Operation changing at Pampa News

The Pampa News will be adding two video terminals to its newsroom and most typewriters will be moved out at the beginning of the week.

A terminal allows a reporter to write a story on a display screen and then have it stored in a computer. The machine can hold a large number of stories in its memory.

Loose paper will no longer clutter desks. Instead editors will check reporters work on the terminal and then feed the finished piece into the computer.

When the story is needed it will be spit out of a dispatch machine.

Moving all the equipment around to accommodate the new videos will cause some chaos so please excuse any small errors we may make in the next few weeks.

Pampa in satisfactory condition

A ten year old Pampa boy who was struck by a vehicle Friday is listed in satisfactory condition at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

Timothy Smith was transferred from Highland General Hospital to Amarillo for orthopedic care for a fractured femur, a spokesman at Highland General said.

Police report that five children began to walk on the roadway facing traffic on McCullough Street when a vehicle driven by Daryl Hood of Pampa attempted to yield the right of way. However, Smith had stepped into the road when the vehicle struck him.

No big trouble as Teng leaves

HOUSTON (AP)—Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping left Texas Saturday with a pair of silver spurs, a cowboy hat, a prize Brahman bull, a stomach full of barbecue beef and apparently some new knowledge on how the United States sends men to the moon and drills deep into the Earth for oil.

Unlike his arrival Thursday when he was greeted with fanfare and demonstrations, Teng's departure on this gray, wet and dismal day was quiet and uneventful.

He walked through the drizzle from his limousine to the boarding steps of the jet and climbed to the door, where he turned and waved farewell to the few officials seeing him off.

Teng then slipped inside the jet, which took off minutes later and disappeared into the overcast skies on its way to Seattle, Wash.

Teng spent 29 hours in Houston, a city with the independent conservatism and capitalist attitude that is a symbol of Texas. There were protesters, most of them from the large Taiwanese community, but no problems, no trouble.

About 700 Taiwanese demonstrated in front of the downtown hotel where Teng was staying. They made no effort to cross the street where several hundred policemen, many in riot gear, stood shoulder-to-shoulder.

And, after the peaceful protest, Police Chief Harry Caldwell shook hands with the leaders of the protest and thanked them for their behavior.

Leaders of the protest group then called for "a big hand" for the chief.

When the cheers died down, Andy Lai, the rally coordinator, said, "OK, chief, we want you to hear we give you 100 percent support."

Police did arrest 21 persons, including 18 adults and two juveniles who were carrying banners of the Revolutionary Communist Party, and one individual who tossed a rolled-up handful of leaflets at the vice premier as he entered the lobby of his hotel.

The only injury reported came when policeman R.C. Trevino was hit on the head by a bolt as he stood duty outside the hotel. The bolt apparently was thrown from an upper story of a nearby building.

Most of the arrests were made about one block from the hotel, Caldwell said. The group was carrying sticks in violation of a city ordinance.

"No member of the Revolutionary Communist Party or anybody else is going to carry clubs in this city," the chief said.

Although Teng joined in the typical Texas festivities, like the rodeo and the barbecue and 10-gallon hat, he also spent several hours with business leaders of Texas' biggest and fastest growing city.

Texas firms, an estimated 30 of them, already have contracts for hundreds of millions of dollars with mainland China.

Teng toured the Hughes Tool Co., where the first rotary rock bits were developed, a move that revolutionized oil drilling. Until 1972, the firm was the heart of the Howard Hughes business empire.

It wasn't all work for Teng during his Texas visit. There also was some fun time, the kind of fun Texans enjoy.

The vice premier attended a special rodeo presentation at the small town of Simonton, some 40 miles from Houston.

A weathered sign in front of the rodeo arena claimed it is the place where "East meets West."

Teng got a taste of Texas barbecue, bareback bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping and a ride in a stage coach, a replica of a mode of transportation during the frontier days of this frontier state.

Like a businessman on a shopping trip, Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping ended his visit on Saturday with a tour of the Hughes Tool Co., which makes the kind of sophisticated equipment his country needs to develop its oil reserves.

He also said that although the Chinese did not fully support all the policies of the Pol Pot regime, China would support Cambodia against what he called massive Vietnamese aggression.

Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua said, meanwhile, that the "Gang of Four" is alive, well and living in Peking under certain restrictions. He said the group was "not in prison," but did not give further details during his brief conversation with reporters.

MEMBERS OF various local civic groups were out Saturday taking one hour shifts to raise money for the March of Dimes Bucket Brigade. Phil Vanderpool, organizer of the fund-raising project, says they anticipate raising about $1,500. The term "Bucket Brigade" comes from the way people in the old west used to put out fires by contributing buckets of water. This drive is to "put out the fire in birth defects," said Vanderpool. Pampa High School Keywanette member Kelly O'Neal is shown above collecting money at one of four major intersections in town. Other clubs involved were the Kiowa, Key Club and Lions Club.

Moslem head threatens war in Iran

TEHRAN (AP)—Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini vowed Saturday to wage holy war against the shah-appointed government of Shahpour Bakhtiar unless it resigns. But the military sent him a clear signal it will oppose any attempt to seize power by unconstitutional means.

Despite the hard-line demands of the 78-year-old Moslem religious leader, informed

Iranian sources said the two sides are talking behind the scenes seeking compromise.

Khomeini, who orchestrated the struggle to drive Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country, wants to abolish the monarchy and wants Bakhtiar out as prime minister so he can appoint his own provisional government to establish an Islamic republic.

Speaking at a news conference, Khomeini said he would establish the government "very soon."

Bakhtiar declined all comment on Khomeini's statements. But a Bakhtiar spokesman underlined that Khomeini threatened to order his followers to take up arms against the government only if a "suitable solution is not found."

Diplomatic sources said they believed the next three days will be crucial in determining the attitude of the armed forces and whether Iran will move toward a bloody confrontation.

The military has the key to power, and most or all of its top commanders are believed loyal to the shah and Bakhtiar. The sentiments of the rank and file soldiers are less certain.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said the armed forces "must be hoping for a compromise" to maintain unity within their fragile ranks.

Informed Iranian sources said senior military commanders met with a representative of Khomeini Friday night to express "appreciation" that he had not acted drastically to take over the country. This was a clear warning to Khomeini and his followers that the military is serious in its commitment to the constitutional system, which provides for a shah.

The stern-faced Khomeini, wearing his now-familiar black robes and rumpled turban, said at his news conference, "We will try to solve the problem through non-violent means. But if the illegal government of Bakhtiar with the support of America and Britain continues to defy the will of the people and brings forces from Israel, then we will take other means to bring it down."

His warning about the use of force came in response to a question about whether he would declare a "jihad"—a holy war—to bring about an Islamic republic. In Moslem tradition, a holy war is fought against non-Moslem or foreign enemies. Khomeini's references to the Americans, British and Israelis may have been included to help justify his threat.

The military maintained the low profile it has kept since the triumphant return of Khomeini Thursday from 14 years' exile abroad. The only violence reported Saturday was in the Persian Gulf town of Bandar Abbas where soldiers attacked and demolished an Islamic cooperative store.

LINDA MILLER, one of a small group of women working in area oil fields, is a pioneer of sorts. Although she is invading what has always been male territory, Linda denies having feminist motives; she says she is only in it for the money. (Pampa News photo by John Price)

Women adapt to oil field

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

One day, during her first year on the job, Linda Miller was sitting in a truck cab with a male partner when two other men approached on foot. Not recognizing Linda under her work clothes and hard hat, the two pedestrians began telling an off-color joke.

"One guy who could see in the truck kept nudging the other guy," Linda said. "Finally, he got the message."

"That guy never did finish telling that joke. I don't know how it turned out."

Linda, a personable 32-year-old Pampa, admitted the case of confused gender was understandable. As one of a handful of women working in a man's world—the oil fields—she has encountered and overcome her share of sex-related problems.

"When I was hired I asked them about the bathroom situation, and they told me there's a him and a hers side of the truck," she said, laughing. Turning serious, she said, "When a woman comes in to where there's always been men, my opinion is that it cuts a man's ego down. I had the attitude when I came out here that I was going to do my share of the load and not get carried. I enjoy my job and I can personally say that I do my share of the work."

Miller, a lease operator for Mobil Oil Co., came to Pampa five years ago from Oklahoma City. She spent her first year in the fields as a "roustabout," fixing leaks, laying pipe and other necessary labor, before moving up to her present position.

Linda now checks wells, gauges tanks, figures production and does occasional maintenance work on 14 leases in the Lefors area. There is some heavy work involved, she said, but not much. Besides, physical labor is all she has ever known.

"I don't like being inside," she explained. "I don't like office work. On nice days I like to be out in the fresh air and the sunshine."

Before becoming an oil worker, Linda ran a printing press for five years in Oklahoma, a job that prompted the decision to enter her present profession.

A man would come in who might not have as much experience as I did, and they'd start him out paying him more than I got," she said. "I figured if I was going to do a man's job, I might as well get paid as much as a man."

Linda scotchs the idea that she is somehow leading a feminist assault on a traditionally male bastion, or that she is unfeminine and trying to be "one of the boys." All she seeks, she said, is equal pay for equal work.

"I'm not in it for women's lib," she said. "Just the money. I wanted to make just as good a living as anyone else I haven't kept up with this women's lib stuff. I don't even know what it's about."

"I like it when a man opens a door for me and treats me like a woman. I expect to be treated like a woman, even though I'm out there in the fields."

Linda is very pleased with her salary now, and she said her co-workers are friendly and respect her. "I've been pretty lucky here," she said. "They sent me to a good area where the men accepted me

They tease me a lot, but I tease them back."

"I know a lot of the wives. At first I think they had some second thoughts about me, but they've accepted me real well."

Charity Harris of Kingsmill, another female oil worker, has been operating a backhoe for the Phillips pipeline department for almost five years. A graduate of Pampa High School, she was born and reared in this area.

"I like my job," Charity said. "I was raised on a farm south of town and all I've known is good hard work."

Like Linda Miller, Charity was also attracted to the oil fields by the money. She was working in Dallas and decided to "come back home" so I could live a little cheaper.

Both women plan to stick with their careers, and Linda offered some advice for other women who are similarly inclined.

"I think if any woman is willing to go out and get dirty and only and carry her load, then she'll make it. I had a positive attitude, and with a positive attitude I think you can do anything."

Red propaganda

Last year the Soviets waged a wholly transparent propaganda campaign to forestall U.S. production of neutron warheads for NATO's tactical nuclear arsenal.

The Soviets recognized how effective neutron warheads could be in stopping a massive tank assault on Western Europe and in cancelling the Warsaw Pact's three-to-one advantage over NATO in numbers of tanks.

Because the neutron warhead's intense radiation would kill enemy troops and tank crews while minimizing physical damage to the surrounding towns and cities, the Soviets labeled the weapon "barbaric and inhuman."

For a country that leads the world in the development of chemical warfare techniques, massively destructive tactical nuclear missiles and production of the largest intercontinental ballistic rockets ever built, the Russians' feigned horror over the neutron warhead had an exceptionally hollow ring.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's latest anti-neutron gambit is no less disingenuous.

Brezhnev told visiting U.S. senators recently the Soviet Union had developed a neutron warhead but decided against production. The bulble were left to infer the Soviet decision reflected some lofty concern for humanity.

Nothing could be further from the truth. The Soviets, in fact, may have developed a neutron warhead. If so, they could not help but realize it is a weapon ill-suited to anything other than a defensive role.

On both strategic and tactical levels, the offensive is the heart of Soviet military doctrine. Their own troop training and doctrinal manuals stress the physical destruction and shock value of tactical nuclear weapons used to destroy opposition to advancing Soviet tank armies. As the Soviets would know from their own tests, the neutron warhead goes off with a very modest bang, creating little shock and less physical destruction.

In truth, Brezhnev and his armed forces have no use for neutron weapons.

NATO forces, of course, retain a legitimate need for this weapon as an equalizer against the crushing superiority of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

President Carter delayed production of neutron warheads and offered to cancel the weapon altogether if the Soviets would demonstrate comparable restraint and scale down the forces arrayed against NATO. In the ensuing 15 months, the momentum of the Soviet buildup has continued unabated. For the fourth consecutive year, there is not so much as a hint of progress in the intermittent negotiations over mutual force reductions in Europe.

Notwithstanding Brezhnev's objections, President Carter ought to order production and deployment of neutron warheads in sufficient quantity to help balance the scales in Europe and reduce the chances of a Soviet attack.

Lies and deceit

What right does any newspaper have to lie and deceive its readers? Absolutely none!

The school newspaper, and that term newspaper is used very loosely, decided it didn't like the outcome of a recent student election. So the editors said they will give the title of junior class favorite to a runner-up.

This is not only the most irresponsible thing ever done by this student publication but it is also greatly upsetting.

What can a journalism student learn about reporting the facts of a story if the advisor says "sometimes the newspaper has a right to protect the public good." That leads to changing the facts to read the way we want.

The election results stated in the Little Harvester are now a lie. There can be no other phrase used for knowingly printing false information.

This method of lying in the pages of a paper is not original. It has been tried before and has always failed. William Randolph Hearst was one of the famous liars and his publications suffered because of their attempts at deceiving the public.

Hearst, as did many others, went down in history as a "yellow journalist." This title now goes to anyone that tries to use the pages of a newspaper to deceive the public.

There must be a better way to teach the future journalists of Pampa than to teach them to lie to their readers.

No matter what the reasoning behind the action it cannot and should not be justified.

Cleveland and populist economics

Populism is America's native economics. Attitude rather than a set of conclusions derived through scientific economic analysis, it is characterized fervor, and its deep-seated conviction which sees every economic issue and frames every economic question in terms of "the people" versus "big business."

When things aren't going well, it's convenient to be able to point to a villain. For the populist mentality the utilities and the banks have been the perfect villains ever since the mentality became a movement in the mid-western farmers' protests of the 1870's which formed the Populist Party in Cincinnati in 1891.

The politicians have thrived on the populist mentality because it is so easily exploited — most people are a little suspicious of banks and utilities anyway. The chief purveyor and exploiter of this mentality today is the mayor of the great city of Cleveland, Dennis Kucinich, and, as usual with this economic nonsense, the results are chaos.

Cleveland has failed to pay $15.5 million of its obligations to several banks — the second default by a major American city in the last five years counting the New York

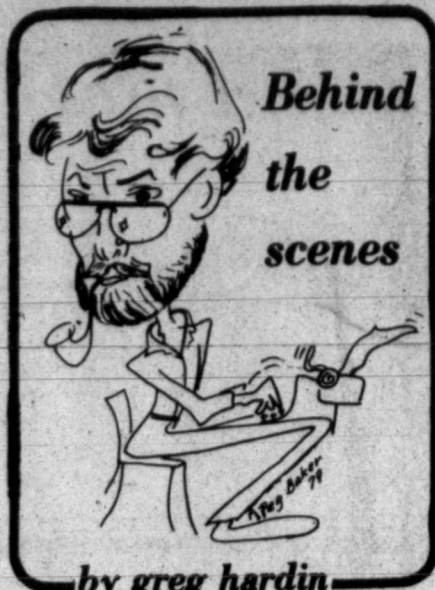

City charade for what it truly was. This pathetic fraud need not have happened and would not have happened if the vile germ of populist economics had not been embraced to infect the mayor's economic outlook. The city had the opportunity to sell its money-losing Municipal Light and Power System to the privately owned Cleveland Electric Company for $159 million but the mayor's populism (he calls his crusade the People's Administration) led him to refuse this option — "the people's" utility must not be surrendered to "big business." Again, the villain and the rhetoric.

The fact of the matter is that the municipal utility is a drain on the city's scarce resources which provides electricity to one section of the city at rates subsidized by the citizens at large who stand to lose by the city's failure to keep its fiscal house in order. Apparently "the people" so beloved by the mayor that he would see the city go bankrupt so that they may continue to receive their subsidized electricity at the expense of their fellow citizens are of a different species from the people who have to pay the bill.

For the banks. Oh, yes, the big bad banks. The banks had had enough of the city's funny money accounting and refused to renew the notes. In response to the banks' responsible decision (the banks didn't lend the city their own money, they loaned their depositors' money) the mayor ranted that he was going to take his own "clean money out of the dirty banks." That's fine, the mayor can do anything he wants with his own money but he is not entitled as the chief executive officer of the city to take the hard earned money of the banks' depositors without seeing that it can be paid back and is paid back.

When the city borrowed, the banks accepted its IOU and gave it a checking account. When that note becomes worthless due to default, the banks are no longer in financial balance and their depositors' funds are in jeopardy — not to mention that the banks are also in violation of the state or federal regulations which govern them. To restore their financial integrity the banks may have to cease making new loans to local businesses and citizens or may have to call in loans — an act which while necessary could cause economic ruin to many of the city's businesses and citizens.

When was the last time you gave some thought to our Founding Fathers and the Constitution?

Yeah, I agree, it was about the fourth grade when our teachers read the Constitution to us and then gave us her interpretation.

Well, remember Sam Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Patrick Henry? I'm sure those names ring a bell with everyone. Our Founding Fathers, right?

Wrong. We had two sets of Founding Fathers. Surprised? Well, so was I when I slapped me in the face.

Those men such as Jefferson, Adams, and Henry fought to give us our liberty. They laid their lives on the line for what they believed was right. The right of each man to be free.

Other men founded our government, not these. And these men, whom no one can recall, based our present government on a fraud. The biggest fraud before or since. They called it the Constitution of the United States.

The Federalists, as they were called, made sure that men such as Henry, Jefferson and Adams were not around when they drafted the Constitution. The reason was, they knew that the men that played such an active role in seeking our freedom would never support such a vague document.

The state delegates were sent to Philadelphia to examine the document as drafted by James Monroe and report back to their appropriate state houses, but instead, without authority, voted to accept the Constitution and passed the measure. The document was and is not legal in that right. The Constitution was ratified by the states but only after some very shifty maneuvering by the Federalists. Present day bureaucrats would have been proud of these early day politicians.

An interesting point that should be inserted here is that of the 96 delegates that were present in Philadelphia, only six of those men signed the Declaration of Independence.

Another interesting point is that the Declaration of Independence is not law. Instead, it is a piece of paper with 56 very famous signatures on it stating the views of those who signed it. Nothing more.

Instead of the Declaration of Independence, we got the Constitution, which in point of fact, is based on fraud.

If you take a close look at our government today you can see that the traditions of the men that gave us the Constitution are still being used today.

Don't believe that you live in a free society, because, believe me, you don't. Federal regulations, taxes, restraints abound in our socialist society. If you don't think the society is socialistic, take another look. You will be surprised at what you find.

I don't say we should do away with our government and start again. I sure could sleep better at night if we had a lot less government and a lot more liberty. I hope that you will agree with me.

Carter's political style

by paul harvey

No President since Eisenhower has so depolarized partisans as has President Carter.

Historically, characteristically, Democrats have been the party of "tax and spend."

Republicans have been expected to oppose fiscal frugality, balanced budget, that sort of thing.

Here we have a Democrat President delivering speeches which could have been written by Bob Taft.

In 1953 the United States was suffering runaway inflation.

Over the preceding four years our dollar had shrunk 10 cents. Black market prices were masked by price controls and the inflation rate was much worse than that.

President Eisenhower, less than one month in office, courageously slashed the federal budget.

Where the previous Truman budget had called for spending $78.6 billion with a $9.9 billion deficit, Eisenhower's budget reduced expenditures to $67.5 billion with a deficit of $3 billion.

Eighteen months later, in August of 1954, the price index stabilized; our dollars stopped shrinking and economic activity resumed its progress.

President Carter, fully aware of the opposition within his own party, is similarly determined to contain inflation by curtailing federal government spending.

The President went to the Democrats' mid-term convention in Memphis and confronted his critics head-on by re-announcing his plans to reduce federal spending.

In that Memphis convention nearly 40 percent of the President's own party voted against him on the curtailment of social programs, but he did not back down.

And President Carter turns his back on an angry George Meany, insisting that wage increases must be limited.

It can be argued that Carter is only reflecting the sense of the electorate; that he is merely responding to citizen uprisings against taxes. Nonetheless, it is politically precarious for the President to say there are some social programs which we can no longer afford.

Every public opinion survey shows that Americans are most concerned about inflation, and they recognize that cuts in the federal budget must be the first step in slowing it down.

Yet it is one thing to sound off on such a subject and quite another for an elected official to begin the withdrawal.

Inevitably, with the wearing there is a lot of screaming.

Pragmatically, President Carter has to know that the major threat to his political life is from the liberal left, specifically from Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Yet this president is demonstrating no disposition to disarm his party's liberals.

Instead, like Eisenhower, he is willing philosophically to bridge party lines.

Jimmy Carter may be a SOUTHERN Democrat after all.

A bundle from Bonn

OPEC oil - price hike, by most estimates will top 8 percent.

There is also increasing talk of a recession in our near future. The Conference Board, a non-profit economic research organization, in a survey of 1,600 business leaders found confidence in the economic future at a new low, with the possibility of a recession in 1979 a major determinant in the generally gloomy outlook.

So it has been going. Which makes one wonder what the West German investors know or think they foresee that we do not. Or it may be purely and simply faith. What their enthusiastic reception of the bond issue clearly demonstrates is an abiding confidence in the U.S. economy, for all its problems still far and away the world's most potent.

Maybe the managers of and participants in that economy could do with a little more of that faith themselves.

confidence in the U.S. economy, for all its problems still far and away the world's most potent.

Maybe the managers of and participants in that economy could do with a little more of that faith themselves.

Farmers finalizing battle plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Agriculture Movement leaders continued mapping out final battle plans Sunday in war-like preparation for Monday's tractor-led attack on Capitol Hill.

While District of Columbia police urged commuters to leave for work earlier than usual on Monday, the farmers feasted on barbecue and blue grass music in Warrenton, Va., Saturday night and scheduled a church service in the Department of Commerce auditorium Sunday morning.

More than 1,000 slow-moving tractors escorted by an equal number of support vehicles will begin creeping toward Washington early Monday morning, driven by farmers angered over Carter Administration policies.

The White House, Department of Agriculture and the Capitol are the three rendezvous points of the tractorcades.

"You've got to have patience like you've never had before," Hereford farmer Gerald McCathern told an AAM gathering Friday night. "People are going to be getting in your way... sometimes Monday morning you're going to get locked down in the dangdest traffic jam you've ever seen and you may be there for three days."

While farmers weren't saying they would walk off and leave their tractors to block traffic, they hinted that some of the tractors wouldn't be driven out of Washington.

"When you get a lot of excited people together, you never know what's going to happen," said Marvin Meek, a Plainview farmer who, along with his wife and four-month-old daughter, "traveled more than 1,800 miles in a tractorcade from Abilene."

Freshman Rep. Kent Hance, D-Texas, urged farmers from his West Texas district to "keep a cool head certain people may try to get you in a bad situation and make you look bad. Don't let 'em do it. Keep everything smooth."

"I know you were a little mad when you got in a tractor in Lubbock and drove it all the way to Washington D.C. and your disposition hasn't improved along the way."

Prairie dog lives

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Despite an abundance of enemies — including farmers, rattlesnakes and kids with 22 rifles — the prairie dog is holding its own, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department says.

Once poisoned by the millions over the western United States, prairie dogs still exist in fairly stable colonies in the Pampa area, South Plains region and some outlying areas.

Boy probably won't go blind

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 9-year-old boy, selected to serve as a ball boy Saturday for the Harlem Globetrotters after it was reported he was going blind, is probably "not doomed to blindness," his doctor said.

David Riojas suffers from uveitis, which his family and friends feared would cost him his sight. But his doctor said the disorder is not as serious as some thought and "there are many things that could be done" to keep the boy from going blind.

The boy's best friend, William Lanthicum Jr., also 9, wrote a heart-rending letter to the San Antonio News last week asking that David be the ballboy for the Globetrotters for their two Saturday appearances here.

"The boys on the other teams make fun of him a lot and sometimes he cries. He loves basketball. Please let him be a ballboy for the Globetrotters because he may never see them again," William scrawled in pencil on notepaper.

David's mother, Grace

Riojas, had said she understood her child eventually would go blind from the disease, which causes inflammation of the iris.

"She was mistaken," one of David's doctors, who asked not to be identified, said Saturday. "This is not a disease where someone is doomed to blindness by any means. There are many things that could be done to maintain vision. There are many new surgical procedures."

"It's not the hopeless situation she has painted it to be," he added.

Scouting is for families

By EUGENE LAYCOCK
Pampa News Staff

Cub Scouts is for the family, says Harvey Dunn, former leader of Troop 413.

Mr. Dunn and his wife, Ella, have been involved for five years with the Scouting program, which is celebrating its 69th anniversary this week.

They have been married for 13 years and have no children, and they say Scouting has become a way of life for them.

"We consider 'em our family," said Mrs. Dunn, referring to Pack 409 for which she is a den mother.

Mrs. Dunn said that she and her husband are in Scouts because of two boys whom she knew.

They came to her home one afternoon with Cub Scout applications and were excited about joining. The boys were unable to be Scouts because the area was short of den mothers and troop leaders. After seeing that the boys were upset, she volunteered temporary services.

Later at a Scout meeting, she helped enlist her husband on a short-term period. Temporary must have meant 25 years, said Mr. Dunn, laughing with his wife.

City and State news

The Duns have created many activities for promoting the family.

"We started a Father and Son Bake Sale," said Mrs. Dunn, "and it is used by other packs now."

A boy and his father bake a cake, which is created on the basis of a theme agreed upon by the Pack. Some of the themes have been the farm, Indians, and the circus, Mrs. Dunn said that one cake was shaped and colored like a big top.

These cakes are auctioned, and the money goes into the Pack's funds. Under the farm theme, Pack 409 sold about 30 cakes for $107.

A mother and her son, who is a Scout, build a kite to enter in a contest. The kite that flew the highest and longest at the last contest was made of a green garbage can bag.

The couple also began a Bike Rodeo. The Scout raced his bike through an obstacle course to prove the vehicle's durability, then drove it around a safety course where a policeman judged the rider on his turns, stops and signals.

The Pinewood Derby, a regular Scouting event, gets a father and son together to build a small wooden racing car. The cars are raced against each other at the derby which also includes a picnic.

The Scouts, said Mrs. Dunn, now let their applicants sell candy to pay for their fees. This helps them learn responsibility, her husband added.

Cotton harvest almost complete

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Stockmen are busy supplying hay and protein supplement to their herds as winter wears on, and cotton harvesting is nearly complete across the state, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Weight losses are evident in cattle throughout the state due to the adverse winter weather and lack of green forage. Small grains such as wheat and oats are providing little or no grazing because of freeze damage. There have also been numerous pneumonia deaths among lambs, calves and stocker cattle.

Cotton harvesting is nearing completion over the High and Rolling Plains and in Far West and Central Texas. Pfannstiel said about 35 percent of the crop remains to be harvested in the Rolling Plains, with lesser amounts in the other areas concerned.

Wet conditions are hampering land preparation over much of the state, including the Rio Grande Valley. However, some vegetable, citrus and sugar cane harvesting continues. Most of the citrus now being harvested will be processed into juice.

Some early watermelons are being planted in the Valley where field conditions permit, and a few early spring vegetables are being planted in sandy soils in East Texas.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions.

PANHANDLE: Some cotton remains to be harvested. Small grains are at a standstill due to cold. Adverse weather has been hard on cattle, with widespread shrinkage and some death losses. Supplemental feeding is heavy.

SOUTH PLAINS: Only a few cotton fields remain to be harvested. Ginning will continue in full swing for some time due to the large amount of cotton field-stored in modules. Wheat remains at a standstill due to cold. Cattle feeding is heavy due to poor grazing conditions.

NORTH CENTRAL: Agricultural work continues at a standstill except for livestock feeding. Cold, wet conditions are hampering small grains and limiting spring land preparation. Cattle feeding continues heavy, with stock holding in fair condition. Calving is increasing in some counties.

Police report

Philip Keith Taylor, 20, of 1123 E. Kingsmill was arrested for driving while intoxicated after police reported he drove through two stop signs, improperly used a lane change and was caught speeding. Taylor was issued a breath test and booked in the city jail.

A 1974 Chevrolet driven by Daryl Hood of Pampa, was traveling west on McCullough when five children began to walk on the roadway facing the traffic. Police said the vehicle attempted to yield the right of way to the children when one of the children, Timothy Smith, stepped into the path. Police said that Smith was taken to Highland General Hospital by a Metropolitan Ambulance and transferred to St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo.

A 1970 Ford driven by William

Rankins, 1617 N. Charles, was backing from a parked place in the 100 block of E. Browning when it struck a 1968 Chevrolet driven by Elizabeth Taylor, 2324 Cherokee, going east bound on the 100 block of E. Browning. Taylor reported that she was injured and went to Highland General Hospital for treatment. Rankin was cited for improper start from a parked position.

An unknown person shot the front door window of the 1200 S. Finley residence with a B B gun. Estimated damage is $9. A Lexington Apartment resident complained that the electric heater, estimated value at $30, was taken from the laundry room. There were no suspects.

Police received 24 calls in the 24 hour period ending at seven Saturday morning.

Cloudy skies and somewhat colder temperatures also were predicted for most of Texas Sunday.

Saturday temperatures ranged from the 30s in portions of the Panhandle to the 60s and 70s in areas of extreme South Texas.

Mistrial ruled in Flood case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge declared a mistrial in the bribery and perjury trial of Rep. Daniel Flood after a jury declared Saturday that it could not reach agreement on any of 11 counts against the veteran Pennsylvania Democrat.

U. S. District Judge Oliver Gasch repeatedly pressed the jury of eight men and four women to try to reach at least a partial verdict on guilt or innocence.

But after nearly three days of deliberations, jury foreman Daniel Robinson told the judge at mid-afternoon that it was virtually "impossible" for the panel to reach a verdict on any of the counts.

Flood, the 75-year-old actor-turned-congressman, had been standing trial for nearly three weeks on charges that he engaged in a six-year scheme in which he traded his vast political influence on Capitol Hill for at least $50,000 in cash and 100 shares of bank stock.

The congressman, who did appear tense throughout the period the jury was deliberating, smiled broadly when the mistrial was declared, but refused to talk to reporters immediately afterward.

"I have no comment to make at this time," Flood said.

Later, however, as the congressman stepped into a limousine outside the courthouse, Flood declared:

"I regret that the jury was unable to reach a unanimous verdict of acquittal in its deliberations. To this very moment,

I maintain my innocence of any wrongdoing in the charges which were considered against me. I have no further comment."

His chief lawyer, Axel Kleiboemer, said: "I'm disappointed. I looked forward to the acquittal of my client." Kleiboemer said Flood's defense already had cost more than $100,000.

Good economic news cheers government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials are in a more cheerful mood, thanks to the latest figures that tend to give the lie to forecasts of impending recession or a sharp economic slowdown.

The newfound optimism follows release of Friday's unemployment figures showing a decline in the jobless rate to 5.8 percent last month, equal to the four-year low. The report also showed that 450,000 new jobs were created.

"I'm inclined to the view we are seeing confirming evidence there will not be a recession in 1979," Lyle E. Gramley, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers, said of statistics showing that jobs and production continued to post solid gains in January.

In an interview late in the week, Gramley said the January statistics point to "relatively strong growth" for the economy during the first quarter of the year.

A prominent private economist who had been forecasting a recession for 1979 as a result of the administration's slow-growth economic policies, agreed the government's forecasts are looking better.

"The news keeps looking good and keeps favoring the administration's soft-landing," said George Perry of the Brookings Institution, referring to the administration's assurances that a recession can be avoided.

"I still expect a recession to start before the year is out," said Perry. But, he added, "interest rates have been coming down a bit lately and if that continues, I think there is a pretty good chance of coming through the year with something like the administration's forecast."

Perry said he had based his recession forecast in large part on the expectation that interest rates would continue to rise. Several institutions, led by Chase Manhattan Bank, lowered their prime lending rate last week to 11.5 percent from 11.75 percent, the first decline in this key interest rate after two years of steady increases.

The administration estimates that its slow-growth policies, which also include restraints on government spending, will allow for growth in the economy of about 2.2 percent this year, down from the 1978 growth rate of 4 percent, but enough to escape a recession.

Great Britain's hospital workers strike

LONDON (AP) — "Shocking to pick on children that way," said the ample barmald in the Shoreditch Pub. She brandished her mop defiantly. "You tell them if they want voluntary work we can soon muster up some of that."

But up the street, outside

Queen Elizabeth Hospital for Children, one of 1,000 hospitals in Britain hit by strikes, the pickets presented a different view.

"We wouldn't bother working in hospital for these wages if we had something against sick children," said laundry worker

Rose Wiltshire, who takes home $3 pounds a week — about $66 — after taxes.

Driver Alfred Marshall, who takes home $106 for a 56-hour week, agreed. "We have adequate services provided for the children. If there were any kids suffering in my hospital today I wouldn't be standing out here on strike," he said.

Hospital administrators and doctors confirmed there were no ill effects on their 105 young patients, whose ailments range from tonsillitis to rare spinal disorders.

Hearst 'anniversary' today

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It was five years ago Sunday that Patricia Campbell Hearst, screaming and half-naked, began an odyssey of terror and mystery that baffled the nation.

Perhaps for the first time, the anniversary of her kidnapping is not a day of despair for Patty Hearst.

Three days after her early release from prison, she is off alone somewhere in California with her fiancée, Bernard Shaw, and her dog, planning a big wedding and looking to the future.

It is a storybook ending to a tale of fear, violence and what she later would call the "disquieting vulnerability of the human mind."

The tale began Feb. 4, 1974, when she was dragged from her Berkeley apartment by members of the terrorist, Symbionese Liberation Army.

Before President Carter commuted Miss Hearst's seven-year bank robbery sentence last week, a wide majority of Americans polled felt the frail, auburn-haired newspaper heiress had suffered enough and should be let out of prison.

Carter's decision to cut short her term, after she had spent 23 months behind bars, drew few complaints, except from her fellow inmates who said that "justice is only in the pockets of the rich."

Miss Hearst strolled out of the prison Thursday morning, carrying a flowered blanket she had crocheted inside and wearing a gold diamond ring on her left hand, the same hand that two years ago she pounded in frustration against her prison cell wall until the knuckles were scraped and red.

It was an amazing transformation from "Tania," — the name she called herself on vitriolic taped recordings sent to her parents after she decided to "stay and fight" with the S.L.A.

Now, almost 25, she is engaged to marry a slightly paunchy police officer and ready to start training dogs and counseling rape victims.

Leaders of the campaign for clemency have pointed repeatedly to the mass murder-suicide of more than 900 Peoples Temple cultists in the jungles of Guyana last fall.

Medical course sought

The Emergency Medical Technicians Association (EMTA) of the Top O' Texas wants to train its members in Advanced Life Support, a course to further their education in treating injuries.

Dr. Adolf Orina, an area physician, told the group's monthly meeting Friday that such a course would require a lot of work and time.

"You must convince the state that you are capable of basic life-support," he said. "But you like challenges or you wouldn't be here."

"I greatly support the EMT," said Dr. Orina.

He said that the public should be grateful for the EMTs' generosity in taking the time to train to save lives.

COTTON MEETING:

A crop production meeting will be held Tuesday, February 6th at 7:00 p.m. in the Courthouse Annex Meeting Room, Pampa, Texas.

Dr. Frank Petr, Area Extension Agronomist, will lead the discussion on sunflower and soybean production practices. Also farmers having specific questions about cotton production practices will have the opportunity to get them answered. Several farmers, including the Gray County Crops Program Building Committee, have asked that information on production practices for these crops be presented at a meeting.

VEE VACCINATION REQUIREMENT CHANGES
Effective January 2, 1979, the Texas Animal Health Commission has repealed the rule requiring evidence of vaccination for VEE of horses originating in Texas. The requirements for horses entering the state of Texas from other states remains the same since all entering the state must have proof of vaccination including the date and identification of the animal.

CATTLE MAY NEED SUPPLEMENTAL VITAMIN A
Drought conditions and a lack of green forages often lead to vitamin A deficiency in cattle. Thus, producers may want to supply a supplemental source of vitamin A for cows grazing dry, bleached pastures with little or no green hay or silage this winter.

Vitamin A promotes growth, stimulates appetite, aids in reproduction and lactation, keeps the mucous membranes of respiratory and other tracts in healthy condition, and makes for normal vision.

Deficiencies of vitamin A during pregnancy may cause cows to abort or give birth to dead or weak calves. Extreme deficiencies may also impair the ability of cows to conceive. Bulls receiving insufficient vitamin A show a decline in sexual activity and semen quality.

Carotene, which supplies vitamin A, is contained in all green parts of growing plants. Good pastures always provide liberal and rich supplies of carotene and thus have a high vitamin A value. However, vitamin value decreases after the plant's bloom stage and much of the carotene is destroyed in hay by oxidation during field curing. The degree of greenness, in a roughage is usually a good index of its carotene content, but hay over one year old (regardless of color) is usually not an adequate source of carotene or vitamin A.

Growing and finishing steers and heifers require 1000 international units of vitamin A per pound of dry diet; pregnant heifers and cows, 1270; and lactating cows and breeding bulls, 1770.

The intramuscular injection of emulsified vitamin A at the rate of one million units apparently provides sufficient vitamin A to prevent deficiency signs for two to four months in growing or breeding beef cattle.

1978 YEARBOOK OF AGRICULTURE

The article last week about the 1978 Yearbook of Agriculture had the last paragraph deleted which told how to obtain copies. We had a few calls and copies can be obtained by members of Congress as they have limited copies available for free distribution to constituents. Also, they may be purchased for $7.00 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 and the stock number is 001-000-03809-5.

SELECTING PLANTS FOR INDOOR LANDSCAPING

In selecting plants for easy maintenance indoor, select only those that can endure the kind of light they will receive in your home.

Most indoor foliage plants have similar requirements. They want ample natural light from a north or east window location plus a light, well-drained soil. Foliage plants with brightly colored or variegated red, purple, cream and yellow leaves (like croton) generally require more light than those with green foliage (like the rubber plant). Artificial light may supplement daylight or be the sole source of light.

Listed are the following plants that are fairly easy to grow in the home plus their light requirements:

Rubber plant — widely known and used as a houseplant; needs good light, but can exist in a poorly lighted situation for short periods.

Fiddle leaf fig — most sweet-tempered of all houseplants; love it, hate it, ignore it, still it thrives; needs good light.

Dieffenbachia — many varieties and types do well indoors; prefers indirect light of high intensity.

Dieffenbachia dumbcane — requires moderate light without direct sunlight.

Chinese evergreen — does best in moderate to good light; easy to grow.

Ferns — well adapted for growth at low light intensities; strong lighting can cause damage.

Screw pine — needs indirect light of high intensity, but keep it out of direct sunlight.

Philodendron — will survive where lighting is dim, but does better in higher light intensities.

Sansevieria (Snake plant) — is tough; can be grown in adverse areas in the home where lighting is poor and humidity low; requires little water and cannot stand overwatering.

Pothos — commonly called "house ivy"; likes indirect light of high intensity, responds to artificial light.

Nepenthes — thrives on indirect light of either high or low intensity.

Jade plant — nearly indestructible; tolerates poor growing conditions, but does like plenty of light.

Peperomia — many interesting varieties; medium light; do not overwater; usually easy to grow; decorative.

Area study done

A Long-Range Program about Gray County has been developed and published according to Raymond Maddox of Pampa, chairman of the County Program Building Committee.

The document, developed by committee members, contains a detailed description and analysis of the county situation, points out problems and program areas of concern and provides long-range objectives for the continued growth and development of economic and social conditions of importance to county citizens. Maddox said.

Maddox urges all interested individuals and groups to become familiar with the Long-Range Program and to support the Gray County Program Building Committee in helping achieve the long-range objectives. The document will serve as the blueprint for the program building committee in developing annual educational programs through the local office of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The County Program Building Committee is composed of fourteen county citizens who work closely with the County Extension Agents to develop and carry out educational programs needed in the county, according to Elaine Houston and Joe Vanzandt, County Extension Agents. Besides the chairman, committee officers include: Robert Sailor, Vice-Chairman-Pampa and Janice Carter, Secretary-Pampa. Houston and Vanzandt said the contributions of county citizens through the program building committee "are vital to an effective Extension program. All members of the county committee are listed in the Long-Range County Program."

In developing the Long-Range Program, seven program area committees of the County Program Building Committee helped complete the study of the County situation. These committees are: Family Living, Aging, Livestock, Crops, 4-H and Youth, Horticulture, and Community Resource Development. The committees gathered and analyzed background information and noted changes and trends in order to identify major problems and opportunities and to establish long-range objectives. Additionally, the Program Building Committee appointed special study groups that collected information which related to all aspects of county program needs.

If you want to know more about your county and the Extension program, you will find the Long-Range Program informative and a valuable reference. Contact your county Extension agents about obtaining a copy by either calling 669-7429, or coming by the Extension Office in Pampa.

Seminar set for Thursday

The Texas Plant Food Institute will sponsor a free "Financing Seminar" for retailers in this area on Thursday, February 8th, as part of its regular district meeting.

The program begins at 1:45 P.M. at the Hilton Inn in Amarillo and is designed to interest and benefit anyone who is involved in distribution, application and sales of fertilizer, chemicals and micronutrients.

The "Financing Seminar" will feature presentations and discussion with representatives from the Small Business Administration (SBA), the Farmers Home Administration (FHA), the Commercial Investment Trust Corporation (CIT), and the American National Bank.

The panel discussion will cover areas such as future prospects and problems in securing credit, inventory and equipment financing, as well as working capital financing and some new ideas explored.

The FHA representative will present a new program of federal insured bank loans similar to the SBA type that are now available to agri-business. Time has been scheduled for a question and answer session.

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Milk prices at the farm have been at all-time highs for two months now, substantially cutting the cost of the dairy price-support programs. The Agriculture Department is seeking comments on what to do next.

The law requires it to adjust the support level every April 1 and Oct. 1 to assure adequate supplies to consumers.

The department said this week that butter production in December was up 16 percent from November but still 14 percent less than a year earlier. Its unsold butter stocks of butter increased in 1978, however.

Total cheese output was up 7 percent from a year ago. Nonfat dry milk production was off 30 percent in the same period, but government stocks are still high enough that 58.3 million pounds were sold last year for animal feed.

The new support level each time must be between 80 percent and 90 percent of parity, with 100 percent of parity theoretically giving dairy farmers the same buying power their predecessors had in the 1910-14 economy.

When market prices fall below the support level for a product, the Commodity Credit Corp. starts buying surplus stocks until the prices return to that level or higher.

The department said its net purchases last year fell almost 55 percent, to the equivalent of 2.7 billion pounds of milk. It was 6.1 billion pounds in 1977.

That worked out to the government buying 2.3 percent of what farmers marketed, compared to 5.1 percent in 1977.

The government sold or donated more than 75 percent of the butter and almost all the cheese, with the rest going into inventory. Unsold stocks Dec. 31 amounted to 164.3 million pounds of butter, 8.4 million pounds of cheese and 524.8 million pounds of nonfat dry milk.

But the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization warned Monday that world milk production this year probably will rise much faster than demand, increasing the surpluses, pulling down prices and leading to high "disposal" costs in some nations.

Bumper grain crops are encouraging expansion of dairy herds, but high prices for cattle to meet hamburger demand are offsetting that somewhat.

The basic support for manufacturing milk, which goes into butter, cheese and other products, is $9.64 per 100 pounds on a national average. That was 80 percent of parity when it was announced last September.

The department estimates that the April 1-Sept. 30 rate will be between $10.01 and $10.20 — an increase of 3.8 percent to 5.8 percent.

In December and January, average whole milk prices were $11.80 a hundredweight, or 75 percent of parity, with manufacturing-grade milk at $10.90, the Crop Reporting Board says. Product prices have risen more than $1.75 per hundredweight in a year.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service wants to know, in light of all that, whether to recommend the minimum $10.01 a hundredweight to the administration officials who will decide or to recommend a price that would exceed 80 percent parity.

Written comments, it said, should be sent by Feb. 26 to the Director. Procurement and Sales Division, USDA-ASCS, Room 5741-S, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

—WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service says it has about $20 million set aside to cover on its books any "mistakes" made on the late-1977 program of subsidy payments to cane and beet-sugar processors.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., this week released an Oct. 25 report by the Agriculture Department inspector general that said ASCS improperly paid at least $29 million to sugar processors in late 1977, may have broken the law in making some of the payments and probably violated congressional directives.

Congressional auditors are following up on that preliminary report, along with USDA's general counsel's office.

ASCS Administrator Ray Fitzgerald said Thursday he thinks the auditors are wrong, but all officials are still awaiting legal opinions on operation of the $179.2 million program. Some acknowledged errors have been resolved, he said.

Fitzgerald said a staff had to be assembled quickly from those familiar with the sugar program that was killed in 1974. "We knew we'd make some mistakes," he said.

Astro-Graph

February 4, 1979
This coming year some changes may be foisted upon you that you might at first resent. Be of good cheer. You will turn them into something extremely beneficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Enjoy yourself where you are and who you are with today, rather than wishing you were elsewhere or with others. A bad attitude could ruin everyone's day. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in 1979 by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph-Letter. Mail $1 for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Think for yourself today instead of letting others force their ideas on you. You know better than they do what's good for you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone you're very fond of but who is a poor risk may catch you off-guard today and borrow something which you'd rather not lend.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You do not make good decisions under pressure today. Stall for time if someone leans on you for an answer that you feel requires further study.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your first thoughts are not necessarily your best ones today, even though you may think they're rather clever. Don't give them more credit than they deserve.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) This is one of those days when friends could do things to test your patience to the limit. Keep your temper. Don't react in a manner you may later regret.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There will be a price to pay today if you are too insistent upon having everything done your way. Such behavior will disenchant allies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Weigh your words with considerable care today, or you could blurt out something that will be very difficult for you to retract.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your luck today is not likely to extend to speculative-type situations, although you may feel it does and gamble on something foolishly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Extreme tolerance will be required today in your one-to-one relationships. Hold your temper even though others may deserve your wrath.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your attention span could leave a little to be desired today. You could mess up your work. Be especially attentive if you're using hazardous tools.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Pleasurable pursuits that cost you a pretty penny will be the ones you'll derive the least fun from today. Seek pastimes that carry no charge.

Weekly oil report

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — A petroleum economist says coal consumption has been affected very little by curtailments on the use of natural gas.

"The reason is not economics, since on a British thermal unit basis coal now costs significantly less than gas for most utility and industrial plants," says John H. Lichtblau.

"The differential can be expected to rise in the future. What keeps coal consumption from increasing in these markets are environmental regulations and, to a lesser extent, lack of transportation. If we want coal to displace more gas in the industrial markets, we will have to deal with these problems."

Lichtblau, executive director of Petroleum Industry Research Foundation Inc., an independent New York agency, was commenting on the current natural gas surplus which he said had prompted a Carter administration policy reversal to permit industrial gas sales.

"Those of us who have been around the energy industry some time remember the fervent insistence of government energy officials as well as some industry economists the last seven to eight years that the use of gas as an industrial or utility boiler fuel was downright sinful because it was a waste of a depleting resource," he said.

"Gas, we were lectured, should be reserved for priority consumers and should never be used where other fuels could be substituted."

He added that such "wasteful" markets in 1973 accounted for more than 60 percent of total domestic gas sales.

"Between then and 1977 the reduction in sales to these markets was equivalent to 50 percent of total gas sales to the U.S. residential-commercial sector," he said.

"Obviously, this was an over-correction for the perceived shortage which contributed substantially to the glut that began about a year ago."

Lichtblau said the current gas surplus is likely to be relatively short-lived and it can be expected in the not too distant future that attempts will be made to revive the now suspended policy of reducing gas sales to industrial and electric utility customers.

In days of declining supply, he said, it made sense to protect high priority gas users such as residences.

"But the logic of a policy which permits the expansion of gas to new homes while phasing it out from existing industrial and power plants is a good bit less clear," he said.

"In the period 1973-77 nearly 40 percent of all new homes were fitted with gas heat," he said. "All of these homes had ready access to alternate heating fuels. In the colder regions of the country a major alternate is heating oil. In the Sun Belt region it is electricity."

One potential problem with new homes, Lichtblau said, is that once a heating system is installed such structures, for practical purposes, become permanently dependent on the selected fuel source.

Lichtblau said that in the electric utility sector the decline in power generation from gas from 1973 to 1977 was accompanied by significant increases in power generation from coal and oil, with coal rising slightly more rapidly than oil.

"Hence, to some extent the reduction in gas availability appears to have caused a shift to coal, but, at the same time, a significant part of the reduction was made up by the increased use of oil," he said.

In the industrial market, he said, the phasing out of gas over the same period seems to have caused no shift to coal, since coal, in both market share and volume, declined.

"While the policy of reducing gas sales to the industrial markets may well have been justifiable because of the perceived gas shortage, it did not reduce the level of oil imports, nor was it meant to," Lichtblau said.

Air is cleaner, not yet safe

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight years have passed since Congress passed the 1970 Clean Air Act — and America's air is getting cleaner.

But America's air still is not completely safe to breathe.

The Environmental Protection Agency estimates industries and governments have spent $67.4 billion on air pollution controls since 1970.

EPA administrator Douglas Costle says "sulfur dioxide is down 17 percent, carbon dioxide is down 20 percent, particulates are down 8 percent and urban smog levels are at least stable."

But EPA statistics also show that of the 3,215 counties and parishes in the United States and territories:

—583 counties have levels of smog higher than permitted by law, and these encompass virtually every major urban area in the nation.

—413 counties exceed allowable levels for particulate matter such as dust, smoke and soot.

—165 counties have excessive carbon monoxide.

—102 counties exceed allowable levels for sulfur dioxide.

—Seven counties have levels of nitrogen dioxide higher than permitted by law.

The 1970 law required everybody to meet the standards by 1975. Marvin Durning, EPA's chief of enforcement, notes that "we missed the deadline in some respects."

"But those who scoffed at the program 'were wrong.' We've done a lot more than the scoffers and skeptics thought we could do."

And much work remains to be done.

EPA fights its air pollution war against two enemies — mobile sources such as autos, and stationary sources such as power plants, factories, smelters and refineries.

Autos present the most difficult problem because they contribute to urban smog, the single worst pollution problem in the United States.

One recent study found that only 31 percent of the exhaust emission controls on autos are working properly. Many were deliberately sabotaged to render them ineffective, the EPA study noted.

Durning believes one answer to this dilemma is to require all motorists to have their cars inspected annually to insure the pollution controls are working properly — an idea already in effect in Tucson and Phoenix, Ariz., and under consideration in other areas.

EPA recently relaxed its smog standard from 8 parts per million to 12 ppm, a decision based on new medical studies showing smog is not as harmful to health as once thought. But this relaxation is unlikely to herald any vast improvement.

Of all cities over 200,000 population, only Honolulu, Hawaii, and Spokane, Wash., meet the 8 ppm standard. EPA officials estimated another 10 to 20 cities might meet the revised standard.

Smog problems are aggravated by continued growth in the number of autos. In Denver, Colo., and Toledo, Ohio, smog has increased since 1970, but in the country as a whole, it has stabilized "despite a 30 percent increase in vehicle miles traveled," Costle said.

On the stationary front, EPA estimates there are 200,000 minor air pollution sources and 23,000 major sources. A major source emits 100 tons or more of regulated pollutants in a year. State agencies regulate the minor sources. EPA concentrates on the major ones.

Durning says 88 percent of the major sources are in compliance with the law, 4 percent are installing pollution controls and 8 percent have failed to set a timetable or plan to halt emissions.

Reading not for feminists

By TOM DeCOLA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Hard-line feminists won't find much support in the pages of two women's magazines now being published in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Texas Woman, a brand-new publication based in Dallas, and New Woman, a transplanted national magazine that started in Florida, have little in common except for their women's lib disclaimers.

Dianne Pingree, founder of Texas Woman, was asked if hers is a feminist publication. "No, it's not," she said. "We want to emphasize the positive aspects of women who are achieving on their own."

The same question was put to associate editor Elinor Hubbard of New Woman: "Absolutely not," she said. "It's not a women's lib magazine by any means."

The resemblance ends there. New Woman moved to Fort Worth from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., after officers decided Texas was an overall more attractive state.

With an estimated readership of 4 million, New Woman takes a national slant. "Mostly our articles are aimed at the woman on her way up," Ms. Hubbard said. "We want an assertiveness of the fact that you can do anything you want to do."

What Ms. Pingree wanted to do was start her own magazine. Maternally related to the Kiest family that began the Dallas Times Herald, she searched for financial backing in Texas, but came up empty.

Help came from the north — Toronto, Canada, to be exact.

Ms. Pingree saw an ad in a trade publication that mentioned Harlequin Enterprises, Ltd., and began pestering that established publisher for help.

After an initial cold shoulder, her plans for a magazine aimed at the mystique of the "Texas woman" finally took hold at Harlequin.

"Dianne's plan ... her concept seemed to make great sense," said Harlequin corporate development head Anthony Lloyd.

Ms. Pingree's plan was to appeal to the nature of female residents of the Lone Star State. "Texas women ... have a certain panache that sets them apart from all others," she said. "Until now, there has been no magazine especially for Texas women ... and the Texas woman deserves her own magazine. And I'm going to give it to her."

Texas Woman's first issue went on the stands in January. Newsstands in the state's largest cities received 14,000 copies, and 11,000 subscription orders were filled.

Additionally, Texas International Airlines has subscribed and offers the magazine on all its flights.

Ms. Pingree is the final word on editorial content and overall look of the magazine.

Her prototype issue featured a model on the cover that the boss felt was "too cutesy." Ms. Pingree selected the model for the first issue to illustrate class and a hint of sensuality.

"We're not a home and garden type of magazine," Ms. Pingree said. "We are strictly business."

Content of the magazine varies, with some features not yet decided. The first issue has features ranging from a profile of the "Texas Woman" to a legal column focused on women's issues. The profile includes com-

Big beer firms fight it out

NEW YORK (AP) — In marketing circles, the figurative fistfight between Anheuser-Busch, the country's largest brewer, and Miller Brewing, the challenger, is considered one of the most direct slugfests ever.

Perhaps only out of a sense of what is proper, the leading citizens in any industry seldom fight it out in the town square. They settle for more subtle tactics, which leave the impression they are above it all.

But maybe the beer stakes are too high, because the two giants are swinging away at each other, and there's no question that each hopes to land a haymaker. That beer market is a lucrative one.

The United States has about 80 million beer drinkers, who consume more than 160 million barrels of brew in a year.

By 1985, a Wall Street research house believes, the number of beer drinkers will reach 89.4 million, their consumption 198.5 million barrels, or a per barrel average of 2.22, compared with 2.08 in 1977.

Any way you look at it, the market's a good one, and both Anheuser-Busch and Miller want a bigger share of it, even if they have to swing some heavy blows for it. Anheuser-Busch is the biggest. Miller is second.

One of the first encounters came when Miller, a subsidiary of Philip Morris, which also owns a cigarette company, began heavy promotions of its Lowenbrau beer, which many thought was imported.

They had good reason to so believe. The label looked the same, and the name Munich was prominent. But the product was made in the United States by Miller, which purchased rights from the German company.

Anheuser-Busch complained to the Federal Trade Commission that domestic Lowenbrau was not even the same beer as that which used to be sold under the imported Lowenbrau label.

Miller retaliated by announcing a new beverage, Gussie beer.

Pampa falls in overtime

By JOE BLOBAUM
Pampa News Sports Editor

Coach Gary Abercrombie and the Pampa Harvesters went through a real-life instance of deja vu at Harvester Field House Friday night as the Tascosa Rebels took a 68-64 overtime win and a commanding position in the fortunes of District 4-AAAA basketball.

The last time the teams met, Pampa held a 38-35 lead at halftime before succumbing to a frigid second half. The Harvesters lost that contest 70-53 when they missed all 15 of their fourth-quarter field goal attempts.

It looked like a different story Friday night, at least for 2 1/2 quarters. Pampa came roaring out of the dressing room with a 30-23 lead in hand and outscored the Rebels 14-5 in the early going of the third quarter to grab a 44-28 cushion with 4:32 to go in the stanza.

But, just like the first time around, Pampa faltered in the stretch under a pressing Tascosa defense and the rejuvenated Rebels pecked away at the Harvester lead until Jay Leverett's free throws with 35 seconds remaining sent the game into overtime.

Steve Duke and Ronnie Faggins answered Tascosa baskets in the opening minutes of the overtime, but a 10-footer by Nolan Earle and a pair of free throws from Tracy Garvey put the Rebels up 66-62 with 22 seconds remaining.

Duke's bucket at 13 seconds brought the Harvesters to within two, but Pampa was forced to foul and Garvey connected on two more charity tosses with 10 seconds left to put the game on ice.

The Rebels, who missed 11 of 15 free throws in the first three quarters and hit just 14 of 27 for the game, canned eight of nine in the final quarter and extra period to help themselves to their 21st win of the season and sixth victory in as many district games.

The Rebels sank just 10 of 36 attempts from the field in the first half before their ball-hawking defense in the fourth quarter began to result in breakaway layups and short jumpers.

Harvester Doug Skaggs tallied 22 points to lead all scorers, but had three shots — including two free throws — rim the basket in the final moments of regulation play.

But it was turnovers that doomed the Harvesters, who fell to 13-13 overall and 1-1 in the second half of district play. Pampa's only chances for the second-half crown rest with wins over Palo Duro and Amarillo High next week and losses to the Sandies and Caprock by Tascosa.

The junior-varsity game was another thriller, although the Shockers won by the deceptively large margin of 33 points, 79-50. Pampa led by just five points (60-55) with 1:55 to play, but baskets by Vic Wallace and Sam Edwards helped the Shockers pull it out of the fire. Dwayne Avery tallied 17 points to lead four Pampa players who scored in double figures. Wallace added 16, Darrell Johnson 13 and Kyle Bradford 12. Scott Milton had 15 for Tascosa's JV.

Alexander, Raymond collect titles at Amarillo swim meet

AMARILLO — Cindy Raymond and Chris Alexander put Pampa High swimming coach Mike Eckhart in a rosy mood Saturday morning, when they captured individual championships and led a good showing by a small contingent of Harvester swimmers at the Amarillo Invitational.

Overall, I was totally pleased," Eckhart said Saturday afternoon. "Only took eight and they all went back for the finals today."

Miss Raymond set a new school, meet and Maverick Boys Club pool record with a 5:38.5 clocking in the girls 500-yard freestyle, while Alexander won an incredibly close boys 100-yard breast stroke.

"I think she has a real good shot at doing well in the district and regional meets and going on to state," said Eckhart, adding that Raymond's time won the regional meet in 1978.

As for Alexander, his 1:06.43 performance was exactly .01 better than that of the second-place finisher and .02 better than the third-place effort.

Chris pulled it out and I was very enthused," Eckhart said.

"It gives us something to go into districts (Feb. 13 in Amarillo) with."

"Chris and Cindy did a super good job," Eckhart added. "I think they deserve the recognition for all the hard work they've done."

Raymond also took fourth place in the girls 100 breast stroke with a time of 1:19.0, while Alexander was fifth in the boys 100 freestyle in 53.6.

Mark Lehnick, Richard Steger and Lisa Raymond all placed in two individual events for the Pampankers.

Lehnick was third in the 100 butterfly in 57.8 and seventh in the 200 freestyle with a 2:01.3 clocking. Steger was ninth in the boys 200 individual medley (2:20.6) and 11th in the 100 backstroke (1:06.4), while Miss Raymond took fourth in the girls 200 individual medley (2:27.1) and eighth in the 100 butterfly (1:08.1).

The boys 200 medley relay team of Steger, Alexander, Lehnick and Don Braswell placed seventh in 1:54.1, while the girls 200 medley crew of Deirdre Madison, Cindy Quattlebaum and the Raymond sisters was 11th in 2:21.7.

Lon Hinkle leads by five

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Lon Hinkle, playing in quiet solitude at Cypress Point while the show-business celebrities cavorted at Pebble Beach, cut out a 3-under-par 69 and took a whopping 5-stroke lead Saturday in the $300,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

"I guess he's got it," said Mark Hayes, whose 6-under-par 66 — the best round of the tournament — lifted him into second place going into Sunday's final round.

"If we have good weather tomorrow, he's got it. He'll hang on. With five shots and good weather, you should win every time."

The hard-hitting Hinkle, who scored his first tour triumph and collected more than $138,000 last year, compiled a 207-total, nine under par for one round on each of three Monterey Peninsula courses — Pebble Beach, Cypress Point and Spyglass Hill.

The field of 168 pros was cut to the low 60 for the final round at Pebble Beach. Hale Irwin, playing with a damaged wrist, failed to make it. It was the first time he'd missed the cut in 87 tournaments, going back to the 1975 Tucson Open.

Hayes, who had a strong finish in the Bob Hope Classic, compiled his 6-under-par effort at Pebble Beach, where the gallery congregated and the national television cameras focused on the celebrity amateurs and their antics.

Hayes, however, played the back nine first and thus missed most the congestion. He had a 54-hole total of 212, four under par.

J.C. Snead, who shot a 67 at Cypress Point, was next at 213.

No one else appeared to have any chance of denying Hinkle his second tour victory. Hayes was the only man within seven strokes.

Ritger wins at San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Hall of Famer Dick Ritger, who averaged 227 and recorded 29 strikes in four games, swept to his 20th tour victory Saturday in the $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament here.

Ritger, 40, of River Falls, Wis., edged Neil Burton of St. Louis 211-202 to claim the $15,000 first prize money.

Houston tripped by 20-4 Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Vernon Smith poured in 24 points as 16th-ranked Texas A&M defeated the Houston Cougars 66-58 in Southwest Conference basketball action Saturday afternoon.

With the victory, Texas A&M, 20-4 for the season and 9-2 in conference play, kept at least a share of the SWC lead with Texas.

Beside Smith, A&M's Rudy Woods, Rynn Wright, and Tyrone Ladson all scored in double figures. The Cougars also had four players in double figures, led by George Walker's 16 points.

Houston, now 3-8 in the SWC and 11-12 overall, jumped out to an early 12-4 lead and controlled the game throughout most of the first half.

A&M seemed to be in trouble when Woods, a 6-11 freshman sensation, committed his third personal foul at 5:27 remaining in the first half. Ken Colli's subsequent free throw gave the Cougars a 27-22 lead.

But the Aggies rallied to out-score the Cougars 15-4 in the remaining minutes to take a 37-31 halftime lead.

The Aggies maintained their fever pitch in the opening moments of the second half to take a 49-35 lead.

The Cougars closed the lead to five points several times but inconsistent shooting kept them from overtaking the Aggies.

With 4:47 remaining, the Aggies, leading 64-58, went into a four-corner stall and wasted two minutes off the clock before Vernon Smith was charged with a player control foul.

The ensuing Cougar shot fell short and the Aggies, behind the dribbling performance of David Britton, stalled while the clock ticked down to 41 seconds left.

Houston again could not hit and Ladson's two free throws for A&M ended the contest.

Daugherty hits 32 in win

Miami's Randy Daugherty scored 16 of his game-high 32 points in the fourth quarter Friday night as the Warriors held off a late Follett charge for a 65-60 District 2-B basketball victory.

Miami led 37-24 at halftime, but suffered through a cold third quarter as the Panthers closed the gap to 43-38. Daugherty then scored all but six of Miami's 22 points in the final quarter to lead the Warriors to their 18th win of the season.

The victory gave Miami a 1-0 mark in the second half of district play. The Warriors are 3-2 overall against district competition, while Follett dropped to 8-10, 3-3 in all district play and 0-2 in the second half.

The Pantherettes, meanwhile, upped their season mark to 25-1 and captured their sixth league victory without a loss as they overcame a tough Warriorette defense for a 28-26 triumph.

Carrie Skeen was the heroine for Follett, as she connected on an 18-foot jumper with one second remaining for the win.

But the Miami girls gave the Pantherettes all they wanted, as the Warriorettes came roaring back from a 24-15 third-quarter deficit to tie the game with nine seconds left on Brenda McCullough's short jumper.

Steve Thiessen and John Laubhan tallied 18 points apiece to pace Follett's boys, while Ron Francis added nine and Randy Stone eight to the Miami cause. Susan Corcoran, Miss Skeen and Marty Tyson had six apiece for the Pantherettes in their win, but Miami's Debbie Bass took game honors with 10.

At Allison, Kenneth Keys won a scoring dual with Briscoe's Mike Meadows as the Antelopes claimed a 61-52 decision. Keys connected for 27 points to nose out Meadows (who had 25) for game honors.

Myron Jolly accounted for 23 of Wheeler's points to pace the Mustangs to a 74-66 victory at Samnorwood. Lowry Schaub had 20 in a losing effort.

Wheeler's and Allison's girls teams claimed wins by forfeit over Samnorwood and Briscoe. Phillips won a pair of games in high style at Sunray, as the girls trounced the Bobkittens 44-18 and the Blackhawk boys coasted to a 62-29 win.

Debra Rankin tallied 24 points in the girls contest to outscore Sunray by herself, while Joe Lemley led the Phillips boys with 15. Danny Barton had eight for the Bobcats, while three Sunray girls had four points.

Perryton, rated the fifth best team in the state's latest AA poll, took a 55-38 District 2-AA win at Canadian. Jeff Conner scored 12 points to lead a balanced Ranger attack, while Terrell Hardin hit 10 for the Wildcats.

Canadian's girls gained a split in the two-game set with a 39-25 triumph. Alicia Hobby had 11 points to take game honors and lead the Wildkittens, while Julie Hargrove had 10 for Perryton.

Panhandle's Pantherettes slashed Shamrock 20-1 in the first quarter on their way to a 62-13 walk over the Irish girls. Linda McReynolds, Kim Kuehler and Rhonda Holland all had 10 points for Panhandle, while Shamrock's Susie Copeland tallied four.

The Shamrock boys pulled a mild upset by downing Panhandle 51-45 on the Panthers' home floor, thanks in part to Carl Bennett's 18 points. H. L. Owens had 11 for Panhandle.

Mobeetie claimed a pair of wins at home against Quail as the girls won 46-26 and the boys took a 43-27 decision. Denise Hillburn hit 23 in the girls' victory and Dean Hathaway had 14 in the Hornets' triumph.

Carew traded

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Minnesota Twins' first baseman Rod Carew, who said last week he "couldn't be bought" by the New York Yankees, was traded to the California Angels Saturday for four players and cash.

Carew, 33 and a seven-time winner of the American League batting title, had agreed to terms with the Angels last month on a reported $4 million contract, but Twins' owner Calvin Griffith balked at California's first offer.

Saturday, however, Griffith settled for essentially the same players the Angels offered previously. Minnesota obtained outfielder Ken Landreaux, pitchers Paul Hartzell and Brad Havens and third baseman-catcher Dave Engle, plus an undetermined amount of cash.

Griffith earlier told the Angels that any trade would have to include third baseman Carney Lansford, who led all rookies last year with a .294 batting average. But California refused to part with Lansford and Griffith agreed to the deal with the Angels, knowing that Carew would become a free agent after the 1979 season and could leave the Twins without compensation involved.

Carew's attitude toward going to the Yankees spurred the trade.

Packed crowd to watch All-Star tilt

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — They'll be clear up to the edge of the air-inflated roof Sunday at the Pontiac Silverdome.

Binoculars are essential at that altitude — and perhaps a handkerchief for possible nose-bleed.

A record crowd of 30,000 is expected to assemble under the dome for the National Basketball Association's 29th annual All-Star game, and they'll have a hometown hero after all, thanks to league Commissioner Larry O'Brien.

With Philadelphia forward Doug Collins sidelined by a foot injury, O'Brien on Friday named Detroit center Bob Lanier to the East squad.

The absence of any Pistons in balloting by fans for the starting five and voting by NBA coaches for reserves threatened to make it three years in a row the All-Star host city wasn't represented in the game.

Milwaukee was snubbed two years ago, and Atlanta last season.

Lanier's appearance should help Houston's Moses Malone, who before Friday was the East's only center against Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Los Angeles and Chicago's Artis Gilmore for the west.

Lanier won't be the only local hero. Pontiac's own Campy Russell of the University of Michigan and the Cleveland Cavaliers is a reserve for the East team of Washington Coach Dick Motta.

Dallas in contention for franchise

DETROIT (AP) — The National Basketball Association's Board of Governors voted Saturday to begin considering applications for expansion franchises, hoping to add two teams to the league by the 1980-81 season.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien listed seven cities "that according to population and other criteria appear to have the greatest potential for successful operation in the NBA: Cincinnati, Dallas, Miami, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Toronto."

O'Brien said formal applications already have been received from a group in Minneapolis-St. Paul, headed by George and Gordon Gunn, owners of the National Hockey League's Minnesota North Stars, and a Dallas group headed by Donald Carter.

He emphasized, however, the fact that these groups already had filed applications did not give them an advantage, and also said the seven-city list was not exclusive. "Applications will obviously be considered from any area where there is interest in obtaining an NBA club," O'Brien said.

O'Brien said franchise prices had not been determined and he set no deadline for applications. "The only limitations are that we will add no more than two teams, and that we will do it no later than 1980-81. This is in keeping with the steady growth of our league."

He emphasized, however, the fact that these groups already had filed applications did not give them an advantage, and also said the seven-city list was not exclusive. "Applications will obviously be considered from any area where there is interest in obtaining an NBA club," O'Brien said.

O'Brien said franchise prices had not been determined and he set no deadline for applications. "The only limitations are that we will add no more than two teams, and that we will do it no later than 1980-81. This is in keeping with the steady growth of our league."

If two teams are added, it would be the first expansion of the NBA since four teams were added from the old American Basketball Association in 1976. It would bring the number of teams in the league to 24.

Of the seven cities named by O'Brien, all but Cincinnati and Toronto had ABA franchises at some time of the league's nine-year existence, franchises that did not survive the demise of that league. "But that to me is not significant," said O'Brien. "We're looking ahead, not backward."

The Board of Governors — meeting in conjunction with Sunday's NBA All-Star Game at Pontiac, Mich. — also voted to go to an unbalanced schedule next season.

This move, spearheaded by the Boston and New York franchises, passed by a 20-2 vote.

Each team will play the other teams in its conference six times, and teams in the opposite conference twice. Currently, the league uses a schedule in which each team plays four games against 19 other teams and three games against the two others, without regard to division or conference.

FASHION TRIM IT - WITH PIPING
Piping trim give a fashion accent to homesewn garments, especially sportswear. It is easy to make and apply — or buy it ready-made. Piping is regular (just an empty "tube" of fabric) or corded (cording covered with fabric). Piping adds a professional touch to homesewn sportswear — mainly on the outside of pant legs or short legs and on jacket sleeves. Traditionally it appears as a fashion trim for garment collars, lapels, necklines, pockets and belts. In choosing or making piping, keep it colorful and contrasting.

Readymade piping comes "by the yard" or prepackaged in pre-measured lengths. It is economical and a convenient time-saver — available in a variety of colors and fabrics.
To make your own piping, cut bias strips of colorful or contrasting fabric. For strip length, measure the actual length of areas that will be trimmed with the piping. For strip width on regular piping, allow for the actual piping width desired plus twice the seam allowance. A usual seam allowance is 1/4" wide. To determine strip width for corded piping, fold some fabric over the cord to be used — pin the fabric tightly against the cord. Then figure more width for seam allowances as explained in the paragraph above. The total fabric width used for this is the width needed.
For regular piping, press strip in half — lengthwise — right-side-out and mark trim width up and down toward the center, leaving seam allowance along each side. For corded piping, fold right-side-out around corded and stitch close to cord using a zipper foot.
To insert piping into a garment, stitch it to a single garment section before stitching the seam to join two garment sections. Remember, always apply piping in a seam. Stitch piping to the right side of the garment section along the garment seamline — with trim edge facing the inside of the garment. Make sure the two seam allowances of the piping are together. For corded piping, use a zipper foot to insert. After piping is inserted — whether regular or corded, then join the two garment sections as usual stitching them with right sides together. Sew over the piping stitching line. Trim and clip seam allowances as needed. Turn garment right-side-out and press.

Strips of piping, especially readymade piping, may need splicing somewhere in a seam. If so, choose an inconspicuous place — and avoid corners. For corded piping, remove about one inch of cord filler at the end of a strip. Take this "empty" end and curve it down from the seamline into the seam allowance. Do the same thing with the adjoining strip of piping — except lap this second empty strip end over the first strip end — beginning in the seam allowance. Next curve this second strip end toward the seamline so that the edge of the cord filler remaining in the piping on each strip will meet — or line up — at the seamline. This splicing technique makes two strips almost seem to join each other, although one actually overlaps the other in the seam allowance.

Persis Khambatta: bald beauty

By Dick Kleiner

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Talk about the sacrifices a woman makes for her art — poor Persis Khambatta has shaved her head for the filming of "Star Trek."
But she says it has turned out to be an advantage. In fact, she likes her bald head look so much she is contemplating staying that way even after the filming is over.
And she does look lovely — but she has a head start, because she is an exceptionally beautiful woman to start with. And, being clever and artistic, she has turned her bald head into an asset. She wears exotic head-dresses off the set which, coupled with her gleaming black eyes, give her a look you can't resist.

"You see, Delta ladies are so powerful lovers that, once someone makes love to one of them, no other woman will suffice."
"For the sake of the morale of the crew, you see, Ilia says no sex while on the ship."

Indian Zoroastrian sect. She was raised in Bombay and, at 13, became a model, and quickly India's top model. That was all rather daring, because — even today — girls just do not do that sort of thing in India.

one of the leading actresses in the Indian film industry. She gradually acquired an international reputation via the beauty contest route and, at 17, decided to broaden her horizons.

She went to England, where she knew no one. She wanted to model and-or act, but without contacts it was tough. She remembers one stretch of a few weeks when all she had to eat was a bag of potatoes.

Then she got a part in a movie with Sidney Poitier. She asked him to be honest with her, and tell her if he thought she had any talent or was just wasting her time and energy.

"He told me," she says, "that I had more natural ability than anyone he had ever known — but that I had no technical skill."
So she set about to acquire those skills and eventually did so and began doing English TV and English movies.

PERSIS KHAMBATTÁ, before and after she shaved her head for the filming of "Star Trek."

Pampa

Seen around town — Coyle and Dell Ford out dining with friends. How nice it is to see Coyle hale and hearty once more.

Bill and Jean Adams on one of their monthly trips to Pampa. Apart from the Coronado Shopping Center, Bill is now in charge of one in Las Cruces, N.M. as well as Roswell.

Bill and Billie Cash from McLean, who really enjoy themselves in Pampa. Pampa enjoys them too.

Janie Bowers is becoming a world traveler. This spring she and a group of friends will be winging to Hawaii. Included will be the Otis Naces, the Leon Daughertys, the Fred Vanderburgs, Joyce Cambern, Bill Pershall, and Cliff Scott, Margaret Thompson and Grace Gething will also go but their husbands will stay behind and keep the home fires burning. Also going are the Ellis Lockes from Miami, the Odell Giteons from Skellytown, the W.D. Mitchells from Wheeler, Clementine Ponce from Santa Fe, N.M. and the Glen Bells from Shamrock. Janie puts a lot of time and thought into the travels she takes and those who go with her have a great time.

Andre's back in town. Andre will be remembered by many as the manager of the Pampa Club, and on Feb. 1 he assumed duties as the manager of Andre's Crystal Gardens Restaurant in the Coronado Hotel.

Phil and Nancy Craig, formerly of Pampa, live in Warrenton, N.C. where Phil is rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, which is the church where Horace Greely was married. Greely was the publisher of the Denver Post in the last century. He originated the saying "Go west young man" in one of his editorials.

Ray Barnard collects

American flags. He has one for all 50 states as well as the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Washington D.C. and the Republic of Texas, which he believes to be the only one in captivity. He acquired his collection in many ways over a number of years, including writing to the state governors. Being a ham radio operator helped — he got flags from Arizona, Montana and New York that way. Ray's son, who at that time was president of the company that publishes "Harpers", was an additional source. All but two of the flags are used, and Ray knows which government building each one flew over. The two exceptions are the flag of Vermont, which is only 4" x 6", and the Lone Star flag which he made. He would still like to have a full size flag of Vermont. Can anyone oblige?

Appropos my comment that John Coleman reported our town's weather on "Good Morning America", Ma, M., Lockhart reports that she became irritated when Coleman repeatedly neglected to mention Pampa yet forecast the weather for other area towns. So she sent him some literature, and voila — Margaret received a note of thanks from Coleman who, incidentally, was raised in Alpine.

At wits end

by erna bombeck

I read a spine-chilling statistic the other day.

Educational theorist John Holt predicts that within the next ten years, more than 500,000 U.S. families will be schooling their children at home.

Have you any idea what that means at our house? It means our kids will be close to 35 by the time they graduate. My husband holds three college degrees. I hold one. We have never been able to tell our children anything.

If I said, "Children, today is Tuesday . . . ergo, tomorrow is Wednesday," they would cock their heads to one side, squint at me suspiciously and say, "Are you sure?"

I know it seems like a wonderful idea having children sitting around a study table at night singing "Inchworm," but trust me. I'm a pioneer parent who goes back to the days when parents alone shouldered the responsibility for preparing a child for his place in the world. . . the days before they offered driver's education in the schools.

Now, there's a bit of home education guaranteed to stunt your growth. Maybe home education would have worked when the kids were younger. I had the "fear factor" going for me then. I would reach out to pick a piece of lint off their jacket, put their collar outside a sweater, or pat them on the head, and they would flinch. They were never really too sure. As years went by, they came to know me too well and they stopped flinching.

I stopped by my son's room the other night, poked my head in the door and said, "How's it going?"

He said, "The Celtics are ahead by two."

"C'mon, fella," I said. "That will never do. I'll help you with your homework. Got a pencil?"

He spread out on the desk his "School Organizer," a notebook that looked like a General Services warehouse.

"Could we talk about math?" I asked. He turned on his calculator with the printout and asked, "What do you want to know?"

"Want me to read through your essay?" He flipped the cover off his electric typewriter and said, "It's done."

"I can give you Spanish words." He pointed to his audit cassette tapes and said, "No need."

"Hey, how about some history questions?" He said, "I borrowed a computer from the library. It's all there. I just push a button."

I closed the door softly. Why did I have the feeling that it was only a matter of time before I would be replaced by a box, a beep and two dry cell batteries.

Graham-Allen engagement

Mr. and Mrs. Lance L. Graham of Burkeville announce the engagement of their daughter Judy Marie to Jerry Allen, Jr. The prospective bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Allen, Sr. of Cambridge, Mass., formerly of Pampa. Judy is a 1975 graduate from S&S Consolidated High School in Sadler and a 1978 graduate from Baylor University in Waco. Her fiance graduated from Pampa High School in 1975 and is attending Baylor University. The couple plan a March 3 wedding in Emmanuel Baptist Church, Waco.

'Players' loses again

Paramount Pictures is still having a hard time getting everyone to come out and play on their long-delayed film, "Players," starring Ali McGraw and Dean-Paul Martin.

Director Anthony Harvey was the latest to go, dropping out of the scene with a fractured knee. But like a real trouper, and a man with an eye on his investment, producer Robert Evans stepped in.

Evans managed to keep both thousands of extras and the temperamental likes of Ilie Nastase, John McEnroe and Pancho Gonzalez in line as he directed a scene at Caesar's Place for the tennis tale.

The film was first postponed last September when Martin came down with hepatitis.

Melting some hearts

Government opposition leader Margaret Thatcher was delivered something of a low blow by the British people recently. She was voted the third most "hated and feared" figure in Madame Tussaud's Wax Works. She replaced Dracula.

The annual Tussaud's poll of the likes and dislikes of visitors to its exhibitions again exhibited how fleeting fame is.

Former "favorite entertainers," Frank Sinatra and Charlie Chaplin, are now nowhere to be seen.

Farrah Fawcett-Majors is no longer considered the world's fifth greatest exemplar of beauty. She's been bumped by Raquel Welch. Leading the facial pack were such established beauty queens as Sophia Loren and Marilyn Monroe, with Liz Taylor and Liza Minnelli tied for first.

Muhammad Ali danced to the top of the sports section, replacing a local soccer star. And Bjorn Borg barely beat Ilie Nastase for fourth place, proving nastiness is not such a handicap in popularity contests.

Winston Churchill remains tied for the "hero or heroine of all time." Last year he shared first place with Elvis Presley. This year it's Superman.

Explanations beyond headlines

By Denise Murcko Wilms
American Library Assn.

Just as the adult book market reflects the times and tastes of the public, so does the children's market. You can find a children's book on just about any topic, including current news-making events.

Indeed, any librarian can tell you that a good children's book is a safe bet for a clear, concise layman's explanation of just about any subject. The reason? The high standards expected from writers of nonfiction for young people. Simplicity, without sacrificing accuracy, is vital, and presentations must be interesting but not condescending. It takes a capable writer to blend these requirements.

Isaac Asimov is a master of the art. Well-known for his astute interpretations of scientific subjects for adults, Asimov is also a prolific writer of science books for children. His recent "How Did We Find Out About Black Holes?" provides an easily understandable explanation of those suspect objects — suspect because, as Asimov cautions, definite existence of these totally collapsed stars has yet to be proven.

However, present knowledge strongly suggests their existence, and Asimov offers a tidy summation of the research breakthroughs in the field. Explanations of star life and death stages, elementary atomic structure and key concepts such as Chandrasekhar's limit, escape velocity and tidal effects are all given in simple, concrete terms.

Under Asimov's capable narrative, these mind-boggling objects, so much the stuff of a sci-fi thriller, assume more realistic proportions, though still leaving plenty of room for wonder.

Environmental topics are popular ones for children's books, reflecting both increased demand and broadening classroom studies in the area. It's no surprise to find a book on climatology among this season's crop.

Malcolm Weiss' "What's Happening to Our Climate?" probes a question he admits no one can really answer — yet. Records show, for example, that from about 1850 to 1940 weather in the northern half of the world warmed up; and since 1940 temperatures have slowly but steadily dropped. Whether this trend will continue and how it fits into past weather patterns is a complex matter.

Readers are shown how variabilities in warmth, wind and water interact to create weather changes. Weiss also explores some of the theories and counter-theories as to why past and present trends have developed. The significance of all this? For one, world food production has benefited by the past 50 years of "unusually warm" weather but may be jeopardized if planning doesn't take into account inevitable climate shifts.

The report is interesting; Weiss' writing is well-paced and his detail well-selected. The book's one drawback is appearance: a nondescript cover and plain-looking insides don't grab young readers as much as they should.

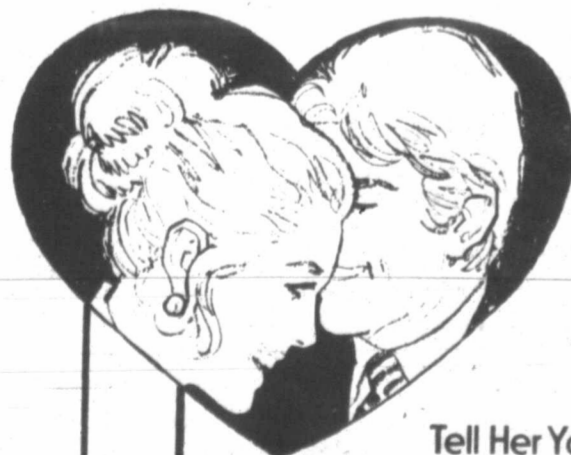

Joseph Brown's "Oil Spills" is about another topic of urgent interest, thanks to well-buried and tanker leaks.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 50-year-old divorcee and, if I say so myself, I am attractive and desirable. I recently met a gentleman, also divorced and equally attractive and desirable. He is 60. Sam has two married children living in another state.

He gave me a big rush and I know he wants to marry me, but he says he cannot formally propose marriage until after his children meet me and agree that we are right for each other.

Abby, I have grown children, too, but the man I marry doesn't have to pass my children's inspection. Naturally, I would hope that my children liked the man, but if they didn't, it wouldn't matter to me.

This business of having to get approval from Sam's children irritates me. In fact, it turns me off. Do you think it means anything?

LIL IN BROOKLYN

DEAR LIL: YES. It means that, after Sam's children, you come first.

DEAR READERS: There are thousands of people in hospitals, institutions and homes because the transplant organs they need are not available. These include kidneys, corneas, heart, pituitary glands and other organs and tissues that must be removed from accident victims quickly before oxygen starvation renders them useless.

What most people do not know is that most states now use the driver's license to identify organ donors. Under the Anatomical Gift Act, people who are killed in traffic accidents may avoid dying in vain.

The organ-donor sticker form (or decal) authorizes doctors to remove needed organs immediately after the victim's death, and to use those organs in transplant operations.

Readers may acquire the details of organ-donation laws by writing to the motor vehicle departments of their own states. They may write also to the National Kidney Foundation, 116 East 27th St., New York, N.Y. 10016.

"Gift of Life" laws are relatively new. Their application through the driver's license is increasing in all states. The universal adoption of the Anatomical Gift Act (with its strict safeguards to verify that the donor is in fact dead before organs may be removed) would offer new hope to the country's afflicted.

I have personally willed all my usable organs, and feel that nothing I could leave after my death will be of greater value.

LOVE,
ABBY

DEAR ABBY: I recently ran into a girl with whom I had gone through school. I had heard she had married recently, so I said, "Oh, by the way, congratulations on getting married!"

She reacted in a peculiar way, and instead of thanking me for my congratulations, she said, "Why congratulate me as if I had accomplished the impossible? Didn't you think I was capable of getting a guy to marry me?"

I was shocked, since this was the farthest thing from my mind.

When I told my mother what had happened, she said I had committed the cardinal sin—that one never congratulates a bride. The bride should be given best wishes and the groom congratulations.

Is this true?

NEW TO ME

DEAR NEWS: It's true. But if that's the greatest "sin" you ever commit, you may qualify for sainthood.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 62-year-old male. I am in reasonably good health but I have a problem with my head roaring and my ears ringing. If I wake up at night, it seems worse. My problem started about 12 months ago and became worse in the last six months.

I have been to several doctors and they have not been able to answer my problem. I would appreciate any information that you might offer.

DEAR READER: I'm not surprised that you haven't been able to get much help for this condition. Until very recently there were limited things that doctors had to offer for this all too common problem.

Actually, more than 30 million adult Americans have a similar disorder. It frequently accompanies hearing loss but you can have it even if your hearing is normal.

To help you understand this problem and also to give you basic information on what can be done about it, I am sending you The Health Letter number 12-10, Help For Tinnitus—Noise Or Ringing In The Ears. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I am sending you explains, tinnitus is a symptom. It can be caused by many different factors. It can simply be from wax in the ear. In that case, your doctor would have no trouble treating it. Sometimes it is associated with defects in the middle ear where your tiny ear bones are. If it is a temporary condition and as the problem is corrected, the ringing in the ears also disappears.

If you injure your ear with noise such as being exposed to loud blasts, you may have ringing in the ears until they recover. This is a good warning. Also, various medicines can cause it. You'd be surprised that in a few people a small amount of aspirin is able to produce this problem. After this comes circulatory problems and even various mechanical problems.

Whenever the underlying condition can be corrected, that is the preferred treatment. However, in a large number of people the real cause for the tinnitus can't be found or if it is, it is something that can't be cured. These people can obtain relief from some of the new management techniques that have been developed.

If you happen to have associated hearing loss, a hearing aid may solve your problem. You could have hearing loss and not know it, particularly if it is in the high-frequency ranges that don't affect your hearing normal conversation.

For those people who have noise and ringing of the ears and have normal hearing, there is a Tinnitus Masker (TM). This looks just like a hearing aid and is worn like one. It generates a band of noise between 2000 and 7000 Hz. This small band of noise affects the mechanism that receives sounds in some way and masks the objectionable tinnitus.

Let's work for all the seniors

The United Nations has approved unanimously a resolution calling for a world assembly on aging.

The U.S. delegation to the world body introduced the resolution at the unanimous urging of both houses of Congress.

And the U.N. General Assembly has agreed to develop by 1982 a program for a world year on aging as well as for the assembly on aging.

Congratulations are in order all around—especially to Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who introduced the resolution in the House, and to World unity in the struggle of the aged for the aged may become possible as a result of the U.N. resolutions.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, who sponsored it in the Senate.

Pepper spoke for both houses of Congress when he commented: "The action taken by the United Nations underscores our belief that all countries have much to gain from this international forum.

"Certain countries are more advanced than others. Their efforts to deal with the problems of income maintenance, health care, housing and social service needs of their elderly populations deserve serious consideration."

"We can all benefit," continued Pepper, "from an exchange among policymakers from many lands. We must develop new methods, new approaches, new techniques for improving the lot of the elderly throughout the world."

Pepper noted that the interests of the elderly cross national boundaries.

"The world assembly on aging can enhance our understanding of issues involving seniors of every land," he concluded. "With this resolution the elderly of the world are now judged to be a truly international society with special cares."

But there is danger that the United Nations will piously talk the subject of aging to death. The delegates may pass only general resolutions that require no specific, substantive action.

We Americans introduced the resolution in the United Nations. We are thus duty bound to contribute to the success of the aging assembly and year.

U.S. seniors can change the forum on aging from a potential talkfest to a series of specific acts to benefit seniors everywhere.

Every elderly activist should assume a leadership role. If we vigorously promote and guide the U.N. activities, the lives of the elderly can be improved here and all over the world.

And the elderly of other industrial nations will respond to our activism with some of their own.

The challenge is primarily to our national senior organizations. The American Association of Retired Persons, Retired Teachers Association and National Council of Senior Citizens should take on the project. So should independent state senior organizations.

The national organizations should spread word of the U.N. resolutions to their local branches. Their members should study services for senior citizens abroad and compare them with those here at home.

We elderly Americans stand to gain a great deal from the U.N. deliberations. Other advanced nations have more effective health and housing programs than we do. On the other hand, the United States provides some services, such as our nutrition plan, that other nations have not yet developed.

We will help the aged in backward nations. We will compare notes with the aged of other advanced nations. All will benefit from our efforts.

Parents key to safer play

NEW YORK (NEA)—Choosing the right toy at the right time is important to the individual development of each child. Equally important to the full physical, mental, social and emotional growth of that child is parental participation in his or her play and guidance in the proper use and maintenance of their toys.

Toy manufacturers today take great care to assure that the toys they produce are safe for the children intended to use them. It is their social responsibility, and they also consider it good, basic, business practice. Toys are subjected to extensive testing during design and development stages and after manufacture. Voluntary safety standards, developed by the Toy Manufacturers of America and published by the National Bureau of Standards as PS 72-76, are adhered to by virtually every American toy maker. In addition, the Consumer Product Safety Commission establishes and enforces regulations to remove unsafe toys from the marketplace. And it is up to the consumer to see that these practices are followed.

But careful manufacture and selection of toys is not enough. Toys must be properly used and maintained as well. Parents should be their own safety experts on toys. They must continue to be cautious and watchful, to check children during play and toys after purchase.

Children need to be taught safe play habits. To do this parents should set good examples. Look for and carefully read instructions. Share them with your child. Make sure he or she understands how to play properly with the toys and knows any danger involved in their use. Special attention given to directions will frequently result not only in safer play but in longer toy life. Parents should supervise their children's play, but the extent and nature of this supervision will vary.

To become responsible adults, children must develop a sense of responsibility for their own possessions. Among the first things a child considers his very own are his toys. Sharing in the selection of these toys provides a sense of possession. Showing how to use and care for them properly encourages him to assume responsibility for them.

Spot check toys regularly for minor damage and encourage children to let you know when toys need repair. A child does not always see significance in a small dent, crack or tear in a toy if it's still in one piece.

Russians launch their own Oscar

Two small space units, called "Radio 1" and "Radio 2," have been launched by Russian ham operators and are orbiting the world alongside OSCAR 7.

The United States OSCAR series, of which "7" is actually the eighth, is part of the ham radio operators' contribution to the advancement of radio technology and education.

It was financed by individual contributions, a whole lot of nickels and dimes, and cost only $45,000.

The non-commercial, non-government, organization responsible for the effort is AMSAT (Radio Amateur Satellite Corporation), which is made up of individuals in the United States, Canada, the Netherlands, Italy, Mexico, Australia, West Germany, and the United Kingdom.

The first launch took place at Vandenberg Air Force Base in 1961. OSCAR got its name from "Orbiting Satellite Carrying Amateur Radio."

According to Tass news releases, Russia's two satellites are "for radio amateur communications carried out by students of higher educational institutions, scientific technical experimentation and educational work."

Tass adds: "The satellites were designed and built by employees of the Laboratory of Space Technology and members of Student Construction Bureaus."

Like their AMSAT forebearers, Radio 1 and 2 may be used internationally to permit amateurs to conduct two-way communications through space repeaters.

It is virtually an orbiting laboratory for young students in schools throughout the free world.

SOUND COUNTRY

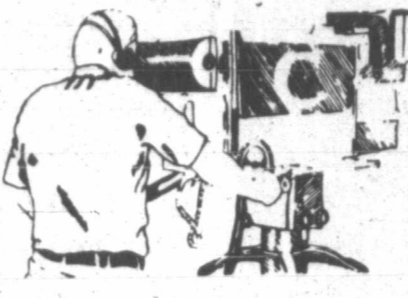

Dottsy was at the offices of RCA in Nashville recently listening to material for her up-and-coming recording session with producer Roy Dea when Waylon Jennings dropped by. Waylon heard them discussing the material and told them he had a "woman's song" that would be a good one for Dottsy to do. Waylon sat down with a guitar in Roy's office and sang it for them.

They both liked it so much that Waylon brought a demo tape back to RCA. Waylon and Dottsy cut "Tryin' To Satisfy You" that same day. Waylon offered to "pick" on the session, and can be heard playing lead guitar and singing with Dottsy on the record.

It is quite a coincidence that Dottsy's very first single, "Storms Never Last," was written by Waylon's wife, Jessi Colter. This new record is a departure from Dottsy's previous records in that it has a more driving feel. It is also shorter—only 2 minutes and 13 seconds long. "Tryin' To Satisfy You" promises to be Dottsy's strongest effort to date.

Actor gets another show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A 1979 calendar of gag captions has one for October that reads: "I'll bet you five bucks McLean Stevenson gets a new series." Anyone who bets against Stevenson getting a new show is bucking the odds. In the last 15 years, he's had six series. His seventh, "Hello, Larry," just made its debut on NBC. He plays the host of a radio telephone call-in show who's raising two daughters alone after his divorce. It is, he admits, the flip side of "One Day at a Time."

When I did a special for NBC. It's very hard sometimes for people who are basically comedians, who do only comedy, to come out in a tuxedo and be themselves." It had been his intent to head up his own variety series when he quit "MASH," his last successful series. Series one through three were "That Was the Week That Was," "The Doris Day Show," and "The Tim Conway Hour."

But variety has fallen on hard times, and Stevenson's pilot for a series fell on its ear. NBC quickly rushed him into a situation comedy, called "The McLean Stevenson Show," which was all situation and no comedy. Next, in the fall, came "In the Beginning" for CBS, in which he played a priest and Priscilla Lopez was a street-wise nun. "The Catholics may have been interested, but the Protestants were bored," he said.

On the day the show folded, Stevenson went home, but at midnight producer Norman Lear asked him to come back to the studio. He showed him a rehearsal tape of "Hello, Larry" with another actor in the lead role. "I read the script and said I didn't want to. There were too many changes that would have to be made to accommodate me. Norman offered to make the changes. Then the business people came in and they think you want more money."

Church used for drama

"Seven's not too bad," Stevenson says. "What's the record? I think Tim Conway has it. I know he has the record for 13-week jobs. Tim is so funny it's hard for him to be accepted as himself when he gets out front."

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Allen attended Mass there. So did George M. Cohan, Don Ameche, Danny Thomas. Ah, St. Malachy's, the fine old Actor's Church. Now it's a house of acting as well as worship.

But it never had its own theater until now. "We're just trying to make St. Malachy's more effective in the community," says Gregory Abels, 37, another actor who is also the church deacon and artistic director of its new 100-seat theater.

Sad to say, the church is in an area that has seen brighter days. Sure, the neighbors include two legitimate theaters, the Eugene O'Neill and the Ambassador; three aged hotels, an Italian restaurant; a Japanese cafe and the venerable Tin Pan Alley bar and grill.

But there's also a bath house featuring homosexual porn flicks, and the Ramrod Theater, which offers "live male shows." Around the corner lurks another porn show showing "Debbie Does Dallas."

It wasn't always that way. sighs the Rev. George Moore, 52, a hearty, gregarious man who since 1977 has been pastor at the church, whose bells play "There's No Business Like Show Business" once a night.

It was a busy time, when Madison Square Garden was nearby, when as many as 18,000 persons a month — show-biz types, tourists, area residents — worshipped at this well-known place of prayer.

Soviet stamps feature Olympics

It's anchors awfully for the Soviet Union in its latest stamp set.

Collectors who specialize in ships on stamps and Olympic Games will want to add these items to their collections. Yachting was first introduced into modern Olympic competition at the second Olympiad in 1900. After a brief hiatus, the sport has been a part of every Olympic endeavor since 1908.

Yachting events of the XXII Olympiad are featured on the fifth in a series of semi-postals honoring the 1980 Olympic Games scheduled for Moscow and Tallinn. The set consists of five different denominations and a souvenir sheet. The additional values on the stamps will help defray the expenses of the Olympic Games.

The 10 plus 5 kopecks (blue, aqua and black) illustrates the 470 Class. The 16 plus 6 kopecks (blue, brown and black) portrays the Finn Class. The 20 plus 10 kopecks (red, blue, grey and brown) features the Flying Dutchman Class. The 50 plus 25 kopecks souvenir sheet (blue, red, violet and black) has a view of a ship in the Tornado class with others in the background. Each stamp bears the inscription "XXII Olympic Games" at the top.

Choir to play in Pampa

The Gregg Smith Singers, a world renowned choral group, comes to Pampa Thursday for what could be an impressively varied program of vocal music ranging from the most demanding classical works to popular fare.

The singers' association with Columbia led to the recording of all the choral music of contemporary American composer Charles Ives and the Glory of Gabrieli series recorded at St. Marks Cathedral in Venice.

50 recordings, and numerous honors, including the 1978 Ditson Award given to conductors with proven service to contemporary American music.

media including orchestra, band, and opera.

This marks the 16th straight year of national touring for the Singers, who have been known since the 1950s as champions of contemporary music. In 1959, the group was invited by composer Igor Stravinsky to perform and record his "Mass" for Columbia Records under the maestro's own direction.

For the two recordings of works by Ives, a composer of often dissonant and difficult music, the group received two Grammy awards, as well as a third Grammy for their recording of "The Glory of Gabrieli."

The group is also widely known for its innovative methods of staging concerts, especially the work of Ives. The group is highly theatrical, given to experimentation with new forms of performance. In a concept called "Multidimensional Sound Presentation," singers place themselves around the auditorium, literally surrounding the audience with sound.

The group recently completed an ambitious contribution to the bicentennial—recording over 20 albums of historical and contemporary American vocal music, produced for Vox records as "America Sings."

A settlement was finally reached, meeting his demands, and they said it was too much. I said there was no point talking — CBS was offering me "The Bad News Bears."

Approach galleries with care

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Many competent photographers feel their work rates exhibition in a gallery. I turned to Chuck Kurtak, director of Nikon House Gallery in New York City's Rockefeller Center, to discuss the subject as this week's guest columnist.

may not have any reflection on the quality of your work; it just may not fit into a gallery's planned program.

To show or not to show? That is the question that faces many photographers around the country whose skill with a camera creates images that they compare with those they see at exhibitions. However, a question that should be asked first is: WHY do you want a show?

Most gallery directors look for uniqueness in subject matter as well as excellent images. During the last year, for instance, portfolios submitted included a collection of light-houses, circus life, portraits of women in bed (dressed; not nudes), sea farming, toys and masks. So with a wide variety of subjects to choose from, when putting a portfolio together, try to be unique.

Gallery directors are turned off by cliché material, subjects that have been overdone and local scenes that have worn out their welcome.

If it is to make money, be sure to approach galleries that sell pictures. Some galleries, such as Nikon House in New York, are only for exhibition purposes and can't sell pictures. Therefore, if you plan to sell prints, be prepared for the percentage that galleries get and price your pictures accordingly.

Assuming you are lucky and receive a "Yes" on a show, most galleries offer ample time to prepare for an exhibition. Determine at once what the gallery will provide and what you are responsible for.

Mounting your show is extremely important. Find out the gallery's preference in mounts and frames. What sizes should prints be? Do they like glass? Again speaking for Nikon House, we prefer flush mounts in box frames, or on foam core, with no glass since it creates reflection and lighting problems.

Many photographers want an exhibition to increase their photographic reputation and are not primarily motivated by selling their prints. This is a good approach for photographers who can invite their private and commercial clients to such an event and thereby enhance their prestige and possibly earn more through increased business.

In a particular year, there probably would be only one travel show, one photojournalism show, one nude photography show, a show of photomicrography, an underwater show, a nature show, etc. So a "No" received on your show

Television called 'just a business'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Television is not an art form. It's just a business."

The words of John Wilder, an embittered man. A writer and producer who thought being good was good enough, and was proven wrong. Wilder is the man who made

When NBC asked him to produce a 26-hour "Centennial," Wilder told the network: "I'll do this as long as you understand that I only mean to please one man — James Michener. If you can't live with that, get someone else." Michener, the closest thing to an idol Wilder has, was pleased.

John McMahon, vice president of programming at NBC, said, "We wanted to help the show, give it the best exposure we could."

Wilder knew the project would take time. He wanted NBC to hold the series until midseason. "But NBC said they needed it for the fall, they felt they had to have something of substance for the fall season."

Then the thing started to fall apart. Somebody in NBC programming noticed that another network was airing the popular movie "The Sting" on the Sunday night "Centennial" was to make its first return. The show was moved to Saturday at the last minute, without much promotion notice of the change.

So, it was agreed that "Centennial" would be presented in blocks; it would air two or "Centennial" fans were confused. The ratings dropped. The next episode was also aired on a Saturday. But the next appeared on Sunday. By then, you needed a map to find "Centennial."

It was easier just to not look for it.

Then NBC told Wilder it wanted a rush job on the last five hours. Instead of airing the final episode Sunday, Feb. 11, the network wanted it for this weekend, a back-to-back, Saturday-Sunday airing.

John McMahon, vice president of programming at NBC, said, "We wanted to help the show, give it the best exposure we could."

As to the rush job ordered on the last five hours, McMahon says, "If we'd kept it the way it was, he'd have been up against 'Gone with the Wind' and the 'Elvis' movie (ABC)."

But McMahon does admit NBC goofed when it played musical time-slots with "Centennial" in the early going. The botching of "Centennial" pains Wilder. He's sure, but it stings NBC where it really hurts, in the ratings.

'Simple' will actually complex

EDITOR'S NOTE — Leaving a will, even a detailed one, doesn't solve much if you are also leaving a fortune on the order of $50 billion. Straightening out the estate of Domingos Correa has consumed more than a century and isn't nearly over. But the complexities have discouraged very few from trying to get in on the act.

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer
PELOTAS, Brazil (AP) — Comendador Domingos Faustino Correa died 105 years ago, but an army of heirs and would-be heirs is still fighting over his will. The legal complexities make the Howard Hughes legacy look simple.

And much less opulent, too, for Correa's estate is estimated at a staggering $50 billion. The Texas reclusive left a conservatively estimated $168 million.

At stake in the Brazilian legacy are vast cattle and sheep ranches, huge rice and soybean plantations, grain warehouses, herds of livestock, choice urban real estate and bank accounts scattered throughout southern Latin America. One ranch alone, in central Uruguay, is larger by a third than the city of Los Angeles.

The Comendador — it means roughly Earl — accumulated all of this in the early 1800s. He was a personal friend and confidant of Brazilian Emperor Pedro II.

He died at the age of 82, a childless widower. In a complex will, he tried to divide his wealth among his actual relatives, his servants and friends, business associates, political cronies, godchildren and assorted hangers-on.

It has led to an incredible legal tangle after decades of trying to determine exactly what he owned, and legal experts say it might take another century to determine who is to get whatever it is.

For example, the Comendador provided that his slaves and their children — at least one of which he fathered — could use much of his property for free, for four generations. He also bequeathed specific amounts of money and minutely described possessions to family and various friends and acquaintances.

The rest of the estate was to go to the sons and daughters of his eight sisters and brothers — except for one, Bernardo, who was a Catholic priest and therefore celibate.

Because of early marriages, experts estimate that the Comendador's family now is in its tenth generation, although most of the persons affected by the will are fifth and sixth generation limbs of his family tree. There is one fourth generation descendant of Correa's slaves, now age 70.

So far, apparently, the slaves have fared very well in the last hundred years compared to other claimants.

They at least got free use of the Comendador's land and reaped the profits therefrom — cattle and grain.

So many others — and the number is not clear — have been waiting for a general settlement. There have been 14 executors, appointed by local Brazilian judges over the decades, who were either unwilling or unable to cope with the will and the holdings.

The 15th, a schoolteacher and descendant of the Comendador, is Dalva Rodrigues Merenda. She claims she can do it.

"I've read 13,460 pages of legal documents, word by word and letter by letter," she told a reporter in Pelotas, a southern Brazilian city near where the Comendador lived.

"During the week, after school, I spend entire nights going over the records, sometimes without sleeping. On weekends I go to a place in the country — I won't tell you where — and I go through the documents some more. I don't go to the movies on Saturday nights. I don't go to the beach in the summer. I don't even take a break for Brazil's carnival holiday. But I guarantee you: I'm going to get to the bottom of this."

Despite Miss Merenda's impressive determination, the problems she faces are enormous.

In the first place, some of the original deeds and titles simply have disappeared or, according to local gossip, were stolen. Second, the Comendador's original properties were measured in archaic units dating from the Roman Empire — "leagues," "armlengths," "sections."

There are quarrels about what these mean in the metric terms now used in Latin America.

Third, Correa's holdings extend from Brazil to neighboring Uruguay and perhaps to Chile, Argentina and Bolivia.

Fourth, much of what might be Comendador property has been occupied for generations by other people — tenants, government agencies, organizations of the Catholic Church, and just plain squatters. It will not be easy getting them to leave.

Tattoos get respect as art form

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — It was a moving picture show of a most unusual kind.

The medium in this exhibit wasn't film but skin. And the pictures were tattoos, covering arms, backs, shoulders, stomachs and legs, moving with their owners, who displayed them proudly as a peacock might show his plumage.

Variegated bodies covered with dragons, eagles, flowers and intricate designs caused more than one double-take in the lobby of the hotel hosting the North American Tattoo Club's Fourth World Tattoo Convention.

Some 275 illustrated men and women from throughout the country, as well as Belgium, France, New Zealand, England, Japan and Canada, were here to display their talents and themselves, while swapping ideas with one another.

The tattoo artists, as they prefer to be called, were also here in an effort to dispel the negative image they say has been hung unfairly on tattooing. They say they view the body as an empty canvas to be covered by their works, while society tends to classify the skin paintings with graffiti on bathroom walls.

"Society has attached a stigma to tattoos, saying they are the domain of drunken sailors and loose women," said Robert Hardt of Seattle, Wash., who wears a rendition of J.R.R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" across his shoulders, arms and back the way another might wear a cape.

"But we are all trapped in a prison of flesh, so don't think me wrong if I draw on the walls," the 32-year-old said with a grin.

He was always fascinated by tattoos, and got his first when he was 19 years old.

"It's a form of self-expression — it makes you unique," Hardt said as he tried to explain the whys of tattooing to a blank canvas who found it hard to understand. "It makes your fantasies live."

The president of the 650-member club, Dave Yurkew of Minneapolis, Minn., says tattooing is gaining more respect as an art form throughout the world.

"You still get a negative reaction from people who haven't really seen tattooing," he said. "And when they do see them, there seems to be less shock than there used to be."

"A question I used to hear all the time — 'Why in the hell did you do that?' — is getting asked less and less," he said.

Yurkew said he refrains from counseling potential customers when they come into his shop.

"The thing I hate most is when a customer asks which design they should get," he said. "I don't want to put any pressure on them to get a tattoo. It has to be their decision."

"But many people tell me they've been thinking about getting one a long time," he continued. "Sometimes they've been thinking about it as long as two or three years."

He said there are a lot of reasons why people get tattooed, and many of them are the wrong reasons.

Hearing set

An independent study group established by Health, Education, and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. will hold a field hearing on Tuesday in Albuquerque, N.M., on whether social security coverage should be mandated for federal employees and others not now covered.

Joseph Bartlett of Boston, Chairman of the Universal Social Security Coverage Study Group, said the hearing will be held at the Hotel Plaza, 125 Second Street, N.W. from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Residents, representatives of interest groups, and public officials who want to testify should write the Universal Social Security Coverage Study Group, Department of HEW, Washington, D.C. 20201, or phone (202) 472-3590.

About 8 million individuals in the work force do not participate in the Social Security Program.

Agnes Moorehead, actress, was born in 1906.

DECORATING TRENDS...

Selecting a sofa is often the most important decision you'll make in decorating your home. Cost is one reason, since the sofa is one of the largest pieces you buy.

Even more significant, the sofa sets the style of your living room. Because of its size, it is also a vital key to your color scheme. It was once thought patterns on a large piece would diminish the size of a small room. The reverse can be true if background colors are neutral or pastel. The focal point being a beautiful print on the sofa and accent colors used from the print on chairs and other items in the room. Don't be afraid to use pattern, the lack of it can sometimes produce a rather dull uninteresting room.

Give a lot of thought to the sofa and other pieces before you buy, you won't replace them very often. And before you buy be sure to see our selection of fine sofas and chairs, along with our other fine furniture.
