

Military officials expect increase in drug deaths

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BOON, West Germany (AP) — U.S. military commanders expect an increase in the number of drug deaths among American troops in Europe this year.

Rex Gribble, a press spokesman for the U.S. Army headquarters in Heidelberg, said 25 of the 185,000 GIs stationed in Germany and one dependent had died from drugs by midyear, compared with 26 soldiers and five dependents and civilian employees for all of 1977.

"There's no doubt that there will be an increase," Gribble said. "I don't know how significant, but there's bound to be an increase." U.S. investigators claim there has been an increase in harddrug traffic across the Continent. One investigator said 265 pounds of heroin have been seized in Western Europe this year.

Gribble said drug use among American troops in West Germany declined in 1975 and 1976. Some sources speculated the Communist takeover in Southeast Asia reduced supplies of Laotian opium from which heroin was extracted.

The increase in the drug supply indicates that dealers have developed new sources of supply. Heroin from Pakistan, Iran and Afghanistan has found its way in increasing amounts to Berlin, where 5,000 U.S. troops are stationed, sources say.

They estimate that $800,000 changes hands each day in Berlin's underground drug network.

Despite financial hardships caused by the decline of the dollar, GI addicts manage to pay $85 for a gram of high-quality heroin, which yields 20 shots.

Forty-five military police investigators have been assigned to drug work full time. Army headquarters in Heidelberg has requested that 30 more be sent to West Germany.

A congressional delegation led by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., is touring West Germany to investigate the drug problem. It plans a public hearing Nov. 20 in Stuttgart.

The Army recently opened a Drug Suppression Operation Center in Mannheim to collect information from U.S. and West German sources on narcotics traffic.

Col. Charles Kraak, the deputy director of the center, praised the cooperation of the West German police and said they supply much of the cash used by undercover Army agents in drug buys.

"So far this year we've pulled 21 kilos (46.2 pounds) of heroin off the streets compared to last year's capture of 15 kilos," he said. "For every dollar it costs us, we can take $265 worth off the streets and decrease the danger to U.S. troops."

Peace talks reach 'crisis'

By The Associated Press
Egyptian President Anwar Sadat termed the Mideast peace talks today as being in a state of "crisis" and raised the possibility of a "suspension" to allow Egypt and Israel time to ponder their positions.

At the same time, informed Egyptian sources said their government has formulated new proposals designed to avoid a total deadlock while still holding to Egypt's key demands.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said the Israeli Cabinet broke off a review of the Israeli-Egyptian negotiations to await clarification of the proposals expected from Egypt. Egyptian sources said the proposals would be explained to President Carter by Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak, who was on his way to Washington today.

The sources said the proposals seek to deal with the Gaza Strip after a peace treaty with Israel is signed, leaving the problem of the West Bank to a subsequent stage.

Sadat, while warning of a possible interruption of the peace talks, carefully avoided saying he was recalling his delegation home.

Speaking to university professors and students in Ismailia, Sadat said, "We have gone a long way at the Washington talks and have achieved 90 percent of the road."

"Now we are at a serious crisis and if we can avoid it in order to achieve the remaining 10 percent by suspending the talks for a while to allow the parties to think again and then resume, so be it."

Sadat did not explain what the nature of the crisis was, nor did he refer to the reported fresh formulation of Egypt's demands.

Informed sources in Cairo, however, said "the word crisis can be underlined. It is very would resume its discussions. The Cabinet had met to take up a new U.S. proposal designed to break the most recent snags in the Washington talks. The Israeli press said the Americans have suggested that one link would be to call for elections in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip not later than December 1979.

Local newspapers said a majority of the 17-member Cabinet, Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan opposing being committed to a timetable to fulfill Israel's Camp David pledge to transform the occupied territories into an autonomous region.

Because of Israel's rejection of Egyptian demands thus far, the sources said, Sadat was trying to deal with Gaza first.

Finances main topic during board meeting

By KATHY BURR
Pampa News Staff

The Board of Managers for Highland and McLean General Hospitals authorized the payment of a note for the amount of $51,600 during Tuesday night's board meeting.

This payment will go to First National Bank with the balance of approximately $76,000 to be paid by Dec. 31.

Following the authorization

Guy Hazlett, hospital administrator, said, "With the back log of Medicare plus the increase in cash receipts we feel we can pay off the note during the month of December."

Finances seemed to be the main topic during the board meeting.

Hazlett reported expenses for the month were up in a variety of areas. Hazlett told the board the hospital has spent $11,000 for two high capacity hot water heaters and there had been a $3,500 increase in laboratory supplies. There was a $6,300 repair bill for the x-ray department and supplies for pharmacy were up $1,677 over the previous month. Hazlett said increases also occurred in dietary and purchasing services. This gave the hospital a total accounts payable balance for the month of October of $249,369. Despite the increase in expenses for the month the hospital seems to be making money.

Hazlett reported to the board the payroll for the month was $177,723. This figure was down $4,982 from the previous month. He also reported a net income of $495,032 for the month with a gross income of $528,233. Currently the hospital is generating a total revenue of $170,82 per patient day. The hospital had budgeted $142.01 for this area. Their expenses per patient day are currently running at $140.15 per patient day, whereas the hospital had budgeted $164.45.

For the month of October the hospital showed a profit of $88,887 with a total profit for the year of $309,551. Hazlett told the board there had been approximately a $44,000 increase in accounts receivable over the month of September. In addition to this Hazlett said the hospital is currently generating approximately $17,039 revenue per day.

Another item of discussion at the meeting was the accreditation of the hospital.

The Joint Commission for the Accreditation of Hospitals will visit Highland General on Dec. 1 and 4. In 1976 the commission granted accreditation to Highland for a period of one year only because of deficiencies in three major areas. The committee told the hospital 31 of 72 previous deficiencies had not been corrected as of November 1976, a number of medical care audits were lacking and two external disaster plan rehearsals had not been conducted. Hazlett told the board that the majority of these deficiencies have been corrected or will be corrected by the time the commission arrives.

The board also approved the revision of by-laws for McLean hospital as required by Medicare, and the board renewed their contract with Frank Phillips College.

Commissioner stricken

City Commissioner Coyle Ford, in critical condition from an undisclosed ailment, has been admitted to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

Ford was undergoing surgery at 11 a.m. today. The commissioner was reportedly stricken while eating lunch in a local restaurant after attending Tuesday's commission meeting.

According to unofficial reports, Ford was admitted with low blood pressure to the intensive care unit of Highland General Hospital. He was later transferred to St. Anthony's.

Margaret Mead dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Margaret Mead, famed American anthropologist, died today at New York Hospital after a year-long battle with cancer. She was 76.

She had continued to work until she was hospitalized on Oct. 2.

In her books and lectures, Miss Mead spoke to a public much wider than the scientific community. She moved to the forefront of her profession by publishing in 1928, at age 26, what has become one of the most widely read pieces of scholarship ever penned, "Coming of Age in Samoa." The study of adolescence and passage to sexual maturity was based on a field trip to the island she undertook three years earlier.

It remained a steady seller, some years topping 100,000 in paperback reprints.

In the half century that followed, she continued studying far-away cultures and used the knowledge to anticipate and shed light on the social and cultural eruptions of modern Western society.

Big Brothers upset over ruling

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Big Brothers, a group which counsels fatherless boys, is questioning a judge's order that a former policeman accused in the fatal shooting of an unarmed teen-ager join the volunteers.

Judge Robert Latrone ordered Marcus Giardino, who pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death, to join the Big Brothers.

"The judge never consulted us, but if what I read is true, he (Giardino) would not be an acceptable applicant," said Samuel Hirschland, president of the Philadelphia Big Brothers Association. "Big Brothers should exhibit stability, maturity, responsibility, sensitivity to the needs of a youngster."

Latron placed Giardino on five years probation Monday and ordered that he join Big Brothers as part of a rehabilitation program. Giardino also was ordered to pay $5,000 to cover funeral expenses.

A car in which the victim, Michael Carpenter, 19, was riding was stopped Feb. 27 by police. When Carpenter ran from the scene, Giardino fired once, striking him in the back. The officer resigned from the force after entering the guilty plea.

The judge acknowledged Tuesday that he had not consulted Big Brothers about his intentions, but said he saw no reason why Giardino could not join the organization.

Supplemental package includes mobile missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2.2 billion supplemental defense bill the Carter Administration is sending to Congress proposes full-scale development of a twice-delayed mobile intercontinental ballistic missile that would be safe from Soviet surprise attack.

It also includes funding for an additional nuclear-powered attack submarine and at least one more Spruance-class destroyer, according to administration sources who asked to remain anonymous.

In addition to $190 million to begin full-scale development of the mobile missile system, the bill is expected to include about $500 million for strategic nuclear weapons, including the air-launched cruise missile that has become a major factor in Carter administration defense planning. The sources said Tuesday night the additional nuclear-powered attack submarine and at least one more Spruance-class destroyer also are in the bill.

Spruance-class destroyers are built at a shipyard in Pascagoula, Miss., home state of Sen. John Stennis, the powerful Democratic chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee — a fact that could help the bill's chances of passage.

Other items in the proposal are for a variety of conventional arms and equipment to bolster U.S. forces committed to defending Western Europe, the sources said. Pentagon officials have said previously the administration probably would ask Congress in January for a supplemental money bill for fiscal 1979 to finance about 100 military projects.

Those predictions came after Defense Secretary Harold Brown vainly asked the outgoing 95th Congress to substitute funds for $2 billion originally intended for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

President Carter vetoed the defense appropriation bill because of his objection to the carrier.

Congress upheld the veto in September. But in passing a new appropriations bill, it refused to substitute the items then proposed by Brown.

Neither the mobile missile funds nor those for the nuclear-powered attack submarine and Spruance-class destroyer were among the items Brown asked for to replace the deleted carrier funds.

If approved, the $2.2 billion supplemental bill would bring the fiscal 1979 defense budget close to the $126 billion in budget authority Carter asked for last January.

The supplemental appropriation would be separate from Carter's fiscal 1980 defense budget package, which is still being drawn up. The Pentagon has proposed a 1980 appropriation of slightly more than $137 billion, but White House officials are pressing to hold the total to $135 billion or less in the 1980 fiscal year, which starts next Oct. 1.

Court considers referendum

By DAN LACKEY
Pampa News Staff

The Gray County Commissioners Court met this morning to consider an agenda of seven items, the most pressing of which was consideration of a referendum regarding the leasing of Highland and McLean General Hospitals.

The two county hospitals have been having administrative and maintenance problems and there has been debate since early October on whether the county should lease the hospital to a private corporation.

A public referendum, however, could include as many as four options to Gray County voters.

1. Lease the hospitals to a private corporation.
2. A hospital bond issue.
3. Creation of a hospital district.
4. Retention of the present system.

The Commission came to no final decision and voted unanimously to table the discussion of the referendum for further consideration.

Commissioner Ted Simmons (Precinct 4, McLean) suggested the Commission meet in one week to make a decision.

During more than an hour of discussion, Judge Don Hinton stated "The wisest economical direction is leasing."

Commissioner Ronnie Rice, Pampa, favored leasing and passing the referendum. "All those people I've talked to seem to be for it," Rice said that he felt the two public meetings were sufficient indication of public opinion on the question. Rice, however, acknowledged some dissent, and said he was aware that a few doctors at the hospital were in favor of creating a hospital district and opposed to leasing.

Statements and comments of Rice and Ted Simmons, Precinct 3, McLean, indicated they were in favor of a commission decision to lease, while Commissioner Jim McCracken, Precinct 3, Grandview, and O.L. Presley, Precinct 1, Lefors, appeared to be leaning toward a referendum.

Guy Hazlett, Highland hospital administrator, was present, and spoke to the commission about the actual financial situation at Highland. "Long term security in the area of finance is our main concern," said Hazlett.

"We project a 5.2 million dollar budget for next year," Hazlett said. "And there's no assurance that it won't be $10 million in three years." Hazlett said he didn't know if the commission could cover the hospital's "gamble."

The commission is considering leasing the hospitals to American Medical Institute. However, several other hospital corporation offers have been received. Lional Berry, representing the Hospital Corporation of America, was present and expressed HCA's interest in the two hospitals.

According to Berry, HCA has 100 hospitals in 26 states. The corporation, said Berry, already has ten hospitals operating in Texas.

Commissioners approve lease

CANADIAN - Hemphill County Commissioners approved a county oil and gas lease, agreed to advertise county land for sale and completed airport business during their regular meeting this week.

The commissioners approved a mineral lease to William Arrington, Pampa, for two tracts of land including the court house block. The agreement is part of the town lot lease program benefiting the Abraham Memorial program.

County commissioners also agreed to advertise two tracts of county land for sale that are located near the Hemphill County Hospital and advertise to purchase used wheel loaders for precincts one and four. All bids will be opened by 1 p.m. Dec. 11.

In other business only one bid was received for the paving of the county airport. Lewis Construction submitted a hot mix bid of $49,518.75. The court agreed to the bid, but instructed Smiley Johnson to trim the new paving yardage not to exceed $40,000 in costs.

Pertaining to the airport the county agreed to $48,000 which is the amount needed to complete the engineering costs, from J.A. Ullom, Engineering. They also agreed to accept a grant offer of $35,000 from the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

EVER STRIVING FOR TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. For only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that all men are equally endowed by their Creator, and not by a government, with the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property and secure more freedom and keep it for themselves and others.

To discharge this responsibility, free men, to the best of their ability, must understand and apply to daily living the great moral guide expressed in the Coving Commandment.

Mismanaging forests

Recently an advertisement of the Louisiana-Pacific caught our eye. The heading asked: "Suppose Farmers Found Corn Too Lovely to Pick?" The copy went on to ask the reader to imagine a producer so moved by the sight of his wheat field, that he cancelled the harvest. "Sooner or later, all crops are harvested," the copy read, "If man doesn't use the bounty for himself, Mother Nature will claim it, via insects, disease, rain, high winds or low temperatures. It's easier to understand when we talk about food crops. We can witness the outcome within a single year. With timber the cycle is a lot longer. But, the laws of nature are the same."

And so are the laws of economics. Whenever a large portion of crops is not harvested, the crop price will rise. It is true for corn, apples, peas and beans. It is just as true for the timber that produces lumber, plywood, particle-board and paper products.

The price of forest products is at an all time high. Some of this is price-movement in line with general inflation. But there is a discernible excess increase due to federal forest mismanagement which is usually more geared to political expediency than to scientific management practices.

The Louisiana-Pacific timber company says there is about six billion board feet of timber being left to rot each year. That is enough material to build 400,000 new homes. To local communities it represents 600,000 jobs and $600,000,000 in local tax revenues.

Forests hold great beauty and also great promise. "There is a time to sow and a time to reap. If we refuse to remember that, we will have squandered one of nature's most versatile gifts. And paid the price."

Managed forests also have great beauty and controlled harvesting does not impair it. It is true that in the past many forest lands were exploited with no thought of good management practice.

This is not a legitimate excuse for locking them up and letting them rot or burn out. Timber land can be managed in a manner to yield continuous harvests. If a company has a monetary stake in good forest practice, that forest will get better care than any the government owns.

Private companies have proved over and over that a well managed timber property can grow trees faster, by far, than those left without scientific care.

There are many beautiful tracts of such timber land that gives living proof that forest products can be a replaceable resource.

Private enterprise can manage forest areas in a way which will be a great asset to us all. If left to the government and locked away from any development, the resource will be wasted.

Button button

Inflation fighting by the federal government can take some funny twists. While many agencies are urging both management and labor to hold down wages and prices, another arm of government is urging changes that could cost consumers billions per year extra in food costs alone.

That agency is the Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety (BMCS), which is advocating a little publicized plan to change the hours of service for the nation's truck drivers.

On its surface the plan seems reasonable: to increase the amount of off-duty time for drivers by up to 60 per cent following each ten hours of driving.

However, the "ripple effect" of this plan would mean both higher prices for consumers and severe economic effects in many of the nation's small communities.

It would force the trucking industry to use 10 trucks for the work nine now perform, and that could cause tremendous increases in the price of consumer items.

In official testimony on the proposal, Swift & Co. estimated it would add $2 billion to the nation's already high food bill each year.

In addition to the problems this would cause for everyone who eats, the proposal would have a disastrous effect on many communities that depend on payrolls from trucking operations and related industries.

For example, a major user of truck transportation in Preque Isle, Maine, 420 miles north of Boston, now employs 1,200 workers. That small community depends on the plant payroll.

But, like many small and medium sized operations, this firm can't stand to be hit with more cost increases. As its officials say:

"Any further additional costs to our operation could and will have devastating effects on this company's survival. And, if the company goes, so goes the economy of the area."

Another example.

A Florida common carrier of canning supplies and products says the rescheduling of drivers' hours would boost costs enough that it would cease operations. The ultimate losers: the nearby community and its residents.

Clearly, a nation with an already inflationary economy can scarcely afford any more government tinkering to cause higher prices for all of us — and severe economic hardship for many segments of the population.

Drugs and common sense

(Wall Street Journal)

Recently we commented on how "consumer advocates" are trying to drive down drug prices by imposing the competition of generic drugs against the trade-name drugs of the major pharmaceutical manufacturers. Well, things are working out badly in New York State. The major manufacturers are cutting prices, and the regulators are furious.

Why, you ask. There are two stories, equally astonishing. According to the chief staffer of the New York Assembly's Consumer Affairs Committee, the bad majors are now marketing "branded generics" at a lower price than their traditional trade-name drugs, but at a more expensive price than "real generics," so consumers are not reaping the full benefits of drug substitution. A "branded" generic, it turns out, is a drug product that bears the name of a major drug company, while a "real" generic bears the name of a nonmajor drug company.

But the chairman of the same committee has another story. According to him, the majors are selling "branded" drugs cheaper than real generics. Isn't this what you wanted? We naively ask. No, because the majors are selling below cost to drive the generic drug producers out of business and then they will run up the price. But aren't drugs so easy to manufacture that such a strategy is impractical? The chairman "knows nothing" about this.

Meanwhile on another front, the House oversight subcommittee is subpoenaing HEW Secretary Califano for evidence to support the widely held view that the major manufacturers buy generics from other producers and sell under their own brand names. It is a little difficult to see how this information could be used constructively. If Congress prohibits the practice, the majors will produce their own generics, and consumers of the "real" generics will lose the cost advantages of mass production.

The real issue is that the cunning major manufacturers are responding to laws that permit pharmacists to substitute drugs by shifting their marketing from physicians to pharmacists. The incredible hostility of the self-appointed consumer advocates to the major companies can only be understood when it is realized that since the days of Sen. Kefauver the regulators have been trying to get the majors, who have almost always outsmarted them.

The pharmaceutical manufacturers have an enormous advantage — ordinary common sense.

Carter is not fighting inflation

By OSCAR COOLEY
PRESIDENT CARTER'S ANTI-INFLATION program consists mainly of pleading with sellers of goods and services not to increase their asking prices more than 6 or 7 percent a year. He said nothing about sellers such as farmers who do not price-tag their goods but sell in an open, auction-like market for all they can get. Must they next year refuse to accept a price for their corn that exceeds 106 percent of this year's price? Maybe the president did not mention the farmers because his agricultural bureaucrats vigorously "support" the price of corn, as well as other farm staples such as the wheat that makes our bread and the sugar that sweetens our coffee. In short, the government itself is in the price inflating business, spending taxpayers' money to make the cost of living higher for the taxpayers. The guidelines can hardly apply to farmers but surely will apply to food processors and distributors, your supermarket, for example. These will have to buy foods at market prices, which may be much higher than in the previous year, but are supposed to sell at prices increased by not over 6 percent.

for free trade, and Carter has it within his power to lower trade barriers, but it appears to be an anti-inflation policy for which he has little stomach.

Another simple way by which he could show that he is on the side of us inflation-bedecked folks would be to ask Congress to lower the minimum wage, or better still, repeal the law. Instead, it is provided that on Jan. 1 the federal minimum wage is to rise from $2.65 to $2.90 an hour.

This law and similar ones in force in most of the states are crude interferences with the right — yes, human right — of workers and employers to deal with one another freely. They price poor people out of jobs and onto welfare. They raise production costs in some areas — the tomato fields for example — and thereby raise the prices everyone must pay for tomatoes.

Then there are the Davis Bacon and Walsh Healy acts, other legislative monstrosities born during the depression which forcibly raise wages of workers on government contracts and price them, too, out of jobs or out their production.

During inflation, money is over-abundant. Goods, by the same token, are under-abundant. To achieve a balance, the first needs to be reduced, the second increased. To the end of increasing production of goods, all scarcity legislation — and I have cited only a part — should be repealed. With inflation raging at 8 to 10 percent, it is an opportune time for inflation-fighters in Congress and the state legislatures to ferret out and move for repeal of scarcity laws.

WHILE I AM NOTING CARTER'S sins of omission, consider the Federal Reserve, which Jimmy rather slighted in his speech. The nation's money is increasing at twice the rate it should, and it has been for two years, yet the Fed makes no move to slow it. In fact, it is the board of governors which is permitting and making possible this week-like growth. They are the nation's arch-inflaters. Their chairman, G. William Miller, is Carter's appointee.

The shah at bay

By DON GRAFF

The Mideast is certainly the place for crises these days, but Iran is not the place in the Mideast where a crisis was supposed to occur.

This is the country that virtually invented the power politics of oil, the producer that pressed earliest and most persistently to maximize the region's return on its resources while at the same time piling up political capital in the West as its staunchest adherent.

This is the politically stable, economically strong, militarily powerful country that counterbalanced Arab radicalism and increasingly dominated the entire region, the subject not so long ago of strategic scenarios in which, acting as an agent for the West or on its own, it used its might to take physical control of the entire Persian Gulf oil reservoir.

This is the country whose ruler was regarded as the Mideast's shrewdest and surest, the potentate whom former Secretary of State Dean Rusk once singled out as "the best-informed ruler in the world" after the president of the United States.

Yet Iran does indeed have a crisis, a bloody, destructive one that has the shrewd shah trying every expedient in a powerholder's bag of tricks to reassert control and has his friends, particularly in Washington, increasingly concerned about his and his country's future.

If the situation is unexpected, so is the nature of shah's opposition — an unnatural alliance between westernized, left-leaning students, and ultraconservative religious leaders. The former object to the shah's authoritarianism, his disregard of legal niceties in pursuit of modernization and the corruption of the ruling elite surrounding him. The latter resist his modernization period, the transformation of Iran into a secular modern state in disregard of traditional Moslem values.

What they have in common is determination to overthrow the shah. His likely immediate replacement, given the unlikelihood that the two factions could ever agree on a common program, would most probably be anarchy and quite possibly dissolution of the Iranian state.

The shah brought much of his trouble upon himself. After a shaky beginning to his reign — the World War II allies placed him on the throne in 1941 after removing his uncooperative father — he gradually acquired both confidence and assertiveness. Particularly after a 1950s attempt to throw him was squelched with the aid of the CIA.

As oil wealth rolled in, he launched an ambitious program to make Iran both a modern and a great power. Education was vastly expanded — current annual expenditure is $4.3 billion and there are 150,000 students on the teeming and rebellious campuses. Women were encouraged to come out from behind their veils and business expansion was pushed, at the expense of the traditional bazaar economy.

But the shah pushed faster than most of his people were capable of moving into the modern world. He did it with a take-it-or-else attitude, and he coupled social and economic modernization with political reliance on an ancient tool. His secret police, Savak, gave a new meaning to ruthlessness.

In the face of riots and spreading defiance of his authority, the shah has turned to military government, of which

Iran has had plentiful experience in the past. The strong arm may work, and the shah's promise to reform once order is restored, to eliminate corruption and cruelty and to heed the "revolutionary message" now being heard in the land, may put Iran back on the track to 20th-century nationhood.

But it is also possible that the shah, who has fancied himself something of an irresistible Mideast force in recent years, may have encountered, in the strange coupling of revolutionary students and conservative mullahs, an immovable object.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Wednesday, Nov. 15, the 319th day of 1978. There are 46 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On this date in 1777, the Articles of Confederation were approved by the American Continental Congress. The document was the law of the land until the Constitution went into effect.

On this date: In 1492, Christopher Columbus noted in his journal the use of tobacco among the Indians. It was the first recorded reference to tobacco.

In 1805, the Lewis and Clark expedition reached the mouth of the Columbia River on the Pacific Coast after a long trek across the West.

In 1864, Atlanta was burned by Union forces under Gen. William Sherman.

In 1889, the Republic of Brazil was founded.

In 1969, a quarter of a million protesters against the Vietnam War staged a peaceful demonstration in Washington.

In 1976, the Syrian army took full control of Beirut, in effect ending the 19-month civil war in Lebanon.

Ten years ago: U.S. Roman Catholic bishops approved a compromise statement condemning artificial birth control but declared that married couples practicing it would not be cut off from the Catholic Church.

Five years ago: Israel and Egypt began an exchange of prisoners of war.

One year ago: Israel sent a formal invitation to President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to visit Jerusalem and address the Israeli Parliament.

Today's birthdays: Diplomat Averell Harriman is 87 years old. Singer Petula Clark is 44. Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., is 53.

Thought for today: Youth is a wonderful thing. What a crime to waste it upon children — writer George Bernard Shaw, 1856-1950.

Nursing home abuses

By MARTHA ANGLE and ROBERT WALTERS

WASHINGTON (NEA) — When Ralph Nader charged recently that business is trying to make the federal government and its regulations the "whipping boy" for its own failings, his speech caused hardly a ripple.

It is not exactly news, after all, that Nader distrusts the business community. And in this era of rampant inflation, his harping on the virtues of, and need for, government regulation simply isn't very fashionable.

The problem is that just as one is about to dismiss Nader's views as outmoded, along comes some painful new evidence that business brings upon itself much of the federal regulatory burden it so angrily decries.

A case in point is the appalling exploitation of society's most vulnerable members, the elderly, which is all too common in one of the great growth segments of American business — the nursing home industry.

The Federal Trade Commission, which seeks to combat unfair and deceptive practices in commerce, is now in the midst of a full-scale investigation of economic abuses in the nursing home business.

And its preliminary findings indicate a crying need for more, not less, government regulation — a need that wouldn't exist if the owners and operators of some nursing homes didn't seek to take advantage of people in no position to fight back.

Some 1.2 million people, 70 percent of them women, now live in 24,000 nursing homes. The average resident is an 82-year-old widow with two or more chronic ailments who will stay in the home 2.4 years. One-fifth—20 percent—of all nursing home residents never receive a single visitor.

FTC Commissioner Elizabeth Hanford Dole, in a speech outlining some of the agency's initial findings, noted the contracts signed by nursing home residents or their families are often filled with fine print disclaimers absolving the management of liability for all kinds of acts and oversights. A typical admissions statement:

"The facility and its management specifically disclaim liability for any act or omission of any physician, guest or intruder which results in personal injury to the patient."

Nursing home advertising may promise patients a "safe and secure environment," but — as Dole observed — "the promise is cancelled by the contract."

In many homes, patients are billed extra for essential items and services that ought to be covered by the basic rate — aspirin, crutches, soap, bed bars. "One private patient, himself a physician, was helped to take a five-minute walk down the hall and billed $20," Dole reported.

Some nursing homes obtain all drugs and supplies from pharmacies which they or another home in the chain own, and prohibit patients from buying on the open market. One Oregon facility charged 85 cents for a 22-cent pack of Kleenex. Another nursing home studied by the FTC "was charging drug prices 24 percent higher than those charged by independent pharmacists."

Some homes require the family member who guarantees payment of the patient's bill to waive all rights to be informed of changes in the billing rate or in the level of patient services. Many nursing homes do not itemize monthly bills.

The litany goes on and on. "Just as the elderly provide an easy target for street crime, they also provide an easy target for white-collar crime and economically abusive practices," Dole said.

The nursing home industry, with total revenues of just $500 million in 1960, is now at $14 billion — a year business, and still growing. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is responsible for regulating the quality of care provided by nursing homes, but until now there has been little federal regulation of the commercial aspects of the business.

That's about to change, as the FTC moves forward with its investigation and ultimately with new regulations. And when those regulations are issued, nursing home operators will have no one to blame but themselves for making them necessary.

Grandmother, veteran highlight judge list

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A black woman lawyer, a decorated war veteran, an unsuccessful U.S. Senate candidate and a grandmother highlight the list of 10 Texans recommended for federal judgeships.

After screening more than 200 candidates during the last 18 months, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen released his choices Tuesday for the lifetime posts that pay $54,500 a year. President Carter technically nominates persons for the federal bench and the Senate confirms them but traditionally, the recommendations from a party-in-power senator virtually guarantees nomination and confirmation.

Bentsen's announcement came less than a week after Carter signed an executive order setting out the principles of "merit selection," which the president hopes will be instituted in the filling of 152 new judgeships created by Congress this year.

"The recommendations I am submitting are the result of a careful merit selection process that has been underway for the past year and a half, since the Senate first approved the judgeship bill," said Bentsen.

Earlier the Texas Democrat had told the Dallas Times Herald: "I am the merit commission for Texas."

Bentsen's choices continued to establish a number of "firsts" for Texas minorities.

Since Carter took office,

Bentsen has recommended — and received — appointments for the first Texas Mexican-American U.S. Attorney (J.A. "Tony" Canales in Houston) and U.S. Marshall (Rudy Garza in San Antonio) as well as the first black U.S. Marshall (Thaddeus Coney, also in Houston).

Should all 10 persons picked for federal judgeships breeze through the nomination and confirmation process as expected, Texas will have its first black on the federal bench — 36-year-old Gabrielle K. McDonald.

The Houston lawyer and mother of two was one of five persons chosen in the Southern District of Texas. Others were:

- George Edward Cize, 56, a justice on the 14th Court of Civil Appeals in Houston who was awarded the Silver Star and Purple Heart for his Marine Corps service at Iwo Jima.

- James DeAnda, a 53-year-old McAllen lawyer and a national board member of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund's executive committee.

- George P. Kazen, the 38-year-old lawyer-nephew of Rep. Abraham "Chick" Kazen of Laredo.

- and Norman W. Black, a 46-year-old U.S. Magistrate in Houston.

Bentsen's three recommendations for the Northern District were:

- Barefoot Sanders, 53, whose political career has spanned three terms in the state legislature, two years in the White House as legislative counsel to Lyndon Johnson, an unsuccessful challenge to Sen. John Tower in 1972 and a Bentsen delegate nominee to the 1976 presidential preference primary.

- Mary Lou Robinson, the 52-year-old grandmother currently serving as chief justice of the 7th Court of Criminal Appeals in Amarillo.
- and David O. Belew Jr., 58, a Fort Worth lawyer and former president of the Fort Worth-Tarrant County Bar Association.

Bentsen's choice for the additional judgeship in the Western District was 226th District Court Judge Ted Butler, 51, of San Antonio and a former U.S. Attorney. Robert M. Parker, 41, got Bentsen's nod for the Eastern District post. Parker is a Longview lawyer and former administrative aide for Rep. Ray Roberts.

Eight of the ten selections are graduates of Bentsen's alma mater — the University of Texas law school.

Bentsen stressed that all of his choices had been cleared by the Committee on Federal Judiciary of the State Bar of Texas.

"These names I am recommending have been subjected to review by a series of committees around the state who then made their recommendations to me," he added. "In addition, a member of my staff spent extensive time in Texas making inquiries about the candidates."

The FBI will also scrutinize the potential federal judges.

Jurors to hear tapes as testimony continues

HOUSTON (AP) — "Uh, we got somewhat of a problem. And the man is here to put the judge away but he wants $100,000."

"Bull..." comes the reply. "Well, I told him bull... too. Cullen, but goddamn, there's not anything I can do when it's in the paper everyday."

So goes a tape recorded conversation between the accused and the accuser in the murder-for-hire trial of Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis.

And jurors, reading from fiercely disputed transcripts, were to listen today to that recording and most likely four others involving Davis and FBI informant David McCrory.

The FBI recordings and photographs and film of a videotaped meeting between Davis and McCrory last August in Fort Worth form the bulk of the state's case against the darkly handsome oil heir.

Davis, 45, is accused of murdering an alleged attempt to hire a gunman to kill the Fort Worth judge presiding over his sputtering divorce case.

The judge was not harmed. But authorities swooped down on Davis minutes after he allegedly handed McCrory $25,000 for arranging the "murder" of Judge Joe Eidsen.

According to that tape, there was this conversation between Davis and McCrory:

McCrory: "I got Judge Eidsen dead for you."

Davis: "Good."

McCrory: "I'll get the rest of them dead for you. You want a bunch of people dead, right?"

Davis: "Right."

McCrory testified Tuesday that Davis "showed me five fingers three times, and kind of laughed" as he calmly ordered the murders of 15 people.

The burly, brown-haired witness opened and closed his fist three times to illustrate his point.

The alleged "hit list" included Eidsen and three others who testified against Davis last year in an Amarillo murder trial in which Davis was acquitted in the death of his young stepdaughter.

McCrory, a one-time drinking and pool shooting companion of Davis, said the defendant told him once he had decided on his first victim and instructed McCrory to hire a professional killer.

"If you turn me around, I'll kill you and your whole damn family. You know I've got the money and the power to have it done," McCrory quoted Davis as saying. "Don't you ever say anything like that again or I'll tear your damn head off." McCrory said he replied.

"I felt like I could handle the situation, talk him out of it, kid him out of it," McCrory testified. "I thought I could handle the situation without anyone getting hurt."

But he said he became convinced Davis was serious and it was then that he went to the FBI with his bizarre story.

Defense attorneys conceded this week that Davis met with McCrory on Aug. 18-20 on the parking lot of Coco's restaurant in Fort Worth.

"I've never said he was not there," said chief defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes. "What I have said is Cullen has not engaged in any culpable activity with McCrory."

McInnis to ask for venue change

EDINBURG, Texas (AP) — A South Texas sheriff says he had no ill will towards a district attorney against whom he helped compile a murder solicitation case.

Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo's testimony was entered here Tuesday at the second day of pretrial motions in the murder solicitation case against local District Attorney Oscar McInnis.

The hearing was to continue today with an appearance by Noe Villanueva — the man McInnis allegedly lured into Mexico and killed. A state judge was also to hear a prosecution request for a change of venue.

The defense team is trying to show that investigators — specifically Marmolejo — entrapped McInnis. The defendant wants State District Judge Vernon Harville of Corpus Christi to suppress tape recordings that purportedly show that McInnis asked a prisoner to get a hit man to kill Villanueva. The tapes were clandestinely compiled this past spring at the Hidalgo County Jail.

As the defense continued its entrapment argument Tuesday, defense lawyer Frank Maloney of Austin tried to show that McInnis and Marmolejo were political foes. Maloney has been trying to show that the prisoner who told the sheriff about the alleged plot was working as an agent for Marmolejo.

"Mr. McInnis was not a man who was one of your favorites, was he?" Maloney asked the sheriff.

"I had a lot of respect for him," Marmolejo replied, adding that he considered McInnis a friend "at one time."

The sheriff also testified that initially he did not believe prisoner Daniel Rodriguez' story about the purported plot.

"But Dan said, 'May God strike my son dead if I'm lying to you,'" Marmolejo said.

Maloney also pursued his effort to show that Rodriguez initiated many of the conversations with McInnis and had first suggested killing Villanueva. Rodriguez testified here that he "jokingly" recommended that McInnis find someone to "blow (Villanueva's) brains out."

"Did he tell you he initiated the conversations?" Maloney asked Marmolejo.

The sheriff answered: "During the course of the conversation, yes. He told me about it."

Tuesday's testimony also included accounts of an Austin meeting with Gov. Dolph Briscoe in May. Marmolejo said U.S. Attorney Tony Canales of Houston suggested that a state official be informed about the investigation.

Marmolejo and his attorney,

Jon Wood of Edinburg, told of a 30-minute meeting with Briscoe. They said Joe LaMantia — an area resident and friend of Briscoe — arranged the meeting.

In response to a question from Maloney, Marmolejo said he did not go to Texas Attorney General John Hill because "I didn't trust him." Hill upset the sheriff here earlier this year when he intervened on behalf of 250 farmers arrested for blocking an international bridge.

Scientists clarify rumors

DALLAS (AP) — Scientists who pioneered an experimental alternative to some open heart surgery say they're still optimistic but want desperately to quiet the premature excitement and false hopes their research has spawned.

The technique — in which a tiny balloon is inserted without surgery into an artery on the heart and inflated to clear obstructions — has exciting potential as an effective, low-cost treatment for some victims of heart disease, the international team of doctors said Tuesday.

But, they stressed at a news conference, the technique is in very early stages of development and would help less than 10 percent of patients who now face surgery to ease the danger of heart attack. It was first used on human patients only a year ago.

Recent research also suggests a number of potentially fatal complications, such as punctured arteries, although none have developed in nearly 100 experimental patients.

"We have not found an alternative to surgery for the majority of patients and we have not found a cure for coronary disease," said Dr. Richard Myler of St. Mary's Hospital in San Francisco.

He said overenthusiastic news reports last summer led to a deluge of calls from heart disease victims hoping in vain for a miracle cure that would spare them the operating room.

Myler said they were turned away because "we just don't really know yet whether this is going to be successful."

But if perfected, the procedure might cost a tenth as much as open heart surgery, where bills often total more than $10,000, said Dr. Simon Sertzer of University Hospital in Zurich, Switzerland. The device was developed there by Dr. Andreas Gruntzig.

The new procedure was obviously exciting to doctors attending the American Heart Association conference here, where Gruntzig reviewed generally promising results in Europe and the United States.

"We can say that the procedure can be done," Dr. Martin Kaltenbach of Lenox Hill Hospital in New York said later. "And we can say now that once we have established the reopening of the artery, it can apparently stay open (for at least a year)."

"But you have to realize that we are still at the very beginning."

American airlines to move from New York to Dallas

NEW YORK (AP) — American Airlines is expected to announce plans to move its headquarters and 1,000 employees from New York City to Dallas, according to sources at the company and at City Hall here.

Formal announcement was expected today after the airline's monthly board meeting, the sources said.

American, the nation's second-largest carrier, intends to move its headquarters to a site near the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport sometime next year, the sources said Tuesday.

The planned move, which would jolt New York City's economy, has already elicited criticism from Mayor Edward Koch, who said Sunday that he was "very distressed" by American Chairman Albert V. Casey. Casey is a member of the city's Emergency Financial Control Board.

This is the second time in the past 10 years that American has expressed interest in moving to Dallas. American is said to be looking to Dallas as a possible "hub" for expanding its Southwest route system.

The airline's flight academy and training center, with an estimated 5,000 employees, is al-

Texas weather

By The Associated Press

Freezing rain, sleet, light snow and drizzle covered the Texas Panhandle early today as a strong winter storm moved into Texas, prompting the National Weather Service to issue a variety of warnings and watches.

A heavy snow warning was issued for the Texas Panhandle, traveler's advisories warning of slick roads and streets was issued for the South Plains and a flash flood watch was issued for Northeast Texas. Forecasters warned of possible heavy rainfall in northern portions of the state away from the area expecting snow.

Freezing rain, sleet, drizzle and light snow covered most of the Panhandle early today and forecasters warned that snow accumulations of three to five inches could be expected today and tonight in the northern two-thirds of the Panhandle while the southern one-third could expect accumulations of up to three inches.

Icy roads in the Panhandle made driving hazardous during the pre-dawn hours today, causing numerous apparently minor traffic accidents. No fatalities were reported during the first few hours of the wintry onslaught.

A cold front was moving southward across Texas early today, moving along a line from Texarkana to Waco to Sanderson. North of the front, freezing rain, sleet, drizzle, rain and fog were reported. To the south, it was rain and fog.

Forecasters called for most of the state to get some form of precipitation and skies were to be cloudy over most of the state.

The storm system brought on sharply contrasting extreme temperatures in the pre-dawn hours. Temperatures ranged from the 20s in the Panhandle to near 80 in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extreme readings ranged from 27 at Amarillo and Dalhart in the Panhandle to 78 at Brownsville in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Other early morning readings included 36 at Wichita Falls, 65 at Texarkana, 43 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 71 at Austin, 67 at Lufkin, 72 at Houston, 76 at Corpus Christi, 68 at Del Rio, 37 at San Angelo, 46 at El Paso and 31 at Lubbock.

Freezing drizzle was reported at Amarillo, Dalhart and Lubbock. Rain was reported at Austin and drizzle was reported at Del Rio, Midland, San Angelo, Wichita Falls and Waco. Fog was reported at Midland and Beaumont.

Other early morning readings included 36 at Wichita Falls, 65 at Texarkana, 43 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 71 at Austin, 67 at Lufkin, 72 at Houston, 76 at Corpus Christi, 68 at Del Rio, 37 at San Angelo, 46 at El Paso and 31 at Lubbock.

Freezing drizzle was reported at Amarillo, Dalhart and Lubbock. Rain was reported at Austin and drizzle was reported at Del Rio, Midland, San Angelo, Wichita Falls and Waco. Fog was reported at Midland and Beaumont.

Freezing rain, sleet, drizzle and light snow covered most of the Panhandle early today and forecasters warned that snow accumulations of three to five inches could be expected today and tonight in the northern two-thirds of the Panhandle while the southern one-third could expect accumulations of up to three inches.

Icy roads in the Panhandle made driving hazardous during the pre-dawn hours today, causing numerous apparently minor traffic accidents. No fatalities were reported during the first few hours of the wintry onslaught.

A cold front was moving southward across Texas early today, moving along a line from Texarkana to Waco to Sanderson. North of the front, freezing rain, sleet, drizzle, rain and fog were reported. To the south, it was rain and fog.

Forecasters called for most of the state to get some form of precipitation and skies were to be cloudy over most of the state.

The storm system brought on sharply contrasting extreme temperatures in the pre-dawn hours. Temperatures ranged from the 20s in the Panhandle to near 80 in the Lower Rio Grande Valley. Extreme readings ranged from 27 at Amarillo and Dalhart in the Panhandle to 78 at Brownsville in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Talburt was born on Oct. 7, 1931 in Arkansas. He moved to Pampa in 1962 from Searcy, Ark. and was a member of the First Baptist Church.

Survivors include his wife Jimmy Caroline Talburt of the home; one daughter, Barbara; five sons, Larry, Richard Lee, Douglas Edward, Eddie Dean, and Jimmy Dean.

'Junk yards' top agenda in Skellytown

The maintenance of "junk yards" in the city was discussed at length Tuesday night at the regular meeting of the Skellytown Town Council.

The meeting was called to order at 7 p.m. by Mayor P.M. Cousins. Aldermen Mills, Chaney and Harris were present, while Aldermen Coday and Pogue were absent.

After discussing the proposed "junk yard" ordinance, the council decided that further study would have to be made on the matter.

The council discussed the extension of 7th street of junction with Byrd St. It was decided that a surveyor will be hired to lay out the streets.

The status of city owned equipment was also discussed, along with plans for snow removal when necessary. It was announced that the road maintainer is now ready for winter work.

Finally, the city's civil defense program was reviewed. The meeting adjourned at 8:15 p.m.

Police officer injured in scuffle

A Pampa police officer was injured Tuesday evening while trying to break up a fight.

Officers were dispatched to the Playboy Lounge, where a fight was reportedly in progress. There they were advised that Michael Dewitt Finney, 35, of Skellytown had a knife.

When the officers attempted to arrest Finney he reportedly resisted and began scuffling with them. Officer Glen Carden's foot was broken in the struggle.

Carden was taken to Highland General Hospital, where he was admitted.

Finney was arrested for disorderly conduct, aggravated assault on a police officer and resisting arrest.

Public pension plans in bad shape financially

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The generous public pension plans in Texas' three largest cities are in poor shape financially, a legislative committee concludes.

The problem is simple. They pay out too much money for the amount taken in.

"Relying on actuarial reports, our study shows the pension systems of Houston, Dallas and the San Antonio firemen's and policemen's fund to be actuarially and financially unsound," reports a special committee on public pension plans.

"Promises of generous retirement or pension benefits cannot possibly be met with the irresponsible and uncontrolled methods used by many local governmental subdivisions," the study adds.

The solutions are complex and slow.

"Pension funds are long-term animals, so solutions are going to be long term," says Ray Ward, administrator of the Dallas firemen's and police fund.

Retirement systems are among the strongest drawing cards for attracting public employees.

But attempts at generosity sometimes backfire, a San Antonio official said.

Automatic cost-of-living increases were introduced in 1971, but a 1 cent sales tax increase failed to get legislative approval, said Sgt. Horace Neades, secretary of the San Antonio firemen's and policemen's pension board.

"The benefits increased 300 percent, but the sales tax didn't get through, so we didn't increase contributions," he said.

"In 16 years, we've had no contribution increases, but the benefits have tripled."

Changes in the San Antonio fire and police fund must come through the Legislature, which created the plan. Pension systems for Houston city employees and Dallas firemen and police also were legislative creations.

Other plans were established via city ordinances, including pension systems for employees other than police and firemen in Dallas and Austin.

One measure of a plan's stability is the ratio of current assets to unfunded liability that must be paid out in future benefits.

San Antonio's plan for firemen and police has approximately $33 million in assets and $137 million in unfunded liability.

The Dallas firemen's and police pension system lists $66 million in assets and $198 million in unfunded liability.

An imbalance of $131 million in assets to $275 million in unfunded liability exists in Houston's plan.

Liability levels must be frozen and eventually eliminated in 30 to 40 years, the legislative committee recommended.

That goal is difficult, yet possible, a Dallas official said.

Problems in the Dallas firemen and police pension increased when employees leaving the system were allowed to take their contributions with them, said Ray Ward, pension administrator.

"Over a period of time, the contributions became larger and it got to the point where they became fairly substantial," he said. As the mobile society developed, members leaving the system wanted some money back. They got it beginning in 1973.

"But contributions had to go up that much more to keep actual retirement benefits up," he said.

Retirement pensions, exclusive of cost-of-living increases, range from $700 to $1,200 monthly, Ward said. Some retirees enjoy pensions that are 40 percent more than their contributions.

Changes in contribution and benefits levels are being considered, said the administrator.

"The benefits are very, very generous compared to the financing," Ward said. "Mainly, it's a contribution problem."

San Antonio firemen and police would give up benefits to get their system in sound shape, Neades said.

"We have no age requirements now," he said. "A person can retire any time after 20 years. But we want a minimum age of 50."

Members now contribute 7 1/2 percent of their salary and the city puts in 11 1/4 percent. The pension board wants to change that to an 8 percent-16 percent contribution rate. Cost-of-living increases would be limited to 6 percent annually and would require board approval under another locally suggested proposal, he added.

"The cost-of-living is our main problem now," Neades said. "Since 1971, we've had a 41 percent increase in cost-of-living. The lowest we've given each year is 4 percent. This year we will give 10 percent."

Although the legislative committee avoided specific treatment for individual systems, it had a few general suggestions.

Pension plans created by local ordinance should be audited annually and be subject to actuarial review every three years, the report said.

Pension legislation should be handled "slower in a better examined manner," it added.

Other recommendations include:

- Creation of a permanent legislative committee on pension funds.
- Requiring pension fund legislation to include an actuarial analysis.
- Return of all employee contributions, with interest, to resigned employees.
- Adoption of minimum operation standards for locally controlled systems.
- Elimination of statutory ceilings on contributions to local pension funds and establishment of adequate employee-employer contribution ratios.
- A moratorium on benefit increases until a pension plan is more than 50 percent fully funded. A system is fully funded when it has available all benefits for services rendered.

Federal judge hints of probation for brothers

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — U.S. District Judge Finis Cowan has indicated he will give probation sentences to two brothers charged with misusing federal funds.

In a memorandum filed Tuesday, Cowan said Clarence and Donald Gray of Harlingen have been mistakenly portrayed as the perpetrators of a fraud on the government and he probably will not send them to jail because their reputations have been so badly damaged.

In a change of venue case from Brownsville, the brothers entered pleas of guilty in September to seven counts of conspiracy to defraud the government and misapply federal funds.

Involvement was a vocational education program using federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds.

Cowan said he tentatively has decided to fine Donald Gray $20,000, suspend a five-year prison sentence, and order him to pay back $2,500 that could be considered his personal gain from the CETA programs.

Clarence Gray was tentatively fined $5,000, given a five-year suspended sentence and ordered to pay back $3,000.

A Dec. 1 hearing was scheduled for prosecution and defense lawyers to argue Cowan's tentative decisions.

Cowan's preliminary memorandum said the case against the Grays does not fit into his general sentencing philosophy that persons found guilty of violating a monetary trust should spend time in jail.

"It is a definite oversimplification to characterize this as a case where the Grays were 'stealing' from the manpower program in which there was, in the usual sense of the word, a 'fraud' upon the government," the memorandum said.

"The Grays did engage in unwise self-dealing and exercised extremely poor judgment in the means by which they sought to accomplish commendable goals."

Donald Gray is business agent for Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 873 in Harlingen. His brother has been a vocational education instructor to help underprivileged and underemployed gain experience to join a union.

Cowan said the brothers developed "an excellent reputation in the field of vocational training" while operating programs funded through a Local 873 assessment.

The judge said Cameron County officials and the Grays wanted Local 873 to operate CETA training programs but the union was reluctant to get involved in the federal programs.

Cowan said he is convinced the Grays then set up the Building Trades Special Programs under CETA with the consent of union officials.

He added, however, the Cameron County Commissioners Court was not told of the arrangement and that this deception caused the trouble. Money from CETA moved from the Commissioners Court to the CETA program the commissioners erroneously believed was operated by the union.

"Although there may be some arguable justification for the self-dealing, there is no justification for the concealment," Cowan said.

Had the arrangement continued, the judge said, the Grays could have ultimately profited.

"But in the light of present knowledge, it would appear that their losses — financial and otherwise — far exceed what appear to be minimal and relatively inconsequential gains," Cowan said.

New National Smoker Study:

Merit Taste Impresses Toughest Critics.

'Enriched Flavor' tobacco proved satisfying even to high tar smokers in latest research.

What do smokers of high tar cigarettes—the toughest taste critics of low tar smoking—have to say about low tar MERIT?

Read what they thought in a new, nationwide research effort:

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And current MERIT smokers reported:

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first real taste alternative for high tar smokers.

Advice

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this letter in the hope that you will print it because my parents read your column daily.

I am 16 (a girl) and have always had a good rapport with my parents, but there is one major issue on which we disagree—my privacy. They don't think I'm entitled to any because of my age and being dependent on them.

I am fairly intelligent and know where my head is at and where I'm going in life. Just recently I found out that my parents had gone through my things—including one drawer which I kept locked. (I left the key out, thinking I could trust them.) I know they did this because they left a note which read, "You are too young to smoke grass. (signed) Dad." I also discovered that a pipe was missing.

I have not discussed this with them because I am afraid to talk to them. I don't do any other kind of drugs and I am not a "bad" kid.

I feel deprived of my rights and would appreciate your opinion. Please print this. It's the only way we will get this out in the open to discuss it.

HOPEWELL, N.J.

DEAR HOPEWELL: Yes, your privacy has been invaded and, morally, you have been deprived of your rights... but legally you are minor and your parents are responsible for your welfare and behavior.

I do not approve of parents going through their children's drawers, so I'm not excusing them, but since they did, and you father left you a note, consider it an invitation to discuss the matter.

DEAR ABBY: We know a nice, compatible couple who tell us that they might come over on the weekend, so we wait around and wait around, and half the time they don't show. They don't have a telephone, so we can't call them to find out if they're coming or not.

We enjoy their company, but it's hard to make plans when they are so unreliable.

So what do we do?

IZZY FROM PISMO BEACH

DEAR IZZY: When this nice, compatible couple tell you they "might" come over, tell them you "might" be home. Then do as you please.

DEAR ABBY: My 19-year-old son ran off the other night and got married to his 18-year-old girlfriend.

To beat all, HER mother went with them! She didn't even have the courage to tell her husband. The children had gone steady for two years, and since I had discussed the matter with her mother I was sure she didn't want an early marriage any more than I did. And now this, with her blessing! I am so angry at her I don't know what to do.

I am not going to show my anger because I don't want the children to start off married life with parents who are mad at each other, but I'd like to know what you think of this whole sneaky deal.

STILL ANGRY

DEAR STILL: I think it's pretty sneaky. But simmer down. There may be a little "sequel" to that story.

Ask Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am dieting again, but I am experiencing the same problem that I have had each time I change my food intake. I can't understand why but I get a terrible breath odor and an awful taste in my mouth.

Sometimes it is so annoying that it causes me to eat anything available just to get rid of the taste and odor. Of course, this goes up my diet. Can you explain why this happens? I have tried brushing my teeth, but that seems only temporary and lasts just a short time.

DEAR READER — Remember that when you breathe air out, it comes from your lungs. If you have been drinking alcohol, alcohol fumes will be in the air you breathe out, and it will be a source of the smell of alcohol on your breath.

Any time your body chemistry is disturbed, abnormal chemicals may come out through the lungs as you exhale. Brushing your teeth, using mints or mouthwashes really won't solve this problem because the source of the odor is your own body and is coming from your lungs.

Only when the basic condition in your body is corrected will the abnormal odor go away, and stay away. It's just like a person who drinks too much alcohol. The odor of alcohol will leave when his body has completely eliminated the alcohol.

Why would your dieting upset your body chemistry? I can't say for certain without knowing what kind of diet you are on, but I suspect you are on a diet that severely restricts carbohydrates. For that reason, I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-2, Low Carbohydrate Diet Fads, which explains fully how such diets can be bad for your body, and how they can create bad breath.

Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-adressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Certainly, if you are on a severely restricted carbohydrate diet, your body will need to use increased amounts of fat, whether those are fats in your diet or fats from your body tissue. In the process, an excess amount of a chemical called ketones is produced. Acetone is one example of these, and it has an odor very much like alcohol.

Individuals who are on such diets, and are in a state of ketosis, then will go around breathing out an alcoholic-like breath. If you are certain they haven't been drinking, you can pretty well pick out the person who is on such a severe fad diet.

My best advice to you would be to follow a sensible weight control diet that induces a slow weight loss and is still a balanced diet. That will prevent upsetting your body chemistry.

The other point you should consider is to depend more on exercise on a long-term basis to help you lose weight. You may not lose very much actual fat tissue each day, but if you exercise an adequate amount daily for an entire year, even if we are talking about just a nice long walk each day, you will be surprised how much fat tissue you can eliminate.

You can find out if your bad breath is caused by a lack of carbohydrates in your diet by going on a diet that still provides an adequate amount of carbohydrates in it. If you can diet that way without having bad breath, you will have solved your problem.

You don't need a low carbohydrate diet to lose weight — you need a low calorie diet. Any diet that eliminates concentrated sweets and starches and fat will usually fill the bill if you stick to it and exercise regularly, too.

DEAR POLLY — I want to tell Fran how I remove car grease from polyester pants. Rub butter (salt-free) on the grease spots before the garment is washed. After spots are removed, wash in soapy water. I use a mild liquid soap. — MRS. O.E.S.

DEAR POLLY — We travel extensively. I have used the following method for packing for many years and would not do it any other way. I always put all sets of lingerie, shirts, blouses, etc. in separate plastic bags. As needed, a bag with its contents can be easily taken from my suitcase without disturbing other packed articles. This keeps a neat traveling bag and eliminates the frustration of constantly repacking a disheveled suitcase. When completely unpacking a bag, such as on my arrival home, I put the plastic bags back in the empty suitcase so they are ready to be used for the next trip. — EVA Play is a child's work.

Buying toys takes thought

(First of six parts)

New York (NEA) — Play is a child's work. Toys are the tools of that work, all part of the world's most important business: growing up!

According to Dr. Maria W. Piers of the Erikson Institute for Early Education in Chicago, "Through play, children learn and polish skills — social, emotional, physical, mental. If children did not play, they could not thrive and they might not survive."

Up to 70 percent of the toys used to aid the year-round growing process are purchased during the last quarter of the year as Christmas presents by parents, grandparents, other relatives and friends.

American toy manufacturers gross $3.3 billion a year at the manufacturing level. This translates to an estimated $4.5 billion in retail sales — an average of about $90 per year spent on toys for each child.

That's a pretty big chunk out of almost anybody's budget in these days of increasing inflation. Those planning to purchase toys for Christmas giving, or in fact at any time, can benefit by using a little thought, investigation and careful planning.

1. Select toys that are appropriate to the age, interests and capabilities of the individual child. Remember, each child is different.

2. Consider the different areas of play activity and their contribution to a child's development. These are maintained throughout childhood, and even into adulthood:

Active physical play with toys such as balls, wheel vehicles and sports equipment to aid physical development.

Creative, constructive play with blocks, construction, painting and scientific toys to stimulate observation, develop new concepts and self-expression.

Imitative play with dolls, stuffed toys, trucks, airplanes, costumes and similar items to help the child understand the adult world and to encourage individual, imaginative thinking.

Social play to help a child to learn to get along with others, develop good sportsmanship and the ability to concentrate and think quickly.

3. The best playthings possess some of the following qualities:

Provide some degree of realism. It should be a realistic reproduction of an adult-world object in order to promote a child's interests, mastery and playfulness.

Be functional. It should do or suggest something that can be controlled or learned by the child. It might be a toy that can be assembled, disassembled and put together again.

Provide a variety of play experiences. It might be a toy that can be used in different arrangements, such as blocks, to suggest different objects or activities.

4. Toys should be safe to use. Stringent industry voluntary safety standards and government regulations have made American toys nearly the safest in the world. There is, however, no substitute for responsible adult supervision. Use recommended age labeling as a guide and look for warning and other safety messages on toy packaging. When buying for younger children, avoid toys with sharp points and edges or those with small parts that might be hazardous to them.

5. Finally, keep in mind that toys are for fun. NEXT: Toys for toddlers

Sports helps kids learn math

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents and teachers never cease to be amazed at how a youngster who can't remember the multiplication table manages to instantly compute his favorite pitcher's earned run average, or how the student who goes blank on state capitals can recite every city that has a baseball, football or basketball team.

In an attempt to harness all this untapped numerical prowess, two Nashville, Tenn., teachers invented an educational game called Math Baseball.

Using flashcards instead of balls and bats, the instructional board game is played by answering a variety of simple math problems which, depending on their difficulty, translate into hits ranging from a single to a home run.

But baseball Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, believes sports can play a positive role in helping youngsters learn in other situations also.

"As a parent myself," Irvin said, "I know how frustrating it can be to have a youngster spend hours watching televised sports when he should be doing his homework. Instead of fighting it, with a little imagination a parent can turn this television time into an opportunity to practice math."

Irvin contends that since every sport involves numerical "games" to fit every one. Here are a few he suggests:

—Have your youngster pick his favorite baseball pitcher and calculate his earned run average at the end of each game.

—If your child is more interested in Reggie Jackson than Tom Seaver, change that calculation to batting average. These calculations can be checked at the end of every week in the local newspaper.

—Why not challenge your youngster to see if he can beat the football announcer in figuring out the yardage penalty on a play? Or have him pick his favorite end, back and quarterback on the local team and then calculate how many yards the back gains, the percentage of receptions the end makes, and the total yardage on the quarterback's completed passes. Again, all answers can be checked in the local paper.

—When basketball season starts, your youngster can figure out the free throw percentage of his favorite basketball team. As he gets better, he can do it for individual team members as well. Another good way for him to practice his addition is to keep a running tally of how many points are scored by his favorite player.

—Have your youngster keep track of the amount of time spent in the penalty box by the hockey team he's following. He can also be figuring out the percentage of goals scored against the number of shots taken.

To make this technique even more interesting for your children, Irvin suggests a built-in rewards system.

"At the start of the season, set up some goals for your youngster. When he meets them, take him to a real live game. It will not only be a practice session, but it will be a nice experience for both of you," Irvin said.

London's Historic Tower

900 years ago this year William the Conqueror ordered a square, stone tower to be built in a corner of the city of London. Its purpose was to help William control the city's people, and to protect London from an attack by sea. Later, English rulers built a huge palace around the tower, and surrounded it with walls and a moat. Several kings and queens lived in the fortress. Others spent time as prisoners in it. Still others were executed there. The tower housed prisoners of war as recently as World War II, and is now used mostly as a museum and tourist attraction.

DO YOU KNOW — On what famous river is the Tower of London located?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Prince Philip, husband of Queen Elizabeth, is Prince Charles' father.

Hillside strangler, one year later

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Hillside Strangler, who terrorized this city for months, killed 13 women between September 1977 and last February. Then nothing. Why not? Is he dead? Lying low? Perhaps somewhere else?

They're tough questions, and the detectives who have been chasing the strangler for a year are just as baffled as anyone.

"You got 20 investigators, you got 20 theories," said Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department investigator Frank Salerno, who has been on the case more than a year.

Of the 13 Hillside Strangler killings, police list one in September, two in October, eight in November and one in December, all of last year, and one last February.

It was a year ago this month that police set up the Hillside Strangler Task Force to track down whoever was strangling young women and leaving their nude bodies on the city's hillside. At its peak last winter the Task Force had 140 members and occupied a large room where phones were ringing off the hooks with tips from citizens.

Rewards totaling $125,000 were offered by the city and the county, but they have since been withdrawn. Gradually the phones stopped ringing, the tips dried up and the Task Force, reduced to 18 investigators, was moved to a smaller room.

The failure to solve this case has been a sore point with police officials for a long time. Last December, Assistant Police Chief Daryl Gates, who headed the investigation, said, "I'm embarrassed every time I look at myself in the mirror."

Gates, who has since been promoted to chief, has insisted all along that his men would solve the case. The department's top spokesman, Cmdr. William Booth, says the chief still feels the case will be solved. "He does, I do and the investigators do," Booth said.

According to Booth, the Task Force is now "sharpening its focus, separating the wheat from the chaff as to what is a valuable lead and what is not."

He says that even now, nine months after the latest killing, investigators "have a number of good leads."

But sheriff's investigator Salerno tells a different story. "At this point we have no tangible leads," he said. The sheriff has jurisdiction in two of the murders and works closely with the police Task Force.

About a year ago women here were scared. Many wouldn't venture out alone, especially after dark. Self-defense classes sprang up at colleges and high schools.

But time has dimmed the fears and interest. There have been other things to think about — heavy rains and mudslides. Proposition 13, mandatory school busing, brushfires that burned 200 homes, the San Diego air collision, the election, a new series of killings but this time with victims less worrisome to the public — derelicts, not young women.

Around town today, you won't hear talk of the strangler. That was yesterday's problem.

The case isn't solved, but the killing ended.

As Booth put it: "The fire, so to speak, was put out. For whatever reason, this series of crimes was stopped."

Texas swing, chili and imported wine

HOUSTON (AP) — They squinted at its color, swirled it, sniffed it, sipped it and slobbered it around in their mouths.

Then, with all the aplomb they could muster, Houston's oenophiles spit out their mouthfuls of wines from the best vineyards in the world.

They were here, in the world of Texas swing and chili where people are thought to prefer beer to Beaujolais, for the 1978 Sakowitz wine auction.

The event is said to be one of only two such sales in the United States.

As their honkytonk counterparts might argue football at a bar while spitting tobacco into brass spittoons, the connoisseurs discussed various vintages while expectorating into tasteful wine cases filled with green Easter-basket excelsior.

After the wine-tasting session, the standing-room-only crowd of about 450 bidders got down to the real business of buying for the "vino."

To add to the international flavor of the occasion, the sponsor flew English auctioneer J. Michael Broadbent from London to preside over the sale.

Exports expected to rise

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The value of U.S. farm exports, which soared to a record $27.3 billion last fiscal year, is expected to gain further in 1978-79, the Agriculture Department said today.

In its first official forecast for the year that began Oct. 1, the department said exports could rise 6.2 percent to about $29 billion.

Thomas R. Saylor of the department's Foreign Agricultural Service announced the export forecast in remarks prepared for a session of USDA's annual outlook conference.

He said, however, that the actual shipments could range in value between $26 billion and $32 billion.

Meanwhile, another department official says that the decline of the dollar's value abroad may be "giving false signals" about U.S. exports of agricultural products.

Edward Schuh, a deputy assistant secretary who helps oversee international and commodity programs, told the annual conference, "If the dollar is now undervalued, as many believe, these strong export markets may be in part an illusion. As the dollar recovers to its equilibrium level, a rather sizeable adjustment problem may be forced on the agricultural sector."

Looking at export prospects for 1978-79, Saylor said that the actual volume of commodities exported may change but little from the record 122.3 million metric tons shipped overseas last year.

But higher average prices for commodities are expected, and those could push the total value of 1978-79 exports to another new high, he said.

Foreign demand is strong, particularly for soybeans and protein meal, Saylor said. The United States will be the only major supplier of those commodities until the Brazilian soybean harvest next spring.

Saylor said that the reason for suggesting a possible range in exports of $26 billion to $32 billion is the uncertainty at the present time over crops of wheat, feed grains and soybeans in the Southern Hemisphere.

A favorable harvest in those countries could result in increased competition for U.S. commodities in world markets beginning around Jan. 1, he said.

Further, world economic developments, trends in the value of the dollar and domestic and trade policy decisions made in agriculture by U.S. and foreign governments will have a bearing on the actual value level of farm exports in the coming year, Saylor said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has revised its figures on world grain stockpiles upward to reflect recent increases in estimates of grain production in the Soviet Union.

Therefore, the department said Monday, grain supplies will be larger than projected earlier.

The department's Foreign

Agricultural Service said that by next July 1, the world reserve of wheat and so-called coarse grains such as corn and barley will be a near-record of 201.4 million metric tons, a jump of 23.4 percent from inventories of 163.2 million this summer.

On Nov. 2, the agency in a similar report projected the mid-1979 grain stockpile at 188.4 million metric tons, a 6 percent increase from this July 1.

But a few days later, the Soviet Union announced that it produced a record grain harvest this year and the department soon followed with its own estimate that the Russian grain crop was a record 230 million metric tons, up from the previous estimate of 220 million metric tons.

Counting the boost in the 1978 Soviet grain harvest and other adjustments, the world supply and demand for wheat and coarse grains were fine-tuned accordingly by department experts.

Thus, if the new projection proves correct, the global stockpile of grain next July 1 would be the largest since mid-1969, when it was 203.2 million metric tons, according to recently revised figures for that year.

Earlier, figures published by the agency showed the 1969 stockpile at 197.1 million tons, which would have made the projected grain reserve a record high by next July 1.

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has ordered 60,000 metric tons of soybean oil but has specified that it could come from sources other than the United States.

The Agriculture Department said Monday that counting previous orders, China now has bought 80,000 metric tons of soybean oil for delivery in the 1978-79 marketing year, all of it designated as of "optional origin."

Serbia was renamed Yugoslavia in 1929.

Visiting hours to change

Because of the approaching winter weather a crackdown on visiting hours at Highland General Hospital is going to take place according to Geneva Gobin, R.N.

Govin said there will be a stricter enforcement of the current hospital visiting hours. Visiting hours are as follows: No children under the age of 14 will be allowed to visit on the medical or surgical floors.

There are no visiting hours on medical, surgical and obstetrical floors in the morning. Visiting hours are from 3-4 p.m. and 7-8 p.m. on those floors.

The coronary care and intensive care visiting hours are 10 minutes every four hours around the clock for one member of the immediate family only.

General visiting hours on obstetrical are from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. for family and friends. From 7-8 p.m. only the family is allowed to visit, and from 8-8:30 p.m. only the father is allowed to visit.

Children visiting in the obstetrical ward should not have any communicable disease, must have adult supervision at all times and may visit in the waiting room and at the nursery window only.

Credit unions new victims

By SYLVIA PORTER

The fast-talking hard-sell promoters who usually concentrate on luring the gullible, greedy individual into losing his life's savings in a wild gamble, recently found new victims:

Federal credit unions. During the past 18 months, about 100 federally insured credit unions have been snared into reckless speculation in securities. Some CUs even committed themselves to purchases in excess of their total assets!

One $7 million CU, for instance, agreed to buy $10 million in securities. Another CU had $24 million in obligations fall due in one week. In this case, the credit union manager involved thought he was renewing his original agreement when his broker sent him forms each month - but in fact, he was committing himself to buying additional securities every time he signed his name.

The speculative game which has so entangled the credit unions revolved around a type of government backed security, known in the financial world as a "Ginnie Mae Modified Pass-Through." Issued by the Government National Mortgage Assn., Ginnie Maes are pools of government-insured home mortgages.

When bought outright, they are solid, conservative investments. But investors also can speculate in Ginnie Maes by agreeing to buy (or sell) them at a future date, usually several months off. Without putting down a cent, an investor can sign a contract to buy million of dollars worth of the securities. The odds are he has no intention of actually taking possession of the Ginnie Maes. What he is betting on is that they will increase in value, and he can sell his future delivery contract before it comes due.

If he is correct, and the securities market rises, he can make a profit without ever investing a dime. But if he is wrong, and the market drops (as it has done so sharply recently), he can take a blood bath. And this is what has happened.

There are many types of "forward" or "future delivery" transactions. This is a highly complex field and, until 18 months ago, even credit union regulators didn't fully understand it.

But they do now. And they have therefore proposed a rule rigidly restricting the type of securities transactions which federal credit unions can make. The regulations also harshly criticize the investment banking industry for not policing broker-dealers in U.S. government and federal agency securities - virtually the only type of marketable securities in which federal credit unions can invest.

Firms dealing solely in U.S. government - federal agency issues do not have to register with the Securities & Exchange Commission, a stock exchange or other self-regulatory body.

And just because this tiny corner of the securities markets is so largely uncontrolled, it has attracted a fringe of bold, unscrupulous and effective promoters. They tend to be headquartered in Tennessee, Florida and Texas, but their sales campaigns, generally conducted by phone, blanket the country.

So skillful are these salesmen that many earn as much as $40,000 a month in commissions. They frequently direct their itches to officers of smaller institutions, who may be informed about their own areas but unaware of the risks in the national markets.

Federal credit unions aren't alone in becoming entangled in speculative transactions. Last year, at least two dozen commercial banks and savings and loan associations, mostly located in smaller cities and towns, become involved in trades involving millions of dollars in losses, lawsuits and eventual action by the SEC.

The "Winters Case," so named for the responsible firm's president, Kenneth B. Winters, is now a landmark. "We thought credit unions had learned their lesson after the Winters Case," National Credit Union Administration chief, Larry Connell, told my Washington associate, Brooke Shearer, "but we presumed too much."

It well may be that the speculative spree in Ginnie Mae trading has peaked - but U.S. watchdogs fear that smaller banks and thrift institutions are shifting into other, more obscure government - insured securities to try to recover their losses (such as Small Business Administration loans, so-called Title II Merchant Marine bonds.)

And as a measure of concern, U.S. government securities firms have just set up their own self-policing agency - through the Mortgage Backed Securities Dealers Assn. and the Public Securities Assn. The organization is to be financed by dues of dealers and brokers who join, and is to establish industry standards of conduct. How its rules will be imposed on non-members, though, is unclear.

Canadian Chamber elects officers

CANADIAN - Nan Ezzell, womens editor of the Canadian Record, was elected president of the Canadian Chamber, of Commerce for 1979 Monday evening during a meeting of the board of directors.

Gary Minyen was elected vice-president. Both new officers will be installed during the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet early next year.

During the meeting, the Chamber board also heard reports from the Chamber manager committee, the foliage tour committee and the retail merchants committee.

The committee organized to name a new Chamber of Commerce manager has reached no decision. The committee is currently studying six applications.

The chamber also reported a large crowd was on hand last month for the foliage tour. They agreed to donate $344.50 which came from the business and industrial ticket sales to the Abraham Memorial Home.

The retail merchants committee announced Thursday that Dec. 14 will be the official date for the 1978 Santa party, the tree lighting ceremony and the 3rd annual treasure hunt. The event will begin at 5 p.m. on the court house lawn and will proceed to all participating stores.

The Chamber also announced its Christmas home decoration contest, with cash prizes. Ten cash prizes valued at $150 will be awarded. Official entry blanks will appear in this week's Canadian Record with an entry deadline of Dec. 15.

A chamber committee will judge the entries from Dec. 15-20 with all 10 winners to be listed in the Canadian paper prior to Christmas. Entries will also be accepted at the Canadian Record.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

November 16, 1978
 Through rather circuitous circumstances you may be drawn into a beneficial situation this coming year that someone else has already started. The two of you will work extremely well together.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
 Tread warily in joint ventures today. Be sure your counterpart shares equally in all the risks and expenses. Don't be left holding the bag. Like to find out more about yourself? Send for your 1979 copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
 A heap of frustrations can be avoided today if you steer clear of teaming up with one who doesn't appreciate the value of collective effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
 Continuing to postpone attending to a responsibility clamoring for attention will not put the matter to rest. Tackle it today and be done with it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
 Normally you behave very democratically at gatherings. Today, however, you may play favorites and hurt someone's feelings in the process.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
 There's a chance you could sour something good you have going for you by tipping your hand to the wrong person.

Don't spill the beans to one whose sincerity is doubtful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
 Be wary today of basing important decisions on wishful thinking. Don't fear to ask questions if you feel you haven't got all the answers.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
 Doing business with strangers could be risky today, particularly if they make outlandish promises. Get them to put it in writing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
 It's up to you to make the social arrangements today; don't invite friends who won't blend harmoniously. They'd spoil the fun for all.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
 You'll either look to others to perform your tasks today or else you might leave everything to the last minute. In either case, you'll get yourself in a tight bind.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
 You have the knack for arbitrating volatile issues between dissenting friends today, making each feel he or she is the victor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
 It's likely your ambitions will be satisfied today, but the way you get results could cause others to speak unfavorably of you. You won't like what they say.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
 You're a bit more sensitive than usual where your ideas are concerned today. You could overreact if they are challenged. Keep an open mind and you may learn something.

Parker wins MVP in landslide vote

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Slugging Dave Parker of the Pittsburgh Pirates, the National League batting champion for the past two years, today was named winner of the NL's Most Valuable Player Award for 1978 by a landslide vote.

The menacing left-handed hitter, who batted .338 in 1977 and .334 this year, collected 21 of a possible 24 first-place votes and a total of 320 points in balloting by a select committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

First baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who did not receive a first-place vote, finished second with 194 votes, edging shortstop Larry Bowa of the Philadelphia Phillies. Bowa collected the three first-place votes not accorded to Parker and amassed 189 points.

The voters, two from each of the National League's 12 cities, voted for 10 players. Points were awarded on a 14, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 basis.

After Bowa, outfielders took the next four places, with Reggie Smith of the Dodgers fourth with 164 points, followed by Jack Clark of the San Francisco Giants (107), 1977 MVP

George Foster of the Cincinnati Reds (104) and Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia (48).

Gaylord Perry of the San Diego Padres, this year's Cy Young Award winner, finished eighth in the MVP balloting with 45 points. Rounding out the top 10 were outfielders Willie Stargell of Pittsburgh (39) and Dave Winfield of San Diego (37).

"This is the greatest thing that ever happened to me in my baseball career," said the elated Parker, the first Pittsburgh player to win the coveted MVP award since Roberto Clemente in 1965. The only other Pirate player to receive the honor was shortstop Dick Groat in 1960.

"I'm pinching myself to see if I'm really awake," said Parker, who has batted over .300 each of the last four years.

In addition to leading the league in batting, the massive 6-foot-5, 235-pound Parker rapped 30 home runs, third behind Foster's NL high of 40 and Luzinski's 35; drove in 117 runs, second behind Foster's 120; tied for second in triples with 12, and stole 20 bases.

"It's nice to send a ball out of the park, but my purpose in playing is to give a good all-around performance and give the people their money's worth," said the 27-year-old Parker.

"My goal for 1979 is to win the Triple Crown (the batting, home run and RBI titles)," added the Pirates' right fielder. "I got my home run swing going good this year and if I can stay healthy next year, I will shoot for the Triple Crown. I believe in myself."

Parker was not completely healthy during the 1978 season. He suffered a broken left cheekbone in a home plate collision with catcher John Stearns of the New York Mets during a game on June 30. Surgery was required and there is a permanent wire in Parker's jaw.

After the surgery, Parker was playing again in 16 days. To protect the injury, he sometimes wore a football-type helmet when he ran the bases. He used a football helmet and a goalie's hockey mask when he batted in practice. And then he decided to use the standard baseball helmet when he batted in games.

The broken cheekbone caused Parker to fall into a batting slump, his average skidding from .315 to .288. But then he regained his top form and overcame the batting leaders with a late-season rampage.

"With the fractured finger and the broken cheek and going as much as I have, I'm satisfied," Parker said. "And that satisfaction is the most important thing."

Dolphins hosted swimming meet

Kurt Lester, Shonda Corcoran, Susan Darling and Clay Douglass garnered first-place finishes for the Pampa Dolphins when they hosted their annual swim meet over the weekend.

Trainer holds up Slew's stud

By The Associated Press
Trainer Billy Turner has threatened to seek a restraining order preventing Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew from going to stud until a court has heard his claim that he has been unfairly deprived of a share in the horse's breeding syndicate.

Meanwhile, according to a copyrighted story in the Louisville Courier-Journal, the manager of the syndicate reacted angrily to Turner's breach-of-contract suit filed in New York last Saturday and promised a legal fight if Turner delays Slew's career at stud, which is set to begin Jan. 1.

"If he does that, baby, I'm down on him with everything I've got," said Brownell Combs II, president of Spendthrift Farm and president of the syndicate, which reportedly is worth $12 million. "I'll blow him out of the country. My people have millions and millions of dollars tied up, and it's my duty to protect them. He'd have such a judgment against him he couldn't breathe."

Cowens named to guide Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — At the age of 30 and winner of most major awards in the National Basketball Association, veteran center Dave Cowens faces a new challenge as player-coach of the staggering Boston Celtics.

"Maybe it will last, maybe it won't, but I have the confidence," Cowens said Tuesday after being named to replace Coach Tom "Satch" Sanders.

With the Celtics off to a 2-12 start this season, new owner John Y. Brown and president and general manager Red Auerbach decided a coaching change was necessary. However, the choice of their star center as player-coach was a shocker.

Cowens, the NBA's co-rookie of the year in 1971 and most valuable player in 1973, said he was flattered even to be considered for the job, adding that, "I never really envisioned myself as a coach."

After the Celtics' sixth consecutive loss Sunday night, Cowens, an 8-year NBA veteran and leader of two championship clubs, said:

"Game after game, it seems like someone is messing with my mind. I keep trying to come up with some answers. Even when I find them, they obviously don't solve our problems."

Less than 24 hours later, he was offered the job by Brown and Auerbach. He talked things over at home with his wife, then accepted the dual role.

"His intensity and the way he motivates team members will be an asset," said Auerbach, who spurned reports that, at 60, he might consider returning to the Boston bench. "I want to make one thing clear: He's the coach. I won't be interfering. I won't be a crutch."

"We're not going to win because of my smarts," Cowens said. "The players will have to win by getting together and playing as a team."

"We're going to set up rules and roles. We're going to stop second-guessing, pay more attention to details and work on the fast break. I'm going to be strict. We're going to have to cut down on fouls and errors and play hard defense. Defense is the only thing that makes our offense go. Without proper defense, our offense will be nothing," Cowens said.

Cowens, who earns a reported $300,000 a season on a multi-year contract, said no specific period of time was agreed upon for his services as player-coach. However, he grinned as he added: "It's just sort of on a permanent basis."

Cowens becomes the second-player coach in the Celtics' 33-year history. When Auerbach moved into the front office full time after coaching nine NBA championship teams, he picked center Bill Russell as player-coach. Russell had two NBA championships in three years before retiring.

K.C. Jones and Bob MacKinnon were retained as assistant coaches to help Cowens. Sanders, who played with the Celtics for 14 years and became head coach when Tommy Heinsosh was fired last January, will remain with the club as scouting director and a public relations man.

Waldrep back on feet with help

LENINGRAD (AP) — Soviet doctors have managed to get Kent Waldrep, the 24-year-old Texan paralyzed from a football injury, on his feet, but only when staff members and equipment support him.

But Waldrep, halfway through his treatment at Leningrad's Polenovskiy Neurological Institute, says he is "very positive" he will show improvement in four more weeks of Soviet medical treatment.

The husky Grand Prairie, Texas, native arrived at the institute Oct. 30 to undergo a radical new form of treatment for spinal cord injuries. His present plans are to leave here in about a month.

"Texas will be a welcome sight upon our return, but we have found what we came for — a hope," he told The Associated Press.

The husky American has been confined to a wheelchair since 1974 when a spinal injury during a Texas Christian University-Alabama football game left him paralyzed from the neck down.

At the institute Waldrep has been receiving enzyme injections — a procedure not yet approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration — designed to dissolve scar tissue around the spinal cord that prevents the nerves there from regenerating.

"I am eagerly awaiting more enzyme treatments and further therapy. That will occupy my time for the next month," Waldrep said.

"We all feel very positive about my showing improvement over the next month."

What has he missed most during his stay so far in the Soviet Union? Waldrep says it's pizza and adds that "dreams of junk food dance in our heads."

Accompanying Waldrep in Leningrad are his mother and father.

SEATTLE SOUNDERS — Signed Jim Gabriel, head coach, to a new one-year contract.

Davis started Houston's only touchdown drive in the third quarter with a 29 yard run, the longest rushing play of the game. Then on third down, Davis completed a 26-yard pass to tight end Garrett Jurgaitis to the UT four.

Moments later, Emmett King ran the final two yards for the touchdown.

"We were a little tight at the start of the game," Davis said. "Sometimes you try to put too much value on certain things and I was trying to be too precise."

second straight week and dropped from the top 10 on the 4A list. Both dropped out of this week's rankings.

Conroe, which edged unbeaten Klein last week, moved into the No. 9 spot in 4A and high-scoring Plainview took over the No. 10 spot.

There were no losers on the 3A list but Belton flip-flopped with Gainesville after a 55-0 victory over Taylor. Belton moved up to the No. 8 position and Gainesville fell to No. 9.

Childress, No. 5 this week, and Sealy, No. 6, exchanged positions in the Class 2A rankings from last week as did No. 9 Hondo and No. 10 Mount Vernon.

Unbeaten Seagraves tallied one first place vote and moved into the No. 10 position in Class A, replacing Charlotte, which suffered its third loss of the season.

Iraan, Franklin, Lovelady and China Spring round out the top five behind Lexington on the Class A list.

'Miracle' spurs rescue efforts

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — Rescuers, spurred by the "miracle" of finding a young worker alive in the tons of steel and rubble thought to be his grave, dug feverishly in a steady rain today for two other men missing since a hotel collapsed on the trio four days ago.

Heavy earth-moving equipment roared through the night and crews of volunteers worked under floodlights.

Police chief Larry Tennis said the rain, which had fallen periodically since Sunday and was expected to continue through today, could cause some flooding in the hotel basement. But he said the cavity where 30-year-old Alfred "Butch" Summers was found was dry.

"Get me the hell out of here!" Summers cried out Tuesday when rescuers broke through to him. He had survived in a space about two feet high and 30 feet in diameter and said he had crawled around in the blackness for hours searching for a way out.

Summers had no idea what day it was and was unaware that the entire nine stories of the 70-year-old landmark Connor Hotel had collapsed on top of him Saturday morning.

"It's been a long Saturday," Summers said when told he had been beneath the wreckage for more than three days.

"If you've never witnessed a miracle," said Tennis, "you have tonight."

No sooner had an ambulance taken Summers to St. John's Medical Center than the German shepherd which had picked up Summers' scent and started digging at the right spot was set to work again.

But the combination of rain and temperatures in the low 30s forced the dog's handlers to seek shelter.

Tennis said Summers had been able to give rescue workers information that changed their search procedure. The search area was isolated to where Summers thinks his co-workers were, and rescuers were digging in from the side to diminish the chance of another cave-in. Tennis said Searchers would also use special soundwave equipment.

One of the missing men, Frederick C. Coe III, 29, of Topeka, Kan., had been cutting steel beams near Summers when the hotel collapsed, one day before it was scheduled for demolition to make way for a new library. Tennis said.

The other worker, Thomas Edward Oakes, 45, of Jenks, Okla., was believed to have been on the hotel's ground floor.

Summers told rescue workers he had only one or two seconds warning of the collapse. Summers said he turned, took one or two steps and was buried by debris, according to Tennis.

Two falling steel beams crossed, holding up a slab of concrete and forming a pocket, said Assistant Fire Chief Harry Guinn. When Summers could find no escape and heard earth-moving equipment rumbling above him, he found a spot where he thought he would be the most protected.

Then, about 2:25 p.m. Tuesday, a slab of concrete that had been the hotel's first floor was lifted, and Summers shouted.

A garden hose was passed down through a small hole to provide water for the trapped man. A short time later, telephone workers ran a phone down to him and a Joplin doctor was able to talk to him.

After five more hours of painstaking digging, Summers was pulled out alive first through an 18-inch hole and placed on a stretcher. A crowd of more than 200 onlookers cheered as one of the rescuers turned and waved his arms in triumph.

Summers was listed in satisfactory condition Tuesday night. A hospital spokesman, Jim Randall, said X-rays showed he had a broken pelvis and three broken ribs on his left side. He was also dehydrated. Summers' wife, Patricia, and his mother planned to spend the night with him in the hospital.

Randall said that Summers probably would be hospitalized for three weeks.

There is more iron in three large eggs than in three ounces of drained tuna fish.

Could cause problems

Committee's recommendation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A House committee's recommended shake-up in the parole system could lead to irresponsible decisions paroling convicts who deserve to stay in prison, a member of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles says.

Clyde Whiteside, who retires this month, was highly critical of the report filed by the House Criminal Jurisprudence Committee.

A Senate panel also is analyzing the board and the state parole system, which is under attack from two directions — those who think it releases dangerous men too early and those who think it unreasonably delays re-entry of rehabilitated prisoners into society.

The House committee — one of several reporting recently on between-sessions studies — said the present full-time board should be abolished.

In its place would be an unsalaried board that would set agency policy, an administrator and hired "professional parole decision makers" who would decide whether an inmate deserved parole.

The recommendations could be implemented only with a constitutional amendment, subject to a vote of the people, since the board is a constitutional agency.

"I think your decision-makers in parole matters ought to be more accountable and responsible to the people. ... I don't think a professional decision-maker feels that high degree of public accountability a decision-maker ought to have," he said.

Board members now are appointed by the governor, chief justice of the state supreme court and presiding judge of the court of criminal appeals. There also are six parole commissioners who interview inmates and sit on parole panels with the board members.

Whiteside said "professional decision-makers" tend to be social scientists who "magnify rehabilitation and lose sight of deterrence and punishment. They think if a man does well in prison for two days, he ought to be turned out."

He also disagreed with a committee recommendation to require any local officials — such as the sentencing judge, sheriff or district attorney — to protest a parole before a decision is made.

Whiteside said there have been cases where paroles were justifiably cancelled because of a protest letter that came in after they were granted.

"If it looks like he would be a threat if he goes back to his community, I am going to stop that parole. ... It's been for a reason. It hasn't been done for fun," he said.

The committee also recommended a minimum fee schedule for lawyers appointed by judges to represent indigent defendants. Fees would include $100 a day during trial, or $250 a day in capital cases, $20 per hour for out-of-court work and $350 for preparing briefs in an appeal.

It said court-appointed counsel should receive up to $1,000 for investigative work and expert testimony in ordinary cases and $3,000 in capital cases.

Numerous other committees have filed reports for publication and distribution to House members. The recommendations could turn up later as bills before the 1979 Legislature.

The House Committee on Higher Education recommended that Texas' tuition at public colleges and universities should stay the same but that out-of-staters and foreign students should pay more.

Hijack attempt foiled

MOSCOW (AP) — An armed man tried to hijack a Soviet airliner during a domestic flight, but security guards foiled the attempt and killed him, the Soviet news agency Tass reported today.

A brief announcement said: "E.M. Makhayev, an armed criminal, a few days ago made an attempt to hijack a passenger plane which was on a Krasnodar-Baku flight and to make it fly abroad.

"The bandit attempt was foiled by security guards of the Ministry of Civil Aviation. The criminal, who put up resistance, was killed. The passengers were not harmed."

Krasnodar is 735 miles south of Moscow. Baku, an oil center, is 1,200 miles south-southeast of Moscow.

The flight path between Krasnodar and Baku is about 85 miles from the Iranian border and about 140 miles from the Turkish border.

Another hijack attempt occurred in the same region six months ago, and Tass reported that hijacker also was killed.

The last successful hijacking of a Soviet airliner to another country occurred on May 26, 1977, when a 37-year-old Latvian mechanic forced a twin-engine Aeroflot plane on a domestic flight in the Baltic republics to fly to Stockholm. The Latvian, Vasily Sosnovsky, was allowed to remain in Sweden but was prosecuted there for the hijacking.

Six weeks later, two Soviet men hijacked another Aeroflot plane to Helsinki, but the Finns sent them back to the Soviet Union. A Soviet court sentenced them to prison terms of 15 and eight years.

AQUA DOG

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Queen of the Sierra, a Labrador retriever, likes to retrieve things not from bushes but from water.

The dog, belonging to Dave Meek, dives head first to the bottom of her master's 10-foot-deep swimming pool to fetch a swim fin or scuba mask.

Meek said Sierra, who is 9 months old, took her first plunge about five months ago when a fin landed in the pool and she dived three feet to retrieve it in the shallow end. She progressed to the deep end and dives deeper yet at a lake, he said.
