Escapees free hostages

MARIANNA, Ark. (AP) — Four Tennessee prison fugitives who blasted their way out of a bowling alley and hijacked a small plane fled west across flood-drenched Arkansas today, seizing and releasing a series of hostages, authorities said.

State police said Richard Rutledge, 20, was freed unharmed today, more than 12 hours after he went to investigate the plane that landed on a muddy farm road near his home in eastern Arkansas.

But police said the prisoners had taken two new hostages —

Mr. and Mrs. John B. King, an elderly couple from Woodlawn, about 30 miles northeast of Little Rock.

State police and FBI agents gathered shortly after dawn to begin a ground search for the fugitives through a tangled network of rural roads, swampy woods, creeks and rivers. Low clouds and heavy rain washed out plans for an aerial search and rain-swollen creeks were running over their banks in many areas of the state.

Police said the escapees were apparently headed west and believed to be traveling in Rutledge's black pickup and a late-model Ford Bronco.

Rutledge told his family by telephone that he and his captors had spent the night with the Kings and that he had been tied up and left behind when the fugitives took off with the couple this morning.

The minimum-security inmates had escaped while on a recreational outing at a bowling alley in Dickson, Tenn. Wednesday afternoon and forced their way aboard a green-and-white, single-engine

Cessna 182 for the 220-mile trip west to Marianna.

The prisoners burst out of the building's bathroom firing two shotguns, disarmed prison guards after a brief exchange of fire and grabbed four .38-caliber pistols. An officer, another prisoner and one of the escapees were slightly wounded.

They took a bowling alley employee with them, freed her unharmed at the airport, then forced the airport manager to fly them to Arkansas. The manager was released unharmed after the plane landed.

Edward Atchison, owner of the Bowl-O-Rena in Dickson, said that when the four men came out of the bathroom, "it didn't look like they were trying to hurt anybody."

The fugitives were among 30 inmates from Turney Center, a minimum security facility at Only, Tenn., visiting the Dickson bowling alley on a monthly outing.

The fugitives abducted a bowling alley employee, Carolyn Barnett, and sped away in another worker's car.

Postal Service plans to add new numbers

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service plans to add some new numbers to your life — four more numbers on your Zip Code.

The promised benefits of a nine-digit Zip Code are a more efficient mail service and less frequent rate increases.

The plan will give every block in the country its own number, according to Senior Assistant Postmaster General E.V. Dorsey. It will take 5 years to install the machines to handle the new codes.

The extra four digits will be added to existing Zip Codes over the next 2½ years, he said.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger told reporters the new codes will allow eight clerks to sort as much mail as 20 now handle.

Labor costs account for seven of every eight dollars the Postal Service spends.

Although officials "are aware that some people will resent the adding of new numbers to their lives, feeling perhaps that this is impersonalization," Dorsey said, "we would hope they recognize that this is a relatively small price to pay to help move the mail and hold the line on postal costs — and hence, postage rates."

"If the Postal Service is to be successful in significantly reducing its operating costs, it must find a means to further mechanize and automate the sorting of mail," he told a conference of business mailers.

While postal officials said they could not estimate what the savings from the change will be, the officials predicted they will be substantial.

Officials said carriers will still deliver mail without Zip Codes, which Bolger said accounts for 5 percent of the mail the service handles.

Dorsey predicted the automation will lead to fewer letters being routed in the wrong direction, a mistake that accounts for many of the current delayed deliveries.

"If we can hold the line or even reduce our processing costs, we will pass those savings along to our customers," he promised.

He compared the longer Zip Code with the telephone area codes that allow telephone companies to use automated switching equipment.

Zip Codes, instituted in 1963, have reduced the manual sorting of mail.

News in brief

The forecast for Pampa is fair to partly cloudy today through Friday. The high today and Friday will be in the 80s, with the low tonight in the 60s. The winds will be variable out of the west at 5-10 miles per hour, changing to southeasterly tonight at 5-10 miles per hour.

Travolta, date mobbed at opening

LONDON (AP) — It was a case of Wednesday night fever when Hollywood star John Travolta arrived at the Empire Theater in Leicester Square for the first night of his movie "Grease."

Some women cried out and others fainted. One guest had her dress ripped down the back. Several photographers lost equipment and one had two flash guns smashed.

Travolta's bodyguards had to climb on the roof of his limousine to shout at shoving fans to get back as police cleared a path for Travolta and his girlfriend, Marilu Henner. "I was terrified — I've never known anything like this," Travolta said once safely inside.

Former First Lady gets face lift

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford is in Eisenhower Medical Center for a face lift.

The 60-year-old wife of former President Gerald Ford entered the hospital Wednesday and will remain there for five to seven days, family spokesman Bob Barrett said.

"Mrs. Ford is in outstanding health and is enthusiastic about the outcome of the operation," he said.

Brown in dark about son's plans

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Jerry Brown's dad says he would approve of Linda Ronstadt as a daughter-in-law. But former Gov. Pat Brown says he has no reason to expect that his son, the current governor, is about to marry the popular country-rock singer.

"I haven't the slightest idea about Jerry's intentions of marriage with Linda Ronstadt or anybody else," Brown said in a telephone interview. "I've never discussed his love life with him in any shape or manner."

Commission to hold hearing

The city commission will conduct an informal public hearing on a rate increase request by Pampa Cable TV at the next commission meeting Sept. 26.

City Manager Maek Wofford said the commissioners are encouraging the public to comment when the commission considers the resolution to raise the cable company's rates.

Pampa Cable TV is seeking to raise its monthly rate from $7.75 to $8.50, and its secondary outlet charge from $1 to $1.50 a month.

The company cites increased business costs and plans for additional services as reasons for the proposed rate increase.

Swollen creeks still threaten Arkansas residents

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Swollen creeks continued to threaten in central Arkansas early today after torrential rains flooded homes and businesses Wednesday, causing at least 10 deaths and millions of dollars of damage.

More rain was forecast for the area today.

Arkansas National Guard troops patrolled evacuated areas in Pulaski and Saline counties through the night to prevent looting of homes and businesses in the flooded areas.

Authorities said early Thursday several persons were still missing, but rescue units postponed further searching until daylight.

"It's too dangerous out there at night," said a spokesman for the Arkansas State Police.

An area in southwestern Little Rock was sealed off Wednesday night near Rock Creek and all persons were ordered out of the area.

About 300 persons were evacuated from an area south of Benton in Saline County late Wednesday when a dam on Lake Pauline, a small lake in a residential subdivision, threatened to break.

However, the residents were allowed to return to their homes around midnight when authorities determined that the danger had passed.

A six-block area in southwestern Little Rock was evacuated late Wednesday when backwater from the Arkansas River rushed into Fourche Creek.

Little Rock police said cars were stranded as the water rose, but there were no reports of any injuries.

Authorities said water in most creeks in Pulaski County and neighboring Saline County were "spreading out and calming down" early Thursday, but the level of water had not decreased much.

Ten persons spent the night at two Red Cross shelters in Little Rock and North Little Rock. A total of 220 disaster victims and rescue workers were fed at Red Cross shelters Wednesday.

The Red Cross said two more shelters would open in the two cities Thursday to provide emergency assistance to flood victims.

Rain began falling about sunrise Wednesday. About 6 inches of rain fell in a five-hour period.

The floods caused seven deaths in Little Rock and three in neighboring Saline County.

Two young boys, aged 7 and 4, were killed in Benton, and another man drowned outside that city of 17,000. Saline County Sheriff Joe Richards said.

Two of the Little Rock victims were identified as Linda Milliron, about 30, and Ronnie Cole, 3. Names of the other victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

"It looks very bad. It's a scary situation," Gov. David Pryor said after touring the flood-stricken areas by helicopter Wednesday evening.

"I'm going to pray we don't have any more rain in the next 24 hours," Pryor said.

However, the National Weather Service said there was a 60 percent chance of more showers in the Little Rock area today.

Carter may be within reach of formula

By FRANK FORMER
Associated Press Writer
CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — President Carter seems within reach of a comprehensive formula for continuing Israeli-Egyptian negotiations after the Middle East summit, now nearing a climax.

Although spokesman Jody Powell cautioned against "strong optimism or pessimism," diplomatic sources said the mood at the summit was upbeat as Carter worked to win the agreement of Israel's Menachem Begin and Egypt's Anwar Sadat to a peace-seeking blueprint.

If an accord can be achieved, it would meet at least the minimum requirements for a successful conference, even if it did not ensure an ultimate Mideast settlement.

In his drive to nail down a summit-ending agreement, tentatively called a "framework of negotiations," Carter canceled one appearance and postponed two speechmaking and politicking trips.

The broadly worded formula, which would deal with the future of the Palestinian Arabs and other key issues, would replace a "declaration of principles" that was nearing completion last January when Sadat broke off direct negotiations with Israel.

Carter had been scheduled to host a White House reception and concert Wednesday night for race drivers from the stock car circuit, with singer Willie Nelson entertaining.

The White House press office said the president had Mrs. Carter preside at the affair "because of the demands of the negotiations at Camp David."

In addition, Carter postponed for one week trips to the Carolinas, Pennsylvania and Ohio that had been set for Friday and Saturday.

An announcement said the postponement was prompted by "uncertainty about the conclusion of the summit."

With summit participants known to be aiming for a wind-up by Friday, Carter concentrated on a proposed conference-ending document designed to be broad enough in language to gain Begin's and Sadat's final approval.

According to diplomatic sources, the statement also would aim at drawing Jordan eventually into the U.S.-led peace process.

"We are obviously approaching the final stages," said Powell, the White House press secretary, in an overall assessment of the nine-day-old conference. "I can't imagine any more intensive period of discussions."

Powell said the pace of the marathon talks here had accelerated, but added, "There is still no basis for informed speculation as to the final outcome."

Powell did confirm that work had begun on drafting a sum-

Guerrillas control northern Nicaraguan cities

By VICENTE MORALES
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Leftist guerrillas holding three cities in northwest Nicaragua were reinforcing their positions today and manning barricades on the Pan-American Highway against weary national guard troops sent north by President Anastasio Somoza to put down the threat to his family's 41-year domination of Nicaragua.

As both sides braced for decisive battles in the northwestern cities of Chinandega, Esteli and Leon, Somoza declared martial law, and his troops carried out a house-to-house search of Masaya, the southern city they retook Tuesday, arresting or shooting any men they found.

Heavy fighting also was reported in Rivas, 80 miles south of Managua and 15 miles from the Costa Rican border, and the rebels were reported regrouping for an attack on Masaya, 18 miles southeast of the capital.

Most shops and offices in Managua were still closed by a general strike against Somoza, but the heavily patrolled capital was generally quiet.

The Red Cross estimated more than 400 persons killed and 800 wounded across the country, with at least 200 dead and 200 wounded in Masaya, since the Sandinista Liberation Front attacked national guard posts in most of the nation's cities last Saturday night.

The leftist guerrillas' cobblestone barricades on the Pan-American Highway stopped all traffic to Esteli, 60 miles north of Managua; Chinandega, 65 miles northwest of the capital, and Leon, 20 miles southeast of Chinandega.

The rebels were reported in full control of the three cities, with the national guard garrisons besieged in their headquarters compounds and the rebels getting strong support from the townspeople.

There was no indication that any reinforcements had reached the beleaguered government troops. There was speculation that the advancing soldiers were exhausted from the fighting in Masaya and were stopping to get some sleep.

"Let them come. We are ready here," said one of the rebels manning a barricade in Esteli, a of 40,000.

Anyone approaching the national guard's command post near the center of town was shot at, and one resident said the soldiers were holding 58 prisoners, including the president of the chamber of commerce.

The Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said the Esteli rebels had executed a number of civilians armed by the government after "a popular tribunal found them guilty of crimes against the citizen." But foreign reporters who visited the city Wednesday heard nothing of this.

CARRYING A LEVER action carbine inscribed "Buffalo Bill", a stocking masked rebel stands with comrades carrying other sporting weapons in Esteli, Nicaragua. Held by rebels with an eclectic collection of weapons, the town was fortified with barricades and field fortifications on each street corner. Rebels said they were prepared to resist the National Guard forces of President Anastasio Somoza.

What's happening around you

Are you keeping up with the news?

A good way to find out is to take a weekly quiz which will begin this week in The Pampa News.

The weekly quiz is tied to the VEC (Visual Education Consultants) news program which is being offered to 20 Pampa area schools by The Pampa News.

The newspaper is supplying the schools with weekly filmstrips and teacher guides, which also include quizzes for various grade levels.

As a part of the program

The Pampa News will publish, on weekdays, a feature entitled "Focus" which will deal with a timely topic. This feature will often be keyed to an event occurring that day.

Included in the "Focus" feature will be a question for which the answer will appear the following day.

The filmstrips are delivered to the schools the first part of each week and deal with news making events of the previous week. Teachers will show them at their convenience.

While the filmstrips deal with recent news from around the world for classroom discussion, the weekly quiz is designed to involve the entire family.

Students might do better than their mothers, fathers, sisters or brothers because they have seen the filmstrips. The topics, however, deal with stories covered in the newspaper.

Each week's quiz will appear on Friday.

School systems involved in the project this year include: Pampa, Lefors, White Deer-Skellytown, Grandview-Hopkins, Miami, Canadian and Wheeler.

President wins cornerstone with Civil Service package

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is described as "delighted" by overwhelming House passage of a civil service reorganization bill viewed as the cornerstone of his plan to shake up the federal bureaucracy.

The measure which cleared the House Wednesday by a 385-10 vote is similar to a bill passed earlier by the Senate.

Supporters are predicting a conference committee will quickly work out the differences between the two versions and have a finished product to Carter for signature into law before Congress recesses next month.

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., the bill's chief sponsor, said he hoped a conference committee could begin meeting next week.

Civil Service Commission chairman Alan Campbell said the president was "delighted" when he telephoned him at Camp David with news of the House vote.

Hailing the bill as equal in importance to the original Civil Service Act of 1983, Campbell said the new bill "not only guards against spoils but simultaneously promotes effective and efficient management."

In general, the many-faceted bill is calculated to make it easier for federal managers to reward good workers and get rid of incompetents.

"If you look at the total bill, the only significant loss (for the president) is in the veterans preference area," Campbell told reporters. Carter had hoped to revamp portions of Civil Service rules giving lifetime hiring preference to veterans.

Federal fiscal irresponsibility

"Don't co-sign a note or mortgage unless you are able and willing to pay it off yourself." This always has been good advice, and, when heeded, has saved many an individual from financial difficulty or even ruin.

It is also sound advice for a nation deeply in debt, but it is not being heeded. The Congress has agreed to co-sign a mortgage for the City of New York. President Carter has signed the bill.

New York's City officials view the "federal guarantees" as the foundation for a $4.5 billion long-term financing program. This would include loans from New York banks, insurance companies and state and city pension funds. All of this is designed to get the city back into private credit markets, or so we are told.

To all intents and purposes, this so-called guarantee of loans for the City of New York becomes another $1.5 or $2 billion added to the national debt. The federal government is living way beyond its means. Deficit spending and the resultant addition to the national debt become the basis on which our present fiscal irresponsibility is being built. This is the prime cause of inflation now costing all Americans untold difficulties.

Rather than taking on the burdens of profligate city governments, the Congress should be protecting the best interests of all the nation's citizens by getting the federal fiscal house in order.

There are other big city governments waiting in the wings to have the feds bail them out of local difficulties. As soon as New York gets it's notes co-signed at the expense of all American taxpayers, the demands for equal attention will descend on Washington.

Even if the federal fiscal picture were bright, we would consider it bad policy for it to co-sign notes for local governments spenders. What is being done is akin to a man already in bankruptcy taking on the liabilities of another profligate on the edge of fiscal collapse.

Nation's Press

The peanut butter crunch

(Wall Street Journal) Just recently we've heard a couple of pieces of interesting news from the cancer front.

This month's Consumer Reports includes an article on peanut butter — with information on nutritive values, prices, brand comparisons and such. Along the way, there was a discussion of a fairly troubling fact: Peanut butter can cause cancer. But even more striking, Consumers Union did not recommend that its readers stop eating the stuff.

Then just the other day the federal government had some news for us about nitrates, which are used in cured meats like bacon, hot dogs and ham. The government had just gotten the results of a study strongly suggesting that nitrates are carcinogenic. But spokesmen for the Agriculture Department didn't call for a ban; instead they said they were going to take a cautious approach, weighing both the benefits and the risks of taking these chemicals out of circulation.

In both these cases, we've seen attempts at balanced reasoning of a sort rarely found nowadays in the national discussion of cancer.

The case of carcinogenic peanut butter is no joke. Peanuts — like many other fruits, grains and vegetables — are vulnerable to the common molds that produce mold poisons, in particular, aflatoxin. Aflatoxin is pretty clearly a carcinogen. Its incidence varies widely with the heat and moisture conditions attending crop growth and storage. The Food and Drug Administration has set maximum levels for the amount of aflatoxin to be permitted in peanut butter. Consumers Union has also been watching the problem and began testing peanut butters for aflatoxin some six years ago. In this year's tests, the vast majority of the samples turned out to have at least some aflatoxin present, and a few carried in a levels above the current FDA thresholds.

The FDA takes the position that aflatoxin at some level is an unavoidable contaminant in peanut butter. Consumers Union, by contrast, "believes that aflatoxin contamination is preventable" and urges consumers to pressure Congress to "get the peanut producers to clean up their act."

Yet CU does not recommend a ban on peanut butter until the condition is totally cleared up. It doesn't even tell its readers to stop eating peanut butter for the duration. After all, the product is "nutritious and cheap. It is a stick-to-the-ribs staple." And "if you decide to avoid peanut butter because of the possible presence of aflatoxin, you'd logically have to avoid many other foods, too." So for the present, peanut butter is just going to have to remain among the small risks of life.

There's been something of the same kind of calculation in the nitrates case. In the laboratory study whose results the government just announced, 13 percent of the laboratory animals fed nitrates developed lymph cancer, while only 8 percent of the control group got the disease. The difference was statistically significant and "strongly suggests," according to the government, that nitrates are carcinogenic.

But there are complications, said the government spokesman. The great majority of the nitrates that people consume come not from cured meat but from natural sources like spinach. The additional of nitrates to meat is a protection against botulism. Then there is the complication the government didn't mention: The last time it tried to ban a widely used food additive — saccharin — there was such a public scream that Congress directly repudiated the effort. In any event, the government announced that it was going to proceed cautiously in reacting to the nitrite results. Again, a sensible enough response.

But these two cases are hard to reconcile with the stance that the government and the consumer and environmental movements have taken towards other carcinogens. Under the Delaney amendment, the FDA has been busy trying to impose complete bans on food additives associated with cancers at any levels whatever. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration has proposed applying the same sort of zero-risk approach to substances found in the workplace.

Peanut butter escapes this radical treatment only because its carcinogen is God-given and untouched, so to speak, by human hands. And the FDA has some freedom in dealing with nitrates because their use antedates the passage of the Delaney amendment. But the current dilemmas point to the major issue: Our methods of discovering the relationship between cancer and the environment have become so sensitive that we cannot expect zero risk. It is no longer reasonable to expect an environment with no detectable trace of any substance that causes cancer when fed in huge doses to rats specially bred to be susceptible to cancer. We are going to have to start making some more realistic assessments in these matters, and the stories of peanut butter and nitrates gives us some clues as to how to proceed.

Why we are living in conflict

By BUTLER D. SHAFER

I used to introduce my students to the study of law with a "lifeboat" situation taken from the classic case of United States v. Homes. Following a shipwreck, 41 passengers and crew members got into a lifeboat which, unfortunately, was not large enough to hold that many persons. In an effort to save as many lives as possible, crew members threw 16 persons overboard. The long-boat survivors were eventually rescued and, upon their return to the United States, one of the crew members was tried and convicted of the crime of manslaughter.

In rendering its opinion in the case, the court was faced with the same conflict as my students. There were no "easy outs" for the court. The crew members, after all, were not "evil" men; they had not acted with any malicious motives. They did not torture their victims nor take fiendish delight in their deeds. To the contrary, the evidence showed a real hesitancy by the crew to do what they did. These men — including the defendant — were motivated solely by the normal human desire for survival. In the final analysis, the court condemned the defendant not for acting to save his own life and that of as many others as possible, but for his having assumed the arbitrary authority to decide which of the persons would have to go overboard to a certain death. No one, the court reasoned, had any such rightful authority, even when exercised for the purpose of saving one's own life.

The point I hoped my students became aware of is that we are not unlike those persons in the lifeboat case. We can, perhaps, analogize ourselves as passengers on a giant lifeboat hurtling its way through a sea of space. We are not "evil" or "malicious" persons. We are, rather, somewhat scared and uncertain beings, trying to be courageous and assertive; seeking only to make it in this world; seeking to survive; trying to find our way home. We do not intend harm to others, nor do we delight in human suffering, quite the contrary. We want to reach out to others, to comfort and be comforted; to love and be loved; to develop a true sense of friendship, cooperation and community with others.

Even though our motives may be "good," we have the capacity to cause harm and suffering to other people because we have learned to reject our own natures. We have become what David Riesman has called "other-directed" persons. We live outside ourselves, alienated from our very selves, as metaphysically externalized beings. We identify all that is "good" and all that is "bad" as being "out there" someplace. We regard others as the source of truth, understanding and values. We look upon other people and external conditions as the causes of our problems and, at the same time, have learned to distrust our own capabilities and motives. We have created make-believe worlds of "witches" and "fairy godmothers," whose respective magic, we believe, plagues and protects us. We have in the process, become so alienated from ourselves that we seem willing to accept the Skinnerian proposition that we are, indeed, subject to the influence of everything and everyone but our own free wills.

We have abdicated control over and responsibility for our own lives, and learned to accept direction from those who have not hesitated to take control of what we have abandoned. We have subdivided mankind into mutually exclusive groupings, the "we's" and the "they's," and thus laid the foundation for conflict in human society. We have come to fear and distrust others — as we fear and distrust ourselves — and have demanded structured, institutionalized machinery to control others and provide the "order" in our lives that we can no longer find within ourselves. We have set up institutions that thwart our wills, deny our natures and impose decisions upon us, with a resulting frustration, anger, and even violence and a deepening alienation from ourselves and others.

Is it so surprising, then, that we observe mankind — ourselves included — in a state of conflict? Should we be amazed to discover violence and disorder attending our efforts to deny and to re-fashion our own natures? Is it not clear that we experience conflict with others because we are at war within ourselves? We have spent so much energy trying to drive the spirit of life out of ourselves; to replace our free will with the rigid structure of artificial "instincts"; to deny our tendencies for creation, understanding, love, peace and happiness, and to embrace any belief that offers us escape from ourselves. We are fighting ourselves; do you expect us to not fight others as well? We fear and dislike what we are; do you expect us to be more considerate of others?

Is not the cause of human conflict painfully and abundantly clear?

One plus one equals 11

Incentives for sales performance nowadays almost always include something the salesman's wife can share.

Whether a convention trip to the Bahamas or a catalogue selection of premiums which include fur coats and jewelry, this practice tends to motivate the motivators.

Wives share the separations, the preoccupations and frequently the chores of a productive professional career. Surely they deserve some of the fruits of labor.

And if a wife knows that extra effort this month might beget a dividend she can share, she'll get him out there on the firing line even on rainy days.

Yet, though industry has learned how significant is a wife's contribution to her husband's business, the tax collector is only beginning to learn.

You've often heard me quote Homer McKee, the Hoosier philosopher. It was he who said, "One plus one does not equal two when you are dealing with the man and wife equation. In this case one plus one, side by side, equals 11."

That has been both my observation and my experience.

Yet our tax system has been very stingy with women.

A wife along on a corporation convention, however she may be included in the business sessions, is presupposed to be on a vacation and expected to pay her own way.

In several businesses with which I am intimately familiar, the home is an office, the wife is at least a receptionist and more likely a bona fide administrative assistant. Yet defending that premise at tax time has been almost impossible.

Similarly, in the settlement of a family estate, the tax collector has tended toward the antiquated chauvinistic assumption that the total assets are solely his.

Only recently have tax courts begun to correct this official myopia.

Example: Bessie and Clarence were married 43 years. Starting from scratch they built a sizable farm operation.

When Clarence died the Internal Revenue Service said all the farm equipment had belonged to Clarence and thus was included in his estate.

However, a federal district court in South Dakota declared, "This court will not ignore this farm wife's contribution to the success of the business as the IRS seeks to do."

Bessie was equally responsible for the farm's success. She cared for hired hands, marketed eggs, helped harvest grain, hauled cattle and kept the books (in addition to raising five children).

The court decreed that half the equipment belonged to her as an equal partner in the farm and the IRS had to refund some $40,000 of estate taxes plus interest.

I am sure the IRS can cite some ludicrous attempts to misrepresent and misuse the family-business relationship.

But there is something very sick about a system which blatantly gives generous rewards to unwed, professional baby-makers while it denies to a legitimate helpmate any consideration for her contribution.

The proper resolution of this inequity, of course, would be to tax all income and all estates on a fixed percentage.

Twenty-five percent should be an ample cut for Uncle Sam in either case.

Then that whole army of tax collectors, tax lawyers and tax accountants could be set free and made available for some productive pursuit.

Furniture -- a bargain buy now

(First of four columns)

This September — a traditional "bargain" month for buying furniture — may launch the last good opportunities you will have to buy furniture in terms of price value in years — barring a business slump in the U.S. so severe it forces prices down.

The reason: lumber, used in case goods (bedroom, dining room, occasional furniture) has been soaring in price. And no end is in sight for the unprecedented price spiral.

Lumber for the furniture industry is a cyclical commodity normally subject to seasonal supply and demand factors, says Thornton G. Wampler, vice president of Pulaski Furniture Corp., Pulaski, Va., among the nation's largest furniture manufacturers. With the largest single plant in the world under one roof, plus three others for which to buy lumber, he notes that the price escalation has not followed the usual pattern of seasonal peaks and valleys.

Prices under ordinary circumstances go up semi-annually as furniture producers build inventories for shipments of new introductions to dealers beginning in July and again in January. Furniture manufacturers show retailers new styles at the national market in April and October in North Carolina. Case goods manufacturers accumulate their supplies of various kinds of timber to match anticipated retailer-buying months before these events.

In effect, this becomes a commodity speculation as manufacturers try to anticipate supply-demand forces that ultimately govern prices of the finished product to you. If a collection becomes "hot," and catches your imagination, there can be a literal run on a certain type of wood — a see-saw to which the industry is accustomed.

But in 1978, lumber has not taken its between-season price dips — a new factor indeed.

Foreign purchases in the American market — particularly from Japan, Germany, England and France — have contributed. These countries have been buying top grades of American lumber; enormous increases have been recorded for such furniture woods as ash, oak, cherry, walnut, among others.

Meaning: you will pay more for furniture manufactured from these woods this fall, and almost certainly even more when furniture from the October dealer shows reaches your store in February 1979.

Why have overseas forces become such strong factors in the giant multi-billion-dollar furniture industry?

Because of the plunge in the value of the U.S. dollar, Europeans and the Japanese have found it a good investment to buy hundreds of millions of board feet of American lumber with their stronger currencies. Partly, it reflects a speculation in a futures commodity, and partly, the shaky dollar has been luring foreign buyers seeking day-to-day returns in America's timber resources.

But it still all translates into higher furniture prices for us after the September bargains have been cleaned out.

Paradoxically, overseas timber purchases normally would have pleased our balance-of-payment watchers, for the buying would be offsetting our huge spending abroad for Arab oil, Japanese autos, TV sets, etc. Lumber exports would have a small dollar impact but an impressive psychological effect on confidence in the U.S. dollar. The exports should help shore up the dollar, thereby help curb inflation in the U.S. by reducing prices of goods and services we import in enormous quantities.

But the irony is that the upsurge in lumber exports is turning out counterproductive.

With furniture sales reflecting a healthy demand for hardwoods in the domestic market, the added stimulant of European and Japanese buying will make your new dining room furniture or bedroom suite more costly.

Not only is the prospect grim for furniture made this fall, the price pressures will intensify as domestic furniture producers enter the market next spring to compete against the foreign buyers who will be using our weak dollars to pay for our American lumber.

So, we export more — which in a sane economic world, would help bring more stability to our balance of payments, help prop up our dollar, and put some lid on inflation.

But in this "insane" economic era we export more and it ends up adding to inflationary pressures on us, America's consumers.

Textbook protesters look to November board meet

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Textbook protesters now are looking to the State Board of Education's hearing in November as their last chance — on the state level at least — to keep several volumes out of public school classrooms.

The state board meets Nov. 11.

Both major groups of protesters — feminists and political and religious conservatives — won some and lost some in State Textbook Committee votes that concluded Wednesday.

"Out of 28 books we objected to, 10 went on the list. That means 18 did not, and that's not too bad," said Norma Gabler of Longview, who has criticized books for 16 years from a conservative and traditionalist standpoint.

She indicated she would concentrate in her protest to the state board on high school literature and American history works.

The committee recommended as an alternate for freshman literature Houghton-Mifflin's "Focus on Viewpoints," which Mrs. Gabler had protested because, among other selections, it contained Poe's "The Raven."

It was widely reported that she called the poem "gruesome," but the record does not bear that out.

"I just said it was loneliness and despair. I don't think it is gruesome," Mrs. Gabler said.

She said she intends to push hard for rejection of Ginn & Co.'s "New Voices in Literature" for high school freshmen — "too much violence."

Local school boards may choose one or more from the list of up to five per subject approved by the state board.

The textbook committee approved two texts for Mexican American studies, "Mexican Americans — Past, Present and Future," and "The Mexican American in American History," both published by American Publishing Co.

The first book was protested by Drusilla Bearden of the Daughters of the American Revolution for a "very opinionated" statement in favor of women.

That statement said that while historically the Spaniards had been a "virile people... at the present day, one is tempted to think that the women of Spain are on the average superior to the men."

The publisher replied that the statement was in the book only as a psychologist's assessment of the Spanish character.

National Organization for Women (NOW) members protested "The Mexican American in American History" because it had "very little information on the role of women in shaping the history of Mexican Americans."

Committee members approved books in the controversial high school literature and American history fields Tuesday.

History books recommended were Holt's "A History of the United States from 1877," Laidlaw's "Challenge and Change," Harcourt's "Rise of the American Nation, Vol. II," Rand McNally's "The Promise of Democracy" and Addison's "An American History, Part II."

Both Texas NOW and Mrs. Gabler protested "Challenge and Change." NOW said it had an "old fashioned and limited view" of women. "Nowhere in the book is any woman who campaigned for women's suffrage (or any contemporary feminist) even mentioned by name," NOW said.

Officials discuss money problems during meeting

Although the new three phase program was the main subject of conversation at Tuesday night's hospital board meeting, other items concerning the board's current financial status also arose.

Barry Breen, Controller, presented the financial statement to the board.

Breen told the board that the operating revenue at Highland General Hospital for the past month was up 23 percent. He also reported that the operating expenses for McLean Hospital was down 85 percent.

Breen also presented the board with $3,300 in Medicaid uncollectibles. He told the board the accounts hadn't been billed in the allotted time period. The board approved a motion to write these off as bad debts.

Another item on concern at the board meeting was setting a new policy on visiting hours for the medical, surgical and obstetrical floors of the hospital.

The new policy sets visiting hours from 3:00 to 4:00 p.m. and 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. on the medical and surgical floors. Visiting hours on the obstetrical floor are from 2:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. for family and friends. From 7:00 to 8:00 p.m. is for family only and 8:00 to 8:30 p.m. is reserved for the father. Visiting hours in the coronary care and intensive care unit are for ten minutes every four hours around the clock for one member of the immediate family only.

Relax regulations on industry

Canadian officials help economy

DALLAS (AP) — Canadian officials have decided that one of the best ways to strengthen their nation's economy is to relax governmental regulation of private industry to release more of the nation's resources for development.

Peter M. Towe, Canada's ambassador to the United States, says the lessons of two world wars and a global depression have awakened governments to the necessity for developing systems that can respond to the issues of world economic interdependence. Towe spoke Wednesday night before about 200 persons at a dinner hosted by the Dallas Council on World Affairs and the Dallas Chamber of Commerce.

Towe said the Canadian government recently relaxed government controls on businesses and individuals in an effort to return some regulatory functions to the private sector and remove government intervention and red tape in other areas.

"We believe this reordering of our priorities — over $2 billion will be cut by the federal government from its current and planned expenditures by 1980 — will release resources within the economy, put more people back to work and stimulate new investment in manufacturing and in the energy and natural resource sectors," he said.

Towe said Canada's inflation has fallen from the double-digit figures of .975 to "about 7 or 7.5 percent." But he said Canadians still have "a tough row to hoe" in the high costs of imported food and energy.

Towe conceded foreign investments in Canada had fallen off because of a lack of unity between French and English speaking Canadians, but said investments are picking up. He said the latest poll shows 25 percent of Quebec's population supports the province's possible separation from Canada.

"Quebecers have special problems that have not been met," said Towe. "We are currently defining a new constitution that will be more satisfactory to all parts of Canada."

In the energy industry, Towe said, provincial and federal governments have assumed decision-making roles to encourage rapid development of the country's natural resources, something that in another time would have been left up to private industry.

Foreign capital, primarily from the United States, was instrumental in the rapid expansion of the production, transportation and marketing sectors of Canada's oil and gas industry, he said.

"At the same time, the fact that the Canadian petroleum industry is predominantly owned by foreigners has naturally raised questions as to whether national interests were in all cases being well served," Towe said.

"Particularly after the oil embargo and abrupt price increase of 1973-74, the Canadian public demanded that its governments take steps to promote a greater Canadian presence and participation in industry."

Parliament's creation of Petro Canada, Canada's national oil company, seemed to some Americans the first step toward nationalization of the industry or a rejection of reliance on the marketplace to solve Canada's energy problems, he said. However, he said, a closer look at how Petro Canada has operated suggests these concerns were grossly exaggerated.

For example, the company has assumed major responsibilities in northern exploration, oil sands development and examination of possible northern gas transmission systems, he said. It has also moved gas from western Canada to eastern markets.

Towe said the Canadian government still participates heavily in many areas affecting economic growth, but a sophisticated economy with its quota of sophisticated problems will rely more heavily on participation by private industry.

"We will continue to welcome foreign investment," he said.

Nurses couldn't cope with dying

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The former nursing director of a home health care agency in Orange says she had to put herself on round-the-clock call because other staff nurses "couldn't cope with dying patients."

Peggy McKenna testified Wednesday in support of an application to start Texas' first hospice for terminally ill patients. It would be based in Orange and would serve patients in Jefferson, Newton, Hardin and Jasper counties, as well as Orange County.

Mrs. McKenna, now a housewife, has applied to become director of nursing services for the proposed Southeast Texas Hospice, Inc.

Home Health-Home Care, Inc., for whom she worked in 1973-76, opposes the application.

If the application is approved by the Texas Health Facilities Commission, groups in other cities also are expected to seek permits.

The commission rejected the application in June but granted a rehearing, which lasted two days and ended Wednesday.

Mrs. McKenna said that as late as 1972 Home Health-Home Care had no psychiatrist, bereavement program, counseling or volunteers to work with dying patients.

Asked if the agency showed more concern for the terminally ill in the next few years, she replied: "I was showing more concern for the terminally ill."

She said a major difference in the proposed hospice and other home health care agencies is that the hospice "would devote all its energy to the care of the terminally ill patient in the last three to six months of his life."

Joan Lyons, who has applied to be director of volunteers for the hospice, said 42 persons already have volunteered even though the hospice is not yet in operation.

Existing home health care agencies, she said, "are not doing what we propose to do." The agencies, however, contend that the proposed hospice would merely duplicate their efforts.

Lawyer William Kemp of the home health care agencies asked Ms. Bechtel if there was a need for a hospice, and she replied, "There is not. We are offering total medical care. My county cannot support another home health care agency — there is no way."

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 29 years hates love-making. She often says she finds the whole idea "revolting." In fact, she doesn't even want to be kissed.

The odd thing is that when she is with any of her three brothers, it's kissy, kissy, all the time. Good morning kisses, good night kisses, and hello and goodbye kisses. (And she kisses them in between times, too.)

Although I have never strayed from the straight and narrow, I know that women find me attractive. I mention this because you usually take the wife's side in any marital squabble.

What do you make of this situation? I am not jealous. I am merely ...

MYSTIFIED IN OAKLAND

DEAR MYSTIFIED: Your wife probably fears that your kisses are just the preliminary to the "revolting" main event—an unlikely event with her brothers.

She needs counseling on the role of sex in a "successful" (sic) marriage.

DEAR ABBY: Apparently you never dated someone who bestowed "ishy kisses," like the girl who wrote you about a poor kisser she dated.

You said, "Kiss him the way you'd like to be kissed. Then hang on to your hat!"

Not always so! I am happily married, but when I was dating I enjoyed kissing so much I always looked forward to the end of the evening. Some guys can kiss, and some can't. Some can eventually learn and some absolutely never learn.

I know, because I'm married to a great guy who just can't seem to get the hang of it. And I've been kissing him the way I'd like to be kissed for ten years.

I'm not complaining, and I wouldn't trade my husband for the world, but when I think of some of those super kissers I dated, I emit a secret sigh. Sign me ...

HOT LIPS

DEAR HOT: Don't give up. Tell your husband what he's doing right, and what he's doing wrong, and what he's not doing that he should be doing. Your great guy has the same equipment those super kissers had. All he needs is some instruction on how to use it.

DEAR ABBY: Without commenting on the legal, moral, or social aspects of the situation, here are the facts:

My son and his girl friend, who are living together, have announced that they are going to have a baby. They are very happy about it. The girl's friends have "showered" her with gifts. As far as I know, the prospective parents have no plans to marry in the immediate future.

My question: How do I announce the birth of my first grandchild? Is there a way I can show my love and acceptance of this child—just as I love and accept my son—without seeming too inconsiderate of others who may who may have a strong opposition to such a situation? Sign me ...

FIRST TIME GRANDMA

DEAR FIRST TIME: Don't make an official announcement. Your obvious love and acceptance of the child will speak for itself. The "others" who oppose such a situation must surely realize that you are not responsible for your son's actions.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about skin being an elastic sack. I, too, have lost a great deal of weight and have flabby skin. My question is what types of exercise are good for the flabby areas?

I belong to a figure salon where the instructors tell me I should do exercises for losing weight rather than firming and I have skin hanging all over. I would think I should try to firm. Their machines can be set for losing, firming or building. Who is correct? Also I do about 45 minutes of exercise per day. Could that be too much?

DEAR READER — Exercise can be used for a variety of different things for the body. The choice of the exercise program a person should use depends entirely on the goals to be achieved.

It is true that you can exercise to lose weight. Simple walking will burn off a few more calories every mile than you would have used if you were sitting at home resting. Jogging or running uses still more calories. Even with the amount of calories you can burn up running, it will not increase the size of the muscles any appreciable degree. Muscles in the leg will improve and get just big enough to support the body weight and no larger.

The exercises that you do over a long period of time, such as running, jogging and even walking, are called endurance exercises and they burn off calories by the amount of work that is done.

In contrast, strength exercises help to build and firm muscles. The classic example here is a weight lifting exercise. To give you more information on how these affect your weight I'm sending you The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training For Energy and Weight Control.

Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Incidentally, whenever you are doing many of the body calisthenics, that involves lifting the body and is a weight lifting exercise.

Now, there are very few exercises you can do that will really help your skin if you've lost a lot of weight. You can firm up your muscles and you can increase their size, but I doubt that if you lost a lot of fat that you want to make your muscles big enough to replace all the fat tissue.

Perhaps the most useful area where exercise helps in weight loss is in the face area. Facial muscles are just like those on your arm and everywhere else. If they're put under load their size will increase.

One of the ways to help prevent hollow cheeks and a sagging face is to have firm facial muscles. These are developed by grimaces and what some people would call making a face in such a way as to contract the muscles to their maximum amount.

By learning how to use all of the facial muscles and contracting them to their maximum degree, you can help prevent loss of the size of your muscles in the face. This, in turn, helps prevent the saggy skin.

Despite all these measures, once the skin is overstretched it usually requires cosmetic surgery to actually tighten it.

DEAR POLLY — Have you ever washed a silk garment? I have a 100 percent silk blouse that is labeled "Dry clean only" and wonder what would happen if I washed it. — S.S.

DEAR S.S. — I certainly have washed silk garments. Some have come out satisfactorily and others have not. If your blouse is tagged "dry clean only" then that is what you should do — at least until it becomes a bit weary looking. Then you might wash it in a cold water detergent for fine washables. But this is after it doesn't seem worth the cost of dry cleaning. — POLLY

Ingenuity In Home Decor

Helpful Tips On Low-Cost Decorating Ideas

REMODELING THE OLDER HOME

A CHARMING BYGONE ERA comes to life when original fixtures and cabinets contrast with greenery, fresh wallcoverings and appropriate furniture. A new booklet, "Kitchen and Bath Idea Book," tells you what and how to get what you need to improve an older home.

Most Americans now live in houses at least 15 years old that challenge both their ingenuity and their bank accounts.

In the kitchen and bath, where fixtures are already fixed, the challenge grows. Traffic lanes leading to a porch or patio work around what's already there. You can make even these rooms attractive if you keep these suggestions in mind:

1. Choose furnishings in scale with your rooms. Your breakfast nook will seem larger when you use a light weight Parsons table with bamboo, bentwood or rush-bottomed chairs. Avoid placing large, heavy pieces in small rooms where people will have to squeeze by them.

2. Make a floor plan and arrange furniture in logical groupings. If the area is large, divide it visually into sections and place furniture logically. In a living room, for example, a carved mantle piece should be the focal point and the right spot for a conversation area that you can make with matching sofas opposite each other, or large easy chairs on either side of a table.

3. Wallcoverings afford one of the least expensive ways to make a dramatic change in a room. They also lend personality that dull, painted walls do not. Fabric-backed vinyl wallcoverings like those from General Tire and Rubber Company are the most practical. They wipe clean with a damp cloth and resist stains and moisture, retain their original colors indefinitely and strip off easily when you want to change or replace them. Vinyl is especially appropriate in bathrooms and kitchens where heat and moisture soon ruin wallpaper.

A 28-page, full-color "Kitchen and Bath Idea Book," that contains other suggestions, along with numerous remodeled room scenes and "case histories," can be yours for 50¢ when you write: GTR Wallcovering Co., C.N. 01550-PR, Trenton, N.J. 08650.

4. Make liberal use of plants as accessories. Nothing freshens up an old house like a touch of greenery. Try concealing old-fashioned plumbing in the bathroom with a lavish potted plant sitting on the floor, and fill empty spaces on tops of radiators and windowsills with leafy ferns. A tall plant can do wonders for a light but otherwise empty little corner.

None of these changes need be expensive when you cover old walls and re-cover old furniture with matching or compatible fabrics and materials.

Pullman or corridor-type kitchen, with open upper shelves of 1 x 12-inch western wood boards, organizes meal preparation, saves unnecessary steps. Fluorescent tubes above frosted glass set in frames of fir 2 x 4's and 1 x 4's provide soft, indirect lighting for the working areas.

Search in attic for leaks in ceiling

The major problem in trying to locate a leak in the roof is that often it isn't directly over the wet spot in the ceiling. If you can get to the underside of the roof in the attic, it's easier to find the leak. When it's raining, go up in the attic and look for the leak above the wet spot on the ceiling. If the underside of the roof is dry there, look further up towards the peak of the roof.

If your roof is relatively new and has developed a small leak around the flashing, chances are it can be repaired easily. If the roof is badly worn, limited repairs won't help. Signs of a roof in need of replacement are cracked, curled, brittle or missing shingles.

In doubt, call in a professional roofer who can conduct a thorough on the roof inspection. He's also a good source of information about material, style and color. Asphalt shingles, for instance, can often be applied over the old roofing, eliminating the cost of a tearoff.

CB sidebanders, AMers going to war.

By Ink Dipper

There is a small, unnoticed war going on between single-sidebanders and the AMers who do not want to give up any of their 40 channels for SSB access.

Citizens band radio is AM with a power level of 4 watts. Single sideband is FM and has an envelop power of 12 watts. It has several distinct advantages over its cousin, not the least of which is virtually no interference. Right now with the sun spot problem beginning to affect all AM radio, this represents a considerable plus.

The war that has developed is one over access channels. The single-sidebander does not transmit a carrier when his mike button is pressed, as is the case with the AMer. The consequence is that the sidebander needs to make his contact on an AM channel, then switch to the upper sideband. In many parts of the country and in Canada, Channel 16 has been reserved for the SSBers by a sort of gentlemen's agreement. In other places the "top five," 35 through 40, belong to the sidebanders in much the same way that 19 is the truckers' channel.

It seems strange that a simple thing like making available several channels for the exclusive use of the SSBers has grown into a monumental problem, but it has. And it does not look as though there is any resolution coming. Neither the Federal Communications Commission nor its Canadian counterpart have been responsive to the letters and complaints received from the sidebanders.

Early this year this column reported that SSB might be important to all CBers because it is clearly the way to avoid a lot of interference as the sun spot dilemma becomes more severe. Letters in response indicated that many regular CBers were not familiar with single sideband and its inherent characteristics. Some stated that they didn't understand why more manufacturers didn't build their sets with dual capability. A few writers were not aware that their sets did have the capacity.

This column was also overly optimistic about the increase from 23 to 40 channels eliminating some of the access problems sidebanders were having when traffic tied up the smaller number of channels. It did not work out that way: the trouble has gotten keener and sidebanders' complaints for channel recognition have increased.

Just how many single-sidebanders there are right now is hard to report. There are no reliable figures available. It is obvious, though, that the number has increased considerably this year. SS clubs have sprung up throughout the United States and Canada. These clubs are behind the development of the "top five" channels as their domain.

Whatever happens, this fight between the AMers and SSBers is senseless.

Washington briefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration says it opposes changing federal buying rules to give American-made goods a bigger edge over foreign products, calling the proposal inflationary.

The bill on government contracts "would be counter to our efforts to combat inflation," Lester A. Fetting, administrator for federal procurement policy, testified Tuesday at a Senate hearing.

The present Buy American Act, on the books since 1933, allows the executive branch to buy domestic goods within a certain price range, even if they are more expensive. The proposed bill would raise that range in many cases.

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 7.3 percent of women using contraceptives to delay having another child become pregnant within a year, while the pregnancy figure is 3.7 percent for women using contraceptives because they want no more children, a government health survey shows.

The survey, released Tuesday by the National Center for Health Statistics, was based on interviews in 1973 and 1974.

It said the most successful contraception method was sterilization, followed by birth control pills, intrauterine devices, condoms, diaphragms, foam, cream or jelly and rhythm.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill calling for an end of the arms embargo against Turkey has been sent to President Carter. Final passage of the measure came Tuesday when the House voted 225-126 for the International Security Assistance Act.

The bill calls for lifting the embargo against Turkey if Carter certifies that ending it is in the best interests of the United States and Turkey shows it is acting in good faith to settle the Cyprus situation.

Waco man held on capital murder charge

WAGO, Texas (AP) — A 24-year-old Waco man is in Waco city jail in lieu of $50,000 bond on a capital murder charge stemming from the weekend rape-slaying of an elderly woman.

The charges were filed Tuesday against Curtis Scott in connection with the stabbing death of Lela Mae Senn, 80.

Police found Mrs. Senn's nude body in her apartment about 10 p.m. Sunday. She had been stabbed several times in the chest and neck, apparently with a pair of scissors, police said.

An autopsy revealed the woman died of a stab wound to the heart, and investigators confirmed she had been sexually assaulted.

Det. Donald Youngblood said the murder was similar to the January rape-slaying of 87-year-old Mamie Witt, who lived in the same apartment complex as Mrs. Senn, but he said he did not believe there was a connection.

In both instances, the victims were bound with cloth and an electrical cord, and a nightgown was used as a gag each time, he said. However, suffocation was ruled to be the cause of Mrs. Witt's death.

Charles Eugene O'Brian, 19, of Waco was convicted that murder and is awaiting execution on Huntsville's death row.

Police said a man called them Sunday night to report that he had seen a bound and gagged woman lying nude on a bed through a window, after seeing someone run out of the apartment.

Another resident of the apartments said a man came of her door and asked to use her phone Sunday evening, but she said she didn't know him and he smelled of alcohol so she did not let him in.

Police said they are unsure of the motive for the killing. Mrs. Senn's television set was taken, but was later found in a storage area of the complex.

The apartments are located in a low-income section of Waco and house mostly elderly residents.

After Mrs. Witt's murder, the Federal Housing Authority allocated $40,000 to hire guards and step up security at apartments in the area. Metal fixtures were placed on all doors to prevent burglars from breaking glass and reaching in to unlock doors, and guards were placed at three complexes.

C.H. McCloney, assistant executive director of the Waco Housing Authority, said the precautions had been effective in reducing crime.

"This was just a shocking, unavoidable thing," he said, adding that there was no forced entry to the apartment. "There was a door left open or she let him in."

ARCATA, Calif. (AP) — A nude man walked into the police station in this small northern California town at 4:30 a.m., said "Hi" to the desk officer and walked out.

A police officer nabbed the young streaker not far away early Tuesday, in a car with a male friend. The nude man said he had just won a $20 bet.

But police, who issued him a citation for indecent exposure, said he'll probably wind up a loser — he could be fined up to $50.

police withheld his identity.

Mis-Fortune? OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — When he got back to his office after a visit to Washington, the staff presented University of Mississippi Chancellor Porter Fortune Jr. with a rearview mirror — for his losses.

The homemade gift was prompted by Fortune's misfortune: he was robbed while strolling through the nation's capital.

He was not injured, except for a scratch on the nose.

Balanced budget or revised constitution

WASHINGTON (AP) — An organization that wants a balanced federal budget says it might present Congress next year with the first demand for a national convention to rewrite the Constitution backed by two-thirds of the states.

If it were held, such a convention would be the first since the Constitution was drafted in 1787, and some constitutional scholars fear it could turn into a no-holds-barred affair encompassing various efforts to alter the document that is the basis of U.S. government.

Officials of the National Taxpayers Union don't expect their demand for a constitutional convention to actually produce one, however, and the 10-year-old anti-tax organization isn't discouraged.

It says its real aim is to force Congress to act on its own, and it thinks Congress will indeed initiate a balanced budget amendment.

The Taxpayers Union wants an amendment requiring the government to balance its budget within four years of ratification — and to keep it balanced except in times of national emergency.

To go into effect, amendments must be ratified by three-fourths of state legislatures or state conventions. Congress decides which.

For all but one amendment, Congress has chosen legislative ratification. Repeal of prohibition was ratified by conventions.

Congress has received more than 300 applications for constitutional conventions, ranging from the first demand for a Bill of Rights in 1789 to recent proposals for world government and school prayer amendments — but none has had the backing of enough states.

The Taxpayers Union says chances are its request will be different. It now has approval of 22 of the 34 legislatures required. And, says the group's director, Charles S. Crawford, "It is quite possible that next year we will be able to get the necessary 12 states."

"We could. We could," adds Democratic State Sen. Jim Clark of Elliott City, Md., who heads the Taxpayers Union lobbying effort. At any rate, he says, "we're going to get pretty close to it."

But, Clark notes, "I don't think Congress is going to let it go to a convention. I think they will go ahead and give us an amendment. They can control an amendment."

There is some precedent for his view. In 1912, when 30 states asked for conventions to get direct election of senators, Congress proposed such an amendment. However, Congress did not act after 32 states asked for a convention on apportionment of state legislatures after the 1964 Supreme Court one-person, one-vote ruling.

SEEKING BALANCED federal budget is the Taxpayers Union, directed by Charles S. Crawford, right. The group's effort to lobby for a constitutional amendment is head by State Sen. Jim Clark, left, of Endicott, Md. Both men think it is possible that by next year enough states may line up behind the amendment to get it enacted as law.

Some legal experts argue that a convention, though called for a single issue, would be free to make an overall constitutional revision.

Professor Charles L. Black Jr. of Yale University Law School has said a constitutional convention could propose "such amendments as that convention decides to propose." He said the procedure should be used only "to take care of a general dissatisfaction with the national government, or a breakdown thereof."

A committee of the American Bar Association concluded in 1974, however, that a convention could be called for a specific purpose.

A bill designed to limit constitutional conventions to the purposes for which they are called was passed by the Senate in 1972, but died in the House Judiciary Committee.

The calling of a constitutional convention raises all kinds of questions, among them: How many years are allowed for persuading two-thirds of the legislatures to call for a convention? Is it mandatory for Congress to call a convention when it gets a request from enough states?

Does Congress have the power to review the convention's work? Do the courts? Does the president have any role?

How are the delegates to the convention to be chosen?

"It raises a broad range of really frightening possibilities," said Nels Ackerson, chief counsel to the Senate subcommittee on the Constitution. "It's wide open."

Ackerson said that if applications from 34 states were received, their validity presumably would be debated in Congress and "the answers also would very likely be tested in the courts."

The first legislature to call for a convention on budget balancing was North Dakota's on March 11, 1975. Others are Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Wyoming.

The Wyoming and Colorado legislatures are among the four in which both houses are controlled by Republicans. Arizona, Kansas and North Dakota are among the 10 in which control is split. The others are controlled by Democrats, except for Nebraska's, which is non-partisan.

The proposal has drawn no organized national opposition, but Common Cause fought it in Colorado, saying more careful study was needed. Bruce Adams of the citizen lobby group said the national organization was considering whether to take a stand.

Community in East Texas pines has unusual harmony of residents

LUFKIN, Texas (AP) — The 40 women who live in a small community in the pines here come from varying backgrounds and range in age from 20 to 85.

Despite the differences, there is harmony.

"The Lord has blessed us with unity," said one of the nuns at the Monastery of the Infant Jesus here. "That's unusual for 40 people, especially women."

And they are not taking the blessing for granted here. Seven days a week, 24 hours a day, at least one of the nuns is offering prayers and thanks.

The prayers are the lifeblood within the walls of the monastery.

"We are a powerhouse of prayer," said Mother Mary Agnes, prioress of the Dominican monastery.

Twelve nuns from Detroit established the facility here in 1945, at the request of the bishop of the Galveston diocese.

The monastery is cloistered, meaning that once a nun decides on a life of prayer she is only allowed to leave the 75-acre compound on infrequent occasions. "We go out for medical purposes and to vote. A sister may go home to visit a seriously ill mother or father," the prioress said.

Visitors are welcome in the chapel but are not allowed within the walls of the monastery.

"The enclosure really enables us to be free for the Lord," said Mother Mary Agnes. "It is our mountain, our desert, our wilderness for contemplation and communion with the Lord."

The nuns are warmly charming women who try sincerely to explain their way of life to outsiders. They all wear simple rings — a symbol of their marriage to the Lord.

"We've been asked to pray for just about everything. A new job, a promotion, anything," the prioress said.

While the prayers are the heart of life within the walls, there are many chores to be done to maintain the facility.

Oklahoma fair is international

Representatives from around the world, including six communist countries, will participate in the International Show at the State Fair of Oklahoma Sept. 22-Oct. 1.

Poland, Cuba, Bulgaria and the German Democratic Republic will attend the fair for the first time and join two previous exhibitors, the U.S.S.R. and Czechoslovakia.

The Eastern European Travel Board has only exhibited at two other expositions, in Brussels, Belgium, and Tokyo, Japan. The travel board has booked 3,025 square feet of exhibit space at the Oklahoma Fair, making it the largest exhibit at this year's show.

Bangladesh and Haiti will also be represented at the fair for the first time.

The day begins at 5:30 a.m. with the first of many prayer sessions. Throughout the day the nuns go quietly about their tasks.

"We keep silent except for necessary speaking," said Sister Mary William, a resident here since 1946.

The sisters also take to the sewing machines to make religious garments they sell — mail-order — around the nation.

"We were farmers in the beginning but we just could not make a living," said Sister Mary William, a Texas City native.

The nuns also do much of the yard work. Clad in white habit and black veil, one of the sisters puts a tractor through its paces. Sister Mary Gabriel said.

Unlike some orders, the Dominicans say they have no problem finding young women who want to join their way of life. Young women who feel the "call" come here for six weeks to get a taste of the life. Then they head home to think it over.

If they choose to return, they begin five years of training. Mother Mary Agnes said the monastery recently has been averaging three new nuns per year.

The monastery is a democracy. The prioress is elected by a majority vote and serves a three-year term.

"There's no campaigning though," said Sister Mary Gabriel. "We depend on the Holy Spirit."

Sister Mary William recalled that life has changed here to some extent since she arrived in 1946.

In the past, visitors spoke with the nuns through a metal grate. Now only a long, low rail separates the residents from the outside guests.

The monastery has retained its devotion to traditional values but some trappings of modern society have crept behind the walls.

"These are wash and wear habits," confided Sister Mary William with a smile.

Producing small rodeos fulfills black's dream

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's a nice American scene: a hot summer afternoon, a small town, a rodeo. Meet the man who runs it. Elmer Anderson and his wife, a bull named Frankenstein. Anderson is said to be the only black rodeo contractor in the Midwest, and for him it's the fulfillment of a childhood dream.

By SUE BLAKELY
For The Associated Press
STROUD, Okla. (AP) — It's a small rodeo — the kind most people have long since forgotten — mid-afternoon on a hot and dusty Oklahoma Saturday. The old-fashioned wooden bleachers at the Sac and Fox Intertribal Rodeo Grounds are less than half-filled. A few spectators lean against the fence. Others sprawl on car hoods to watch in comfort, drinking coke and eating fry bread from the concession stand.

Almost everyone knows everyone else. And the faces — Indian, black, white — are almost all teenage. Along the back fence, the young would-be cowboys check their gear. The stock behind the chutes are quiet, moving leisurely to shift their weight or swat an occasional fly.

"This isn't a typical rodeo," explains Elmer Anderson, Circle A Rodeo Ranch and Co., Guthrie, Okla. "It's a just to sort of help them raise a little money, you know, and I had an open date."

Elmer and his wife Charlene package rodeos for high

A WOULD-BE COWBOY "rides" his bucking mount during a summer afternoon rodeo near Stroud, Okla. The event was run by Elmer Anderson of Circle A Rodeo Ranch and Co. of Guthrie, Okla. Circle A packages small rodeos for high schools, roundup clubs, pioneer days and whatever excuse midwesterners can think up for getting together. "It's a real frontier," says Anderson, the only black contractor in the midwest. "And it's highly competitive."

week — almost one a day in mid-summer. On some weeks, they have three shows scheduled.

It's his stock that Elmer is proudest of and most concerned about. "I started trading livestock when I was 18," he says. "You know, buying one or two animals and trading them off for one better. Finally, two years ago, I traded in a large number of cattle for a start on the rodeo stock."

Some of the stock comes from special rodeo auctions. "Frankenstein was bought from another rodeo company when they sold out," Elmer says. "He'd been raised in south Texas and bucked as a calf. He went to the IRA finals that year."

Some of the stock comes from people who have bought a hard-to-handle animal. "You'll find a maverick in almost any strain," Elmer says. "Some horses are just hardheaded and stubborn. When someone brings us one, we'll try it out. If it shows promise, we put it in the string."

Elmer looks on his animals as athletes. "The more an animal bucks, the more he enjoys it," he says. "That bucking's bred in them; it's hereditary. An animal's judged in the arena for his athletic ability — how he turns and spins — how high he jumps and how often — how high he kicks."

"That means you've got to keep him in shape, keep him well-cared for. He has to be grain-fed heavily, with extra feed during the peak of the season because of the constant travel and strenuous exercise."

Elmer is very particular about the animals. "We won't buck a horse or a bull but once a day because we want our animals to stay in good shape, to be healthy and vigorous," he says.

Circle A stock enjoys a good reputation for showmanship, and Elmer hopes to enlarge his business to sell stock to other rodeo contractors next year. Prices for such stock aren't cheap. "There's not a bull out there right now I'd sell for under a thousand dollars," he says. "I've turned down two thousand for some — and Frankenstein, well, he ain't for sale."

In the pen behind the chutes, Frankenstein's slick blonde brahma head with its heavy horns and sleepy eyes towers above the others. "He really lays down the law in the arena," Elmer says, "but he's just a big baby to handle outside — no trouble at all. Of course you have to like him — and have respect for him too."

Now in their mid-thirties, the Andersons, who have two children, are beginning to feel a little closer to their goal. "We've done without a lot to get where we are," Elmer says, "but we're beginning to feel more secure."

The three-pronged operation is now a small corporation. Elmer still hires only one or two regular hands, but on weekends with more than one rodeo, he'll hire 6 or 8 men for each rodeo.

The Andersons live in a modest ranch home which Elmer built himself last year after their old home was destroyed by fire.

Last winter's extra three weeks of snow caught them short of hay for their animals, but this year, they've already found a way to winter the off-season and perhaps come out ahead. "We've contracted to hold indoor rodeos in Harrah about 30 miles from Guthrie," says Charlene. "That should help us pay the winter feed bill and keep the animals in shape as well."

This Saturday's rodeo has all the airs of a community outing.

There are bucking broncs, calf roping and steer wrestling, with spectators urging on the participants by name.

The bulls are last. Everybody's been waiting for them.

Elmer grins and pushes his hat back on his forehead.

Score one more cowboy for Frankenstein. And one more rodeo for Elmer.

Foreign briefs

LONDON (AP) — The Home Office says it rejected an appeal from former Labor cabinet minister John Stonehouse for parole from his seven-year prison sentence.

Stonehouse, 53, disappeared from a Miami, Fla., beach in 1974 and fled to Australia. He was convicted of fraud, theft and forgery in 1976.

Mike O'Dell, a friend, said Stonehouse has suffered four heart attacks in prison and "staying there could kill him."

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Technical problems, including a citywide power failure, caused confusion at the closing session of the U.N. Conference on Technical Cooperation.

The two-week session adjourned Tuesday on schedule after delegates from 140 countries approved a 38-point document urging poorer nations to exchange more of their own technology and rich nations to help them pay for it.

Translators, typists and duplicating machine operators couldn't work for about an hour when the power failed. While the final speeches were being made, the microphones in the conference hall stopped working.

LONDON (AP) — Alice Empleton, believed to be the oldest person in Britain, was 108 today. She invited 50 guests to her birthday party, including Polly Wilson, aged 103 and Florence Evans, who is 100.

Mrs. Empleton has been a widow for 40 years and lives in an old folks' home at Sawston, near Cambridge.

PARIS (AP) — Mrs. Michel Ploche says her husband has been in a Bangkok jail since Aug. 25 for throwing a bronze statuette of Buddha on the ground during a row with Thai customs officials at the Bangkok airport.

"My husband showed a receipt for the statuette, but they accused him of stealing it from a sacred temple," Mrs. Ploche told a radio interviewer. "They told us it was forbidden to take it out of the country. In anger, my husband threw it on the ground."

"The customs officers accused my husband of sacrilege. They beat him with truncheons and then took him away to a police station."

She said Ploche would not be brought to trial for three months.

TOKYO (AP) — A major Japanese producer of whisky and beer, Suntory, is negotiating to build an $80 million brewery in China and teach the Chinese how to run it, the newspaper Asahi reports from Peking.

Asahi's Peking correspondent said the plant would produce more than 105 million quarts of beer a year, at least 66 percent more than China's present total production of 63 million to 74 million quarts.

Yankees take over first place

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

It took the New York Yankees 144 games, but the World Champions are back where they say they expected to be all along — first place.

The Yankees took over the top spot in the American League East for the first time this season Wednesday night with a 7-3 victory over Detroit Boston, which had led the division since May 23 and once held a 14-game lead on New York, dropped one-half game back when it lost to Cleveland 2-1.

"It was just a matter of time because we took over first place," said rookie pitcher Jim Beattie, who allowed just three hits in 6-1/3 innings before yielding to relief ace Rich Gossage.

"I knew we'd be in first place," added Mickey Rivers who, along with Lou Piniella, tripled in a four-run fourth inning that keyed the Yankee win. "I just didn't know if we'd keep it."

Piniella, whose bat is the hottest of the legion of hard-hitting Yankees, downplayed the accomplishment.

"We're World Champions," said Piniella. "You can't get excited about moving into first place with 17 or 18 games to play. You get too excited and all of a sudden you fall on your rear."

It has been the Red Sox who have been falling of late, however. While New York has won 35 of 49 games since July 25, when Manager Bob Lemon took over, including a four-game sweep of the Red Sox in Boston last weekend, Don Zimmer's Sox have dropped 11 of their last 14.

"We just ain't scoring no runs," said Zimmer, who has decided to bench slumping first baseman George Scott. "I went as far with the man as you can possibly go. It's not just one man, though. There ain't many moves I can make. That's one I can make."

Elsewhere in the AL, Milwaukee closed to four games out with a 7-5 verdict over Baltimore, and Kansas City increased its Western Division lead to 3 1/2 games over California with a 9-1 victory over Oakland while the Angels were beaten 6-4 by Texas.

Dan Briggs was the hero for Cleveland, making a sensational sliding catch with the bases loaded and two outs in the second inning, then tripling and scoring the winning run on a squeeze bunt by Tom Verzer in the fifth.

Brewers 7, Orioles 5

Milwaukee jumped to a 7-0 lead, then held off the Orioles. Sal Bando homered and drove in three runs for the Brewers and Robin Yount homered.

Royals 9, A's 1

Dennis Leonard and Steve Mingori combined on a seven-hitter and Hal McRae drove in four runs, two with a homer. The game was delayed two hours by rain in the top of the seventh inning.

Rangers 6, Angels 4

A pair of two-run homers by Toby Harrah, the second in the bottom of the ninth, boosted Texas to its seventh straight victory over California in Arlington.

Spinks must fight like challenger

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — He's got to fight like he's the challenger," said George Benton, who has been helping Leon Spinks get ready to defend the World Boxing Association heavyweight title against Muhammad Ali Friday night in the Superdome.

Benton, who helped trainer Sam Solomon prepare Spinks for his victory over Ali last Feb. 15 and who worked in former champion Joe Frazier's corner, is well aware of the Ali mystique.

"Anytime Ali throws one punch, he still might get credit for three," Benton said Wednesday.

But the mystique won't help Ali if Spinks is in good condition, said Benton. "The key is condition. I've only been here two weeks. I can't tell you how hard he's been training before."

But the former middleweight contender said he has seen indications that Spinks was reaching peak condition, such as snapping at aides.

Benton thinks Ali is in shape, but "he's in 36-year-old shape" and if Spinks is physically ready "it wouldn't surprise me if he stopped him."

"I want him to gorilla him. I want him to beat on him. He wants to be left alone. He lost under pressure as a young man (to Frazier in 1971) and now he's 36," said Benton.

Benton doesn't hesitate to compare the 25-year-old Spinks with Frazier. "There's a lot of Frazier in this kid," he said.

"He doesn't have Frazier's seasoning or his experience, but he does have the heart and the desire."

"He doesn't turn on the panic button. He turns on natural instinct. He fights for survival," added Benton.

Benton views Spinks' upset of Ali as a big psychological boost for Spinks and a "downer" for Ali.

"Leon knows he can go 15 rounds," said Benton. "Before he wasn't sure, but now he is confident. Now it's a matter of reverse psychology. Ali's worried. He thought he could stay away for 10 rounds and Leon would run out of gas. Now Ali's worried about running out of gas."

It's all up to Spinks; it's out of Ali's hands completely, according to Benton.

"Leon Spinks can win, but Ali can't win," he said. "Leon Spinks can lose."

Both fighters concluded training Wednesday and were to be officially weighed in today for the fight which will be televised by ABC beginning about 10 p.m. EDT Friday night.

Weigh-ins will be held Friday for the other three title fights on the card — WBA light heavyweight champion Victor Galindez of Argentina vs. Mike Rossman of Turnersville, N.J.; World Boxing Council featherweight champion Danny "Little Red" Lopez of Alhambra, Calif. vs. Juan Malvarez of Argentina, and WBA bantamweight champion Jorge Lujan of Panama vs. Alberto Davila of Pomona, Calif.

Krueger falls to teen-ager

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Maria Fernandez reached the quarter-finals of a professional event for the first time here Wednesday as she upset second-seeded Marise Krueger, 6-3, 6-3, in the second round of the Women in Tennis International tournament.

The Torrance, Calif., native, who had to go through qualifying to secure a berth in the tournament, played an aggressive serve and volley game to keep her South African opponent from establishing a rhythm in the match.

From 3-3 in the first set, Fernandez surrendered only 10 points in six succeeding service turns following a left-handed twist serve into the net at every opportunity.

The only seed to survive the day's play was No. 3 Janet Newberry.

Phils, Dodgers head for replay

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

East is East and West is West — and the Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers are trying to keep it that way.

The Phillies and Dodgers, last year's National League playoff teams, appear to be heading for a replay this season as the pennant race heads into its final weeks.

The Phillies beat the Chicago Cubs 6-2 Wednesday night to hold onto their four-game lead in the East and reduce their division-winning "magic number" to 14 games.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, improved their lead in the West to seven games with a 6-0 decision over the Houston Astros, cutting their clinching number to 10.

The Phillies won behind a powerful pitching performance by Dick Ruthven, who had a perfect game through six innings and finished with a six-hitter.

"I wasn't greatly disappointed that I didn't get the no-hitter," said Ruthven, winning his 12th game in 16 since coming to Philadelphia from Atlanta in June. "It takes so much luck to get a no-hitter. And you can't afford to get so emotional that you can't handle a game."

The Dodgers won their game by virtue of Steve Garvey's hot night and a strong pitching performance by Bob Welch. The Los Angeles first baseman went 4-for-4 to lead a 12-hit attack and Welch hurled a four-hitter.

Dodgers 6, Astros 0
Along with Garvey's hitting exploits, Steve Yeager slugged a two-run homer and Rick Monday drove in two runs with a single and a sacrifice fly off loser Ken Forsch, 9-6.

Welch, 6-3, struck out four and walked none in snapping a personal three-game losing streak. After an infield single by Terry Puhl to lead off the fourth, the rookie right-hander retired the final 17 Astros in order.

Padres 6, Reds 2
Broderick Perkins' two-run double and Fernando Gonzalez's run-scoring triple keyed a four-run sixth inning as San Diego snapped the Cincinnati Reds' four-game winning streak.

Braves 5, Giants 3

Dale Murphy and pinch-hitter Cito Gaston belted run-scoring singles in the 12th inning to lift Atlanta over San Francisco.

Right-hander Phil Niekro, bidding to become the first 19-game winner in the National League, worked the first 10 innings and didn't allow an earned run. Reliever Gene Garber, 4-5, was the winner with two innings of work.

Expos 4, Mets 3

Gary Carter hit a two-run homer and rookie Scott Sanderson and Mike Garman combined on an eight-hitter to help Montreal beat New York.

Top seeds win at World of Doubles

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (AP) — Top-seeded Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan of South Africa took easy 6-2, 6-4 victories over Victor Pecci of Paraguay and Lito Alvarez of Spain Wednesday night to advance to the second round of the World of Doubles Tennis tournament at The Woodlands Country Club.

U.S. Open champions, Stan Smith, Sea Pines, S.C., and Bob Lutz, San Clemente, Calif., seeded fourth in this tournament, eliminated Jurgen Fassbender, West Germany, and Roger Taylor, Great Britain, 6-4, 6-2.

The number-three seeds, Raul Ramirez, of Mexico and Freddie McNairst of Chevy Chase, Md., beat Bill Scanlon, Dallas, and George Hardie, Long Beach, Calif., and Sherwood Stewart, Houston, and Marty Riessen, Amelia Island, Fla., stopped the hopes of Cliff Letcher, Austria, and Paul Kronk, Edina, Minn., 6-4, 6-4.

Two second-round matches were played today. Mark Edmondson, Australia, and John Marks, Australia, def. Victor Amaya, Holland, Mich., and John James, Australia, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, and eighth-seeded Hank Pfister, Bakersfield, Calif., and Gene Mayer, Mendham, N.J., defeated the 1977 Wimbledon champions, Ross Case, Australia, and Geoff Masters, Australia, 7-6, (7-3), 7-5.

Collins to start for Browns if Pruitt's calf doesn't heal

BEREA, Ohio (AP) — Rookie Larry Collins has yet to carry the ball from scrimmage in a National Football League game, but he'll be starting in place of Greg Pruitt if the Cleveland Browns' star running back can't play Sunday in Atlanta.

Pruitt, who has gained 226 yards in 44 carries so far this year, has been hobbling around the Browns' Baldwin-Wallace College training facilities on crutches this week. But he's still hoping that icepacks and continued treatment will reduce swelling in his severely bruised and left calf to allow him to play against the Falcons.

"I've never missed a game yet," the 5-foot-10, 190-pound veteran said.

Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano said he talked it over with offensive backfield coach Jim Garrett and decided Collins would get the call if Pruitt is unavailable.

Pruitt, who already was bothered by a constant backache, suffered the bruise in the fourth quarter of last Sunday's 13-10 overtime victory over Cincinnati.

"We're going to have to watch from day to day with Greg," Rutigliano said. "And we believe Larry is ready. He was an integral part of our win last Sunday (with a 41-yard kickoff return in overtime), and that should help his confidence. Now we think he can move into the backfield."

The speedster from Texas A&I, drafted in the fourth round, agrees with his coach.

ered to decide compensation when the teams disagree.

Such is not the case with Webster, the 7-foot-1 center who led Seattle into the NBA final series last spring. It quickly became clear that the Sonics and Knicks were far apart, and last weekend, Seattle owner Sam Schulman asked O'Brien to step in.

O'Brien has given the teams until Friday to decide compensation on their own. Otherwise, he will make a ruling.

The Webster case is O'Brien's second of the summer. He had to step in after the Golden State Warriors and Houston Rockets could not reach agreement following the Rockets' signing of star forward Rick Barry. O'Brien gave Golden State a choice of guard John Lucas and $100,000 or a first-round draft choice and $350,000. The Warriors went for Lucas and $100,000.

A total of 12 players switched teams this summer after becoming free agents, the most recent being Tom Boswell, formerly of Boston, who signed with Denver last week. In one instance — the Knicks' signing of Buffalo guard Mike Glenn — a special clause in the player's contract absolved the team from any compensatory obligation.

In three cases, the teams reached agreement on their own. Atlanta sent a draft choice and cash to Indiana after signing forward Dan Roundfield. Indiana sent a draft choice to Boston for signing guard Kevin Stacom, and Los Angeles agreed to send "future considerations" to Chicago for signing forward Derek Dickey.

The Barry case is the only other one of the 12 that has been closed.

Besides the Pacers' signing of English and the Knicks' signing of Webster, the other unresolved cases are Boston's signings of Houston center Kevin Kunnert and Washington center Joe Pace, Denver's signing of New Jersey center Kim Hughes and Boswell, and Golden State's signing of San Diego forward Tom Abernethy.

Free agent cases remain unresolved in the NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — While the New York Knicks and Seattle SuperSonics haggle over what price to pay for the Knicks' signing of Marvin Webster, six other free agent compensation cases remain unresolved in the National Basketball Association.

One of those signings occurred more than three months ago, when Indiana lured forward Alex English from Milwaukee. However, the Bucks are in no hurry to deal the matter.

"Looking at the players they have, we're pretty sure we would not be able to get the one or two we want," Bucks executive John Steinmiller said Wednesday. "Right now we're thinking in terms of cash and draft choices, so there's no immediate hurry to get it settled."

So even though training camps open this weekend and the start of the season is less than a month away, the Bucks have no plans to submit the dispute to NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, who is empowered to decide compensation when the teams disagree.

Such is not the case with Webster, the 7-foot-1 center who led Seattle into the NBA final series last spring. It quickly became clear that the Sonics and Knicks were far apart, and last weekend, Seattle owner Sam Schulman asked O'Brien to step in.

Honor Roll announced by AP

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

Bryan High School Coach Merrill Green tutored Texas A&M star Curtis Dickey as a schoolboy, so when Green speaks on the subject of superlative performances, the coffee cups stop tinkling and all the arm-chair quarterbacks strain forward to hang on his every word.

This week they got an ear-full after Bryan senior tailback Columbus Harris rushed 35 times for 201 yards and scored all three touchdowns in an impressive 22-14 victory over tough Lufkin.

"Yard for yard this early in the season and against a tough opponent, I've never seen a performance like it, it was the best I've ever seen," Green said.

Harris' performance earned him mention this week in The Associated Press Schoolboy Honor Roll, but he's likely just as pleased with the praise of his coach.

"They were all tough yards too," said Green, who watched Dickey roll up 201 yards against Waco in 1975. "He had a 46 yards run, and that was his longest, but most of them were just tough."

Harris gained 484 yards for Bryan as a sophomore but did not play last season because he was scholastically ineligible. Harris' rushing total accounted for most of Bryan's 252 yards in total offense as fullback Alan Fritsche didn't carry the ball during the game.

Joining Harris on the AP Honor Roll is senior fullback-linebacker Lawrence Dellinger of Class B Agua Dulce who rushed 15 times for 106 yards, caught five passes for 44 yards and scored his team's only touchdown in an 8-6 victory over Banquette.

Dellinger was just as offensive to Banquette on defense. He blocked a field goal attempt, intercepted a pass and contributed 10 tackles and two assists.

Sophomore tailback Bryan Ward and defensive end Todd Landrum combined efforts to help Bridge City muscle out a 7-6 upset over Class 4-A Vidor.

Ward rushed 146 yards on 25 carries and scored the winning touchdown on a 63-yard run on the third play of the game. Landrum recovered a fourth quarter fumble to stop one drive and batted a pass on a two-point conversion attempt with 2:59 left in the game.

In other performances: --Dallas Pinkston's Dwine Wright rushed 14 times for 227 yards including a 70 yards touchdown run in a 41-0 rout of Waco Jefferson Moore.

--Franklin's Dennis Varvel, who rushed over 1,000 yards his freshman and sophomore years, apparently has recovered from knee surgery. He gained 228 yards on 31 carries and scored three times in a 22-7 victory over Thorndale.

--Quarterback Max McGhee of Wink completed only six passes in a 57-13 thrashing of Dell City, but five went for touchdowns. McGhee also rushed four times for 52 yards and returned a punt 48 yards for a touchdown.

--Angleton quarterback Kyle Gandy hit eight of 17 passes for 257 yards and three touchdowns in a surprising 36-6 upset of Brazoswood.

Irwin hopes to end frustration

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hale Irwin began today's Texas Open with $178,441 in 1978 winnings, making him sixth on the PGA money winning list. A good season, right?

"Frustratingly good," said Irwin, who hasn't won a tournament since capturing last year's Texas Open.

"Monetarily, it's been good, but in terms of victories, it hasn't been good," he said. "I've played well enough to win, but for one reason or another I haven't."

"I noticed on my registration that they didn't give me any discount on strokes this year for being defending champion," he quipped. "It's an ego trip but it doesn't help that much."

The $200,000 tournament is being played on the soggy, 6,525-yard Oak Hill Country Club course. Wednesday's pro-am was called off after more than four inches of rain briefly flooded some fairways.

The storm also uprooted a tree between the 18th green and

Blow by blow

By Joe Blobaum, Sports Editor

Last week was a pleasant surprise. With little more than a cursory knowledge of Texas schoolboy football, I managed to guess correctly on five out of seven games. Canadian's one-point victory over Phillips and the Pampa-Hereford games were the misuses. Always hoping for an improvement on the young season's record, here's the games for this week.

Dumas at Pampa
Would you believe I was home-towning when I picked the Harvesters last week? Well, I wasn't. Each team won a half, but Hereford won its portion a little more convincingly.

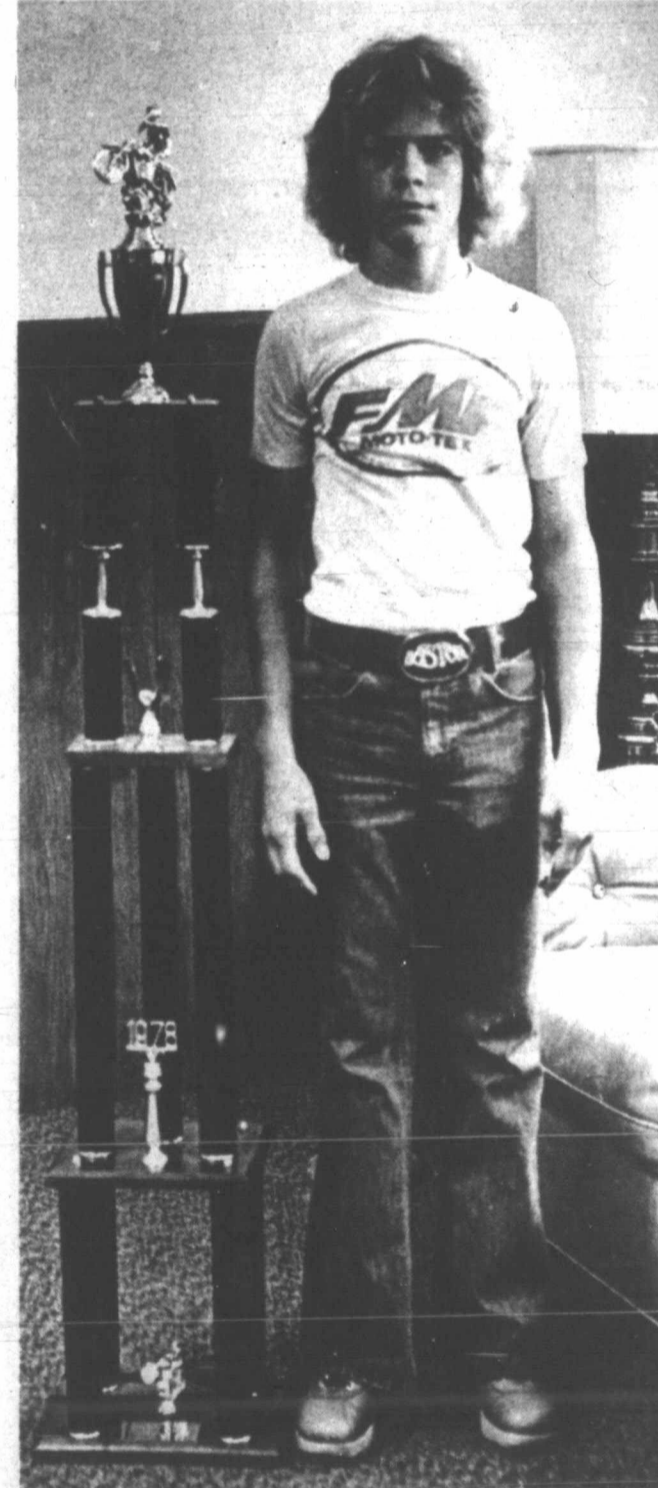

This week, Pampa will have to prove to Dumas early that it can't be pushed around. If they can hold their own in the early going, the Harvesters should be in it all the way. If they don't, we could have an instant replay of the Hereford game. The returns of Louis Cox, Richard Wuest and possibly Rick Dougherty would help, but the Demons, who dropped from third to eighth in the state's AAA polls after last week's heartbreaking loss to Palo Duro, are still a three-point favorite.

Stinnett at Canadian
Quite frankly, I was surprised to see Canadian top Phillips last week on the Black Hawks' home field. The Wildcats are at home this time around, but I guess you can count me in the ranks of non-believers, since I like the Rattlers, who are supposed to have some speed, by six.

Raiders sign Plunkett

OAKLAND (AP) — Veteran quarterback Jim Plunkett, who said "I didn't think I was quite through at 30," has chosen to try to prove his point as a reserve quarterback with the Oakland Raiders.

Plunkett signed three one-year contracts with the Raiders Tuesday when he had his first workout with the team. His 1979-80 contracts depend on his ability to make the team, Ron Wolf, director of player operations said.

No salary figures were disclosed. Guesses on Plunkett's salary prior to his being waived Aug. 28 by the San Francisco 49ers ranged upward from $150,000.

Plunkett, a 1970 Heisman Trophy winner at Stanford and the National Football League Rookie of the Year with New England in 1971, had offers from at least four other clubs, his attorney said last week. The others were believed to have been Green Bay, the New York Giants, Baltimore and Houston.

"There were several reasons I picked the Raiders," Plunkett said. "One was that I wanted to stay in the Bay Area. I just bought a new home in Palo Alto."

"The fact that they are a contender was also intriguing...I gave consideration to Oakland's offensive line. They do have a good line here."

"We felt we had an opportunity to get Jim Plunkett as a backup, and, we thought, along with Kenny and Dave Humm, we would be in pretty good shape at that position," Coach John Madden said.

Astro-Graph

September 15, 1978

This coming year you could be involved in several interesting partnerships. Success is likely if your counterpart offers talents you lack. If he or she doesn't, the opposite may be true.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make an extra effort today to be cooperative. Failure to be a team player could lead you to do something that would oppose your best interests. Having trouble selecting a career? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may find it necessary today to put your foot down in a situation where someone might try to cut into benefits to which you alone are entitled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Socially you'll garner a lot of oohs and aahs today, but take it in stride. If you come on as less than humble the responses could turn negative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Normally you enjoy being your own person, but today you could try to do things the same way someone you're impressed with does things. You'll fall flat.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be sure you're well-grounded in facts before you get into debates with friends today.

Your statements will be challenged for verification.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Be certain that you can handle old financial obligations before you assume any new ones today. Your books had better balance or you could get yourself into a mess.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not let unqualified associates make important decisions for you today, even if their intentions are meant to be helpful. Get expert advice where needed.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Playing the Good Sam role may have some drawbacks today. Ironically, your noble purpose could be misinterpreted by the one you seek to help.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Petty individuals are hard for you to handle today. They could bring you down to their level instead of you bringing them up to yours.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Do not discuss your accomplishments today in front of one you know is a trifle jealous of you. You'll receive only criticism.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) It's best you bite your tongue today rather than say uncomplimentary things to companions. Put-downs from you will evoke harsher ones in return.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be very careful in joint ventures today. If you let your guard down, conditions could shift so as to prove to be personally unprofitable.

Super growing weather boosts corn prospects

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Super growing weather in major production areas this summer has boosted 1978 corn harvest prospects to a record of 6.8 billion bushels, an average yield of more than 100 bushels an acre.

The new estimate, based on field conditions as of Sept. 1, was up 5 percent from corn crop indications a month ago, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

By comparison, last year's corn harvest — which was a record then — was 6.37 billion bushels.

The average corn yield this year is expected to be a record 100.3 bushels an acre against 91 last year and the previous high of 97 bushels an acre in 1972.

Four Corn Belt states were reported with average yields exceeding 100 bushels an acre. Together, they are expected to produce 58 percent of the entire U.S. corn harvest this year.

They are Illinois 116 bushels an acre and a production of more than 1.24 billion bushels, Indiana 107 and 631 million, Iowa 115 and 1.39 billion and Nebraska 107 and 674 million.

Howard Hjort, the department's chief economist, said the estimate of 6.8 billion bushels was somewhat of a surprise but that weather in the Corn Belt has been "about ideal" for the crop.

Asked about the possibility expressed by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland recently that cash corn prices might drop to .50 a bushel — they averaged $1.99 nationally in mid-August — Hjort said some farmers in areas where storage space is scarce a harvest time "could very well" see prices that low.

But Hjort said he thought this would not be typical and farmers "can prevent prices going to disaster levels" by taking out government loans on their crops and participating in USDA's three-year grain reserve program to store excess corn until prices go up.

Although many producers are not eligible for loans and the reserve because they did not participate in the federal acreage set-aside program this year, Hjort said he thought enough corn is eligible to keep prices generally from sagging to the $1.50 level or lower.

But in any case, he said, this year's corn crop is larger than will be needed to meet domestic and export requirements in the year ahead.

To the extent that the huge supply does keep feed prices from going up, this will help stimulate livestock feeding in future months, Hjort said.

The soybean crop was estimated at a record of more than 1.77 billion bushels, slightly more than last month's estimate. Wheat production, at 1.79 billion bushels, was down 2 percent from the August estimate.

Cotton output was estimated at 11.2 million bales, down 6 percent from prospects Aug. 1, the department said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, plans to push for tougher acreage curbs on 1979 feed grain production when he meets today with Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

The meeting has been scheduled for some time, ostensibly so Grant can report on his recent trip to China. Bergland is scheduled to go there in November.

However, Grant also plans to tell Bergland that he should act quickly on 1979 feed grain acreage set-aside rules and not wait until Nov. 15, the deadline when basic parts of the program must be announced.

The Farm Bureau's board of directors recently adopted a resolution to that effect. Grant will urge an expanded set-aside program aimed at producing a 1979 corn crop no larger than 5.5 billion bushels, compared with the record harvest of 6.8 billion bushels estimated for this fall by USDA.

Last month, Bergland said wheat farmers will have the same acreage set-aside rules for the 1979 harvest that they had this year, but he has not indicated a decision on next year's feed grain program.

Meanwhile, Bergland has continued to promote the three-year grain reserve program as a way for farmers to boost market prices of wheat, corn and other grain.

Under that program, grain is stored by farmers for up to three years so less of it is available for market use.

Some measure of success has been attributed to the wheat part of the reserve — 392.8 million bushels of wheat in storage, as of Sept. 8 — but the corn reserve until recently has been lagging far behind Bergland's expectations.

In recent weeks, however, farmers have been committing more corn to the reserve. As of Sept. 8, 234.8 million bushels were in the program, up almost 25 million in a week.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A field report received by the Agriculture Department indicates anti-smoking forces in Britain are seeking tougher government rules on tobacco promotion.

The report said Tuesday a group called "Action on Smoking and Health" wants a new independent authority to control tobacco advertising.

The group wants an impartial body to monitor all tobacco sales promotion activities planned by tobacco companies," it said.

Other proposals include "curtailment of special promotional mailings to other than known smokers, further restrictions on advertising and banning of offers of free cigarettes," the report said.

National briefs

AUBURN, Wash. (AP) — Police are cracking down on people who are fanning out through the Kent Valley, breaking down fences and setting cattle loose in their quest for psychedelic mushrooms.

The object of what has become an annual hunt is the psilocybe variety of mushroom, which produces a psychedelic sensation when eaten. Possession of the mushroom is not illegal.

Police have begun citing the hunters for trespassing and causing property damage. "We used to issue warnings, but we found we were warning the same people two or three times," Police Chief Jay B. Skewes said Tuesday.

LONGMEADOW, Mass. (AP) — Rabbi Israel Silber has sued six members of his congregation for $1 million, charging that he has been assaulted, slandered, harassed and deprived of $24,000 in salary.

Silber, rabbi of Congregation B'nai Jacob, alleges the six slandered him by accusing him "of being dishonest, being untrustworthy, and of being unfit for his duties as rabbi." The suit also claims the six are trying to oust him as rabbi even though he has an automatic renewal clause in his contract that assures him of his job at least until next spring. It also charges that one of the six committed assault and battery against Silber last May 5.

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — An Air Force plane brought home 11 more of America's dead from the Vietnam War to the same stretch of concrete where thousands of servicemen flew off to fight in Southeast Asia.

The wife and parents of one of the dead men and 250 other people were on hand Tuesday as the 11 flag-draped coffins were carried past an honor guard to 11 black hearses.

The remains were turned over to a U.S. congressional delegation last month in Hanoi and had been in Hawaii for formal identification. The bodies of four other servicemen were released in Laos but military authorities in Hawaii are still trying to identify them.

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Michigan plans to build a disposal site for dangerous chemical wastes at a cost of $50 million to $100 million.

Officials of the state Department of Natural Resources said Tuesday that the facility would be the first state-owned project of its kind in the United States and that it was needed to handle the huge amount of toxic chemicals generated within the state.

The facility would include an incinerator and a clay-lined landfill for handling dangerous materials. It also would have waste treatment equipment so some chemicals could be reclaimed for reuse.

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Ignoring warnings of cutbacks in city personnel and services, voters struck down an electric rate increase that would have increased their bills $2 to $10 a month.

Unofficial returns late Tuesday showed 5,451 votes against the increase passed by the City Council and 4,182 votes in favor.

TWO TOKYO AREA residents enjoy facilities of Miyako - yu, a traditional Japanese public bath house in the area. (AP Laserphoto)

Affluence, changing lifestyles sending tradition down the drain

TOKYO (AP) — Affluence and changing lifestyles seem to be sending another Japanese tradition down the drain — the public bath.

Many would lament the passing of what for generations has been a centerpiece of social activity and a symbol of togetherness in these islands. But the latest statistics show that in Tokyo alone, 248 public bath houses have closed down since 1968.

While 2,400 remain in the city, a number are hanging on only through side activities such as coin laundries or through the loyalty of longtime customers. And the cause behind their disappearance — rapid growth of modern apartments with private baths — continues to grow.

It is part of a trend in which reinforced concrete has put the stamp of anonymity on many of Japan's cities, and individualism is taking over increasingly from the old ways of doing things in a group.

The sento — "money bath" in Japanese — dates back more than six centuries. In earlier days, men and women used the same facility without the barrier of modesty, false or otherwise. Outside influences and changing times brought an end to that, and today mixed bathing is found only in a few remote hot springs resorts.

The baths provide two huge tubs, one containing hot water and the other hotter, near scalding, to meet individual desires.

There is space outside the tubs where taps provide water for actual soaping and washing and rinsing off. This is never done in the tub itself, which is only for soaking and relaxing. Like everything else, the cost of the public bath has gone up. Today it costs the equivalent of about 80 cents. Ten years ago it cost about 8 cents.

But there is more to the public bath tradition than just a place to become clean. It has been a place where people meet to discuss the day's happenings, gossip about neighbors while scrubbing another's back, and share the feeling of being together that has been important to the Japanese.

The density of population in Japan's major urban areas — 47 million people, or almost 42 percent of the total, live within a 30 mile radius of Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya — has helped keep the public bath in business.

While Japan's economy has boomed, housing has lagged.

Millions still live in tiny houses or apartments without individual baths or sewer connections.

In most new housing developments, a private bath is taken for granted. Many Japanese aspire to such living as soon as they have the means. An ambitious five-year plan calls for 8.6 million new housing units by 1980, miniature in size, astronomical in cost, but modern.

But those who still use the public bath because they have no choice are legion, and they can be seen regularly on the streets carrying their pans and towels for the day's bathing.

There also are those who do not look lightly on the passing of such institutions. Some have formed bath clubs to encourage the continuation of what they feel is one of the delights of Japanese life.

House Assassinations Committee continues Kennedy death probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Assassinations Committee is challenging Lee Harvey Oswald's widow to further explain why she has changed parts of her story since talking with investigators in the days following President John F. Kennedy's murder.

Marina Oswald Porter, who faces a round of cross-examination as she testifies before the committee for a second day today, told the committee Wednesday that differences in her accounts stemmed from her fright and confusion after the assassination.

She declined Wednesday to say whether she believes Oswald killed Kennedy, but acknowledged she "felt very uneasy" at the time because she thought he might be involved.

"It crossed my mind," she said under questioning. "I hoped Lee was not involved."

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., asked her if, in hindsight, she could say whether Oswald did it.

"I don't know if I am qualified to make statements like that because I knew one side of Lee but I did not know his whole character," she replied.

Asked if Oswald protested his innocence during her one meeting with him at the Dallas jail after the assassination, Mrs. Porter said: "He never told me: 'I am innocent.'"

"Did he look calm?" she was asked.

"He looked scared," she said.

As the questioning ended Wednesday, some committee members were disturbed by discrepancies between some of the details of her current testimony and what she told FBI and Secret Service investigators in the days after her husband was arrested for Kennedy's assassination and then slain himself by Jack Ruby.

One point involved the events of September 1963 when Oswald planned a trip to the Cuban embassy in Mexico City seeking a visa to Cuba.

"I was very upset about it," she recalled. "I did not know if I would ever see him again. I was responsible for one child, and another was on the way. I was quite lost."

Preyer noted that she had told FBI agents after the assassination that Oswald had told her nothing of his plans to go to Mexico City.

She said she told that story to the FBI because she was trying to protect herself and her husband.

She said she was frightened, confused, embarrassed and fearful that she, too, would be prosecuted "for being his wife." She also said her emotional state caused lapses in memory.

At 37, Mrs. Porter seemed confident Wednesday, composed, thoroughly Americanized and speaking English with only a slight accent — far different from the 22-year-old woman who spoke almost no English and was still struggling with the ways of a strange land that Nov. 22, 1963, when Kennedy was shot.

Two years after the assassination, she married Kenneth Porter, a Dallas factory foreman. They now live near Dallas with their son Mark and the Oswald daughters, June Lee and Rachel.

Red Cross offers aid to victims

V.E. Wagner, Diaster Chairman of the Gray County American Red Cross announced Wednesday the chapter will give $500 from their emergency funds for the purpose of helping Texas towns affected by the flood.

Various towns across central and west Texas were affected by the flooding.

The Red Cross opened several shelters providing food and emergency assistance to those communities.

The Texas divisions of the American Red Cross were asked by the ARC to encourage chapters in other Texas towns to help raise funds.

Carter administration uses Eisenhower plan

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — As it warily watches developments in Nicaragua, the Carter administration is taking many of the same steps that the Eisenhower administration took in 1958 regarding Cuba.

At that time, Fidel Castro's guerrilla movement was gaining strength, and the days of strongman Fulgencio Batista were clearly numbered.

The State Department reacted then as it is reacting now to the troubles of Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza. It cut off the shipment of military aid to Batista, just as it has now cut off military aid to Somoza.

In its pronouncements, the Eisenhower administration tried to strike a moderate balance, hoping that a peaceful solution might be found. Of course, it was not. Castro seized power on Jan. 2, 1959.

For the first few months of the Castro regime, the Eisenhower policy seemed to be working. Relations between the two countries were fairly friendly, although Castro did not like the way the American press covered the early purges he conducted.

Castro visited Washington in April 1959 and had a friendly lunch at the State Department. But problems already were marring in the relationship.

Historians still debate whether Castro was a life-long Marxist who waited for a year or two to show his true colors, or whether he was pushed into the arms of the Soviets by clumsy American diplomacy.

Whatever the case, relations soured as the Cuban revolutionaries began expropriating property — Cuban and American — without compensation. The American economic presence was huge. The United Fruit Co., for example, owned 270,000 acres of the island's best sugar land.

By May 1960, Castro established diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. Eisenhower responded by ending American purchases of Cuban sugar, a body blow to the Cuban economy. The Soviets picked up the slack. By January 1961, Eisenhower had severed diplomatic relations. They are still severed, and the Cuban problem has been a chronic headache for the United States.

The analogy between Nicaragua today and Cuba in 1958 is imprecise.

One major difference is the opposition to Somoza. While Castro was clearly the leading figure in the Cuban revolution, there is no corresponding figure in Nicaragua.

There are civilian foes of the Somoza regime, and there are several factions within the Sandinist guerrilla movement.

While all of the Sandinists in-veigh against "Yankee imperialism," only some appear to be doctrinaire Marxist revolutionaries. Others are nationalists, some even church-oriented.

Removing Old Obstacles

FOCUS

Moving from place to place in a government building is something many people do without thinking. But for millions of disabled Americans, it can be a nightmare. Recently, Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano directed that all buildings his agency uses must be specially equipped for disabled persons. HEW buildings now must have wheelchair ramps, doorways wide enough for wheelchairs, and parking and toilet facilities for disabled people. Califano also has ordered that sign language interpreters and audio cassettes be available to help deaf and blind people take part in HEW meetings.

DO YOU KNOW — After what famous U.S. senator was the new HEW building named?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Elliot Richardson is the chief U.S. negotiator at the Law of the Sea Conference.

He's doing something different about smoking

SEATTLE (AP) — You may not know Gary S. Cooper's name, but you've probably seen his face in countless cigarette ads.

"What am I doing about smoking?" Cooper asks in the ad copy. "I'm smoking Vantage."

Now he's doing something else about smoking — he's quit.

The whole country got a look at Cooper, 28, a businessman who was paid $615 for his testimonial about the advantages of smoking Vantage, an R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. brand.

The picture of his face, along with a hand holding a cigarette, appeared nationwide in such publications as TV Guide, Time, Newsweek, Playboy and local newspapers.

Cooper said he was recruited while at a shopping center, after he told a young woman making a survey that he smoked Vantage. She said she stopped 190 people and that he was the first one who said he smoked Vantage, Cooper said.

Cooper's words were taped in an interview, and strung together by an advertising agency.

"I don't believe anybody would think I'd say something like that in a real dialogue," Cooper said. "Those are my words, basically. They just made it sound good."

But he added: "It came out like I was promoting smoking, when all I wanted to do was make a statement."

Cooper said he complained to R.J. Reynolds, but that "they just said they didn't think it'd do much harm."

Besides the $615, Cooper also got 100 to 150 crank calls, sometimes in the early hours of the morning, telling him he was stupid for smoking. "I hung up on most of them," he said.

Cooper, who had been smoking since high school, quit last month and told the advertiser for R.J. Reynolds to stop running the ads. The company said it would.

David Fisher public relations manager for the tobacco company, said Tuesday. "It was Mr. Cooper's option and, out of respect for his wishes, we pulled the ad when he requested it."

Fisher said Cooper's comments were "taped and turned into ad copy" and were not exactly as Cooper spoke them. However, Fisher said, Cooper was sent a copy of the ad and gave written approval of the final version.

No one else in the ads has asked to be removed or, to his knowledge, quit smoking, Fisher said.

College course requirements get review

EDITOR'S NOTE — With Harvard in the forefront, colleges are taking a harder look at what students should be expected to know — and master — by the time they graduate. The trend is to more required courses, less educational free-wheeling. It looks like a collegiate version of the back-to-basics movement.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — At Harvard — yes, even Harvard — a student can glide through four years of the most prestigious liberal arts training in America and never read a novel or study a science.

Courses with names like "Man the Peculiar Primate" and "Aesthetics of Film Comedy" fulfill the basic requirements for a degree.

This freedom — or anarchy, depending on point of view — flowered in the heady days of the late 1960s, when old rules went out of style with haircuts.

But beginning in the fall of 1979, Harvard students will have to take courses in five specific areas, and they'll have to prove they can write, do math and read a foreign language.

The purpose, says Dean Henry Rosovsky, the courtly architect of the new plan, is to make sure students get what they pay for — a liberal education.

The movement at Harvard began four years ago, when Rosovsky sent a letter to the faculty of arts and sciences that complained:

"At the moment, to be an educated man or woman doesn't mean anything. It may mean that you've designed your own curriculum. It may mean that you know all about urban this or rural that. But there is no common denominator."

There are obvious similarities between what is going on at Harvard and other colleges and the "back to basics" movement in America and never read a novel or study a science.

"It seems to me to be legitimate to ask of an educated person the ability to read and write our language properly," says Rosovsky.

"We're not going to ask all our students to do the same thing. They will have a considerable choice."

Harvard will ask students to sample the central themes of human knowledge and take 10 semester-long courses in five areas:

—Literature and the arts; history; social and philosophical analysis; science and math; and foreign culture.

Administrators say many students seem to welcome the trend.

"Students seem to be satisfied to see the pendulum swing back to academic authority," said President Sheldon Hackney of Tulane. "The pressures of the job market have impressed them with the advantages of both grades and rigor. I see very little student resistance and quite a bit of support. They are asking for more guidance."

Several big universities, such as the University of Chicago and Northwestern, have set up new core programs.

One at the University of Missouri resembles Harvard's. Says Assistant Provost Charles Manning: "Overall, there is a feeling that the university has a responsibility to define what a liberal education is and that it should not be totally a student's choice."

The faculty at Amherst, which dropped all course requirements during the 1960s, is debating a return to a mandatory program. And a special task force at Stanford has urged the faculty to "prepare a statement that describes the skills and knowledge any Stanford graduate should have acquired."

Not everyone is willing to go along with the movement. Yale, for instance, recently rejected a proposal for new course requirements.

And at Brown, which abolished core courses in 1969, Dean Walter E. Massey says, "We feel our flexible curriculum is best for our students. It offers the best chance to grow responsibly and learn."

Experts predict that some schools will avoid making requirements tougher because this could scare away potential students.

College costs are already astounding — $8,000 a year some places — and the clientele is diminishing. Between 1979 and 1992, the number of 18-year-olds in the United States will fall 26 percent.

Even when no one is quite satisfied with the current curriculum, fashioning a new one is no easy job in the political world of a college campus.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — He's not very tall, but he is a top comedian. And that's enough to get Flip Wilson into the starting lineup on the University of Kansas football team — temporarily at least.

Wilson is in Kansas this week filming a television special in which he plays a backup quarterback for the Jayhawks.

The script calls for Wilson to step in for the starting quarterback and lead Kansas to a touchdown against Texas A&M.

But that's only the beginning in "Flip Wilson's Salute to Football." Later, he is drafted by the St. Louis Cardinals and takes the team to the Super Bowl.
