Paint Creek Supt. says school is in good shape

With all of the talk, interest and concern about consolidation swirling about in the county, Paint Creek ISD Superintendent, Don Ballard, speaking for himself and his school board, says, "The 'C' word is not even in our vocabulary."

Dispelling some of the rumors and answering some of the questions he and the board have been fielding from the public, Ballard said in a recent interview that the school is doing well, is up and going strong, the doors are open, and there are no plans to consolidate.

"We know that we are a small school, and as such, we are in good shape, academically and financially," Uniquely, with a district that consists of 237 square miles of ranch and farm land and a small population, the school is basically made up of transfer students from Haskell and Stamford, who are there by choice. environment than in a larger city," he Only about 30 students live in the district. The last school year ended with a total of 97 students. A total of 115 students registered Monday for the new school year just beginning.

One of the school's assets is in being able to provide more one-onone time with a teacher for students who may need it to excel, Ballard said. All required subjects are still taught, and all special programs directed by certified faculty. Three vocational courses offered are home economics, agriculture science and computer. Theater arts and art are also offered, as well as extras such as UIL participation and all sports, including baseball, football, tennis, track and golf.

Ballard said that the rumor that only those with special needs attend the school is not a fact. "Many good, normal kids just function and do better out here in a small school said. Special education enrollment is about 12%, with whatever services they need provided.

Ballard says one the biggest myths they hear is that since the power plant closed, the school will close too.

"The power plant did close and hurt us to the extent of losing 30% of the tax evaluation," he said. "However, we still have a $34 million tax evaluation on the plant. The $1.45 tax base was raised to $1.50 last year, and that increased our state funding, making up the difference we lost from the plant closing."

"We looked at a balanced, one and a half million dollar budget this year, and we expect that it will be balanced next year. We have just purchased a new bus, (we run four bus routes), and have added several new teachers," Ballard said.

PRISON WARDEN JILL WATSON

New warden sounds positive note for jail

By Mary Kaigler

Jill Watson, warden at the Rolling Plains Regional Jail and Detention Center, who started her new job here on June 15, says her experience here so far has been absolutely wonderful, and that she has been impressed by the staff and how committed they are.

The new warden's work experience before coming to the Haskell facility includes being regional director for another private corporation, Prison Division Director for the state of Wyoming, and manager of a large female institution in Oklahoma for three years. Before that she worked some in community correction facilities, but she says prison work, being on the management side, is where her heart

When the people from Emerald Corp., which now runs the facility, called to ask if she would be interested in coming to the prison in Haskell and taking on the job of warden, she said she first asked "where?."

However, having a great deal of respect for Emerald, and the fact that this was an opportunity to get in on continued on page 5

From The Inside Out

By Mary Kaigler

Who is this Mystery Reader?

I was born in Knox City.

I have been married 54 years and have two children.

I attended school in Haskell, Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene and North Texas State University in Denton.

No one knows that I once took my lunch money and spent it on flying lessons.

My favorite TV shows are "Cold Case" and "JAG."

My favorite type of music is all kinds, from classical to country western.

My favorites songs are, "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior," and "As the Deer."

I like to play Freecell on computer, work in the yard and go shopping.

My favorite reading material is crossword puzzles.

My favorite food is tenderloin

My favorite place in Texas is Big Bend National Park. My favorite vacation spot in the world is Santa Fe, New Mexico.

My best quality is trying to see the brighter side of things.

My worst quality is my slowness. I hate it when people try to use you.

The person from history I'd most like to talk with is my Dad.

For me, the best thing about Haskell is the people.

Haskell is the people.

Who am I? Watch next week for the answer.

Update

Last week's Mystery Reader was Haskell County Justice of the Peace, Lynn Dodson, who said she was once a shy, skinny kid with 'bird legs,' who deliberately tried to gain weight by eating everything she could.

In school in Aspermont, she was helped to overcome the shyness through encouragement to participate in UIL story telling, speech contests, poetry readings and informational speaking. Entering a contest at age sixteen, held by the Dickens Rural Electric Co-op, she gave a speech on rural electrification, and won a trip to Washington, D. C.

When she finished high school in Aspermont, she was given the choice of having a new car or taking a trip to Europe with the American Institution of Foreign Study. As much as she wanted a car, she says, she wisely chose the trip, which included a cruise to the Mediterranean, Italy, Greece and France, studying drama, architecture and art history.

She attended college in San Marcos for a year, and moved to Houston. There she worked with an international corporation out of Saudi Arabia, helping to set up liaison for people going to Arabia. She also got her real estate and broker's licences, and says she regrets letting them elapse.

In Houston she met her first husband, and they had a daughter, Hilee Mulligan. Together they owned Hickory Farms Meat and Cheese stores and dealerships in small shopping centers in Austin.

Later on, wishing to bring up her young daughter in a smaller place, she returned to Aspermont, and in 1986, found a job in Haskell.

Here, she met David 'Dobber' Dodson on a fishing trip, which turned out to be a 'hook, line and sinker' event for both. However, she says she did not consent to marry him until she first got to know his mother, Betty Dodson, who she says is the 'sweetest woman who ever lived.' The couple has been married 15 years.

In Haskell she worked 10 years, mainly in the legal field, for the County Attorney and as a clerk at the Justice of the Peace office. Appointed to fill an unexpired JP term, she is now in her first full term.

She found that the JP job requires wearing many more hats than many may realize. It is not just being a traffic judge, she said. She also serves as the coroner, and performs weddings, some of them very unusual, such as a recent, spur-of-the moment wedding by proxy, where she lost her place and was afraid for a moment that she might marry the best man to the bride. But she always tries to keep a positive outlook on everything that happens, she said.

She loves the work, and says her main fulfillment in the job is that hopefully, she can make a difference in someone's life. "I deal a lot with kids, and find myself giving them the 25 or 50 cent lecture on driving with more responsibility and staying in school. It doesn't always work, but it's an opportunity to try to help turn them in the right direction."

Lynn's daughter, Hilee, with whom she is very close, is a graduate of Texas Tech University and is living in Dallas, seeking a job. She still has two years of eligibility left in the Miss Texas America Pageant, in which she has been a contestant.

Lynn attributes her interest in Indian artifacts and lore, to having a great-great grandmother who was a three-fourth Native American Cherokee Indian. Lynn's younger brother is a flint napper, and makes arrow heads, knives and spears, which she and the family members treasure.

Having the opportunity to go with Sid and Kathy Parker of Haskell to a "Descendents of Quanah Parker Family Pow Wow," in Oklahoma, sparked her interest in Quanah Parker, who was an astute business agent, helping to work with the government in Indian land deals. Since that time, she has been to several of the Pow Wows, and has enjoyed seeing the home Quanah Parker built, featuring stars on the roof to signify to his people that he was as important as any five star general.

"I would like to talk with him about those times he lived in," she said.

Lynn is a member of the Haskell Progressive Study Club. Among her interests is promoting reading as a basis for becoming educated. An avid reader herself, she says she believes that a person can help make up for formal academic training by a lifetime habit of reading from many different sources. At the moment she is reading "The Left Behind" series, a fictional account, based in today's time, on the Biblical book of Revelations.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

HIGHLIGHTS

By Mike Cox

School finance resolution absent this year

AUSTIN-It's back to school this week for most Texas students, but a solution to the school finance issue will be marked absent.

In fact, school finance reform appears to be dodging the truant officer. A second special session appeared likely earlier this summer to deal with school finance, but failing to reach any consensus, the leadership opted to await the outcome of a school finance case pending in state district court.

District Judge John Dietz is expected to rule later this month or in early September on whether the present system constitutes an unconstitutional statewide property tax. And that ruling, of course, can be taken to the Third Court of Appeals.

Last week, Lt. Gov. David Dewhurst said dynamite wouldn't be enough to get the Legislature involved in the issue any time soon if Dietz upholds the current system.

He later said he was just joking with the dynamite remark, but admitted that a ruling for the state would make it harder for the Legislature to reform the system.

CHIP chipping delayed... The state will continue to insure some 20,000 children who were to have been cut from the Children's Health Insurance Program Sept. 1 because their parents have not kept up with the $15 monthly premiums.

Gov. Rick Perry and Rep. Arlene

Wohlgemuth (R-Burleson) have asked the Health and Human Services Commission to postpone the cutoff, as well as look for funding to restore previously cut dental and vision benefits.

Wohlgemuth led legislative efforts in 2003 to cut back the CHIP program. Enrollment has already dropped from 507,000 children to less than 360,000.

New hunting, fishing licenses available...

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's 2004-05 hunting and fishing licenses are on sale.

Two big changes this year: One, the addition of a $5 fresh water fishing stamp to pay for rebuilding the state's aging hatcheries. Two, for the first time, licenses can be bought online or over the telephone. Check the department's Web site at www.tpwd.state.tx.us for details or call 800 TX LIC 4 U (1-800-895-4248).

License prices vary, but the best deal is the $64 Super Combo license that covers everything.

President's early home gets designation...

The George W. Bush Texas childhood home has been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

The Texas State Historical Commission assisted in nominating the house at 1412 W. Ohio Ave. in Midland. The Bush family lived there from 1952 to 1955.

Currently under restoration, the house joins more than 2,000 other archeologically or historically significant sites in Texas that have been listed on the National Register since 1966.

Congress will convene in Austin...

Well, not that Congress. But on Sept. 15-17, the Texas Water Monitoring Council will sponsor the fifth Texas Water Monitoring Congress in Austin.

Despite a rather unrevealing name, the council, along with the various state and federal agencies it works with, is concerned with a non-partisan issue everyone agrees is critical to the future of Texas—the quality and availability of our water.

For more information, see the council's Web site at www.txwmc.org or contact Robert Bradley at 512-936-0870.

All deadlines are 5 p.m. Monday.

New warden

the ground level for this new operation, she said, "I kind of got the bug to come here and take the new position. The next thing I knew, I was here in the place where my 82 yearold father used to tell about picking cotton in his youth. I finally realized that those tall cotton stories were about a real place."

Pleased with the dedication of the prison's staff, Watson said that some of them have made a real investment in the institution.

"We have people working here who worked on the planning commission, on the construction and in making the transition from the original jail to the new facility. Several on the management team have specifically moved back to Haskell to work here. These people will be here, because they have so much invested in this facility, and I'm very proud to be working with them," she said.

"We have a line staff here that has been incredible. They are dedicated for the most part, and you know that they will be here ten to fifteen years from now."

The warden said the local prison has a lower employee turnover rate than many such institutions.

"It is our responsibility as managers to see to and insure that they get the training they need to advance, and get to where they want to be in this line of work," she said.

As an added assistance to training, Watson said that she has been talking with the Director of Community Education from Vernon Jr. College about bringing some college classes to Haskell, specifically to help some of the staff who cannot go back and forth to Abilene. Perhaps in January, she said classes will be held off-site in town, which will be helpful to other citizens, as well.

"One reason I could confidently talk to them at Vernon, is that all of these folks are going to be here; not just starting and then dropping out. It's exciting to be working on this aspect. We're definitely getting ready to enter into some kind of agreement with Vernon Jr. College," she said.

Excited about the potential that there is here, Watson said that one day in the future, there will be a warden from the local community.

Asked what made her decide to be a warden, Watson said it was not something she planned to be when she was growing up in Jonesborough. She evolved into it.

"Actually, I went to college thinking to be a social worker. I like to work with people and I believe that people can change. I believe that we have a responsibility as citizens to give people the tools and skills they need to make a change if they choose to do so. We can't afford to 'write off' anyone."

Speaking of the fact that the jail population has been high in the local prison, which is needed to keep it solvent as an investment, she said it is one of those mixed message things.

"We all know and regret that there are so many prisons in this country, and more being built every day. As a citizen no one wants to see the jail population high, and yet, if this facility is full, it's good for the community economics, creates jobs and brings in money. From the standpoint of the 'bottom-line' success of the facility, I've been pleased that the facility's population has been high, and at capacity the last two months.

"We always hope that we do a good job, and can see people get out, go back home and make it and be successful. But unfortunately, that doesn't always happen, and just as unfortunately, there is always someone else to take their bed."

Watson said that as our country grows and the sheer population expands, the Haskell facility will probably expand at some point in time. Most of the prison's residents are sent by the immigration department, and she said that with the new changes in immigration enforcement, facility expansion is a real possibility.

Watson reported that the facility has recently received their accreditation from the American Corrections Association, which is achieved through a process that very few facilities in the country choose to go through. It involves around 445 standards that must be met, some of them very difficult.

It used to be

"This is something the staff can be very proud of. It means that they are one of the best," she said. "The staff works very hard here to meet those standards."

Starting out her own career as a line staff member, she says she has a great appreciation for what they do. "Actually, when it comes down to it, our line staff runs the facility. I have the privilege to sit in this office, but I'm just one of the team members,"

"We hope we're doing a good job. I'm very proud of our staff. It's important to me that they can walk up to the front door and be proud of where they work and who they work for, and that they are a good citizen in the community. I think we've got a good foundation and we're heading in that direction."

With 147 to 150 employees, the prison brings a big payroll to the community.

Watson said the difference between Management Training Corp. and Emerald Management Corp., for whom she works, is that "We are in it for the long haul.'

"No one would haul this much stuff into their office if they didn't plan to be to stay," she joked about her office, now converted to fit her needs, and tastefully decorated with items from Flatlands.

"We want to be involved in the community and to be a good citizen and contributor the community," she said. Speaking of the recent donation the prison made to the Volunteer Fire Department, she said she grew up in a family of volunteer fire fighters, and knows how important community involvement is. "The bottom line is that this institution doesn't belong to me or to Emerald. It belongs to this community, and we have an obligation to be community members. We will try to be there for any group we can be of help to."

Warden Watson said that she tries to be positive, while keeping it on an informal basis.

"If I didn't like what I do, I wouldn't be here."

Paint Creek School

the provisional two meals a day for all students, and school supplies for all students. "A lot of our students are economically disadvantaged, and this saves some of the parents a lot of money. As long as we can help, that's what we are there for," he said.

Laughing at the thought of it ever happening, Ballard said the rumor going around that the school has been taken over and being run and funded by Wal-Mart is just ridiculous.

Stating that the school plans to be be there for the child who chooses to come, Ballard said more are welcome. "We are not just a place where only 'bad kids and trouble makers' go. Our transfers are screened, with the welfare and safety of all the students kept in mind. No child is accepted just to add enrollment numbers."

Ballard said his philosophy is that learning to read is important to one's whole life and that if a kid cannot read, he cannot function as well in his life. This year, with classes for Pre-K through 12th grade, the school's big emphasis will be on reading, focusing on four different aspects, for kindergarten through grade three. The goal will be that every child who finishes the third grade will be able to read with understanding. A $170,000 grant for the reading program is expected to be forthcoming.

Ballard, who has been in the school business 34 years, grew up in Rochester, finishing high school there. He graduated from Texas A&M with a bachelor of science degree, and Midwestern State with a master's degree. After teaching agriculture science in Rule for 11 years, he received his superintendent certification at Texas Tech University, and has spent the last 12 years in school administration. In 2000 he retired from Dawson ISD.

Moving back to Haskell, he worked for the Goree school, which wanted to keep its doors open just one more year. Three years later it consolidated.

"I believe small schools serve a purpose, as long as they can survive and provide the quality of education needed for the child. When we lose whatever our purpose is as a school, then it's just a bunch of teachers totally out of 'sinc' with the larger picture," Ballard said.

"With all of the issues of school financing now going in the state legislature, things may change for all of us, beyond our control. For now, at Paint Creek, we are academically and financially sound, and trying to do what is best for the kids."

TAX PLANNING

Written By Richard E Rodgers, CPA

DON'T OVERLOOK THE TAX ISSUES WHEN YOU REFINANCE

With interest rates as low as they have been for almost 40 years, now is the time to consider refinancing your home mortgage. Here are a few tax tips that shouldn't be overlooked.

While you can fully deduct the points you pay when you buy your home, any points paid on a refinancing are deducted evenly over the term of the loan. If you refinance a loan for a second time, the balance of any remaining points from the previous loan will become immediately deductible. Also, if you're deducting points over the term of a loan, those remaining points are deductible when the home is sold.

If you pull out additional cash in the refinancing, and then use some (or all) of that cash to improve your main home, a portion of the points is deductible if you actually pay those points "up front." The amount of the deductible points is a percentage of the funds used for your home improvements compared to the total amount of the loan. Any points not immediately deductible can be spread out evenly over the term of the

If you pull out additional cash of $100,000 or less when you refinance, the interest on that amount is deductible. If you pull out more, the interest may or may not be deductible depending on how the additional funds are used. If you use those funds to expand your business, the interest would be deductible business interest. If you buy investments, the interest would be investment interest expense.

While most other loan fees are not deductible, some of your property taxes may be paid through the refinancing and are deductible. Also, if you do refinance to a lower interest rates, you'll pay less interest and have a lower mortgage interest deduction on your income tax return. Make sure to double-check your tax withholding in order to avoid an unanticipated tax bill later.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETING TO DISCUSS BUDGET AND PROPOSED TAX RATE

The Rule ISD will hold a public meeting at 7:00 p.m. on August 30, 2004, in the High School Library.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the school district's budget that will determine the tax rate that will be adopted. Public participation in the discussion is invited.

The tax rate that is ultimately adopted at this meeting or at a separate meeting at a later date may not exceed the proposed rate shown below unless the district publishes a revised notice containing the same information and comparisons set out below and holds another public meeting to discuss

This Week's Devotional Message:

It's time to send your children off to school again, to prepare them for the world they must one day confront. The school will do a good job of this, but your cooperations is also needed in order to make sure that they don't learn the wrong things. As everyone knows, we are living in an era where drug abuse is rampant, and the children are being lured into this trap at a shockingly early age.

Don't fail to warn them about this, as a part

BE SURE YOUR CHILDREN'S VOCABULARY INCLUDES THE WORD 'NO' of their preparation for the new school year, for it can be vastly more important than their clothes or books. Moreover, you can reinforce your efforts by enrolling them in the Sunday school at your house of worship. With all this, you can rest assured that the vocabulary your children develop in school will includes the proper use of the word "NO," as the password to a happier, healthier and longer life.

ssessment notices to arrive soon

assessment notices were recently mailed to cotton producers in the Rolling Plains Central eradication

The assessments are based on information cotton producers provide the Farm Service Agency when they certify their crops. If growers find an error in the information on their billing, they will need to correct the information at their local FSA office and forward the corrected information to the Foundation. Payment is due Sept. 14, but a two percent discount is available to growers who pay the full assessment by Aug. 30.

Like last year, all cotton acres planted in the zone are subject to the assessment.

To aid RPC growers who have been affected by adverse weather conditions, the TBWEF is offering payment extension agreements for producers whose accounts are current.

"For those having difficulty paying their assessment, help is available by contacting the assessments department and arranging an extension agreement," said Chief Financial Officer Tina Ballard.

Producers entering into an extension agreement must make a ten percent down payment, and they will be charged a late fee of one percent per month until their accounts are paid. This late fee begins on the date the signed agreement and down payment are received by the Assessments Department. Producers who are delinquent in payment and who do not have an extension agreement are subject to a late fee of 1.5 percent per month.

Producers with extension agreements have 150 days to pay

For more information contact the Assessments Department in Abilene at (866) 672-2800.

The Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation is a nonprofit, grower-initiated and funded organization dedicated to eliminating the cotton boll weevil from the state in the most cost effective and environmentally responsible manner possible.
