Israel postpones debate on peace treaty accord

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet has postponed for 24 hours its final debate on the peace treaty with Egypt, officially because Prime Minister Menachem Begin is ill, but also because of Cabinet discord over details of the accord, it was learned today.

The cabinet agreed to Begin's request that it meet Monday instead of Sunday, because the 65-year-old premier had a cold and wanted to rest in preparation of a hectic two weeks ahead, his spokesman said.

The delay was not seen likely to hold up a parliamentary debate scheduled for Wednesday to ratify the treaty worked out by President Carter.

The postponement also came in handy for Begin to try and head off an impending crisis with his senior coalition partner, the National Religious Party, which is demanding that the Cabinet adopt tough measures to limit autonomy in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

U.S. hopes leaders will support treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high-level U.S. delegation is heading for the Mideast in an attempt to persuade Arab leaders to change their minds and support a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, said earlier Thursday that an Egyptian-Israeli treaty probably won't be signed "for the next week or so." The treaty, which has been approved by the Egyptian cabinet, still must be voted on by the Israeli Knesset, or parliament.

The four-man U.S. delegation will meet with leaders of two moderate Arab states, Saudi Arabia and Jordan, sources confirmed Thursday night. The sources, who asked not to be identified, indicated the team would leave today.

In anticipation of the long-sought treaty, other talks were to begin in Washington today on how much aid the United States will give the two countries. Members of Congress have said President Carter reported to them it might be in the range of $4 billion to $5 billion in additional American aid to the two countries.

The delegation consists of National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher, Gen. David C. Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and President Carter's son Chip, the sources said.

Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman arrived in Washington Thursday night and was to meet with Defense Secretary Harold Brown to discuss Israel's needs.

The administration hopes the men can convince Saudi Arabia and Jordan not to participate in a proposed Arab economic boycott of Egypt as a result of its decision to sign a treaty with Israel.

Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hasan Ali is to arrive here Saturday for talks with Brown. Then, he will get together with Weizman to iron out final details of the military annex to the treaty.

Leaders oppose primary plan

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff

Leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties in Pampa are adamantly opposed to state legislation that would establish a separate presidential primary election in March 1980.

The legislation, introduced by Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, would also move regular primary elections from May and June to July and August. The bill was approved and sent to the Senate floor last week by the Senate State Affairs Committee. Similar proposals are in a House subcommittee.

Supporters of the bill, S.B. 602, believe it will give Texas greater influence in selecting the next president. Opponents say it will cost taxpayers millions of dollars to hold a separate primary, and that it will decrease voter turnout.

Many of those opposing Ogg's bill favor having a presidential primary, but only if it is combined with the regular general primary. The State Legislative Budget Board has estimated it will cost an additional $4,700,000 statewide for a presidential primary held on a different day, and $190,000 for a primary held in conjunction with the general primary.

Pampa's state legislators, Sen. Bob Price and Rep. Foster Whaley, both oppose separate presidential primaries. An aide to Whaley said the representative would like the presidential and general primaries combined.

The Gray County Democratic Party is working actively against a separate primary. The Tri-County Democratic Women's Club is conducting a letter-writing campaign to state senators, asking them to vote against S.B. 602.

Ruth Osborne, county Democratic chairman, said she opposes the separate presidential primary because it will waste money and allow voters to cross party lines, voting for Republicans in one primary and Democrats in the next. In a combined primary, people could only vote for presidential and local candidates from one party.

Osborne added that she doesn't really support a presidential primary for Texas. "I don't think it will do that much for us," she said.

Osborne is an advocate of moving primary elections to late summer. That way, she said, candidates would not have to spend as much time and money campaigning for general elections.

Several Democrats are charging that a March presidential primary is intended to help John Connally, a Republican presidential candidate, as well as Republicans in general. However, Gray County Republican Chairman Bobbie Nisbet also frowns upon S.B. 602.

"I'm inalterably opposed to any change in the presidential primary date," Nisbet said. "I personally don't see any benefit at all to it."

"The taxpayers are paying for these elections and it's just costing so much money the way it is now. I don't see why we should add another one."

"You know darn well there would be a run-off election if they had a primary in March, with all the candidates they have these days. So we'd end up with three elections."

Nisbet said she "very definitely" supports a combined presidential and general primary. She was a member of the State Republican Executive Committee that voted Jan. 15 to approve such a primary.

Jack Ogg will be in Amarillo Monday seeking support for his S.B. 602. He will conduct a press conference at 4 p.m. at the Amarillo Airport.

Vietnam says Chinese still there

China announces withdrawal

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Chairman Hua Guofeng says the last Chinese troops have withdrawn from Vietnam, but the Vietnamese government reported today that Chinese forces were still shelling and looting inside Vietnam and Laos reported Chinese troops crossed its border last week.

Hua, China's premier and Communist Party leader, announced the end of the invasion China began Feb. 17 in a meeting in Peking Thursday with the governor of Tokyo, Ryokichi Minobe, Japan's Kyodo news agency reported. But Hua did not say if Chinese troops had pulled out of areas in which Vietnam claimed the Chinese put up new boundary markers.

Despite the reported withdrawal, Hanoi Radio said fierce fighting was still going on in Cao Bang and that several hundred Chinese troops were killed in the Ta Hu Xin area of the province.

Both China and Vietnam have called for negotiations but analysts say problems may arise if Peking's troops don't pull out of areas claimed by Vietnam. Hanoi reiterated Thursday it was ready to hold negotiations one week after the total pullout of Chinese troops.

Laos, meanwhile, accused China of sending two battalions more than a mile into Laotian territory on March 7 and said three days later other Chinese troops "nibbled" along a six-mile front and penetrated some two miles inside Laos.

The official Voice of Vientiane charged that Chinese troops encroached on the village of Boa on March 7 and at the village of Muang on March 10. Both are in the rugged northern province of Nam Tha, which borders China's Yunnan province.

The broadcast also charged that Peking continued to send an increasing number of spies and agents into Laos to overthrow the Vientiane government.

"These actions and words show the Chinese rulers' intentions to violate the sovereignty of Laos and reveal China's antagonistic behavior toward the Lao people and its inhuman designs to overthrow the government," it said.

Laos already has ordered the expulsion of all Chinese aid technicians in Laos. Peking expressed "immense regret" Thursday over the decision and warned its southern neighbor not to move further "down the anti-China road."

Western analysts in Bangkok have been skeptical of recent charges by Laos. Vietnam and the Soviet Union that the Chinese were massing troops along the Laotian border. They reasoned that if the fighting spread to Laos, all of Indochina would have been engulfed by conflict within the past three months.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia Dec. 25 and installed a pro-Hanoi Cambodian Communist government in Phnom Penh which is still fighting the remnants of the ousted regime of Premier Pol Pot.

The Pol Pot guerrillas claimed today they had killed or wounded more than 250 Vietnamese and knocked out three tanks in fighting March 8-13 in widespread areas of the country.

Iranian court goes semi-public

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime did an about-face and after weeks of secret Islamic justice went semi-public for the trial of former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida.

But he is expected to face a firing squad like other officials of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime.

Khomeini's revolutionary committee opened Hoveida's trial to an invited audience after the executions of at least 62 men convicted in secret and threats from Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan to resign if such "inhuman and irreligious" proceedings continued.

The revolutionary regime invited selected Iranian reporters and about 200 relatives of demonstrators killed by the shah's police. The reporters said the trial began about 2 a.m. Thursday before one of Khomeini's Islamic tribunals in a makeshift courtroom in Tehran's Qasr Prison.

The trial was in recess today for the Moslem Sabbath and was scheduled to resume Saturday.

Some of the reporters present said the 57-year-old Hoveida, who was prime minister from 1963 to 1977, was groggy from medication and wearing a black ski parka as he was led before the court. He sat with his head bowed and hands folded as the prosecutor read 16 charges against him, including spying for the United States, and demanded the death penalty.

Hoveida denied any wrongdoing and declared "I could be in New York at the moment or in other countries walking freely. I had the opportunity, but why am I here? I had the chance to leave the country before my arrest."

He was also accused of smuggling heroin, revolting against Iran by forming cabinets on the order of the United States, interfering in elections and allowing foreign exploitation of Iran's resources.

The prosecutor alleged Hoveida suppressed the shah's opposition, "entering into a battle against God and his emissaries," but Hoveida denied that, too.

Hoveida was arrested by the shah last November for alleged corruption and misappropriation of funds in an apparent move to ease growing opposition to the monarch. But he was freed when the shah left Iran and he surrendered to the revolutionary government when it took power.

Bazargan first threatened to resign two weeks ago, charging Khomeini's revolutionary committees were making it impossible for him and his cabinet to establish their authority. But the 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader of the revolution convinced Bazargan to remain in office by promising him his support.

Meanwhile, American feminist leader Kate Millet said today she has not been informed of the government's decision Thursday to expel her and plans to remain until she is formally asked to leave.

Delinquent taxes piling up

Gray County shows a total of $171,656.00 in delinquent taxes accumulated from 1939 to 1976, according to a semiannual report made this week to the Commissioners Court by county tax assessor-collector Jack Back. But the county has shown a steady collection rate of about 97 percent over the last five years, according to records from the state Comptroller's Office.

The county showed an accumulation of $154,738.86 in unpaid tax from 1939 to 1974, amounting to an increase in delinquent money from 1974 to 1976 of $16,917.14.

The figures include the delinquent tax plus penalty interest set by state law.

Delinquent taxes dating before 1939 have been wiped off the books by state law.

Taxes assessed for 1978 were $1,475,177.72 of which a total of $1,333,832.82 was collected by October of 1978.

Father of Europe dies

PARIS (AP) — Jean Monnet, the foremost advocate of European unity and the inspiration and driving force behind the European Common Market, died today at his home near Montfort l'Amaury, sources at the headquarters of the European Community reported. He was 91.

Monnet, a self-described political economist, was the key figure in the drive to bind the free European nations economically and politically, but during his long career he constantly shunned the limelight.

His first major step toward European unity was a six-nation pool of coal and steel resources, formally presented in 1950. Seven years later it became known as the European Economic Community.

Monnet was never a member of a government, but was, as Theodor H. White called him, "a broker of ideas." He brought statesmen together by demonstrating how his ideas were in the interest of those concerned, persisting where leaders resisted or hesitated.

Problems in cutting state budget

Anyone knowledgeable of Texas politics could have written the headline six weeks ago or even as far back as the day after the general election in November. The headline read: "Clements' Budget Runs Into Solid Opposition."

Texas' new Republican governor had proposed reducing local school taxes by $1 billion. He told the law makers he had learned in campaign conversations with "tens of thousands" of Texans that is what they want.

That's what they want, but the company of Hobby & Lobby don't. We've known that all along. Most of those in the Texas House and Senate are what one can safely call spenders. Generally, they are the liberal types. Hobby & Lobby may be counted as part of the "battered bureaucracy."

Gov. Clements made reference to the bloated bureaucracy. This is what he said in presenting his budget for 1980 - 81: "Taxpayers have no obligation to bear the cost of bloated bureaucracy, of wasteful and inefficient government spending, and of overlapping and redundant government services."

The scenario reads like something we've written before. We have pointed out many times that most of the Texas law makers will be reticent to make any seriously large cut in taxes. Most of those legislators, elected by the people, won't stand hitched for any major tax slashing. The lobby, special interest, and regional cannons are pointing at them.

The Governor said the state budget has grown by 235 percent in the past decade, an Associated Press item reported, with the growth rate of Texas' bureaucracy out-stripping that of California and New York. His simple proposal, to return $1 billion to Texans by repealing the 10-cent per $100 state property tax and providing an additional $900 million to school districts so they could reduce local taxes, found instant reaction - opposition.

The AP reported Gov. Clements' budget would spend $13.76 billion for major state funds, excluding federal money and certain dedicated state taxes. The figure is $968.1 million less than the proposal of the Legislative Budget Board (LBB).

But Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the proposed budget is not a reasonable or realistic one. He said the proposal to reduce public school spending by 58 percent from the amount proposed in the LBB budget was the most objectionable feature of the governor's budget.

Perhaps if the people of Texas register enough objection to the objection, Hobby & Lobby & Co. will do some mind-changing and settle down to some real "belt-tightening" such as Gov. Clements calls for and which all government in Texas, from Austin to the smallest entity, needs to do.

Government's own program

It finally has dawned on us why the people in charge in Washington, D.C. are always insisting that bilingual studies are good for the land.

Nobody up there speaks English. They speak gobbledygook.

Remember when JC — that's the slang handle for Jimmy Carter — promised to purge jargon and gobbledygook from the language of official Washington?

Nobody understood his grammar, so nobody got the message.

Fact is, JC seems to have forgotten his plain English, too.

For example, in seeking to help communities that are growing rapidly because of energy-development projects, he said he wants Inland Energy Impact Assistance (funding) for "the implementation of impact mitigation strategies" and for "infrastructure improvements."

If you have had difficulty trying to figure out the meaning of the language of JC's fiscal 1980 budget plan, just forget it. JC himself probably can't translate it from gobbledygook to Potomac jargon, now that the type is cold and the ink is dry.

But just take a gander at what JC wants in that little 'budget. Why he wants a new CHAP program. That stands for the Child Health Assistance Program. That's enough to chape you, but he also wants funds for OJARS. You know what OJARS is? Why, that's the Office of Justice Assistance, Research and Statistics.

Oh! JC has his likes and dislikes, and his wants and his don't-wants, and one of his don't-wants is a high-temperature gas-cooled nuclear reactor.

Just last week, according to The Wall Street Journal, FBI Director Webster, "after a year on the job learning to speak bureaucratese, he titled a first-anniversary speech "Tasking the FBI in a Free Society."

You get the feeling that the gobbledygook situation has not been diminished but is growing worse. Sort of reminds us of what happened because of the Tower of Babel. All those voices and nobody understands what the other is saying.

Used to be that statesmen "framed" in beautiful, understandable language the great events that had been or were to be. But now there is no beautiful, understandable language, and have you seen a statesman lately?

Nations that were our friends are now cold toward us because they can't understand us. Their spokesman speak fluent English, but what we speak to them is something else, especially if they hear it from the bucketmouth of JC's chosen, ambassadorial prince, Motor Jaws Young.

We're still going far out and getting more off the base every day. There are so many basics to which we need to return that it would take the Government Accounting Office a month to count them. But it would help a lot if we chose one of the old basics right now and went back to it, and that is speaking plain English.

Today in history

By The Associated Press
Today is Friday, March 16th, the 75th day of 1979. There are 290 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1534, England severed all relations with the Roman Catholic Papacy.

On this date:
In 1521, Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan reached the Philippines, where he was killed by natives the following month.

In 1676, Indians destroyed the Rhode Island settlements of Warwick and Providence.

In 1802, Congress authorized the establishment of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, New York.

In 1830, it was a slow day on Wall Street, with only 31 shares of stock traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1965, the Soviet Union moved toward closer economic relations with the west by announcing it would join the international agreement on patents.

Deregulating trucking

In his 1979 State of the Union address, President Carter was not able to point to many accomplishments in the domestic area of government. But he did refer to one achievement which few would challenge: the deregulation of the airlines. As a result of legislation enacted in 1978, governmental controls are being phased out over a period of years from this major industry, to the benefit of both producers and consumers of its services.

The advantages of airline deregulation are already apparent due to the pro-competition position followed by the Civil Aeronautics Board since 1976. Fares are substantially lower and more people than ever can now afford to travel by air. Capitalism is accomplishing what its enemies insist it cannot do. Lower airline fares mean little to the rich, but a great deal to the poor.

The Carter administration is now seeking an even more ambitious deregulation goal. It wants to deregulate the trucking industry, which pits it against many truck owners and drivers. Thomas Gale Moore, a senior fellow at the Hoover Institution, writes in the current Journal of Law and Economics that three-fourths or more of the cost to shippers, and ultimately to consumers, of ICC trucking regulations takes the form of income transfers to labor and capital involved in trucking. The magnitude of these benefits obviously makes fashioning a deregulation package difficult, notes Moore.

The Hoover fellow presents some examples in his article of the price impact of trucking regulation. In the 1950s, some products that had been transported only by regulated carriers were declared by the courts to be commodities exempt from trucking regulation. As a result of these decisions, prices declined 12 to 59 percent in particular markets. There was an unweighted average 33 percent for frozen poultry shipments. The weighted average decline in shipping costs for frozen fruit and vegetables was 19 percent.

The poultry market offers another illustration. Member firms of the National Broiler Council ship fresh poultry by exempt carriers and cooked poultry by regulated carriers. In comparing rates for the same routes between the same points, the Council found that on the average, unregulated rates were 33 percent less than the rates on regulated carriers. Comparisons of trucking rates between countries - admittedly a difficult process because of the exchange rates - show that rates in countries with little or no regulation were 43 percent lower than those in West Germany (with strict controls), and the United States (also tightly controlled).

The Motor Carrier Act of 1935, which imposed the regulation, was designed to eliminate competition from the trucking industry, and accordingly, the ICC restricts entry into it. Moore observes that the Commission's policy is to authorize new services only where a new shipping need has developed and, in addition, where the new service will not divert traffic from existing carriers.

According to Moore, trucking regulations will tend to increase wages through two effects. First, it will strengthen union power by eliminating or reducing the competition of non-union firms. Regulation automatically prevents a certain number of non-unionized firms from entering the industry, and competing for the traffic carried by unionized firms.

Second, operating ratio regulation, which controls profits on the basis of costs, will either make it more profitable to pay higher wages or, at worst, make it less unprofitable to do so. Moore states that an increase in Teamster wages usually triggers ICC approval of a rate increase. Indications are that the gains for regulated drivers over unregulated ones are about 50 to 55 percent. Thus, Moore concludes, gains to Teamster members as a result of regulation, may have amounted to between $1 billion and $1.3 billion in 1972 alone.

The other major beneficiary of trucking regulation is the original owners of the ICC certificates that are required to conduct business in the regulated portion of the industry. A large number of the trucking firms operating at the time of federal regulations were initially imposed, were issued certificates without cost. Those who have been granted or have purchased certificates and permits from others since then also stand to lose from deregulation.

Because the ICC is very restrictive in authorizing new service, the owner of a certificate has a very valuable asset which would become worthless if entry into the industry were no longer limited. Moore estimates that in 1972 the value of certificates and other permits owned by the larger carriers was between $2.1 and $3 billion.

COMMENTARY Of money and masterpieces

by donald f. griff

Even in hyper-inflationary times, $1.2 billion can buy a lot.

Quite possibly even the vast improvement in public broadcasting proposed by the latest Carnegie Commission report. In case you missed or skipped over the considerable attention to that document in recent news columns, it surveys the present and potential of noncommercial television and radio and comes up with a clutch of recommendations for restructuring them to better serve the public and "help the creative spirit to flourish."

Key proposals include replacing the existing Corporation of Public Broadcasting and the Public Broadcasting Service (themselves creations of a 1967 Carnegie Commission study) with two new bodies. A Public Telecommunications Trust would head the system with responsibility for administration and long-term planning. A program services Endowment, semi-autonomous of the trust, would underwrite programming.

Funding would be increased from the current level of less than $500 million annually to around $1.2 billion by 1985, with half to come from federal appropriations. A major source would be fees raised from licensing commercial broadcasters. Facilities would be expanded to reach 90 percent of the U.S. population.

As the Carnegie Commission sees it, the result would be a communications service for the viewing and listening publics that "can illuminate the dark corners of the world and the dark corners of the mind. It can offer forums to a multitude of voices... Above all, it can add to our understanding of our own inner workings and of one another."

Well, maybe. At the very least the report's authors are certainly flourishing creatively. But without doubting their sincerity or dismissing the basic conclusions, questions might be raised concerning some points and assumptions. Commercial television, for example, comes in for scathing criticism for its concentration on "audience maximization" and for denying Americans "what other societies consider vital: a flourishing public communications service uncensored by commercial imperatives."

No argument, but it should not be forgotten that the creative spirit has been known to flourish in commercial broadcasting, particularly in the early days when money was in shorter supply and commercial considerations were for that very reason no less imperative. Much that came out of that era is now considered classic - Sid Caesar's out of "Show of Shows," Ernie Kovacs, the long-run

"Omnibus," the last perhaps yet to be excelled in bringing culture to a mass audience.

As for today's audiences, the Nielsen-computed multitudes who respond to the jiggle appeal of "Charlie's Angels" may not in the least care to have the dark corners of the world, let alone their minds, illuminated at whatever cost. The ultimate cost of pouring vast numbers of public dollars into expanded creative effort could be simply the subsidization of what continues to be a viewing elite.

And in the process, public broadcasting might lose something of present value - its diversity. The fragmentation of production among a large number of loosely linked stations may be an organizational weakness, but it is also a strength. There is a variety and freshness in programming originating from Boston and Philadelphia to Atlanta and San Francisco that the networks' lack and public broadcasting might lose if restructured and centrally funded.

Particularly with federal funds. The Carnegie proposals stress careful insulation from government control, but this might be easier in the stressing than the achieving. With the bucks inevitably goes influence.

As for bucks, the commission may be inadvertently taking somewhat the same attitude for which the networks are often criticized - that money is the remedy for shortcomings, particularly in programming. Public television's experience in this respect - "The Adams Chronicles," estimable but costly to produce and short of gripping, comes to mind - has not been too encouraging.

It might be welcome to be able to pass out bundles with instructions to create masterpieces returns guaranteed. But it rarely works that way.

Opposition to 'oversight'

WASHINGTON (NEA) - What does Congress do when it believes the voters want to hear more about federal spending cuts and about new programs?

Some legislators advocate proposals to balance the federal budget, while others push for tax cuts so bureaucrats will have less money to spend.

But if the lawmakers really are serious about seeing that government functions more smoothly, they ought to heed the advice of several leaders, including House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., who have proclaimed the dawn of the "oversight Congress."

Oversight of existing programs never has been one of Congress's strong suits. Many consider a review of the agencies' performance as tedious and unrewarding work that offers few dividends to politicians accustomed to reminding voters and interest groups of their latest achievements.

In the past, a member of the House of Senate Agriculture Committee may have decided it simply was not worth the time or aggravation to examine the failings of a program such as the Soil and Conservation Service even though many experts agree that its $500 million budget for farm pollution control has had meager results. The reason is that the only people who care about this program, or any of hundreds of others, generally are those who directly benefit from it.

A few in Congress, like Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., hold frequent hearings or conduct studies of existing programs to draw attention to a particular abuse. They often draw public and press attention but, typically, they offer few constructive suggestions for remedying the problems.

All this may be changing. The drive for government efficiency symbolized by events such as president Carter's call for less paper work, last year's California vote on Proposition 13 and the recent budget - balancing fervor may have some effect in Congress.

Even a veteran liberal Democrat like Rep. John Brademas of Indiana concedes the new 96th Congress will not write many major new laws. Instead, the House Majority Whip predicted an upsurge in oversight because "the federal dollar must be stretched further than ever before."

However, recent House debate showed surprising opposition to giving committees adequate funds to support additional oversight investigations. Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, said every additional dollar for congressional operations would have a "multiplier" effect leading to the eventual spending of many more dollars.

This criticism may be penny-wise and pound-foolish. For example, leaders of the House Ways and Means Committee had requested an annual budget of $2.9 million for its operations, compared with $1.8 million it spent last year. Much of the increase was intended for oversight of the broad array of tax, trade health and welfare issues that the committee considers.

But the House reduced the committee's new budget to $2 million, which undoubtedly will mean the panel will have fewer resources to review how programs are working and what changes should be made.

Many in Congress are embarrassed by the fact that the legislative branch spends more than $1 billion annually to oversee $500 billion in federal spending as well as write new laws.

If congressional committees and support agencies such as the General Accounting Office and Congressional Research Service take the oversight interest seriously, that $1 billion may be the best investment the taxpayer ever made.

But if they do not exercise more vigorous oversight, they should beware the warning of another liberal democrat, Rep. John F. Seiberling of Ohio, that the majority party will become the minority in the next election.

Senate confirms mental health appointee

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Senate has confirmed a mental health appointee labeled as "controversial" by friends, as well as foes.

William Schnapp, former executive director of the Houston Association of Retarded Citizens, cleared the Senate, 24-5, on Thursday.

Senators, however, were in a hurry to confirm two other appointments by Gov. Bill Clements, and one — Houston lawyer W.B. "Monk" Edwards — apparently has no chance of getting the district judgeship he wants.

Decisions on Edwards and William Daves Jr., a Dallas bank executive named to the State Insurance Board, were postponed for a week.

Senators granted the delay on Edwards to give him a chance to withdraw, or become the first Clements appointee to be rejected by the Senate. Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, says he has 12 firm votes to block his appointment.

Postponement of Daves' appointment, however, surprised the governor's staff. The Senate Nominations Subcommittee approved him, 6-0, Tuesday, after only a few questions.

The vote to confirm Schnapp to the State Board of Mental Health and Mental Retardation came over the protests of Sen. Roy Blake, whose district includes three mental institutions — Lufkin State School and the Terrell and Rusk state hospitals.

Blake, D-Nacogdoches, indicated he was concerned Schnapp would want to close state mental institutions and shift more responsibility to community centers.

The three institutions in Blake's district have a combined enrollment of more than 2,500.

Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston, said Schnapp is controversial only because he has refused "to stand on the sidelines" of mental health care. He compared Schnapp to the famed Menninger brothers in Kansas, who "also were controversial."

Clements decided at a staff meeting not to offer Edwards advice on whether to withdraw or stick it out. One top staffer felt Edwards still might be confirmed.

Edwards was quoted as saying he had no intention of embarrassing Clements but plans to talk to Clements before deciding whether to ask that his nomination be withdrawn.

Edwards, a former Gulf Oil lawyer, testified before the nominations subcommittee he had given a sealed envelope, which he assumed contained money, to former Gov. Preston Smith.

Smith said he assumed the money was a personal campaign contribution from Edwards, who contended he was unaware at that time of Gulf's illegal slush fund for political candidates.

Brooks said 25 to 30 lobbyists had contacted him on behalf of Edwards, but Edwards said he did not instigate the lobbying effort.

Schnapp received an unfavorable 4-3 vote from the subcommittee, but opponents were able to garner only two more votes from the full Senate.

Blake said he had heard no testimony against Schnapp's "character or sincerity in working with the mentally retarded."

"He is a great believer in treatment outside the institution," said Blake. He added Schnapp had tried to assure him he "would be fair" in voting to fund replacement beds at existing institutions.

"I'm concerned about his attitude about this," said Blake. "He also could be very divisive... and disruptive."

Schnapp lives in Jones' district, and the Houston senator insisted Schnapp "recognizes fully the need for institutions and appreciates the commitment Texas has made to their establishment."

Officials search for pair

LOS FRESNOS, Texas (AP) — South Texas law enforcement officials are still searching for a pair of "brazen" bandits who immobilized the four-man police force here and got away with more than $50,000 from a local bank.

Los Fresnos police dispatcher Hector Gonzalez said he and Officer Ruben Garcia were sitting in the small dispatcher's room in the rear of an office building here Thursday morning when they heard a knock on the door.

"A guy walked in and he had a gun," Gonzalez said. "He told Garcia to get up and put his gun on the desk very slowly and carefully. Then he told Garcia to handcuff me to the chair."

The gunman — wearing a motorcycle helmet and mask —

then handcuffed Garcia to a chair, Gonzalez said.

"He told us to crawl over by the wall. We heard a shot but we had tape on our eyes and mouths. Ruben thought he shot me and I thought he shot Ruben," the dispatcher recalled.

"But the gunman said, 'I didn't shoot anybody,'" he recalled.

After a secretary from a nearby office freed the two men they noticed that the gunman had put a single shot through the police teletype equipment.

Q. I keep switching around between regular strength pain relievers, extra strength pain relievers and arthritis pain formulas. So far, I haven't noticed much difference in headache relief but there sure is a big difference in price. Is there any benefit to buying the more powerful brands?

A. Drug companies keep trying to outdo each other when it comes to their extra, adult, added, and arthritis strength pain relievers. They realize that most of us are suckers for the "more is better—principle—if one is good, two must be better."

We wouldn't be at all surprised to see a "super strength" pain reliever one of these days and if the trend continues, there will probably be an "extra super strength" pain remedy for extra sized headaches.

Most of the added strength hoopla that you hear and see in commercials is pure hype. These products are not really "stronger" pills, they just contain a little more analgesic, usually aspirin or acetaminophen. In other words, instead of going with the standard 5 grain tablet (324 mg) they may make a 400 or 500 mg preparation.

Does this mean that they will take your headache away faster or more effectively? The answer is no. There is a limit to how much benefit you can obtain from aspirin or any other analgesic. Doubling or tripling the dose does not correspondingly double or triple the benefits.

Two regular strength aspirin tablets are usually all you need for the average, garden-variety type of headache, no matter what size head you have. But if you feel impelled to seek "added strength" all you would have to do is take an extra half a tablet. That will be a lot cheaper than buying an expensive "super strength" brand name preparation.

Q. I'm a great believer in vitamin C. I usually buy large quantities of the cheap brand in order to save money, but recently my wife suggested that I ought to be taking the organic kind. This is much more expensive in our health food store. Is it that much better to justify the higher price?

The other thing I wonder about is how long vitamin C will last. If I keep it in the refrigerator will it keep longer?

A. We went straight to the horse's mouth on this one — the Great Guru of Vitamin C himself, Dr. Linus Pauling. His words of wisdom are the following: "The labels of some preparations of vitamin C emphasize that the tablets contain natural vitamin C or natural ascorbic acid in such a way as to suggest that this fact justifies a high price. You should not be taken in by this, because all vitamin C preparations contain natural vitamin C."

"The best way to buy vitamin C is to check the price and the content of vitamin C and then to get the most for your money."

In response to your question about storage, Dr. Pauling had this to say: "With respect to aging, pure ascorbic acid is stable indefinitely and can be kept for years providing the closure is tight and it is kept in a brown or opaque white bottle out of direct sunlight. Under normal conditions it retains 99 percent or more of its activity for several years. Vitamin C should not be refrigerated while it is being used."

So there you have it. We don't promise any miracles for vitamin C but as long as it works for you, you might as well follow Dr. Pauling's advice and save some money.

Dr. Burack contends that expensive promotional schemes encourage doctors to write an excessive number of prescriptions in the first place and many of these drugs are too costly.

Which is a worse risk; low, high interest rates

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Which is a worse risk — low interest rates that could dry up the loan money market or high rates that might make consumer borrowing difficult?

Senators opted for second possible scenario Thursday in approving legislation that would raise the interest rate limit from 10 percent to 18 percent on non-mortgage loans of $175,000 or more.

"I'm deeply concerned about the plight of the small businessmen and farmers and ranchers in this state," said Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado. "We're just going to authorize them (banks) to hang these folks."

The bill by Sen. Ike Harris, R-Dallas, advanced to the House on a 21-8 Senate vote.

Debate was a replay of Wednesday's session when Harris agreed to raise the loan floor from $100,000 to $175,000 after Patman threatened to filibuster.

Patman said families will be hurt by Harris' bill and separate legislation to raise mortgage loan interest charges from 10 percent to 12 percent.

Harris said lenders cannot acquire funds on the national market with Texas' current 10 percent usury limit.

The 18 percent interest ceiling now applies only to loans of $500,000 or more.

Sen. E.L. Short, D-Tahoka, disputed Patman's claim that lower interest rates would help rural Texans.

"Well, regardless of the interest charged, we'd like to have a way for these people (Texas residents) to buy land," said Short, a West Texas rancher.

"The provision here is a good one to permit some money to flow through the market place," he continued.

"Just let the farmers and ranchers get exposed to high interest rates. Let them suffer losses and suffer a depression," Patman answered. "Then they'll be forced to mortgage off their farms and ranches."

Another West Texas senator sided with Patman.

"I've got calls from farming and ranch folks this morning who told me, 'We're afraid if you raise these interest rates the little guy's going to get cut out of the market,'" said Sen. Bob Price, R-Pampa.

If banks can charge 18 percent on loans of $175,000 and above, they will be reluctant to let a rancher borrow less than that, Price added.

Emotional arguments aside, interest rates are determined by the free enterprise system of supply and demand, said Sen. Bill Meier, D-Eules. Meier is sponsoring the bill to raise mortgage rates.

James Joyce's novel "Ulysses" was published in Paris in 1922.

police report

Lynn Stafford of 729 N. Hobart reported his unlocked residence was burglarized sometime during the last three days. Stolen was a redwood bank shaped like a barrel, containing $500 in half dollars.

The police department answered 37 calls in a 24-hour period beginning at 7 a.m. Thursday.

Prisoner released after guilty plea

Carl Blackwell Jr., who was arrested and jailed Wednesday night after a scuffle with police, pled guilty of disorderly conduct Thursday in Municipal Court and was released.

Blackwell was originally charged also with driving while intoxicated and aggravated assault on a police officer, but those charges were dropped. Police Chief Richard Mills said the DWI charge would have been difficult to prove, and that the police department does not press charges for assaulting an officer unless it is a serious incident.

Blackwell's address was incorrectly reported in Thursday's News as 932 E. Francis. He lives at 923 E. Francis.

Governor's employees indicted

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted four members of former Gov. Ray Blanton's administration, alleging thousands of dollars and expensive gifts changed hands in a four-year scheme that allowed Tennessee convicts to buy their freedom.

A Nashville lawyer and a former Democratic Party committeeman also were indicted Thursday by the panel, which has been investigating allegations of a clemency-for-cash operation since May 1978.

Blanton, who testified before the grand jury in December, was told he was one of those being investigated. However, he was not accused of any wrongdoing in the 49-page indictment.

The grand jury report said $382,400 in illegal payments was requested for clemencies and $114,000 was paid. The report also said payments included a grandfather clock, a 1 1/2-carat diamond ring, a coin collection and $1,400 in carpeting and installation.

Texas weather

By The Associated Press
Thunderstorms, rain, drizzle and fog were forecast for most of Texas today. Widely scattered thunderstorms struck most of the state late Thursday and continued during the evening.

The activity resumed, beginning in Southwest Texas, early today.

Some of the heaviest activity was in East Texas Thursday night, but most points reported only light amounts of rainfall.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thunderstorms, drizzle and fog. Highs were to range from the 40s and 50s in northern sections of the state to near 80 in South Texas.

Early morning temperatures ranged from the 40s in Northwest Texas to the 50s and 60s in South Texas. Extremes ranged from 38 at Amarillo to 70 at Brownsville.

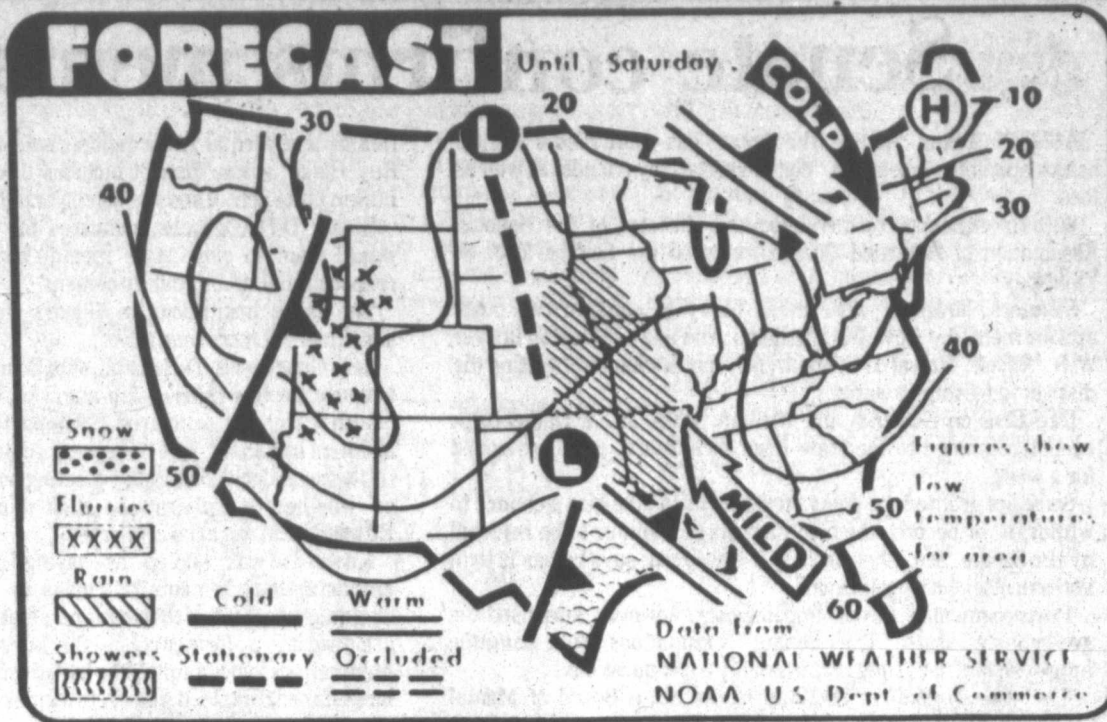

National

By The Associated Press
Thundershowers damped the West and parts of Texas today with lighter showers extending from central Texas and Louisiana into eastern Kansas and southwestern Missouri.

Occasional snow showers reached from western Montana into eastern Washington state and a few snow flurries lingered along the southern shore of Lake Ontario.

A travel advisory was posted for the Tahoe Valley of western Nevada as gusty winds and occasional snow swirled through the area.

Parts of the Northeast braced for more snow as flurries were expected from western New England across northern New York state.

WEATHER FORECAST calls for showers for most of the west with rain predicted from the western Gulf to Michigan. The rest of the nation should have cool, mild weather. (AP Laserphoto)

Angel, grandparents victims of regulations

CRAWFORDVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Eleven-month-old Angel Jackson plays on the floor of a tarpaper house, unaware of the bureaucratic wall forcing the tiny orphan and her grandparents to exist on handouts and $174 a month.

Last December, Angel's stepfather shot her mother, then turned the gun on himself. The court appointed Fred and Joyce Jackson, her grandparents, as legal guardians. The couple, both unemployed, have two children. They receive $120 in food stamps each month, plus Angel's $54 monthly welfare check.

Welfare officials agree Angel's case is sad and unique, but they say she is a victim of regulations.

She can't get Social Security survivor's benefits because her mother never contributed to the plan and her stepfather was not her natural father.

State crime victim's benefits are out. It seems the rules don't provide for victims related to perpetrators of crimes.

But rules and regulations don't carry much weight in the Jackson home.

"They've got the very life of that child in their hands," said Joyce Jackson. "There's no justice."

Mrs. Jackson, 42, is a nurse's aide, out of work because she injured her back lifting a patient. Jackson, a 44-year-old crab fisherman, can't fish again until he raises $1,200 to replace his rusted crabtraps. Concerned citizens gave the family $300 earlier this week after a local newspaper published Angel's story, but they are still counting on the government — without much success.

"Angel is not entitled under the law because she is related to the person who committed the crime," said state crimes Commissioner A. Morris Busbia. "Personally, I think it's a very sad situation. She's definitely a victim — but there's no provision in the law for compassion."

Angel's lawyer, Mark Levine of Tallahassee, says he will appeal the ruling on crime benefits.

'Tax relief' bill gets House approval

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A "tax relief" bill described in terms of both Robin Hood and the Prodigal Son has won preliminary House approval.

House members gave up lunch Thursday and worked to mid-afternoon to advance the bill, which will come up again on Monday for final passage. That would send it to the Senate.

The measure (HB1060) enacts all the optional provisions of the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment and provides more than $430 million in state tax dollars to offset property tax cuts school districts must grant.

The Tax Relief Amendment automatically exempted $5,000 of the market value of owner-occupied homes from school property taxes. It left implementation of its other features to the Legislature.

Key provisions of the bill approved Thursday would: —Grant the disabled and those 65 and over a $10,000 homestead exemption, in addition to the mandated $5,000 exemption, and freeze school taxes of the elderly at their present levels.

—Exempt two cars or light trucks per family from property taxes.

—Limit increases in state spending to the percentage of growth of Texans' total personal income.

—Exempt intangible property such as stocks, bonds and bank accounts from taxation, except for the handful of intangibles already taxed — chiefly bank stock.

—Tax farm, ranch and timber land — both family-owned and corporately-owned — according to its crop-producing capacity, not its market value. Taxable value would be estimated net income divided by either 10 percent or the Houston Federal Land Bank's interest rate plus 2 1/2 percent, whichever was greater. If the "capitalization rate" was 10 percent, an acre that could produce a $30 average annual profit would be valued at $300 for taxation.

—Omit intangible property from the measurement of school district wealth that is used to determine how much state aid each district would receive — a step considered essential to avoid ruinous cuts in aid to big city schools.

—Use state tax money to reimburse school districts for revenue losses resulting from property tax cuts mandated by the Tax Relief Amendment and the implementing bill.

Automobile tax losses, minus each district's collection costs, would be reimbursed only for the first year and are estimated at $17 million.

Junior college district revenue losses caused by the change from market value to agricultural value also would be reimbursed, although nobody knows the amount.

School districts whose level of property appraisals for taxation fall below the state average would receive 90 percent of their losses. Some 300 districts that are above the state average could receive more than they actually lost if enough money is available to pay them more than dollar for dollar.

Estimated cost of school district reimbursement is $415 million for the next two years. Reimbursement was the most controversial issue and received the closest count in Thursday's article-by-article vote on the bill, 81-48.

A largely rural and small town group of lawmakers tried several times Wednesday and Thursday to eliminate the reward-and-punishment aspect of reimbursement.

Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, attempted to put reimbursement on a strict dollar-for-dollar basis, but lost, 74-57.

"Have you ever heard of Robin Hood, who took from the rich to give to the poor?" asked Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs.

"I read it five times when I was a child," Bush said. "Well, isn't this like Robin Hood in reverse, where you rob from the poor (school districts) and give to the rich?" Florence asked.

"It seems like they are doing that to your school district, Mr. Florence," Bush said.

In Bush's home county, the Sherman school district would receive almost $43,000 less than it would lose from homestead exemptions because its appraisals are below the state average ratio to true market value — 58 percent compared with the statewide average of 68 percent. But Denison Independent School District would receive an $18,000 "bonus" because its appraisals are 71 percent of market value.

"For half this House, this bill is gigantic tax relief. For the rest of this House, it is a tax increase," Bush said.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, attempted to justify giving districts with accurate, up-to-date appraisals more than they lost while penalizing those with below-average appraisals. He compared school districts with a farmer's two sons, each of whom received 90 cents to buy lunch. One spent 60 cents even before it became time to go to the store to eat. The other had his full 90 cents.

"The farmer says, 'I'm going to give you another 60 cents so you can go down to the store and eat.' But to be fair, he said he was going to give the other son 60 cents, too," Peveto said.

Likewise, he said, the taxpayers want the Tax Relief Amendment's exemptions to mean the same from district to district — whether appraisals are 30 percent of market value or 90 percent.

"If you give the prodigal son 60 cents, you should give the other son at least 40 or 50 cents or he'll get his feelings hurt," Peveto said.

Wearin' the Seamrog

In many parts of the world tomorrow, people of Irish ancestry will mark St. Patrick's Day by wearing the shamrock, Ireland's national flower. "Shamrock" comes from a Gaelic word, "seamrog," which means three-leafed. A number of plants are called shamrocks, but the three-leafed clover is the most common. According to a legend, St. Patrick used a shamrock to explain the idea of the Trinity when he introduced Christianity to Ireland in the fifth century. Another story tells how Patrick used a shamrock to drive Ireland's snakes into the sea. These furry creatures appear to be ready for tomorrow's festivities with shamrocks of their own.

DO YOU KNOW — What color is traditionally associated with St. Patrick's Day?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The breeding grounds of seals are called rookeries.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Please answer in the paper because I live in a very small town and if anyone ever found out my name I'd be a laughing stock.

What would you do if your husband, after 34 years of marriage, suddenly announced that he has a 37-year-old daughter? I raised hell. Was I in error?

My husband told me that a woman came to his place of work and identified herself as the girl he got pregnant 37 years ago. She reminded him that when she told him she was expecting, he said he'd do anything but marry her because he wasn't ready for marriage. She then disappeared. Now, after all this time, she suddenly finds him and says her daughter would like to know her father! My husband says he recalls the incident vaguely. Without consulting me, he agreed to meet this so-called daughter and also promised to tell our children about her!

I say this woman is out to make trouble and wreck our home. I forbade my husband to tell our children about it. (We have two.) I told him this woman may not even know who fathered her daughter, and he shouldn't get involved.

Our family life has been good up to now, but this is upsetting. What should I do.

FROM A SMALL TOWN

DEAR FROM: Advise your husband to see a lawyer and find out (a) how much (if any) legal responsibility he has to this woman and her daughter, and (b) how to handle it.

If your husband feels a moral obligation to the woman, he will have to deal with it as he sees fit. In the meantime, the word from here is—keep cool and keep quiet!

DEAR ABBY: I know this is a dumb question for an 18-year-old girl to ask, but when is a girl no longer considered a virgin?

I had a boyfriend and we were very, very close, but we never had sexual intercourse. (We did everything BUT.) Am I still considered a virgin?

Please answer in the paper, as I don't want this kind of information coming to my house in a letter. Also, I'm sure there are other girls who would like to know.

VIRGIN OR NOT

DEAR VIRGIN: Although you have done everything BUT—the "but" makes the difference. Technically, you are a virgin.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LOTS OF PROBLEMS IN MILWAUKEE: You need a "parentectomy"—which means to become completely independent from your parents. You must support yourself, make your own decisions and assume total responsibility for your own actions. At 30, you are old enough. Get going.

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I'm 64 years old and I have arthritis and high cholesterol. I have read that cod liver oil has been beneficial in treating arthritis. I would like to try it. Is cod liver oil of any value in treating arthritis?

DEAR READER—No, it won't help at all. About 30 percent of people feel better when they receive any treatment, regardless of whether the treatment is of any value or not. I don't mean that the illness is in their mind. I am talking about actual diseases, such as arthritis. That's why it's so hard to judge whether a new medicine really is helping people or whether they are merely helped by their faith in the medicine and their doctor.

Some types of arthritis have remissions which would occur naturally anyway, whether the doctor provided medicine or not. If a person happens to be taking something that he thinks will help the arthritis at the time the natural remission occurs, he is greatly impressed with it. That's how you get these stories of people having miraculous cures from some unlikely substance.

Cod liver oil contains lots of vitamin D. If you take a lot of it and also get vitamin D in your milk (I hope you are drinking or otherwise getting about a quart a day) plus other food, you can soon approach toxic levels. Persistently taking 2000 units a day or more can cause softening of your bones.

You probably have osteoarthritis. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-10 to give you more information about it. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB—Would you please tell me something about herpes simplex number 2. I am told that it is a form of VD and there is no cure for it. Periodically, both my husband and I get these sores, on his nose, chin or penis and mine occur on the buttocks. My husband went to a skin specialist who diagnosed it as herpes simplex number 2 and told him it was a form of VD and there was no cure for it.

We have both been getting these sores for about five years and it is ruining our sex life. Please tell me if you know of any cure. Also, when I have a Pap test, it is never diagnosed. Please help me.

DEAR READER—I wish I could. The truth is we don't have any good medicines to treat viruses. Herpes is a virus infection. Antibiotics work well for bacteria, but viruses are a whole new ball game.

There are some anti-viral medicines in the research stage of development but some of those have undesirable side effects.

The herpes simplex sore is the common cold sore. Herpes simplex number 1 is usually around the lips. The difference in the location of the two viruses in the past gave rise to the statement that herpes simplex number 1 was above the belt and herpes simplex number 2 was below the belt. That distinction isn't applicable anymore for a variety of reasons.

The Pap test is used to look at the characteristics of your cells to see if you have any changes that might indicate cancer. They are not done to look for viruses. That's why no one has diagnosed herpes from your Pap test.

DEAR POLLY—My Pet Peeve is with the high cost of half-size clothes. They take less fabric to make but are usually several dollars more. —CATHERINE

DEAR POLLY—A piece of decorative tile from around my kitchen sink came off. I tried all those magic glues but they did not make the tiles stick because of the excess moisture. Then I thought of my denture powder, which secures my dentures and withstands moisture. I tried it and it worked. The tile has been on for several months. —MRS. W.H.W.

Reading labels can be a money saver

CHICAGO (AP)—Ammonium lauryl sulfate. Sounds a little ominous, but you come into contact with it every day or so, and recognizing it is one of the keys to becoming a smart shopper in the self-care market, according to a money-management expert.

"Ammonium lauryl sulfate is a common ingredient among shampoos," explains Shari Bryant, consumer-affairs advisor to Helene Curtis. "It's simply a detergent, not the dishwashing kind, but the kind that gets hair clean. And, every shampoo has some detergent in it."

Mrs. Bryant points out that just by studying ingredients on a product's label, a consumer can get a bottle of shampoo for about a dollar that contains practically the same ingredients as another that costs about three dollars.

The consumer-affairs advisor is busy instructing budget-conscious buyers across the country on how to get the most for their money from personal-care products.

"Anyone can look like a million without spending a fortune," she says, "and in these inflationary times, budgeting is a priority for most families."

Reading labels and reviewing product ingredients are the best ways to start on the road to smart shopping, advises Mrs. Bryant.

"You don't need to know what the ingredient means. It's just a matter of looking at the ingredient list on several products and comparing the similarity of the elements," she notes. "After looking at several product labels, you'll know when the contents are alike."

In addition to providing ingredients, the entire product label can enlighten a consumer, she points out. It says what the product is and what it does, gives instructions on how to use its contents for maximum benefit and always lists the manufacturer's name and location.

Among Mrs. Bryant's other tips for smart shopping in the self-care market are:

— Establish a basic "stock" of items for all personal-care needs. Less money will be spent if you stick to the list.

— Double up on product uses. Buy an all-purpose lotion instead of one each for hands, face and body.

— Know what products work for you. In the case of shampoos, know whether your hair is dry, normal or oily and buy the product which suits it.

— Become a unit-pricing expert. Divide the number of ounces into the product price. This will tell you which product is more economical to use.

— Know when a bargain is a bargain. Compute the unit price to be sure the large economy-size is truly more economical. If it's a first-time buy, try the smaller size first to see if the product works well.

— If a product has not performed well, write the manufacturer's Customer Service Department. Tell them what the problem is and send along the label or product for documentation.

PBS scores with exquisite 'Lillie'

By Norman Nadel

NEW YORK (NEA)—The British are about to score another resounding dramatic hit with "Lillie." Like the landmark "Upstairs, Downstairs," it will reveal its 13 episodes on Masterpiece Theatre, with a commentary by Alistair Cook, over the stations of the Public Broadcasting Service. It premieres Sunday evening, March 11.

"Lillie" is Lillie Langtry, whose career as iconoclastic socialite, mistress of princes and millionaires, and as actress jarred Victorian and Edwardian England, not to mention the Continent and eventually America, to a fare-thee-well. A previewing bears out anyone's fondest hopes: it is scripted, directed and played with sophistication, elegance befitting its period and an exquisite palette of emotions.

Naturally, the actress playing Mrs. Langtry has to be exhilaratingly lovely, charming, independent of spirit and totally irresistible. And that is just the impression conveyed by Francesca Annis. Even in the first episode, when she is a 15-year-old daughter of a clergyman on the Isle of Jersey, her fresh beauty takes your breath away. Nor is it only a surface impression; at every stage and age, her Lillie is unique, desirable beyond the telling.

Neither 13 dramatized hours nor 30 could encompass all the drama in the life of this remarkable woman. Born in 1853 on Jersey, she married at 21 to get away from there, and spent the next 20 years getting away from Edward Langtry, her dour and inadequate husband. Painted by such artists as John Everett Millais and James MacNeill Whistler, celebrated in verse by Oscar Wilde, she made an unprecedented splash in London society in her early 20s, at the time with only one evening dress to her name (black and simple; it set off her classic profile and auburn hair).

Her most famous affair, lasting three decades, was with the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII of England. Her one child, Jeanne-Marie, was sired by his nephew, Prince Louis of Battenberg, an ancestor of England's present Prince Philip. Wilde loved her, and there is a touching scene when she offers herself to him. She cannot at the time understand why he rejects the physical Lillie. It is handled with delicacy and taste.

George Alexander Baird, a millionaire industrialist who called himself Squire Abington, had an ugly temper along with a broad streak of sadism. As Lillie's lover, he regularly beat her up, but gave her 5,000 Pounds Sterling for each black eye. Once, surprising her with another lover in Paris, he brutalized both of them, putting her in a hospital for 10 days. To earn forgiveness, he gave her a 220-foot yacht, which she named the White Lady, and a check for 50,000 Pounds.

Lillie decided to become an actress, made her London stage debut in 1881 in "She Stoops to Conquer." She was the first society woman to go on the stage, also the first woman to endorse commercial products: Pear's soap and Watt's Glycerine Jelly of Violets.

When she decided to try the theatre, she asked the advice of actress Ellen Terry, who replied: "Acting would be a rough life for anyone as spoiled as you."

Yet Lillie managed to both act and continue to lead the life of a spoiled darling. When she embarked on her American tour, she had a private car built of polished Oriental teak to her specifications. It was 75 feet long, with 10 rooms, and so heavy that the train often had to be re-routed to avoid trestles that couldn't handle it. She named it Lalee, which is East Indian for flirt. It had a sparkling white top, bright Jersey blue body, with a border of brass lilies. The bedroom, in green silk brocade, was heavily padded, as were all other rooms, in the event of an accident. The car was a gift from Lord Battenberg; it cost him 250,000 Pounds.

In America, her name was misspelled Lily, and Hanging Judge Roy Bean renamed his town of Vinagaro, Texas, as Langtry. She toured in vaudeville with Alfred Lut. Early in the 20th century she appeared on the American movie screen.

Lillie Langtry died at her home in Monaco in 1929. Late in life she summed up her remarkable existence:

"In life I have had all that I really wanted very much: a yacht, a racing stable, a theater of my own, and a lovely garden."

"Thou wilt shew me the path of life, in thy presence is fulness of Joy..."
 PSALM 16-11

HERE IS THE PATH

Childhood PLEASURES

"Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right."

A mother only has to glance at her child to know if his play is pure, or if it is leading to mischief. Our Father in heaven can as easily look on our hearts and judge our ways. "A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things."

Seek the Lord in his house, so that your heart will be right with God.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

To enable your children to learn

Communicating your values to others

Rev LARRY B. HALL
Associate Pastor
First United Methodist Church
Beginning school brings with it another beginning. It is then that children realize that other families, other adults, other children have values that differ from those that they claim as their own. One of the first behaviors that brings this fact home is the child's use of newly acquired words - some good and some bad. Now parents begin to ask, but what is a parent to do? At this stage children also begin the diluge of "My friends can do such and such. Why can't I?" Peer pressure begins in the elementary school years, increases in to junior high years and seems to avalanche in high school. Parents never appear more old fashioned, unreasonable, or without understanding than during these years from childhood to teen years. This is, of course, from the view point of the teenager. Parents recall their own experiences at this critical age level. Can you remember hearing "act your age; your not a little kid anymore"? Can you recall your parents saying "I think you're too young for that"? During this "terrible time", everything was and is in a state of confusion and frequently the opposing camps look as if real combat could break out at any moment. It sometimes does over matters which may be rather insignificant in later years. Parents can you recall what you thought and the way you felt when the shoe was on the other foot? Confusion about values is a part of the total confusion we experience during those often traumatic years from childhood to adulthood. At times this confusion becomes miserable. If you understand the expression "misery loves company" you can understand the reasons peer groups are so essential. In a peer group a person experiences affirmation! This does not mean that parents are always failing to affirm their children, but it does imply that in peer groups we experience and sometimes this experience is more valuable because it comes from those "in the same boat."

overabundant no matter how hard we try we always seem on the brink of blowing it. It seems as if your children and their friends are always calling into question everything we see as valuable and important - our views on politics religion, people, work, entertainment, even food! Parents, watch out, we can easily slip into the trap of thinking that because our children are so outspoken something must be wrong with our values. The art of remembering become crucial during these years. We as parents need to remember our own years when we tested the ground around us. What sometimes appears as a rejection of values may be a reinterpretation of them. Part of being human is testing and figuring out what something means. The process of passing on values to the next generation is never easy but the process will go much easier if we practice trusting a little more - from both directions. Parents trusting the child in their experimenting and testing. Children trusting their parents in their teaching of values learned from past!

Dying woman ignored by passersby

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — An old woman lay in the road dying of a heart attack. Rush-hour commuters slowed for a look. No one stopped. Bessie Glasco, 75, was short of breath. Her son-in-law pulled off to the side of Tennessee 96. Mrs. Glasco staggered from the car. The son-in-law, John Willard, and his wife, Magaline, Mrs. Glasco's daughter, waved for help but their frenzied flagging faded no one. When Franklin policeman Ewing Marberry Jr. arrived, they were hysterical.

"A motorist stopped me and told me there was a lady having a heart attack in the middle of the road but nobody would stop," Mayberry said Thursday night. "She was in the road when I got there — off by the curb, but people had to have seen her. Several cars passed me when I was giving her CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation). They slowed down and looked. Mayberry said he could detect no pulse on Mrs. Glasco when he got to her. He spent 20 minutes trying to revive Mrs. Glasco once he reached her at 5:03 p.m. Wednesday. She was to be buried today. "The highway was busy at the time because it was when everybody was going in to town and coming out from work," Mayberry said. "At first, when I was nearing the area, I thought the report was a joke. Traffic was like normal — busy. But once I got near the car, I could see her. "Others must have seen her, too. Just was no one stopped. They slowed down and looked but no one stopped. People acted like nothing was going on." Franklin Woodard, one of Mrs. Glasco's sons, said his mother had a history of heart problems and was on her way to a doctor in Nashville, just north of Franklin. "The daughter and son-in-law who were taking her to Nashville were hysterical when I got there," the officer said. "They said they'd been trying to flag somebody down but they couldn't find anybody. They said some people went by but wouldn't stop to help." The Willards tried to resuscitate the elderly woman. "I think she had been there 10 or 15 minutes before I got there," Mayberry said. "I think if somebody had gotten to her sooner, she might have had a chance." Of the estimated four million qualified nurses in the world, only 15 percent work in developing countries, where 66 percent of the world's population lives, according to Dr. Halfdan Mahler, director-general of the United Nations' World Health Organization.

Religion in the news

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Poland, William E. Schaefele Jr., says the fact that Pope John Paul II is from Poland indicates a strengthening of the church's position in that Communist country. But he adds the situation also makes for a time of touchy readjustments. "The struggle of the Polish church will continue but the presence of a Polish pope is more strengthening than usual," he told a meeting of the Council on Religion and International Affairs. "Church and state are going to have to find some kind of changed modus vivendi. Very possibly, there will be some concessions to the church, although they may be begrudging. But the church still will have to cope with the realities of Poland's policies and its geographic position (adjoining Russia)." Schaefele offered the analysis in a two-hour discussion with theologians, foreign affairs experts and church leaders. He noted that Polish Communist Party Secretary Edward Gierek has met with the pope, and that the pope has life-long, first-hand knowledge in dealing with Communist officials and in church resistance to atheism. The church has several principal demands, he said, including: —Some kind of legal status, which all churches in Poland now lack. —Some church access to the media. Polish radio and television are state controlled and the first time any church service was allowed on the air was at the installation of the new pope. —Availability to the church of paper and printing materials so it can put out its own literature. —Agreement from the state not to draft seminary students, giving them exemptions — now denied — parallel to those given students in state universities. In regard to the pope's coming visit to Poland, Schaefele observed that "certain brinkmanship" had gone on in the negotiations, eventuating in a compromise. The pope had wanted to go in mid-May on the 900th anniversary of the martyrdom of the nation's patron saint, St. Stanislaus, whom legend says was beheaded for challenging the authority of the king. "The symbolism of that is not lost on anybody in Poland today," Schaefele said. "Poles think of it as a challenge to secular authority, which accounts for the government's resistance to that particular visit." He added, "I'm sure the pope will not remain silent about St. Stanislaus even if it comes late." Noting that the Polish church involves 95 percent of the people, has always been at the forefront of Polish nationalism and has fought vigorously to retain its prerogatives, Schaefele added: "The church is not about to disappear. It cuts across a complete cross-section of the people, old and young, workers and intellectuals. Communist party officials take their children to the back door to be baptized. They just don't go to church themselves."

Bird leads Indiana State rout

Sycamores top Sooners

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer
In a word, it was the Bird. Larry Bird, Indiana State's high-flying All-American, carried the soaring Sycamores into the championship game of the NCAA Midwest Regional tournament Thursday night at Cincinnati.

Bird, college basketball's Player of the Year, wowed a record Ohio crowd of 17,252 at Riverfront Coliseum with his magnificent all-around skills, leading the unbeaten and top-ranked Sycamores to their 31st victory of the season, a 93-72 rout of No. 16 Oklahoma.

"He is one heck of a player," marveled Oklahoma Coach Dave Bliss. "You can't judge him unless you play against him or see him in person." Bliss came, he saw and he was convinced.

The Birdman of Indiana State destroyed the Sooners with a characteristic performance — 29 points, 15 rebounds and five assists.

The Sycamores will go for victory No. 32 Saturday against fifth-ranked Arkansas in the Midwest Regional championship game.

The Razorbacks beat 13th-rated Louisville 73-62 in the opening semifinal game of the Midwest Regional at Cincinnati.

The West Regional semifinals also were completed Thursday night as second-ranked UCLA and No. 6 DePaul advanced to Saturday's final at Provo, Utah.

UCLA used a devastating 50-point second-half in crushing No. 12 San Francisco 99-81 and DePaul defeated No. 10 Marquette 62-56.

Semifinal games will be played tonight in the other two regionals.

In the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C., No. 8 Syracuse, 26-3, faces No. 14 Penn. 23-5, and 17th-ranked St. John's, 20-10, meets 18th-rated Rutgers, 23-8.

And in the Midwest Regional at Indianapolis, it will be No. 19 Toledo, 22-7, against fourth-ranked Notre Dame, 23-5, and seventh-ranked Louisiana State, 23-5, vs. No. 3 Michigan State, 22-6.

The regional winners will advance to the national semifinals at Salt Lake City next weekend.

"They (Indiana State) are a good basketball team, but he (Bird) makes them a very good basketball team," said Bliss after watching helplessly as the omnipresent Bird swooped all over and around the defenseless Sooners.

Bird's six points keyed a 13-4 burst near the end of the first half that put Indiana State in command 45-37 at intermission. Despite his impressive show, Bird underscored Indiana State's team approach.

"I just try to play a team game," he emphasized.

Carl Nicks added 20 points for Indiana State, while Ray Whitley topped Oklahoma, 21-10, with 24 points.

All-American Sidney Moncrief guided Arkansas to its 14th consecutive victory and 25th triumph in 29 games this season. Moncrief collected 27 points, including seven when the Razorbacks broke open the game with an 11-2 burst in a three-minute span of the second half for a 66-58 lead.

Just prior to that surge, the onrushing Cardinals appeared to have the momentum. They had overcome a 51-34 deficit and forged ahead 56-55.

"Those six or seven minutes in the second half seemed like an eternity to me," said a relieved Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "All of a sudden they got momentum and played like champions."

But then Moncrief and his teammates regained their poise, and it was they who played like champions — and made Louisville, 24-8, "ex-champions."

U.S. Reed added 18 points for Arkansas, while freshman center Scooter McCray was high for Louisville with 14.

Guards Ray Hamilton and Brad Holland triggered UCLA's high-scoring second half that carried the racehorse Bruins past San Francisco.

Lobos level Harvesters

HEREFORD — Levelland's David Bulls struck out 11 Pampa Harvesters here Thursday afternoon to lead the Lobos to a 13-2 pasting of Gray County's entry in the Deaf Smith Invitational Baseball Tournament.

A scratch single by Richard Wuest in the first inning and Rick Dougherty's run-scoring triple in the third were the only Pampa hits off Bulls, who simply threw his fastball past the Harvester hitters on a cold day for baseball.

Pampa's pitchers, on the other hand, wound up pitching batting practice for the Lobos.

Starter John Davis, whose only previous appearance resulted in a one-hit victory over Borger, lasted just one-third of an inning. When he left in favor of reliever Mark Qualls, the Lobos had three hits, a walk and three runs.

Qualls, a sophomore making his first appearance of the season, fared slightly better. Giving up a walk, a sacrifice fly and a base hit, he got Pampa out of the first inning with a 5-1 deficit.

Wuest had scored Pampa's run in the top of the first by singling, stealing second and coming home on first baseman Tim Nichols' error.

The second inning was scoreless, but Pampa's lone run in the third — provided by Dougherty's triple — was hardly enough to keep the Lobos at bay.

Levelland opened a barrage of singles and a double by shortstop Robert Leaks to push across six runs in its half of the third. The Lobos added two runs on a pair of hits in the fourth and held Pampa in the top of the fifth to claim the victory via the 10-run rule.

The Lobos wound up with 13 hits, 11 of them singles. Tom Bays led the way with three base hits and a pair of RBIs. Rocky Lawless, David Bulls and Brett Long all had two hits for Levelland, which played Dumas at 1:15 this afternoon in second-round action.

The loss sends Pampa directly to the consolation game Saturday morning at 10:15.

In other first-round games Saturday, Caprock bombed Borger 10-0 and Hereford outslugged Canyon 15-8. Borger and Canyon played at 10:15 this morning to determine Pampa's opponent in the consolation game, while Caprock and Hereford were to square off at 4.

Saturday afternoon's third place game is set for 1:15, with the championship contest slated for 4.

'Bama rallies to defeat A&M

HOUSTON (AP) — Alabama went 7:29 of the first half without scoring a point and trailed the Texas Aggies by 17 points at one juncture in the opening 20 minutes. So how did they feel at halftime?

"We felt good at the half because we knew we could come back," said Tide forward Reggie King, who paced a second half surge that vaulted Alabama to a 72-68 victory Thursday night in a quarter-finals game of the National Invitation Tournament in the Summit.

The Tide trailed the fast-starting Aggies 23-6 with 8:07 to go in the first half but cut A&M's lead to a 36-30 margin at the half and streaked into the lead early in the second half.

Alabama's moxy took the Tide into the dressing room with a good feeling and eventually advanced them to New York Monday night for their semifinal game against Purdue.

Alabama Coach C.M. Newton said "When we got down by whatever it was—I'm not much good at subtracting but I knew we were in trouble—we told our players to be patient, to keep their composure and to peck away at it, not try to get it all back at once."

The Tide, now 21-10, got the message.

"We've had to come from behind a lot this season," said Ken Johnson, who pumped in 20 points to lead Tide scorers. "We just kept on executing what we had been doing and the shots started falling."

Alabama outscored the Aggies 24-13 in the final 18 minutes of the half and took a 38-36 lead early in the second half. A&M fought back from an eight-point deficit and tied the game at 60-60 with 3:43 to play.

But King hit a baseline jumper at 3:27 to put Alabama ahead to stay and a four-point play by Eddie Phillips with 1:47 to go iced it for the Tide. Phillips hit a layup, was fouled by A&M's Steve Sylestine after completing the basket and made the two free shots.

"I'm sad," A&M freshman star Rudy Woods said. "The season wasn't supposed to end tonight. It was supposed to continue in New York Monday night. I can't tell you what happened. We just went into a lull. We've done that all season."

Woods led the Aggies with 20 points while Sylestine hit 11 and Vernon Smith and Tyrone Ladson scored 10 each. King, the Southeastern Conference player of the year, scored 18 and Phillips hit 17 for the Tide.

Government can't keep up with cattle prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cattle prices have risen so rapidly this winter that government experts and their printing presses haven't been able to keep up.

One Agriculture Department livestock expert admitted Thursday that "it's a hell of a confusing time" to be making predictions about what cattle and beef prices will do in the future.

For example, the February issue of a "livestock and meat situation" report said market prices of U.S. Choice steers were expected to average in the range of $59 to $61 per 100 pounds in the first three months of this year.

In the second quarter, it said, prices may average $60 to $62 per hundredweight.

But another report about the "poultry and egg situation" issued this month said in discussion prices that steer prices in Omaha, Neb., which are used as a guide, are likely to average $61 to $63 in the first quarter and then go to $64 to $66 per hundredweight in the second.

Richard Crom of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service, who is recognized as one of the agency's leading authorities on meat prices and trends, says those figures will be revised further.

The way it looks now, he told a reporter, is that Omaha steer prices in the first quarter — with only two weeks remaining — may average $64 to $65 per 100 pounds.

Crom, who said Omaha prices earlier in the week were crowding $70 per hundredweight, said it is extremely difficult to predict prices for the second quarter but suggested those might average in a range of $66 to $70.

A year ago, according to USDA figures, steer prices averaged less than $38 per 100 in the first quarter of 1978, meaning they have risen about 70 percent.

It all translates into higher prices at meat counters — for pork and poultry as well as beef.

Crom said some industry sources believe the cattle prices were inflated to some degree by speculation on the futures market, perhaps by as much as $10 per 100 pounds.

He said it was difficult to judge, but he did not think market speculation has resulted in that much of an increase.

Some in the business feel that it might be good psychology if cattle prices ease off so consumers don't switch significantly to other foods.

New stores to open in Pampa

Two new convenience food stores with gasoline pumps are being constructed in Pampa. Both are expected to be completed in roughly two months.

Vaughn Oil Co. has contracted Plains Builders of Amarillo to build a 1,200 square-foot store at 223 W. Brown. The store, to be named Lil' Speedy Mart, will cost an estimated $38,000. Along with self-service gas pumps it will feature card lock service, by which customers use credit cards to turn on pumps.

Wil-Mart Inc. is constructing a Wil-Mart store at the intersection of Hobart and Harvester streets. The 2,400 square-foot building is estimated to cost about $55,000.

State may be losers in plan

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Energy Advisory Council says the state will be on the losing end if the Carter administration's standby gas rationing plan is adopted.

Milton Holloway, the council's executive director, said Thursday that Texans would have to spend $116.4 million a month to purchase sufficient gas coupons from states that have extra ones.

The estimate was made by the U.S. Department of Energy, he said.

The council adopted a resolution Thursday opposing the proposed rationing plan, which is based on a national average.
