Panhandle officials to limit rate hike

Officials from Pampa and 31 other Panhandle cities affected by a proposed 10 percent Southwestern Public Service rate increase agreed Thursday afternoon to try to pass local ordinances limiting the increase to $4.2 million per annum and prohibiting automatic monthly fuel cost adjustments.

The officials met in Canyon to decide what to do following the release of a Public Utilities Commission examiner's report recommending that SPS receive a $15.6 million increase. SPS requested an increase of approximately $22 million, but three consultants hired by the 32 cities recommended the $4.2 figure.

Don Butler, an attorney for the Texas Municipal League and a member of the steering committee formed by the cities, suggested the cities follow the consultants' recommendation and pass the ordinances allowing a $4.2 million increase. He said passage of the ordinance would mean an automatic appeal by SPS to the PUC, which would keep the case open after the PUC's ruling. The ruling, which Butler said would be handed down within the next two weeks, is expected to grant SPS the increase recommended in the examiner's report.

"By passing this ordinance, you have left the door open for future action," said Hereford City Manager Dudley Bayne, chairman of the steering committee.

If the cities pass the ordinances and SPS appeals, the PUC's second ruling will probably uphold the first ruling, Butler said. "Your next step if you don't like the commission ruling is to appeal to the courts," he said.

Members of the steering committee expressed opinions that the cities would have a good legal case for a smaller rate increase because of the excessive profits they said are generated for SPS and its fuel supplying subsidiary, TUCO through monthly fuel cost adjustment billings.

"If there was ever a challenge made, this is probably one of the better ones," said Bill McMorris, one of the consultants hired by the cities. "Other cases of fuel clauses have been only to recover costs."

Several of the city officials said they were not opposed to granting SPS a profitable rate increase, but wanted to eliminate the automatic fuel cost adjustment or regulate it to remove profits. The officials decided to insert a sentence into the proposed model ordinance allowing a $4.2 million rate increase, stating "Provided, that such rates, tariffs and charges shall contain no provision allowing automatic increases in fuel costs."

Asked by Pampa Mayor R.D. Wilkerson if Amarillo planned to stay with the other cities in fighting the proposed increase, Mayor Jerry Hodge said "Amarillo will stay with it. We probably have stronger feelings about it than anyone here."

Following the meeting, Wilkerson said he thought the recommended rate ordinance will be on the city commission's Sept. 26 agenda, probably with the fuel cost adjustment included.

Commissioners approve certificate request

By CARLA BARANAUCKAS
(Pampa News Staff)

The Gray County Commissioners' Court authorized the board of managers at Highland and McLean General Hospital to apply for a certificate of need from the State Health Facilities Commission for repairs for Highland General Hospital.

The authorization came after R.W. Sidwell, chairman of the board of managers and Guy Hazlett, hospital administrator reported to the commissioners' court about the water line breaks that have occurred during the last two weeks.

However, while they approved an application for repairs for the hospital, the commissioners did not approve the actual repair work to be completed. The commissioners said they want to investigate what means can be used to raise money for the repairs.

The only means of raising the money which the commissioners mentioned at the meeting was a bond issue.

The report was much like the old joke "first the good news and then the bad news."

"First, there are good things and there are bad things happening at Highland and McLean General Hospitals," Sidwell said. "The good thing is during the month of August Highland General Hospital showed a paper profit of approximately $68,500. For the first time there showed a paper profit of approximately $4,100 at McLean."

Occupancy rate of Highland General Hospital was 87 patients per day during August of this year compared to 61 patients per day compared to August 1977.

Sidwell explained.

Four new doctors practicing in Pampa have been admitted to staff privileges, he said. One more doctor has been admitted to staff privileges and is expected to begin practicing in Pampa in September, according to Sidwell.

The "bad news" Sidwell presented was the need for repairs in the Highland General Hospital.

The most urgently needed repair is replacement of pipelines in the section of the hospital known as Medical A and Surgical A, Sidwell said.

This part of the hospital was constructed in 1950 when copper piping was unobtainable, Sidwell said.

In 1969 or 1970 a recommendation was made to the board of managers that the hot and cold water lines in Medical A and Surgical A should be replaced, Sidwell explained. "For some reason this was not done," he said.

The urgent need for the repairs was demonstrated recently when water pipelines broke in the original section of the hospital, damaging equipment and forcing hospital officials to move patients from their rooms.

The board of managers had obtained an estimate from an engineering firm in Abilene for the three-phase repair program for the hospital, according to Sidwell.

The first phase of the repair program would include replacement of hot and cold pipelines in the original section of the hospital with copper piping, according to Sidwell. It would also include replacement of pipes in the area of the hospital known as Medical C and Surgical C, he said.

Cost for the repair work would be approximately $363,000, according to estimates from the Abilene firm. The cost would be lowered by approximately $35,000 if Medical C and Surgical C were not included in the repair work.

The commissioners' court authorized the board of managers to apply for the certificate of need, but the commissioners held off on approving the actual repairs until they determine where the money for the repairs can be obtained.

"It looks like a bond issue," Ted Simmons, commissioner from Precinct 4, commented. He added that he thought the residents of Gray County would accept a bond issue for hospital repairs if they were educated about the needs of the hospital.

In other action the commissioners:

—tabled approval of the Walnut Creek Estate subdivision until the commissioners court can draw up guidelines for all subdivisions.

—accepted a bid of $16,813.32 from Culberson - Stowers Chevrolet for the purchase of two flatbed trucks for Precinct No. 3.

—accepted a bid of $3,100 from Robert Brogdon for the sale of two flatbed trucks from precinct 3.

—accepted a bid of $5,280 for the purchase of two dump bodies from Hobb Trailer in Amarillo. The dump bodies will be used for the flatbed trucks purchased from Culberson - Stowers Chevrolet.

Rescue workers, clean up crews get break

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Rescue workers and clean-up crews got a break in the weather today as they sifted debris for bodies in the aftermath of torrential rains that caused at least $15 million in damages and left 10 people dead, including seven children.

"We're definitely out of the woods, at least for the moment," Robert McKechnie, a weather service forecaster, said as partly cloudy skies prevailed over the area Thursday night.

The damage estimate could double when detailed surveys have been finished, city officials reported, and the state Office of Emergency Services said it might have been the city's worst flood.

Ted Sniegocki, a city spokesman, said municipal facilities suffered $3.8 million in damage, private property $7.25 million. He said 400 to 500 homes in Little Rock had been damaged.

The National Insurance Institute estimated damage to vehicles, contractors equipment and mobile homes at about $5 million.

The number of National Guard soldiers on duty was cut from 116 to 28 Thursday but guardsmen still were assigned to patrol one flooded subdivision overnight.

Eight people died in Little Rock and two in Benton, a community of 17,000 some 22 miles southwest of here. Seven of the victims were age 10 or younger. The oldest victim was a 33-year-old mother of five.

They drowned Wednesday after rains of 5 to 13 inches changed placid creeks snaking through central Arkansas into raging torrents that swept out of their banks.

Little Rock's eight dead were in a two-mile area along Rock Creek.

As water receded, rescue workers checked a 30-square-block residential area for bodies in the wreckage emerging from under six feet of water.

"We hope we don't find any more (bodies), but we're afraid we'll find a few more," said Lt.

Ed Ethridge of the Little Rock police.

Darrel McCutcheon and his brother, Paul, died while walking home from school. Their bodies were found in a railroad yard.

The guardsmen, activated by Gov. Robert F. Bennett when 250 firefighters walked off their jobs and were fired, were assigned to protect seven fire stations closed during the strike.

Mid-East summit approaching deadline

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The Middle East summit has produced fresh Egyptian-Israeli contacts but is approaching a deadline at sundown today that could keep it in limbo until next week.

Pursuing his middleman role, President Carter met twice Thursday with Egypt's Anwar Sadat, who later conferred with Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

The summit press office announced belatedly that Ezer Weizman, the Israeli defense minister, also met with Sadat on Wednesday night.

Although Carter has not brought Israel's Menachem Begin and Sadat together at the conference table since Sept. 7, it was apparent that all three delegations were involved in a busy round of meetings.

But spokesman Jody Powell said "more progress and more flexibility are essential" if the parley is to succeed.

Powell, the White House press secretary, said Thursday that Carter's strenuous effort to win Israeli-Egyptian agreement on a "framework for reaching peace" in the Mideast has yet to succeed.

However, Powell seemed to drop a hint that participants remained hopeful of fashioning a comprehensive blueprint for continuing negotiations after Camp David.

Acknowledging that a proposed summit-ending document was being considered, he said, "It is certainly more than three or four paragraphs. I can tell you that."

Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Mideast subcommittee, said in a telephone interview that he has kept in touch with the talks indirectly and declared, "I have not been dampened in my optimism."

Declining to speculate on how or when the talks will end, Powell said he was trying to "strike a balance" between optimism and pessimism.

"An extreme in either direction is simply not justified by the facts of the matter," he said. "It is a very difficult situation in which we have to deal with a considerable amount of uncertainty."

Reminded that he had said 24 hours earlier the summit was in its "final stages," Powell, who is spokesman for all three governments, said:

"How long the final stage will last is a matter of some conjecture. The final stage could be the longest stage."

An American official, who asked not to be identified, said the conference could continue beyond the Jewish Sabbath, a 24-hour period ending at nightfall Saturday.

Responding to a question, Powell acknowledged that "it would be very difficult to end it" before Sunday, at the earliest, should the conference continue beyond sundown today.

Adding to that possibility was the fact that Sadat and his countrymen planned to interrupt their deliberations today for prescribed observances of the weekly Moslem day of prayer.

Teachers facing possible jail sentences

By The Associated Press

Striking teachers in Dayton, Ohio and suburban San Francisco face the possibility of jail sentences for refusing to obey back-to-work orders, while more teachers in Bridgeport, Conn. entered prison after negotiations there broke down again.

The Bridgeport talks collapsed Thursday, shortly after they resumed at a National Guard camp where some 135 teachers were being held for ignoring a judge's back-to-work order.

"They rejected us. They just turned us down cold," said Thomas Flynn, school board president, of the city's offer to submit the dispute to binding arbitration. He also said the city offered to put a "no reprisal" clause in any new contract.

Some 13 Bridgeport union officials have been in jail since Tuesday. They were joined by 63 teachers Wednesday and 59 more on Thursday. Superior Court Judge James Henebry has recessed contempt hearings until Monday.

The strike began Sept. 6, forcing the closing of all Bridgeport schools for the second straight day Thursday, leaving 22,500 students out of classes.

The teachers are demanding a 7.5 percent wage hike, a dental plan and smaller classes. Salaries under the old contract ranged from $9,450 for a starting teacher to $20,180 for top-level teachers.

Dayton teachers also ignored a judge's order banning pickets in the 37,000-pupil district. The Dayton Board of Education asked Thursday that 19 leaders of the striking Dayton Education Association will be found in contempt of court for picketing this southern Ohio city's public schools.

Dayton teachers want an 8 percent to 11 percent salary increase. The average teacher's salary is $14,500.

A judge ordered teachers striking six suburban San Francisco high schools back to work Thursday but teachers said they would continue their walk-out.

San Mateo County Superior Court Judge William Lanam granted a preliminary injunction banning the strike by the 336-member American Federation of Teachers Local 1481 against the Jefferson Union High School District in Daly City.

In Cleveland, school board lawyers Thursday urged Judge Harry A. Hanna's Common Pleas to reverse his decision about ordering an end to the 6-day-old strike by 10,000 teachers and non-teaching employees. On Wednesday the judge refused to order the teachers back to work. Instead he ordered the school board to make an effort to find the funds to negotiate a new contract.

Archie's chair on display

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Archie Bunker doesn't like to give up his favorite chair, but Carroll O'Connor will have to break in a new one this season.

Archie and Edith's chairs are headed for the Smithsonian Institute — making "All in the Family" the first entertainment television program to be represented there.

The chairs go on display Tuesday.

Back in Hollywood, producer Norman Lear ordered replicas of the old chairs made for use in the CBS comedy.

Cosell may be close to abuse

BALTIMORE (AP) — Howard Cosell found the Baltimore Colts' 38-0 loss to Dallas "tragic." But Colts owner Robert Irsay says it's Cosell who has the problem.

Irsay said Thursday that the ABC-TV sports commentator "might be coming dangerously close to abusing the power of the public airways," and should be "investigated by the Federal Communications Commission."

During the Colts-Cowboys contest Sept. 4, Cosell repeatedly blasted the Baltimore team, calling the situation "tragic."

That irked Irsay, who said "A tragedy is when there is a human life at stake. It isn't winning or losing football games."

Couple released; convict still free

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark. (AP) — An elderly Lonoke County couple taken hostage Thursday by four Tennessee escaped convicts, has been released unharmed in Kentucky, Arkansas State Police said today.

No details of the couple's release were available.

Sgt. Jerry Reinold of the state police said Ronald Lyons, 30, the inmate believed to have accompanied the couple to Kentucky, was thought to be on foot somewhere in Kentucky.

OPINION PAGE

State a predator not a protector

THE STATE (i.e., government), it has been said, is a tool; a tool fashioned by men to protect themselves against each other. Man is inherently evil, so the argument goes; therefore, man must be controlled.

So the state, as a tool to control man, comes into existence and is vested with the power to coerce and compel. But, instead of being protected, man soon finds that he is being plundered and enslaved by the state itself. The "tool" has taken over.

But how can this be? A tool is an inanimate object without the capacity to act. Tools cannot take over from their owners.

All of which is true when said of tools in the usual sense of the term. What is overlooked is the simple fact that the state is itself composed of men. Therefore, it is not surprising that the state, vested with the legal power to coerce and compel, turns out to be a predator rather than a protector.

THE SPANISH historian and philosopher Jose Ortega Gasset explains the paradox like this in the chapter entitled "The Greatest Danger, The State" in his treatise "The Revolt of the Masses." He writes:

"Society, that it may live better creates the state as an instrument. Then the state gets the upper hand and society has to begin to live for the state. But, for all that the state is still composed of the members of that society... society... has to live as their slaves — slaves of people with whom they have nothing in common. This is what state intervention leads to: the people are created into fuel to feed the mere machine which is that state. The skeleton eats up the flesh around it. The scaffolding becomes the owner and tenant of the house."

"...It is foolish for the party of law and order to imagine that these "forces of public authority created to preserve order are always going to be content to preserve the order that the party desires. Inevitably, they will end by themselves defining and deciding on the order they are going to impose — which, naturally, will be that which suits them best."

THE MARKET PLACE, too, is a tool: a tool which, like the state, is also made up of people, but with this difference: Whereas the state is organized on the power to coerce and compel, that market place operates on the principle of voluntary exchange.

The one, the state, takes. The other, the market place, offers.

Is energy good news suppressed?

By LOUIS RUKEYSER
(Human Events)

Is the Carter administration deliberately concealing some surprisingly good news — in an effort to frighten Congress into passing a bad energy bill?

That suspicion arises from the uncovering of evidence, just made available to this column, that voluntary conservation has been achieving far more than is generally recognized — or that the administration had been willing to concede publicly. And thereon hangs a fascinating Washington economic mystery story.

The clues began to accu-ulate in March, with what we might call — in true Sherlock Holmes style — the announcement that was not made. For a number of years, the Bureau of Mines published each March a preliminary estimate of the amount of energy the country used the previous year. These figures, suggesting that we are a nation of thoughtless wretches off on a tear, have been used as key data supporting the alleged necessity for massive governmental intervention. Yet, this past March, no estimate was announced.

Now enter one of the best detectives on the energy case. Robert L. Marks, of Siff Oakley Marks Inc., a firm of independent-minded economic and investment counselors in New York. Since everything pertaining to energy has now been transferred to the giant new Department of Energy, Marks called the department the other day to find out whatever happened to the preliminary consumption figures for 1977. But he had no luck in obtaining them: "They said they're waiting until the final results become available."

Marks' first reaction was cautious skepticism: "That may be the real reason — but I wouldn't be surprised if politics are involved." So he checked further. And that's where the story really begins to get interesting.

"I finally found the man who formerly compiled the Bureau of Mines' March estimates," Marks told me. "He still works with the data, and while reluctant to quote an exact figure, he indicated that the increase in energy consumption last year was roughly 2 percent. If so, that's pretty good for a year in which real economic growth was nearly 5 percent.

It is, in fact, surprisingly good. Marks himself had been estimating a 4 percent increase in energy use last year — twice as much as may have actually occurred. And this year, indications so far are the energy demand may be rising only about 2.5 percent, again well under the nation's overall growth, which is likely to be in the 3.5 to 4 percent range.

There's nothing unusual about politicians trying to sit on bad economic news. But why would anyone try to hide what could be very good news — both for the average American family and for the status of the dollar in international trade?

One possible explanation is that the facts no longer seem to support the kind of hysterical policymaking that prompted the establishment of a huge central bureaucracy, the proclamation of "the moral equivalent of war" and the denunciation of U.S. oil companies as profiteers, ripoff artists and general enemies of the people. The fact might, indeed, suggest that it was time for President Carter and his energy secretary, James Schlesinger, to cool the panic talk about "crisis" and rationing, and turn instead to longer-term incentives for U.S. energy production.

As Marks put it to me: "In short, the demand trend looks so good that Schlesinger & Co. could rightly fear that degree of voluntary conservation would further diminish the already limited support for the president's proposals."

"Why should Congress accept this complex, inflationary, growth-inhibiting plan if energy demands are slowing naturally? They shouldn't of course, and hopefully won't — despite Carter's pledge in Bonn (at the Western economic summit) to have some energy policy on the books by year's end."

For the final chapter in this mystery, it would be useful if the administration would finally get up the energy to give us the long-delayed facts.

By OSCAR COOLEY
IF YOU HAD BOUGHT a stock for $35 a share and it had risen to $200 a share, wouldn't you be inclined to sell? So would I.
The U.S. Treasury has some 10,000 tons of gold stored away at Fort Knox, Ky., and in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, most of which it bought for $35 a ounce. It is now selling 750,000 ounces a month in the world market, getting about $200 an ounce. Not a bad profit, even after deducting the cost of storing and policing the stuff for several years.
But profitable or not, the gold sales will help in at least a small way to bolster the value of the dollar, for at $200 an ounce it will bring in $150 million monthly. Thus, it will soak up some of the glut of dollars abroad which has been depressing the dollar's value. Strengthened in value abroad, the dollar also will be valued more highly here.

IN THE LAST HALF century, the dollar has become almost an international currency. Not only banks all over the world but many foreign merchants and other firms accept dollars. They do not put these into general circulation because each country has its own money to which its people are more accustomed, but even this might occur if the dollar became consistently more stable in value than the foreign currency — if, that is, inflation were stamped out in the United States but continued at a high rate in the foreign country.

The dollar's value to either an American or a foreigner depends on what he can buy for a dollar. Dollars spent in foreign countries by our importers, tourists and investors, come back here eventually to be spent for American goods, services, stocks and bonds, real estate, etc. How much will be the dollar's purchasing power when it gets back here, that is the question that concerns the foreigner who accepts dollars. In recent months, the purchasing power has been declining at a rate of about 10 percent per year, and this, understandably, has the foreigners worried.
ONE CAN PICTURE a huge stream of dollars flowing abroad, paying for Middle East oil, Dutch beer, Japanese automobiles, also for hotels and air fare for our tourists; for the necessities of life consumed by our armed forces abroad; for stocks and bonds of foreign firms; for foreign real estate. Even money gifts to relatives and friends over there, as well as cash foreign aid by our government, contribute to the stream.

Likewise, a stream of dollars is flowing back as the foreigners pay us for the great variety of things they purchase here, whether a bushel of corn or an insurance policy.
Over short periods of time there is no surety that the two streams of dollars, the outgoing and the incoming, will be equal, but over a considerable period they should be so. Otherwise a shortage or a surplus of dollars abroad will accumulate. Recently, it has been a surplus.
The larger the corn crop the lower the price of corn (all other things being equal). The same economic law applies to dollars. As the supply of dollars in foreign hands has risen, the "price" of the dollar, or its value in terms of goods, services, etc., has fallen.
ONE REASON WHY the outgoing stream of dollars is larger than the incoming stream is that Americans see better uses for their dollars abroad than at home, and so they spend freely over there. We buy Arab oil because we want to keep the family car running. The best pair of shoes I have worn recently has been a pair made in Taiwan, and so I look for more Taiwan-made shoes. Americans were suspicious of the quality of Japanese-made cars at first, but as the quality was demonstrated they bought them heavily.
Another reason for the unequal streams of dollars is that foreigners are relatively slow to buy from us. We need to export more goods, perform more services for them, sell them more of our stocks and bonds. We need to find out what they want more of, be it wheat or gold, and sell it to them. (Why they want more gold, which is one of the most useless of metals, is hard to say, but at Fort Knox it is surely doing us no good.)
When foreigners come here to buy, they run smack into our inflated prices. This is one dam which has held back the inflow of dollars. Thus the problem of inflation is closely related to that of the declining dollars.
Inflation is due to excessive money in circulation. If our government would slow the multiplication of dollars at home, their over-supply abroad also would shrink. Both problems would be relieved by the one act.
FOR MONTHS THE Carter government has talked about freeing the price of natural gas in 1985. Why wait until 1985? Freed now, the prices of natural gas and gasoline would rise, causing consumers to consume less. Less gas and oil would be imported and fewer dollars would flow abroad to pay for them. This would help balance our international payments — and also save energy.
If Congress wanted to help, it could repeal the federal minimum wage laws. Because of the minimum wage (soon to take another jump), fewer goods are being manufactured here, more are being imported from foreign areas such as the Orient, which produce them with lower wage labor. Repealing these laws would cause more goods to be made here, less imported and fewer dollars sent abroad to pay for them. It would also increase employment.
Measures such as these would have far more beneficial effect than the gold sale. But let us give Jimmy credit for even a short step in the right direction. He is used to growing peanuts.

"I'm afraid you've caught him at a very busy time — he's trying to get off to Switzerland on one of those combined business and pleasure trips."

For whose convenience?

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS
(First of two related columns)
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The mind-boggling figure is a tribute to the success of "convenience packaging." The nation's consumers of beer and soft drinks this year will throw away more than 80 billion cans and bottles.
Those discarded beverage containers have become a disgraceful symbol of a wasteful society that needlessly depletes natural resources and mindlessly consumes excessive energy.
Throughout the 1970s, both Congress and numerous state legislatures repeatedly have been implored by citizens groups to end that shameful practice, by imposing a mandatory deposit on beer and soft drink containers.
The Office of Technology assessment, a congressional agency, believes that required deposits could produce savings of 11 percent of that steel, 36 percent of the glass and 37 percent of the aluminum, although not all of those reductions would occur simultaneously.
Those studies have identified only one major drawback: The expected reduction in demand for bottles and cans probably would produce economic dislocation and unemployment in those industries. But job retraining programs and special financial assistance probably would alleviate those problems.
The evidence in favor of a deposit law is overwhelming, but a coalition of powerful special interest groups continues to thwart all efforts to pass the needed remedial legislation. Leading the Opposition are:

saving the equivalent of 81,000 barrels of oil per day.
The Environmental Protection Agency has concluded that almost 5 billion discarded bottles and cans end up as roadside litter, comprising 20 to 30 percent of all such litter by piece count and 40 to 60 percent by volume.
The General Accounting Office predicts that a national law could lead to a litter reduction of 81 to 85 percent by 1985.
Approximately 7.5 million tons of glass, 1.6 million tons of steel and 550,000 tons of aluminum are consumed annually in the production of beer and soft drink containers.
The Delaware case is typical. That state is the most recent addition to the list because its legislature approved a deposit law only a few months ago. But industry lobbyists succeeded in adding a crucial provision that precludes implementation of the statute until neighboring Maryland and Pennsylvania pass similar legislation.
At a time when the waste of energy and scarce resources has become a national scandal, the country no longer can afford such legislative legerdemain, a federal deposit law is the only solution to the problem.

The National Soft Drink Association and the country's dominant soda companies, Coca-Cola and PepsiCo.
The U.S. Brewers' Association, along with Anheuser-Busch, Miller, Schlitz and other major beer brewers.
The Can Manufacturers' Institute, the Aluminum Association, the Glass Packaging Institute and the American Iron and Steel Institute.
Despite those groups' determined efforts, mandatory deposit statutes have been passed by legislatures or approved by voters in seven states — Oregon, Vermont, Maine, Michigan, Connecticut, Iowa and Delaware.
But even when approval was inevitable, industry lobbyists have used every imaginable device to delay implementation, weaken enforcement or emasculate the legislation.

Countless objective studies, conducted by a variety of disinterested federal agencies have concluded that a national mandatory deposit law would reduce energy consumption associated with packaging and marketing the beverages by 21 to 41 percent.
Most of those estimates are clustered around 40 percent, a figure the Federal Energy Administration says would mean

How to shop for furniture

(Second of four columns)
If you're typical of millions of Americans, you'll go on a shopping spree for furniture in the next few traditional "bargain" weeks, for you may not get price reductions similar to those coming up for a long time. But furniture styling now changes rapidly; if you don't know how to shop, you can make many expensive errors with which you will have to live for a long time.
As guidelines, therefore:
(1) Look at the total environment of your house or apartment in terms of traffic patterns, scale, people and personal living habits. "Shop this season with the principle of human engineering as your credo," is the way furniture designer Leonard Eisen, winner of the designer of the Year Award from Washington, D.C.-based Hecht & Co. puts it. Before you leave home:
(2) Decide if your lifestyle is casual or formal. While you may be carried away by the spectrum of colors in the store, the furniture must look well with what you already have.
(3) Set a budget and above all, urges Eisen, "stay within it." Ask yourself before you enter the store:
What can I leave out more than I can leave in? Simplicity can be a vital factor.
Will my room be flexible? Will it cover a variety of activities for large and small numbers of people?
Will it be efficient? Your furniture and accessories must be efficient in terms of your tastes and lifestyles. If you lie eating in front of the TV set, talk to the dealer about it.
What about your family's comfort? And consider storage as well as your surroundings.
What about light? Explore all forms of light — indirect, bounced off the surface lamps — for enhancement of your furniture.

Ask the salesman: can I mix and match the furniture? How do I clean fabrics? Are there any guarantees? Is the furniture functional? What else do you want to know before you buy?
(4) Shop with special care for upholstered furniture. Convertible couches and recliners have been gaining in popularity, "but both products involve metal mechanisms and therefore are something akin to an appliance as well as a piece of furniture," points out William S. Richman, president of Stratford Furniture, Chicago, a major producer. It is essential to decide where a convertible couch or recliner will be used, how it will be used, how often, by whom. Richman stresses four key considerations for selecting a convertible.
Seating comfort, particularly important if the convertible is to be used mainly as a couch, only occasionally as a sleeper.
Ease in opening and closing. Be sure it does both quietly and effortlessly.

Sleeping comfort. Look for extra support bars on the mechanism and an extra firm mattress. Lie down on the mattress in the store. Do not expect any convertible to offer the complete comfort and support obtainable from a full-size mattress and box-spring set. Check for plastic caps on the mechanism legs to protect floors.
Cleaning ease. Casters are desirable for easy moving and cleaning. Check whether there is a cover over the entire sleeper unit with no gap between it and the frame for protection.
(3) If a convertible is to be used regularly for sleeping, invest in a queen or super queen-size couch if space permits. In buying a recliner, ask yourself whether it will become a one-person chair or whether both a woman and a man will use it.
Previously considered the man-of-the-house's chair, some recliner designs are now suitable for women. Here's a simple three-point test to tell if a recliner fits your body, prepared by Barcalounger recliners:
Back of the knee. In both upright and reclining positions, the nook at the back of the knee should meet the top of the seat cushion. If not, your leg muscles will be strained.
Lower back. It should have firm support of the back resting against it.
Head. If your head is unnaturally pushed forward or strained too far back by the head rest when in both an upright and especially in a declining position, the chair is not for you.
Recliners in recent years have been designed to include close-to-wall units, so they can be placed within inches of the wall, and low-back recliners, where the head-rest pops up. You will pay a premium price of up to $100 or more for either styling feature.

Your tax dollars

Taxpayers might question the sincerity of our Washington lawmakers when they talk about "economy moves." The Senate has just passed a bill "recognizing" the White House.
They have authorized 25 presidential aides at Executive Level II ($57,500); an increase of 50 percent; 25 at Executive Level III ($52,500); five GS-18s ($47,500), and an unlimited number of GS-16s ($42,423). Some economy?
The National Endowment for the Humanities threw a party on the Mall in Washington for 125 guests. It cost more than $7,800, or about $62 per person. Naturally, the taxpayers picked up the bill.

Ask the salesman: can I mix and match the furniture? How do I clean fabrics? Are there any guarantees? Is the furniture functional? What else do you want to know before you buy?

Hill hopes convention will unite Democrats

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Democrats begin arriving here today for the state party convention which gubernatorial candidate John Hill hopes will unite party members rather than spawn internal party rivalries.

Hill will open the convention with a 6:30 p.m. televised address in the Tarrant County Convention Center. He said the speech will emphasize the need for experienced leaders, inter-agency cooperation and fiscal prudence in state government.

Thursday, he told the State Democratic Executive Committee. "Remember, we've got all the fight we can handle after this convention with the Republicans over who's going to win in November."

Hill said he does not anticipate any problems "that we cannot harmoniously resolve," and that while he has some definite ideas of his own about what the party platform should include, he won't issue any "edicts or orders" that might cause factionalism.

He said he was confident he would be comfortable with the platform eventually adopted, even as liberal factions were circulating a 12-point program featuring some things he doesn't particularly like.

Some rumblings about opposition to Hill's choice of Houstonian Billy Goldberg as party chairman made their way through the Thursday meetings, but party insiders said no serious opposition was expected.

Hill also reiterated his desire for a presidential primary, though some Democrats oppose the issue.

"I think it would be a mistake (not to have a primary)," Hill said. "I would like to see it separated from the regular primary so we could analyze whether we can give Texas some political clout."

Hill said he had not ruled out a separate date for a presidential primary, nor did he exclude a regional primary, in which Texas and other states would participate.

Hill told the executive committee they were "under the spurs of the GOP," which he said will spend between $5 and $10 million campaigning between now and November.

Hill said he hadn't finalized his own ideas for a platform, but expected to finish that project sometime Thursday.

In preaching on behalf of an open convention, Hill said he thought all ideas should be presented, though not necessarily to the entire convention.

"I would hope for the most part that it would work through the committee process. I'm sure I'll oppose some of it, but I don't want to be a dictator

"I don't believe there will be anything passed here that I can't support."

After speeches by Hill and other party stalwarts and some preliminary business tonight, the 3,200 delegates will reconvene at 9 a.m. Saturday to complete the work of the convention.

Resolutions are expected to range from calls for prohibition of abortion to demands for better agricultural produce prices.

Leon Spinks and Muhammad Ali did some clowning when they agreed to fight each other again for the world heavyweight boxing title. Tonight the leather gloves go on, and the clowning ends. After beating Ali in February, Spinks lost half of his title to the World Boxing Council, which gave it to Ken Norton, who lost it to Larry Holmes. Ali, meanwhile, traveled to Bangladesh and the Soviet Union, and put his name on a new 59¢ candy bar. Tonight he would like nothing better than to become the only man to win the heavyweight title three times. A victory could also sell a lot of candy bars.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the only boxer, besides Ali, to regain the heavyweight title after losing it?

Snapshots are not fakes according to testimony

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Three snapshots linking Lee Harvey Oswald to a rifle like the one which killed President John F. Kennedy are authentic and show no signs of fakery, according to testimony prepared for Congress today.

Two experts in photo analysis, physicist-mathematician Calvin McCamy and Cecil Kirk, a District of Columbia police sergeant, were to describe for the House Assassinations Committee the results of their studies of the snapshots.

Representatives of the Central Intelligence Agency were to testify later today about what knowledge the agency had of Oswald's activities while he lived in the Soviet Union from 1959 to June 1962.

If the photos are authentic, like virtually all the testimony presented to the committee so far, this supports the Warren Commission's conclusion that Oswald was Kennedy's lone assassin.

The snapshots purportedly showing Oswald holding a rifle and communist literature and wearing a pistol strapped to his waist have figured importantly in the various conspiracy theories that dispute the commission's findings.

Dallas police officers seized the photos while searching Oswald's belongings a few hours after the assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Questioned after his arrest, Oswald claimed the photos were phony.

To resolve the question, the House committee retained photo analysis experts, including McCamy and Kirk, to conduct sophisticated tests on the snapshots. The experts concluded "that the photographs revealed no evidence of faking," committee counsel Robert Blakey said on Thursday.

The Warren Commission had only two snapshots, each showing Oswald holding the rifle but in slightly different poses. The rifle was identified as a Mannlicher-Carcano model like the one found in the so-called "sniper's nest" in the Texas School Book Depository along Kennedy's motorcade route.

The committee found two additional prints of one of the snapshots and two prints of a third snapshot which the Warren Commission never discovered. The third photo also shows Oswald holding a rifle, in a third pose. One copy of the third photo was obtained from the widow of a Dallas police employee, Roscoe White, and the other came from Richard S. Stovall, a retired Dallas police detective.

Stovall also provided another print of one of the photos the Warren Commission studied. The committee obtained still another print of that picture from the widow of George de Mohrenschildt, the Russian immigrant who became friends of the Oswalds in Dallas. The committee did not explain why the Warren Commission did not discover those prints.

erally cave in under the weight of all that new red tape," should the Senate approve the compromise, Bentsen told his colleagues.

The controversial compromise, which would deregulate most newly discovered natural gas by 1985, was hammered out during the past 10 months in a House-Senate conference committee. The measure has been the subject of intense lobbying by top administration officials including Carter, Vice President Walter Mondale, DOE Secretary James Schlesinger and Chief Trade Negotiator Robert Strauss.

Bentsen, who co-authored along with Sen. James B. Pearson, R-Kansas, the natural gas pricing bill that passed the Senate in October, claimed the compromise bill actually deregulates less gas in 1985 than would be deregulated under current law.

"Projections made by the Energy Information Administration, an independent branch of DOE, shows that in 1985 the compromise bill will deregulate 37 percent of all flowing natural gas but under the status quo 55 percent would be deregulated.

Texas forecasts

By The Associated Press

Forecasters warned today that moist air and unstable upper air conditions over a vast area of South and Southwest Texas, including the Texas Hill Country, could trigger another round of flash flood producing heavy rainfall.

A flash flood watch remained in effect today for an area within a line extending from Laredo to the coast near Palacios, north to College Station, west to Junction and back to the Rio Grande at Del Rio.

Forecasts called for widely scattered showers and thunderstorms over the southern half of the state. Highs were expected to be in the 80s and 90s.

Shower activity developed during the early morning hours just to the west and to the northwest of San Antonio, but rainfall amounts were believed to be light.

Forecasters warned that the moist air and unstable upper air could trigger heavy rains that could cause serious flooding because the ground is saturated and rivers and streams are flooding or running near bankfull as a result of drenching rains earlier in the week.

Skies were generally clear across Northwest and North Central Texas and partly cloudy to cloudy over the remainder of the state.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the lower 60s in the Panhandle to the lower 80s along the Texas coast. Extremes ranged from 60 at Marfa in Southwest Texas to 81 at Brownsville in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Some early morning readings included 69 at Amarillo, 78 at Wichita Falls, 76 at Texarkana and Dallas-Fort Worth, 77 at Austin and Lufkin, 80 at Corpus Christi, 79 at Del Rio, 70 at San Angelo, 69 at El Paso and 77 at Lubbock.

Briscoe wasn't acting when he blocked grant

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe wasn't just acting out of pique when he persuaded President Carter to block a million-dollar grant for Zavala County, two Raza Unida Party officials said Thursday.

They said Briscoe's successful run at the Zavala County Economic Development Corp. grant was just one part of a "concerted effort" by Democrats and Republicans to kill the Raza Unida Party in Texas.

Zavala County and the economic development organization are dominated by Raza Unida.

Party treasurer Paul Velez of Austin and state executive committee member Robert Maggiani, also of Austin, said at a news conference the major parties are using the courts and the Legislature in their alleged effort to wipe out Raza Unida.

"We feel there is a planned, concentrated effort to destroy the Raza Unida Party and its power base among the Mexican-American community," said Robert Maggiani of Austin, a member of the state executive committee.

Velez said in some counties Raza Unida candidates are arrested, then the charges are dropped after election day.

He also said the Legislature stacked the deck in 1973 by raising the percentage of votes a party must get in order to have a primary from 2 percent to 20 percent.

"This was a direct effort to stultify our efforts, and it did. We appealed to the Justice Department and it took resources we couldn't afford," Velez told a news conference.

Maggiani said that at one time there were 30 lawsuits against Raza Unida activists in Zavala County, where the party controls local government in Crystal City but not the district court.

He said the attorney general kept a three-man staff in Crystal City full time for more than a year in an attempt to find evidence of wrongdoing. He said three persons were indicted but all were acquitted or the charges against them were dropped.

Briscoe's action against the U.S. Community Development Administration grant to the Zavala County organization was another example, he said. Briscoe portrayed the grant's purpose as creation of a "Little Cuba" in South Texas. It was intended to purchase land for cultivation and start an import-export business to provide employment.

Maggiani said the major parties are ganging up on Raza Unida because the five southwestern states will have Mexi-

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a wonderful 18-year-old grandson I'll call Sonny, who is going to marry an 18-year-old girl he's known two months!

Sonny was graduated from high school with honors, and got a job right away as an apprentice with a good company. They are sending him to school two nights a week. He makes good wages.

The girl he's marrying had a baby four months ago by a man who skipped the state. She and her baby are living with her parents. Sonny had dated her only a few times when he asked her to marry him. Her people grabbed on to him fast, hired a hall and made plans for the wedding which is coming off in two weeks.

My grandson never smoked, drank or messed with girls. He is an inexperienced kid, and I think he's being taken advantage of.

How can I break them up? Not forever, but just long enough for Sonny to get to know the girl better? It's all happening too fast.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Where are Sonny's parents? If he has none, and you are looking after him, enlist the help of a minister, doctor, or a trusted friend to help the boy realize the importance of a marriage commitment. (If Sonny has parents, they should guide him.) If he's not being taken advantage of—and sincerely loves the girl—accept her, and hope for the best.

DEAR ABBY: I kept my mother in my home for nine years. She is senile, babbles endlessly and messes the floor, her clothes, and her bed regularly. What a chore!

When I told my sisters and brothers, who all live out of town, that I wanted to put Mom in a nursing home, you should have heard the howl!

They reminded me of how mother took care of me when I was a helpless baby, now it was my turn to take care of her. Abby, to compare a child with an elderly senile person is ridiculous.

A child can be diapered in public in a stroller. An elderly person cannot.

A child can be left in a playpen. An elderly person cannot. A child learns and matures in time. An older person becomes worse.

It's easy to get a baby sitter, but just try to get someone to stay with an old person. Even relatives won't help.

So I went out and found the cleanest nursing home I could afford and took my mother there. I said goodbye with tears in my eyes to someone who didn't even know me.

Then I went home and started being a wife and mother again. I thanked my husband for his willingness to pay for the care of my mother. (It's not cheap.)

Then the letters started to come from my brothers and sisters who had never kept Mom in their homes for one day. They said, "YOU put Mom in a nursing home! How could you?"

I don't need an answer, Abby. I know I did the right thing. I just had to get this off my chest. If you print this, I'll carry it in my wallet forever.

HEAVY-HEARTED IN N.J.

DEAR HEAVY: Here's something for your wallet.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SHOULD I?" No. Don't put him on the spot by asking him to tell you in so many words. When a boy stops calling a girl, he is silently telling her that it's all over. Accept it, and turn your attention elsewhere.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am 28 years old and I'm scheduled to have a complete hysterectomy. I'm scared to death because I don't know how a hysterectomy will affect my body. I have heard so many stories about it.

Will I gain weight, have hair growth, hot flashes, etc.? I have so many questions that I'm afraid to bother my doctor because he is always in such a hurry. Are hormone pills expensive? What if my body rejects those pills?

I am also a smoker. Will cigarettes plus the hormones be bad for me? Please help me. I'm psychologically ready for surgery but I would like to know what it's all about.

DEAR READER—The important point is what you mean by complete hysterectomy. A number of years ago it was commonplace to remove the body of the uterus and leave the cervix in place. Now almost all hysterectomies involve removing both the body of the uterus and the cervix. The removal of both of these is a complete hysterectomy.

If that's all that's done, what's happened is you've removed the organ which will permit the implantation of a pregnancy. The uterus itself, the body and the cervix, does not have any hormone function at all. The uterus merely responds to the hormones formed by your ovaries.

If only your uterus is taken out and your ovaries are left in place and they are normal and undamaged, you will continue to have the normal female cycle of any other woman who has functioning ovaries.

The only difference will be that you won't have a uterus to respond to the increases and decreases of female hormones with your normal cycle. Your ovaries will continue to produce ova and you will continue to have a monthly rise in estrogen in the manner similar to what you've had in the past.

Under these circumstances, you will not need any hormone pills at all. However, if your ovaries are removed at the same time, you would need hormone replacement. Doctors know enough about female hormones these days to be able to give you a fairly good balanced replacement if that should be required.

Since one of the big dangers in taking female hormones may be cancer of the uterus, you wouldn't have to worry about that since you would already have had your uterus removed. Some of the other complications, such as the slight increase in risk for heart attacks or blood clots, are made worse by smoking. I wish you would quit smoking, anyway, but it might be well to stop if you have to take hormone pills.

But keep in mind that unless your ovaries are also removed you will not have any real need for hormones. If your ovaries remain undisturbed, all the other questions that you asked, such as hair growth, hot flashes and so forth, really aren't important because you'll be normal in all respects.

You will not have an excessive tendency to gain weight any more than any other woman.

Of course, you will have the pain and discomfort which follows any major surgery, but that should be temporary.

Readers who want information on the menopause can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for The Health Letter number 5-12. Address your request to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Feminist club

By RUTH BAYARD SMITH
Associated Press Writer

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP)—It's a women's club all right, but you won't find anyone at the Common Woman wearing white gloves or planning the upcoming town social.

Although club members have been known to sip tea — albeit an organic blend — the Common Woman is a long way from the female service organizations and ladies' auxiliary groups that have flourished in America over the past 100 years.

This downtown Northampton club is a place for women who are interested in feminism and vegetarianism. So far, about 500 have become members.

"We wanted to provide a space where women could feel comfortable in a feminist atmosphere," said Holly, a former English graduate student and one of the club's founders.

Two years ago the founders knew they wanted to open a restaurant for women. That idea, however, caused some problems.

"We discovered that as a public facility, we could not legally exclude men," Molly, another charter member, explained.

"We could have put a sign on the door asking men not to come in. We could have memorized a rap about 'women's space' and given it to each man who walked in the door."

"But," said Holly, "we didn't want to think of the space as one where men are excluded. Instead, it's one where all women can be included."

The women still regard outsiders with some suspicion — they say news media coverage has focused on their alleged anti-male bias — and they asked that their last names not be used.

Club status has drawbacks. "Because we're non-profit, we can't advertise," commented Holly. "And because we can't advertise, we are limited in the ways we can reach out to women."

The club began in December 1976, after a group of nine women raised $20,000. They taught themselves the restaurant business, built tables and chairs and renovated their modest, two-story wooden building.

From the outset, the women have been committed to what they call "alternative economics." As often as possible, they buy food from cooperatives.

The women say they'll channel any profits back into the business or into other women's projects. The Common Woman now takes in enough for the women to pay themselves "almost a living wage."

The name comes from the poetry of feminist Judy Grahn: "The common woman is common as the best of bread and will rise and will become strong."

Club founders set out to build a restaurant without building a hierarchy. It was a new experience for them — and a disconcerting one for some people with whom they dealt outside the collective.

"During the closing of our property, I watched the bank president looking as if he was crossing a huge intersection without a traffic light," Molly said. "He was nodding at each of us, not knowing who to maintain eye contact with."

None of the original nine is still in the group. The Common Woman is now run by four women, one of whom is Kate, a craftswoman who explained why the collective's membership changes:

"I've been here since February 1977, and I'll probably stay for about another year. When you're involved with something like this, you're involved intensely. It's hard to keep up that kind of energy."

The dining style at the Common Woman is casual. Patrons place their own orders and help clean the tables. Meals are moderately priced and include quiches, omelettes, crepes and other vegetarian dishes.

In an attempt to reach a more traditional type of woman, dinners have been held at the Common Woman for female therapists and scientists. These comparatively elegant affairs have attracted many women who otherwise would never come to the club.

The collective's approach seems radical to some. The results, said Holly, are worth it: "This is women helping women. For me, one of the most exciting things that's happened at Common Woman is that we've all learned skills to pass on to other women."

Burning desire molds followers

Over 15 years ago in a revival in Ft. Worth, Texas came a burning desire which molded a family into an evangelistic group known as the Followers. Their intent to win lost souls to Christ as well as strengthen the lives of Christians through testimony and song is still growing each day.

The family group which is now active in the Followers include the oldest son, Larry Sinclair. Not only does he sing in the group, but also shares his testimony and does scriptural, lighted chalk talks. Terry Sinclair, Larry's younger brother, surrendered to full time music evangelism after being involved with full time music teaching, choral work and professional singing.

Terry's wife, Mona also surrendered to full time evangelism after a career in teaching public school music. Adding his talent to the group is Larry's oldest son, Tony. He sings and adds instrumentation by his accompaniment on the bass guitar.

Rounding out the vocal sound of the group is Ollie Mears, singing bass. Ollie, along with Terry and Mona studied music and voice in college and ties together the smooth, quality sound of the Followers.

Accompanying them on the piano is Dennis Warner. Raised in Oklahoma, Dennis has studied voice and piano for years, including the Southwestern Theological Seminary.

This group will be appearing at the Central Baptist Church this Sunday, September 17th at 11:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. in free concerts. There will be nursery provisions. The staff and members of Central Baptist Church cordially invite you to attend these great gospel concerts. The church is located at the corner of Starkweather and Browning.

Calvary Baptist hosts get-together

The Calvary Baptist Church, 900 E. 23rd Street, is having a "Fall Neighborhood Get-Together" at 6:30 p.m. Sunday. The purpose of the event is to give all members of the church the opportunity to enjoy a good meal and fellowship. Anyone is welcome — bring your family and a covered dish.

Start retirement with 'I love you'

By Lou Cottin

In the long marriages of seniors, love is rarely expressed in words.

But deeds are another matter. Our small, comforting acts and intuitive understandings speak for themselves.

We seldom actually say the words, "I love you." Maybe we should.

When elderly couples look back, they recount the stages of their lives. For men, leaving their parents' home was often the first stage of maturity. Marriage, usually marked that first stage for women of our day.

Stage two was children. In the ordinary course of events, the wife then had the new job of raising the children along with running the house and feeding her husband.

Within the family, man and woman had separate duties and interests. They came together only during the evenings and weekends.

The couple is eventually left alone. In time, he retires. She does not.

The wife still manages the house, cooking and cleaning as before. She cannot be blamed if she considers that unfair.

Preretirement instruction generally covers only the money end of retirement. Bankers advise us on financial matters, while insurance agents discuss their specialties. Social Security representatives explain the benefits due us and lawyers provide information on wills and estates. For variety, a doctor may say a few words about our health.

What's missing? Where are we after we've scurried around following the good advice?

The years still stretch blankly ahead of us. We are left with each other — and only each other.

That brings us back to the question of love. At the beginning of retirement, there must be a restatement of the words, "I love you," or their equivalent. The hopes and ideas of the aged flower when those words are articulated.

You might add, "We'll now manage together."

And, "There's a new world to discover and share."

Retirement should give us a chance to do the things we always planned to but couldn't while work interfered. It can turn out that way only if we love each other. And say so. And mean it.

Retirement must assure new interests for both. When the housework is shared, for instance, there is time for other pursuits.

But 24 hours a day with one another are too much togetherness. We must have time away from each other. Otherwise, boredom takes over.

We can begin by making new friends.

We can find such friends in places where other retirees gather. But we make a quick discovery. Our senior center has cliques. The old-timers tend to stick with each other.

But there are people looking for us just as we are looking for them. They are feeling their way, just as we are. With them we can relate. From their ranks, we can choose people with whom we have common interests.

That's the start. We can compare it to attending our first party, or going into a new class in school, or moving into a new neighborhood. The difference is that when young, we found friends by accident.

That's not the way to make friends among retirees. Making friends among the aging calls for a positive approach. At our age, we cannot expect to drift into friendships. That takes too long.

Here's where love comes into the picture again.

We've said the three little magic words to each other. We can then operate as separate individuals in widening our circle of friends. We are sure enough of each other's affection and admiration to choose new associates. When we leave the center, we can compare notes.

It all begins when we learn to say, "I love you." Amazing, isn't it?

An investment in Your Future

...ATTEND CHURCH

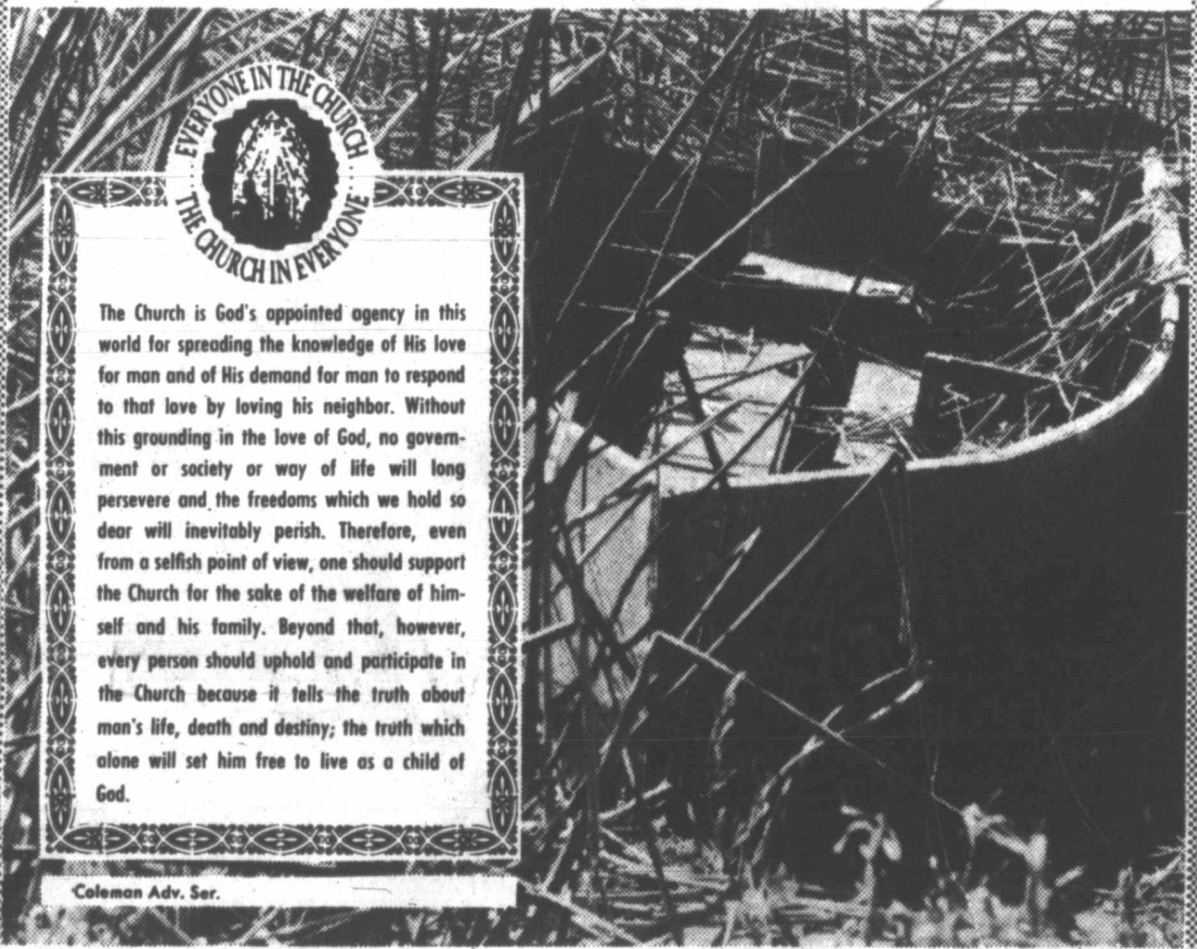

"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also"

BEACHED... and forgotten!

This old forgotten boat is almost buried in the reeds. Can this boat in any way be compared to our talents? What of these talents that God has given us? Have they been beached, forgotten, buried?

Heaven expects us to help in this matter of creating a better world where brother helps brother by using to the fullest extent the talents He has bestowed upon us. God always provokes and prods mankind to do good works, and accomplish great things. And He says that if we dedicate ourselves to this matter He will help. But the decision to use our talents and develop them is our choice.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Washington today

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It's getting so a senator has to get in line if he wants to stage a filibuster.

As the 95th Congress slogs toward its last hurrah, at least four filibusters are a very real threat in the Senate.

When Capitol veterans try to figure out why filibusters — or at least the threat of them — seem more commonplace these days, they often point to the more gentlemanly approach to filibustering that has evolved during the past few years.

They also note the time pressures members of Congress feel when they see election day closing in, as it is this year.

Opponents of the natural gas bill now being debated in the Senate are threatening to use their right of unlimited debate to hold the floor and block a final vote on the measure.

Lined up behind them are threats to try to talk to death bills that would extend the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, designate millions of acres of Alaska as park and wilderness and implement a $301 million settlement of shipbuilding claims by two defense contractors.

Talk is a cherished pastime in the Senate chamber. And the filibuster is honored as the minority's defense against the majority.

However, the majority is not defenseless against a filibuster. A limit can be placed on debate by invoking cloture, which requires the support of 60 of the 100 senators.

It all sounds very orderly, but there's a feeling around the Capitol that something has gone wrong with the system.

Students of the rules, like the late Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., made a mockery of cloture by managing to prolong debate for days even after the majority had mustered 60 votes. An effort to tighten the rules to prohibit that was blocked. By a filibuster, of course.

In recent years, under majority leaders Mike Mansfield and, now, Robert C. Byrd, the response to filibusters has changed.

Filibusters no longer are like they were in the days of the late Lyndon B. Johnson when senators bedded down on cots and were jarred awake at any hour by quorum calls that sent them red-eyed and staggering onto the Senate floor to register their presence.

In those days the physical and mental toll was high enough to prompt senators to reserve the filibuster for only the most critical issues.

The last major, round-the-clock filibuster was directed against the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

Since then, with a couple of exceptions lasting less than 24 hours, the Senate has moved to filibuster by consent — an agreement under which the debate goes on only during normal working hours until cloture is invoked or the bill is withdrawn. This way the Senate recesses at a reasonable hour and returns the next morning, its members fresh and rested.

Coaches expect physical game

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor

Just for the record, Don Barton isn't expecting any flowers when he brings his Dumas Demons to Pampa Friday night.

"I'll tell you what," he said, chuckling at a suggestion that Dumas would play a physical game. "John's kids are gonna play good, sound football. And they'll play physical, too. They always have."

"You just line up and play 'em," he continued. "If you can beat 'em you can and if you can't you can't, but they won't be bringing you any bouquets."

Both teams should be hungry for a win after season-opening losses last week. The Harvesters fell to Hereford 13-7, while a last-minute, deflected field goal gave Palo Duro a 3-0 verdict over the Demons.

Harvester Coach John Welborn knows that Dumas, the preseason choice to win District 1-AAA and presently rated 18th in the state's AAA ranks by the Harris Poll, will come out hitting when they step onto Harvester Field. But he also believes his team is ready to meet the challenge.

"I think it's going to be a physical game," he said. "but I think we can be as aggressive as anyone else. There's no reason why we can't."

Among the Demons the Harvesters must deal with is Bryan Millard, a 6-4, 230-pound lineman who doubles at strong offensive tackle and defensive end.

"He's been a very steady performer, improving every day," Barton said of Millard. "He's not where we want him to be and not where he wants to be as a football player, but eventually he should get there."

As the score of its game with Dumas indicates, Palo Duro didn't have an easy time with the Demon defense. The Dons did enjoy some success through the air, but Welborn said Pampa would not rely on any particular facet of its offense.

"We'll use all of our offense," he said. "We'll try to attack them inside, outside and throwing, which is about all you ever do."

The Demons will be missing fullback Bruce Towne and center Bobby Wilborn. Quarterback Kent Hazen is listed as a doubtful starter, but Welborn isn't being lulled to sleep by Dumas' injury problems.

"They played Palo Duro without those two," he said of Towne and Hazen. Randy Davis, a 200-pound junior, will replace Towne and Welborn said he suspected Hazen would be converted to a running back to make room for quarterback Benjie Gilmore before Hazen was hurt.

"I suppose their quarterback runs the ball as well as anyone else," Welborn said of Gilmore and the Demon offense, "but you can't key on anyone on their offense because they all run the ball."

The Harvester injury list has shrunk from last week, as Louis Cox, a last-minute scratch a week ago, and Richard Wuest, hurt in a motorcycle accident, will return to action and both could see action both ways.

Cox will return to his position in the line, while Wuest could play at any linebacking post and "possibly" play some fullback, according to his coach. Quarterback Rick Dougherty was still a questionable starter as of Wednesday.

Spinks-Ali bout set for tonight

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It's Muhammad Ali vs. Leon Spinks in this Mississippi River town where 86 years ago boxing's modern era dawned, where tonight the Ali Era could end.

It was the old generation against the new. It was the gladiator against the boxer.

That was a New York Times description of James J. Corbett's 21-round knockout of champion John L. Sullivan Sept. 7, 1892, and it is the reason for the great appeal of the Ali-Spinks rematch in the Superdome.

Ali, "The Greatest," is in the role of The Great John L., who boasted he could beat any man in the house. But the 36-year-old Ali is not the champion, and Sullivan's gladiator image certainly fits the 25-year-old Spinks better than it fits Ali.

The Times account of Sullivan's upset quoted him as saying he "had fought once too often in the ring."

There are a lot of people in boxing who feel Ali already has fought once too often — last Feb. 15 at Las Vegas when Spinks, an overwhelming underdog making his eighth pro fight, won the championship on a split 15-round decision.

But many Ali fans — and they are legion — consider their idol's loss a fluke. Ali said he wasn't mentally or physically ready for what most people felt was a mismatch. Lerq Banker in Las Vegas lists Ali as 2-5 and Spinks as 2-1. The Reno Turf Club lists Ali as 5-11 and Spinks as 9-5.

"I'll weigh 215 the next time," said Ali after losing the title he hopes to regain to become the first fighter to have won three times. "I'll be in better shape."

Ali looks to be in shape — George Benton, Spinks' assistant trainer calls it 36-year-old shape — but he missed his weight goal, weighing in Thursday at 221 pounds, 3 1/2 pounds less than his first-fight weight. Spinks, who weighed 197 1/2 in Las Vegas, came in at 201.

The fight, sanctioned as a title bout by the World Boxing Association, will start about 10 p.m. EDT.

Green, caddy team up to record 62

By GREG THOMPSON
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hubert Green and Shayne Grier teamed for a withering 8-under-par 62 in the first round of the $200,000 Texas Open. Green, the golfer who had never played the course, did all the work. Grier, the caddy, just told him where to hit it.

Taking advantage of soft greens on the rain-soaked Oak Hills Country Club course, Green reeled off eight birdies to overhaul Lou Graham and take a one-stroke lead into today's second round.

Green, who has never played in a Texas Open, arrived in San Antonio on Tuesday night, intending to use Wednesday's pro-am as a practice round.

The pro-am, however, was washed out when more than four inches of rain fell in a two-hour period Wednesday morning, flooding some portions of the 6,525-yard course.

"I walked enough of the course yesterday afternoon to at least know where the holes were. It's the first time I've seen it," Green said after Thursday's round. "I'll never like the course as much as I liked it today."

Fortunately, Grier had arrived earlier and charted the course for his boss. "He had the course set up and measured," said Green.

"It's the first time in the United States that I've played a tournament 'cold.' I wasn't tickled pink about the situation. But I'm a professional. No one else is going to feel sorry for me. That's life," he added.

Graham, of Nashville, Tenn., had pillaged the course for a 63 Thursday morning, drilling a 40-foot eagle putt on his first hole — the 495-yard, par-5 No. 10 — and sinking a 124-footer for a birdie on the next one.

He birdied all four par-3 holes, hitting a 25-foot putt on

No. 13 and a 35-footer on No. 18. "That's one of the best putting rounds I've had in a long, long time," he said.

But Green reeled off three consecutive birdies at one point in his front nine, making the turn with a 5-under-par 30. He dropped in a five-footer on No. 17 to go 8-under.

Forrest Fezler, playing with a mongrel set of new and borrowed clubs after his were stolen in a New York airport several weeks ago, was in third at 64. The slumping Fezler missed the cut in four of his last six tournaments before the Texas Open.

Borger tops Shockers

BORGER — The Pampa Shockers fell to their first defeat of the season Thursday night in a defensive battle that left the Borger Bulldogs on top, 14-8.

Borger started the game with a 61-yard drive that was capped when quarterback Shawn Harrington took it in from the three-yard line. The touchdown, with 8:41 left to play in the first quarter, gave the Bulldogs a 6-0 lead after Pampa blocked the point after try.

After the score by Borger, the contest was turned over to the teams' defensive units.

Late in the second quarter, after a brilliant goal line stand by the Shockers, the Bulldogs tackled on two more points when they trapped Pampa quarterback Clay Coffee in the end zone for a safety.

Pampa went to the dressing room at half time trailing the Borger squad 8-0.

After the halftime break Pampa was unable to generate an offensive drive in the third quarter while being plagued by fumbles, interceptions and penalties.

It wasn't until mid-way through the fourth quarter that Pampa managed to get on the score board. The Shockers marched 61 yards in seven plays for a touchdown and knotted the score with a two-point conversion.

After the eight minute mark it was all Borger as the Bulldogs put six additional points on the board with 5:36 left after recovering a Shocker fumble near the Pampa goal line.

The Shockers now stand at 1-1 on the season and will meet Dumas at home Thursday night.

Wilson adjusts as Earl arrives

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers fullback Tim Wilson got his rushing technique finely tuned during the preseason but since the regular season started he's played second fiddle to rookie Earl Campbell.

"With a guy like Earl you've got to give him the ball and that means you've got to cut down on other plays and that happens to be fullback," said Wilson, who will start opposite Campbell Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers in the Astro dome.

Campbell goes into the game leading the American Football Conference in rushing with 248 yards on 37 carries after two league games while Wilson has rushed only 14 times for 58 yards and a 3.7 per carry average.

During four preseason games, Wilson and Campbell shared the running duties almost equally with Campbell rushing 47 times for 265 yards and Wilson carrying 42 times for 211 yards.

Wilson takes pride in his blocking role but says it's hard to keep sharp as a runner.

"It usually takes me four or five carries to get loosened up and ready to run," the second year player from Maryland said. "But I'm only getting it four or five times per game now."

Wilson became accustomed to being the less publicized blocking back during his college days at Maryland.

"It's a lot different blocking here though," he said. "In college, you'd run into a good line-backer every once in awhile but here everybody is trouble. Sometimes you're going to miss one."

"That's when you just try to get a hat on 'em and let Earl run."

Wilson feels however, he must contribute to the Oilers offense with his running also.

"You look at all the teams that go to the playoffs and the Super Bowl and they've got two good running backs," Wilson said. "I've got to be ready to run the ball everytime I get it, not after taking four or five rushes to warm up."

"That's keep the defenses from keying on Earl so much. We've always had good passing game here but we're looking for good things to happen here and we expect the offense to have to run the ball."

Wilson is getting more rushing chances than Rob Carpenter and Ronnie Coleman, last year's starting running backs. However, Carpenter has carried five times for 39 yards and Coleman has not rushed from scrimmage in two games.

Lefors JHS blanks McLean

MCLEAN — Lefors' Junior, High football team snapped an 18-game losing streak here Thursday night with a 14-0 blanking of McLean.

The Pirates got a pair of touchdown runs from Tracy Jennings, one on a three-yard plunge and the other on a 15-yard run. Jennings also ran in a two-point conversion to account for all of Lefors' scoring.

Coach Don Parsons said his entire team fought hard for the victory and singled out Richie Kidwell for his defensive efforts and Cody Allison for his offensive contributions.

Lefors will host Groom Thursday night at 6 for its next action.

Something for young people

In 4-H young people and their parents get involved. This is why 4-H is often billed as a family affair, points out Layton Barton, County Agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

There are two general ways parents can become involved — by helping their children plan and carry out a 4-H project and by working as a 4-H volunteer leader.

Ideally, the 4-H member, his or her parents, and the volunteer leader sit down together to develop a plan for the 4-H member's project. The parents provide guidance in the scope of the project and gain some knowledge of the objectives of 4-H.

Many parents become involved with their boys and girls in 4-H in a leadership role, adds Barton. They may become organization, project or activity leaders, but specifically, their responsibilities are directly related to the 4-H unit as a whole.

For parents, 4-H provides an opportunity to work with young people, doing things they, themselves, often find exciting and rewarding.

Boys and girls have the most successful experiences in 4-H if their parents know and understand the activities that are connected with their individual experiences. Parents can provide the needed moral as well as financial support in the development and evaluation of projects. Above all, 4-H is an opportunity for boys and girls and their parents to improve themselves and have a good time doing it.

Get your family involved in 4-H, urges Barton. Contact the County Extension Office for details on the 4-H program and the learning experiences it has to offer.

Airport given

DOT grant

Gray County has been awarded a $60,000 airport development grant from the Department of Transportation, according to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's office.

The funds are to be used to reconstruct and remark a portion of runway 17-35 at Perry Lefors Field, Pampa.

The funds were requested by the county in August.

WITHOUT A VISA?

VIENNA (AP) — Beekeepers in the forests not far from Vienna were astounded one morning to find their hives ripped open and all the honey stolen.

The intruder turned out to be the first brown bear to be sighted in Austria since 1920, and officials say they think the bear came across the Hungarian border.

VIDEOMATIC® TOUCH-TUNE TV

Enjoy the precision of a digital computer... the ease of a pushbutton telephone. This exclusive system may be programmed for any combination of 20 channels — UHF or VHF. Then, Touch-Tune directly to any channel of your choice — effortlessly, silently, electronically — at the touch of your finger. And channel numbers may be set independently of station tuning for use with master antenna or cable systems. A single UHF/VHF illuminated channel display with an "infinite life" light emitting diode shows an easy-to-read channel number. As with Star System Touch-Tune, the picture automatically adjusts to changing room light.
