

Test could save cancer victims

By Dianna Sinovic

NEW YORK (NEA) - A simple exam by a family doctor could help save more unsuspecting cancer victims than any other kind of checkup. But it isn't done by most physicians.

Proper examination of the colon and rectum — undergone regularly by all persons over 40 — could save the lives of about 35,000 people, reports the American Cancer Society. Cancer of the colon and rectum annually kills more than 100,000 people.

But the exam, called proctosigmoidoscopy, isn't commonly performed, says Dr. David Markman, associate clinical professor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. Only 56 percent of the population knows of the protoscopic checkup, and only 9 percent have undergone the exam during the last year, according to a recent ACS study.

Indeed, says Dr. Markman, most doctors don't own the examination tool — the sigmoidoscope.

"It's a sin of omission, not commission," he says. "Most physicians don't know how to give a rectal exam with a sigmoidoscope.

"The most they do is a digital (finger-and-glove), which only identifies 12 percent of colon cancer victims."

The human colon extends much further into the body than the digital exam can reach. But more than 70 percent of cancer occurs within the 10-inch range of the sigmoidoscope, Dr. Markman says.

With the sigmoidoscope — a long metal tube with a light at one end and an eyepiece at the other — the physician can see the lesions, polyps and other colon upsets.

Why don't more physicians then give the exam if it is so simple and effective in identifying cancer?

"The fault lies with the medical schools," Dr. Markman says. "Cancer is the number two cause of death in this country, yet very few medical students are trained to diagnose cancer. They see only the advanced stages of cancer that make it to the hospital. Students don't see the unobvious, early kinds — yet these are the most amenable to treatment."

Teaching cancer diagnosis and use of the sigmoidoscope in the past has been limited because the method victimized the patients.

"The students would stand around with the sigmoidoscope, looking at an obviously embarrassed patient. Teaching what to look for has mainly consisted of the student's looking at the back of the teacher's head and at the patient's buttocks."

Dr. Markman totally eliminated the patient from his teaching methods when he designed a tool that simulates exactly what the physician might see during the course of an examination.

With the tutoredoscope, the student looks through a viewer at 80 different color slides of lesions, polyps and cancers within the colon.

Dr. Markman prepared the slides himself, using a specially designed camera that took pictures through the sigmoidoscope during actual exams. The slides include both normal and abnormal colons.

"One advantage of using this method over a live patient is that the student might look at a hundred living colons — all normal — during his training. If he never sees anything abnormal, he begins to think that nothing is ever amiss — and omits the exam."

Above the tutoredoscope viewer are 80 index cards listing the age, sex, symptoms of the patient and distance along the colon that the picture was taken. The student takes this information, looks at the slide and makes a diagnosis.

Besides identifying the colon condition of the patient, the student also needs to learn how to use the sigmoidoscope. "But learning on a real patient has its dangers," Dr. Markman says. "The bowel can be perforated (punctured) with the sigmoidoscope in the hands of the unfamiliar."

In 1972 West Germany and East Germany finished negotiations on a treaty to establish formal relations between the two countries.

Senate committee could change role

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — It has been a stage for angry dissent, and a good place for a snooze.

In a way, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has served as a fever chart of American foreign policy, sometimes heated and contentious, sometimes placid, sometimes just plain dull.

Sen. Frank Church has seen it both ways. Now, preparing to take over as chairman, the Idaho Democrat envisions a new role for the committee, one that would make it a sort of early warning system in foreign affairs.

Church said the committee's franchise includes authority to study and report to the Senate on major issues in foreign policy, even if they do not involve the business of legislation, treaties and diplomatic appointments.

That hasn't been done in the past, but Church said he intends to do it now. He said the administration's foreign policy establishment is necessarily involved in today's crises and problems, and doesn't have time to concentrate on what may happen next month or next year.

Church said the committee does, and will. Among the issues on his tentative agenda:

—The direction of U.S. policy toward mainland China.

—Future U.S. relations with the nations of Southeast Asia.

—Middle East policy to follow a peace agreement between Egypt and Israel, seeking to expand their settlement into a regional accord.

—American policy toward Mexico, which Church considers both crucial and neglected. Customarily, congressional study reports are filed, widely ignored, and left to collect dust. That may be the fate of the reports Church plans.

"There's no way that we can guarantee that the administration will follow our recommendations," he said in an interview.

Church says he doesn't anticipate any problem.

"I think the committee functions best when it recognizes that it ought not to try to second-guess the president on every decision he makes," Church said. "When a situation is in doubt, then the president should be given the benefit of the doubt."

Earth, Venus show striking similarities and differences

By Barbara McDowell

Because of their similarities in size, mass and distance from the sun, Earth and Venus have frequently been termed "sister" planets. In fact, a major purpose of the current Pioneer Venus mission is to gather data to help explain the climate and atmosphere of Earth.

But the differences between the two planets are as striking as their similarities.

Venus cannot support life as we know it. The planet's surface temperature is about 900 degrees Fahrenheit, hot enough to melt lead and zinc. Atmospheric pressure on Venus is about 100 times that of Earth.

In contrast to water-rich Earth, Venus is dry and desolate. Only minute amounts of water vapor have been detected in the planet's atmosphere, which is predominantly carbon dioxide.

Because Venus is nearly 26 million miles closer to the Sun than is Earth, it is logical that it is hotter — but not that it is as hot as it is. Scientists believe the planet's extreme heat may result from the "greenhouse effect" the seems to trap solar heat within its atmosphere. The same effect appears to be raising temperatures on Earth as we increase the carbon dioxide in our atmosphere by burning more and more fossil fuels.

Even with the best telescopes, we cannot see the surface of Venus from Earth. That is because of the planet's perpetual covering of thick, pale-yellow clouds, which are thought to be composed mainly of sulfur-ic-acid droplets. The reflection of light off these clouds makes Venus the brightest object after the Moon in the night sky.

Kennel is for hounds

WOODINVILLE, Wash. (AP) — Bassett's Bassets is not an item from the Department of Redundancy Department.

It's a kennel from which some of the nation's champion basset hounds have come — those sad-eyed, floppy-eared, long-bodied, short-legged canines used in ads selling everything from shoes to dog food.

Long before others discovered their appeal, Richard Bassett was fascinated by them, at first because of the name. "I found it in an encyclopedia when I was a boy," he says.

After marriage, Bassett says, he and his wife "thought it would be fun to have a dog with that name. It wasn't so easy. There were only six breeders in the nation — all on the East Coast."

They were asking $200 a pup, too much for newlyweds, but finally they located two on this side of the continent.

In 1952 they entered their favorite, Johnny, in nine shows and got one ribbon. "Even the judges hadn't heard of them. One said, 'What's that?'" recalls Mrs. Bassett.

Steel 'imports' abuse industry

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It was nearing the end of a pretty fair year and prospects were good for the next six months at least. So, U.S. Steel's pre-Christmas get-together with news reporters began pleasantly.

Domestic steel consumption would be about 113 million tons for the year, only 4 million tons short of the record, said David Roderick, president. Industry profits would be close to $1 billion.

While he foresaw a possible decline in demand from the automotive and appliance industries, said the head of "Big Steel," capital goods spending was expected to be strong.

But there were problems for the industry that no holiday spirit could dispel. Roderick had a message to deliver.

"Imports," he began, and as it always does at steel meetings, the word spread like smog through the holiday mood of the audience, gathered in a suite of the Rainbow Room atop the RCA Building.

Not even the prospect of a billion-dollar-plus contract to develop an iron ore facility in China could dispel the cloud. The atmosphere was now gray. In steel, "imports" is a foul word.

The steel industry, said Roderick, has taken "abuse for years." European and Japanese exporters, he said, were dumping into the U.S. market at below their production costs. It was "unfair, illegal."

It was an old refrain too, one that Washington had sought to quiet earlier this year by means of a trigger price mechanism, based on Japanese production costs, below which imports couldn't be priced.

"The trigger has not worked," said Roderick. Imports quite likely would be up for the year to about 20 million tons, compared with 19.3 million tons a year ago. The triggers, he indicated, were too low.

Critics of the domestic industry have never been scarce, and they speak almost with one voice: U.S. steelmakers are inefficient, their executives are short-sighted, the facilities are poorly managed.

Domestic steel executives reply with a disdainful snort, sometimes using language more colorful and explicit than that which is heard in any other executive suite.

In the fiscal year ended in March, he said, the six major steel producers in Japan lost $1 billion. That, he said, meant they were losing at the rate of $12 for every ton shipped to the United States.

"Why do we (the United States) condone it?" he asked. Toleration of the situation, he said, reflects neither "good judgment or common sense." The country loses production, jobs, taxes, he indicated.

He was asked what U.S. Steel planned to do about it. The fourth quarter, he replied, determines if the company continues to rely on triggers or instead files dumping charges against foreign goods.

The industry expects that the latter part of 1979 could present some problems, especially if the country slips into recession. Long before, however, steel is likely to act.

The country must decide, Roderick concluded, "if it is going to have a viable steel industry or become hostage to foreign sources of supplies."

Iran top cash customer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report published today by the Agriculture Department says Iran is the top cash customer in the Middle East for American farmers.

The report, published by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, avoided any reference to Iran's strikes, violence and political turmoil which have a major bearing on it continuing as a buyer of American farm products.

Traditionally, the agency's weekly publication, Foreign Agriculture, avoids such sensitive issues in articles relating to U.S. agricultural trade.

During the Vietnam war, for instance, the agency continued to report agricultural and trade developments in Southeast Asia with few references to the military situation or even that a war was going on.

The report, however, does help put into perspective the recent value of Iran in the rapidly growing Middle East market for U.S. farm products, thus implying indirectly how much could be lost if Iran is unable to recover.

Aubrey C. Robinson, who wrote the report for his agency, acknowledged that it did not include mention of Iran's civil strife or raise questions about the effects on future U.S. trade with the country.

"We can't say that," Robinson told a reporter, but added in response to questioning that the report did imply American farmers have a lot at stake in how Iran copes with its internal problems.

The report said U.S. farm exports to Iran this year are expected to total more than $500 million, up from $423 million in 1977.

The sales record is $534 million in 1974, when Iran actually over-bought, purchasing products at rather high prices at a time when a grain scarcity prevailed in the world, the report said.

In 1972, prior to soaring prices of oil and food commodities, and the takeoff in overseas spending by the richer Middle East countries, Iran's purchases of U.S. farm products was only $72 million.

The report was based largely on observations by Paul J. Ferree, who until recently was the U.S. agricultural attache in Tehran. Iran's capital, Ferree currently is in a similar post in Bangkok, Thailand.

Large trade surpluses resulting from petroleum exports, rising per capita incomes and "sharp population shifts from rural to urban areas" have led to an increase in demand for consumer items, the report said.

"This is taking place during a slide backwards in Iran's quest to regain the agricultural self-sufficiency that prevailed prior to the economic boom of the early 1970s," it said.

Iran is about 75 percent self-sufficient in crop and livestock production, and the government's goal is 80 percent.

"But the trend is actually going in the opposite direction as food demand outstrips gains in agricultural productivity," the report said.

This year the United States accounted for about one-fourth of Iran's agricultural imports and is the largest outside provider of wheat, rice, feed grains, tallow, vegetable oils, protein meal and dairy cattle.

WATER POLLUTION

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) —

When news is released about polluted drinking water, anger is not directed against those who are making the water unsafe, but against those who release information about its possible health risks, according to a study reported by the Water Quality Association.

In Duluth, the site of the study, after potentially dangerous levels of asbestos were reported in the water, 47 percent continued to use it.

About 51 percent chose alternate sources, drawing water from private wells, buying bottled water, or installing a home water filter.

The people who continued to use tap water, the study indicated, were mostly those who saw a division of opinion among professionals about the water's safety, and they were angry at those experts who had declared it unsafe.

Search for father continues

By JOHN BRONSON
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — A mud-encrusted boot. A credit card. A belt buckle. All are clues to the disappearance of Stanley Pilot, one of eight people still missing after the 1977 Johnstown flood.

Official searches ceased long ago. But Betty Marsonok and her family tramp through the tangled underbrush along the Conemaugh River in Cambria County on weekends, clawing the mud and debris with rakes.

"When we go down along that river, I just want to stop that car and scream. 'Dad, where are you? Please give us a sign!'" Mrs. Marsonok said, clenching her fist to emphasize her frustration.

There have been some false starts. Like the time she found hair sticking up through sand.

"You take a deep swallow and ask yourself if you should dig or go for help. We dug, and it turned out to be a baby doll."

she said. Another time, the form of a hand protruded from the ground. It was a department store mannequin.

But Mrs. Marsonok says she is ready for what she might discover.

"We know all we'll find is bones. But that's what we want."

"My father was a hard worker and I feel we should keep looking. You feel your parents are the best, and he just doesn't deserve this, to be laying down in that river," she said.

In her determination to find the remains of her father, one of the more than 70 victims swept away by the thundering water, she's turned to prayer and has even consulted a psychic.

The psychic told her she would find her father under some apple trees 1 1/2 miles from his home. Her brother, Bob, followed the clue and found Pilot's pants under a clump of apple trees exactly 1 1/2 miles from the house. Pilot's shirt was in one tree, she said.

There was nobody.

The last person to see Pilot, a retired milkman, was Mrs. Marsonok's 21-year-old son, Tommy, who lived with his grandparents while he attended the University of Pittsburgh's Johnstown campus.

"Tommy said my dad and he were in the upstairs bedroom and that my dad was kneeling beside the bed crying. He said, 'Tommy, if this is how God wants us to die, be ready.' And Tommy said to him, 'Grandpa, I'm not ready to die.'"

"He said the waters came through the windows and that the bed started to float up. He managed to kick through the ceiling and the next thing he knew, he was floating away with the roof," Mrs. Marsonok said.

When Mrs. Marsonok finally was able to get into Tanneryville, she found her childhood neighborhood leveled as if by a bomb blast. Her mother's body had been found, but her father and Tommy were still missing. She found her son in a hospital several days later.

Trash turned into treasure

DODGEVILLE, Wis. (NEA) — Once upon a time there was an eccentric fellow.

In a rusty antique rake, he saw a chandelier. In a copper cheese vat, he saw a bathtub for two.

He was the first kid on the block to have his own genuine bank-vault door. Then he thought the rest of the bank might come in handy, too.

So he built himself a Xanadu of sorts from things other folks had smashed up, knocked down and thrown out. He thought visitors might like such a place, so he turned it into a supper club. Then a motel. Then a bigger motel.

Quinn converted it into a three-story nook — huge copper tub (those cheese vats again), second-story bedroom and TV-and-stereo-equipped "crow's nest" on top. The price is stiff — $100 a night — but includes dinner for two, champagne and breakfast in bed.

If the couple arrives before tying the knot, Quinn has a tiny bridal chapel that he moved to a hidden corner of his property from the nearby town where it had stood for more than 70 years.

There are other rooms — more than 200 of them, each different, with names such as "Mirror, Mirror" and "The Swinger." The latter boasts a double bed that swings from chains.

Quinn built all his beds — as well as the inn's roof — from packing crates. Ceilings in all the first-floor rooms and mezzanine are flooring from Chicago-Northwestern boxcars.

Chicago-Northwestern also supplied the mini-motel just off the main building. It's an old railroad station, converted into eight rooms.

Between the main motel and the dining room is a 326-foot underground tunnel through limestone.

While digging the tunnel, workers found imbedded in the rock natural artifacts, such as animal skeletons and old tools, which they left revealed and coated to preserve. Then they and Quinn got silly and mingled other "artifacts," such as the boot (with foot) that protrudes from the stone passage.

A VINTAGE AIRPLANE — with Farrah Fawcett-Majors' autograph on its fuselage — is the latest addition to Don Quinn's eccentric estate in rural Wisconsin. "I don't want to say I'm a social historian," says Quinn, "but I'm not just building a tourist attraction, either."

Soon Don Quinn, owner and inventor of the Don Q Inn in the rolling farmland of rural Wisconsin, had one of the strangest, loveliest places a person could find to spend the night.

But something was missing. Quinn looked the place over, mulled a bit and decided a 180,000-pound air-plane on the lawn would do nicely.

So he bought himself an old Boeing 377 Stratocruiser with a rather bizarre, if noble, past. Most recently, the plane had been used in commercials featuring no fewer than 10 Mercury Cougars, 10 real cougars and one Farrah Fawcett-Majors, whose signature graces the fuselage. Previously, the plane had carried relief supplies into Biafra and Bangladesh.

Angelo State back honored

Aldridge makes All-America

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer
Frank Hawkins, a sophomore running back from Nevada-Reno, has been named to The Associated Press College Division All-America football team for 1978 along with junior wide receiver James Warring of Eastern Illinois, junior guard Tyrone McGriff of Florida A&M and 19 seniors.

McGriff is one of four repeaters from last year's team. The others are center Frank Boursa of Lawrence, defensive end John Mohring of C.W. Post and defensive tackle Jesse Baker of Jacksonville State.

In addition, defensive end James Haslett of Indiana University of Pennsylvania, a 1976 first-teamer, made the squad again after missing too many games with an injury a year ago.

The select team, familiarly known as the Little All-America, is composed of players from the NCAA's Division I-AA, II and III plus the NAIA.

Hawkins was the top rusher and scorer in the NCAA's new Division I-AA with 1,445 yards and 15 touchdowns in 10 games. Joining him in an explosive backfield are quarterback Jeff Komlo, who led Delaware to the runnerup spot in the NCAA Division II playoffs, and running back Jerry Aldridge of Angelo State.

The tight end is Dan Ross of Northeastern, a 6-foot-4, 235-pounder who was named New England's outstanding player by the Gridiron Club of Greater Boston. A devastating blocker, he also led Division I-AA receivers with 68 receptions in 11 games for 988 yards.

Wide receiver Randy Jordan of Weber State caught 62 passes, nine of them for touchdowns, and led Division I-AA in reception yardage with 1,078. The other wide receiver, James Warring, starred for Eastern Illinois' NCAA Division II champs, catching 59 passes for 980 yards and 14 touchdowns in 11 regular-season games.

Besides McGriff and Boursa, the interior offensive line consists of tackles Jon Borchart of Montana State and Billy John of Texas A&I and guard Bruce Kimball of Massachusetts.

Joining Haslett, Mohring and Baker on the defensive front are tackle Robert Hardy of Jackson State and middle guard James Curry of Nevada-Reno.

The linebackers are Jerry Lumpkin of Northern Arizona, Tim Tucker of Troy State and John Zamberlin of Pacific Lutheran while the secondary consists of Mike Betts of Austin Peay, Dennis Duncan of Weber State and Bill Moats of South Dakota.

Bengals top Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The road to the Super Bowl gets bumpier for the Los Angeles Rams, who hardly resembled champions in losing 20-19 Monday night to a Cincinnati club already looking forward to the 1979 season.

Curtis on third down with 17 yards to go. Curtis caught the throw for a 19-yard gain and four plays later Chris Bahr kicked the winning 42-yard field goal.

"We really have worked on this second half of the season and we have become a good team, as good as any team going into the playoffs," commented Rice, who termed himself "a happy man."

The Rams failed to clinch the home field advantage for both rounds of the National Football League playoffs. They are sure to host the first but the second remains in doubt.

Conditioning program helps keep athletes active

Pampa High School's football season ended Nov. 17. Less than a month later, most of the Harvester underclassmen and freshmen from the 1978 season have aimed their sights on the autumn of '79.

Approximately 90 young men are in their second week of weight lifting and conditioning drills at the Football Field House. They spend five minutes apiece at nine different stations, which encompass everything from agility drills to weight lifting.

After opening calisthenics, they'll begin their nine-stop tour around "the barn." Rope jumping, rope climbing, situps and an agility drill are included in the workout, as well as leg and arm curls, bench presses and other weight exercises.

No pads or other contact equipment are allowed under University Interscholastic Rules, although footballs may be used.

The Harvester assistant football coaches supervise the sessions, which take less than an hour. If the weather cooperates, they'll send the boys outside to stretch their legs and catch a few passes.

Even with just a short workout each day, the coaches feel certain the program will help the players in spring practice and next fall. They should be bigger, stronger and find late summer's two-day practices a bit less of a shock.

In short, they should be better prepared for a successful season. And that's exactly what the program is for.

Text and photos by Joe Blobaum
