Kitty's Korner

We mourn the passing this week of Mrs. Moore, Aunt Aud or Gammer, the names she was most often called.

We recall moving in from the ranch some 25 years ago to send Jim to school in Ozona. Mrs. Moore was our neighbor, and what a good one she was. With a jolly laugh and a face wreathed in smiles, she brought cookies, homemade bread and even homemade soap. It seems she never came empty-handed.

Our son was stricken with a bone disease shortly before our little girl was born, and Mrs. Moore was my comfort and solace. She eased my guilt over having a baby to care for and a little boy who also needed my attention. With Tom at the ranch during the week, quite often Mrs. Moore was my only contact with the outside world.

On a bleak winter day, here she came in her sun bonnet, apron and a coat thrown over her shoulders, always with a little something to brighten the day. She played every game you could imagine, Chinese checkers, checkers, dominoes, Old Maid and some I never heard of. If I had to go to the school or take Jim to the out-of-town doctor, I could always count on Mrs. Moore to care for the baby. Even above and beyond the call of duty. In fact as time passed, my kids seemed to think of "Gammer" as a member of the family, like all the kids in the neighborhood. It was "Mom why can't you cook pot roast like Gammer does." "Gosh mom, don't you know how to play hop scotch, Gammer does." or "Gammer makes her own soap, why don't you?"

Time passed and we moved away to another part of town. We missed Mrs. Moore, but busier and busier we became and our visits became less frequent. We met most often in the grocery store and she always had that wonderful smile and a twinkle in her eye. The last time I saw her, in fact, was grocery shopping. She paused and we visited for thirty minutes or so, catching up on old times. She had become almost blind and wrinkles had etched themselves in her cheery face, but she still had that twinkle in her eye and her youthful, happy outlook and interest in life. She was truly one of a kind and she will be long remembered by young parents who were loved by her, but will never have the fortune of having a Mrs. Moore, Aunt Aud or Gammer in their children's lives. More's the pity.

Residents to vote on $1.5 million school bond issue

Crockett County residents will have an opportunity to vote "yea" or "nay" for the preservation of the historical "old" junior high school building in a bond election set for April 19.

The old building, actually Ozona's first new rock public school building, was completed in 1912. This was Ozona's first permanent public school building and the people of Crockett County voted and issued $75,000 worth of bonds to pay for the building. Judge Davidson acted as general foreman of the construction work and Walter Kyle has charge of the masonry. It was constructed of native limestone and was two years in the building.

The school board at that time planned to erect such a permanent building, it would serve many generations of Ozona youth.

However, the school grew and the population of Ozona grew and newer and more modern school buildings began to spring up. The last bond issue was in March of 1977. When these facilities were completed, the junior high was moved to the remodeled intermediate school building, and intermediate students occupied the all-new school on Jones Street. Meanwhile, the remodeled primary school burned, and after a year of attending school in portable buildings, the new school was ready for occupancy.

This left Ozona's first permanent school building empty. Controversy arose on both sides. Some wanted to tear the old building down and build a new one in its place, while others threatened to throw themselves in front of the bulldozers, if this should come about. The controversy died down and the old building with its historical marker went to wrack and ruin. Vandals broke window panes which were never replaced, the rain ruined the window sills and floors. After the few years of disuse, they prepared several classrooms for use this year, and the sewer has backed up repeatedly. This along with lack of heating and cooling has made class room use, if not impossible, uncomfortable. In light of the fact that the majority of Ozona people did not want the building torn down, the present board, along with the new superintendent of schools, Garland Davis, made plans to remodel and restore the building, at the same time giving space for expansion of the curriculum and more class room space. They consulted with San Angelo architect Ron Barbutti, and have come up with a plan to preserve the historic monument for posterity while serving at the same time as a functional educational facility.

At present the plan for the new classrooms include provisions for a broader range of instruction at the high school level to include: instruction of handicapped students as well as the more gifted students, a vocational educational classroom, expansion of vocational education for girls, permanent classrooms for art and speech activities, a computer science classroom and remedial education classrooms.

The school board feels there is a historic monument in our community which can be preserved for posterity while serving at the same time as a functional educational facility.

The present and future students of Ozona who are taught in the modernized facility will benefit by the remodeling project, and the community will benefit because a landmark in early-day architecture will be renewed and retained.

The project will cost 1.5 million dollars, and will be financed through the issuing of bonds voted on April 19. The polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. in the law library at the Crockett County Courthouse. Absentee will be conducted at the County Clerk's office in the courthouse from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Those eligible to vote in the election are persons who are registered voters and reside within the boundaries of Crockett County. To be eligible, a voter must have registered within 30 days of the election date. All eligible voters are encouraged to vote.

The remodeled facility will be superior to the present facility in the areas of heating, cooling, lighting, acoustics, paint, repair, lowered and improved ceilings, new floors, restrooms, conference rooms, offices and furnishings. Also a new roof will be added. In other words, the entire inside of the building will be remodeled.

The issuance of bonds will extend the present bond debt from the remaining four years of the current issue to seven years, including the new issue and will increase the current nine cent tax rate for the retiring tax bonds to an average of 10.81 cents per with a fine time of 3:27.9. The team of David Badillo, David Delgado, Mark Vallejo and Marcelo Hernandez withstood the test and kept the Lions on the Victory stand for the fourth time this year.

The gusty 46 mile per hour winds and the largest track meet in West Texas made the victory even sweeter for the Lions, as they scored in nine events and continued their trophy collection.

Ozona won the meet with 73 points, followed closely by Dalhart and Frenship, who tied with 67 points each for second. Coleman came in third with 58 points. Mule-shoe was fifth with 35½, followed by Post with 35 and Denver City with 32. The rest of the field of 22 teams scored even less points.

The Lions are scheduled to compete in Monahans March 31, and will go if the injury report isn't bad at Monday's workout. The Easter break begins Wednesday and school resumes April 7. The Lions need a rest before their stretch for the District meet April 22.

DEREGULATE NATURAL GAS

By Edwin Feulner

Opponents of natural gas deregulation are fearful that such action will increase natural gas prices for America's consumers. Those who favor putting an end to government intervention in natural gas drilling and production say continued regulation will increase prices. The typical homeowner whose main worry is coming up with the money to pay the bill would appear to come out on the short end of the burner no matter who is right.

But the natural gas price controls and regulatory restrictions, in effect since 1978, tell their own story.

In Virginia and West Virginia, natural gas prices have risen 25 percent in the last year alone. In Pennsylvania, increases ranged from 21 to 28 percent. In parts of Texas and Missouri, consumers saw prices rise a staggering 60 percent, and in Southern California gas prices jumped 35 percent over the last twelve months.

Energy analyst Milton Copulos has come up with a specific formula for natural gas deregulation which would free the market while slowing down the increases in natural gas costs consumers can expect to pay.

A first step would be to return natural gas pipelines to their original purpose — as common carriers of natural gas, rather than wholesalers.

Although the function of pipelines is to transport gas, the companies which own them have effectively become monopoly wholesalers of natural gas since the Natural Gas Policy Act was enacted five years ago. The pipelines, in most cases, are able to pass through the full cost of gas purchases to the consumer and, as a result, there is no incentive to keep costs down, Copulos says.

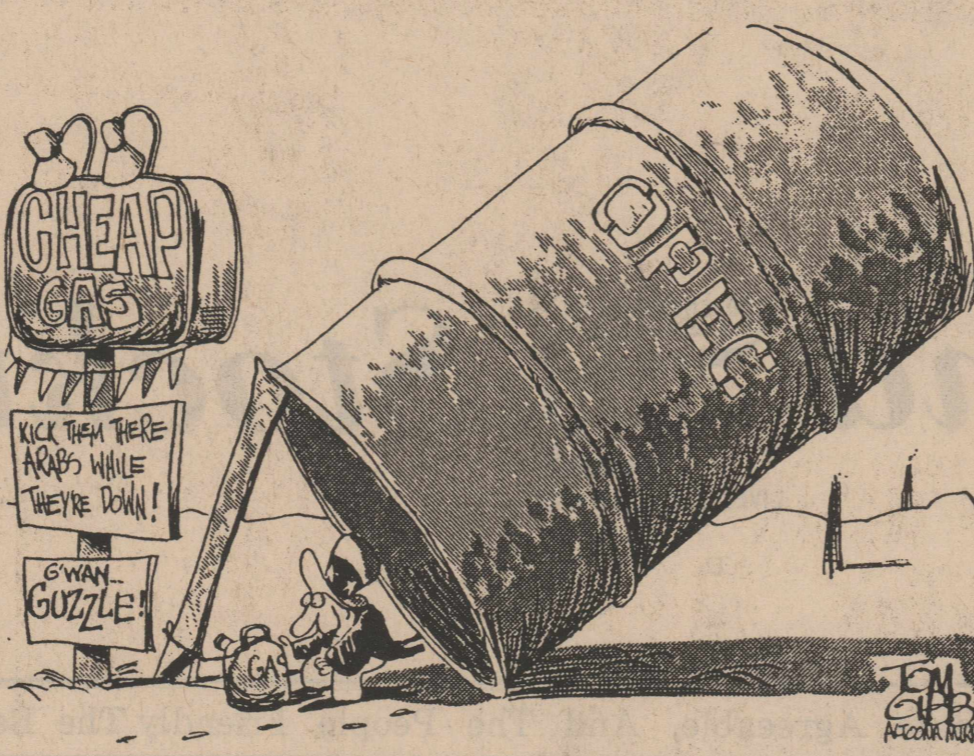

For gas producers, the situation is no better. "Because they contract with pipelines, which are regulated monopolies, rather than the ultimate consumer... the pipelines not only determine the price a producer receives, but how much he can sell as well," Copulos observes.

Using the federal government's authority in a constructive way by establishing a period of 'renegotiation' on existing gas contracts would end the pipeline monopoly and give local distributors and industrial customers the chance to enter into their own agreements with producers — thus eliminating the extra costs incurred through the pipelines. As the deregulation process moves forward, Copulos says, gas pipelines would become limited common carriers, with the obligation to only transport, not supply, gas, in the same way oil pipelines operate.

Copulos also suggests that all current import licenses for natural gas be reviewed to determine whether to allow them to continue. "If foreign governments continued to insist that their producers charge above-market prices, then their import licenses would be invalidated, and U.S. domestic producers could make up the supply deficit."

If these things are carried out, Copulos says, the entire structure of the natural gas market could be altered fundamentally. Buyers would be able to contract directly with sellers, and at a price mutually agreed to. "For the first time in four decades, the consumer would again be able to exercise his will," he says.

Less than two years ago oil price controls were lifted by the Reagan administration — to dire warnings from the professional "consumerists" and their congressional allies that oil prices would go through the roof. The only thing going through the roof these days are the Arab oil sheiks, whose OPEC empire is tottering at the brink as oil prices continue to fall.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
 TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Lt. Gov Bill Hobby, the man in the midst of the Legislature's struggle to balance the state budget, last week proposed an innovative budget strategy to avoid a possible tax hike.

Meanwhile, beleaguered House Speaker Gib Lewis found himself in hot water with senators over his chief of staff selection—and Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox filed a multi-million dollar lawsuit against the manufacturer and retailer of a television set which he said was the cause of the recent Capitol fire.

Mattox said experts had determined that the Capitol blaze which gutted the Senate wing was caused by an internal short in a 3½ month-old television set in Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's guest apartment.

He is seeking "several million dollars"—the exact sum will be figured at a future date—to repair the damaged Capitol.

Speaker Lewis, who a few weeks ago found himself at odds with the press over his failure to disclose some 21 business interests—including business partnerships with lobbyists—on his financial disclosure report, found himself drawing political fire from a group of red hot senators.

Senate Anger

Lewis announced last week that he had hired former State Rep. Buddy Jones, Hillsboro lawyer, as his chief of staff. The news set off a wave of anger from Democratic senators—an odd disturbance since each chamber rarely, if ever, interferes with the business affairs of the other.

The group sent two senators to dine with Lewis at week's end and discuss a remedy. Their bone-to-pick includes Jones' ties with the lobby, but more directly they are concerned because Jones lost an '82 senate bid in the Democratic primary to Sen. Chet Edwards, and then crossed party loyalties by campaigning for Republican Gov. Bill Clements.

The confrontation only served to cloud Lewis' future, just when it seemed his controversy-plagued Speakership would find even keel. Instead, Lewis is still hampered by a wide-spreading feeling that he cannot keep himself out of political hot water.

Just three weeks ago, he angered senators by warning their bills might run into trouble in the House if they voted against confirmation of his hunting buddy, Lias Steen. Soon thereafter, Hobby countered by refusing to forward Senate-passed bills to the House—a move which eventually led to Lewis' rescinding a new rule hampering Senate bills.

Hobby's Budget Plan

Hobby's budget plan would offer a compromise for legislators torn over whether to raise taxes or cut spending in the face of predicted dwindling state revenues.

The canny budget leader has proposed an appropriations bill composed of two parts: the first part would allocate funds for a balanced budget based on Comptroller Bob Bullock's revised revenue estimates. The second part would direct how an additional $1.5 billion would be spent if a tax increase becomes necessary.

Bullock is scheduled to produce yet another revenue estimate revision in early April which is predicted to reduce available monies even further.

Highways, Education Cuts

Without a tax increase, legislators have to cut some $900 million from proposed budgets. Hobby's outline states pay increases for state employees and cuts public school and highway funding. The funds would be restored if the Legislature raises taxes for part two.

Hobby called his plan "just one way of approaching the state budget", leaving it to lawmakers to shape their own budget decisions.

A worried Senate last week passed and sent to the House three bills increasing various state fees and raising more than $73 million.

The three bills sponsored by Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, would increase some state fees which had not been raised in more than 50 years.

Senate Action

The Senate also passed bills last week which would: —ratify the federal-state agreement transferring some 19,000 federally-owned acres on Matagorda Island to the state.

—increase license fees for alcohol beverage permits. —put "pen registers", or devices which can track incoming telephone calls, under state wiretap laws. Law enforcement officers would have to get a court order to install a pen register.

House Action

The House, meanwhile, passed bills which: —Put management of the Battleship Texas under the Parks and Wildlife Dept.

—Give mothers of illegitimate children an additional 16 years to file paternity suits.

Clements, EPA, IXTOC

Former Gov. Bill Clements' staff denied last week they knew of an alleged attempt on the part of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to influence the Texas gubernatorial election.

Recently disclosed EPA documents suggested use of timely allocations of the agencies "Superfund" cleanup money to help Clements defeat Mark White. Clements' 1982 campaign manager, Jim Francis, denied any knowledge of the plan.

Also last week, the Clements-built, Dallas-based SEDCO, Inc. agreed to pay $2.14 million to settle class action claims filed by shrimp fishermen, resort operators and other Gulf Coast businesses.

SEDCO, an oil drilling firm, was involved in the 1979 Bay of Campeche oil spill which released an estimated 3.1 million barrels of crude oil that spoiled Texas and Mexican beaches.

Atty. Gen. Jim Mattox, speaking at a Baylor University conference last week, supported the controversial Supreme Court ban on school prayer.

Mattox, a Baptist, said the issue was inflammatory and used by politicians to get money and votes.

OUR FUTURE
 Predictions from Experts
 An Encouraging Forecast

The greatest progress in urban revitalization has come through public/private cooperative efforts and this is where the best prospects for future achievement lie. So says the president and chief operating officer of one of America's leading building products companies, Georgia-Pacific. Here, T. Marshall Hahn Jr., tells how communities can play to their strengths.

The future for our inner cities is brighter today than it was 10 years ago. One recent trend favoring urban revitalization has been the movement of suburbanites back to the city, because of higher energy prices, changing lifestyles and the many amenities only a major city can offer. These factors help account for some of the exceptional urban revitalization successes that have characterized the past decade.

The greatest progress has come through cooperative efforts involving public officials and private industry. To be successful, these programs must have the active involvement of business and government leaders, with a basic respect for each other's needs and objectives. Also, the public must be made aware of the problems of central city decline, and shown the benefits of downtown revival.

Another important factor in a successful revitalization is to play to your strengths.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

March 29, 1983

Dear Editor:

Have you by chance noticed any of the changes that have been going on with the people in Ozona? Before I go on, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly thank Oscar Kost for bringing us the great Christian station TBN. If anybody out there watches it, they will have to agree that it is certainly a refreshingly new experience from all the violence, sex, and drugs shown on other channels. The really great thing that I have noticed is the attendance in church which has grown from moderate to quite massive. I am quite sure that TBN has quite a bit to do with it.

TBN has a variety of programs which include: health, physical fitness, Christian movies, fantastic musical programs, revivals which come to us from all over the United States, and most important of all, teachings on the Word of the Lord, the Bible. I may have missed some of the programs, but there is something for everybody.

At this point, I would like to invite Ozonans who have not tuned in, to take some time and watch this great station. If you would like to know how you might be able to get TBN, I'm sure Mr. Kost would be more than happy to tell you, as there are different ways to get it. If there is something missing in your life, this just might be the answer.

Praise the Lord for the founders of TBN: Paul and Jan Crouch.
 Yours in the Lord,
 Aurora Najar

Dan has been in scouts for many years, starting with Cub Scouts, where he achieved the Arrow of Light award, equivalent to the Eagle award in Boy Scouts. In Boy Scouts, Dan served as Patrol leader and Senior Patrol leader and was inducted into the Order of the Arrow.

Tips For Gardeners

From The Ozona Garden Club by Mrs. Bailey Post

Another Easter with its message of rebirth and renewal is here. If you would see a beautiful world look about you at this time.

To keep our country beautiful, everyone should realize that a new and deeper challenge faces mankind to enter a program devoted to environmental improvement where "Nature, Man, and Science" are all concerned. If each person assisted in bringing renewal to a small section of our nation or city, a serious trend toward deterioration could be reversed without losing valuable time.

The popular flowering dogwood is often called the most beautiful of spring-blooming trees. They prefer well-drained soil, slightly acid and filtered sunlight. If you plant three different kinds you will have blooms to continue through June. Many of you are familiar with the white or pink display of the familiar dogwood (Cornus florida) but two other dogwoods will add their beauty to your landscape. Cornelian cherry (C. mas) is the earliest to bloom, filling the garden with bright-ye-ow blossoms - Kousa dogwood (C. koreana) begins its show a month later which waits to bloom until the tree is leafed out. The one I have enjoyed so much, that I brought several along when we moved. It is a native of Mississippi and grows real well here for as many have gotten cuttings from it. It does spread out, so give it plenty of room. Other selections are available. Apple blossom (pink and white bracts), Cherokee Chief (deep pink), cloud 9 (white), Cherokee Princess (white, larger blossoms). Rubra is also a good pink selection. A selection called Pygmy grows to only 6 ft. tall. Plant dogwood in soil that is well drained, moderately fertile. During the first growing season, keep well watered unless rainfall is very steady. After planting, apply a 3" layer of mulch to conserve moisture and discourage grass and weed growth near the trunk.

APRIL PLANTING TIME
Above-ground crops - 14, 15, 19, 20, 25, 26
Root crops - 1, 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, 27, 28

League has wide range of activities this month

Ozona Woman's League has filled the month of March with a variety of activities ranging from the kitchen to local politics.

March 8 found the group in the Civic Center learning more about "gourmet cooking at home" demonstrated by club member Lou Deaton. Bennie Gail Hunnicutt and Nesa Chandler were hostesses.

George Ann Aycock's home was the meeting place for the March 22, business meeting directed by president Sherry Scott. Cathy Carson assisted Mrs. Aycock as hostess. Committee chairmen gave reports on the year's projects and their progress. That evening the League sponsored the "Meet Your Candidates" session held in the High School Auditorium giving the local citizens an opportunity to hear from the men running in this month's school board election.

March 28 the Woman's League brought entertainment to the Ozona School students when San Angelo Central Choir Ensemble performed for the different schools throughout the day. The League provided the group with a luncheon at the Civic Center.

Following the ceremony, members held a meeting in which they discussed the upcoming Cancer Drive. The drive, which is slated for April 18, will begin at 5 p.m. on that day, and Sorority members will canvass area homes for donations to the American Cancer Society.

Citizens are urged to rally to this important cause when a volunteer comes to their homes.

Working women have little time to relax

Many working women with families find the responsibilities of job and family leave them very little time to relax.

"Consequently, these women risk physical and emotional well-being and problems at home and work," says Diane Welch, family life education specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Studies show that women working outside the home sacrifice about 14 hours of leisure time each week. So how does a working mother balance responsibilities and still have free time?

Here are some suggestions from Welch which should allow for free time and help one to maintain an equilibrium between responsibilities and leisure.

"Develop time management skills to increase free time," she suggests. "Analyze routines and better organize days by setting reasonable goals, jotting down appointment times and making lists to help remember details."

Use a "family calendar" and post notices to help remind others of responsibilities and decisions related to household tasks.

"Plan for shopping needs in advance, buy in quantity when possible, utilize mail orders when financially advantageous and concentrate on shopping in areas convenient to home and/or work," Welch suggests.

Schedule family, personal and health care services in advance, she says, then place them on the family calendar. This allows for cancellation and rescheduling if necessary.

"Plan time for exercise and recreation and do each consistently," she continues. "Such activity can also involve family and friends."

Use resources and experiences to help develop management skills, she says. Concentrate on topics such as time and/or money management, food preparation, interpersonal communication and record-keeping.

"Encourage other family members to plan their extracurricular activities together to avoid 'family overload' and more obligations than family members can successfully handle," Welch comments.

Learn to recognize personal signs of stress and use stress reducers to relieve tension, she adds.

Find a brief period each day to "get away from it all" as a technique for reducing daily stress. Whether it's reading, listening to music, meditating, enjoying nature or just being alone, each person's physical, emotional, intellectual and spiritual energies can be recharged, Welch notes.

"With many demands for both work and family, finding 'personal time' isn't always easy, but in the long run being happy and relaxed will benefit everyone," Welch adds.

It is not a pretty picture

The crosses in the shadows were real. Three hung there and died in agony . . . two for their own wrongdoing . . . one for yours.

That chapter to which the Book lies open - it tells of the scandal . . . the indignity . . . the injustice - and the pain.

The lilies? . . . symbols of what men call Easter Day! When the women found the tomb empty . . .

and were afraid to believe He was risen . . .

IT is not a pretty picture. IT is the stark reminder of man's distrust of God . . . and God's love of man.

And you'll let nothing keep you from worshipping your Lord when you stop thinking of IT as a pretty picture.

IT happened.

For you - IT happened.

Extension office news

Most of us think that playing with our babies is something we do just to entertain them or to express our love. But research shows that quality interaction with a significant, caring adult also contributes to a baby's mental development.

Many studies demonstrate that infants who receive stimulation during the first year of life are more likely to do well in kindergarten and early elementary school experiences. Parents who read books to their children, sing and talk to their children, answer their questions, and play with them in a stimulating way are more likely to have children with higher levels of mental development.

Research done in the 1960's first showed that infants and young children from impoverished homes could increase their mental capacities when they were played with and stimulated in programs such as Head Start.

In spite of all the research, a significant number of babies do not receive enough quality interaction with their parents. For example, babies born to very young mothers are "at risk" for quality mental development.

Today, one girl in eleven is a mother before she is 18 years old. Babies born to very young mothers are much less likely to have IQ's of 100 or above at the end of infancy. Many adolescent mothers come from low-income families and this contributes to the problem of quality mental development of their infants.

Parents who are poor experience stress that robs them of the time, energy, and motivation to respond to their young children. Research shows that families under economic stress do not talk to their children or play with them as much as other families.

Since all children benefit from quality interaction with adults, we need to educate all parents to play with their children.

2 teaspoons chili powder
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup ripe olives, sliced

Karise Aycock awarded

Karise Aycock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Aycock, has been named a 1983 United States National Award winner in Journalism by the United States Achievement Academy.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than ten percent of all American high school students.

Karise, who attends Ozona High School, was nominated for this National Award by Mrs. Jan Henderson, English and Journalism teacher. Karise will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

Vaccines may be cause of college measles cases

Less effective vaccines and immunization guidelines used in the 1960s may explain why colleges in Texas and in other parts of the country are experiencing outbreaks of red measles, a Baylor College of Medicine pediatrician said today.

By March 23, 30 cases of red measles (rubeola) had occurred at the University of Houston. Another outbreak in February resulted in a total of 85 cases at Indiana and Purdue Universities. Baylor University had 80 cases last September and October.

Peter Andrus, M.D., a pediatrician at Baylor, said today's college-age students may have been vaccinated at too early an age. Or, they may have received a vaccine that did not give them life-long immunity to the red measles, also known as the ten-day measles.

Symptoms of red measles are coughing, runny nose, red and watery eyes, fever, a red rash, and tiny red patches with bluish-white specks inside the cheeks. The illness usually lasts from one to two weeks but can result in pneumonia, a middle ear infection, and encephalitis. A rare complication of red measles is subacute sclerosing panencephalitis, which involves mental deterioration, muscle spasms, convulsions, coma and usually death.

The red measles is not the same as the German measles, also known as rubella or three-day measles. Both are caused by viruses, but the red measles causes a more severe illness. However, non-immune women exposed to the German measles during the first three months of pregnancy commonly bear children with birth defects.

The first red measles vaccine became available in 1963; a stronger one was licensed a few years later. Current guidelines recommend vaccination at 15 months of age.

"Because the earlier vaccines were not as effective as those used now," Andrus said, "some individuals who got the old vaccines did not develop immunity. Now, as young adults, they are being exposed to measles and may be susceptible even though they were vaccinated."

He also said that in the early days of measles vaccination, children were immunized between nine and 12 months of age.

"Studies done a few years ago showed that a higher percentage of those vaccinated at 15 months of age developed immunity, than those vaccinated at earlier ages," Andrus said.

People who haven't had the measles and are concerned about whether they are adequately protected, should try to locate their childhood immunization records. If they were vaccinated before 15 months of age, or with the weaker vaccine, it won't do any harm to get another vaccination.

While a number of outbreaks are occurring on college campuses, the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta report that the number of U.S. cases has decreased markedly.

Full-scale efforts to eradicate measles in the United States began in the mid-1970s, and now all 50 states and the District of Columbia require immunization against red measles before a child may enter public schools.

Owl faculty edges locals in benefit

By-Ross Alexander

In an exciting down-to-the-wire basketball clash, the Owl Faculty from Reagan County High School squeaked past the OHS faculty 55-53 in the first annual benefit basketball classic in Davidson Memorial Gymnasium Monday evening before a fine local crowd.

The Owl team led by their sharp-eyed shooters Larry Cole and Bobby McDonald with a tough inside game from Rob Taylor, managed to take a sizable lead after the second half got underway, necessitating a frantic come-from-behind effort by the Lion staff in the closing minutes of the game.

Fine passes from John Curry and Big Lake's Robert Sexton provided some flashy thrills to the game, which was played at a frantic schoolyard pace.

Cole, whose 23 points led all scorers was somewhat hummer in victory. "I guess we were just a little lucky out there tonight to get as many as we did to go in for us. It was fun and maybe this will come to be a yearly event...at any rate, I certainly hope so. It's all for such a good cause."

Ozona's Don Abbott, whose long bombs brought the crowd to it's feet during the contest, was grateful for the community's support.

"I really want to thank the wonderful residents of this town for coming out and supporting this endeavor this evening. It was so much fun, and I think I speak for both faculty teams when I say that. I believe that we've got something here that can be an annual event, and it's for such a terrific cause. The team from Big Lake played very well this evening and so did we. Next time, it'll be Ozona's turn. I noticed that our principal wasn't with us tonight and theirs was...that might have made the difference this evening."

The next Big Lake-Ozona clash will occur in late April when the Big Lake All-Stars, featuring Greg Fisher, will tangle with the Ozona All Stars in a benefit softball game.

Any Ozona merchants and professional people interested in participating in this coed softball game, should contact Captain Jerry Lay.

Ozonan's son excels at Yale University

By-Koss Alexander

It's a long way from the oilfields of West Texas to the ivy-covered halls of Yale Law School, and Doug Smith knows it. Yet, that is exactly where his son, Reuben is presently attending graduate school.

Reuben Antonio Smith has certainly put together an impressive 26 years. Reuben received a Bachelor of Science in Public Affairs in '79 from Southern Cal. and in '82 received his MPA in Public Administration from the same school. He has studied at Cambridge, England, worked at the White House with the office of Hispanic Affairs, conducted important research projects for the International Justice Fund, as well as having written speeches for the President and First Lady, the Carters.

"One of our great thrills was having breakfast at the White House during Reuben's tenure with the President's staff," his mother, Connie Smith, said with a broad grin.

Reuben had been an outstanding high school student (Who's Who) and when he graduated from So. Cal., he was selected the Most Outstanding Graduating Senior, receiving the prestigious Senior Letter of Merit, from the School of Public Administration.

"He's received so many honors until I simply can't keep up with them all," Reuben's father said recently. He currently is the editor of the Yale Review and is contributing to the Yale Law Journal. I know how interested he is in Hispanic affairs, and he is a founding member of the Hispanic Pre-Law Association."

Reuben's experience in political circles has been extensive, and this writer asked his mom how she'd like to see Reuben land a Foreign Service position.

"I've given that quite a bit of thought, since he is specializing in International Law. Both his father and I are all for it as long as he doesn't receive a post in El Salvador or one of those hot spots in that volatile area of Central America."

Reuben comes home during the summers and his father was asked what he will do with Reuben when he gets here.

With an impish twinkle in his eye, Doug Smith winked and said, Oh, I guess I'll get him to help me cut the grass or something."

A&M has more honor scholars

More National Merit Scholars are enrolled at Texas A&M University this year than at any other public institution in the nation, according to figures compiled by the National Merit Scholarship Corp.

Texas A&M ranks sixth overall among more than 3,000 colleges and universities nationwide with 445 National Merit Scholars. The first five schools - led by Harvard with 987 - are all private institutions.

Two other Texas schools were also ranked in the top 10, with Rice University, a private institution, placing third with 554, and the University of Texas at Austin ranked eighth nationally with 413.

"We are very gratified that so many National Merit Finalists are choosing to study at Texas A&M.

ENGAGEMENT TOLD-Mr. and Mrs. Chris Hagelstein of Sanderson, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Dennise, to Mr. John Pittillo of Fort Stockton. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pittillo of Fort Stockton. The couple will be married July 22, at 3 o'clock in First Presbyterian Church in Fort Stockton. She is a May graduate of Sanderson High School. He is a graduate of Fort Stockton High School, and is an operator for Farmland Industries. The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ele Hagelstein, formerly of Ozona.

Food stamp abusers to face stiffer fines

Beginning April 1, people who abuse the food stamp program will face stiffer penalties, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Mary C. Jarratt said today.

"Under this new policy, individuals found guilty of a third food stamp offense will be permanently barred from the program," Jarrett said.

Those found guilty of two offenses will be barred from the program for one year and those who abuse the program a first time will not receive food stamps for six months.

Jarratt said, "We are determined to safeguard the food stamp program by going after the people who are abusing the program. States in the Southwest Region of USDA's Food and Nutrition Service have taken several measures to intensify enforcement of Food Stamp regulations, Jarratt said.

These states, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas, have beefed up investigative staffs, put the computer to work searching our cheaters and channeled increased federal funding to local jurisdictions to encourage enforcement.

The penalties will apply to all individuals regardless of whether they are determined guilty of food stamp abuse at state or local administrative disqualification hearings or in courts of law, Jarratt said. They also apply to individuals who make false or misleading statements, conceal or withhold facts, make other misrepresentations or commit any act that violates a state food stamp law.

The new rule will make it easier for states to collect overpayments from households. Currently, only the disqualified individual is responsible for repaying fraudulent overissuances. Under the new rule, the household will have the option of repaying the overissuance in cash, with food stamp coupons or through a reduction in its monthly food stamp allotment.

States may keep 50 percent of the amount collected on recipient fraud claims and 25 percent of the amount collected on inadvertent recipient error claims. These provisions are part of the 1981 Omnibus Reconciliation Act and the 1982 Food Stamp Amendments.

Registration and tryouts for these teams will commence April 19. All persons interested in working with the program this season should contact any of the above, according to Ross Alexander.

Notes from the locker room -

By-Ross A. Alexander

OHS golf coach studied his response to a writer's question and carefully selected his words in his reply.

"If you're asking me if I'm disappointed this year, the answer is yes...I'd say I'm mildly disappointed. I feel that we've not played up to our full capability thus far, although only 2 of our 5 scheduled district matches have been played. Frankly, no one is playing exceptionally well...the spate of fickle weather seems to have bothered us, but you must remember that our competition also had to deal with the elements. We're coming along though, and I remain somewhat optimistic."

Coach Probst is still sitting in third place in district, behind second place Colorado City, and first place Crane, with three very big opportunities coming quickly to improve on the team's posture in District. April 8th in San Angelo, Sonora on the 12th, and here on the 21st of the month.

Evelyn St. Clair is hitting the ball well and has improved her short game considerably, something the entire girl's team needs to do. The team leader has to be Jennifer Justiss, who just might repeat her regional-quality performance of last year if everything goes well. Bobbi's game has been progressing, at a somewhat staggered pace, but folks need not worry, Bobbi is one excellent golfer who can be counted on to give a good account for herself and Ozona High.

"Bobbi's coming on I feel," her coach said guardedly. "She has been slowed perhaps in getting off the mark by the livestock showings that have only recently been over with. But she's beginning to hit the ball real well and I certainly feel that she will come around in time to really help the team." Jennifer and Bobbi are both juniors as is Kristal. Dona Lilly and Evelyn round out a squad that will improve with each passing day. David Badillo, David Delgado, (whose leg of the 1600 relay was super) mercurial Mark Vallejo, and the finest 800 talent in Texas, Marcello Hernandez, made all of us in San Angelo so proud Saturday, when they exploded in the final relay event of the day for Division III schools. "That relay was worth the price of admission alone," a prominent Ozona community leader said afterwards. "Now the entire region knows that the Lion track team is back and certainly speeding on track."

Close-up of a legend: Ozona's own Rip Sewell

By-Ross A. Alexander

Ellen Sewell glanced up at a July Moon on her family's 1969 vacation outing, while the radio bulletin cackled the news of the 1st American lunar walk. Neither Ellen nor Rip realized at the time that decisions made during that period back in Crockett County Texas would significantly affect their family for years...even long after the wonder of the moonwalk had diminished.

Ellen always had wanted Rip to be happy, and he'd chosen to be a coach, at an enormous sacrifice of earning potential and higher-paying possibilities he had briefly flirted with after graduation from college. She was only a sophomore in college when she met Rip. He was the star quarterback at Tulsa, one of the most heavily recruited QB's to ever come out of Electra, Texas. Over 30 colleges had wooed Rip, but he chose Tulsa. (Ellen married Rip one year after they met).

Rip knew what he really wanted to do with his life, and he knew that the life of a coach's wife can be an emotional, highly uncertain roller coaster ride, full of dips and twists, and unforeseen falls and rises. He'd need an adventurer, an explorer, a hearty female unafraid of the unknown, one strong enough to handle the life of a coach's wife. Rip was convinced that Ellen was the right girl for the job. His call was correct.

His early successes in Wellman and Plains affirmed his ability to coach winning teams, and there were few dips to complicate the proceedings. How pleasantly surprised Ellen must have been when they found that Rip had been selected to assume the Head Coach's position in Ozona, as they travelled home from their Colorado vacation.

When told the news coach Rip had quickly retorted, "I hope NOT...A man would have to be a fool to take that job...there's only a couple of lettermen returning and they'll both be seniors."

But upon returning, Mr. Sikes curtly said "Shut up...you've got it...go to work!! And Rip did. He lost 7 straight his first season. Coach Rip sat back and became quietly reflective as he discussed those days and his notions of what coaching involves. "When you stay in a business 31 years, you've got to like it. I nearly starved to death. I took moonlighting jobs. I drove tractors, worked in filling stations, helped print the paper and did everything I could to feed my family because I wanted to teach."

And Coach Rip wanted to coach...notwithstanding the dips. That's life. "I'd never have finished high school, or gone on to college if it hadn't been for a coach named Brewster back in Electra, Texas when I was in the 7th grade. He put some character in me and I went on to finish with honors. I've wanted to give back something someone gave to me."

Coach Rip's voice became almost inaudible as he indulged in an interesting and revealing self-analysis.

"I've tried hard...real hard...I wish that I had a lot of soft character about me, but I do not have. I was probably mean...I was probably onery...but what I was trying mostly to do was to make men out of those young guys. And there's many of them that will come to your house 20 years after you coached them, and they thank you...some way, somehow."

Coach Rip paused and chose his words very thoughtfully as a frown etched itself across his forehead.

"A head coach has so many unwritten responsibilities that are there. The respect is there from the students, the parents, from teachers, and if you do a good job, it reflects real well on the school and in the community and definitely up on your players. If you don't do a good job, you're not going to stay there very long. If you're going to do a good job today, you better be on your toes and sharp...the kids are sharper...psychology is hard to use today. It was real easy years ago."

Coach Rip turned the Ozona team around and won District in his subsequent season, and after that he made the correct call and at the correct time very frequently, predictably enough, and carved himself out a legendary niche across the years...compiling 110 wins on the gridiron with 58 losses and over 217 career basketball victories. His tracksters have not lost a regular season meet since March of '80.

Coach Rip recruited Don Abbott and knew instinctively that he'd lured the right man to Ozona, at the right time, to take charge of his Lion program. Again, Coach Rip made a correct call...and its something that he doesn't care whether folks know widely. Coach Rip is that way.

When this writer asked him about that inevitable retirement day, the Lion legend smiled and rubbed his old chin slowly and closed one eye. "There's a time when every man's got to do something. Your retirement is always here. I've got 4 or 5 more years at the most, although I don't know that I'll be coaching that long or not...I may have to step aside and turn it over to somebody else. I've got to continue to help...the day I lose enthusiasm...the day I get to where I don't enjoy this...then...I'll step aside real quick."

Coach Rip flashed his classic grin and one could observe a sort of satisfied come-what-ever type twinkle in his eye that clearly indicated that his retirement isn't something he loses any sleep about.

A legend doesn't have to. Ellen and her man must recall that Aspen Camp-ground summer in '69 with a pleasant sense of irony.

The man's remarkable career, his choice of that remarkable female, and the love and respect he has received from this remarkable town, has certainly been a moonwalk of sorts...one not the least bit diminished.

Brownies meet for re-dedication ceremony

Brownie Troop 172 met Tuesday night, March 22, in the home of Mrs. Dean Phillips for a Candlelight Rededication Ceremony in which members of the troop renewed their Girl Scout Promise and reviewed the Girl Scout Laws. They were pinned by Nikki Dunn.

In the ceremony, each girl lit a candle as she repeated a law or promise. Susan Pullen led the Girl Scout Prayer and later the troop sang the Brownie Smile song. The girls were visited by members of Junior Girl Scout Troop 192 who answered questions about what it is like to be a Junior Girl Scout. Sarah Pullen taught them the Girl Scout song, and showed her medals and badges.

Screwworm lab still seeking samples

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Screwworm Laboratory at Mission is still open, staffed with people, and engaged in a "behind the lines" fight against reinfestation of screwworms in the United States, announces Billy Reagor, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

The screwworm eradication program has been and continues to be highly successful in Mexico. Extra effort on the part of producers and owners of household pets could insure that any incoming case is detected early before an outbreak occurs and a sustaining population could become established, Reagor reminds.

In the event that screwworms should re-enter the United States, they probably will come in on an imported animal—a dog, cat or some form of livestock. It would likely be an isolated case, making it difficult to detect.

For this reason, veterinary practitioners and livestock owners who might come in contact with such a case of worm infestation should be extra vigilant in examining wounds and submitting larval samples between now and the onset of hot weather, the agent adds.

Blowflies, in general occur in cycles and screwworms fit into this cycle pattern. To anticipate the probability of screwworm buildup, the Screwworm Laboratory at Mission needs larvae of all kinds to give an indication about when screwworms might occur. This situation depends on availability of wounds, the time of year, soil moisture, temperature and humidity.

When a large buildup of macellaria is identified conditions are good for screwworm buildup. Many other forms of blowflies occur during periods when conditions are not as favorable for screwworms, so the collection and examination of all larvae samples—whether they appear to be screwworms or not—is extremely vital to the Screwworm Laboratory's surveillance program during late winter and early spring.

Only the screwworm production plant has moved to Mexico. At Mission, staff members are still trapping flies, making rancher surveys, and distributing collection kits. Livestock inspectors from Mission continue to attend livestock sales and shows and solicit cooperation from ranchers. They also provide information and sample mailers. Early detection of screwworms is still the goal and key to a successful program.

Send worm samples to: USDA, P.O. Box 969, Moore Air Base, Mission, Tx. 78572 For mailing kits or other information, call Area Code 512/585-1645.

Bluebonnet trail set April 9-10 & 16-17

The 22nd annual Highland Lakes Bluebonnet Trail is set for April 9-10 and April 16-17. The Trail winds its way through the Hill Country communities of Marble Falls, Kingland, Llano, Buchanan Dam, Burnet, and Lampasas, where the bluebonnets are sure to be in full bloom.

The map of the Trail is provided by the Highland Lakes Tourist Association so the lover of bluebonnets will know where the best areas are for viewing. In each of the Bluebonnet Trail communities, a special local arts and crafts fair has been prepared as an added attraction to the natural beauty of the Texas State Flower.

The best way to enjoy the Bluebonnet Trail is to plan a leisurely drive through any parts of the trail, stopping to enjoy the scenery, the points of interest, and the arts and crafts fairs. There are no admission charges to enjoy the flowers and no specific order in which the trail should be followed.

A special Bluebonnet Trail Bus Tour has been planned for those who prefer to travel with a group. These tours will leave the Austin Chamber of Commerce at 9:00 a.m. each morning of the Trail, April 9, 10, 16, and 17, and return at 5:00 p.m. The Bus Tour will include the best of the Bluebonnet Trail, or for more information on the Bus Tour, write the Highland Lakes Tourist Association at: Bluebonnet Trail, P.O. Workshop set on micro-computers

Workshops to help farm and ranch families and agribusinessmen learn more about microcomputers will be held at the Marriott Hotel in Austin, April 4-5, and at the Airport Holiday Inn in San Antonio, May 24-25.

The workshops will deal with the use of microcomputers in farm and ranch management and will include both basic and advanced sessions on using computers, say Lawrence Lippke and Joe Pena, economists with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. Lippke is coordinating the event at Austin while Pena is handling the San Antonio session.

Advanced sessions will provide some insight into operating systems and BASIC programming procedures (a special computer program for beginners). Use of computers in the home will be discussed, and there will be opportunities for workshop participants to get "hands on" experience. The latest is microcomputer hardware and software currently available for the agricultural family will be displayed, note the economists.

Each workshop will begin at 1 p.m. the opening day with introductory and advanced sessions. Discussions on microcomputer applications in farm and ranch management and in home and family resource management will highlight the introductory sessions. Also, discussions on computer hardware and software will be featured plus tips on selecting a microcomputer. And participants will be briefed on what Texas A&M is doing in developing software for computers.

Those attending the advanced sessions will hear discussions on operating systems and will get an introduction to BASIC programming.

ing, note Lippke and Pena. Specialized concurrent sessions will also be featured during the two-day workshops.

Workshop participants will be able to take part in one of the six concurrent sessions the first afternoon. These sessions will continue the second day and will deal with accounting systems, electronic worksheets, home and family resource management, farm and ranch financial management, crop and livestock management decision aids, and marketing and policy decision aids.

Further information about the workshops is available from Lippke at 713/823-8011, from Pena at 512/278-9151, or from any county Extension office.

Microwave oven use is at an all-time high

Although the number of microwave ovens in use is at an all time high, many consumers still question their safety.

"Yet the microwave oven is the only product to show zero incidence of injury under the federal government's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System," says Bonnie Piernot, family resource management specialist. Piernot is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Consumer doubt about microwave safety is most often due to misunderstanding about the nature of microwave radiation versus ionizing radiation or x-rays, explains Piernot.

Microwaves are a non-ionizing form of energy located between radio waves and infra-red light in the electromagnetic energy spectrum. We are constantly exposed to low levels of these types of energy without harm.

The body does not store microwaves as it does ionizing radiation. So microwaves do not cause cumulative damage to the tissue.

Overexposure to high intensity microwave energy can be hazardous. But the Food and Drug Administration requires manufacturers to meet safety standards for the amount of microwaves that can leak from an oven.

According to Piernot, recent research suggests that consumers should be more concerned about the hazards resulting from improper use of a microwave oven. Consumers can, however, easily insure safe use of the appliance by following these simple guidelines.

A microwave oven should not be used on a two-wire circuit. Using a three-to-two-pin converter plug or cutting off the ground pin creates the risk of serious shock.

Only recommended materials should be used for cleaning the appliance. Abrasive plastic and wire wools can damage the surface of the oven and may eventually cause small burns around the door seal which can lead to increased leakage.

Since a damaged door can leak microwave radiation, all ovens should be placed where the door cannot be harmed by falling or by hitting other things. Also, place the oven beyond the reach of young children, because the door edges are sharp for design purposes.

Do not put chemicals into the oven for experiments at home or school.

Have only a qualified technician service the appliance. Internal filters need cleaning after 300-500 hours of operation, which amounts to about two to three years of normal home use. Household handymen run the risk of injuries from exposure to high level microwaves by attempting to service or repair an oven themselves.

When in doubt about a potential microwave hazard, Piernot suggests that consumers consult their service manual, or contact their county Extension home economist.

Annuals provide landscape color

A bed of flowering annuals is a versatile means of providing color and accents in home landscapes, says Everett Janne, a landscape horticulturist.

Janne, who is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, offers some suggestions for planting annuals this spring.

"Use them as borders along fences, at the side of houses or around patios," he suggests. "This allows them to be seen and enjoyed while at their best but not be conspicuous in the off-season."

"Use landscape timbers or brick for raised flower beds that aid drainage," Janne adds. "Improve tight clay soils by spading in 2 to 3 inches of sharp builders sand plus the same amount of peat moss or other suitable organic matter. Work the soil to a depth of 8-10 inches."

Fertilize according to soil test recommendations, or broadcast a 12-12-12 fertilizer at 2-3 pounds per 100 square feet over the bed to help ensure soil fertility. Janne also recommends fertilizing plants every three to four weeks with ammonium sulfate, a high nitrogen fertilizer.

Plant annuals so taller plants are in the rear with the shortest ones in front, or with taller plants in the middle of the flower bed if it will be viewed from all sides.

"Make sure plants have adequate moisture but don't overwater," cautions the horticulturist. "Mulching with shredded pine bark will conserve water, prevent crusting and reduce weeds."

During the season, keep a close check for disease and insect problems and use control measures if needed. "Don't plant more area than what you can properly care for," Janne emphasizes. "A small, weed-cared-for bed is much more effective than a large bed of scrawny plants mixed with weeds."

Crappie popularity is up with fishermen

The popularity of the crappie is widespread among people of all ages. One reason for the high popularity is the simplicity of equipment needed to catch this fish, says Billy Higginbotham, fisheries specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. More crappie fall victim to the cane pole and minnow than to all other angling methods combined. The schooling tendency of crappie provides the angler with almost non-stop action once a school is located. Many Texans proclaim that no other fish comes close to the crappie in eating quality.

Whether this panfish is called calico bass, white perch or sac-a-lait, the crappie is a member of the sunfish family and a first cousin to the largemouth bass and bluegill.

Two distinct species of crappie exist, and both, the black and white, are found in Texas. Their common names, indicating color, are not always a good key to distinguish between the species. This is especially true during the spawning season when males of both species become darker in color, Higginbotham says. For positive identification, count the hard spines on the dorsal fin. Black crappie have seven or eight dorsal spines while the white crappie have six spines.

Black crappie prefer the clear, slightly acidic waters found in many East Texas lakes. However, the range of this species has been expanded to the west and south. The white crappie originally ranged in the central and western portions of the state, but widespread stocking programs have resulted in large populations in the eastern portions of Texas as well.

Black crappie spawn slightly before white crappie in the spring. When water temperatures warm to about 60 degrees, the black crappie begins spawning activities. White crappie do not begin spawning until water temperatures reach 65 to 70 degrees. Although natural hybridization between the species has been documented, the difference in peak spawning periods probably serves to reduce the incidence of hybridization.

When the water temperatures warm in the spring, the spawning migration toward shallow water begins. Both species build nests in water from one to eight feet deep, usually in gravel or on hard bottom. If these types of bottoms are not readily available, tree roots and submerged vegetation may serve as spawning sites.

Fry normally hatch in about five days and after the yolk sac is absorbed, feed actively on microscopic animals called zooplankton. As growth continues, insects and small fish make up the bulk of the diet. During the summer, fall and winter months, crappie tend to school in the deeper, more open areas of lakes.

Growth rates of crappie vary due to water conditions and available food, but generally lengths of three to five inches are normal at one year of age and seven to eight inches the second year. The normal life expectancy for crappie is about six years, but individuals eight years old have been reported.

The best time to fish for crappie is during the spawning season. A feathered jig, tiny spinner or a well-placed minnow hooked lightly through the back are all successful angling methods in the spring.

During other times of the year, look for crappie concentrated and suspended over deep water structures. A depth finder can become a real asset in locating crappie under these conditions. If a depth finder is not available, drift fishing will often assist in finding schools of crappie.

Some anglers prefer to make the crappie come to them. They anchor cedar and willow tops in deep water to attract the crappie. By moving from one brush pile to the next, good catches are often possible, even during the dog-days of summer.

Once the crappie are located, spinners, jugs and minnows fished in the day or by lantern at night are proven fishing methods. The current state record for white crappie is four pounds, nine ounces. The category for black crappie is open, with a four pounder or larger needed for entry.

Large female crappie of both species have been known to contain 100,000 or more eggs prior to spawning. Due to the prolific spawning ability of the crappie, stocking into small bodies of water is not recommended, Higginbotham says. In most situations, small ponds do not provide enough food for the abundant young crappie, thus stunting usually occurs and few young ever reach a desirable size.

Crappie fishing season is upon us. Plan to make a trip proclaiming crappie as king of the freshwater fish.
