New hospital sought Cold plagues Panhandle

By DAN LACKEY Pampa News Staff

The Gray County Commissioners Court wants a new hospital to replace Highland General in Pampa and a lease agreement for at least 25 years. Judge Carl Kennedy said Friday

We're determined that the county needs a long term commitment for the operation of the hospitals," Kennedy said, "rather than a short term lease agreement." Kennedy said he considered a 15 year agreement to be short term.

'We're looking for a proposal which includes construction of a new facility to replace Highland General as well as a commitment to keep open the hospital in McLean." he said.

.There are three hospital corporations interested in the Pampa medical market.

One is American Medical International. a publicly owned corporation based in Beverly Hills. Calif. with offices in Houston. AMI owns or operates 18 hospitals in the central region which includes Texas. The corporation was the first to show an interest in the hospitals and has already submitted lease Friday proposals.

"The thing that has delayed a commitment so far," the county judge said, "is our concern with the length of the lease term. In 15 years the county will still have the same problems it has now with the hospitals, despite improvements made by a corporation, if you allow for depreciation.

Kennedy echoed former County Judge Don Hinton in his desire to "take the county out of the hospital business.

"The county is not authorized to recruit physicians," he said. "And this is a major area of concern. A corporation with connections across the country can work to bring more doctors into the area, including a greater number of specialists-as well as the required technicians.

The judge said the sale of the hospitals would require state legislative approval.

Brrrrrrrrrrrrrrrr! It is cold out there! Pampa and much of the Panhandle was slapped with blizzard-like conditions Friday night and Saturdaythat halted traffic and snapped power lines.

The National Weather Service issued a storm warning after a blizzard plaguing much of Kansas dipped into the Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle. Area residents around Pampa were forced into motel rooms after 40 mile per hour winds snapped power lines leaving several families without power and some without heat as temperatures dipped to below 15 degrees." Local authorities advised motorists to stay off streets and highways around Pampa as much as possible? "If you get out and drive in weather like this you run a very high risk of losing control of your vehicle or being snow bound," a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety said. "No one should be out driving unless they just absolutely have to

"We advise anyone that is traveling to take blankets and something warm to drink along even if you are traveling in town." the spokesman said. "People are usually unaware of how cold it is and a person could freeze very easily in weather like this An officer for the Pampa Police Department, who was helping a motorist stuck in a snow drift, said "The best thing people can do is just stay at home.

Pampa residents fearful that they may be stranded at home because of the high winds and snowfall began buying large quanities of food early Saturday morning. "I just wanted to make sure we had something in the house to eat if this weather keeps up." one early morning shopper said. A spokesman for the Pampa Police said that roads are closed in Oklahoma, New Mexico and parts of the Texas Panhandle. The spokesman advised anyone traveling to check with the Department of Public Safety or their local police department on what roads are open.

Authorities reported that the winter blast closed the Amarillo airport to all traffic after snow blown by the severe wind drifted on the runways. Officials said the winter storm was moving in a southerly direction towards the Dallas area and urged caution to all persons traveling in that area. Meanwhile air spilling down from the Plains shoved Texas thermometers toward the bottom Saturday as near-blizzard conditions in the Panhandle faded to traces of sleet in North Central Texas.

Ŀ

The new blast of wintry air lowered readings across-the state, with teens and 20s predominant. By midafternoon, the front stretched to near Laredo from the east and aimed its chilling winds at the 50 and 60degree readings in parts of South Texas.

Weathermen hauled down blizzard warnings in the Panhandle just after noon, but travelers advisories remained in effect. Light snow along the Red River was pushed into small drifts by gusting winds as clouds blanketed the entire state.

The main thrust of the system remained north of Texas, poised to clobber Oklahoma. State Troopers in Oklahoma discouraged driving across their state because of ice-slick roads as light to moderate snow fell in all sections

As far as anyone seems to know. Pampa has never had its own pediatrician. That is, until life." last Monday when Dr. Teresita Graboto opened her pediatrics and neonatology practice in suite 272-A in the Hughes Building Dr. Graboto obtained her medical degree and completed her pediatrics residency at the University of Santo Tomas in Manilla, Phillipines, before moving to the United States and repeating her pediatrics internship and residency at Long Island College Hospital in New York. Before beginning a year's private practice in New York, she received a one yearfellowship for work in neonatology at Beth Israel Hospital in New Jersey.

Premature births are the main concern for the neonatologist, says Dr. Graboto. "We really have to establish the baby in the first month. Every minute, every second is crucial to the rest of the child's life."

The foremost concern for new born children is brain damage which might cause mental retardation, and Dr. Graboto says the attending physician has to monitor the development of each child very carefully.

'We have to watch every aspect of growth and development," she says. "And we have to refer to a large number of graphs and charts to see if the child is making normal progress in such things as height and weight and motor skills.

"Often you have to 'play it by ear' Dr. Graboto said that while Dr. Graboto says she herself advances in medicine have made the health care of children much more effective -- such as in the development of vaccines for such childhood diseases as measles, chickenpox and mumps-- the trend in pediatrics has been toward specialization for more detailed medical care. 'In recent years," she says, 'We've had not specialization but subspecialization in pediatrics. Symptoms in children are so much different and vary so much more widely in children than in adults, that

"Specialization is the best way to practice medicine," she says, adding that it is an ideal situation when an obstetrician can consult with a neonatologist about possible problems during a pregnancy.

New advances have been made by neonatology, she says, which now make it possible to save a prematurely born baby weighing less than a kilogram (2.2 lbs.).

But Dr. Grabato is still a pediatrician and in this day of specialization that almost amounts to a general practitioner for children.

"The idea in pediatrics in general is prevention." she says.

Home, school drift apart

By OSCAR COOLEY

The parents in Columbus, Ohio, are worried for fear their public schools will have to close for lack of money, forcing thousands of children into idleness and potential mischief A similar danger pervades many other cities and towns. School boards are short of money to pay teachers and other school expenses because the taxpayers of their districts have not been willing to tax themselves sufficiently. Levy after levy has failed of passage. Why? Don't the people want their children educated? Is this a sign that adults no longer have concern for children?

Parents today, like those of the past, love their children and want good schooling for them. They are willing to pay for such schools, but they are dissatisfied with today's schools. They resent the busing. Their children are not progressing as the parents think they should, some are not even mastering the three R's. The schools waste time in teaching inconsequential subjects. They waste money in dozens of ways.

Teachers lack sincerity; they want more salary for themselves more than they want more knowledge for their charges.

A considerable number of parents are so fed up with the public schools they have pulled their children out and at great cost are sending them to private schools.

Many are demanding that their state treasuries rescue their school districts financially. In Ohio the state would pay at least half the cost of operating all public schools if the legislative recommendations of the Ohio Board of Education are approved by the General Assembly.

This demand assumes that lack of funds. is the chief problem of the public schools. It is not. The parents have the money to pay for their children's schooling. Those who have transferred children to private schools demonstrate this. And it is plain that to shift the financial burden to state treasuries saves the taxpayers no money; they are simply robbed by a different tax collector, and if anything a more hated one.

The problem is school quality. This has deteriorated as the schools have grown larger and more distant from the parents. We have made the mistake of assuming that the mass production principle which works so well in making automobiles and TV sets will work well in educating children.

Educating children is a far more complex and difficult job than making gadgets. The units of raw material are not standardized, nor are the units of finished product. Every one has to have individual attention.

The process of education begins in the home, with the mother as teacher. The father also teaches, as do all other members of the family. School follows, and there must be continuity and cooperation between home and school. This requires a close relationship between parents and school teachers.

At this point, the American public school system, has failed. There is a hiatus between home and school, between parents and school teachers and administrators.

The child, used to individual attention in the home, suddenly finds himself merely one of a group getting mass attention from the teacher. He is just a member of a herd. And he finds himself being exposed to all sorts of new knowledge. Stimulating? Yes - and bewildering.

The influence of home and parents now dwindles; that of the school - and of its state - oriented teachers and state dictated curriculum - increases. The larger the school and the longer the bus ride to get there, the further the home influence recedes and the more that of the school dominates.

In short, the public schools have taken the children away from the parents. The parents resent this and in retaliation are taking their financial support away from the schools by voting down levies. And they are getting a lot of help from voters who are not parents of school - age children. The schools then turn to state treasuries for the money. The teachers' organizations lead the hungry horde.

Some parents in desperation turn to private schools. These are supported also by parents who sense that only through private schools will they retain any semblance of control over their children's schooling. The mass of parents just suffer and hope.

But from another quarter many parents get relief. Business and industry demand the services of more and more women as well as men. So mother takes a job, and the office or store now partially takes the place of the home. She has something besides children to live for

Whether this is a wholesome development or not, it is serving to ease the conflict between home and school. It is also aiding in separating the child from parental care and making him a ward of the state. It is furthering the process of socialization.

Are parents aware that the children born to them are being taken away? That the schools are becoming huge state nurseries? That this process is being speeded by the shift of the cost of education, first from family to public school taxing district, then from locality to state? Eventually, to the federal treasury?

Classless society just a pipe dream

Every American at one time or another complains of his government. Taxes are too high. Regulations are excessive. Privileges are being taken away.

In rare instances, we say we would prefer some other form of government - communism, for example. Isn't communism a form of government where all people are alike? Doesn't Russia have a classless society - where everyone is on equal terms? Wouldn't Russia be a better place to live than the United States?

Then we're jolted back to reality when we listen to Carl Stewart, the Gastonia lawyer and Speaker of the North Carolina House of Representatives, tell of his trip recently to the Soviet Union.

Said Stewart: "The people of Russia have a different set of czars today, but they are still czars. The Marxist revolution was to bring a classless society, but if ever there was a class society it is the USSR. The whole country is like one giant corporation."

The new czars, Stewart said, are the top party officials and bureaucrats, scientists, non-dissident artists and athletes. They get the best theater tickets, the few available autos, the choice cuts of meat and top medical care. All of this is provided at secret stores and clinics.

The average Russian gets little. He earns about 200 rubles (about $266) per month and spends 60 percent of his income for food. Getting enough food is a constant worry.

"Russians stand in line for hours waiting for a few things that would be discarded by Americans," said Stewart.

If you live in Moscow and your plumbing breaks, you can expect to wait six weeks for a plumber to come and fix it, Stewart said.

"There's a way to get the plumber to come early," he said. "Over here we call it a payoff. Over there, they say it's going 'to the left'. It adds up to the same thing. You pay something extra to get it fixed."

Stewart said the Russian government makes no pretense of masking its secret police. He said the same faces were seen watching his group at different places.

The Russian youth has a high suicide rate, he said, mainly because of pressure to score high on scholastic tests which decide what role a young person will have in life.

Stewart noticed that most Russians are heavy smokers and drinkers. "Alcohol is openly admitted as a serious national problem," he said.

"Vodka is inexpensive, although the price was doubled recently in an attempt to cut consumption. They buy it in quantity and drink it all. It is considered poor manners if you leave an unconsumed bottle of Vodka. This may account for their poor quality products. This is part of the escapism sought by people who endure a long winter."

Stewart found the underground rail system in Moscow to be very poor and he had to make an appointment several days in advance in order to make a call back to the United States.

"The Russians are not a people who revolt, but a people who have mentality for enduring whatever is thrust upon them," said Stewart. Sure, things are bad in the USA. But before we sound off too much, let's think of the average Russian and thank the Lord we're not in his place.

Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia, has been reconstructed, and hopefully Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, will be, to help Americans remember the way it was.

Historians, measuring time in terms of what they consider significant events, are inclined not really to care what Ben Franklin had for breakfast.

Yet perhaps it is significant for our perspective to know that throughout most f his life his meager breakfast was bread and milk served in a twopenny bowl made of clay and eaten with a pewter spoon.

That is the way it was, even for the celebrated, in 18th - century America.

And in the 17th century life at best was miserable. Your great - great - great - grandfather's life was incredibly hard.

The signers of our nation's Declaration of Independence were men of means, yet economically, they were what we'd consider deprived, disadvantaged, underprivileged

And that's the way it was of commodious New England salt box houses or ample brick houses in Tidewater, Virginia, adorned inside for a life of elegance and grace - that is not the way it was. Thomas Dudley, who became governor of Massachusetts Bay, writing in 1631 to the Countess of Lincoln, apologized for the crabbed style of his writing because, he explained, he had "no table nor other room to write in, than by the fire upon my knee, in this sharpe (cq) winter." Family life was fragile due to a shortage of women and a high death rate. Life expectancy was 27 years. More women died during childbirth.

For any Colonial American there was little expectation of seeing either parent survive until he was grown.

Give Germans their art

World War II ended more than 30 years ago, but a curious legacy of that war is hanging heavily on American hands. The U.S. government continues to hold more than 6,000 pieces of wartime German art paintings and drawings by combat artists who followed the Wehrmacht through its early victories and final defeats.

Under the Potsdam agreement of 1945, the art work was gathered up by the U.S. Army and brought to this country as part of the policy of discouraging any revival of wazi immarism and propaganda in postwar Germany. Now there are voices being raised in West Germany asking that it be returned. Mainly, it is the artists or their families who want these works returned.

As it is, these pictures probably have been seen by more Americans than by people alive in Germany today. The Army has put some of them on exhibit from time to time. A film about the collection and its history was broadcast recently on our public television. Those who saw it may have been struck by the similarity to some of the combat art produced by Americans in the same war - especially when the artists, who were supposed to be glorifying the German soldiers, were honest enough to portray the boredom, privation and brutalities of war.

This collection, more important as history than as art, has little value to America as a prize of war. The question is whether it is proper to return the art work to the Germany of 1978. We think it is. We see no reason why those in Germany who want the paintings shouldn't have them.

Germany may have made some sense during the "denazification" program after suggests that Germans should not confront their own national nest for foar of reawakening the madness that led company nation has to live with its history. This wartime art - most of it banal, but some of flowed from the horrors of the Third Reich - recalls an ugly era in German history.

do with this residue of the war is their business, just as it is their business to decide the place of "Mein Kampf" in their national literature.

For the United States to cling to this booty of war art collection would be petty. and the expense of maintaining it should be borne by the Germans if they want to preserve it.

For our government to cling to it because we do not think the German people should be exposed to the ideology it may contain would be silly at this late date - and not too far removed from the kind of policy that saw ideologiclly suspect books heaped on bonfires in the streets of Germany during the 1930s.

Even when the tobacco economy began to prosper, housing remained primitive and temporary. Typical construction was a wooden house of no more than four small rooms, two up and two down, built on wooden posts that too soon rotted away.

History books which feature the rare attempts at grandeur have distorted the picture. The typical home, even of the well to - do, during our nation's first hundred yars was desperately lacking even in such "essentials" as beds, tables, benches and utensils

And, of course, there was wood heat, oil light and no plumbing.

Any American reared in a comparable environment today would likely consider his house a shack, his neighborhood a slum and his prospects hopeless.

Any American in a comparable environment today would freeze without HUD and starve without food stamps.

THIS HAS BEEN THE WEEK FOR TURMOIL and we have received our fair share. A former-Pampa High School graduate called quite upset about some apparent changes to the drama department. The department was moved from its home to the school auditorium after the holidays which caused some concern about conditions. We talked to school officials about the move and were told that they were trying to use the space they had to the best advantage. They also said the department now had more room and storage space than anyone at the school. We want to make this comment; Sometimes a new change may seem to be the worse thing that could happen but it has been our experience that change usually means improvement. The problem of safety for students and storage space is a major concern now. We feel that if anything can be done to improve safety the people of Pampa should get behind the drama department and make sure they have the same rights. privileges and facilities as other groups at the school enjoy

State support for arts sought

By SUSAN STOLER Associated Press Writer AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -Brenham banker Tieman Dippel describes himself as a business-oriented, chamber of commerce-type" who extols free enterprise and less government bureaucracy.

But Dippel displays evangelical fervor when it comes to appropriating state funds to support painting, dance, music and other fine arts in Texas.

As a member of the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities, Dippel represents a growing number who view government support for the arts as an economic investment

"The arts are business in themselves," he said. "Each dollar the commission gives out is matched on the average with $9.40 from private sources.'

The new, business approach to culture is aimed at tax relief-minded politicians who control state funds

One of the art community's favorite illustrations of their theory is what happened to New Orleans when the King Tutankhamen exhibit drew huge crowds in 1977-78. 'That brought in $50 million from tourists spending money.

Dippel said. "And the turnover for each dollar is six times. The exhibit brought in $15 million in sales taxes." Cultural arts in Texas range from 29 major orchestras, operas, ballet companies, theaters and museums to rural arts councils and local museums. Millions of private dollars are invested in collections, which are usually acquired quietly and often never seen by the Weekly oil report

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - W. F. Martin says no one should have been surprised when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries decided to push the price of crude oil to nearly $15 a barrel.

"Perhaps the size of the increase was larger than anticipated, but it does not alter the fact the price increase, to a great degree, was made right here in the United States," said Martin, board chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co.

The OPEC nations, he said, took the action to make up for lost purchasing power resulting from the declining value of the dollar.

In tracing the cycle of events he said led to the OPEC action. Martin said prices of domestically produced crude oil, motor fuel and other petroleum products have been kept artificially low by government price controls.

"This has caused increased consumption and inefficient oil usage," he said. "Moreover, these artifically low prices have slowed exploration for new domestic supplies of oil and discouraged needed increases in domestic refinery capacity, especially for nonleaded motor fuel.

All this, he said, forced the United States to import more and more OPEC oil.

"And since we pay for our oil in dollars, more and more dollars flow aboard, which helps weaken the value of the dollar in foreign countries," he said. "As a result, the price of foreign oil in terms of purchasing power of the U.S. dollar has continued to decline

Martin said the federal government for some time has been giving consideration to moving controlled prices for domestic oil toward world market levels and removing price controls from motor fuel. Opponents of such actions, he said, contend higher domestic oil prices would not be in the public interest in that they would add to inflation.

"It is true higher domestic oil prices will add to inflation, but not to a material degree, not to the extent some would have you believe," Martin said.

"Estimates vary, but reliable studies estimate a step-by-step removal of controls over the next two years would add no more than six-tenths of one percent to the inflation rate.' But Martin said the alternative, continuing to hold domestic oil prices below world levels and keeping price controls on motor fuels and other petroleum products, also cannot be considered to be in the public interest

'One would hope we would learn from past experiences. Martin said. "With the continuation of con-cycle to occur again: further increases in consumption and inefficient oil usage, slowed exploration for new domestic oil . supplies, little or no developtrols, we can expect the same inflation

ment of alternate fuels, higher tunities and improves living imports of foreign oil, a further standards," Martin said. weakening of the value of the U.S. dollar aboard and then further increases in oil prices by OPEC resulting in more inflation. In discussing the situation in

Philnews, a copyright employee newspaper, Martin suggested several actions to break such a cycle

He said gradually allowing oil prices to rise to world prices would encourage conservation and efficient energy usage.

Conservation also would be encouraged, he said, through removal of price regulations. He said incentives are not adeguate for needed refinery capacity and higher non-leaded gasoline production to meet increased demand as more and more new cars come on the

Livestock, fruit producers have it rough Bad weather hasn't hurt wheat

By DON KENDALL AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The snow and severe cold that have gripped much of the nation in recent weeks have been rough on farmers in many respects. particularly livestock and fruit producers, but it has been of some benefit to winter wheat.

Going into the new year, the winter wheat crop planted last fall for 1979 harvest was in "fair to good" shape, the Agriculture Department said Thurs-

That by no means is a prediction that the harvest this summer is assured, because some critical months are ahead, particularly in parts of the Great Plains where January is traditionally the driest month.

Also, winter can mean severe wind erosion of fields that are not adequately protected by snow or by dormant wheat plants that are not well-rooted and developed enough to survive

No new production estimate was included for this year's winter wheat harvest in the report.

Last month, in its initial forecast, the department's Crop Reporting Board said the winter wheat crop could produce 1.44 billion bushels, an increase of 15 percent from last year's reduced yield of 1.25 billion bushels. The department's next forecast of 1979 winter wheat production - which makes up about three-fourths of the total U.S. wheat - will be issued May 10. By that time, crop analysts will be able to determine how well the wheat came through the critical winter months. But the report said that "most of the Great Plains crop was covered" by snow by late December.

"Good snow cover extended southward through Kansas, with a very light blanket over most of Oklahoma and northern Texas," the report said.

Protective snow in the Pacific Northwest "ranged from minimum to adequate." it said. "As the new year began,

Kansas wheat was mostly snow covered," the report said. "Cattle grazed on 5 percent of the acreage. compared with 20 percent the previous year.' Winter wheat in Texas "grew very slowly because of low temperatures" last month but cattle "had fair to good grazing.

It is a common practice, when wheat develops enough after it is planted in the fall, for farmers to let livestock graze on the topgrowth, sometimes throughout the winter. If it is in good condition and gets moisture, the wheat emerges from its winter dormancy in the spring and then develops rapidly into full plants ready for harvest by June and July in most areas. In the northern Great Plains, winter wheat as of Jan. 1 was said to range from "fair" in Nebraska to "good to excellent" in Montana.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cotton production from the 1978 harvest is expected to be about 1 percent more than the government forecast a month ago. The Agriculture Department said Thursday that, based on surveys Jan. 1, the crop is expected to total about 10.8 mil-

10.7 million estimated as Dec. 1.

But the new estimate still was down 25 percent from the 1977 cotton harvest of almost 14.4 million bales, the department's Crop Reporting Board said.

The decline was attributed to a reduced acreage in cotton last year and a drop in yields. mainly because of poor weather in major growing areas. California, for example, "is experiencing the poorest yields in 25 years," the report said. Nationally, the average cotton yield from the 1978 crop was put at 421 pounds for each acre harvested, compared to 520 pounds in 1977.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Agriculture Department intends to put its plan to pay potato growers for feeding some of their crop to livestock into effect on Jan. 15. The program was announced Dec. 27 and will apply to russet potatoes grown mainly in Idaho. Washington. Oregon. northern California, Colorado, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin and some other northern states Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman said Thursday growers can get full details from local offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

The program is intended to offset price-depressing effects" triggered by a record crop of potatoes last fall, she said

Payments will be made to growers from "diverting" up to nine million hundredweight of potatoes from consumer channels into livestock feed or to processors for converting into starch, Ms. Foreman said.

The payments will be $2 per 100 pounds of potatoes in the first 30 days of the program. Jan. 15 through Feb. 13, and $1.75 for the second 30 days. Feb. 14 through March 15, she said.

Department officials estimated previously that the program will mean consumers will have to pay one-half cent to one cent per pound more for potatoes than they otherwise would

Input wanted on gas order

Special to The Wall Street Journal

AUSTIN - The Texas Railroad Commission is preparing to ask for public comment on a proposal to ease its three - year old order to phase out the use of natural gas as boiler fuel in the state.

The order, adopted in 1975, was intended to encourage conversion to coal and other fuel of all major industrial gas users.

But the commission has set for discussion Monday a suggestion that the order be relayed in the light of Federal policies.

The 1975 order requires a reduction of 15 percent in gas use by 1981 and 25 percent by 1985

The Texas Commission. however, blamed federal policies with upsetting its conversion schedule. The commission declared that the recently increased rail freight rate on coal deliveries from Western states to Texas plants is a detrimental factor, and that federal clean - air standards threaten to inhibit industrial expansion and overall economic growth along the Texas coast. The commission's Gas Utilities Division also reported that recent shortages of natural gas within the state, caused by

Harvesters conquer Caprock in district opener

By JOE BLOBAUM Pampa News Sports Editor AMARILLO - The Pampa Harvesters opened their District 3-AAAA campaign on a successful note here Friday night by downing a stubborn Caprock team 67-57.

It was a game marked by spurts of brilliance - and ragged play - by both teams. and it left Harvester Coach Garv Abercrombie somewhat less than satisfied.

We didn't play very intelligently, but at least we played hard." he said. "We just didn't play very smart. We had too many turnovers

i'We don't run our offense very well when someone comes out on us and pressures us," he continued. "They really pressured our perimeter passes and we didn't handle it very well."

But Abercrombie saw his team do some positive things to win their third game in a row and tenth (against 11 lossés) of the season. Among them were: - Outscoring Caprock 21-11 in the final quarter to pull away from a 46-46 tie at the end of the third period. The Longhorns led 46-40 with two minutes left in the third quarter before Pampa scored the last six points of the period. Ronnie Faggins hit'a pair of jump shots to open the fourth quarter, and the Harvesters never trailed again. - Running its four-corner offense successfully, at least from time to time. The Harvesters initially used the setup late in the first quarter. and Steve Duke immediately drove in for a layup. After Pampa took a 55-50 lead in the final period. Doug Skaggs did the same thing.

"We ran the four corners pretty well at times."

Abercrombie noted. "We can score off of it as long as we don't throw the ball away.

- Getting Caprock's 6-4 center Charles Stuart into foul trouble early in the second half. Stuart had 13 points in the first half, and all six of his field goals were from inside 10 feet. Three came after offensive rebounds, and they all helped Caprock fight back from an 18-11 first-quarter deficit to trail 34-33 at halftime.

Steve Stout started driving to the basket to open the second half, and Stuart was saddled with his fourth foul midway through the third quarter. he sat out the rest of the period, scored one basket in the fourth quarter and fouled out with over four minutes to play.

Finally, the Harvesters put five men in double figures. Skaggs took game honors with 19. Stout put in 12 and Duke, Faggins and Cedrick Parker had 10 apiece. Parker - who was mistakenly announced as a starter in the pregame introductions - also grabbed some big rebounds in the final

Both teams scored in spurts to open the second half. Caprock got things started with six straight points for a 39-34 lead. The Harvies responded with three buckets of their own (and a 40-39 cushion), only to see the Longhorns score seven straight led the Longhorns with 15 points. while Brad Janney had 13.

The Shockers won a cold-shooting contest from Caprock's junior varsity, 38-35. Vic Wallace led Pampa's scorers with 13 points, while Dwayne Avery hit 10. Caprock, which put just four players inthe scoring column, was led by Leonard Coulter's 19 points. Greg Ewing added 12. Abercrombie said the Harvesters would have to play an outstanding game to up their district mark to 2-0. Pampa goes against 3-AAAA preseason

Girls tame Hereford in overtime

By GREG HARDIN Pampa News Staff

For the second time this week, the Pampa High School girls varisty squad staged a thrilling come-from-behind win at Harvester Field House.

The victim of the fast breaking, tough rebounding shooters of Pampa was the Herd of Hereford Friday night as the Harvester girls grabbed a 49-42 win in overtime.

The Harvesters were held to Melissa Polson's field goal in the first quarter, while the Hereford shooters tallied 10 to take an eight-point lead into the second period.

Houston tops TCU for first SWC win

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Cougars, led by the 13-point second half shooting performance of Kerr Williams, blasted Texas Christian 95-66 in a Southwest Conference basketball game Saturday.

It was the first conference victory in four starts for the Cougars: now 9-7 overall. TCU dropped to 0-3 in the conference and 5-8 for the season.

Houston led the regionallytelevised contest by as many as 30 points during the second half. building that margin twice in the stanza.

Williams, who had just 2 points in the first half, caught fire in the home stretch and ignited the rest of the Cougars. The Cougars held a 38-24 edge at halftime and blew the Horned Frogs off the court in A THE REPORT OF THE OWNER OF THE SECOND HARD splurge. In their last game, Houston managed only five second-half points against Texas A&M and fell to an embarrassing defeat.

Game scoring honors went to TCU's Scott Blackwell, who dropped in 16 points in the losing effort.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said he revised his tactics a bit to see if he could turn around his team's previous inability to score points in the second half.

We didn't put the emphasis on the first half," he said. "We had been getting juiced up and revved up for the first part of the game and turning cold in the second part.

We just reversed it against TCU: trying to play steady at first, and getting juiced up in the second half.

By MILLER BONNER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Since plans for a national farm strike failed miserably last year, the American Agriculture Movement says it will employ more conventional lobbying methods during this year's confrontation with Congress.

The "better organized and more experienced" AAM begins its campaign this week as farmers and their tractors depart from five states headed for the nation's capital.

Last year, the AAM threatened to plow under crops if Congress and the Agriculture Department didn't raise prices to 100 percent parity levels. Under full parity, farmers would theoretically have the same buying power they enjoyed from 1910-14. Last month the parity ratio was 72 percent, up from 66 percent a year ago. The demands were not met and "striking" farmers returned home to harvest record corn and soybean crops. Cotton and wheat production dipped slightly but inclement weather and farmer participation in the USDA's acreage set-aside program accounted for the decrease

The lobbying effort last year was thwarted by the lack of organization within the AAM and the disruptive activities - tossing eggs in several congressional offices, releasing goats and chickens on the Capitol grounds, breaking through a glass door at the Agriculture Department and dumping a load of corn on Independence Avenue in front of the USDA of some farmers.

This year, instead of tossing eggs the AAM will be stroking egos

"This year we have a little more experience in dealing with legislators," said Gerald McCathern, an AAM leader from Hereford, Texas. "They are proud of the wrk they do. the bills they pass.

"So we're going to them and say, 'we're going to try and help you make the farm bill work

"This year we want Congress to pass a resolution calling for the Agriculture Department to raise parity levels on major crops to the 90 percent maximum under the current farm bill," continued McCathern. "The secretary (of agriculture) and the president told us that the 1977 Farm Bill was the best we've ever had ... if they're so proud of it, we want them to

"Our farmers are having a tremendously difficult time," he said. "The cost of fuels for irrigation have dramatically increased...there is a belt-tightening mood in the country but by increasing the loan authorizations we are not spending any money. The government has never lost a penny with the loan program."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he felt the lobbying farmers will "be listened to and treated with courtsey and respect....but they have to recognize that Congress will write the legislation. We welcome their suggestions and their views and any constructive thoughts they may have. Congress wants very much to preserve the family farm and I think it is extremely important to the American consumer that we do so. The farmers have a very valid point in that only a few cents of a cost of a loaf of bread goes to the farmer that produces the wheat.' House Agriculture Committee Chairman Tom Foley, D-Wash., branded the proposed resolution calling for increases to 90 percent parity "very disruptive...especially to crops that we export."

"THE BEAUTY OF A CHAIR"

A chair is something to sit on. A chair also can be a thing of great beauty. For example a camp stool can serve as something upon which to sit.

But what modern woman would be content to have a camp stool installed in a prominent comer of her living room in the place of a finely made chair exuding beauty and charm.

What we are leading up to is this: Fine Furniture, modern furniture, goes beyond the point of mere utility. A home is made lovely by its furniture. And the selection of this furniture begins with its purchase at the wholesale level.

That is why we go to the wholesale market to personally select the merchandise we offer our patrons.

We carefully inspect the newest furniture, handcrafted by the nation's leading makers. We feel the finish, check the fabrics, analyze the construction, not from the slick pages of a catalog, but at first hand. This entails time, trouble and expense, but it's the only way to assure our patrons of a selection that's complete, new and in the latest trend.

We'd like you to see this furniture, knowing as we do, of the pride that the homemakers take in beautiful surroundings for their families.

Eliminating pigweed tough for farmers

AMARILLO - Eliminating pigweed in cotton fields with herbicides in West-Texas proved to be tough according to Dr. Allen Wiese, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station researcher. The scientist presented four years of research on pigweed control in cotton on January 8 at the Beltwide Cotton Production Research Conference in Phoenix, Arizona. Wiese teamed up with Dr. John Abernathy, another Texas A&M researcher, for the presentation.

Incorporating a preplant herbicide and following with a pre-emergence overlay at planting eliminated pigweed most consistently.

In order to determine how regularly pigweed could be eliminated with herbicides in cotton, Wiese conducted four experiments on Pullman clay loam at the USDA Center at Bushland and three more on Amarillo fine sandy loam at the Duane Scott farm near Wellington, Texas, In each experiment, Prowl, Cobex, Tolban, Treflan, Basalin, Amex and Planavin were incorporated at normal and twice normal rates with a tandem disk prior to bedding. Cobex, Treflan and Tolban were combined with Caparol, Karmex and Lasso in tank mixes and incorporated preplant. Karmex, Caparol and Lasso were overlain pre-emergence after planting giving the cotton two herbicide treatments. Pigweed control on the combination treatments was compared to untreated areas as well as preplant and pre-emergence herbicides alone.

Pigweed was eliminated in all seven experiments by twice normal rates of Cobex and Basalin followed by pre-emergence overlays, according to the scientist. Preplant incorporated tank mixes of Cobex and Caparol, Cobex with Lasso and Tolban with Caprol followed by a pre-emergence herbicide eliminated pigweed in all studies. Normal rates of preplant herbicides followed by a pre-emergence overlay did not always eliminate pigweed.

The researcher pointed out that on the average, normal rates of all preplant dinitroaniline herbicides eliminated pigweed in 40 percent of the trials. Adding pre-emergence overlays eliminated pigweed 62 percent of the time. Doubling the rate of preplant herbicide eliminated pigweed in 77 percent of the experiments. When an overlay was added, pigweed was eliminated 87 percent of the time.

"Overlay treatments will reduce hoeing cost for pigweed in cotton," Wiese said. Hoeing once on a slightly infested field treated with a preplant herbicide costs ten dollars per acre. Band treatments with Caparol, Karmex and Lasso may save on hoeing and costs about one dollar per acre.

out to systematically discover a good combination of herbicides for controlling the weeds. Morningglory was the first weed studied. Strips of Treflan, Cobex, Basalin, Tolban and Prowl were sprayed perpendicularly to the direction of cotton rows. The herbicides were incorporated immediately with a tandem disk. Later the field was bedded and preirrigated. After planting, four row strips were sprayed with one or two rates of herbicide combinations. All of the preplant herbicides gave some control but preemergence overlays greatly increased control of morningglory. Preplant herbicides followed by Sancap or Caparol eliminated 85 percent or After conducting a similar study on lanceleaf sage, the researcher found that a preplant herbicide was necessary to weaken the problem weeds, but the one being used did not matter. After four years of research on the weeds. Abernathy concluded that

CONSERVE KITCHEN ENERGY:

Saving energy in the kitchen is a concern of the Federal Energy Administration. Much of our food is highly processed, and even that which is not may have come from lands far away, at an enormous cost in energy. So before it gets to us our food may have been treated, transported, processed and re - processed, packaged and hauled again from market to our own kitchen shelves.

To help cut down on further energy output - in meal preparation - the Office of Conservation suggests these tips to the consumer

1 Avoid peeking in the oven, or in the crockpot. Use a timer, a meat thermometer or time temperature chart; check minimum allotted cooking time for the food you are cooking. Or use the oven light to help you see into the oven. Make sure the oven door seal is tight and not leaking.

2. Plan complete oven meals that can be cooked all at the same time. Turn off oven when there is about five minutes of cooking time left — the oven will be hot enough to finish the adjusted. It could be using more fuel than necessary 9. Put pots and pans on the range before burner is turned on so heat is not wasted. 10. Use your oven instead of surface units when possible. Less heat is lost in confined areas

11. When practical, thaw foods before cooking. 12. Use glass or ceramic pots and pans on a conventional range; the heat can be lowered

25 degrees without losing cooking efficiency. 13. Heat only as much water as you need; it will heat more quickly

For example, use red for hot and blue for cold. Make sure water temperature is less than 120 degrees F. - to avoid scalding. about seven years ago and there is nothing you can say to me that will convince me that car didn't understand every word we said. A lot of marriages between new cars and owners are made in heaven. Maybe that's why we couldn't get parts. The honeymoon lasted exactly three hours. Then the light knob fell off in our hand, the rear window went down automatically and stayed there, and the floor burnt our feet up.

We didn't talk trade - in in front of the car for almost a year. Then one day my husband said, "Maybe we should trade in this clinker while it is still running.

We climbed in the car and the motor refused to turn over.

After we bought the new battery, we figured we might as well use up our investment. So we hung in there until seven months later when my husband said. "As long as we've got the original tires, we might as well turn it in." At that precise moment, the left rear tire expired.

With four new tires, the car had bought itself another year of residency. It was not ready to let us go. The least little thing could set it off. One day I just got out of my side of the car in a parking lot and remarked what a good lookig compact was parked next to us. Our car would not go into reverse and we had to have it towed to a garage where they duly recorded on our bill Stubbornness: $65.

DEAR ABBY: My husband just told me he has a chance to drive two middle-aged widows to the mountains next June.

He is to be their guide and chauffeur. I am not allowed to go along. He says they know he is married and it doesn't matter to them.

If he drives these widows to the mountains, he will be gone for two weeks.

He met these ladies in a beer joint. I asked him how much they were paying him for his services and he was very evasive and acted as though the money wasn't very important. (It is. We can barely make ends meet.) I get madder and madder as time goes on. Does this sound like a legitimate business deal or not?

STEAMED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR STEAMED: Is your husband a professional guide and chauffeur, or did he agree to be one to accommodate these ladies? It's not a legitimate business deal unless he has some kind of contract or agreement with them. If he hasn't, it sounds to me like a lot of hot air that came out of a lot of cold beers.

DEAR ABBY: My dentist of long standing retired recently. (I'll call him Dr. A.) In his place there is a very likable, capable, young man. (I'll call him Dr. B) Dr. B. is an excellent dentist, but he has-of all things for a dentist-bad breath! I like him and his work very much, but I don't know if I can subject myself to this unpleasant, almost nauseating situation. I considered telling Dr. A. to tell Dr. B about his offensive breath, but Dr. A. is such a gentle soul I don't think he could bring himself to do it. I'll be grateful for your suggestion.

NO NAME IN ARIZONA

DEAR NO NAME: It would be a tremendous kindness to let Dr. B. know that his breath is offensive. Do tell Dr. A. to wise up the young dentist. And if he doesn't do it - you tell him.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a widow in her 70s who has been "dying" for the past 20 years. She keeps praying to die, and says she "knows" she will not live much longer. The doctors tell her there is nothing wrong with her.

It is very depressing to be around her. I want to be a loyal daughter, but I am so tired of hearing her say that she is praying to die, when there are so many people who are praying to stay alive.

The biggest problem is that she demands so much of my time. I am married and have my own family, Abby, and I just can't run over there and spend every day with her. I feel a responsibility to my mother, but she makes me feel guilty if I don't see her every single day. I have two sisters and one brother who give her very little time, and it doesn't seem to bother them. Please advise.

STUCK IN CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

DEAR STUCK: If you've heard her "praying to die" story for 20 years, you should be used to it by now. You should also realize that she probably doesn't mean it, and she could be a little sick. Handle her as you would a demanding child. Be compassionate and patient, but firm. Give her what time you can, and don't feel guilty about the rest. Your problem is not your mother. It's your inability to accept a situation which you can't change.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am 23 years old. I have had acne all my life. When I was on birth control pills, my face never looked better except for the scars from my old acne.

I stopped the pill about two months ago and my face is getting worse. I believe it's the worst it's ever been, even when I was a teenager. I've tried everything for it but I thought maybe you might have a few suggestions. It's embarrassing to have this problem at my age. How long can I expect to have it? I can't afford to see a dermatologist or a doctor. DEAR READER - Depending on the hormone composition of the birth control pill, they can be very helpful in relieving acne. It's not surprising, then, when they're stopped acne suddenly flared again. In general, estrogen seems to help prevent acne while progestrone, the other female hormone that dominates onehalf of the menstrual cycle, seems to increase acne problems.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-ad-dressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. It will give you the details that you need to help you do some things for yourself.

I believe that very severe cases of acne should be seen by a doctor because sometimes the home treatment program just isn't enough. Adequate, prompt treatment may prevent scarring, pitting and other problems that you would like to avoid. There are three basic aspects of treatment for acne. One is to slow down or eliminate the excess formation of oily, greasy secretions from the skin glands. Another important factor is to open up the pores of the skin so oily secretions that have formed can drain properly. Medical agents used to peel the skin such as Vitamin A acid (prescribed only by doctors) helps to serve this purpose. Finally, antibiotics are given to stop bacterial action that splits the fats in the skin and causes them to be irritating.

For your home project, about the most I think you can hope to accomplish on your own is to wash the face three or four times a day with warm water and a mild soap. In between times you can wipe off your face with an alcohol sponge. Soak a cotton ball in alcohol and sponge off all the oil that has accumulated with the sponge and then wipe the face dry. Doing this at frequent intervals will help to eliminate excess accumulation of oils.

If these measures and the others discussed in The Health Letter that I am sending you don't adequately control your problem, then I really think you'd be wise to see a doctor. At your young age you could still do a lot to prevent permanent skin damage that you would regret later. The Food and Drug Administration has recently made some recommendations concerning vitamin A acid, also known as retinoic acid (this is not the same as vitamin A that you take as a vitamin). This is one of the effective agents that induces peeling of the skin to improve drainage of oily secretions and treat acne.

There are some animal studies that suggest that skin treated with vitamin A acid may be more susceptible to sun-caused skin cancer. Patients treated with vitamin A acid should avoid sun exposure during treat-> qualified barrister. My first cousin, once removed, is the Earl of Ross. There was a Miss Vaughan in the court of King Arthur, so recorded in the legends.

"I was expected to go into the diplomatic service or the Royal Navy. Oliver was already working for Lloyd's of London, in insurance. The family was horrified when we went into the disco business.

Disco fever as a binge phenomenon is relatively recent in this country. In Europe, however, it has been continuously popular since the early 1960s. Tom, who was already diverted to hotel work when his private school went out of business, recognized the possibilities in 1964, when he was 16. He and Oliver got a van, outfitted it with sound equipment and drove all over the English countryside for musical fetes, acting as their own disc jockeys. At the time, Tom had long hair down to his shoulders, a walrus mustache and wore beads. The Vaughans were askance. His father instructed the bank manager at Ross-on-Wye, which handled the family accounts, not to lend them any money.

But the venture caught on, and through one of their baronial friends, the Vaughan brothers branched out to floating discos aboard the Reina del Mar on Mediterranean cruises. Going into posh, private discos, such as Oz in San Francisco, was a natural extension of the business.

So was Tom's conversion to staid businessman. The enterprise is so widespread - Le Club in Singapore, Annabelles in Vancouver, Sybil's in New York, Juliana's in Amsterdam - that Tom has averaged one flight a day in different parts of the world the last three months.

Cardinal lacking

tory It has never had a cardinal of the Catholic Church to rule and serve the city's dominant religion and walk in red-robed splendor down streets and alleys that seem to signpost the way to heaven. St. Ann. St. Philip. St. Peter. St. Louis. St. Charles.

Indeed some of them do lead to Elysian Fields, where the streetcar named "Desire" used to run.

Soon John Paul II will hold his first consistory and award red hats to new princes of the church.

The United States already has 10 cardinals, an all-time high, and other parts of the world with large Catholic populations, especially in South America, would seem to have a higher claim to the honor of a red hat. But there is more to this jewel Alexandria, Baton Rouge and Biloxi, embraces one of the largest concentrations of Catholics anywhere. Her famed St. Louis Cathedral, named for the sainted King Louis IX of France, is the second oldest in the United States. The original plan for the city, founded in 1718, called for a church and presbytery exactly as they are located today.

The original diocese, split off from Havana in 1793, stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada and from the Rockies to the border of the diocese of Baltimore, where the United States had its first bishop.

If nominations are in order, the incumbent archbishop Rev. Philip Matthew Hannan would look great in a red hat.

As an auxiliary bishop of Washington, Hannan preached the eulogy at the funeral of John F. Kennedy. He touched millions of hearts with his / opening quote from Ecclesiastes: "There is an appointed time for everything: a time to be born and a time to die."

So please, Your Holiness, crown this city of Jazz and Superdome, of pralines and prelates, of sin and sainted streets, of heavenly food and earthly temptations with a cardinal, a prince of the church, to save its syncopated sinners.

Heart transplant problems

Answer may be radiation

EDITOR'S NOTE - It's not in the category of breakthrough yet, but Stanford Medical Center scientists are encouraged by experiments indicating radiation might solve the major problem with heart transplants - rejection by the body.

By ROBERT LOCKE AP Science Writer

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) -Stanford University scientists believe they may be able to use radiation to coax the the body into accepting a transplanted heart.

Dr. Charles Bieber of Stanford Medical Center says the radiation seems to confuse the body's biological army that ordinarily will attack the transplant as a foreign invader and eventually reject it.

"We suppress the immune system and sort of form a window, during which we develop a tolerance for anything that's introduced," Bieber says. Bieber and his colleagues hope the radiation Treatment can someday replace transplant patients' indefinite dependence on drugs that leave them almost defenseless against in-heart transplants since they first sparked worldwide excitement in 1967. Many American hospitals found that although the surgery went The transplant is slipped in tivated and search-and-destroy The problem was so severe that most centers have stopped performing the operation.

Now only Stanford still transplants hearts on a regular basis. The campaign against rejection now allows nearly three of four Stanford patients live at least a year with new hearts. About 40 percent of 151 transplant patients have survived more than five years.

And Bieber notes that those virus or life-saving transplant, are attacked. Only a heart exwere doomed patients who faced imminent death in hospichanged between identical tal beds. Now most return home to enjoy their bonus years. At least one has fathered a child.

But while laboratory tests are encouraging, Bieber says major problems must still be solved before total lymphoidal radiation is available for human patients.

Rejection is currently controlled - not cured - at Stanford with a drug called ATG, which closes the body's immune system so the heart can survive. Most patients take the drug for the rest of their lives.

But ATG also leaves the patient much more susceptible to infections the immune system would normally attack.

Even a cold can threaten life, so careful surveillance and frequent use of antibiotics are a constant necessity.
