Governor testifies on nuclear accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh told Congress today that of all the actions he took during the Three Mile Island nuclear crisis, deciding against a mass evacuation was the toughest decision of all.

Testifying before the Senate nuclear regulation subcommittee, Thornburgh defended his decision to limit the evacuation of the central Pennsylvania area around the stricken power plant to pregnant women and pre-school children.

"I had to weigh the potential risks of Three Mile Island against the proven hazards of moving people under panic conditions," Thornburgh testified.

He said he would not have hesitated to evacuate the "entire area" had it ever appeared necessary. But, he added, "I could not in good conscience have ordered such a step with the facts at my disposal."

Thornburgh was the leadoff witness as the subcommittee stepped up its investigation into the incident at Three Mile Island, the worst nuclear power plant accident in the nation's history.

Both Subcommittee Chairman Gary Hart, D-Colo., and Thornburgh discussed confused and conflicting information on the accident. Thornburgh sharply criticized the handling of the crisis by Metropolitan Edison Co., the plant operator.

"The company issued statements in the early days that proved to be something less than accurate and its credibility as a reliable source of information eroded rather quickly," the governor said.

In other testimony, the president of General Public Utilities Corp., the parent company of Metropolitan Edison, told the panel the accident resulted from a series of "equipment malfunctions and human factors."

Herman Diekamp said that while it was too early to tell how long it would take to put the reactor back in service, cleaning it up and replacing the broken fuel elements "is technically manageable."

Also on the witness list was Walter Creitz, president of Metropolitan Edison.

Creitz acknowledged in an interview published Sunday that his company was not prepared for the accident, and did not realize how bad it was for two or three days.

Transcripts of closed-door Nuclear Regulatory Commission meetings during the height of the crisis — made public last week — showed that on March 30, the day Thornburgh urged an exodus of pregnant women and small children within five miles of the stricken plant, some senior NRC officials were leaning toward a full-scale evacuation.

Hart said the transcripts laid bare a "crisis in leadership" among federal regulators in handling the accident.

Congress is also expected this week to receive testimony from President Carter's legislation for a "windfall profits" tax on oil companies.

The plan would tax 50 percent of the extra revenues firms earn from a companion presidential decision that does not require congressional assent — deregulation of domestic oil prices.

Attacks are expected from both political flanks.

Congressional liberals, claiming deregulation will aggravate inflation by sending fuel prices soaring, are trying to devise ways to block the plan.

And Republicans and oil-state Democrats are unhappy with Carter's proposal to use some of the tax revenues for social and mass transit programs. They are expected to try to amend the tax to allow the money to be "pivoted back" into new oil company exploration.

A House-Senate Joint Economic Committee panel chaired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., holds a hearing on Carter's decontrol decision Wednesday. A House Commerce subcommittee has planned similar hearings for Tuesday and Wednesday.

SUNDAY'S BALMY WEATHER was cause enough for these young Pampans to enjoy a swing into spring at Central Park. The weather forecast for today and tomorrow called for continued mild conditions, which should make softball players, golfers, tennis buffs and winter-weary mothers happy.

Medical stew simmering

By JOHN PRICE
Pampa News Staff
First of two parts

Emergency medical technicians in Pampa and Amarillo, involved in a much-publicized dispute that stemmed from a recent accident at the Celanese Chemical Co. west of the city, are apparently cooling off and trying to reconcile.

"It was an unfortunate occurrence," said Mark King, director of Metropolitan Ambulance Service of Pampa. "I feel there will probably be an agreement met and our differences will be resolved. It's been put into an anger situation by the media involved, but I think it's more a matter of concern."

"That is totally right," agreed Betty O'Rourke, regional director of Emergency Medical Services (EMS), the Amarillo-based helicopter ambulance service that transports patients throughout the Panhandle. "With all of us here it's just a matter of solving any problems."

However, there are indications that some of the people involved in the dispute, particularly doctors at Highland General Hospital, remain a bit angry at what the Pampans consider to have been insolence and rudeness on the part of EMS staff members.

Events leading to the dispute occurred March 30, when an electric spark burned 10 workers at the Celanese plant. EMS was contacted to airlift the most seriously injured victims to Amarillo.

The victims were driven by Metropolitan Ambulance to Highland General, where they were treated and stabilized by a waiting team of doctors and nurses. They were then taken to the M.K. Brown Auditorium parking lot to await the arrival of the EMS helicopter.

The helicopter arrived, and then the trouble began. According to Mark King, the EMS staff wanted to take the patients back to the hospital for evaluation, although the Pampa people insisted the victims were prepared and should be immediately transported to Amarillo.

"Everybody over here was agreeable that the patients should be taken straight over, and the helicopter people were not agreeable to that," King said late last week. This difference of opinion led to a "debate," King said, which caused a considerable delay in evacuating the patients.

Finally Pampa doctors "communicated the need to transfer the people," King said, and shortly afterward the patients were loaded and flown to Amarillo.

By all accounts, the "debate" between the EMS staff and the Pampa people got quite hot. A letter to Betty O'Rourke from Tom P. Leggett, president of the Top O' Texas Emergency Medical Technicians Association, states "Ambulance personnel were the recipients of slurring remarks, the ability and authority of some doctors seemed to be questioned. One Pampa doctor received a direct threat."

According to King, "The controversy stems from complaints from the Pampa side to the EMS organization." King said he wrote a letter to O'Rourke "expressing our concern over the delay and the medical team questioning the authority of the Pampa doctors." The Amarillo broadcast media caught wind of the letter, King said, and the dispute went public.

Five injured in Sunday accident

CANADIAN — Five persons were injured Sunday morning in a two-car head-on collision in the 600 block of North 2nd Street here.

State troopers said Edward M. Frey, 19, of Canadian, was driving a westbound car when it collided with an eastbound vehicle driven by Tommie Denise Bishop, 19, of Canadian.

The accident occurred about 9:40 a.m. DPS Officer Harry Keyes said this morning that the drivers of the two vehicles knew each other and were apparently involved in "horseplay."

Bishop was listed in satisfactory condition this morning at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo. She was flown there by private plane following the accident, which hospitalized three other passengers in the Bishop vehicle.

LaVonda Durham, 23, suffered head lacerations and chest injuries and was listed in satisfactory condition today at St. Anthony's.

Two other passengers in the Bishop auto, Genevieve Zargosa, 16, and her sister, Letecia Zargosa, 14, were reported in satisfactory condition and improving this morning at Hemphill County Hospital. Frey was treated for minor injuries and released.

Officer Keyes said Frey told him Bishop "swerved toward him" and he swerved toward her. Frey reportedly told officers he then continued over to the left side of the highway, thinking that Bishop intended to switch lanes.

Bishop returned to her lane and the two vehicles collided, Frey reportedly said. All four passengers in the Bishop auto were on their way to work at Beef Country Restaurant when the mishap occurred.

Public hearing Tuesday

A public hearing on an ordinance extending city control over surrounding land will be conducted by the city commission when it meets at 3 p.m. Tuesday.

The commission is meeting later than the usual 9:30 a.m. time because Mayor Ray Thompson and City Manager Mack Wofford will be in Amarillo Tuesday morning for a Texas Municipal League function.

Ordinances annexing a planned industrial subdivision west of the city, and adopting a new set of regulations for the use and storage of explosives within the city limits, will be considered on final reading Tuesday afternoon by the commission.

Commissioners will consider authorizing the firm of Merriman & Barber to prepare plans and specifications for an annual street maintenance program, and will hear a staff recommendation concerning the purchase of three half-ton trucks and two sedans.

In addition, authorization of a grant application and an amendment to the city's health insurance contract concerning maternity benefits will be considered at the meeting.

Scientists working on Skylab's re-entry

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What goes up must come down. And if it weighs 85 tons, gently, it's hoped.

Yet man launched Skylab, an 85-ton space laboratory, in 1973 and left its destiny to the sun and the winds and to scientists' brains, figuring they'd have an answer when it was time to land.

It is, and they don't.

"We're still working hot and heavy seven nights a week," reports Dr. Marshall Kaplan, a professor of aerospace engineering at Penn State University who has been hired by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to help find a quick solution.

"I've been as busy as a beaver," he said in an interview. "We're anxious. We're trying to anticipate all the situations. A lot of things can happen at the end."

The end, according to NASA, is the latter part of June when Skylab is expected to tumble out of orbit and into a blazing dive on a collision course with Earth.

"The bird is coming down relatively fast," reports Larry Edwards, manager of Skylab studies for NASA in Washington.

"The only thing that can be said with any confidence right now is that it's between plus and minus 50 degrees of latitude, which extends up into Canada and down almost to the tip of South America.

"Between those limits it can come down any place. And we can't predict where until the final day."

Actually, the $2.3 billion spacecraft will begin breaking up about 60 miles above the Earth's surface. About 500 pieces — half weighing over 10 pounds with the biggest about 5,000 pounds — will shower an area 3,000 miles to 4,000 miles long and about 50 to 100 miles wide, according to Edwards.

He said the pieces of debris are expected to land about eight to 10 miles apart, and it's hoped they'll strike water, which makes up about three quarters of the Earth's surface.

And if they don't?

"The probability of a single casualty is one in 150," figures Kaplan. "It's expected to crash somewhere between the 50th parallels where 95 percent of the world's population is located. Moscow is the only major capital in the world that's not in its path."

Edwards, too, says it's possible the predicted re-entry will be across a densely-populated area, perhaps Europe. He concedes there are recognized hazards. But he says NASA doesn't think they're very great.

According to both men, scientists originally expected the spacecraft to remain aloft into the 1980s. By that time, scientists figured, refinements in the space shuttle program would make it possible to boost it up to a higher orbit where it could enjoy extended life.

Instead, according to Edwards, "solar activity, known as sun spots, was more active than expected, causing the atmosphere to rise up further. This in turn made more drag, speeding up Skylab's decay."

Kaplan, a private pilot, spends his nights with three assistants trying to better understand the spacecraft's behavior as it orbits the earth 190 statute miles away — it's lifespan on each trip being shortened by the ever-increasing atmospheric drag.

Most of the time, he says, is spent modeling the dynamics and motion of Skylab through computer simulations. He's also working on a computer-generated animation of its motion — "like a Walt Disney cartoon to demonstrate what we think is happening up there."

Some 1,000 miles away, scientists at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., also are studying the spacecraft as it logs the final laps of its fatal journey.

"We're still in the midst of developing the whole scheme of things," reports Herman Thomason, director of the center's systems analysis and integration laboratory. "We have quite a ways to go yet."

Each week, the North American Air Defense Command provides NASA with the latest Skylab fixes and with updated predictions on when it will come down.

The 83-foot-long space station orbits the Earth 16 times daily, passing over both heavily and sparsely populated areas.

The scientists hope to coax it down over either water or uninhabited land by altering, at the last moment, the amount of orbital drag. Increasing the drag will bring it in faster, decreasing it, slower.

There is still some thruster power on board the dying space ship, enabling NASA personnel at the Johnston Space Center in Houston to control, to some extent, its orientation or angle of flight — and thus the drag.

"But we can't do anything until the last couple of days," explained Kaplan. "And we don't have much to play with."

"If it works, it's probably going to be because we were lucky — that we had enough gas left."

"Say at the end, NORAD tells us it's headed for a populated area."

"We'd fire the thrusters on board to cause it to tumble, like a badly-thrown football. That would actually double its drag, causing it to come in earlier. What we're trying to do is reduce the 150-to-1 odds to something smaller."

"We have a tentative plan, but we have a lot of refinements to make. And we don't have a whole lot of time left to make them."

More government control

The city commission of Pampa is now considering extending city control over development of land within five miles from the city limits.

Any person who owns land within this five mile limit should plan to attend the public hearing on this proposed ordinance so that you might express your opinion on the matter before the city tells you what your opinion will be.

The meeting will be conducted by the city commission at the city hall, at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, April 24.

Iranian future remains cloudy

That plebiscite in Iran was obviously something less than a fair test of popular support for the Islamic republic espoused by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Balloting procedures were such that, in the words of one Iranian, "It would take a lot of courage to cast a negative vote."

In some locations, voting was conducted under the baleful gaze of local Islamic clergymen and members of the rightly feared revolutionary committees. Unquestionably, this sort of direct intimidation skewed the plebiscite's outcome. The final vote in favor of the republic may exceed 97 percent, a figure suspiciously characteristic of the kinds of "elections" held in Communist states.

This is not to suggest Iranians would have rejected the idea of an Islamic republic in a free election. Most of what we know of the Iranian revolution so far indicates that a working majority of Iranians indeed favor a republic guided by Islamic law, as revealed in Islam's holy book, the Koran. Regrettably, the ayatollah and his fervent followers were unwilling to risk the relative embarrassment of, say a 60 or 70 percent mandate rather than one near-unanimous endorsement they claim.

But whatever the doubts about the probity of this electoral "choice," the real questions for Iranians remain largely unresolved. What exactly is an Islamic republic and what charges will this new form of government impose on Iran's 36 million citizens? And how many of the social and economic changes instituted by the shah will be repealed?

Iran's women will want to know whether they are to be disenfranchised and relegated to the status of chattel, the state whence the shah freed them during the 1960s.

Iran's farmers will want to know whether the shah's land reforms are to be voided in favor of restoring the vast landholdings of the Islamic clergy.

Iran's religious and ethnic minorities are no doubt nervously awaiting word of their fate under an Islamic republic. Indeed, some Kurdish and Turkomen tribesmen have taken up arms in an effort to win at least limited autonomy from the central government in Tehran.

The answers to these and other significant questions are unknown, partly because Iran's new constitution is being drafted in secret by the ayatollah's hand-picked committees. And, of course, the Iranian people have not been consulted on the provisions of this fundamental document.

How majority rules

It's an old story, reading like an Aesopian fable, but the example is as pertinent today as it was 20 or more years ago when it first was published.

The concept it shatters is the unquestioned reliance on majority rule, as just, fair, equitable and, of course, moral.

Here is the story told by Frank B. Keith, a teacher:

On a table in the foyer of a small school stood a beautiful decoration for the annual open house. It consisted of an elaborate arrangement of wax fruit and dried flowers.

One day it was noted that the grapes in the display were disappearing rapidly. A quick check revealed they were providing free after-lunch chewing gum for the students.

The student leaders were assembled and given the project of raising among the 90 students the nine dollars necessary to replace the grapes.

The student body split on the question of who should pay for the grapes. One group thought those who took the grapes ought to confess and pay. The other group wanted everyone to pay, arguing that this would be a good lesson in honesty for everyone, especially those who had seen grapes taken but had done nothing about it. Further, they doubted that the dishonest would confess anyway. After all, if anyone were dishonest enough to take the grapes, he'd probably lie about it rather than confess. Besides, 10 cents wouldn't really hurt anyone.

When this matter came to a vote in one class of 30 students, 16 thought all should pay and 14 thought the grape eaters only should have to pay.

Informal investigation later revealed that those who voted for everyone to pay were themselves grape eaters (or controlled by grape eaters), whereas all others voted that grape eaters only should pay.

Zoning undermines private initiative

By BERNARD H. SIEGAN

In 1975 the California Supreme Court (in HFH, Ltd. v. Superior Court) decided that an owner could not obtain compensation for the loss in value to land caused by a zoning change. The case involved a zoning amendment that reduced the value of the land by more than 80 percent, from $400,000 to $75,000. The opinion noted that the decision did not determine whether a landowner is entitled to compensation if a zoning regulation removes virtually all the property's value.

The court recently decided this question in Aguin v. Tiburon, holding (6 to 1) that a landowner could not recover compensation even when all land value is eliminated. The decision disapproved a 1976 appeals court opinion upholding such recovery. Instead it ruled that the only remedy available in these circumstances is invalidation of the ordinance.

This decision allows municipalities near unlimited discretion in zoning matters, enabling them to severely restrict land without fear that they will have to compensate the owner for the loss sustained. No matter how confiscatory a zoning ordinance is, the most a municipality risks (in addition to costs of defence) is the possibility that a court will strike it down — hardly a significant deterrent.

The court's principal explanation for the decision is that the threat of compensation would hamper municipalities in exercising zoning powers. It expressed concern that if a locality were liable for damages, community planning would grind to a halt or deteriorate; municipalities would be discouraged from implementing strict planning measures in favor of less stringent, more traditional, and fiscally safe ones.

The Court's Mission

The justices may be correct about the importance of keeping urban planning uninhibited, but they are not endowed with any special competence in this field. Public planning and regulation is highly controversial, presently under attack from a host of prominent political and academic figures. Our economic system is based largely on private, not public, endeavors, and the two are often incompatible. Thus it is widely believed that land use planning and regulation in California has limited competition, stifled productivity and innovation, and markedly increased housing prices. Consequently, limiting planners' prerogatives may do more good than harm.

The opinion does not consider the shortcomings of planning or the advantages of unhampered private initiative. Given the selective nature of its inquiry, the court reached the most likely conclusion. Nor was its analysis conducted within the context of preserving liberties, which is, after all, a primary function of the judiciary. Courts are not legislative bodies responsible for augmenting the authority of the state. Their constitutional mission is to protect the individual and corporation from the might and power of government. This is the governmental branch that aggrieved parties must look to for vindication of their rights.

Such learning is not novel to the California Supreme Court. When deciding criminal cases, or civil matters involving political and intellectual liberties, the court has shown great concern for the protection of individual and corporate freedoms — sometimes evoking strong criticism for this position. In these instances it gives the benefit of the doubt to liberty rather than authority. Why should property owners not be entitled to similar consideration? Both the U.S. and California constitutions are no less protective of property rights, each containing specific guarantees against deprivation without compensation.

Relief limited to invalidation of an ordinance is not an effective means for securing property rights. An aggrieved owner who contemplates filing a suit must be prepared for a costly and long struggle that may end at the highest appellate level. Complainants will have to continue paying taxes and possibly interest on a mortgage while the proceedings are pending, which may be months, or more likely, years. If a proposed development is delayed, it may in time become unfeasible because of changes in market and/or mortgage conditions. If the locality loses, it can still rezone the property in a manner highly detrimental to the owner. In filing suit an owner or developer must consider that the local officials might not take kindly to this litigation.

Even when the facts are favorable, the larger or most affluent owners may not find such litigation a reasonable business risk. The costs and uncertainties would effectively bar most smaller owners or developers from filing suit. Many owners accordingly will decide to live with the restrictions perhaps in the hope of ultimately persuading the zoning authorities to change their position. Such an outcome seriously reduces the meaning and effectiveness of the constitutional provisions. Not only are owners harmed, but so are the numerous persons who benefit from the use and development of the land.

Municipalities faced with the possibility of compensating landowners for confiscatory zoning can be expected to observe the minimal rights of owners. The planning and regulatory process would have to recede to that extent. This is at most a very small price to pay for the maintenance of constitutional government.

IN WASHINGTON

It's up to us

WASHINGTON (NEA) - President Carter, confronting his twin nemeses of energy and inflation, has in effect adopted the old Pogo line: "We have met the enemy and he is us."

That is hardly a message of cheer and comfort, and White House political advisers are acutely aware of the fate traditionally reserved for the bearer of bad news. Yet despite the risks, Carter has opted for bluntness.

By every available measure of public opinion, most Americans still perceive the energy crisis as a figment of the oil companies' imagination — a sinister plot to manipulate supplies and drive up prices.

Not so, the president says. The crisis "is real," and it consists of a dangerous dependence on foreign oil that has been brought about by our own excesses and wastefulness. There is no quick cure, and the medicine prescribed for eventual amelioration is bitter indeed: "Each one of us will have to use less oil and pay more for it."

There is no point sugar-coating the pill. The only way this nation can "use less oil" is to accept, however grudgingly, a decline in our present standard of living — a proposition which runs directly counter to every impulse of the American character.

To "use less oil" means to drive smaller cars less often at slower speeds. It means colder homes and public buildings in winter, hotter ones in summer. It means, in short, some real discomfort.

And for all of this, we will have to pay more — a lot more — and do so indefinitely. There is no light at the end of the tunnel, no halcyon day ahead when energy will again be cheap and plentiful.

Which means, of course, that steadily rising fuel prices which have contributed so heavily to the overall surge in inflation will continue to drive up the cost of living. If inflation is going to be curbed in the months ahead, the restraint will have to come from something other than energy prices.

For most consumers, soaring food prices are the most evident and aggravating element of the current inflation. Yet here again, the Carter administration offers little hope of immediate improvement and places at least part of the blame for the problem directly on us and our eating habits.

Alfred Kahn, Carter's inflation czar, last week told a House hearing that most of "this recent terribly painful increase in food prices has been the result of competitive market forces, interference with which could only make matters worse."

Beef prices are soaring because demand far outstrips supply. Fruit and vegetable prices have gone up because bad weather limited supplies. And consumers themselves, by dining out more often and eating more and more pre-packaged "convenience" food, are driving up costs.

The surest way to curb inflation, Kahn clearly suggested, is to change our habits. Buy ham, not hamburger. Brown bag it at lunch instead of eating at the neighborhood fast food joint. Make our own stew instead of buying the already-prepared kind.

The message, in other words, is much the same as Carter's stern energy prescription. The government didn't cause the inflation in food prices, and the government cannot cure it. Time and good weather will ameliorate the supply problem to some extent, but the rest is largely up to us.

On both energy policy and inflation, Carter is under tremendous pressure to act in some flashy and dramatic fashion. "Don't just stand there — do something!" is the public clamor.

But the president has no magic wand. And what he is saying to all of us, no matter how unwelcome his message, is: "Do something yourselves!"

Quick and no fair using fingers: What do 2,243,000, 1,122,000, 3,329,000, 1,405,000 and 218,998,000 add up to?

Don't bother spending any more time on the answer. It's not a mega-number but a statistical profile of a people — Americans.

The first figure is the number of marriages recorded throughout the country in 1978 and it works out to 10.3 per 1,000 population. That is the highest since 1974, indicating that the decline in the marriage rate of recent years may be in the process of being reversed.

The second figure is the number of divorces for the same year. Again in terms of 1,000 population, that is a rate of 5.1, virtually unchanged from the year before and indicating that the long-term rise in the divorce rate may be leveling off.

The two sets of statistics are recorded in the latest edition of "Births, Marriages, Divorces and Deaths" issued by the national Center for Health Statistics. Taken together, they suggest that even in an era of freer lifestyles, there's still a lot to be said for wedlock — and a lot being done about it. Births during 1978 numbered 3,329,000, about the same as for 1977, giving hope that the population isn't as explosive as recently feared. But we're still a long way from the zero-growth society advocated by some population experts, since the year's live births outnumbered deaths by 1,405,000. The difference, plus immigration, brought the official U.S. population to 218,998,000 as of Jan. 1, 1979, a new high.

It figures. Keeping up with falling behind Labor Department statisticians have news for a significant segment of the U.S. population.

As of April 1, an urban family of four with an income of less than $6,700 will be categorized as poor. That is an increase of $500 over last year's income standard.

For a single person, the poverty level goes up from $3,140 to $3,400. Similar increases for statistical purposes were announced for households of other compositions.

It just goes to show you how it is with inflation. It costs more just to be poor.

Two more die in floods

By The Associated Press
Two persons, including a 4-year-old boy, drowned in Southeast Texas Sunday where swirling flood waters swamped wide areas of five counties hard hit by recent torrential rains.
Little Joel O. Cantu died Sunday afternoon at a Houston hospital after he was pulled from a rain-filled, unfinished swimming pool by his father. Fort Bend County authorities said.
Officers said the boy was peering over the edge of the pool when he slipped and fell.
A Porter man, Donald Edwin Brigham, 40, drowned Sunday when he fell out of a boat into the swirling waters of the flooding San Jacinto River. The boy was recovered Sunday afternoon.
The deaths brought to seven the number of weather-related fatalities since torrential rains began four days ago in South and Southeast Texas.

Three persons drowned in San Antonio Saturday when the car they were riding in was swept into a flood-swollen river. Two youths were killed in Houston. One was struck by a car Thursday as he was directing traffic in a flooded street, and the other victim was swept over a spillway into a flooded bayou Friday.
Many Southeast Texas residents filled sand bags and manned pumps Sunday in a last-ditch effort to protect their homes from the rising water in Liberty, Jefferson and Chambers counties.
Although the crests had passed, high water still plagued residents in Fort Bend County, Montgomery County and parts of Harris County.

The Neches River, already bursting at the seams from 12 inches of rain since Wednesday, rose as much as eight feet past flood stage Sunday in areas between Beaumont and Kountze in Hardin County.
The National Weather Service also warned that additional major flooding is likely in areas not flooded since 1917.
Water levels held steady around Conroe in Montgomery County, but southeast of the Sam Houston National Forest, the San Jacinto River continued to rise between Cleveland and Liberty. The weather service predicted it would crest three to four feet above flood stage Monday and stand through Tuesday.
Burt Bratcher of Montgomery County Civil Defense placed flood damage estimates at $100 million for Harris County and $50 to $70 million for Conroe, 50 miles north of Houston.

Almost all Houston area residents who scurried from their homes earlier in the week have returned, except in the areas just north and just south of Lake Houston in northeast Harris County, said Harris County deputy G.E. Moore.
Residents of areas near Pine Island Bayou, just northwest of Beaumont, still battled rising water from several large creeks. Water levels rose at the rate of one inch per hour Sunday. Flooding during the night Saturday left an additional 25 families homeless, bringing to the total of evacuated families to 150, according to Jan Ray, a spokesman for County Judge Ray Martin.

Tanker blast investigation resumes today

NEDERLAND, Texas (AP) — A safety inspection team resumed its investigation today into Thursday night's explosion that blew open the midsection of a Liberian tanker in the Neches River, killing two men.
The Coast Guard discontinued its search for a crewman who was seen moments after the blast, dangling from a rope over the side of the blazing ship. Other crewmen said the man couldn't swim.
The body of another crewman was recovered Friday morning on the deck of the splintered ship.
The 700-foot tanker Seagrave apparently was struck by lightning as it unloaded crude oil at a Sun Oil Co. dock.
"It's still under investigation," said Coast Guard duty officer Marvin Pontiff, "but lightning is as good a guess of what happened as any."
Besides the two killed, 32 persons were treated at area hospitals, 15 of them injured seriously enough to require hospitalization.
The explosion peeled back metal and caused a small portion of the 24,500 gallons on board to leak into the Neches River. The ship now is resting in about 40 feet of water.

Electronic marketing studied for wholesale meat industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — With rare exception, Americans for years have bought meat that has been neatly cut, packaged and arranged in refrigerated supermarket counters.
According to a report by the Agriculture Department, changes in the way meat is produced and marketed were major factors in the development of the supermarket, with the accompanying demise of small grocery stores where a customer told the "butcher" exactly what was wanted.
That development is outlined in a recent report to Congress about the feasibility of still another new way to market meat: use of electronic marketing in the wholesale trade.
The report, which was released last week by Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Small Business Committee, said wholesale meat "appears well-suited" for electronic trading, perhaps the next major change in the industry.
Smith and other critics contend that the nation's $37.5-billion-a-year wholesale meat industry is so huge and impersonal that opportunities exist for a relatively few big packers, brokers and food chains to manipulate prices.
A computerized system of marketing could help eliminate those opportunities by putting more buyers and sellers into direct contact with each other, he says.
The report included background on how the meat business developed from American colonial times when townspeople relied on retail butchers who bought cattle and hogs from nearby farmers, selling the meat the following day.

Then, in 1805, the beginning of commercial cattle feeding in Ohio enabled slaughtering to be separated from retailing as farmers drove their animals over the Appalachian Mountains to eastern seaboard cities and sold for slaughter.
Instead of buying live animals from farmers, retailers began depending on a new class of middlemen — slaughterers — for carcasses of beef and pork.
Another big development came in 1870 when refrigerated railroad cars made possible the slaughter of livestock nearer the farms where they were produced and then shipping carcasses to big city markets.
By World War I, slaughter by retail establishments had dropped to about one-fourth of the cattle and less than one-tenth of the hogs. But local slaughterers and "branches" owned by big nationally-known packing companies still were important sources of supply in the wholesale meat trade.
Other developments included the emergence of "independent meat wholesalers" who handled the output of smaller, independent western slaughterers, and the practice of dispatching refrigerated rail cars — and later trucks — along routes regularly to handle the output of small plants.

Cuevas recess at end

HOUSTON (AP) — Attorneys defending Ignacio Cuevas in his retrial on charges of capital murder during a 1974 escape attempt have had a three-day recess to find three missing witnesses. But the deadline ends today.
Defense attorney Will Gray last week asked State District Judge Miron Love for a recess until today to locate the witnesses, who were among hostages when three convicts took over a library at the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit in Huntsville in 1974. They have since been freed on parole.
"This will be the only delay. I expect you to have your witnesses here by then (Monday)," Love told Gray.
Gray replied "We have private investigators looking for them and we are sure we can have them here by Monday."

Gray has called four witnesses so far and says he wants eight more to testify.
Cuevas, the lone inmate survivor of the escape attempt, was convicted of causing the death of one of the hostages and sentenced to death in a 1975 trial. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a new trial because of a judicial error.
Two inmates, Fred Gomez Carrasco and Rudolph Dominguez, and two hostages, Julia Standley and Elizabeth Besedas, were killed in the escape attempt.
Four convicts and seven prison employees were held hostage during the 11-day siege, the longest in U.S. penal history.

Dear Abby

by abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I married George—a sweet, generous man with five grown children, all married with families of their own. My complaint: George and I have spent only six weeks alone since our marriage!

Whenever one of George's children considers a divorce, loses a job, or wants to save for a vacation, he (or she) and their kids move in with their father and me. We have to clean up after them, watch their kids and treat them like guests. I am sick of kids living with us for weeks and sometimes months at a time!

We have a large home, but we're far from rich, and when they're here our grocery bills are sky high. They've yet to contribute one dime.

George and I get along fine until the kids move in, then we argue all the time.

I love George, but if these free-loaders don't leave us alone, I'm leaving him. Any advice?

HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: It's obvious that George is a soft touch for his kids, so don't YOU be the heavy. (Let George do it.) Tell him that you are through being a pigeon for a flock of homing pigeons. Then prepare to (A) live with the ill you know or (B) fly to others you know not of.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you had a letter from someone who said the minute he opened his newspaper his nose started to run, his eyes watered and itched, and he went into a sneezing fit. You said he was probably allergic to the ink in the newspaper. You were right.

Years ago my son was being treated by one of the most highly regarded allergists in the country. After many tests it was discovered that he was allergic to newsprint. The doctor advised him to dry out the newspaper thoroughly in a warm (200 degree) oven before reading it. My son followed the advice, and it worked!

CHELMSFORD, MASS.

DEAR CHELMSFORD: Thanks for the tip. And if any of you readers out there try it, let this serve as a warning. DO NOT overheat the newspaper. It contains highly flammable material!

DEAR ABBY: I recently learned that my husband's grandmother was very much offended by the letter I wrote thanking her for her wedding gift. It seems that everyone in the family calls her "Nanna" but not being aware of this, I addressed her as "Mrs. Brown" in the salutation, and again in the body of the letter.

Abby, she never asked ME to call her "Nanna." In fact, I don't recall that she ever asked me to call her anything.

Quite frankly, since I have seen her only a few times, I thought the formal "Mrs. Brown" would be more appropriate—and anything more familiar would be a bit presumptuous.

Why can't people accept a thank-you letter and appreciate its sincerity and promptness without trying to find something wrong with it?

BUGGED IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR BUGGED: Some can. But not Nanna.

Dr. Lamb

by lawrence lamb m.d.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I need help in understanding a sexual problem that exists between my husband and myself. It might even save our marriage if I could gain a little insight. At present I'm contemplating either an affair with a long-time friend or a divorce or both.

My husband is 64 and I'm in my early 60s. For the last 20 years there's been a decreasing ability to function: sexually on his part and now no attempt at all is made. I've tried to be understanding but most of the time I just end up frustrated.

He won't see a physician. He is a heavy drinker and smokes two to three packs of cigarettes a day. I've tried to get him to give up these habits and told him that he would live longer and more pleasantly so we could enjoy our lives together but nothing works.

I can only conclude that he enjoys things the way they are which is to go to work, come home, start drinking and stagger off to bed. This means no home life for either of us and surely a shortened life span for him. What is a woman supposed to do in circumstances such as these?

DEAR READER — You're right about the effect on his life span. If he drinks as much as you say and smokes as much as you say, at 64 years of age he may not be around much longer to provide any form of companionship.

The excessive use of alcohol can significantly impair a man's sexual capacity. Alcohol doesn't make men better lovers. It usually decreases their objectivity so they don't realize how bad they are. People who drink often think they drive better under the influence when, in fact, they're traffic hazards.

Or they may think they do a dozen other things better. All of this is illusion. Tests have shown that most people under the influence of alcohol turn in substandard performances in almost all areas, including the sexual area.

When a couple is caught in a problem and only one of them is interested in doing something about it, that one should probably go to a physician and possibly see a psychiatrist or family counselor. By direct discussion it may be possible to work out a solution that will help in that specific situation.

You might look in the yellow pages of your telephone directory for alcoholism and see what organizations or facilities are available in your community and talk to them about your husband's problem. In a number of instances, the victim has great difficulty helping himself and many organizations can be very helpful to the other spouse caught in such a situation.

I am sending you The Health Letter, number 3-12, impotence, to give you general information on this problem since it's the primary concern to you. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Just keep in mind that impotence is a symptom. It can be caused by hormonal factors, alcoholism, neurological factors such as complications of diabetes, circulatory disorders and, of course, psychological factors. A good evaluation by a professional is often necessary to understand what's really going on.

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — We have hard water and my husband does not like a water softener. What in the world can I use to clean the glass shower doors and the molded glass fiber shower stall? I have tried ammonia, vinegar, toothpaste, liquid cleanser and nothing seems to help. — CONNIE

DEAR CONNIE — Have you tried electric dishwasher detergent? Do wear rubber gloves if you do. It should remove soap or mineral deposits and not harm the surface. Never use harsh abrasives or steel wool, but a nylon scrubber can be safely used on such materials. Automotive polish will add luster and preserve the finish but do not use on the floor of the shower or someone may slip and have an accident. — POLLY

Novels reprinted

Henry Green's "Blindness" looks to be the best first novel of the year, except that the year is 1926.

Until Viking reprinted "Blindness" (unavailable for 52 years), all nine novels by the man W. H. Auden called "the best English novelist alive" had been out of print in the United States — not surprising, perhaps, in a generation when "successful author" is synonymous with "savvy self-promoter."

Green told an interviewer, shortly before his death in 1973, "I write books but I am not proud of this any more than anyone is of their nails growing."

Henry Green was a pseudonym for Henry Vincent Yorke, a successful London industrialist who went to great lengths to hide his extracurricular activities — he allowed himself, for example, to be photographed only from behind.

In 1945, a reporter blew Green's cover and, soon after, this prolific writer stopped writing. Critics suggested that Green, who so loved to eavesdrop on his characters, feared, like the professional spy, being known himself.

"Blindness," a precocious performance, was published when Green was 20 and still at Oxford. It opens with the diary of John Hayes, a 17-year-old public school boy (British public schools are equivalent to U.S. private schools). John is a bright, vain, pretentious snob who wants to be a writer. Asked to submit a story to the school magazine, he laments, "There is a sense of degradation attached to appearing in print."

In another entry he reflects, "It sounds an awful thing to write, but I seldom meet anyone who interests me more than myself: my own fault I suppose."

John is clearly asking for it. Riding home for the holidays on a train, he is struck by a stone thrown through the window by a small boy. He loses his sight, forever. The accident has no significance, no compensations. Blindness is not a "dark tragedy." It is a tedious handicap, which gives him not a single advantage over the sighted — not even greater or deeper thoughts.

"Blindness" is the sharp, un sentimental story of a boy growing up. But it is not the best — and is perhaps the worst — of Green's novels. If only the other eight were available.

Englishwoman Barbara Pym wrote six extraordinary novels between 1950 and 1961. Her books were widely read in the '50s, but then she lapsed into relative obscurity, remaining silent for 16 years. Just a few years ago, her seventh novel was rejected as "old fashioned" by 21 publishers, including the one that had published her previous six books.

Then in January 1977, the "Times Literary Supplement" asked a number of eminent authors to choose the most overrated and underrated writers of the last 75 years. Barbara Pym won hands down in the latter category. Lord David Cecil called her "Excellent Women" "the finest example of high comedy to have appeared in England during the past 75 years." It wasn't long before Dutton reprinted the novel, which was first published in 1952.

The story is set in London in about 1952. The central character is Mildred Lathbury, a devout and dowdy spinster employed by the Society for the Care of Aged Gentlewomen. Mildred is one of the "excellent women," one of the "re-jected ones," always reliable in a crisis but never themselves part of the action.

Old West minus the folklore

NEW YORK (NEA) — On one occasion, John K. Hillers turned blue from the cold; on another he nearly died from a scorpion's bite. Working in Death Valley, Timothy H. O'Sullivan collapsed in the 1920s.

Carleton Watkins needed 12 mules to carry his equipment into Yosemite.

All this was routine for the men who opened up the American West, not by fighting Indians or shooting buffalo, not by railroading, ranching or farming, but by making photographs. Today their work is beginning to command a respect and attention it has long deserved, not only as history but as a singularly honest and revealing kind of art.

Examples can be seen at the Aron Carter Museum in Fort Worth, Texas, and the Daniel Wolf gallery in New York, among many other places. Last fall the Aron Carter mounted an exhibition, now on national tour, of photographs taken in the West in the second half of the 19th century. The prints had been prepared by William R. Current, from either original or copy negatives.

That show is now widely available in book form. "Photography And The Old West" is being published by Harry N. Abrams, Inc., in association with Aron Carter, at $19.95, with 172 photographs selected and printed by Current, and text by his former wife, Karen Current. A National Endowment for the Arts grant helped finance the project.

Don't expect to find the outlandish folklore of "Western" movies, books, short stories and television in "Photography And The Old West." Whether it is George Edward Anderson posing Mormon families, Alexander Forbes shooting cowhands, Will Soule making portraits of Indians or William Henry Jackson picturing the Yellowstone country, the emphasis is on a straightforward truth.

At the time, nobody felt the need to fictionalize or romanticize the West; it was romantic enough, and the adventure that the explorers, settlers and photographers were having surpassed fiction.

Writing about Forbes' pictures of cowboys, Mrs. Current later notes: "In contrast to their later movie counterparts, the cowboys in Forbes' pictures were casually fitting clothes of all sorts and descriptions. While some wear boots, many others have on ordinary shoes. A few tote guns, but the majority do not. They are rarely seen as tall and lean in the saddle, but rather as a motley assortment of men of all ages and descriptions.... This was the reality, and it can be seen in those hardened, stoic faces that look straightforwardly into the photographer's lens."

'Many women' stayed with Jesus

By Edith Deen
(Last of eight parts)

There were also many women there, looking on from afar, who had followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering to him," noted Matthew.

Mary Magdalene and the many other women at Jesus's crucifixion, burial and resurrection set an example for caring women everywhere — women who go forward without being asked to prepare food for the sick, call at the home of a family who has lost a loved one, stand at the graveside to comfort the sorrowing.

These women were blessed tenfold because they were among the first to understand the power of the cross and the wonder of the resurrection.

Simon of Cyrene, who picked up Jesus's cross and carried it all the way to Golgotha, was so helpful that he is memorialized for voluntarily performing a seemingly small but meaningful service to Jesus without complaining and without fanfare.

The women who walked all the way with Jesus knew that he needed their spiritual inspiration as well as Simon's physical support. Christ in his agony could not speak to any of them, but when he glanced up at them, he knew they cared deeply.

Like Simon, these women did not ask what they could do. But when the need arose, they voluntarily went forward and walked all the way to the cross.

These dedicated women tell us how to serve the sorrowing. They make us know that one's presence in a room of grieving loved ones can be a balm of peace.

Some of us put too little emphasis on thoughtfulness to the grief-stricken. Perhaps we do not know how best to show love to others or perhaps we get our priorities mixed up and turn to trivial pursuits.

Not until sorrow comes our way do we learn what caring friends and family can mean. Through them and with them we experience a real fellowship of love.

When Mary Magdalene hurried to the disciples to report the miracle of the resurrection, she carried with her the foundation of the New Testament church.

Without her and the women about her, the drama of the death and resurrection of Christ would not have been the same. Nor would the church have had such a solid base, such a congregation of believers.

Astro-Graph

by bernice bede osol

Things that have proven unproductive in the past will finally come to an end for you this coming year. Look forward to making strides in several new beginnings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Although you will wish to spend time on activities that don't include others today, this might become difficult because of duties you've neglected. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Associate with friends who are on the go and doing things, but be careful you don't try to impose your will. Go along with the wishes of the majority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll strive for high goals today and do a good job toward achieving them. However, should you err in some manner, don't try to blame anyone else.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You could come up with a clever and fresh approach to something, but it might not be so easy to convince others of your ideas. Do your own thing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Be wary lest you be drawn into a situation with strings attached. You could end up having to make good another's obligation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's to your interests to listen to the suggestions of your mate or associates today. Don't push too hard to have your way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Both your physical and mental energies are at a high point today, and this should be very productive. Know, however, when to stop.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be anxious to do fun things today, and yet large groups could unnerv you. Share your time with a few intimate friends with whom you feel comfortable.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It gives you enjoyment to whip the house into shape today that's great, but don't know the family just because they don't have the same enthusiasm.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is an excellent day to catch up on visiting or correspondence, so long as you don't spill the beans about something not meant for another's ears.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be a go-getter in things that tend to benefit you materially or financially today. In your eagerness you could get taken, so be careful.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Set your own pace today. Work toward serving your personal interests. You won't be able to please others, so don't even try.

Spurs take commanding lead in NBA series

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Doug Moe isn't taking anything for granted. "Yeah, we're in the driver's seat," said Moe, coach of the San Antonio Spurs, "but we can still have an accident."
Or to put it another way, a 3-1 lead in a best-of-seven playoff series — even with the home-court advantage for two of the three possible remaining games — is no guarantee of victory.

The Washington Bullets, who snapped Atlanta's home-court winning streak at 17 games Friday night, did it to the Hawks at home again Sunday, beating them 120-118 in overtime. They'll try to close out the series at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., Tuesday night.

"This loss might deflate a normal team, but the Hawks aren't a normal team," said Washington forward Bobby Dandridge, who scored 31 points Sunday. "You don't know what to expect from them. They are the kind of team that you just can't relax on."

Seattle took a 3-1 lead over the Los Angeles Lakers with a 117-115 decision Sunday at the Forum in Los Angeles behind 53 points from guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson, who have plagued the Lakers all series.

The home team has won every game so far in the other Western Conference semifinal, with the Phoenix Suns grabbing a 2-1 lead with a 108-93 rout of the Kansas City Kings on Sunday. That series resumes Wednesday in Kansas City.

George Gervin, the two-time NBA scoring champion, netted 32 points to lead San Antonio past Philadelphia. At the other end of the floor, the Spurs' Larry Kenon limited Julius Erving, who had scored 39 points in the Sixers' only series victory Friday night, to just 15 points on 6-for-17 shooting.

Mike Green's jumper snapped a 90-90 tie with 7:13 remaining and the Spurs led the rest of the way. Gervin had 12 points in the final period, including a pair of free throws at the buzzer after Philadelphia had closed to within one.
Dandridge was the hero of the Bullets' victory, scoring 15 of his points in the final period including a running one-hander that tied the game at 107-107 with seven seconds to play.

Atlanta guard Eddie Johnson as the goat, twice. He wasted too much time dribbling the ball and the Hawks were unable to get off a shot before the buzzer ending regulation play.

PHS sports schedule

A light schedule is on tap for this weekend for the Pampa High athletic teams.

The first action of the week comes Tuesday when the baseball team, 16-3, will go to Amarillo to take on the Caprock Longhorns in the first game of the second half race in District 3-AAAA.

The Harvesters won the first-half crown last Friday with a 6-5 win over Amarillo High. All the Harvesters need to do now is either win or tie for the second-half to gain the playoff spot.

After that, nothing else is scheduled until the weekend. On Friday will be the boys golf and track regional meets in Lubbock. Also, the baseball team will play host to Tascosa at Optimist Park.

In those regional meets, Barry Terrell of the Harvesters, who finished second in the district golf competition will be entered. Also, Kyle Bradford will be in the track competition after winning the high jump at 6-6.

Saturday's schedule calls for a continuation of the regional meets at Lubbock along with two junior high track meets.

The junior high boys track team will be involved in district competition at Plainview. Meanwhile, the junior high girls track team will be in district action, too. They will be in conference action in a meet at Borger.

Tom Watson wins Tournament of Champions

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP) — His current credentials are in order, but Tom Watson is not yet ready to claim the No. 1 spot in world golf.

"Jack (Nicklaus) is still the man to beat," Watson said after scoring an impressive, front-running, 6-shot victory Sunday in the prestigious Tournament of Champions, an elite event that brings together the winners of PGA Tour titles from the past 12 months.
"He's the greatest player," Watson said. "He's not playing very well right now and I know he must be burning inside. But he'll be back. He's too great a player not to."

Watson, a dedicated student of the game, mentioned some of the greats of the past: Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and the more current stars, including Gary Player.

But he came back to Nicklaus. "Jack's record is fantastic," Watson said.
Since the start of the 1977 season, however, Watson's has been better.

In that period, Nicklaus has won six American tournaments and the 1978 British Open. Watson has 11 American tournaments, including the Masters, and the 1977 British Open. For the period, Nicklaus has won $573,740, Watson $903,048. And Watson won the coveted Vardon Trophy, Player of the Year honors and the money-winning title in each of the last two seasons, the only man to win all three in consecutive seasons.

But the 29-year-old Watson is adamant. "I have a while to go before I can consider myself a great player," he said, then grinned and added: "But it's sure sweet right now. It's an honor to be called the No. 1 player. At times, I feel capable of playing and beating everybody. At times I don't."
"I haven't been here long enough to be called a great player. The test of great golf is over a number of years. It's a man's record over 10 years or 15 that makes him a great player. I haven't done that yet."

But he was easily the outstanding man the last two years and now has solid claim to that position this season. He reeled off a decisive string of 3 consecutive birdies on the back side at the La Costa Country Club that spiced a final round of 70. He scored his second wire-to-wire victory of the year with a 275 total, 13 under par.

Bruce Lietzke, who has played in this event twice and been runner-up both times, got a share of second with a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole. That tied him with Jerry Pate at 281.

Each shot 73 Sunday.
Gary Player of South Africa was next at 68-282.

Houston takes SWC golf title

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Fred Couples' eagle putt slid a foot past the cup on the final hole, but his birdie was good enough to clinch a tie for medalist honors with Southern Methodist's Payne Stewart and pace his Houston teammates to their sixth straight Southwest Conference golf title.

The Cougars never trailed in the three-day tournament that ended Sunday at Briarwood Country Club.

Both Couples and Stewart posted sub-par scores on the final rain-soaked round to card identical five-under-par 211 totals for the 54-hole tournament.

However, Stewart, who also missed an eagle putt on 18 that would have won the crown outright, nipped Couples on the first hole of a sudden death playoff to win the invitation to the Colonial National Invitation tournament next month in Fort Worth.

Stewart trailed by a stroke going into Sunday's round. But he fired a two-under-par 70 while Couples needed a birdie on the final hole to post a 71.

"The key to the round was 26 putts," said Stewart, a senior from Springfield, Mo. "If I hadn't putted so well, I could have had a 77 pretty easy."

Monday's baseball roundup

A's 7, Angels 6

The Angels saw their 10-game winning streak snapped as the Athletics grabbed a 7-6 decision. Murphy drew a walk from loser Dave LaRoche and stole second base to set up Essian's game-winning hit for the A's Dave Heaverlo, the third Oakland pitcher, gained the victory. The A's had tied the game 6-6 in the seventh inning on Dave Revering's two-run double.

Orioles 6-7, Brewers 2-3

Doug DeCinces and John Lowenstein hit solo home runs and Ken Singleton contributed a two-run single as Baltimore defeated Milwaukee in the first game of their doubleheader.

Moos Haas yielded the homers in the second inning and Singleton connected in the third following a single by Dave Skaggs and a double by Al Bumby.

The Orioles won the second game as DeCinces and Singleton smashed solo homers and Eddie Murray knocked in four runs.

9acs

Red Sox 6, Royals 0

George Scott drove in four runs with two singles and Mike Torrez hurled a four-hitter to lead Boston over Kansas City. Fred Lynn had a double and a pair of singles in extending his hitting streak to 11 games and Rick Burleson belted a homer for the Red Sox.

Yankees 3, Rangers 1

New York beat Texas as Graig Nettles belted a homer and three singles and drove in three runs. Ron Guidry pitched a six-hitter. After Bucky Dent brought the Yankees from behind with a two-run single in the second inning, Nettles slammed a two-run homer off Doc Ellis, in the third and added a run-scoring single off ex-teammate Sparky Lyle in the seventh.

Dodgers 9, Giants 2

Don Sutton passed Sandy Koufax on the Dodgers' career strikeout list, fanning 12 Giants in a 9-2 victory over San Francisco. Sutton, half of whose strikeouts Sunday came on called third strikes, now has a career total of 2,402, 17th on the major league's all-time list. Koufax has 2,396.

Don Drysdale is the only Dodger with more career strikeouts, 2,486, and he is tied with Sutton in career shutouts, 49.

Sutton, 2-2, scattered six hits, did not walk a batter and was working on his 50th shutout until the sixth inning when the Giants scored an unearned run on a fielding error by Joe Ferguson in right. Sutton also yielded a solo homer to Jack Clark in the seventh.

Mets 4, Phillies 2

New York ended a string of 26 scoreless innings when Joel Youngblood led off the eighth with a solo homer, and newcomer Frank Taveras drove in the winning run with a single that snapped a six-game Mets losing streak.

Youngblood's homer came off lefty Steve Carlton, who had given up only two previous hits in the game, and it ignited a four-run eighth-inning rally.

Taveras, traded to the Mets last week by Pittsburgh for shortstop Tim Foli, also aided the Mets in the sixth with a clutch play at short on a hard grounder by Jose Cardenal into the hole. With two out and two on, Taveras' throw to first just beat Cardenal.

Astros 3, Pirates 2

While Taveras was a hero of the Mets game, shortstop Foli
