4-H Club fashion show Fri.

Twenty-eight 4-Hers have entered this year's 4-H Fashion Show. The style show and awards program will be Friday June 1, at 7:30 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Contestants have entered four major categories: daytime tailored, daytime non-tailored, active sportswear, and evening and specialty wear. Eight to seventeen year olds have entered this year's fashion show.

4-Hers are judged on garment construction, judge's interview and overall garment appearance. High point individuals in the 9-11, 12-13 and 14 and over age divisions will be eligible for district competition, July 26 in Crane.

This year's co-chairmen of the Fashion Show are Jackie Shacklette and Roberta Schoenhals. Local businesses have donated scissors, sewing accessories, and ribbons as awards for these deserving 4-Hers.

Make plans to attend the 4-H Fashion Show, Friday evening, June 1.

Run-off election is Saturday

The second Democratic Primary, or the run-off election, will be held Saturday, June 2, at all precinct polling places. Crockett County voters will cast ballots in their resident precincts.

There are three run-off places on the ballot. Kent Hance is pitted against Lloyd Doggett for the nominee for U.S. Senate. Hance carried this county by a large margin in the May primary and Bob Krueger came in second. Doggett ran a distant third. The winner of the run-off will face Phil Gramm in the general election in November.

Roy E. Greenwood faces W.C. (Bill) Davis for Judge, Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 2, and Bill White is pitted against Thomas Thorpe for Judge, Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 3.

Precinct 1 voters will cast ballots at the courthouse; Precinct 2, at the junior high school; precinct 3, at the Civic Center, and Precinct 4, at the primary school. Polls open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

Rainfall scant in Ozona

Ozona missed the heavy rains which fell in the north part of the county Monday, but a brief thunder shower left .06 of an inch of rain in the official gauge at the Water District office.

Up to two inches of rainfall was reported at the Bob Bissett ranch north of Ozona and an inch and a half at Midway Lane. Apparently only a smattering was left by the time the heavy clouds reached Ozona. However, the cool front which brought the clouds gave Ozonans some relief from the oppressive heat and it was a respectable 74 degrees at mid-afternoon Tuesday.

Veterans honored

Over 100 persons were on hand when the latest museum exhibit was opened Thursday evening during ceremonies in the park. District Judge Brock Jones speaks briefly, but eloquently, in honor of veterans of all wars. The exhibit, "Salute to Crockett County Veterans," may be viewed daily at the Crockett County Museum.

to the men and women who served from Crockett County in all wars this nation has fought from the Civil War to Korea and Viet Nam, more than a hundred persons gathered in the city park for a brief program late Thursday afternoon.

ASCS to list hay available

A list of available hay in Texas will be compiled and distributed to all county ASCS offices on May 21, 1984.

The continuing drought is causing critical hardships upon the state's livestock producers. Having exhausted their local source of supply, many producers have called the county ASCS offices to help locate producers who have an excess of hay or other roughage to sell.

From information supplied by the county offices, the State ASCS Office will compile a master listing of hay and roughage suppliers that will describe the feed, amounts available and price. Master listings will be printed and distributed to the county offices monthly, and supplemental listings will be furnished weekly.

Any producer who has an excess of hay or roughage they wish to sell may contact the Crockett County ASCS office, 392-2203 and relate the particulars to be included on the listing. This service begins May 21 and will continue through October.

Detroit-Texas buys pipeline facilities

According to a recent Wall Street Journal story, Detroit-Texas Gas Gathering Co. (Blueridge) agreed to acquire the assets of the closely held Rapada Corp., Houston, for $24 million.

Detroit-Texas would pay $15 million cash and $9 million in notes for Rapada, which filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the federal Bankruptcy Code in November, 1982.

Under Chapter 11, according to the article, a company has court protection from creditor lawsuits while it works out a plan to pay its debt.

The transaction is expected to close about July 1, subject to regulatory and bankruptcy-court clearances.

The assets include pipeline facilities covering five Texas counties serving 82 producers with more than 800 wells. They also include an interest in a natural gas processing plant and various interests in developed and undeveloped petroleum properties. According to the story, the company said the transaction will favorably affect fiscal 1984 earnings.

Detroit-Texas Gas (Blueridge) gathers and transports natural gas chiefly in and around Crockett County for sale to Valero Energy Corp. in San Antonio.

Jana Harris of Ozona, a spring graduate of Western Texas College, has been awarded a $1,000 Fine Arts and Communications Scholarship to Southwest Texas State University.

Miss Harris received the Associate in Arts degree from Western Texas College, graduating summa cum laude with a grade point average of 3.96 on a 4.0 scale. She was named to honors lists each semester she attended WTC.

A journalism major, Miss Harris was editor for the campus newspaper, The Western Texan, this year and was associate editor in her freshman year. She was vice president of the WTC Press Club and co-historian for the Psi Zeta chapter of Phi Theta Kappa, national honor fraternity for junior college students. She was among the Phi Theta Kappa members attending the 17th annual PTK Honors Institute held May 21-26 at the Gulf Park Campus of the University of Southern Mississippi in Long Beach, Mississippi.

Miss Harris was named Outstanding Female Student at WTC at the annual Awards Day sponsored by the WTC Faculty Association. She was also recognized as Outstanding Newspaper Student at Awards Day. She had been named to Who's Who in American Junior Colleges earlier and was a nominee for Homecoming Queen at the April 14 Homecoming.

A graduate of Ozona High School, Miss Harris is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harris.

School hires new football coach

The Ozona Board of Trustees has announced the hiring of Iraan's defensive coordinator, James L. "Jim" Green, as head football coach of Ozona High School. The board, meeting in special session last Wednesday, interviewed the top three applicants for the position, and Mr. Green was hired at the conclusion of the meeting.

Green, 47, brings a varied coaching background to Ozona. He began his career in 1960 at Schulenburg (AA), coaching the offensive line, linebackers, and all junior high football. He also coached junior varsity basketball, junior high basketball, and junior high track.

Other coaching assignments have been at Houston Aldine (AAAAA), Galveston Ball (AAAAA) and Iraan (A). Athletic Director Rip Sewell said Green's strength was in his varied coaching background. "Jim's been successful in every program he's been in. He's coached football, basketball, track and golf. He'll be interested in

Owensby completes courses

Dr. Robert M. Owensby of Ozona has completed continuing education requirements to retain active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors. The Academy formerly was called the American Academy of General Practice.

The requirements call for the members to complete minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. Members become eligible for re-election at the end of the third year following their election to membership. The Academy, the country's second largest national medical association, was the first national medical group to require members to keep up with medical progress through continuing education.

boys and girls athletics." "We feel we got a man who will fit into our community well and be an asset to the program," Sewell added.

Green, who has been the defensive coordinator at Iraan the last four years, coached the school's girls golf team to the Class A state championship earlier this month.

Green's family includes his wife (Zoe), three daughters (Rikki, Lonnie, Kellye), and one son (J.B.). They will move to Ozona this summer.

The new coach will be in Ozona Monday, June 4, at the fieldhouse from 6:30 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Coach Green would like to meet all athletes who can come by for a visit.

Disney channel available here

The Ozona Television System is now taking orders for the Disney Channel. The Disney Channel, which aired April 18, 1983, is now seen in 50 states and in more than one million homes.

The Ozona Television System is now offering the new pay cable service at $10 per month. Those who wish to sign up for the new service need to sign up at the T-V system office at 1002 Ave. E.

In the first year of programming selections from the Disney library of feature films, cartoons and short subjects highlighted viewing selections along with over 900 new shows produced for subscribers.

Complete family entertainment is the mission of Disney Channel producers. Subscribers also get a monthly magazine with each day's programming listed. New Disney films are in the making, and no other pay-television channel is authorized to produce films and cartoons from the Disney library, nor for the new films which will be shown in coming months.

Demand good for local wool

Demand was good here Wednesday for 12-months wool as Ozona Wool and Mohair Co. cleared more than a quarter million pounds during a sealed bid sale.

Prices were fairly steady compared with prices paid at sales conducted earlier this week. Price range on lamb wool was 94½ cents to $1.10½ a pound, grease basis, with an overall average price of $1.03½ paid on the 23,231 pounds offered.

The price of ewe wool ranged from 95 cents to $1.15 per pound, grease basis, with an overall average of $1.05 bid on the total ewe wool offering of 229,998 pounds. Only two lots of 10-months wool was offered, with prices ranging from 95½ cents to $1.00¾ per pound.

Warehouse manager Vernon Jones said he was pleased with the sale and he expected to clear most all of the wool offered. Only a few lots remained pending late Wednesday.

Prouvost, Lefebvre and Co. was top buyer, taking 87,051 pounds. Other buyers and tonnage purchased included J.P. Stevens and Co. Inc., 77,670 pounds; A. H. Helmig and Co., Inc., 66,160; and Forte, Dupee, Sawyer Co., 22,248.

Welcome to the opening

Mrs. Pleas Childress, museum director, welcomes the crowd to the opening of "A Salute to Crockett County Veterans," while the choral group waits in the background. The exhibit opened on schedule, due to the tireless efforts of Mrs. Childress and her assistants.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—The chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission last week said all-out war in the Persian Gulf would trigger new drilling in Texas.

"You don't have to go to Yale to figure out that if the supply is interrupted, then there's less oil, then there's less oil available, the price will go up and, as the price goes up, there's more domestic production."

Those simple words of wisdom from Mack Wallace put the finger on a situation being watched by Texans for several reasons, particularly officials in state government.

One thing Wallace could have tacked onto the end of his truism would have linked the Iran-Iraq conflict to Texas government: as domestic production increases, so do revenues for state coffers.

For months now, the dwindling state revenues have been blamed on the slump in oil production. In Texas, it has contributed to state losses from the severance taxes, and from sales taxes from petroleum industry related products. In cities dependent on that industry, such as Houston, Midland, Odessa, and several coastal towns, the slump contributed to unemployment and more loss of sales and tax monies.

Along the border, the devaluation of Mexico's peso due to the declining oil production also contributed to the economic slump.

For years Texans have taken the petroleum industry for granted, and now that it's missing do we really feel it? That's why legislators are expected to convene in Austin for a special session to raise taxes next month.

Sad Severances

A recent report by State Comptroller Bob Bullock explained some of the reasons for the drop in tax collections. For a decade, tax collections surged upward at a pace of 10 percent or more above the prior fiscal year.

The growth of oil and gas severance taxes paralleled the rise in energy prices until 1982, when oil and gas tax income accounted for 27.4 percent of state tax income. Last year, for the first time in 20 years, tax collections from the two sources declined by 5.2 percent. Bullock's report indicates the severance tax will grow slowly at best, and probably will decline slowly with the drop in statewide oil and gas production.

Sales Tax Saga

Sales taxes usually contribute up to 40 percent of total state tax revenues, growing steadily over the past decade with annual leaps over 10 percent.

Last year, the tax fell by 4.5 percent. The problem was not in the retail sector, but in the non-retail portion which declined by 8 percent.

The non-retail decline included a whopping 31.4 percent drop in the mining industry, which has a very large oil and gas component.

Add to that an 18.1 percent drop in manufacturing, and a one percent decrease in construction.

Link to Oil

Bullock researched what wise Texas solons have known instinctively, but he linked revenues to oil in specific terms.

In 1982 about 11 percent of the sales tax collections came from some phase of the oil and gas industry.

An additional 19 percent of the sales tax was linked indirectly to petroleum.

Totaled up, that comes to 30 percent, or almost one-third of the sales tax has some link to the performance of the oil and gas industry.

In Dollars

In dollars, the state lost about $300 million in potential growth in sales taxes last year due to the oil price slump, according to Bullock.

The peso devaluations cost border sales an estimated $100 million in potential growth and the national economic recession took another $170 million.

Some taxes aren't based on the price of the product, but on the amount of the product sold. These consumption taxes include motor fuels, alcoholic beverages and tobacco, and last year made up 13.1 percent, or about $1.1 billion in tax collections.

Price inflation does not increase these revenues, but, in fact, cuts down their real growth. In addition, health concerns have slowed growth of the alcohol and tobacco revenues, Bullock says.

They have averaged a growth rate of 5.1 percent, but Bullock predicts that any increase in tax rates, such as Gov. Mark White is planning, will further discourage consumption and modify the extra income that White and others are anticipating.

Election Issue?

By now, every conscientious citizen in Texas is aware that Bullock intends to run against White for governor two years from now. And careful news readers know that White wants to raise taxes to hike teacher's salaries, thereby keeping a campaign promise.

HERE'S THE BEEF

By Edwin Feulner

If I hear that cute little old lady in the Wendy's Hamburger commercials ask "Where's the beef?" just one more time, I'm gonna put my foot through the TV screen.

It's not enough that the commercial seemed to air all the time, and that Clara Peller has become a cult figure, but having two elementary school-aged children at home means that I hear "Where's the beef?" day and night. It's enough to ruin one's appetite.

But if you really want to ruin your appetite, let me suggest you read the latest from the environmental hucksters, a new Random House book called Modern Meat, written by rancher-turned-author Orville Schell.

In case you want to know where the book is coming from before you plunk down your $17.95, be forewarned that the book jacket bears the endorsement of another omnipresent cult figure, Ralph Nader. According to Nader, who you will recall is an expert on everything, "Modern Meat ... is a precise and gripping report about the drug-addicted meat and poultry industry that is exposing you and your descendants to much more than an occasional upset stomach."

"Schell's book is serious stuff," Nader writes. "The only way you are going to avoid what he is describing is to learn what corporations are doing to your pork, beef and chicken dinners with their drugs, hormones and latest feed technologies."

Now the secret's out. It's those nasty, uncaring "corporations" again, and according to Nader-Schell they're turning America's livestock into zombie-like drug fiends. That must explain why cattle seem to wander aimlessly and lie down on the job in the middle of the day when they should be fattening themselves up on those new "feed technologies." We should have guessed that they're all doped up.

The thrust of Schell's future-schlock report is that cattle, pork and poultry breeders are feeding animals all kinds of chemical compounds to fatten them up as fast as possible with a minimum of care — so they can slaughter them, make a fast buck, and proceed to the next harvest of modern meat. As a consequence of all this, say the author and his collaborators, the public health is being threatened.

The most frightening claim made in the book, which is admittedly an interesting read but has about as much scientific "meat" to it as a comic book, is that animals are being fed maintenance doses of antibiotics — penicillin and tetracyclines — to make them less susceptible to infection. As a result, the author argues, in a yarn that Nature magazine correspondent Stephen Budiansky says is "as gripping as a detective novel ... (but) lousy science," is that the bacteria exposed to the antibiotics are developing immunity to the drugs, that scary new strains of disease are developing, and that all this is being transferred to the U.S. public through the consumption of meat.

Says the publisher: "Consider the indiscriminate use of antibiotics in animal feed. The immediate result may be healthier livestock, but the latest scientific evidence suggests that in the process we are creating new strains of drug-resistant bacteria, 'superbugs' that may set the treatment of infections back to the days before antibiotics."

The facts are quite different. There is nothing indiscriminate about the use of antibiotics in animal feed. They are used because, as the publisher admits, they help produce healthier livestock. As to the claim that drug-resistant superbugs loom on the horizon, my authority on such matters — Thomas Jukes, Professor of Biophysics and Medical Physics at the University of California, Berkeley — calls such claims nonsense.

The truth, he says, is that most antibiotics, penicillin included, are as effective today as they were in the past. In fact, after the book was printed, Dr. Victor Lorian of the Bronx Lebanon Hospital Center announced results of a study of antibiotic resistance in 242 hospitals throughout the United States. Dr. Lorian reviewed information on more than 43-million tests, and concluded that the idea that bacteria are becoming resistant to drugs "is a myth."

Next time you crave a hamburger, my advice is buy the beef. And enjoy.

you and the LAW

PRESENTED BY THE STATE BAR OF TEXAS

Q: My family is involved in a civil claims court with a suit against a very large corporation. It has been six years since the suit was filed. We have gone through continuance after continuance. My family is suffering a financial burden due to these delaying tactics. How long can this case be put off? Nothing should be done to speed up the process?

A: This Case can be put off indefinitely depending on which party is seeking the continuances. You should call your attorney immediately and stress the importance of resolving this case as soon as possible. Suits against large corporations can move very slowly in part because of the huge amount of information your attorney needs to prepare for trial and in part because of crowded court dockets.

If your attorney cannot explain the "delays" to your satisfaction your alternative is to discharge your present attorney and associate new counsel. Switching lawyers in the middle of a case can cause additional delay, however, so I suggest frequent contact with your present lawyer as a better alternative.

Q: I am in the process of getting a divorce and I plan to remarry shortly thereafter. How soon can I legally remarry in Texas?

A: For thirty days following the granting of the final divorce decree, either party may move for a new trial. For this reason, neither can marry anyone else for one month. During that month the spouse just divorced can marry only one other person — his ex-spouse.

Q: A newspaper in my hometown is printing the names of everyone arrested for suspicion of driving while intoxicated. This certainly is not a conviction by any means. Isn't the paper taking a terrible risk, even possibly a violation of the drivers' constitutional rights?

A: Probably not. As long as the paper merely prints the names of people arrested but does not say they were convicted, then what they are printing is true.

Delay can be costly when applying for SS

People who delay applying for Social Security retirement or survivor benefits for some time after they become eligible may miss out on some checks, Franklin Upp, Social Security district manager in San Angelo, said recently.

This is because the number of months for which back payments can be made is limited.

In general, people who apply for retirement or survivor benefits after they reach 65 can get back benefits for up to 6 months before the month they apply, but not before the month of their 65th birthday.

People who apply for reduced benefits before 65 generally cannot get benefits for any month before the month they apply.

People who apply for benefits because they are disabled-workers, adult children, widows, and widowers—can get benefits for up to 12 months before the month they apply if they are eligible in all other ways.

People can save time when they do apply for benefits if they have the necessary documents ready, Upp said. This includes the person's Social Security card or record of the number, birth or baptismal certificate, W-2 forms and self-employment tax returns for the past 2 years and marriage and death certificates, if appropriate.

More information about applying for benefits can be obtained at the San Angelo Social Security Office located at 2214 Sherwood Way. The telephone number is 949-4608. The people there can suggest other documents if those listed are not available.

Crockett County wool sold well at Ozona Wool and Mohair sold as demand was heavy for 12-warehouse last week. Almost all fleeces months wool.

Sale of livestock products more than half of ag. receipts

Sales of livestock products which totaled some $5.4 billion made up more than half of Texas' agricultural receipts for 1983.

Total agricultural sales—including agriculturally related income from hunting leases, horses, timber and recreation—are estimated at just over $10.2 billion for the state in 1983, says Dr. Carl G. Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. That's down slightly from 1982 sales.

Overall, cattle and calves sold for $4.2 billion; sheep, $62 million; goats, $18 million; and hogs, $93 million. Dairy product sales reached some $565 million while

Time limits on S. S. appeals

A person who wishes to appeal a decision on a Social Security or Supplemental Security Income claim should make certain that the request is submitted within the specified time, Franklin H. Upp, Social Security district manager in San Angelo, said recently.

"If a request for a review is not submitted before the end of the time limit, the person may lose his or her right to that review and may not be eligible for the next step in the review process."

When the last day of a time limit falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or national holiday, the time limit is extended to the next workday.

"A person may not want to take advantage of all the review steps," Upp said. "But, anyone who wants to do so must follow them in order."

Additional information about the appeals process for either Social Security or SSI can be obtained from the San Angelo Social Security Office located at 2214 Sherwood Way. The telephone number is 949-4608.

poultry receipts totaled $515 million. Mohair brought in about $43 million while wool receipts totaled $15 million.

Traditionally, Texas ranks first among the states in sales from marketing of cattle and calves, sheep and wool, and goats and mohair, says Anderson.

Following is a look at the state's leading livestock production regions based on cash receipts.

Fed beef receipts totaled around $2.9 billion, led by the panhandle area with an estimated $1.2 billion, and the South Plains with $986 million. North Central Texas led the market for receipts from other types of beef, with sales of $264 million. South Central Texas came in second with sales of $249 million.

Dairymen, numbering about 2,600, marketed some 11 million pounds of milk daily from an estimated 335,000 cows. Northeast Texas led in sales of milk products and milk cows with total cash receipts of more than $157 million while Central Texas came in second with sales of almost $124 million.

Cash receipts from broilers totaled some $200 million East Texas, far outpacing the state's second largest region, the Coastal Bend, which had sales of $68 million.

Turkey receipts were the highest in Central Texas, at $31 million, with the Coastal Bend second at $4 million.

The Coastal Bend area led the state in egg sales, at about $30 million, while South Central Texas recorded egg sales of more than $14 million.

West Central Texas was the leader in cash receipts from sheep and wool, with sheep sales at $24 million and wool sales more than $6 million. Sheep sales in Far West Texas totaled almost $12 million while Southwest Texas was the second highest region in wool sales of around $4 million.

Southwest Texas led in cash receipts from goats at $10 million and in mohair receipts of $25 million, with West Central Texas second in both categories at $3 million and $5 million, respectively.

Hog sales were the highest in South Central Texas at almost $22 million, with sales in the South Plains approaching $13 million.

Texas farmers and ranchers should see some improvement in crop and livestock prices during 1984, as the demand for farm products looks strong, says Anderson. An improving economy should continue to help domestic consumption of agricultural production, and export sales also would improve some.

Education expenses deductible

Educational expenses related to your present employment may not only increase your future earnings, they may be deductible on your federal tax return, the Internal Revenue Service says.

To qualify, the expenses must meet one of two guidelines. Taking the course of study must be mandatory in order for you to keep your present job—for example, a teacher required to take a course to retain a teaching position. If not, the course must be helpful in maintaining or improving skills which are required in your present employment—for instance, a television repairman taking a special course to keep up with the latest changes.

Educational expenses for tax purposes include amounts spent on tuition, books, supplies, laboratory fees, and similar items, and certain travel and transportation costs.

Except for reimbursed expenses included in income, travel, and transportation, educational expenses are an itemized deduction and should be listed on Schedule A (Form 1040) as a miscellaneous deduction. Travel, transportation, unreimbursed expenses, and all outside salesperson's educational expenses are deductible as adjustments to income using Form 2106.

Additional information on educational expenses appears in the IRS Publication 508, "Educational Expenses," available by using the mail order form in your tax package.

Tips For Gardeners

From the Ozona Garden Club by Mrs. Bailey Post

Since this month is Soil Stewardship, there is a long-range challenge for creative conservation. Our nation has been blessed with abundant resources, but in this day of expanding population and growing industry, only the wise use of these resources will assure us of continuing growth and prosperity. Some time ago the following poem was enclosed in our church bulletin, so maybe again it will help us all to assume the responsibility to attain a national goal.

It's the will and the skill of responsible man to protect and use wisely the treasure of land. The waters, the wildlife, the forests and fields,

Plus the bounty of beauty God's countryside yields.

It's the fight against ignorance, waste and greed.

To save the resources that all men need.

It's the foe of erosion, forest fire and flood...

Three agents of ruin, pollution, and mud.

It's the vision and work to add something good

To the home, to the farm, to the whole neighborhood.

It's new lawns and new gardens, a lake built to please;

It's roadsides with grass and hilltops with trees;

There's a lot to be done for the state of our living

But each grain requires your share of self-giving.

Perhaps you have a house plant like I have and want to do something about it. One of the most popular of all foliage plants is striped dracaena. It has handsome green and white striped leaves, but when it drops its bottom leaves, much of its charm is lost. You will need a pair of sharp pruners, some rooting powder, a small stick or pencil, and a pot filled with a mixture of 2 parts potting soil and 1 part perlite or vermiculite. Cut the bare stem where you want the new leaves to emerge, then cut through the stem at that point with the pruning shears. The cut should be about 1/4 inch above a leaf joint (node). You're ready to pot the cutting. Strip off the leaves from the bottom of the cutting, then dust the cut end with rooting powder, make a hole in the potting soil about 1 inch deep and insert the cutting into it, then firm the soil around the cutting with your fingers. Water the soil thoroughly. Place the cutting in bright, indirect light (no direct sun) and keep soil evenly moist. The cutting should root in about one month if kept between 70 and 75 degrees. In a short time, buds will form at the tip of the stem the cutting was taken from, then sprout new shoots and leaves. You will soon have two beautiful plants. This same procedure can be used for broad-leaved rubber plant, variegated croton, ti plant and many others with woody stems.

Man's best friend not always pet

Man's best friend is not necessarily his dog--or cat, or parrot, two Baylor College of Medicine specialists say.

Infectious disease specialist Dr. Ralph Feigin and allergy specialist Dr. William Shearer say that pets may be the cause of a lot of the throat and skin infections, fevers, watery eyes and runny noses their owners experience.

Some of these illnesses may result in birth defects and life-threatening asthma attacks.

Feigin and Shearer suggest that to avoid sickness, owners should wash their hands after handling pets, have their pets regularly examined and vaccinated by a veterinarian, and leave them outdoors as much as possible.

They also said that in some cases, owners may have to give up their pets.

Feigin estimates that 10 percent of all children admitted to hospitals have diseases that were acquired from pets or other animals.

He said the biggest problem is dog bites. Organisms on the child's skin may get into a bite and cause infections, one of which is tetanus, if the person has not been immunized.

Another serious problem, leptospirosis, may occur when a human comes into contact with dog urine. Dogs can only be immunized against two of the 1,198 forms of leptospirosis, which can cause a mild respiratory infection or serious meningitis, depending on when the infected person receives care.

Even the common childhood infection, strep throat, may be caused by a pet licking a child on the mouth, because pets carry strep organisms in their mouths.

"When we find recurrent strep disease, such as strep throat, or impetigo, a skin infection, in a family, the first question we ask is does the family have pets," Feigin said. "If they do, we strongly urge them to keep the pets outdoors."

Another more serious warning by Feigin is that pregnant women avoid cleaning cat litter.

Some cats carry a parasite, which is released through excrement and causes toxoplasmosis. When a woman gets toxoplasmosis within the first three months of pregnancy her child may be born with an enlarged brain, mental retardation, blindness or other problems.

Other illnesses that may come from pets, including hamsters and parrots, are typhoid, diarrhea, prolonged high fevers and pneumonia. Approximately 25 million Americans suffer from allergies. A large percentage of them are allergic to dogs and cats, Shearer said.

The usual allergic reaction to pets is similar to hay fever--runny nose and watery, itchy eye--but some people may experience severe asthma and require hospitalization.

"When we know that a child has asthma and tests show he or she is allergic to pets, we recommend that the pet be kept out of doors all the time," Shearer said.

"But the best thing is to sell or give the pet away." Allergies are determined by injection particles, called dander, from foods, animal hair, or pollen under the skin. A reaction at the site of these injections indicates an allergy. An allergy skin test costs between $100-500.

For those people who don't want to lose their pet, Shearer said two things can be done: take antihistamines for mild reactions or become desensitized.

Desensitization involves exposing the allergic person to small particles from the reaction-causing substance for a long period of time. Eventually the allergic person builds resistance, but it may take two to three years and cost $400 to $500.

"The easiest cure for an allergy is to stay away from whatever is bothering you," Shearer said. "With pet allergy that's possible."

TAPS scholarship goes to local girl

The Texas Association of Private Schools (TAPS) announces that scholarships in the amount of $399,217 have been awarded to 102 Texas high school graduating students. Individual scholarship awards range from a value of $905 to $10,560.

Odessa/Midland/Big Spring area students receiving scholarships to one of the many post-secondary, vocational/technical career schools in the state include Mary Wall, Ozona High School, to Aladdin Beauty College of Midland.

The TAPS scholarship program provided the opportunity to 1984 graduating seniors to win scholarships with an aggregate value of over $750,000, contributed by members of the Association in such subjects as business management, computer programming, nurse's aide, cosmetology, secretary, electronic engineering technology and diesel mechanics. Applications were judged on their high school transcripts, letters of recommendation, and personal essays describing how such scholarships may help the students to realize their career ambitions.

TAPS is composed of proprietary schools created to provide specialized career programs to students who may not desire to attend traditional 2-year or 4-year schools. The intensive training received in TAPS schools and the placement assistance available have helped thousands of students obtain high salaried positions in a relatively short time. 1985 graduating seniors who may be interested in next year's scholarship program are urged to contact the TAPS office at P.O. Box 13481, Austin, Tx. 78711, or phone (512)444-8463.

By Paul Patti

What I remember most about the recent trial of Luis Alvarez in Miami is an Associated Press photograph taken during a recess about midway through the trial. The photo showed a uniformed police sergeant reaching out from the audience to shake Officer Alvarez' hand. It struck me clearly then, the thought I had put out of my mind, that Alvarez was still a cop, like me. He had been accused of a very serious crime: manslaughter; but I had forgotten that he was still a cop. His life, his career, like so many other officers I have known, had been touched--and forever changed--by guns.

The Alvarez manslaughter trial was lengthy, with civilians, police and "experts" testifying on both sides. One expert likened Alvarez' actions to a "Dirty Harry" movie, another stated that Alvarez acted properly under the circumstances. At the end of two months of trial and two hours of deliberation, the jury set Alvarez free. He now plans to return to the force.

What took center stage in the trial was not the officer/defendant, or the victim, nineteen-year-old Nevell Johnson, or any of the experts--it was the guns. The guns of both the dead Nevell Johnson and the suspended officer were the focus. Like opposing forces, both guns were a heavy presence in the minds of the jury and the spectators. They were studied, waved around the courtroom and used in reenactments. The .22-caliber RG revolver once carried in the waistband of Nevell Johnson entered into the sanctity of the jury room during deliberations. Officer Alvarez' .38-caliber Smith and Wesson was disassembled and scrutinized by experts.

The entire incident, like so many others in a cop's life, centered on guns. During the few seconds just before Nevell Johnson was fatally shot in the head by Luis Alvarez, the guns were the focus. Alvarez' partner, Officer Louis Cruz, said that during these critical moments his attention was focused on the gun in Johnson's waistband. Then there was movement, a shot and death. The guns of Officer Luis Alvarez and citizen Nevell Johnson were the players in a tragedy that would later burn down much of Miami's Overtown ghetto.

Midway through the Alvarez trial a gun once again snuffed out a life, this time a cop's. Miami Beach Police Officer Donald Kramer had cornered a Marielito refugee on South Beach for a minor violation, like dozens of other arrests the officer had made. Officer Kramer was popular among the derelict crowd in Miami Beach's version of New York's Bowery. He was known as a kind, considerate man who befriended many of the people he arrested. The gun was not yet in focus--it remained invisible. The cop's gun, in this incident, stayed in its holster. When Officer Kramer mistakenly turned from this thin, dirty, disheveled Cuban refugee the gun suddenly appeared and Donald Kramer was shot and left to die. Another victim of the gun.

Two of my classmates from the Metro-Dade Police Academy have also fallen victim. One is still alive, although shaken by a tragic death and a manslaughter indictment. On October 20, 1982, Officer Ernesto Uriaga was holding a shotgun while frisking a suspect in a hijacking. When the suspect began to turn toward the officer he was killed by a shotgun blast. Officer Uriaga was found innocent of the manslaughter charge.

During the afternoon of July 8, 1983, another of my classmates, Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Agent Eddie Benitez, a former Metro-Dade officer, was shot once in the head by a suspect he was approaching to arrest in a firearms and narcotics case. The gun appeared, was aimed at the young officer's head and the suspect fired. Eddie was in a coma for four days before he died. Yet another victim.

Cops, guns, criminals, citizens. Always there will be victims--it is the way of our society. From a cop's point of view, guns are a necessary evil--a destructive force we must have and could not function without. A gun is something we fear to encounter, but something we have trained for and have learned to expect. A police officer in crime-ridden South Florida will cross paths with many guns during a career, some hiding in waistbands, laying under car seats, some appearing from nowhere. Strangely, we often admire guns, sometimes revere and even fondle them, the items that will be the likeliest instrument of our early deaths.

There is nothing now that can separate us from guns in our society, from police, civilians or criminals. No law could be strong enough to take but a handful off the street. The tide has already come in and engulfed us--and will not be going out. I fear that there will always be cops, guns and death, in Miami and elsewhere.

The Ozona Stockman

By-Evart White

Houston S. Smith, by all standards as fine a man as ever you'll want to know, succeeded Judge Davidson at the latter's death, as Crockett County Judge. And like his predecessor, Judge Smith was a zealous guardian of the county's finances. When a bunch of us decided Ozona should have swimming pools, we broached the subject of a bond issue to finance them. Houston strongly demurred, claiming the county could not support a new bond issue. He referred to the pools as "tanks." But public opinion prevailed and the pools were built. Upon completion, a grand opening was held at the north pool. And who was the proudest man, walking up and down, admiring the blue water? Judge Houston Smith.

And I still remember with some degree of horror, as many parents before and afterwards have, of watching my drum major teenage daughters marching in their abbreviated uniform skirts on the football field in West Texas blizzard weather. But, naturally, they stood it better than their father did.

If I may go 'way' back, to my first week in Ozona, and my first Ozona Stockman. It was a week of nightmares as were the several succeeding weeks. The paper had not been published for the previous two weeks, from the time I bought it until I could get here. It had been composed with handset type, which was beyond my capabilities. I wrote the first paper with the help of my Ozona native wife, and took the copy to San Angelo to have it composed by the Standard linotype setters. The type was returned and the paper made up and printed here on the dependable two-revolution Babcock press.

Bob Cooke, who had owned the paper before me, had his meat market and the newspaper in the same building, the market in front and the newspaper in the back. If I had been a politician like the paper's founder, Claude Hudspeth, who came up with the quaint story that he rode into town with a printing press strapped to his saddle horn and started in the newspaper business, I would have told of writing heavy editorials in the back of a meat market with a bucket of lard between my knees and a half beef dripping on my back. That wasn't so very, very far from the truth. The big five-horse motor which turned the line shaft did double duty--grinding sausage and printing the newspaper on the big press. But you couldn't do both at once, and as soon as the Perner buildings across the street were completed Bob moved his meat market there and left me with room to breathe.

Crockett County's first producing oil well created something of a sensation, though not nearly as enthusiastic one as it deserved, in the light of subsequent developments that created a whole new lifestyle for most of the county. Though I didn't know at the time where I was, I went to a picnic gathering of townfolk at the site, which I now know was on the Virgil Powell ranch northwest of Ozona. County Judge Charles E. Davidson climbed up on the drilling platform, a much simpler and lower perch that would be the case today, and delivered a speech of welcome and congratulation to the drillers, and, of course, wished them many more successes in drilling in the county.

About the first ten years of 4-H Club activity in this county, the annual livestock shows were staged in raging blizzards, many times with snow and ice on the streets and trees. The boys and girls found hugging their pet show animals all the more meaningful.

Again to memories of the newspaper business, its pleasures, its compensations, its dangers no less, its frustrations. Memory is still vivid of my first big story as a newspaper reporter. Home for the summer from my first year in the university, I was looking for a job. Houston Harte had just bought the San Angelo Standard and he ran an ad saying, "Wanted, a young man with a good pair of legs and a fair knowledge of the English language to learn the newspaper business." I applied and was hired. I knew names were news and my highest production some days was just a few personals. Then one day the body of a young man was found in the city park along the pecan tree shaded banks of the Concho river, just across the river from where the Holiday Inn is today.

There was a bullet hole in the temple and a pistol lay near the body--all the sad trappings of a suicide. Beside the body also lay a weathered empty vanilla extract bottle and on the weather worn label of the bottle, its print almost completely faded, were written in a firm hand, "I'm watching a turtle swim up the river. When he reaches a certain point, I pull down. Damn pretty place for the execution, eh?"

It was late afternoon and the afternoon's paper had already gone to press. Nobody was around the office, the boss was gone, other reporters were gone. The bookkeeper told me "Go ahead and write it yourself." Aw, shucks, I can't write it. "Go ahead," she says. And so I agonized the night through and evidently turned in a creditable story. Anyway it was on page one in the next day's paper.

I said 'dangers.' And there were. Later in my career in San Angelo, I was searching for feature material at the county clerk's office. I found it in the old county court docket books. In the old days of the West, at least around San Angelo, the cowboys came to town for the weekend or to ship livestock and naturally took time out to get drunk and in their exuberance occasionally fired off their pistols on the downtown streets and sometimes in the saloons. When they got out of hand it became necessary for the law to step in and the happy fellows were hauled in and made to pay a fine and sometime had to visit the jailhouse. Each court appearance, of course, necessitated the docketing of the 'criminal' and recording of the disposition of his case. Almost without exception the names used either just made up monickers, or possibly range nicknames, such as Alkali Ike, Whiskey Pete, Buckskin Buddy and the like. These nicknames, of course, were my story. But in the list appeared the name Jack Ketchum. Pioneer County Clerk Jimmy Keating, looking over my shoulder pointed a finger and said, "That's Black Jack Ketchum. He was hanged in Santa Fe, New Mexico, for train robbery a few years ago." I used that fact in my story.

The story appeared in a Sunday morning issue and that Sunday afternoon I strolled downtown and found Harte and the whole staff in the office. They told me that a relative of Ketchum, the town's constable, had pulled a gun on Mr. Harte in his hotel room and demanded to know who the --- was that wrote that story. Mr. Harte told him, but pleaded, "He's just a kid and didn't mean any harm," but that wasn't enough for that big fellow--about 6'5" and 250 pounds and a gun as long as that. He soon accosted me on the street and called me off down a sidestreet, leaving two of my buddies standing on the corner.

A short distance from the corner there was a stairway from the sidewalk to a basement in the old Rust building, with an iron railing guarding pedestrians from stepping off into the chasm. I halted Mr. K at the railing and thinking to delay the outburst I expected, asked him for a match to light my cigarette. He dug one out of his pocket and gave it to me. Meanwhile, I had maneuvered the big fellow with his back to the iron railing, hoping against hope that I could execute a flying leap with both palms out and land in his chest and topple him backwards into the pit if worst came to disaster. The delay gave me a modicum of courage and thinking to impress my buddies with my bravado I gave some smart answers to his threats, but every time I cracked wise that big pistol came up out of the holster a few inches where upon I would switch rapidly to sweet talk to get the cannon back in its stall. Then, another smart answer and up came the big gun. I swear, I saw the business end of that gun at least five times in that brief encounter.

I said the business had its compensations. Like the night in Austin when I was covering the police department for the Austin American, one of the many fields I covered for the morning daily while a student in the University. A call came in that there was an intruder at one of the sorority houses. I was glad to go with the cops to investigate that story. A more excited bunch of college girls in thin nightgowns you'll never hope to see.

But my days as an investigative reporter ended before they had begun. The Ku Klux Klan was making news in Austin in those days and another reporter and I were determined we would sneak into their lair and reveal their secrets. One night they were to meet in their upstairs assembly room in a downtown building. There was a wide stairway entry and I boldly infiltrated the membership at the foot of the stairs, thinking I could move up in the jam-packed crowd without detection. Nearing the top I noticed the brethren were giving a password to a guard outside the meeting room. I stretched my ear as far as it would go, hoping I could make out the right word. I didn't and was escorted, none too gently, back down the stairs. Thus ended my career as an investigative reporter.

The Cowgirls keep a busy schedule of activities from store openings to movie making. They were employed at one time by Mitsubishi to spend six weeks in Japan promoting Mitsubishi automobiles. Crockett County Care Center News

BY ANN McCARTNEY
DIRECTOR OF ACTIVITIES & SOCIAL CARE

Since the White House designated the whole month of May as Older Americans Month, a visit to our Care Center should still be included on your agenda this month. If this is a project you have been intending to do but have not, why not make some definite plans? One might do like Jewel Bailey did recently, and take some ladies for a ride around town. Or, one could just do like Bascomb Cox and do some good visiting. The people in our Care Center need contact with the community and often this interaction is possible only when the community itself reaches out to those who have no families or whose families are far away. Why not drop by?

We had a good "Down Memory Lane" session this week. Floy Clare Short led a brief discussion on "Games People Play" (with their families). This was followed by recalling some of our old timers, i.e. the first car, first time to drive, and a variety of other topics.

Ceramics were led on Wednesday by Doris Karr. That afternoon we had sunshine hour out on the sun porch. We had a delicious piece of cake baked by Damon Alexander and bought at our cake sale by Jo Davidson. It was nice she shared it with us. We also had a good song-fest.

Thursday's beauty shop was manned by Lola Rios and Vivian Hughes. That afternoon Ted Turnley led Bible study followed by Spanish hour communion led by Norma Flores, Victoria DeLa Garza, Germann Drape, Rosa Leal and Ofelia Enriquez.

Tuesday and Friday bingo winners were: First place and a certificate from the Teacher Store, Hilda Dysart, second place, Anna Bell Patrick, El Chato dinner for two, Moriana Perez, and Baker Jewelers certificate. Volunteers were Amalia Lumbreras, Elodia Zapata, Anna Bell Patrick, Mattie Cooper, and Lola Rios. Twenty residents played each day.

Thanks goes to Amalia, Anna Bell, and Mae Armentrout all for bringing us some popcorn. It is an every Friday morning treat.

Thanks also goes to Pat Wood for donating another afghan.

Sara Hignight entertained the residents on the piano on Friday. Music is such a favorite that it is hoped by our residents that some of our other musically inclined school teachers will call and get on our schedule for the summer. We would love to have you.

Church services Sunday were led by a fine group from the Church of Christ. They always give a good song and sermon service.

Another music program was recently given by Clara Byrd. She can really make that piano sing! Come to visit!

Death rate on the increase from malignant melanoma

The death rate of the most serious form of skin cancer, malignant melanoma, is increasing faster than any other cancer in the U.S. except lung cancer in women, according to the Skin Cancer Foundation.

This fact is particularly important with summer's return and sunbathers' increased exposure to the sun, says the Texas Medical Association. Most skin cancer appears to be caused by long-term exposure to sunlight.

Malignant melanoma is more serious than the two other types of skin cancer—basal cell carcinoma and squamous carcinoma—because it is life-threatening and may spread quickly throughout the body.

Common-sense precautions can reduce the risk substantially, however, and early detection nearly always results in successful treatment.

Malignant melanoma is common in middle-aged or elderly people who have light skin and have spent much of their lives in the sun. In these cases, most melanomas develop from childhood moles that begin to change in size, shape, or color.

A mole may spread, become lighter or darker, itch, bleed, or develop a black edge that spreads into surrounding skin. A lump later develops and becomes thicker.

Another common symptom of malignant melanoma is a mole that develops after adolescence and is later accompanied by a lump. Melanoma rarely occurs before adolescence but may do so in a mole present from birth. An occasional symptom is a pale patch of skin.

Following these steps can help prevent skin cancer and premature aging of the skin: Avoid getting sunburned, avoid prolonged exposure to the sun between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. when the rays are strongest. Use a sunscreen regularly. Some of the most effective ones contain paraaminobenzoic acid (PABA), titanium dioxide, or benzophenone. Avoid sunlamps.

If old moles change or new ones appear, it is wise to see a physician. The moles may not be cancerous, but if they are, immediate surgery can eliminate the melanoma.

Borrego assigned to base

Airman Carlos C. Borrego, son of Jose P. and Mary C. Borrego of 1510 Walnut, Ozona, has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, after completing Air Force basic training.

During the six weeks at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, the airman studied the Air Force mission, organization and customs and received special training in human relations.

In addition, airmen who complete basic training earn credits toward an associate degree in applied science through the Community College of the Air Force.

The airman will now receive specialized instruction in the accounting and finance field.

He is a 1983 graduate of Ozona High School.

Gulf war to affect producers

The Persian Gulf war is heating up and could have far reaching effects for U.S. producers. With the recent attacks of oil tankers in the Strait of Hormuz, there's a real threat of a serious disruption of part of the world's oil supply. The actual closing of the Strait is a possibility, but extremely high insurance rates on the tankers may even be a greater threat.

Texas Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace said, "the U.S. imports are running about 5.6 million barrels a day with almost 13 percent of that coming from Arab-OPEC countries." He also said, "the cost of importing oil into the United States is scandalous."

Wallace called on national leaders from both political parties to remove the regulatory pricing shackles from America's energy resources and look beyond regional boundaries toward national energy interests.

The Occupational Safety & Health Administration has set hearings to receive more information before it issues safety standards for drilling and servicing contractors. OSHA wants comments on 14 issues involved in the proposed standards. The hearing for the Southwest will be August eighth through the tenth in Dallas at the downtown Sheraton Hotel.

The Permian Basin rig count for this week is 333. Last week 319 and one year ago 215.

Estimated tax payments

Some wage earners and other individuals who have income other than wages may be required to make estimated tax payments, the Internal Revenue Service says.

Generally, if you have income, with no tax withheld, of more than $500 and you expect to owe at least $400 on this year's return, you are liable for filing a declaration of estimated tax and for making payments. Just like withholding by employers, the IRS says, estimated taxes are paid in advance of the actual tax return. Form 1040, due for the year. Estimated taxes are normally paid in four installments.

For 1984, the four estimated tax installment dates are: April 16, 1984; June 15, 1984; September 17, 1984; and January 16, 1985.

In love and romance and other worldly pursuits where personal attractiveness is an asset, one popular method of improving the odds for success is to borrow a bit of coloring from the sun. In other words, get a sun-tan.

While a suntan-like a kiss-is a temporary thing, some of the undesirable side effects that come with it are longer lasting. The sun damages the skin. Some of the damage may be immediate and obvious: burning and blistering, for example, and various skin rashes or eruptions, as well as eye injury. Other damage may come on the installment plan and may also include skin cancer. Some very fair-skinned people can get severe sun burn from a half hour of exposure in hot summer sun. The elderly, for example, need to take special precautions against overexposure to the sun and high temperatures, as do the obese and people who have diabetes or heart disease. A few of the classes of drugs that can create problems when taken along with a heavy dose of sun are certain tranquilizers, anti-emetics (to prevent vomiting), anti-hypertensives, diuretics, tetracycline antibiotics, sulfa drugs, oral diabetic drugs and quindine. Persons taking any medication, prescribed or over-the-counter, should check with their physicians or pharmacists for possible reactions in strong sunlight.

The sun is at its strongest and most harmful during the hours from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Anyone wishing to minimize the effects of the sun or to avoid heat stroke would do well to confine his or her sunning to other than mid-day hours.

Ultraviolet radiation is worse at these hours, and it's that type of radiation from the sun that causes sunburns, tans the skin, and leaves permanent damage. Excessive ultraviolet radiation will cause hardening and thickening of the epidermis (outer skin) of those who tan readily, and blotching or freckling of the skin of those who don't.

Over the long run, the sun's rays will leave the skin tough, leathery, pebbly and dry. Crow's-feet around the eyes may provide a moment of long hours spent squinting under bright sunlight. Other areas of the body exposed for long periods to the sun's radiation may have surface wrinkles much like those in old shoes. Deep creases around the neck are still another legacy of the sun's ravages.

Skins of individuals are affected differently by the sun. It depends on the amount of the naturally occurring skin pigment, melanin, that an individual's system produces. Persons with darker skins produce larger amounts of melanin. They also tan quicker and with less trouble than those with fair skin.

A numerical rating system among manufacturers in this country and consumers are becoming familiar with and using the system to select sunscreen products to fit their needs.

SPF 2 to 4: minimal protection from sunburning; permits sunbathing; recommended for people who rarely burn and tan easily and deeply.

SPF 4 to 6: moderate protection from sunburning; permits some sunbathing; recommended for people who tan well with minimal burning.

SPF 6 to 8: extra protection from sunburning; permits limited sunbathing; recommended for people who burn moderately and tan gradually.

SPF 8 to 15: maximal protection from sunburning; permits little or no sunbathing; recommended for people who always burn easily and tan minimally.

SPF 15 or greater: ultra protection from sunburn, offers most protection; permits no sunbathing; recommended for people who burn easily and never tan.

TIMES CHANGE
 That means your needs for insurance change too. You might have too little... maybe even too much.
 So how do you know if the protection you bought yesterday is what you need for today?
 It's easy. Just call and tell your Farmers Agent you want a complete review of all your insurance policies.
 There's no cost and no obligation.
