We managed to get by April 15, this year without a complete breakdown. Everyone was complaining. We've had couples come by the news office in a state of shock after hearing their final verdict on their annual I.R.S. donation. We can only hope there will be no tax reform this year. We've finally come to realize that "tax reform" really means "tax increase."

The most patently unfair tax is the social security tax on salaries of women who are married to men who pay the maximum in social security. There is no way this tax can be justified and there is no way the woman is going to get this money back. Usually the woman in this situation, while claiming zero dependents, adds her salary to the husband's at tax time and they wind up having to dig down and pay extra tax. This severely penalizes the married working couple.

The most unfair part of the income tax falls on couples who are sending a dependent to college and paying his expenses, tuition, etc. Not one cent of this is deductible and it creates a definite hardship on parents who want to pay their own way. Everytime I hear "tax reform" I think that surely this situation must be addressed by the lawmakers, but it's never gotten past "committee."

I could go on forever about unfair federal taxes, but space does not permit and the tax reformers do not listen.

We hear a lot about "recession" these days in all the national media. There is no evidence of recession in Ozona, but inflation seems to be here to stay. The cost of the film we use in our photo-processing machines is three times the January price, and it's in short supply. I think that amounts to an inflation rate of 300%. They say the increase is due to the silver content. It will be interesting to see if the cost comes down now that the bottom has dropped out of the silver market. I remember a few years ago when sugar went sky high. This forced up the price of soft drinks, including the sugar-free drinks, and although sugar prices fell drink prices didn't drop a penny. I can't see the logic in this.

Speaking of logic, there seems to be a shortage of that too. The government is pushing Texas industry to convert from natural gas to coal, propane or whatever, while gas men here in the state say natural gas is not selling. Is this logical? Nobody understands government policy and I hardly think anyone expects to anymore, but there's a shortage of logic almost everywhere. Take the case of a Dallas group who wants to fix up the sixth floor of the Dallas Book Depository for a museum. They have even asked city officials to help them with taxpayers' monies. It's almost impossible to find the logic in this.

They keep saying the Census takers are coming, but we've seen no evidence of this. We've carried our completed form from home to the office and back till it's getting pretty dog-eared. I'm afraid the census is not very well organized this time, and Crockett County is in a much too large district.

In Democratic and Republican Primaries-

Absentee voting underway

Absentee voting for the Republican and Democratic Primaries will end Tuesday at 5:00 p.m. in the county clerk's office. Absentee got off to a hectic start here as in other parts of Texas in the Democratic Primary. However, while some counties have yet to receive ballots, they were only a day late for Crockett County voters. This was not necessarily an advantage. Hasty press work and proof reading led to numerous errors on the local ballot, and since they were printed out of town, there was not time to reprint them.

The late ordering of ballots in this area stemmed from the confusion over the placing of Joe Sullivan's name on the ballot for the Democratic nominee for U.S. Representative, Dist. 21. Party chairmen were told to place his name on the ballot. His opponent, Marilyn Jones, was then successful in a civil suit to remove his name due to lack of street addresses of petitioners who signed for his candidacy. Sullivan appealed and another judge found for him. His name was ordered back on the ballot. There is ongoing litigation, but Sullivan's name will remain on the primary ballot.

Winner of this controversial race will face popular Republican incumbent Tom Loeffler in the general election in November.

For Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple is battling it out with incumbent John Poerner. For Railroad Commissioner (unexpired term) Jim Hightower is running against Jim Nugent.

There are four places on the ballot for Associate Justice, Supreme Court. Place 1 is being vied for by John C. Phillips, Wayne

Scott, and Jim Wallace. In place 2, Sears McGee is opposed by Lawrence E. Bergmen. For place 3, Robert M. Campbell does not have an opponent and neither does C.L. Ray in place 4.

There are three places for Judge, Court of Criminal Appeals and all three are contested by Democrats hoping to win the nomination. Leon Douglass and Marvin Teague will face each other in Place 1. Candidates for place 2 are W.T. Phillips, John Humphreys and Mike McCormick. The three candidates for place 3 are Walter Boyd, Edith Roberts, and Tom Davis. William E. Ward is unopposed in his bid for Associate Justice, Court of Civil Appeals.

Susan Gurley McBee is opposed by Mike V. Gonzales for State Representative, 70th District in her bid for re-election. The winner of this race will have no Republican opposition in November.

For District Attorney, 112th District, Bill Mason, assistant district attorney of Ozona is opposed by Jack Schultze, county attorney in Reagan County, and J. Frenkin Urias, Fort Stockton attorney.

David H. Weant is unopposed in his bid for his first elected term as district and county clerk. Longtime Crockett County Sheriff Billy Mills is also unopposed in his bid for re-election.

For the first time Crockett County voters will be voting for a tax assessor-collector. Tommy Stokes is running unopposed.

Tom Cameron is running unopposed for county attorney and Gene Williams has no opposition in his bid for re-election as constable.

The only contested race in the county is that of Commissioner of Precinct 1. Sostenes De Hoyos, the incumbent, is opposed by Frank McMullan, Joe Everett and Felipe Castro.

Precinct 3 commissioners term is also up, and Jack Williams is unopposed in his bid for re-election.

There is also a non-binding presidential preference referendum on the Democratic ballot, the purpose of which is not clear. However, voters may vote for Jimmy Carter, Edward Kennedy, Jerry Brown and uncommitted.

For the first time in many years, Crockett County voters may vote in the Republican Primary if they choose. Though the list of candidates does not offer as many choices as the Democrats, the Republicans have the choice of voting for the presidential nominee. On the ballot for president is Ronald Reagan, George Bush and a space for uncommitted.

Loeffler is unopposed in his bid for re-election as the Republican nominee.

Henry Grover, E. W. Kidd and John Thomas Henderson are running for a full term as Railroad Commissioner. The winner will face the Democratic nominee in November.

For the unexpired term, H.J. (Doc) Blanchard is running unopposed. Jim Brady is asking for the nomination for Associate Justice, Supreme Court, Place 1, and Will Garwood for the same office in Place 4. Joe Couch is on the ballot unopposed for Republican County Chairman.

Democrats will vote in their respective precinct polling places and the Republican Primary will be held in the Joe Couch home at 604 Circle Drive.

Mr. Howell buried here Monday

Funeral services for Joseph William Howell, 70, were held Monday at 4 p.m. in First Baptist Church. Burial followed in Cedar Hill Cemetery under direction of Sheppard Funeral Home.

Mr. Howell died at 4:00 a.m. Sunday in Crockett County Hospital following an illness.

Mr. Howell was born Sept. 9, 1909 in New Boston. He was senior vice president and cashier of the Ozona National Bank at the time of his death. He came to the bank in 1945 from Citizens' National Bank in Abilene. He was a member of First Baptist Church of Ozona.

Survivors include his wife, Sibyl, of Ozona, and one sister, Carroll Reese of Albany.

Census takers needed

Tests for census takers will be given at the Civic Center Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Maureen Werst, field representative from Big Lake, will be here to give the tests.

Mrs. Werst said several additional census takers are needed in Crockett County and she hopes for a good turnout for the tests. It is an excellent opportunity to make good money on a part time basis.

stolen sign located

The flashing arrow sign which was stolen last week from a location on I-10 20 miles west of Ozona, was found in an abandoned well Monday by city employees in Sonora.

The $4,000 piece of safety equipment warned motorists I-10 was going back to 2-way traffic off Hwy. 290. When the sign was found, all its components were missing. However, Texas Ranger Clay Bednar said the state should be able to salvage at least one-third of the value.

Time change Sunday

Sunday morning at precisely 2:00 o'clock, the nation will spring forward to daylight saving time. It would probably be more practical to set your clock ahead an hour before retiring Saturday night.

The time change will be in effect until fall.

U.S. ARMY HOSPITAL HELICOPTOR visits Ozona and Students make a tour of the flying facility. The vehicle sat down between the high school and the old junior high building Wednesday morning just as the fire alarm went off, causing some concern to those who did not know about its arrival. Soldiers and vehicle flew from Fort Sam Houston. They were making a tour of schools in the area.

Thompson to state meet

Kaye Thompson, Ozona High School junior and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, placed first in the 800 meter run with a time of 2:19.51, and second in the 1600 meter run with a time of 5:33.0, in the regional track meet for District AA in Lubbock last weekend. The two wins qualify Kaye for the State Meet which will be held May 2-3 in Austin.

Kaye is the first girl from Ozona to go to the State Track Meet as a participant.

Molly Womack placed fourth in the 200 yard dash at Regional with a time of 26.7. The 440-relay team did not place, but Ozona came in eighth in the meet with 22 points, scoring more points than any other AA school from West Texas.

The Same Side of Things

by John W. Fisher

It is fundamentally true that business and the consumer are on the same side of the issues that are being discussed today, from excessive federal spending to regulation, from the need for a strong, healthy economy to the desire for American products to be competitive abroad. Even though some people prefer to focus on differences, to develop what appears on the surface to be an adversary relationship between business and the consumers it serves, business and consumers are partners. They depend on each other.

A great majority of the alleged differences can be attributed to the heat of the debate. Business people talk in the technical language natural to their own industries but unfamiliar to many people. Consumer advocates find it easy to point a finger at a specific problem with a product or company. Specific problems may exist, and should be corrected. But it is important to realize that, in this country, hundreds of thousands of products are produced each year. Thus, the occasional defective product does not necessarily indicate an unconcerned management. After all, business executives use these products, as do their families, friends and neighbors. And a defect does not warrant general legislation or regulation: If your neighbor's child defaces a school bus, the remedy for that is not to tie all children's hands.

Excessive government regulation of industry is the same as tying up the innocent along with those who cause the problems. Such unneeded regulations by their nature are costly to the consumer, since the consumer ultimately pays the tax. In 1979 alone, the tab for regulations was $103 billion. The burden on small business is especially great since the cost of regulatory compliance is spread over fewer production items, making them more costly.

Business and the consumer both want clean air, clean water and safe products. However, nobody can be sure that each dollar spent for regulation contributes to the attainment of these goals. A close look reveals that many regulations are counterproductive, not helpful. Moreover, regulations often conflict with each other, generating a massive bureaucratic mound of red tape, lost productivity and shackled initiative.

In some sense, we are all victims of the great expectations which were raised during the last 20 years. American industry blossomed, providing one of the highest standards of living in the history of the world for the American people. But in the world of oil cartels and double-digit inflation, we must pause to reassess the situation.

It is fundamentally true that it is easier to raise expectations than to meet them, to promise good things than to deliver them, and to have worthy motives than to produce workable legislation and good programs. But it is necessary to be realistic.

Working together, American business and the American consumer can make good things happen again. We are not adversaries. When we think issues through clearly, business and the consumer are on the same side: All people want a better life, more productivity, a strong economy. Working together as allies, we can move toward these shared goals.

Insuring Your Health

If you or a member of your family ever suffers from a disabling illness or injury, or merely experiences pain in joints and muscles, the services of a physical therapist may be required.

Will your health insurance pay for the services of a physical therapist?

While it's reasonable to assume that certain aspects of medical care are included in your health insurance, do you know whether it also includes coverage for the services of a physical therapist? It should.

Therapy Assn. urges that you read the fine print in your health insurance contract to make sure you're covered for this type of care. It's also important to know in advance exactly what the extent of that coverage is and what services are included.

Each day, professionally trained physical therapists—there are more than 32,000 in the U.S.—work with over 150,000 people in their efforts to overcome pain and physical disability. Because physical therapy is often a long-term program down the road to recovery and rehabilitation, the lack of this kind of coverage could prove extremely expensive.

Treatment by a trained physical therapist provides more than just the restoration of your health. The results of this treatment also help to rebuild your self-confidence and bolster your desire to return to a normal, active, productive life.

AUSTIN — One of the toughest issues the Texas Legislature will face next spring is the permitting of wiretapping by law enforcement officers investigating narcotics trafficking.

Lawmakers failed last session to approve a wiretapping measure pushed by then newly-elected Gov. Bill Clements, but the issue will certainly re-appear for a second turn at bat.

This time Clements and his team will be better prepared.

He has vowed to make anti-drug trafficking legislation a perennial issue of his administration—and included it as one of his "Super Issues" for the promised special session, now called off, in August-September.

He has appointed a Texas War on Drugs Committee and named H. Ross Perot, Dallas multimillionaire, as chairman. Perot, mastermind of the heroic mission which rescued several Americans from Iranian jails last year, lends the committee his expertise and get-tough charisma.

Why the wiretapping bill failed last session is a matter of controversy.

Clements pushed the bill hard, but many legislators who voted against it were unsure of the "safeguards" against abuses which he said it contained.

Safeguards: The Crux

More than one lawmaker explained to the press then that he or she was not going to vote for a wiretapping bill which might lead to the invasion of privacy of law-abiding citizens. It's a tough issue to buck, because to the voters back home, it looks like their legislator is not getting tough on drug crimes.

Clements knows that, and he's going to put them on the spot again: vote for the bill or look bad to the voters back home.

He's not concerned about abuses because he thinks the safeguards are adequate. When asked at a press conference last week if he thought the bill would endanger the privacy of Texas citizens, he said: "I think that kind of sentiment is sheer nonsense. It's not invading anyone's privacy except the criminal's. Personally, it bores me to hear bleeding heart statements from those who oppose it."

The Bill's Intent

Clements and Perot have come up with a three-pronged program to curb drug use and traffic in Texas. They want to allow wiretaps on the telephones of suspected drug dealers.

They want to educate parents and children to the dangers of drug use.

They want better cooperation among Texas law enforcement agencies in efforts to curb drug traffic and use.

Law enforcement officials who seek approval to use a wiretap will be forced to get approval from their superiors and the courts. Stiff penalties will be added for officers who misuse the wiretapping law.

New Federal Judge

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler was appointed chief federal judge of the Eastern District of Texas last week, succeeding retiring Judge Joe Fisher of Beaumont.

The judgeship, decided on seniority among the four federal judges in the district, means more administrative duties, but no more authority. Judge Justice will move the district headquarters from Beaumont to Tyler.

He was appointed to the federal bench in 1968 by President Lyndon Johnson.

Texan in Energy Post

An assistant attorney general in Texas has been chosen by President Carter to a post on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission which regulates natural gas. The appointment of David Hughes, though not official, was announced last week by U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen.

Hughes is currently chief of the energy affairs division and has in the past year directed a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, a key law for the commission he will join.

He may face a tough confirmation fight in the Senate.

PRESENTED BY THE STATE BAR OF TEXAS

Q: My independent school district has just sent me a bill for $38.25 for property tax on my car. If I do not pay this fee and continue to ignore their demands for payment and threats of penalties and interest, what can the school district do to me?

A: In Texas, an individual is personally liable for the taxes levied against his automobile if he owned it on January 1st of the tax year in question. If the taxpayer does not pay the tax, the jurisdiction has the right after the taxes become delinquent, to file suit for the collection. The general rule is that the jurisdiction will take a personal judgment against the owner of the automobile which may be abstracted in the County Clerk's office.

Q: About a month ago I was involved in an auto accident. The driver of the other car received a ticket and I didn't. The other driver didn't have any insurance so my insurance company had to pay to fix my car. Now they're trying to raise my insurance rates. Can they do this?

A: A traffic ticket does not necessarily determine fault for the accident. Your insurance company could still determine that the accident was your fault and could then add a surcharge of 15% to your rates. Not all companies are regulated by the State Board of Insurance and do not have to charge the rates set by the Board. Your company may be one of these. If you feel you have

Tips For Gardeners

From the Ozona Garden Club by Mrs. Bailey Post

Those April showers have been very slow in showing up for a much needed general rain in most of Texas. This dryness keeps everyone busy watering flowers, shrubs, lawns and trees. At least we are hoping hail misses us this year.

We are hoping that all were pleasantly surprised at the Flower Show yesterday. We had at least a fair show of horticulture, even though the late freeze and drought were disappointing. They made our three most colorful entries each year - roses, peonies and iris, late in blooming.

The challenge is to show the best we have at the time set, for it would be impossible to guess that late nearly a year in advance when the program and year-book is made up.

Daylilies will be putting on buds for their blooming season, so keep well watered. If some of the plants show pale or yellow leaves, give them the iron foods available. Soon a dark green appearance will be noticed.

Again, I will remind you not to rush out and cut down evergreens that may look dead. It may take a month for new growth to begin showing. Too, it is advisable to prune off dead ends, branches or limbs of trees, except for pecans. They may come out and bloom again, giving a chance for a pecan crop this fall. If you haven't fertilized, do so to help overcome the freeze damaged plants and trees.

If you are interested in growing beautiful peonies there is a splendid article in the April Southern Living that will help you as to the selection you may want. They do well here if properly planted and cared for. They die back in the winter, then come up from the roots each spring. The doubles grow quite large and full here, giving an abundance of blooms. For arrangements the Japanese, Anemore, semi-double and single are the best choices.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED-Mr. and Mrs. Romulo Vela announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Romelia, to Mr. Hector DeHoyos Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Hector DeHoyos. The wedding will take place June 21, in Our Lady of Perpetual Help Catholic Church.

Rosemary, with its dense, needlelike gray-green foliage makes this herb an attractive woody shrub. The upright variety grows 2 to 3 feet tall, but the dwarf spreads out more. It can be grown from rooted cuttings or in containers. It's great for seasoning too.

ONE INCH, ONE LIFE, ONE PLAN

Our instructions read 36 inches. But one of the sides of our "do-it-yourself" bookcase measured only 35 inches.

"Why not just shorten the other side by an inch?" suggested my son, John. We did and ended up having to cut an inch off the back. It would have been better had we corrected rather than simply revised the plans.

Like the bookcase, our lives have a plan drafted by God. We often fall short, and rather than correct ourselves, we downgrade our other dimensions — our standards and aspirations. Thus, we fool ourselves into believing that we still measure up. The result is a life half-lived, filled with doubt, worry and often, regret.

Read of God's plan for you in the Bible; consult with him in His Church.

You have everything to gain.

Crockett County Care Center News

by Joan Nicholas — Director of Activities & Social Care

How fast Monday evenings come around and there is another column to get in the mill!

Of course, the things I write about are the activities and fun get-togethers of the week. In today's nursing home, however, rehabilitation is the key word; there are evaluations to be made, goals to set and corrected approaches to be decided on for each resident, not only by me but in dietary, nursing and administration.

Then there's social work, endless reports for Uncle Sam and his state counterparts and everything has to be documented, and I do mean everything. The most satisfaction one can receive is working with an individual who has been severely impaired in one way or another and after, perhaps many months, seeing a glimmer of light appear; in other words, results! These may be quite minimal, but it makes for a very happy day.

On Tuesday, a week ago, the weather was so pleasant a small group of us made a trip to town and enjoyed ice cream cones at Clayton's Village Drug. Those accompanying me were Paul Cavin, Louise McWilliams, Maudie Pettit, and Bertha Miller. The ladies did a little shopping and then we took a drive around some residential areas and the Country Club where golfers were out in large numbers.

We have set out some seeds in the back yard and hope to see results shortly and a little color.

Our sincere thanks to the following: Robert Murphy who left a large sack of Western paperbacks at my house for distribution here at the Center; a friend who mailed me $25.00 for the activities fund but wishes no name mentioned, and to Willie Tooke for a supply of popcorn.

We had more music at the Center last Thursday night when Jamie Knox, Don Kilgore, Ollie and Jean Ann Sudduth put everyone in a happy mood. When Grace Cotter looked around and noticed no one clapping to the beat with her, she called out in a loud voice, "come on", and everyone got busy! You tell 'em Grace! Mary Seelye kept time with her feet, and probably was dreaming about the days when she played her guitar.

As usual, we had lots of laughter and sharing of experiences in reading and discussion group. I had been reading a story about a family trapped in their buggy with a runaway horse and asked if any present had been in a similar predicament. Leona Harris admitted she had more than once, and Grace related an experience she remembered and told us she wasn't going to stay in that buggy but jumped out and rolled over and over into the ditch. She couldn't remember hurting herself at all! She was lucky indeed.

Bingo winner was Louise McWilliams after a play off with Mary Pender who received a prize. In dominoes Monday afternoon, Paul Cavin, Seferino Garcia, Mary Pender and Maudie Pettit played. Maudie came out five points ahead of our crack player, Paul Cavin after a close game.

I believe there will be a news item elsewhere in this paper, however, I would like to urge all Care Center volunteers to attend the training meeting set for April 30th at 7 p.m. in the Community Center. This workshop is not merely for our volunteers and those of the newly formed Community Council, but for anyone caring for an elderly or disabled person in the home, or who might be doing so at some time in the future. Those attending will be taught safety procedures in moving infirm persons, but most importantly how to protect themselves from injury while assisting, and this is vital.

Again, this will be at the Community Center, not the Care Center, one week from today. For further information I would suggest you call Debra Price or Sam Emanuel.

Houseguest of Mrs. J.B. Post this week are her daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Bob Bryan of Houston.

Texans believe in strong family structure

Texans believe in the traditional family structure held together by strong religious commitment and practices, according to survey results of the White House Conference on Families.

Jonathan Hole, Texas director of the conference, announced today the family issues most responded to by Texans in five open forums, by letter, and on six hotlines set up for comment.

Hole said 3,415 Texans participated in the survey, with 707 of them indicating that the traditional family definition is the most important issue in family life today.

Next most often mentioned issue was pro-life, anti-abortion, which 698 Texans said was the most important. Others in the top 10 list of issues, by order, were:

Government intrusion into family life, inflation, anti-Equal Rights Amendment, anti-sex information in the public schools, government intrusion into education, anti-federal day care, anti-teaching of secular humanism, and concerns about declining morality.

Other issues named by those participating included problems of working parents, busing, insufficient welfare assistance and care of the elderly.

Child abuse, spouse abuse, financial concerns, and divorce also were mentioned as prime family issues.

More than half of those who testified all over Texas said religious commitment and practices made the family strong. Also mentioned were mutual love and respect, good communications, commitment to the family unit, discipline, and joint outside activities.

On the Equal Rights Amendment, many Texans said the federal government should allow states to rescind earlier ratification if they desire. And the government should permit no further extension of the established time limit for ratification, hundreds said.

One majority recommendation was for local agencies, churches, and schools to make family life education materials available to the public, and include family life education in the school curriculum.

The traditional family structure, which gained the most response, was identified as married male and female with children by blood or adoption. Those responding did not rule out the single-parent family, foster family, or extended family. They did, however, say that alternative lifestyles as legitimate family units should have no standing in legislation or court interpretations.

Homosexuality received attention from the participants, the majority of whom said Congress should not pass any legislation which extends rights to individuals or groups solely because they are homosexual. In support of the elderly, the testimony said elderly individuals should be able to marry without losing portions of their benefits, and receive full spouse benefits.

On morality, most of the Texans said it should be taught at home and by the churches, not by the government.

Many of those taking part wanted the government to encourage more family-oriented TV programming, and eliminate blatantly objectionable materials, particularly during family viewing hours.

Enforcement of pornography laws was also asked, as was more concern for teenage pregnancies and drug abuse.

Hole said results of the survey will be used as issues to be discussed at the White House Conference on Families this summer.

4-H shooting camp scheduled

A special 4-H shooting sports camp will be held at Tarleton State University June 23-27 for 4-H members between the ages of 12 and 16, according to Don Steinbach, Fisheries Specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and a co-ordinator of the Texas 4-H shooting sports project.

Steinbach said arrangements had been made with the National Rifle Association for the organization and conduct of a special NRA Junior Olympic Training Program which will afford a selected number of 4-H members the opportunity to train in rifle marksmanship and trap shooting.

He said that Extension officials were in the process of securing two top instructors to work with the 4-H members. Sixteen 4-H members will be selected for rifle marksmanship and fifteen for trap shooting.

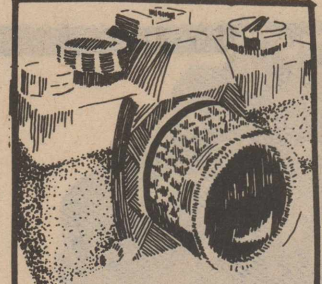

The camp will be designed to encourage participation in the 4-H shooting sports project and to help beginning shooters learn to shoot properly, emphasizing sound basic shooting skills. Participants will be housed at Tarleton State University and training will take place on local shooting ranges.

Six volunteer 4-H shooting sports coaches will also be accepted to serve as assistant coaches and chaperones for the 4-H members. These coaches will receive special instruction on how to teach.

4-H members and leaders who are interested should secure an application from their county Extension agent. Deadline for submitting the application to the State 4-H Office in College Station is May 23.

Billy Reagor, County Agent, said that this is an excellent opportunity for both youth and adults to learn shooting skills and that the Texas Agricultural Extension Service was fortunate to have the services provided by the National Rifle Association to organize and conduct this camp.

Suppose, for the sake of argument, that the current round of Congressional hearings and re-evaluations produce no substantive improvement in the existing federally-dominated predator control program.

We're all hoping, of course, that improvements will come, but we've been disappointed in Washington before. If we're disappointed again--what next?

For starters, we could always secede. We weren't altogether successful the last time we tried that, but this time we'd have the goodies and all they'd be bringing is the habit. Still, it's something of an extreme step, regardless of all the bumper stickers calling for it.

Another possibility is a state-level predator program. Support for that idea is growing in many of the Western states. Drawbacks include the fact that much of the sheep industry depends on federal grazing land, and Washington's rabid obstructionists would still rule those roosts. As for Texas, our greatest single need is for reintroduction of toxicants. That brings us right back to federal interference.

There is a move underway to obtain experimental use permits for Compound 1080 through the Texas Department of Agriculture. The federal EPA will be the outfit to say yea or nay, and some sources say EPA bureaucrats have promised their environmentalist pals that they won't even seriously consider such an application. We hope that rumor is wrong, but it follows true to form.

What next? We've already covered our best shots, so anything left is bound to fall short of the industry's legitimate needs. There's one approach we've all been talking about for some time, and it appears to be taking hold.

It's a simple concept, really. It's called do-it-yourself. Stockmen, of course, have been doing much of their own control work as long as there's been a livestock industry. In recent decades, however, it's often taken the form of strictly private efforts. You snare your fences and I'll snare mine.

That's showing some signs of changing. More elaborate projects have begun to show up here and there. Aerial hunting, for instance. This concept has proven itself in many areas, but it's often been done in conjunction with the government control program. Where the work has been private, it's most often been a case of two or three large operators banding together to form a good-sized but still less-than-optimum area.

There have been some recent exceptions to this rule, however. Coleman County ranchers have conducted a rather broad-scale aerial program for the last couple of years, for instance. Then there's the aerial hunting program that began as a limited effort in the Goldthwaite area and quickly mushroomed. It's said to be covering a large percentage of several counties in Central Texas now.

From there the idea was transplanted west to Coke County. In less than two weeks it progressed from a vague notion to a project covering more than 200 sections and at least 70 operators. Some of the people involved expect it to become several times that large. The Coke County aerial hunting program is financed by voluntary 10-cent per acre assessments. The totally private nature of the funding means there will be no government manipulation short of new laws or regulations interfering with aerial hunting itself. The project's broad physical scope means no one will improve his predator position by simply forcing the killers over onto his neighbor.

We hope we're successful in Washington, but either way, let's not forget what we can do for ourselves--and the fellow across the fence.

Cloning used in cancer treatment

A first step in human cloning is being used at the University of Texas Health Science Center here to fit dosage and type of anti-cancer drug to the individual patient's disease.

Dr. David D. Von Hoff, Assistant Professor of Medicine in the Oncology Division at the Center, is growing cells in his laboratory taken from cancer patients. Dosed with anti-cancer drugs, the growing clones recede, or they thrive if they are resistant to the chemical attack. A previous test, devised by other investigators, was simplified with more successful results. His research is supported by an American Cancer Society grant.

So far, 46 different kinds of cancer cells have been cloned, including those from all of the major sites of cancer: lung, colon, breast and uterus. The exceptions are leukemia cells of all types and Hodgkins's Disease.

Preliminary results of Dr. Von Hoff's test method show about a 70 percent accuracy for spotting drugs that will work in a specific patient against a particular tumor. On the other, he has done even better, getting 94 percent accuracy in identifying negative results--that is, indicating in each instance that the drug won't work.

Among compounds tested in preliminary trials was interferon, a natural blood factor, now undergoing clinical trials at several medical centers throughout the country. The testing is being supported by a $5.4 Million American Cancer Society grant.

Dr. Von Hoff's tests on interferon showed positive results on one type of cancer, lymphoma, but in other tests with bone cancer cells no reaction was seen. Although no conclusions as to this substance can be accurately made at this time, it is expected to be effective, at least, for some kinds of cancer.

In clinical trials, interferon's present high cost--as much as $20,000 per patient--precludes conclusive results of the use of higher doses at this time. The usual limitations of toxicity for cancer drugs, does not seem to be a factor, if higher dosage were possible.

Cattle breeding trends are presented at A&M

Trends and ideas for commercial and registered cattle raisers were presented during the annual Beef and Pasture Short Course held recently at Texas A&M University.

The short course was a part of the Texas Animal Agriculture Conference sponsored by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Jim Theeck, manager of Mayfair Ranch, Brenham, and Rob Brown, rancher at Throckmorton, spoke from the cattle producers' point of view about management practices to achieve heavier weaning weights, higher percent calf crops and better quality commercial and replacement heifers.

Theeck said Mayfair's goal is a heifer calf that brings as much as steers at market or a premium price. To accomplish this, he said cattle in South Central Texas need half-Brahman blood. He said he prefers half-Brahman and half-Hereford replacement heifers.

He breeds the replacement heifers to registered, performance tested Santa Gertrudis bulls which are raised as part of the registered cattle operation. This combination produces good club calves and, "tremendous feeder heifers," said Theeck.

To raise high-quality, registered Santa Gertrudis bulls, Theeck said purebred heifers are culled at weaning time. He keeps only heifers with a "feminine triangular look about them."

At the base of his operation is bull selection, said Theeck. "All good cow herds are built on top bulls."

He said ranchers should evaluate cows with respect to their weaknesses and select bulls to correct the cows' weak points. Each registered bull is performance tested at Mayfair.

He said, "Western areas and the southwest area of the country are in the driver's seat as far as energy goes."

However, he said energy costs for cattle raisers in South Central Texas are high because improved pastures of the central region require more tractor work and fertilizer than grazing in West Texas.

Rob Brown ranches on 60,000 acres and runs 2,000 commercial and registered cattle in West Texas. He said the '80s will see a slight reduction in frame size of cattle. "We're reaching the outer limits of frame size in each breed, and we need to pull back just a little from the extremes."

Brown said the extra large cattle are slower to mature sexually, and quality grade suffers because degree of muscle is traded for larger frame size. However, he did say that the '70s emphasis on frame size through extensive exotic breeds' influence and artificial insemination helped the ability of cattle to gain.

He said cattle in the '80s will need English, ear and exotic-referring to types of breeding needed for high-producing, quality cattle. Hereford and Angus breeding adds total market acceptance to cattle. Brahman breeding gives "maximum hybrid vigor where we can get something for nothing" and increased calving ability. The exotic, or European breeds, add frame size, higher yield grade and better milkers to a herd.

Brown also emphasized the need for quality bulls. He said bulls that cause calving problems should be culled, and artificial insemination is a must in a registered herd to get the best bulls. Brown AIs over 80 percent of the cows on his ranch.

In addition to culling and AI, Brown said cattle raisers should know who their customers are and select bulls that will sell to those customers. He said a key to remember is, "It's not how big they get, but how quick they get big."

Screwworm-free record is broken

The 205 days the Texas livestock industry enjoyed without a laboratory confirmed screwworm sample, longest on record, ended April 14. Screwworms invade open wounds in warm blooded animals to feed on living flesh.

Dr. James E. Novy, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Screwworm Laboratory, says one worm of the sample Harold Bragg took from the docking wound of a lamb April 5, was a screwworm.

The other four larvae in the sample were Phormia regina, commonly known as the black blow fly.

Dr. Steve Smith, an epidemiologist with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) Screwworm Lab, and two fly trappers, have gone to Bragg's Coleman County ranch. They are working the area to see how many wild screwworms are there and collect evidence as to their origin.

The nearest known screwworm case to this central Texas collection was in the Villa Union community of Mexico's State of Coahuila, about two months ago, says Dr. Novy. That is about 40 miles south of Eagle Pass, Texas, and an estimated 180 miles from Bragg's ranch in the Glen Cove area of Coleman County. Fly trappers collected a wild screwworm fly along the Rio Grande near the El Indio community south of Eagle Pass about March 5.

The Screwworm Lab will distribute Screwworm Adult Suppression System (SWASS) pellets in the west Coleman County area. APHIS planes will also disperse sterile screwworm flies in the area.

Odors attract adult screwworm flies to the SWASS pellets. They then feed on the pellet. A small amount of insecticide in the pellet almost immediately kills the adult flies. This selective tool is used to bring adult screwworm populations to a low level.

Sterile screwworm flies are released in the area of known wild populations to mate with the fertile flies. Females of this species usually mate only once in their lifetimes. Any eggs a female produces after mating with a sterile male will not hatch—thus ending the life cycle.

To date New Mexico has recorded 213 screwworm free days, Arizona 160, and California 242.

Include bread in diet

Include bread in the diet—even when trying to lose weight, advises Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist.

"Breads are an inexpensive source of thiamin, iron and riboflavin.

They also provide protein and are a major source of protein in vegetarian diets.

In addition, whole grain breads provide a bonus of magnesium, folacin and fiber," Miss Haggard says.

Miss Haggard is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Generally, the food items put on bread are higher in calories than the bread itself. For instance, a slice of white bread contains only about 65 to 75 calories.

Add a pat of margarine, 35 calories, and a tablespoon of jelly, 50 calories, and the calorie count is more than doubled, she points out.

Four servings of bread are recommended in the daily diet.

One serving might include one slice of bread, one tortilla or one biscuit. Each half of a hamburger or hot dog bun is one serving.

Other bread-and-cereal-group food servings are 1/2 to 3/4 cup cooked cereal, cornmeal, grits, macaroni, noodles, rice or spaghetti, or one ounce ready-to-eat cereal, Miss Haggard adds.

Social Security system no incentive for marriage

Today the Social Security system of the United States is proving to be a disincentive to marriage, says Dr. Betty Jo Smith, a family life education specialist.

Simply, the system designed for 1930's lifestyles has not kept pace-or caught up-with 1980's lifestyles, she says.

Dr. Smith is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Exactly what has happened? In the 1930's, when the Social Security system was designed and started, families were quite different than today's families.

Then the system was based on the assumptions that marriages lasted for a lifetime, that women generally were homemakers and that men provided the family income. Also, it was assumed that housework performed by the wife had no economic value.

Much has changed. Today, women make up about half of the labor force. The housework they do at home, indeed, had a calculated economic value.

Entering into a marriage contract no longer assures a lifetime monogamous marriage.

How does all that affect women today? According to current laws, homemakers who are divorced within 10 years of marriage do not qualify for Social Security benefits on the basis of being a married homemaker.

If the marriage lasts for more than 10 years but still ends in divorce, the homemaker will receive only 50 percent of the husband's Social Security benefits while he will receive 100 percent.

If a homemaker has worked while married, she may never collect benefits from taxes she paid into the system, because in most cases these self-earned benefits still are even lower than those she's entitled to if she applies as a "dependent" to the primary wage earner, hoping to qualify for her husband's benefits--and she can only apply for one "set" of benefits.

So, it all adds up to this: if a homemaker is employed for part of her life, later she'll be penalized through low, inadequate benefits, as the current law stands.

Years spent as a wife and mother go unrecognized in terms of later-life benefits, because these activities are not counted as an economic contribution to society, Dr. Smith points out.

Reform of current Social Security laws is needed.

RICE AND VEGETABLES MAKE UNIQUE SALADS

Serve a buffet meal to set the stage for the Spring season. The children will be happy to have hot dogs or cold cuts and you can turn these favorites into a balanced meal by serving them with a hearty rice salad.

Cook up a large pot of rice at one time to make enough rice for several meals because, covered and refrigerated, cooked rice keeps its quality and flavor for six or seven days.

Rice's delicate flavor blends well with many foods--leftovers, vegetables, cheese or meats, such as chicken or roast. And a rice salad goes well with the main course whether hot or cold. Since rice does not have a distinct flavor, it is perfect for mixing with a wide variety of differing tastes and textures.

If you haven't tried rice in a salad you'll be in for a special treat...

RICE-VEGETABLE SALAD

- 3 cups cool cooked rice
- 1-1/2 cups sliced celery
- 1 package (10 oz.) frozen green peas, cooked and drained
- 1/4 cup minced onion
- 1/2 cup diced pimientos
- 1 cup cubed American process cheese (1/4-inch cubes)
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon each salt and seasoned pepper

Combine all ingredients and toss lightly. Chill. Serve in lettuce cups and garnish with sliced, hard-cooked eggs and tomato wedges, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Identify Census takers

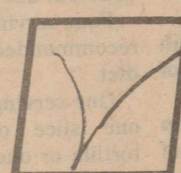

Census takers for the 1980 Census of Population and Housing are easy to identify, according to District Manager Janet Faulkner.

They wear a red, white, and blue ID card with the U.S. Department of Commerce seal and the words, "Census Enumerator, Official Credential," printed on its face. Their cards also have their signatures, certifying that they have sworn to keep confidential all information they collect for the census. Any Census Bureau worker who breaks this oath faces a stiff fine or imprisonment or both, but the Bureau's record on this is spotless, the manager said.

Census enumerators started making their rounds here on March 31 and expect to finish up within a few weeks. Householders are urged to report to the police anyone without this official identification who claims to be a census enumerator.

What Do You Need

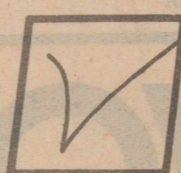

IN YOUR DISTRICT ATTORNEY?

EXPERIENCE

Bill Mason Has It!

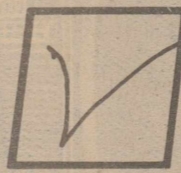

Mason has been a practicing attorney since 1962, and has tried more than 200 jury cases since that time. He has considerably more trial experience than both of his opponents combines. He has been carrying the major prosecution load of the district attorney's office ever since he became assistant district attorney of the 112th District in February 1978. His experience is an asset we need in this vital office!

INTEGRITY

Bill Mason Has It!

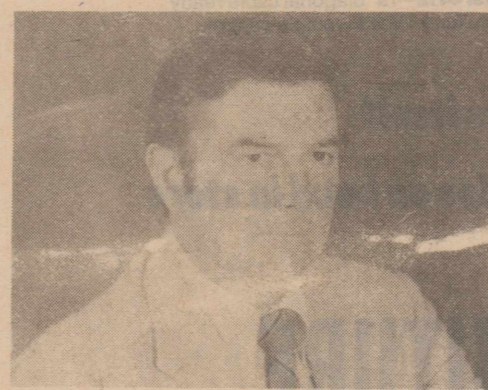

There is no question about how Bill Mason stands on the issues involving law and order, and about his desire to prosecute the criminal in our society to the full extent of the law. He is, and has been a bona fide resident of the 112th Judicial District. He's the kind of man this important office deserves.

A WORKER

Bill Mason Likes His Job -- And Works Hard At It!

Bill Mason has had very little time for campaigning, because he's doing the job we need done in the courts. He spent most of the last two months working with grand juries in all five counties of the 112th Judicial District, preparing cases for trial and obtaining indictments. He's doing a fine job as assistant D.A., and can do even more if elected to the post he seeks. Mason has earned your consideration, and respectfully asks your vote and support!

Predator Legislation Endorsed by TSCRA

Legislation that would strengthen controls on the needless slaughter of livestock by predators was strongly endorsed by the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association in testimony presented in Washington today by TSCRA President John S. Cargile of San Angelo. He spoke before a House subcommittee reviewing H.R. 6725, the Animal Damage Control Act of 1980.

Cargile, himself a cattle rancher in predator-infested West Texas, spoke for 14,000 livestock producers in Texas, Oklahoma and surrounding States. Calling for control and not total eradication of predator species like the coyote, he said existing programs are ineffective in stemming the multi-million dollar problem. Proposed new legislation, submitted by Texas Congressmen de la Garza and Loeffler, would not only protect livestock, but predator sensitive wildlife.

In the Southwest, as documented by a 1978 study conducted by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, an estimated 92,000 baby calves out of 8.38 million born annually are killed by predators. On today's market, these calves have a value of $350.00 a head. The resulting loss to cattle producers alone then is $32,268,000.

Cargile asked that the chemical compound 1080, used successfully for 20 years to control predators, but now banned, be reinstated until a suitable alternative is found. He wholeheartedly supported "accelerated research and the development of new chemicals effective in control, but harmless to the environment".

Recent policy statements on predator control by the Secretary of the Interior, Cecil Andrus, were condemned as "unacceptable" and "politically motivated".

Until animal damage control programs are extended to public lands like Fort Hood, in Central Texas, no effort to stop free-roaming predators will be successful, Cargile said. The mammoth military reservation, like other federally-controlled land pockets, represents a breeding ground from which predators can reinfest control areas, he added.

Additional funds to prevent what may become a $90 million loss for beef producers in the next three to five years were requested. "The predator situation, as you can see, is very serious, and quite frankly, is out of control," he said.

TSCRA also supported provisions in the legislation establishing an ad hoc committee with livestock producer representation to coordinate and review all federal efforts in ADC. He re-emphasized a long-standing cattleman request that the U.S. Department of Agriculture be given complete responsibility for ADC programs instead of the U.S. Department of Interior, considered by cattlemen to be biased against their needs.

"Economists agree that increased productivity is one of the best tools we have to combat inflation. It is in the public interest to control predators effectively, so the livestock can help stem unnecessary losses and can do its part in producing more food for our country. H.R. 6725 provides the direction for an effective ADC program and we urge your support of its passage," Cargile said.

Buy the best scissors

Buy the best-quality scissors or shears you can afford, because they are an investment, says one clothing specialist.

With care, good scissors and shears should last a lifetime, if they are treated with respect, Nancy Brown adds.

Miss Brown is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

One important thing to know is how scissors or shears are made.

Usually, it's one of four ways:

1. Casting is one method. It produces scissors or shears that often are brittle. They do not have much durability. Also, they are joined with a rivet.

2. Hot-drop or hot-hammer forging is another method. This product-made by pounding a red-hot bar of steel with a heavy drop hammer-retains its keenness longer, can be adjusted to a permanent finish, is durable and can be repaired.

3. Cold-pressing or forged steel is the squeezing of cold metal into forms under pressure. This method produces a product that is soft, does not maintain a sharp edge and gives only limited satisfaction.

4. In-laid means welding a thin strip of cutlery steel to a softer steel frame for purposes of adjustment and blade hardness.

This method produces very good quality shears.

Elderly volunteer class set

Volunteers presently working with senior citizens as well as those interested in working with senior citizens are cordially invited to attend a training session at the Ozona Community Center, Wednesday, April 30, from 7-9 p.m.

This invitation is extended to those working with the elderly at the Care Center, those who are interested in working through the Community Council with senior citizens who reside at home, relatives and friends of the aged who assist them in the home or in the nursing home.

The focus of this training session is to gain skills in helping the elderly in matters of mobility, transportation, and how to improve the home environment. Some attention will be given to the physical changes that the elderly undergo in the aging process and how this affects that life pattern.

Royals get third place

The Ozona Royals brought home the third place trophy from the San Angelo South Side Lions baseball tournament Sunday.

The Royals lost the first game to the tournament champions, Snyder Redlegs, by a score of 7-6, but the Royals came back and trounced the Eldorado A's by a score of 11-0. Jimmy Ortiz was the pitcher in the first game. Richard Sanchez got the shut-out win over the A's and was selected "best pitcher of tournament."

This marked the first time in two years the Royals have had to settle for consolation. They have either brought home the winning trophy or second place trophy in every tournament entered.

Snyder beat the San Angelo South Side Lions 8-4 for the win.

The Royals will be in Sonora Sunday for a double-header with the Red Sox.

Softball teams open season

The Ozona Catholic Church softball team defeated the Church of Christ team by a score of 11-6 in their season opener Monday night.

The Catholic Church team and the former Purple Gang team will be participating in a softball tournament Sunday at St. Margaret's Field close to Goodfellow Air Force Base.

Both the men and women brought home the second place trophy in this meet last year.

The men are coached by Oscar Flores and the women by Chris and Alicia Martinez.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Jerry Lay
Has any pitcher ever thrown both right-handed and left-handed in a big league baseball game? It's happened just once in major league history... Oldtime pitcher Tony Mullane threw right-handed to righty batters, and left-handed to lefty batters in several games. Others pitchers through the years have said they could pitch with either hand, but Mullane is the only one who's ever done it so far in a big league game.

Here's one hard to believe...Did you know that more people get hurt by falling in their homes than by taking part in all the toughest and most dangerous sports...That seems hard to accept, but a national insurance company made a 5-year study, and they report that in those 5 years more people got hurt at home than those who participated in all sports combined including football, skiing, boating, hunting, and all the rest.

Of all the big league baseball parks, which one has the largest seating capacity, and which one has the smallest?...Largest is Cleveland's Municipal Stadium with 65,713 seats. Smallest is Boston's Fenway Park with 33,536 seats.

I bet you didn't know... L-B Motors will be glad to help you select a new Oldsmobile, Pontiac, Buick, Chevrolet or Cadillac so come by and let Jerry or Pogue.
