meany's refusal to support it.

Carter's present program relies on voluntary efforts by unions and businesses to hold wage and price increases in 1978 to levels below average rises of the two previous years.

But labor and industry largely have ignored the program.

New evidence developed against Warren theory

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators have developed strong new evidence to support the disputed "single-bullet theory" adopted by the Warren Commission when it concluded that a lone assassin killed President John F. Kennedy, according to a knowledgeable source.

The theory is that the same bullet struck Kennedy in the back, passed through his body, then wounded former Texas Gov. John B. Connally in the back, chest, wrist and thigh.

A scarcely damaged bullet recovered from Connally's stretcher at the Dallas hospital where he was treated was said to be the missile that wounded both men.

Using sophisticated analyses, scientists have determined that metal fragments recovered from Connally's wrist match the bullet found on his stretcher, said the source, who requested anonymity.

A critic of the Warren Commission has said such evidence would strongly support the single-bullet theory.

The House Assassinations Committee, which ordered the tests, was to hear the results today.

The committee also was to question ballistics expert Larry Sturdivan and Dr. Charles S. Petty, chief medical examiner of Dallas County, Texas, and one of nine pathologists who studied the Kennedy autopsy procedures for the committee.

Petty, who was not working in Dallas at the time Kennedy was assassinated there on Nov. 22, 1963, was expected to "confirm and verify and support" many of the pathology findings submitted to the committee Thursday, the source said.

At the committee's direction, scientists subjected the recovered bullet and the wrist fragments to neutron activation analyses, in which solid objects are bombarded with a stream of neutrons, forcing the objects to emit a variety of rays.

The rays can be measured to determine the amounts of certain elements present in the test objects. If the amounts present in two different objects match, that is considered proof that the objects also match.

The technique has been described as a way of "fingerprinting" objects because no two contain the same elements in precisely the same quantities.

Disputes over the single-bullet theory dominated the testimony Thursday, the second day of the committee's hearings on the Kennedy assassination.

Eight of the nine pathologists concluded that the single-bullet theory was valid, said Dr. Michael Baden, the panel moderator and chief medical examiner of New York City.

The dissenting panelist, Dr. Cyril H. Wecht, argued vehemently that "no bullet could have caused all these wounds" in both Kennedy and Connally.

Wecht, coroner of Allegheny County, Pa., said that abandoning the single-bullet theory would strongly suggest the existence of two gunmen and thus a conspiracy to assassinate Kennedy.

News in brief

The forecast for Pampa is partly cloudy to a little cooler with a chance of rain through Saturday. Today's high should be in the mid 80s with the low tonight in the 60s. The winds will be out of the southwest at 10-15 miles per hour, decreasing to 5-10 miles per hour tonight.

FBI agent seeks Hearst release

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The FBI agent who headed the 19-month search for Patricia Hearst has joined a list of prominent officials seeking the newspaper heiress' release from prison.

Charles Bates, now retired, said Thursday he told Attorney General Griffin Bell that "Miss Hearst has served sufficient time and that the sentence should be mitigated."

Bates said he wrote to Bell because of his intimate knowledge of "Miss Hearst's 1974 kidnapping and her subsequent conviction of joining her captors in a San Francisco bank robbery.

Mao portrayed in drama

TOKYO (AP) — China's late Chairman Mao Tse-tung was portrayed for the first time in the Chinese drama, the Chinese news agency Hsinhua reported today.

"In the new play 'Yang Kaihui,' Mao Tse-tung, the great leader of the Chinese people, is portrayed as a young man in the years between 1920-30 as he carried out revolutionary activities," said Hsinhua.

The news agency said "this is the first Chinese drama to portray Mao Tse-tung in a leading role, showing him as a great leader and teacher of the Chinese revolution.

King Hassan to visit U.S.

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II of Morocco will visit the United States for two days next month, according to official sources who asked not to be identified.

The only details of the visit given Thursday were the dates, Nov. 14 and 15.

Morocco is a moderate Arab state that has close ties with the United States. Its armed forces, fighting the Algeria-backed Polisario guerrillas for control of the former Spanish Sahara, are largely equipped with American material.

Overspending is basis for revolt

One reason the tax limitation movement is spreading like wildfire across the land, the Tax Foundation reports, is that, although the number of local governmental units declined slightly in the last decade, spending of the taxpayers' money by such units increased 198 percent during the same period.

Specifically, according to the government - watching foundation, taxpayers were paying $53.7 billion for local government in 1966. Ten years later, in 1976, the latest year for which comprehensive figures are available, the costs of local government to the taxpayers had soared to $159.7 billion.

Obviously, it is the combined spending by all levels of government, rather than any one particular echelon of the bureaucracy, that is doing us in and at which the ire of the taxpayer revolt is directed; an assumption amply borne out by the more than half, plus initiatives springing up all across the country designed to limit the tax take at other levels of government, including the federal.

Possibly more significant than the tax revolt per se, is a growing awareness among taxpayers linking the existence and activities of the bureaucracy to the total tax bill. Such a grasp of cause and effect is showing up, of course, in the defeat of school bond issues around the country as voters, increasingly, compare product to costs and dislike what they find.

That awareness, the linking up of cause and effect, is showing up in other areas, too.

For instance, out in California and largely eclipsed in the news by the success of Proposition 13, two local attempts to increase the size, scope, and costs of the bureaucracy were easily put down in Santa Monica and Santa Barbara. As reported by Human Events last month, "liberal activists had secured the necessary signatures to put rent control initiatives on the ballot. In both cities, the measures were defeated handily."

No doubt, the voters of those two cities had heard of the contribution made by rent control to the bankruptcy of New York City, and weren't having any.

But more to the point, perhaps, was the remark of Franco Erspamer, a leader of the anti - rent control forces in Santa Monica, who was quoted as saying: "This is the year when people are opposed to bureaucracy and this (rent control) would have instituted a large piece of bureaucracy we did not want."

Sooner or later, the taxpayers, linking cause and effect, are going to wake up to the reality that zoning, like rent control, is counter - productive in that it inhibits competition, misallocates land, increases housing costs, and adds to the total tax bill.

Local political aspirants, looking for an "idea whose time has come" handhold on the tax revolt, anti - bureaucracy bandwagon, might note and act accordingly.

Hoax lives on

By R. EMMETT TYRRELL, JR.
(The American Spectator)

As a longtime admirer of man's ability to believe any preposterous tale that soothes him, I take especial pleasure in recording the July 1 death of Major Claude Robert Eatherly, United States Army Air Corps, discharged.

Eatherly was that larcenous dissipated who claimed that, as a highly decorated World War II pilot, he had bombed Hiroshima, only to be hounded by his conscience into a postwar life of self - destructive petty crime and shiftlessness. The liberal brethren snapped up his pregnant tale and transformed it into a frightening parable, supposedly proving the cogency of one or another of their hysterical and mysterious fears.

All over the world they feted him with awards like the 1962 Hiroshima Award "for outstanding contributions to world peace." Eatherly, heretofore a man of only the most modest cons, was stunned by his good fortune. Yet he soon fell in with the hoax, and in time became a creditable pontificator - bear in mind that he never had the educational benefits of a George McGovern or a Dick Cavett.

Eatherly's fame was a constant threat to the counterfeit war stories he had dreamt up, and he was always having to scale them down much as our Jimmy has perforce quietly discarded so many of his own autobiographical extravaganzas: his close friendship with Admiral Hyman Rickover, his years as an atomic scientist. Eatherly was uniquely undecorated. He never won the Distinguished Flying Cross as claimed, never commanded the Hiroshima bombing mission, and never harmed the hair of a Japanese citizen.

In fact it was subsequently divulged that Eatherly went through the entire war without having ever fired a hostile shot. Moreover, he had competed furiously, if unsuccessfully, for the honor of dropping atomic bombs at the first Bikini tests. During the Hiroshima bombing he never even saw a mushroom cloud; all he did was fly a navigation plane over the city and from thirty thousand feet report weather conditions. If he was responsible for the infineration of that fated city, so was every mechanic who ever rubbed grease into the real bomber's landing gear: so were Adam and Eve.

All this notwithstanding, the liberals stonously perpetrated the Eatherly legend until it is now venerated by every schoolmarm. No child escapes our public school system without hearing it at least once. So deeply rooted is it in our folklore that when the New York Times reported Eatherly's funeral on July 7, our nation's newspaper of record left the legend reverently intact: "Claude Robert Eatherly, who as a young Army Air Corps pilot, picked a hole in the clouds over Japan on the morning of August 6, 1945 and radioed the B-29 to drop its atomic bomb on Hiroshima, died of cancer last Saturday in Houston... Mr. Eatherly's brother James, of Midland, Texas, told reporters: 'I can remember his waking up night after night. He said his brain was on fire. He said he could feel those people burning.'" When questioned by writer William Bradford Huie, Eatherly's estranged wife said she had never heard such nocturnal cries, nor had she ever heard the hero express any anxiety or regret over Hiroshima. They were not divorced until 1957.

Even with his death, the Eatherly legend continues to grow and to abet out more current liberal hysterias. According to the Times story, one of the dead fraud's brothers "recalled that Mr. Eatherly had flown a plane through a mushroom cloud during nuclear test on Bikini atoll and said that he thought the flier had suffered long-term radiation damage." Eatherly, an unshakeable hypochondriac, had plagued Veterans' Administration hospitals for 30 years with his imagined afflictions. No test ever performed on his extensively - tested carcass ever showed any evidence of "long-term radiation damage."

By MARTHA ANGLE
and ROBERT WALTERS
BOSTON (NEA) - The catalog of goals espoused by the National Governors' Association (NGA) reads like the master plan for a utopian society. Unfortunately, the governors haven't provided much guidance on how we might reach nirvana.

The torrent of rhetoric and resolutions that emerged from the NGA's 70th annual meeting, recently held here, included endorsement of:

Governors' facile goals

Prevention and control of juvenile delinquency, enhanced efficiency and economy in government, improved public education, reduced unemployment, expanded international trade, containment of hospital costs and improved public education.

But the governors' facile policy statements are sadly lacking in dealing with the hard choices to be made, the complex trade-offs involved and the invariable conflicts that must be resolved before attaining any of those noble ends.

The governors, of course, want to be fully involved in considering the available alternatives. Their resolutions are riddled with demands on Washington officials for consultation, input, cooperation and coordination.

But Congress and the president - not state government - invariably are designated as being solely responsible for selecting the solutions, implementing them and assuring their success.

In the always touchy area of financing, the governors are not unlike children away at summer camp. Their letters home include regular requests (if not demands) for money - but seldom specify the intended use for the funds.

"This organization has a less than credible record with regard to reduced spending," New Hampshire Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr. told his colleagues in a rare moment of candor. "Almost all the resolutions we passed call for more spending."

The governors want federal officials to collect all the money needed to cure our social ills (state tax increases are, by far, the leading cause of gubernatorial beheading at the hands of angry voters) and then to generously turn over the funds to the states.

Moreover, the governors insist that federal financing be accompanied by a bare minimum of restrictions, regulations or paperwork. Their favorite mechanism for receiving funds from Washington is the few strings - attached "block grant."

The governors' proclivity for inaction, waffling or outright avoidance of controversial issues is typified by the NGA's stand - or lack of one - on no - fault auto insurance.

Special interest groups have blocked efforts to bring about a mandatory national no - fault law through congressional action, and the governors naturally believe that a federal statute "is not an acceptable alternative to individual state action."

Approximately one - third of the state legislatures have passed some form of no - fault law, while others have rejected that option and some haven't even considered the issue.

The NGA's policy statement on the subject, typically vague, takes no position and offers little guidance. It merely urges the states "to continue to examine the available options and to achieve maximum interstate cooperation in any actions they may take."

In defense of the governors, it should be noted that recent years have seen a marked increase in the number of capable, talented state executives who are providing innovative, imaginative leadership in their prospective states.

That "new breed" of governors was instrumental in abolishing the most outlandish aspects of NGA annual meetings: Lavish parties sponsored by special interest groups and the distribution of free television sets, matched golf clubs and other expensive gifts.

Now the NGA's conduct of its official business has become a logical subject for scrutiny. It's in that field that the governors must find a way to subordinate their egos, political conflicts and ideological differences to provide collective as well as individual leadership.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, Sept. 8, the 251st day of 1978. There are 114 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1565, a Spanish expedition landed at what is now St. Augustine, Fla., and founded the first permanent European settlement in North America.

On this date:
In 1664, Peter Stuyvesant surrendered New Amsterdam to the British.

In 1700, Wisconsin came under British control after being French territory.

In 1855, the Crimean War ended.
In 1863, construction of the Northern Pacific railroad was completed with the driving of the last spike near Garrison, Mont.

In 1934, 124 people lost their lives in a fire aboard the liner Morro Castle off the New Jersey coast.

In 1935, Sen. Huey Long of Louisiana was shot at Baton Rouge. He died two days later.

Ten years ago: Black Panther leader Huey Newton was convicted in Oakland, Calif., of voluntary manslaughter in the slaying of a white policeman.

Five years ago: Five Palestinian guerrillas gave up four Saudi Arabian hostages they had been holding aboard an airliner in Kuwait and the guerrillas surrendered to officials.

One year ago: The comptroller of the currency accused Bert Lance and his family of abusing their positions in a Georgia bank by overdrawing their accounts for personal gain.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Sid Caesar is 56 years old. Songwriter Howard Dietz is 82.

Thought for today: A hospital bed is a parked taxi with the meter running - Groucho Marx.

Smoke and political fire

By DON GRAFF

Are the folks who brought us Proposition 13 about to spring another one on us?

California's voters could be preparing to do just that, only this time it's labeled Proposition 5 and the subject is nothing so tame as taxation but the separation of the smokers from the nonsmokers - quite possibly belligerently.

On the state ballot this November is a proposal for what is generally regarded as the most comprehensive regulation of smoking rights and wrongs in public places yet attempted in a broad jurisdiction.

Proposition 5, or "The Clean Air" initiative, is two pages of legalese boiling down to a declaration that smoking in certain enclosed areas is "a public nuisance and a cause of material annoyance, discomfort and physical irritation to nonsmokers."

Specifically, it would restrict smoking to lounges or other designated areas in indoor places of employment and public facilities. The latter would include schools, stores, restaurants, meeting halls, lobbies, public transportation facilities and the like. Each infringement would carry a $50 fine. Exempt would be bars - "impossible" to regulate, even the antismoking forces admit - private hotel and hospital rooms, and professional entertainment and sports events.

The initiative is already heating up as a public issue under the leadership of two organizations, support being led by the Campaign for Clean Air and opposition by Californians for Common Sense. Both sides are mounting media campaigns - the opposition's amounting to a "blitz," according to the Clean Air people. They claim to be outspent several times over by Common Sense which, they say, is bankrolled by outside tobacco interests and prepared to spend up to $5 million to defeat Proposition 5.

Common Sense dismisses the complaint, acknowledging that seed money for the campaign came from tobacco sources but claiming large subsequent donations from California businesses in particular.

Business plays a major role in the campaign in another sense. At the drop of a question, Common Sense spokespersons cite a study they conducted predicting an annual statewide drop of more than $40 million in productivity due to more smoking breaks and other inconveniences likely to be experienced by smokers at their jobs should Proposition 5 become law. Cost of creating and designating smoking areas is estimated at another $200 - plus million. And they warn of even costlier long - run consequences to the California economy should complications of an anti - smoking law discourage new business from location in the state.

Opponents say they are not arguing the medical aspects of smoking. That is a matter for scientific research and personal decision. As they see it, the issue is in essence one of invasion of privacy and coercion. Proposition 5 would be inequitable, economically costly, impossible to enforce and one more step toward government by big brother.

In their considerably different view, proponents cite Proposition 5 as necessary legal validation of nonsmokers' rights. They argue that it would be the most effective regulation of smoking practices devised to date, taking into full consideration the interests of smokers, nonsmokers, business and all other affected parties and with sufficient built - in flexibility to accommodate special situations and unforeseen developments encountered following enactment.

On one point, both sides are fully agreed - the significance of the voters' decision on Proposition 5, whichever way it goes. The impact on smoking patterns could be far greater than Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano's federally conducted campaign to curb the national habit.

California, it is noted, is a bellwether state politically these days - just ask any tax official. As Californians puff after November 7, so eventually could much more of the nation.

Your money's worth

How to tax aid to worker's education

A secretary at a medium - size corporation decides to study for a degree in business administration, with the goal of moving up to a better paying, more demanding job at the same company. Her employer, as many do, pays for her tuition.

A market analyst at the same corporation also takes advantage of the employer's tuition aid program and he, too, gets a degree in business administration.

But here the similarities between the two employees end. The secretary, under current Internal Revenue Service rules, must pay federal income taxes on the tuition support she receives from her employer. The higher - paid market analyst does not.

Q. Why the difference in taxation of education benefits?

A. Because the market analyst's training was related to his present job, while the additional schooling the secretary received could have prepared her for a new job or business.

Tuition fees paid by employers for education or training to maintain or improve an employee's skills in a present job are non - taxable, under today's IRS rules. The employee need not report the payments as income, and if the payments are reported, they may be claimed as deductions.

But if the assistance helps the employee qualify for other jobs, the aid must be reported as income and is fully taxable.

If workers pay for the education themselves, the same distinctions on taxation apply.

It is the "job - related distinction" that is currently under attack in Congress.

Led by Sens. Robert Packwood (R - Ore.) and Jacob Javits (R - N.Y.), about 30 senators are cosponsoring a bill to change IRS practice to make all education assistance provided by employers tax - exempt. You, the employee, could then exclude from your income all tuition fees, cost of books, supplies, etc., paid for or provided in - house by your employer. It wouldn't matter whether the training was related to your present job or to a future one.

Backing this Employer Education Assistance bill are some unions, Motorola, Mobile Oil, the American Hospitalization Society, and the American Society for Training and Development as well as other groups involved in education. These supporters argue that the present job - related test hits hardest at those who most need new skills and can least afford to pay taxes on additional training.

Specifically, these are lower - level workers: the typist striving to become a secretary, the secretary eager to become a para - legal, the mechanic who dreams of being a mechanical engineer. Today's IRS rules hinder the development and upward mobility of these workers.

"The big losers are unskilled persons, women and minorities," says Sen. Packwood. "They are less likely to have any skills to which training can relate, more likely to have low paying, undesirable jobs. And perhaps, they are less likely to participate in a program if, the day training begins, the employer withholds an additional amount from their small paycheck to cover the federal tax."

The U.S. Treasury opposes the proposal, roughly estimated to cost about $23 million in '78 rising to $40 million in '83 reports my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer. It argues that exempting employer - provided education assistance would discriminate against, say, full - time students or workers in firms without such programs. These people would continue to pay for their education out of after - tax income, while some employees would receive schooling tax - free. It adds that highest - income taxpayers would receive the greatest benefits.

Raising the tax - exempt levels of income would be a more direct and equitable way of attacking the problems of the poor, it insists. And it fears a growing loss of revenue if many people arrange to receive tax - free tuition aid instead of taxable higher pay.

The measure has strong support in the Senate and companion bills have been introduced into the House. But the administration offers little basis for compromise.

Sen. Russell Long (D - La.), powerful chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, will decide the fate of the bill. Long wants a tax law in '78, is anxious to steer clear of any amendments which are controversial and might slow down the tax bill. His assessment of support and opposition to this measure is the key.

Hospital employees honored

Employee service award pins were presented to the employees of Highland and McLean General Hospitals Thursday at a special department head meeting.

Guy Hazlett, hospital administrator, made a brief speech before the awards were presented.

Hazlett told his employees to set goals and think about their job, not the worries of the job, but the satisfaction of it. He also said, "to succeed in anything, you must take a chance."

"Your success is measured by the satisfaction you receive from your job," Hazlett said in closing.

Receiving awards in the nursing department were Ellen Caskey, five years; Judy Grimsley, five years; Ruth McKinney, 10 years; Clara Murrell, five years; Louise Thomas, 10 years; Marguerita Hernandez, 15 years; Evelyn White, five years; Lucille Cox, 15 years; Deava Miller, 20 years; and Corean Roberts, 15 years.

Mary Lane received a five year pin for her work in anesthesiology.

Receiving awards in the dietary department were Sybil Brantley, 10 years; and Dorothy Shelton, 10 years.

Joy Bivins received a 20 year pin for her work in the laboratory.

Also receiving awards were Geneva Gobin, director of nursing service, 10 years; Eugene Reed, chief laboratory technician, 20 years; and Virginia Mitten, director of medical records, five years.

Receiving awards for their work with the McLean Hospital were Lavern Goldston, engineering, 10 years; and Marie McCracken received a 10 year pin for her work with nursing service.

The employees receiving the awards had a total of 205 years service combined.

Farmers give up pleasures

By JAMES R. KING Associated Press Writer ABERNATHY, Texas (AP) — Tommy and Bobbye Wages were born and reared on West Texas farms where they grew up helping their folks work the land against drought and insects.

Tommy Wages, 36, like his father and his father's father before him, considers a normal summer workday to be 5:30 a.m. to 9 p.m.

His wife Bobbye was a little girl when her father lost their farm to the drought of the 1950s. It happened right after her mother died of cancer at the age of 32.

Without such backgrounds, the two admit they probably would have given up their cotton and milo farm 30 miles north of Lubbock a long time ago.

"Most anybody in farming has to postpone life's pleasures," said Mrs. Wages, 35, who remembers having to cancel her honeymoon at the last minute because a sandstorm threatened Wages' cotton field.

That was 15 years ago. The Wages never got that honeymoon, but they did manage to take their two adopted children on a vacation to New Mexico four years ago.

"It's a tough, tough life," said Mrs. Wages. But she admits it is her choice. "There are times when I've wanted to say, 'Let's forget it and move to the city.' But I know I would never be happy if we did."

In fact, the Wages could sell the equity in their land and move to the city at any time. And Wages admits they came very close to doing just that in 1973. But they didn't go.

"A fifth generation farmer is not going to sack it up and move to town," said Wages, whose father was the first in the family to actually own his own land.

Wages' father suffered two heart attacks and has retired, but Wages has continued the tradition and is making payments on about 700 acres. He also leases some acreage, and farms a total of about 1,100 acres, a relatively small farm for the High Plains of West Texas.

"It has been preached to Tommy since he was a little boy — if you ever get ahead, buy land," said Mrs. Wages. A slender brunette whose delicate appearance belies the life of a woman who has planted cotton and hauled maize to help her husband keep the family farm going.

"Own land. Put everything you can back into the farm rather than spending it on luxuries," she said.

But the economic pressures that prompted last year's American Agriculture Movement protests have hit the smaller independent farmers like the Wages especially hard.

"The past 15 years are on the line for us now," Wages said. "We are gambling on each successive crop we plant. Last year we had a good crop, but we came up 15 per cent short in meeting our obligation to the bank."

Mrs. Wages folded her arms and looked at the floor of the small, 50-year-old stucco farm house they rent on a dirt road in a remote section of Hale County.

"You have to sacrifice a lot of family time," she said.

"From the wife's standpoint, it's hard to see the hours he puts in..." She paused. "The time he spends away from his family... and then not to..."

Mrs. Wages stopped speaking, and tears welled in her eyes. "Excuse me, please," she said.

Her husband told their children, Cody, 9, and Leigh, 5, who were sitting on the floor, to go outside and play.

Bobbye and Tommy met at Texas Tech University, where he studied for one year before going into farming and she earned a degree in education.

"I taught for two years after we were married" to help get the farm started, she said, and then she quit.

"On the day of our wedding Tommy called up and said he was afraid the sand would blow the rest of the crop out, and we had to cancel our honeymoon," Mrs. Wages said, exchanging smiles with her husband.

"But any country girl should know better than to marry a farmer in the summer."

Despite the hardships, the Wages speak fondly of their struggles together.

"Our first house was a converted barracks built originally as a bunkhouse for the farm hands.

Perryton police officers involved in death resign

PERRYTON — Both police officers involved in the Aug. 1 shooting death of Paul Martinez, 25, are resigning from the Perryton Police Department.

Gary Farr, 33, has submitted his resignation effective Sept. 29 and Mike Vick, 26, has resigned effective Sept. 30. Farr had been on the force two years and Vick seven months.

The two reported they are leaving the police department to "find better paying jobs."

The two officers were not billed by an Ochiltree County grand jury in connection with the fatal shooting of Martinez.

Martinez, reportedly being chased by the officers following a scuffle with one of them, died at the Ochiltree General Hospital minutes after being struck with a .357 magnum bullet.

Authorities said the first of two shots fired at Martinez by Vick struck the fleeing man in the back, near the left shoulder, and exited through the heart area.

Earlier Martinez had been struck in the legs by a shotgun blast fired by Farr. However, the fleeing man was not stopped by the pellets from the shotgun, authorities said.

Martinez was a veteran of six jail escapes in Texas and Oklahoma and was wanted in Cuero on two armed robbery charges and in Eunice, N.M., for questioning in connection with an armed robbery and wounding of a service station attendant.

Atahualpa, the last Inca ruler, was put to death in 1533.

Grape growers pushing for new laws on wine

By JACK KEEVER Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — President Ed Auler of the Texas Grape Growers Association — like anyone who dreams of opening a winery — was delighted with a "beautiful fruit crop" on his Llano County land.

Then hail hit his 7½-acre vineyard May 2, destroying 90 percent of his grapes.

Auler, an Austin resident, said the weather and Texas laws prevented him recovering from the disaster in time to proceed with plans for opening a small winery.

He urged a House subcommittee Thursday to help change those laws and bring about a "rebirth" of the Texas wine industry, which flourished before Prohibition.

The law prohibits him from buying grapes from another vineyard to supplement his crop, Auler said. He was especially upset because a neighbor had a low-acid grape that would have blended perfectly with his high-acid Aurora grape.

"If I could have purchased grapes from another source, I could have gone into business," Auler said.

He told the subcommittee on liquor regulation that Texas places the "most severe restraints" of any state on small wineries.

"Proper legislation is just as important to the establishment of a wine industry as soil, water, and climate are to the vine," Auler said.

He presented the association's legislative recommendations, which included: —Local option elections on wine only.

—Sunday sales of wine on a local option basis. "The wineries only want the same right that HEB, 7-11 or any other store has on Sunday."

—A one-cent-a-gallon tax on out-of-state wines sold in Texas, with the money going for research and marketing.

—Abolishing registration requirements for home winemakers.

—Creation of a "back label" for wine bottles that would tell if the wine is made from less than 51 percent Texas grapes.

—Allowing persons producing wine in dry areas to have a winery permit.

Iran imposes martial law to stamp out protesters

By PARVIZ RAEIN
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Troops fired into a crowd of several thousand anti-government demonstrators in Tehran today and unofficial reports said as many as 100 people were killed. The clash came just hours after the government imposed martial law in the capital and 11 other cities.

No official death count was available, but the government-owned radio Tehran said "many" died.

The martial law order, which bans gatherings by more than three persons and imposes a curfew from 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. daily, is an effort to end rioting by opponents of the Shah of Iran's liberalization program.

An estimated 1,000 persons have died in the disturbances in the past eight months.

The angry protesters in Jaleh square, in the eastern section of the city, shouted down religious leader Ayatullah Noori who had appealed to them to disperse.

Led by teenagers and followed by women in their traditional Moslem veils, the demonstrators marched toward a line of soldiers and began throwing bricks and rocks, witnesses said. The soldiers fired submachine guns into the air and then into the crowd.

Witnesses said "many" blood-soaked demonstrators fell to the ground and were hauled away in trucks after the two-hour battle.

The demonstrators set fire to several buildings, gasoline stations and department stores and tried to pull down statues. That section of the city also includes Baharestan, the parliament square.

"As they fled from the scene, they burnt down anything they could find that was flammable," said one witness.

By noon (4:30 a.m. EDT), there was only sporadic shooting.

The declaration of a six-month period of martial law came 12 days after Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi named a new prime minister, Jafer Sharif-Emami, who immediately after his appointment announced a series of decisions geared to defuse Moslem opposition to the shah's liberalization program.

The government decision to rule by martial law, announced after an all-night cabinet meeting, followed an unprecedented mass rally in which more than 100,000 Islamic and leftist groups demanded ouster of the shah and the return of exiled religious leader Ayatullah Khomeini. The march had been banned by the government.

Veiled women joined the protest Thursday.

Davis named in indictments

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis was named in a pair of indictments Thursday by a Tarrant County grand jury in connection with an alleged plot to have a judge killed, but defense attorneys weren't surprised.

"I don't think I'll be shocked if he's not no-billed," said Steve Sumner before the grand jury charged his client with solicitation of murder, two counts of attempted capital murder, conspiracy to commit capital murder and possession of a prohibited weapon.

"We're not holding our breath," the Dallas attorney said.

Davis has been in Tarrant County Jail since Aug. 20, with bond denied after a week-long hearing featuring sensational testimony.

The grand jury listened to an abbreviated version of that testimony. Allegations were presented that Davis tried to hire someone to kill Judge Joe Eidson, who was presiding over his bitterly-contested divorce case.

Since Davis' arrest, Eidson has disqualified himself from the divorce proceedings.

The charges against Davis stem from tape recorded discussions allegedly between Davis and police informant David McCrory.

Transcripts presented at the bond hearing included an exchange in which McCrory says:

"When you're sick or hurt and can't work, your car payments don't stop."

Carter faces Senate showdown on gas bill

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, facing a Senate showdown on compromise natural gas legislation, is courting some of the same special interest groups he has made the target of stinging denunciations in the past.

The administration's effort, matched only by its drawn-out fight for the Panama Canal treaties, has become a battle to scrape together all available support while, if possible, neutralizing the opponents.

So Carter, who last month attacked "economic interest lobbies" in a speech before Missouri farmers, is now going to business groups for help in swaying senators holding out for total deregulation of natural gas prices.

White House staff members, saying no deals have been made, contend it is logical for the president to seek support from the producers and major consumers of natural gas.

But in last month's speech linking the fight for energy legislation to his anti-inflation efforts, Carter said:

"The fight against inflation becomes nearly impossible when the pressures of special economic interest lobbies are successful. These lobbies care absolutely nothing about the national interest as long as they get theirs."

Over the past two weeks, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, Robert Strauss, Carter's chief anti-inflation assistant, and Federal Reserve Chairman William Miller have closeted themselves with bankers, steel executives, textile manufacturers and other industrial leaders.

Their chore: To detail the administration's argument on the impact the legislation would have on the dollar and on natural gas supplies. In some cases, they have tried to enlist active supporters; in others, simply to persuade the bill's opponents to keep their opposition to themselves.

The legislation, which Carter has called crucial to the success of his energy plan, may be voted on by the Senate late next week. The bill would remove all price controls on newly discovered natural gas by 1985.

While there are no signs Carter's advisers have used any hard-sell tactics, the White House visitors have returned to their corporate suites well aware of the administration's preference and the clout it could wield.

Two signs of success: —Major oil companies have kept a relatively low profile in the debate over the compromise legislation, although they are not enamored of it. The reason? One industry observer suggests executives need no reminding of Schlesinger's power to allow $2 billion in oil price increases that so far have been kept to a minimum.

—While General Motors Corp. opposes the legislation, the company does "not intend to lobby against it," said spokesman John Hartnett. That position was announced Aug. 24, the same day GM chairman Thomas Murphy attended a White House briefing.

Cleveland teachers picket

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer
Cleveland teachers picketed their money-short school district Thursday, one day before classes were to resume for 100,000 students, as teacher disputes continued to interfere with the first week of school for a half-million students across the country.

Labor problems kept schools or colleges closed in Seattle, New Orleans, Chicago and dozens of smaller cities and towns in 14 states.

In almost every instance, the teachers were demanding more pay from school districts trying to hold the line on spending.

Authorities search for Oklahoman

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A police spokesman has denied a newspaper's report that an 18-year-old Oklahoman City man is being sought for questioning in connection with the discovery of two guns linked to two mass murders.

The Daily Oklahoman, in today's editions, quotes police sources as saying investigators are attempting to locate Ernest Lindsay. The newspaper also quoted sources as saying Lindsay has disappeared.

Oklahoma City police spokesman Tom Mundy denied Lindsay is being sought.

"We've talked to many persons. Maybe one of the investigators is looking for him," Mundy said.

As of late Thursday, Mundy said Lindsay hadn't been named in any warrants or radiograms.

The newspaper story said northeast Oklahoma City neighbors of Lindsay had been questioned about his whereabouts late Tuesday and Wednesday.

The newspaper story said until his "disappearance" Sunday, Lindsay had been living less than a mile from where the guns were found.

Religious roundup

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — "Out there I felt peace, joy and love. I felt that God and I were talking about beautiful things. He told me what I should and shouldn't do, what I should and shouldn't be. Now I feel very happy for having talked with God."

This was 10-year-old Claudia's reaction to a 10-minute "Listen to God" encounter at the Our Lady of the Cenacle Convent.

Claudia was one of 35 fifth-grade girls from the Sao Jose school in nearby Sao Paulo spending the afternoon at the convent to take part in the program run by Sisters Carmen Soares and Maria Leitao.

The girls had been given a brief orientation by Sister Carmen before spending the 10 minutes on the convent's flower-filled green lawn.

"God speaks to us inside — in our minds, in our intelligence, in our hearts." She told them. "God wants to talk to you today. God talks in many different ways. We must be attentive and listen to hear him. You go outside and choose your place and there you will find so many things to remind you of God, the flowers, the grass, the sky."

Afterwards, they are asked to write down what they experienced.

A typical reaction came from 10-year-old Fatima who wrote: "I feel an immense peace in myself... it was as if I were talking to a friend who listened and understood so I was peaceful and a light was shining in my heart. My greatest desire was that the moment would never end and that I could keep listening to the voice of the Lord in my heart."

Many obviously have very deep religious experiences in their few minutes in the garden. Almost all of them write later about the sensations of "peace and love" they felt.

"I felt that God gave me peace, love, tranquility and much more faith and he told me he would always be with me," wrote 10-year-old Cibele.

Hi-Land Holiness slates revival

HiLand Pentecostal Holiness Church will have revival services Monday - Sunday. Evening services will be at 7:30, morning services at 11, and 7 p.m. on Sunday.

The Rev. Otis Garrison will be the evangelist at all services.

Spiritual worship weekend planned

A week-end of spiritual worship for Jehovah's Witnesses is planned to begin at 1:25 p.m. Saturday, at M.K. Brown Auditorium.

Approximately 62 people of the local congregation and area representatives will meet for the two day conclave.

If anyone is interested in attending, there is no admission or donations.

God's Purposes

If you were having a picnic at the lake at approximately this spot, you might say, "Well, why did the engineers leave those trees in the water when they made this lake? They create such an eyesore. I can see no purpose in it." Yet, fishermen tell us that the fish love those old tree stumps and roots and that you can almost always find fish swimming in the dark recesses around and between these trees.

So many times we question God's wisdom in allowing some things to be and other things to come to pass. But God is good and his purposes are wise. The very thing that seems useless to us, might make us marvel if we could see with Heaven's eyes.

As Isaiah reminds us, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

But he also wants us to know that his thoughts are many toward us and that everything works toward our good and our salvation. If we had no conflicts, and no questions, we would never have the opportunity to step out on faith.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday
September 9, 1978

There are large gains for you this coming year if you continue to expand and build upon foundations you've already laid. Trying to make too big a change will throw you off course.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be careful today you don't ignore the feelings of others when you start to make those changes around the house. It could create resentments. Like to find out more of what lies ahead for you? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Others could throw you off the track if you have too little faith in your own ideas and follow their. Your thoughts are better.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid those who are more takers than givers. Someone could easily take advantage of the generous kind mood you are in today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should have a good time with friends today unless you become too ambitious. If you do, expect a few roadblocks to be put in your path.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)

If you have what you think are good hunches today, follow them. Actually, logical judgment is a little off. You'll fare better on instinct.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A casual acquaintance you're attracted to may not be all he appears to be. To avoid being deceived, stick to tried-and-true pals.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be careful what you say and how you treat others today. You could unintentionally offend someone whose cooperation is essential to your plans.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You could fail to accomplish a necessary task today. You don't lack know-how, but you'll make every possible excuse to neglecting it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The interference you think you're experiencing is caused by your own imagination. Others are just trying to do their thing and aren't really against you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There won't be much harmony around home today if you don't try to go along with the plans others have. Pull together. You'll have a ball.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your head's in the clouds today. Take care when doing any type of work. It would be best to stick to projects where little thought is required.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're in the mood for a good social time today, but don't let your extravagant tendencies overcome your prudent judgment.

Advice

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I don't know what possessed me to do it, but I examined the contents of my husband's footlocker, which had been stored in our basement for eight years—since our marriage. I became curious and took the key off his key ring while he was showering and opened his footlocker while he was at work.

I found a large bundle of love letters from a "Miss Somebody" I had never heard of. She described their affair in some detail, and in one letter she mentioned that she was expecting "their" child. (They apparently had an affair going for at least two years.)

Oddly enough, there was no subsequent mention of the birth of the child, losing it, an abortion, or anything to indicate what came of that pregnancy.

Although this happened several years before I met my husband, I am hurt and angry to think he kept this from me. I feel deceived. We have three children and I thought we had a good marriage.

Should I confess that I snooped and demand an explanation?

HAWAII

DEAR HAWAII: You say that until you snooped, you "thought" you had a good marriage. Well, if you "thought" you had a good marriage, you had one.

Your husband's affairs (literally) prior to your meeting are none of your business. For you to admit that you snooped and demand an explanation would surely damage your marriage. I advise against it.

DEAR ABBY: I recently moved to a rural area that has a small post office. Whenever I go there, I notice that one of the clerks (a dumb bunny if ever there was one) is busy reading all the postcards. In fact, before she hands over my mail, she tells me who it's from and what's on the card.

To whom should I report this brazen invasion of privacy?
DISGUSTED IN PA.

DEAR DISGUSTED: You could send a postcard to your local postmaster (or postmistress) and report this "brazen invasion of privacy." But don't expect anything to change. People who send postcards rarely expect privacy.

DEAR ABBY: If you can stand one more letter about telephone solicitation, please consider this for publication:

One day last week I was late for work, and just after I had slammed the door and locked myself out, I heard my telephone ring. Having an elderly, chronically ill parent living out of town, I always answer my telephone. Well, I finally found my keys, opened the door and ran back to get the call, which turned out to be a sales pitch for some outfit selling cemetery lots!

I would tell you what I told him to do with his cemetery lots, but you'd never print it.

LOST MY COOL

Ask Dr. Lamb
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I don't know how to explain this face to face to my doctor so I'm writing to you in hopes that you will help me. I feel tense most of the time but the problem is I seem to have loose bowel movements often.

It happens a lot when I go anywhere with my husband. I'm not sure if it's my nerves that make it happen or what is the problem. Anyway, I'm afraid to go anywhere with him for fear this occurs.

I don't eat much fruit because of this although I love Pepsi, pizza and candy. About two years ago we were looking for cars and I had to stop at three gas stations in a row. About a week later we went to the mall and I had to go back again. That's what makes me leary of going anyplace with him.

When I think he wants me to go anyplace with him I get nervous and I just don't know what to do. Please help me if you can.

DEAR READER — I wish there were a way I could help you just by answering your questions but I'm afraid your problem is more complex than that.

It's important to know why you have bouts of diarrhea. It's true that the colon is very sensitive to our emotions. In fact, the colon blushes as it becomes engorged with blood or turns pale during other emotional situations almost as a mirror of what our reactions are.

To help you have a better understanding of how your bowel functions and how to develop good bowel habits I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-1, Irritable or Spastic Colon and Constipation. Although it doesn't deal specifically with diarrhea, it will tell you how to develop good bowel habits that might help you control your problem.

A spastic colon can cause either constipation or diarrhea and frequently intermittent bouts. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10109.

Obviously, for you to have bouts of diarrhea associated with emotional stress, you must have an overactive, hypersensitive colon. You might be able to help that some by adjusting your diet to include more bulk in it. A good source of the kind of bulk that helps is bran. Try to include in your diet each day one of the cereals that has whole wheat with an appreciable amount of bran in it. If you develop good bowel habits, the behavior of your colon may improve.

You need an examination because there are a number of diseases that cause diarrhea. If it's strictly an emotional reaction, that needs to be resolved and could be with professional counseling. It's important to find out why it is that you get so tense every time your husband wants you to go someplace with him. Your letter doesn't make it clear if you get this way if you go someplace by yourself or not.

I realize you feel embarrassed, but diarrhea is just a symptom. Your doctor is quite familiar with diarrhea. Keep in mind that if your problem is related to your oversensitivity, correction of such a reaction could improve your life markedly in many other areas, other than just controlling your diarrhea.

Polly's pointers
by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY — Can you or one of the readers tell me what to do when beating egg whites and they do not always beat up stiff? — MRS. R.C.R.

DEAR MRS. R.C.R. — Do you always have the eggs at room temperature before starting to beat them? Also a TINY pinch of salt added to the whites before beating will help. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the children's vitamins that are made to resemble candy. Small children might think such vitamins are treats and could easily consume excessive amounts. — MABLE

DEAR POLLY — After continued use diaper pins tend to stick. Most of us know that dipping them in a bar of soap will do the trick. But I have found that dipping the tips of such pins into my always open jar of petroleum jelly makes the pins slide just as well and can be done faster when only one hand is free. — JEANETTE

DEAR POLLY — When taking our four-year-old daughter to arena or theater events we bring along our own baby booster seat. It is similar to those used in some restaurants. This puts her at the same height as adults in the audience who might otherwise obstruct her view. A more enjoyable time is had by all. — MRS. A.J.M.

DEAR POLLY — I am answering Ruth who has a sofa and love seat saturated with cigarette smoke. I suggest that she tuck those sponge-type fabric softener sheets under the cushions and anywhere else she can put them. I was once given an old bookcase that had been stored in a basement with old papers. It had a strong musty smell that vinegar, vanilla and crumpled newspapers would not remove. But such sheets worked perfectly, even after they had been used in the dryer. — MRS. E.G.

Glass stain caused by soft water

COLLEGE STATION—Watch for a rainbow or iridescent hue on dishwasher-washed glassware—it's an early sign of soft water etching.

Look for shades of blue, purple or pink when holding the glass at an angle to the light. The glasses look cloudier and more frosted as the condition advances.

This filmy appearance caused by etching can not be removed—the damage is permanent.

Also, there is not a method to predict which glassware will be affected this way—it isn't related to cost or quality of the glass, the specialist points out.

A combination of soft water, very high water temperatures and too much alkaline detergent cause this film.

To prevent this condition from occurring in the future, check to see that the dishwasher is getting full fill of water. Under-fill can create an over concentration of detergent.

If the dishwasher is not getting a full fill of water, use less detergent, or switch to a detergent that has a lower phosphorous content and contains some sodium carbonate.

Use less than one tablespoon of detergent—this is the minimum amount necessary to do a good dishwashing job under any water conditions.

Remember: This condition occurs only in soft water.

Home decor

It's easier than you may have thought to have the sort of elegant, designer furniture you see in the more up-to-date showrooms—and even easier to change it to suit yourself.

Today the look in home decor is one that's barely there—see-through acrylic furniture. This applies to people living in the smaller homes and apartments that are particularly prevalent these days, since these pieces add a feeling of space to almost any place.

You can put them together in a variety of ways to suit your sense of beauty and your home decor.

The basic shapes can be made into an almost endless array of attractive coffee tables, card tables, consoles, desks, sideboards, dining tables, pedestals, plant stands and almost anything else you can imagine, and then be rearranged and made to look very different with just a change of accessories or color scheme.

AN ELEGANT DINING TABLE can be easy to create.

PEDESTALS AND TABLES of acrylic can be used dozens of ways for dozens of years.

It seems that these beauties will be holding a lot.

Wine cocktails (like Splits and Kin) are gaining in popularity. Here's the recipe for a Rosy Daiquiri, sure to tingle your tastebuds. Shake together 3 ounces of rose wine, juice of 1/2 lime and 1 teaspoon sugar with ice. Strain into cocktail glass and garnish with a lime slice. Salud!

The horse recently won the title, Supreme Champion Horse of Canada in the 21st Canadian National Appaloosa Horse Show in Brandon, Manitoba. The horse is owned by Bar DK Appaloosa Ranch, Pampa. In the Canadian show the horse won first in his halter class, stood Grand Champion Stallion, and Supreme Champion. One week prior, Sir Prince Plaudit placed third in a class of 68 horses at the American Nationals in Billings, Mont. From Sacramento, Calif. to Jackson, Miss., he has been shown in all major shows and never failed to place.

Brass rubbings stir enthusiasm

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
AP Newsfeatures

Brass rubbing, a traditional English craft of tracing medieval plaques onto paper, is stirring new enthusiasm in America. The reproductions make highly distinctive wall hangings.

The brass plaques, themselves, were set in the pavement of English churches and over tombs, particularly during the 1300s to the 1600s, to commemorate celebrities in ecclesiastical, civil, or other realms.

One of the most famous brasses is at the church at Stratford-on-Avon, England, where many travelers have read the Elizabethan legend:

Blese be ye man that spares forbear.

To digg the dust enclosed here:

Blese be ye man yt spares thes stones.

And curst be he yt moves my bones.

The plaque was set above the tomb of William Shakespeare.

Rubbing began long ago when history buffs and persons researching ancestral roots obtained permission to make copies of the plaques. They placed specially prepared parchment-like paper onto the brass and rubbed it with wax crayons, much like placing paper on a coin and tracing its image with a pencil, except that the intricacies and exquisite detail of the commemorative plaques yielded works of art.

Now the London Brass Rubbing Centre has exported the craft to America.

The British group has rendered reproductions of 4,000 original plaques — exact replicas from which paper copies can be rubbed.

Copies of knights, ladies, merchants, lords, priests, and other medieval personages were brought recently to the Washington Cathedral, Washington, D.C.; the Old North Church in Boston; Christ's Church in Philadelphia, and New York City's 112-year-old Church of the Resurrection, Episcopal.

"Brass rubbing is not only rewarding, it's therapeutic and less expensive than needlepoint," says Ruth Wiltshire, British-born secretary of the Church of the Resurrection where 40 replicas are exhibited.

"We've had people from Colorado and Texas and all over the United States. They're here on holiday (vacation) and some get so fascinated they spend two or three days a week just sitting here and rubbing."

The process, itself, is simple. First is the choice of the subject. One of the earliest in the collection is Sir William Fitzralph of Pembrokeshire, circa 1327.

Perhaps the most popular likeness is called the Lace Lady: Lady Margaret Peyton of Ilesham, Cambridgeshire, 1484, depicted in an intricate lace gown and flowing headdress. The panel is 2 feet long and 15 inches wide.

Next is the choice of color of the stubby beeswax crayon — copper, gold, silver or black. Then the rubbing paper, black or white?

Smoothing the paper across the brass surface, one rubs with the crayon lightly at first to get the design, and then more heavily to intensify the color. It takes less than an hour to produce a portrait that can be framed or used as a wall hanging, or even reproduced as a Christmas card.

"The final effect is what you have chosen," says Miss Wiltshire. "That is what makes it so personal and such a good gift. And, for people who don't have the time for rubbing, we also have finished products for sale at a nominal charge."

Miss Wiltshire explained that royalties go to the English churches possessing the original plaques, and that the revenue is helping many poor churches there.

But U.S. churches benefit, too. She said that there is no admission charge to see the exhibits here, and only a small fee is asked for the beeswax and paper and instructions for persons doing their own rubbing. But the increased traffic is beneficial.

"For instance," she said, "this church has little endowment and the exhibit has enabled us to remain open seven days a week. Many churches in New York are open only one day a week."

(For further information, contact the Church of the Resurrection, 115 East 74th Street, New York, New York.)

Gray's Decorating Center
323 S. Starkweather 669-2971

THE NEW First National Bank in Wheeler is nearing completion. The building is being built at the intersection of Alan L. Bean Boulevard (Highway 83) and Texas Road. High Plains Builders of Amarillo is the general contractor.

Gray County to be represented

Gray County will be represented by its full quota of delegates at the State Republican Convention at the Dallas Convention Center Saturday.

Gray County is entitled to nine voting delegates, as well as nine alternates. Those attending the convention include Bobbie Nisbet, Gray County Republican Chairman, and her husband Scott, Dr. and Mrs. Julian Key, Justice of the Peace Venora Cole, Paul Simmons, A.D. Conway, Jim Campbell, Jones Seitz, George Cree and Mrs. Joe B. Curtis.

Keynote speaker at the convention will be U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, co-author of the Kemp-Roth Tax Bill, which would reduce all individual tax rates by 33 percent over the next three years. Senator John Tower and gubernatorial Candidate Bill Clements and other statewide candidates will address the convention.

Business transacted at the convention will be the canvassing of the vote of the state for each state office and the declaration of a candidate for each state office; election of a chairman, vice chairman and the 62 members of the State Republican Executive Committee; and the adoption and announcement of a platform of principles.

The adoption of a rule providing for a presidential primary in 1980 on the G.O.P. ballot is expected to be another convention issue. The State Republican Executive Committee has endorsed such a primary.

Workshops were held Thursday and today dealing with tax limitation, ballot security, precinct organization, voter registration and other election year topics.

Steering committee slates meeting in Lubbock Monday

City Manager Mack Wofford and other members of a steering committee formed to examine and possibly contest the proposed Pioneer Natural Gas Co. rate increase will meet in the Lubbock Municipal Building at 8:30 a.m. Monday.

Besides Wofford, the committee consists of city officials from Midland and nine other West Texas municipalities affected by the increase.

If Pioneer's rate increase request is approved, domestic customers in Pampa will pay at least 40 percent more than they now do for monthly service, according to figures computed by city officials.

The steering committee has hired three consultants.

including Wayne Brown of Pampa, an accountant, to study the new rates.

Pioneer's last base rate increase was effective in 1970.

Nisbet to seek district post

Bobbie Nisbet, Gray County Republican Chairman, has announced she will seek to represent the 31st Senatorial District as district committeewoman.

Selection for the post, now held by Ila Jo Hart of Gruver, will be made at the State G.O.P. Convention in Dallas Saturday.

Seeking the office of district committeewoman will be Jim Brandon of Amarillo. The office was vacated May 28 by the death of Joe B. Curtis, who held the post for three years.

Bizarre Dirks story continues to unfold

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More than five years after it first made headlines, the bizarre story of Raymond L. Dirks and Equity Funding Corp. of America continues to unfold.

For those who came in late, Dirks is the Wall Street security analyst who is credited with bringing to light, in the early spring of 1973, the fact that Equity Funding executives had invented massive amounts of phony insurance and fake assets in order to show rising sales and profits.

But the computer fraud staged at the Los Angeles headquarters of the financial-services company was only half of the picture. The other half involves what Dirks did with the information he gathered.

A few days ago David J. Markun, an administrative law judge of the Securities and Exchange Commission, ruled that Dirks, now head of the research department at the firm of John Muir & Co., should be suspended from the securities business for 60 days for violating "inside information" rules.

The judge said Dirks was guilty of "selectively disclosing" to some money managers information about the brewing storm at Equity Funding which was not available to the public. The judge also censured the firms which employed the money managers.

Dirks, in reply, held a press conference Tuesday. "The SEC's administrative hearing has proved that whistle blowing in the public's interest is to be punished rather than praised," he declared, and said he would appeal the judge's ruling.

For such an iconoclast-against-the-establishment drama, the 43-year-old Dirks is well cast. At the time the Equity Funding scandal was breaking, he arranged to meet a reporter for an interview at the plush, decorous lobby bar of a midtown hotel, and then showed up wearing a rumpled, sagging sweater. Hotel employees provided him with a jacket before they would seat him.

In "The Great Wall Street Scandal," a book about Equity Funding he wrote with Leonard Gross in 1974, Dirks described himself as "stubby and indifferent about my appearance ... Some say I am the closest thing on Wall Street to a hippie broker. I suppose that is true."

But in his ruling on Dirks' case, SEC judge David J. Markun sharply questioned the image of "the public-spirited hero he seeks to portray himself as."

In the Equity Funding fraud case itself, some issues have been settled, but others persist. Stanley Goldblum, the company's former chairman, is serving an eight-year prison term. After a full-scale reorganization, the company resurfaced as Orion Capital Corp. Its shares were recently quoted at around $10 in the over-the-counter market.

Mulligan's stew

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP)

"My husband smokes like a fish," complained the woman in the supermarket the other day, which reminded me that another seminar in Overse English might be in order.

Overse English, you may recall from a previous simmering here in the stew pot, is delivering a glancing blow to the language so that everyday expressions and well worn cliches emerged slightly askew.

James Thurber, who lived in these exurban parts, first discovered this phenomenon in a house maid named Della who bit the mother tongue with her eye tooth so that she seldom could see where the rest of the sentence was going. She regularly startled the famous humorist with questions like: "Do you want creolones in your soup tonight?" and "Shall I burn the refugee in the incinerator?"

Since I last wrote about this rare knack for putting a little reverse English on the Queen's English, a number of readers have written in, reporting on how our living language is fertilized in their area and enclosing documented evidence.

From La Verne, Calif., Clarice Kunz submitted a newspaper article on the "Taiwan Scene" that began: "QUEMOY, Republic of China — The crow that sticks in the throats of the Red Chinese is this little island just a couple of miles off the mainland in the Formosa Straits."

It's enough to make Edwin Newman swear off crawfish for life, especially in Chinese restaurants.

A Seattle basketball fan wrote that he heard a sportscaster predict his beloved SuperSonics would have a hard time in the championship playoffs with the Washington Bullets because "Elvin Hayes can come at you from any direction, he's gifted with perennial vision."

A Fort Lauderdale, Fla., psychiatric social worker, addressing a local women's club at a coffee klatch, heard herself introduced as "a very warm human bean."

Politicians seem to have a flair for this sort of verbal adagio. Tip O'Neill, the speaker of the House, told the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington he would "unturn every stone" to get to the bottom of the Korean influence-peddling scandal.

In words misaimed at a convention of carnival geeks but exploding on the floor of the Louisiana Legislature, a Cajun lawmaker once advised that august body: "Don't bite your chickens before they hatch." It was he who also sought to sink an aid to dependent children bill with the ringing cry: "To hell with posterity, what's posterity ever done for us?"

Rangers rally victims

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — It took one of the most remarkable comeback victories the California Angels have ever recorded to give them momentum as they head into the most important series in the 18-year history of their franchise.

The Angels looked like anything but pennant contenders in dropping a doubleheader to Texas Wednesday night, and it was more of the same Thursday evening for 5½ innings. At that point, the Rangers held a 6-0 advantage.

But the Angels exploded for seven runs in the bottom of the sixth inning and held on for a 7-6 victory over the Rangers, giving them a split of their four-game series with Texas.

A much bigger four-game series starts tonight at Anaheim Stadium, as the Angels entertain Kansas City. The first-place Royals lead California by 2½ games in the American League West.

Two-run homers by Don Baylor and Ron Fairly highlighted the Angels' big sixth inning. Baylor's shot made it 6-5 and Fairly's blast capped the big rally.

Miami tops Pampa sophs, 26-0

MIAMI — The Miami Warriors used a combination of power football and the big play to down the Pampa sophomores 26-0 here Thursday night.

The season opener for both teams saw Pampa stop Miami's first offensive series by recovering a Warrior fumble on the Harvester 37. But Pampa's offense, which had problems getting started, punted the ball right back to Miami and the Warriors began a 56-yard drive to the end zone.

Sticking to a ground attack, Miami used 11 plays to cover the 56 yards with junior fullback Randy Stone doing a workhorse job in the backfield. But it was Tony Hamby who swept around Pampa's right end from the three to make it 6-0 Miami with a 40-yard punt.

It didn't take long for the Warriors to increase their lead. Despite a good kickoff return by Job Dorsey, Pampa netted just three yards in three plays and suffered a short punt that stopped on the Miami 42.

Two penalties and a 10-yard pass from quarterback Randy Daugherty to Lewis Newman later, Stone broke an off-tackle

No surprises expected tonight

By JOE BLOBAUM
 Pampa News Sports Editor

John Welborn isn't expecting many surprises when the Pampa Harvesters take on Hereford's Whitefaces in tonight's season opener for both schools.

"They don't rely on trickery," he said while analyzing the prospects for the game in Hereford.

"What Hereford does is relatively simple, but what they run, they execute well. They're a pretty basic team," Welborn said. "They don't do a great deal, they just do a good job of running what they know."

What the Whitefaces know is what first-year coach Don Cumpton has been teaching them since arriving from Muleshoe. And the Hereford look will feature some new performers, especially since star running back Paul Bell will miss the game with an injury.

Jackie Mercer, a 165-pound senior, has switched from the defensive backfield to guide the Whitefaces this season.

"We really don't know," was Cumpton's comment on Mercer's passing arm, but he added, "We think he can throw the ball a little bit."

Running back Robert Graves will try to take up some of the slack left by Bell's absence. He's "had a good fall," according to his coach, and could pose problems for the Harvester defense.

"He's not nearly as fast as Bell, but he has adequate speed," Cumpton said of Graves.

Joining Mercer and Graves in the backfield will be junior halfback Joe Walker and senior flanker Ronald Lucero.

Defensively, the Whitefaces will line up with noseguard Cory Christie, one of eight juniors on the Hereford varsity, in the middle. Cumpton said he and his staff have been impressed by the team play on defense.

"We've been pretty pleased with the hustle and effort of our defensive team, and we're anxious to put them in a game," he commented.

Welborn, meanwhile, is hoping his team can eliminate the penalties and other mistakes that kept the Harvesters out of the end zone more than once during last Friday's scrimmage with Canyon.

"The scrimmage helped us a great deal with our alignment, letting the officials do it instead of us and letting the team out there by themselves," he said. To help plug up the middle of the defense, through which Canyon ran successfully, Welborn said he's trying to get his defensive tackles to occupy two blockers so linebackers can get to the ball carrier.

"We just have to play aggressively," Welborn said of the defense. Louis Cox and Danny Buzzard will start out at the tackle posts, but Welborn said seniors Randy Carpenter and John Davis would probably see action also.

Pampa has lost a pair of players to injury for the Hereford game. Quarterback Rick Dougherty is still hobbled with a knee injury, while linebacker Richard Wuest is out with injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident.

Junior Greg Quarles, 5-6 and 125 pounds, will replace Daugherty, just as he did against Canyon. Quarles did a good job against the Eagles and Welborn doesn't expect the offense to suffer because of Daugherty's absence.

"He's a good leader and a good quarterback," Welborn said.

Whatever happens at Hereford tonight, Welborn hopes it won't be a repeat of last year, when "we kind of beat ourselves."

Pampa led 12-7 and lost a chance to go ahead by two touchdowns with a costly fumble. Another fumble later in the game also cost Pampa a scoring opportunity in the 31-20 loss.

DOCK ELLIS OF the Texas Rangers shows his famous noose to the California Angels fans when the Rangers were leading 6-0 Thursday night in the late innings of the game in Anaheim. The Angels had lost the last two games with the Rangers and were on their way to losing their third straight when they scored seven runs in the sixth inning to win the game 7-6 and keep their hopes alive for the pennant. (AP Laserphoto)

High drama in SWC tilt

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
 AP Sports Writer

There's high drama of sorts on the first Saturday of South-west Conference football matchups with the Texas Christian Horned Frogs hoping 13 newcomers to the starting lineup can overcome the dread "Mustang Mania."

Southern Methodist's new Athletic Director Russ Potts has been papering city buses, automobile bumpers, the back-sides of coed's bluejeans and anything else that moves with the Mustang motto.

There's a certain no love misplaced between the combatants.

Meyer is openly critical of TCU's scheduling a 4 p.m. game in near 100-degree heat last year.

"I'm burned at TCU and I don't care if they know it," Meyer said recently. "I respect (Coach) F.A. Dry but not some of the other people in their athletic department. I had two players collapse in that heat last year."

TCU Athletic Director Frank

Windegger said he knew of no SMU request to move the game to night.

Dry will have 10 junior college transfers and three freshmen in the lineup against the Mustangs. There are 14 sophomores on TCU's two-deep roster.

The Mustangs are also young but the Ford-Tolbert connection is battle-tested.

Ford passed for 2,064 yards last year as a freshman and Tolbert snared 64 passes.

This duo will be going against a junior college-toughened TCU secondary including cornerbacks Ray Berry and Al Futrell and safety Kevin Turner.

Some 25,000 to 30,000 fans were expected in the Cotton Bowl for the game which proceeds will go to the muscular dystrophy charity.

Other games involving SWC teams were inter-sectional.

The No. 15 ranked Texas Ag-only points Dumas received all evening.

From then on it was Pampa's game. The serve changed hands twice as Pampa scored three more points. But when Simmons stepped back to the serving line, the game was over. She scored nine straight points to end the first game.

In the first game, Dumas was unable to take the serve away from the Harvesters. The three Pampa turnovers came from serves into the net or out of bounds.

Pampa jumped to a 6-0 lead in the second game on the serving of Rosie Santacruz.

The Demons were unable to capitalize on the six chances they had to serve, and Pampa walked away with match.

The junior varsity also won easily, defeating the Duman junior varsity 15-2 and 15-3.

Dietrich rolls 216

Jean Dietrich reached a bowling pinnacle Wednesday night by recording her first 200 game and 500 series. She bowled a 216 game and 509 series to take the honors for high game and series in the Ladies Trio League.

Team No. 5 had the high team series with a 1,692 total, while the high team game belonged to the Harvester Lanes with 596.

Jacobs Communication leads the league, with Florence Hardware trailing by one-half game.

Top seeds tough to beat

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Playing tennis against Bjorn Borg or Jimmy Connors can be a very frustrating experience.

"I hit short, long, everywhere ... and I can't beat him," Raul Ramirez said Thursday after bowing to the top-seeded Borg 6-7, 6-4, 6-4, 6-0 in the quarter-finals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

"Is there anything tougher than playing Jimmy Connors? Maybe fighting Muhammad Ali," said Brian Gottfried, the

No. 6 seed who was eliminated by Connors 6-2, 7-6, 6-1 Thursday night.

The victories moved Borg and Connors into Saturday's semifinals, where Borg will face his friend and practice partner Vitas Gerulaitis, the No. 4 seed, and Connors will meet 151-h-seeded John McEnroe, the brash 19-year-old.

In women's action, 16-year-old Pam Shriver, the No. 16 seed, became the youngest semifinalist in U.S. Open history with a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Australian Lesley Hunt and fourth-seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia struggled past 15th-seeded Kathy May 3-6, 7-6, 6-3.

The women's semifinals were scheduled today, with Shriver facing top-seeded Martina Navratilova and Turnbull opposing second-seeded Chris Evert in a rematch of last year's final. In that one, Evert won 7-6, 6-2.

A crowd of 19,433, including 17,862 paid, attended Thursday night's session, a U.S. Open record and the first sellout for the new National Tennis Center.

According to a U.S. Tennis Association spokesman, it was the largest crowd ever to watch a tournament tennis match, surpassed only by two crowds in Australia for Davis Cup matches and the crowd of 30,472 that watched Billie Jean King beat Bobby Riggs in the Houston Astrodome Sept. 20, 1973.

Ramirez, the No. 8 seed, said that playing Borg creates special problems.

"I have to do a lot of thinking out there because I know I can't overpower him," said the mustachioed Mexican. "He's volleying better, his serve is stronger and it's still not easy to pass him because he's so quick. There really isn't much you can do."

Borg, who has complained about the fast artificial playing surface being used in the tournament, said he was gradually getting accustomed to it. "Still I think it might be too fast," he maintained. "I'm getting more used to it, but I'm still not comfortable."

It was Ramirez who looked uncomfortable Thursday, especially following the opening set, which he took by winning the tie-breaker 8-6. It was downhill from there.

Borg began to dominate play at the net in the second set and that turned around the match. It quickly developed into a rout, with Ramirez winning just seven games in the final set.

The second-seeded Connors used those same serve and volley tactics to rout Gottfried. Only the second set was a contest, Connors taking it with a 7-0 score in the tie-breaker.

Connors declined to be interviewed after his match.

SECOND RANKED Jimmy Connors drops low Thursday evening to return a shot to Brian Gottfried in their match at the U.S. Open at the National Tennis Center in New York. Connors defeated the sixth-seeded Gottfried 6-2, 7-6, 6-1 to advance to the semifinal round.

Giants, Jets to split this week

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

You need only look at the standings which show both New York teams undefeated to know that the first weekend of the National Football League's regular season wasn't exactly routine.

With eight victories between them last season, the Giants and the Jets aren't exactly NFL powerhouses. But both won to start the 16-game, 1978 season last Sunday. And at least one of them could stay undefeated after Week Two.

The Jets take their aerial fireworks to Buffalo, where bad things have happened to them before. But the Bills don't seem strong enough to disturb Richard Todd and Co. The Giants, meanwhile, entertain Dallas, a frightening thought after the way the Cowboys destroyed Baltimore last Monday night.

The rash of first-week upsets destroyed its share of pro pickers. This one barely survived at .500 with 7-7, an encouraging enough start to try again this week.

The picks:

Tampa Bay 14, Detroit 10
Upset Special. Detroit was merely dreadful last week against, of all teams, the Green Bay Packers. The Bucs, meanwhile, were very respectable against the Giants and their defense is major league.

Dallas 37, N.Y. Giants 7
Is the NFL sure it wants to allow this match? To borrow a thought: What if they held a game, and one team didn't come?

Los Angeles 13, Atlanta 6
The Falcons are hurting. Otherwise, they could catch the Rams napping. Philadelphia almost did last week.

Oakland 23, San Diego 14
The Chargers are going to be good. The only trouble is they live in the wrong division. The Raiders and Broncos make the AFC West a tough-guy neighborhood.

Cincinnati 20, Cleveland 13
Another upset. The Bengals simply ran out of time against Kansas City last week, scoring two TDs in the last five minutes in falling one point short. They won't wait that long against the Browns.

Miami 24, Baltimore 7
Can the Colts be as bad as they looked against Dallas or are the Cowboys just that good? It may be a little of both.

Denver 13, Minnesota 10
The Vikings will need more than the return of Carl Eller to check the Broncos.

New England 27, St. Louis 7
The Patriots must rebound from an upset loss to Washington. But they can do it against the Cards, especially with Harold Jackson working on that leaky St. Louis secondary.

N.Y. Jets 26, Buffalo 10
The Bills will have their hands full with Richard Todd's bombs to Wesley Walker. Come to think of it, so will other teams.

Chicago 21, San Francisco 17
Walter Payton vs. O.J. Simpson makes this one a special kind of matchup. We'll take Walter and the Bears.

Philadelphia 17, Washington 13
Look at it this way: The Eagles came within 12 seconds of beating Los Angeles and the Redskins came within 2:40 of losing to New England.

New Orleans 24, Green Bay 13
After beating the Lions in their opener, the Packers signed journeyman quarterback Bobby Douglass. Imagine if they had lost.

Pittsburgh 31, Seattle 14
Terry Bradshaw and Franco Harris will have a picnic with that Seahawks' defense.

Houston 17, Kansas City 7
The Wing-T, huh? Is it true that Marv Levy will dress the Chiefs in leather helmets this week?

King wants Ali to retire

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Boxing promoter Don King says "as a fan and a friend" he would like Muhammad Ali to retire after his heavyweight match with Leon Spinks this month.

As a promoter, however, if Ali insisted, he would arrange a fight with heavyweight champion Larry Holmes, but King warned: "It would be to his (Ali's) own peril."

Holmes described Ali on Thursday as a fighter on the "dark side of his career — he's on the way out."

Nevertheless, Holmes predicted Ali would beat Spinks in their title bout at New Orleans.

King said Holmes "can beat any man in the heavyweight division and will reign supreme for four or five years with no problem at all."

"I'll fight all comers," said Holmes.

Holmes is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Council. Spinks is the World Boxing Association's champion as a result of an earlier victory over Ali.

Ali is trying to become the only fighter to regain the heavyweight title three times.

Holmes and King flew here Wednesday to support Attorney General John Hill — the Democratic nominee for governor — at a fundraising reception, but their chartered plane from El Paso, Texas, arrived too late.

They endorsed Hill at a news conference in the Capitol rotunda.

Holmes said Ali would whip Spinks because Spinks doesn't have any "boxing skills or boxing knowledge."

"I think and I hope Ali will win the fight," Holmes said. He declined to predict whether there would be a knockout.

"He (Spinks) couldn't stay in the ring with me," said Holmes.

Asked about his next match, Holmes said negotiations are underway for him to fight the European champion, Alfredo Evangelista of Spain, in November.

King and Holmes said they flew here for the Hill reception at the request of G.L. Tate, commissioner of Labor and Standards, the agency that regulates boxing in Texas.

They said Tate supports Hill and had convinced them that he "is a tried and tested leader."

Neither Holmes, a resident of Pennsylvania, nor King, a New Yorker, vote in Texas.

Networks bit bullet while airing Papal ceremonies

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Both NBC and CBS bit the bullet Sunday, pre-empting the opening of the National Football League season in favor of live coverage of installation ceremonies for Pope John Paul I.

It was a costly decision, giving up expensive commercial time for a news event. The networks expected the Papal Mass to end about 1:30 p.m. EDT, but it lasted almost an hour beyond that time. Both networks stayed with the mass until the end and their combined losses could run to about $1.5 million.

CBS had five games starting at 1 p.m. EDT and one at 2 p.m. The Mass wiped out the first halves of all five 1 p.m. games and part of the 2 p.m. contest. Commercial time goes for about $5,000 per 30-second spot on CBS and about 11 minutes of commercials would have appeared in the first half. That's about a $1.2 million loss for the five early games.

Add in the approximately $170,000 worth of commercial time sold for the pre-game show, and CBS would have lost over $1.3 million. But Dick Pinkham, the network's Director of Sports Sales, points out that some games were able to slip in an extra commercial or two during the second half, cutting losses.

Pinkham is still awaiting reports from the field on exact losses but he estimates that CBS dropped between $600,000 and $1 million for the day. "That money is gone," says Pinkham. "Now we have to go back to those sponsors and try to get them to reinvest in CBS Sports."

But, despite the financial losses, Pinkham insists CBS had no intention of passing up the Papal ceremonies.

NBC, which had four 1 p.m. games, doesn't charge as much for its commercials or pre-game show, so its losses were less. Depending on how many spots were slipped into the second half of its games, NBC may have lost in the neighborhood of $550,000.

As if that wasn't enough, both networks report hordes of angry callers swamped switchboards at local stations and in

New York with complaints. At one point NBC had received 735 calls at its New York switchboard. Ten of the calls praised the network's decision to cover the Pope. The other 725 callers wanted to know where the hell their football game was.

CBS reported about 520 calls and the network's Washington switchboard was particularly jammed with outraged demands for the Redskins' game.

Both networks say that several of the callers were abusive, to put it mildly, and many were anti-Catholic.

All of which has to make you wonder if football, and all sports for that matter, has not been blown way out of proportion in this country.

Consumers finding coffee prices high

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Consumers are finding once again that what goes up doesn't always come down. Few restaurants which raised the price of coffee after wholesale costs soared have lowered the price, despite a drop in what they pay for the brew.

"It's the law of economic inertia," said Fred Gray of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. "Once you get the price of something up, even though the ingredient comes down, you tend to leave the retail price where it is because other costs have gone up and psychologically, you've got the consumer adjusted."

Restaurant owners and operators contacted in an Associated Press spot check said the decrease in coffee costs has been more than offset by rising labor bills and higher prices for other menu items.

"You seldom see prices go down," said John Penbrook, marketing manager for the Massachusetts-based Friendly's Ice Cream chain. Friendly's raised the price of a cup of coffee by a nickel to 35 cents in April 1977 and there it has stayed.

"To permanently reduce the menu price is tough because you're reducing your income," Penbrook said. "The wholesale price drop would have to be more drastic before we would reduce the menu price of a cup of coffee."

Wholesale prices have dropped from over $4 a pound to under $3. The retail price also has declined; a recent AP check showed the average cost of a pound of coffee at selected stores was $2.80 at the start of September, compared to $3.48 at the beginning of the year.

Karen Brooks of Brook's Family Cafeteria in Atlanta said a cup of coffee, with unlimited refills, is 30 cents, up from 25 cents eight months ago. She said some customers complained about the boost, but most did not. "I've noticed a lot have stopped drinking coffee," she said. "What about lowering prices? I wouldn't do that," she said. "Why not? It's just something you don't do."

Wendy's International Inc., a hamburger chain with headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, raised its prices from 15 to 20 cents in April 1977 and to 25 cents last March. "We were at 15 cents with all the refills you wanted for a long time," said a spokesman. "We absorbed the rising cost of coffee and an increase in the minimum wage without changing the price." The spokesman conceded the wholesale price has declined but noted it is "still not back to where it was in 1976 when the prices took off."

Henric's, a Chicago restaurant, raised its prices to 30 cents and intends to keep them there. Assistant manager Pat McCarthy said, "We have learned the cost of beans is going up again."

A recent cold spell in Brazil damaged some coffee trees and touched off fears of another price spiral. The damage was much less severe than in 1975, however, and supplies of coffee are still abundant.

Peter Kriender of the 21 Club in New York said he did not raise his prices when costs went up and, therefore, he's not going to lower them now. How much does a cup of coffee cost at the expensive restaurant? "People have pots of coffee, not cups," he snuffed. How much does a pot cost? $2.

FBI says lock up

People should keep their doors locked even while they are home, according to F.B.I. Director William H. Webster.

Many thefts occur from rooms in front of residences when the occupants are outside on the back patio or deck or are working in the yard, Webster said. A thief seeing that the family is busy in the yard knocks on the front door and enters when no one answers and pilfers the home while the residents are busy outside.

Locking the front door of the house while the residents are out back will normally prevent this type of burglary, Webster said.

St. Mel's students are told to succeed outside

CHICAGO (AP) — Students at St. Mel's, the last remaining Catholic school in the black West Side ghetto, are told to believe in themselves, to try to succeed despite the grim world outside.

St. Mel's has followed its own teachings, refusing to become another inner city casualty, despite an edict to close from the archdiocese.

Principal Paul Adams, who led the black high school away from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago this summer, greeted 400 students in classes this week and said Wednesday he's already working to raise money for next year.

"The cardinal vetoed our staying alive last spring, but I think God overrode his decision," said teacher and basketball coach Julius Walker.

St. Mel's was ordered to close earlier this year. It was one of 28 schools closed or merged by the archdiocese in the last seven years.

Of the 28, 17 were in black or racially mixed neighborhoods.

The church justified closure on financial, enrollment and religious grounds, noting few Catholics live in black neighborhoods. The archdiocese's direct subsidy to schools dropped from $2.26 million in 1976 to $2.12 million in 1977.

Officials said the burden of school finance would increasingly be the responsibility of the 451 parishes.

Among parochial schools, St. Mel's was a leader. Half of each entering freshman class dropped out because of tough academic standards. Those who remained were serious students. About 85 percent of its graduates went on to college.

Drugs, gangs, fighting and other ills associated with Chicago schools weren't found there.

To save St. Mel's, students, faculty and Adams mounted a frantic effort to raise $160,000 needed for operations. They appealed to business and the community and cut budgetary corners.

"We believed in ourselves," said Adams. "We kept trying all summer. We raised the money and we finally made it."

Adams said the $160,000 in donations will be joined by $240,000 in tuition and $80,000 from bingo games.

"Sure, we've had to cut corners. We had to cut out a few programs. Our whole sports fund is only $3,000 for the whole year. But we're open and I'm already worrying about the next year. I don't want this to be a one-year shot. When I said we will stay open, I meant open for good," said Adams.

He estimates the school, which still provides a Roman Catholic secondary education although separated from the archdiocese, needs $170,000 for repairs.

Deck hand survives in water despite sharks, boats, time

PORT ARANSAS, Texas (AP) — A tanker nearly ran him down during the night, but an 18-year-old Port Aransas youth stayed afloat 14 hours in the Gulf of Mexico after falling off a fishing boat, according to Coast Guard officials.

Homer Roberson III, a deck hand on a charter fishing boat, fell into the water about 6:30 p.m. Sunday and wasn't rescued until the next morning, when he was hauled in by a San Antonio auto dealer who was unaware of Roberson's disappearance.

Roberson said Wednesday that he used his inflated pants to keep himself afloat during the ordeal, filling them with air and tying knots in legs and waist. He had no life preserver. Two Coast Guard helicopters and about 30 other boats unsuccessfully searched the area about 10 miles from this coastal town.

"I knew they were looking for me. I could see the light from the helicopters on the horizon and all the boats out there looking for me," he said.

Early Monday, Roberson said he saw a boat approaching and thought it was a rescue boat.

"But then it began getting bigger and bigger. All of the sudden I saw it was a tanker. I had to swim like the devil to get out of its way," said Roberson.

The youth tried to keep from splashing to avoid attracting sharks. "I knew if I splashed around too much, the sharks would be all around me," he said. "So I didn't move my arms and tried to dog paddle towards shore."

At one point, Roberson said he felt what he thought was a shark brush against his leg.

"I put my arm out to push it away and I felt its real rough hide. I knew it was a shark and it was plenty big," he said.

Eddie Littlefield, 42, of San Antonio, his two sons and a friend spotted Roberson about 8:30 a.m. Monday.

"My boy saw something splashing out in the water and we thought it was a sailfish. We started in that direction and when we got a little closer, we thought the fish had something in its mouth," Littlefield said.

Roberson suffered no injuries from the ordeal, officials said.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Tar sands and heavy oil deposits found throughout Alberta are estimated to hold more than six times the oil reserves of Saudi Arabia, but present technology can recover only 10 percent of this oil.

Pacific Petroleum has an $11.8-million pilot project with the Alberta Oil Sands Authority to test deep recovery techniques in the province.

RANCHER BESTSELLER

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — A 184-page book that was never advertised, "Pasture and Range Plants," has grown into a bestseller among cattle ranchers and farmers.

The book, published by Phillips Petroleum in 1963, is in its sixth printing.

Town hall meeting slated

Pampa residents will have an opportunity to discuss their library and information needs during a town hall meeting Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the conference room at Lovett Memorial Library, 111 N. Houston.

Don R. Lane, Pampa attorney, will moderate the discussion. City officials, school, and library representatives will be special guests.

Pampa's town hall meeting is one of many gathering simultaneously across the state. Concerns emerging from these sessions will be taken by delegates to the Texas Conference on Library and Information Services in Austin in November.

Results of the Austin conference will be presented at the national level in 1979 at a White House conference in Washington, D.C.

KEYWANETTE-KEY CLUB DANCE is being planned by Kris Douglass, Kathy O'Neal, and Mrs. Nancy Coffee. This dance will be from 8-12 p.m., Saturday, at the Vanderburg barn, nine miles south of Pampa on the Clarendon Highway. Dazco will provide the music.

GOLDEN ERA

by Thomasville.

At the turn of the century, American furniture designs exhibited a special ambience of livability and charm. The ideal of comfort and tranquility was seen in the late Victorian, even Edwardian designs. These designs illustrate the perfect blend of sophistication and cultural history that brings the warmth and beauty of nostalgic furnishings into the mainstream of today's eclectic room settings. Mirror accents on these pieces are etched for authenticity. Several cast aluminum pieces are finished in a matt black tone to achieve the look of wrought iron so popular for ornate fences and balcony trimwork in earlier times. For this Golden Era collection, Thomasville chose rustic pecan veneers and oak solids. The mellow fruitwood finish is distressed to provide the look of prized antiques. Hardware includes a white knob with brass finished backplates, a period brass ball design and a finger-grip pull. Here are exciting designs of yesterday, yet beautifully stated for today's lifestyles.
