Kitty's Korner By Kitty Montgomery

I'm not an attorney, nor am I an authority on the Texas Election Code, but it seems down right silly to me that we had to have a district court election contest to clear up a discrepancy in an absentee box. It makes Crockett County look foolish and it is an unnecessary expense to the county and to those involved.

I am speaking of the pre-trial hearing Thursday in the case styled Marley vs. DeHoyos for the post of commissioner, precinct 1. It seems to me it is up to the election officials to make the votes and ballots tally and that it should be done before the results are turned in to the Texas Election Bureau.

If this is against the law, then the law should be changed. I think all the voters wanted an answer to the 38 extra votes that ballots were not issued for. Maybe election judges should have more knowledge before presiding over an election. I don't know the answer. To me, the election code itself, is contradictory. But surely, somewhere, it provides or demands the ballots match the votes. That just makes sense.

But no, we can't do things that way here. In this case both parties had to hire attorneys. A district judge had to be sought and obtained, along with a court reporter, at the county's or district's expense and the court goes through the motions of a pre-trial hearing.

After hearing from both sides, a very wise old judge ordered the votes recounted. As I suspect, he had every intention of doing anyway. It didn't change the results of the election, but elections have been thrown out for less than that. And this one could well have been also, had the plaintiff persisted.

I just don't think it's fair for any candidate to be forced to go to the expense of a lawsuit to clear up an irregularity in an election. The burden should rest on the election officials.

Van Miller announces for school board

Van Miller has authorized the Stockman to announce his candidacy for re-election in the April 6, election for two trustees on the Crockett County School Board. Miller has served on the board for a year and a half, winning the unexpired term of Terry Lee. In asking for a three-year term, Miller says "I have a very real interest in our schools, our teachers and our children," he added "I feel that with my past experience and desire to serve that I am a qualified and capable candidate."

Van and his wife, Jann, are both graduates of Ozona High School and Southwest Texas State University. Van is a lifelong resident of Ozona, and is in business with his father in J.B. Miller and Co.

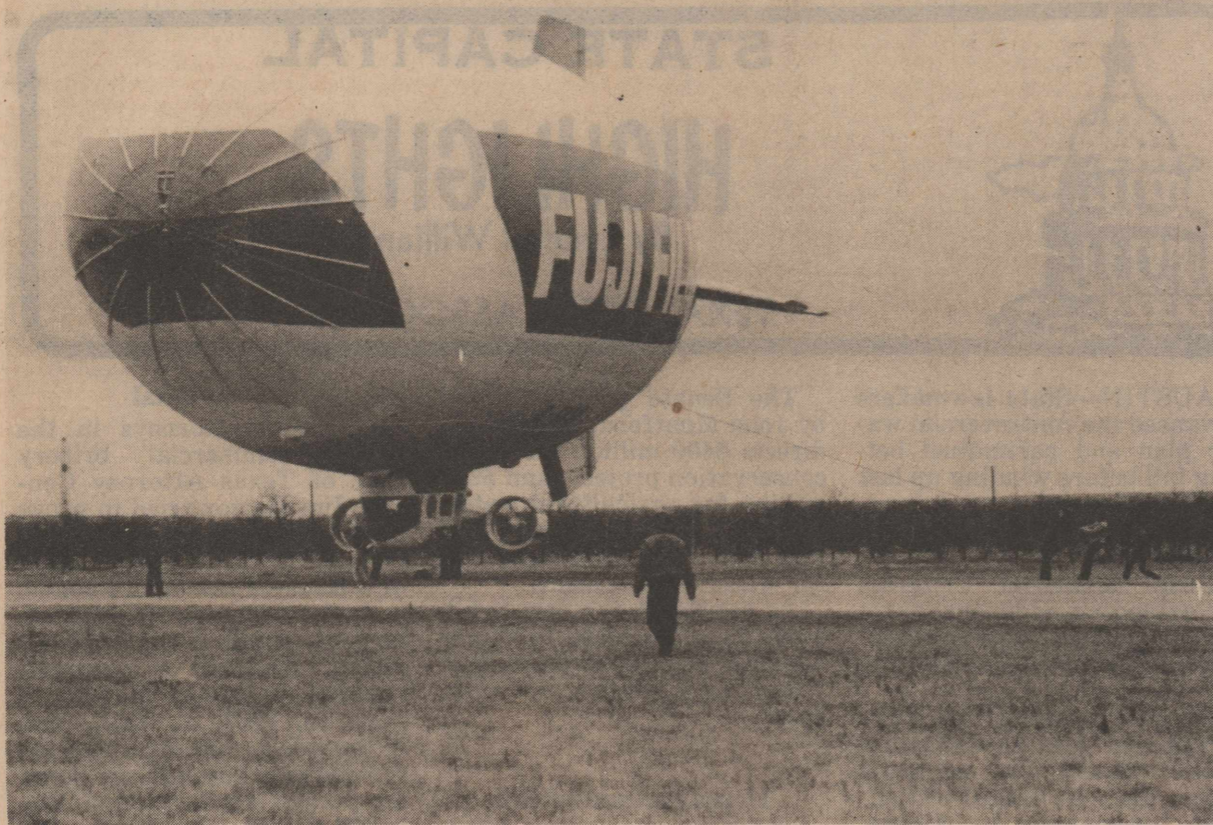

The Millers have three children in Ozona Public Schools. Vanessa is a junior student in Ozona High School, where Lacy is a freshman. Keith is presently in third grade in Ozona Intermediate Schools.

No clues in search for Nancy Pohl

No clues have turned up in the search for Nancy Pohl who has been missing since Feb. 20, from her Sonora home, the same day her pickup was found wrecked and abandoned 30 miles west of Ozona.

A thorough search was taken of the vicinity following Mrs. Pohl's disappearance. The search involved all law enforcement officers in the area, including Texas Parks and Wildlife game wardens who led the search on horseback. Also involved were the Ozona Volunteer Fire Department and many volunteers from Sonora.

An all-point bulletin was issued for the woman when the search failed to produce any clues as to her whereabouts. All law officers have been alerted another intensive search of the area is planned.

British blimp lands here

Ozonans rush to the airport in droves Friday afternoon as this British blimp, at a height of 30 feet traveled down 1-10, turned onto Hwy 163 and made its way to the county airport for a landing. The Stockman office was inundated with telephone calls and unable to get to the scene before it landed and the ground crew began preparations for tie-down. It was not as large as the familiar Goodyear Blimp, but quite a sight for Ozona youngsters to see.

Hearing in election suit ends in vote recount

A pre-trial hearing in the contest of election suit of Jesse Marley vs. Sostenes DeHoyos began in the 112th District Courtroom Thursday morning at 10 a.m. with Judge Ken Spencer, retired, 109th District, of Crane, presiding.

The suit was filed after the general election in November when it was discovered there were more votes counted in the Precinct 1 absentee box than were issued by the county clerk. Marley was running on the Republican ticket against Democratic incumbent DeHoyos for county commissioner in that precinct.

Due to a technicality in the election code, according to a county official, the only way to clear up the irregularity, was a contest of election suit. However, the ballot boxes were impounded and taken to the Ozona National Bank, only to be released for the official canvassing of the Crockett County Commissioners Court. The court canvassed the ballots and they were officially accepted and returned to the bank.

Generally a contest of election suit is taken care of promptly, but inability to find a judge who would agree to hear the case delayed the matter.

Judge Spencer called the court to order and after some legal sparring between the two attorneys, David Wallace of Sonora for Marley and Jesse Botello of San Antonio, for DeHoyos, the judge issued an order to have the ballot boxes brought to the courtroom.

County Clerk Debbie Puckett was sworn in and after questions by both attorneys and Judge Spencer, told the court she was aware of the irregularity on the night of the election when 241 votes were turned in by the absentee election judge and only 225 ballots were issued. She said she originally issued 200 ballots for the precinct 1 absentee voters. When the vote seemed heavier than expected, she then issued 25 more ballots in that precinct. She showed the court the list of absentee voters along with that of persons who requested ballots by mail, also recording the date each ballot was returned.

After asking Mrs. Puckett some questions about the counting and canvassing of the votes, Judge Spencer got right down to business and ordered the box in question opened and re-counted. He asked the clerk to be in charge of counting the ballots her. The next three months will be a busy time of planning policies, book collection, and service planning for the new facility. Public input is both welcome and needed in order to make the new library useful for everyone.

Accident victim's services held here

Funeral services for Gary Kenneth Davee, 31, were held Monday morning at First Baptist Church with burial in Mullen Cemetery under the direction of Sizemore Funeral Home.

Gary died late Friday night or early Saturday morning in a pickup truck accident at Interstate 10 and Howard Draw. Traveling east on I-10 he failed to make the turn at Exit #350 and the truck rolled three times. The wreck and Gary's body was found around 7 a.m. Saturday morning after a truck driver ran upon the wreck in dense fog and reported it to the DPS.

He was born June 15, 1953 in Coleman. He was married to Chris Brown in 1973. He was employed by Ladd Petroleum Co. since 1979 and was production foreman for the past three years. He and his family resided at the Ladd facility south of Ozona.

Survivors include his wife of Ozona, one son, Toby Jack of the home; his mother, Nell Davee of Ozona; a sister, Greta Cochran of Midland; a brother, Tony Davee of Clute, and his grandmother, Eva Spinks Boggs of Mullen.

Public School week to be observed late here

Public schools across the state will be observing Texas Public School Week this week, but Ozona schools have something a little bit different planned. Since Ozona students have just come back from spring break, the local schools will be holding activities a week later, with various open houses planned for Tuesday and Thursday, March 12 and March 14.

Ozona Primary School and Ozona Intermediate School will have their open house on Tuesday, March 12, from 7:00-8:30 p.m., and Ozona High School and Ozona Middle School will have their activities on Thursday, March 14, from 7:00-8:30 p.m.

The event is an annual affair, and everyone is welcome to attend.

Spring has sprung

This apricot tree at the Byron Williams home on Angus sprang into full bloom over the weekend, giving some sign of warmer weather to come. Several fruit trees were literally nipped in the bud from unseasonably warm weather before the cold February. Some early flowering bulbs were killed by the cold.

PEACE BUCKS BONANZA

By Edwin Feulner

The high-rolling MacArthur Foundation, which serves up Big Bucks the way McDonald's serves up Big Macs, has done U.S. taxpayers a legitimate favor with its latest super-giveaway.

Late last month, foundation trustee Jerome B. Weisner, former president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, announced that the foundation would unload another $25 million — this time to help fund research and education programs addressing "the threat of nuclear annihilation."

In other words: peace studies.

The list of recipients is a long one. Five universities — Columbia, Harvard, Stanford, MIT, and the University of California, Berkeley, will be given a quarter-of-a-million bucks each. The Brookings Institution in Washington will receive nearly $2 million. The largest single chunk of money, $6.24 million, will go to individuals doing research on "superpower behavior and nuclear danger." The competitive awards — nearly 100 two- and three-year fellowships over the next three years — will be administered by the Social Science Research Council of New York.

Another part of the program — grants to institutions conducting international security studies — will be honchoed by Ruth Adams, former editor of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, a dovish disarmament publication.

While some serious institutions, such as Brookings and the Georgetown Center for Strategic and International Studies, will receive grants, much of the booty will go to the unilateral disarmers of the goo-goo Left.

Which is okay! — since it is private money, out of MacArthur's $2-billion deep pockets.

The good news is that since such big bucks are available for "peace studies" from the private sector, the budget-conscious Congress of the United States can take a second look at the proposal to establish a taxpayer-financed U.S. Peace Institute.

Created by the 98th Congress, which appropriated $4 million in start-up costs, the U.S. Peace Institute is expected to cost U.S. taxpayers $12 million in its first year alone. The program's costs can only go upward from there if it is not stopped now.

The Institute actually was attached by Congress to the Pentagon budget; if eliminated, it would have absolutely no adverse impact on U.S. security.

No other area of Pentagon spending could involve as much wasteful duplication of funding as channeling millions of dollars into additional research on so-called peace studies and the arts of negotiation. Already, hundreds of universities and dozens of research institutes devote enormous resources to studies focusing on conflict resolution. The American Bar Association calculates, in fact, that in 1983 there were 43 law schools alone that had programs in negotiation and arbitration.

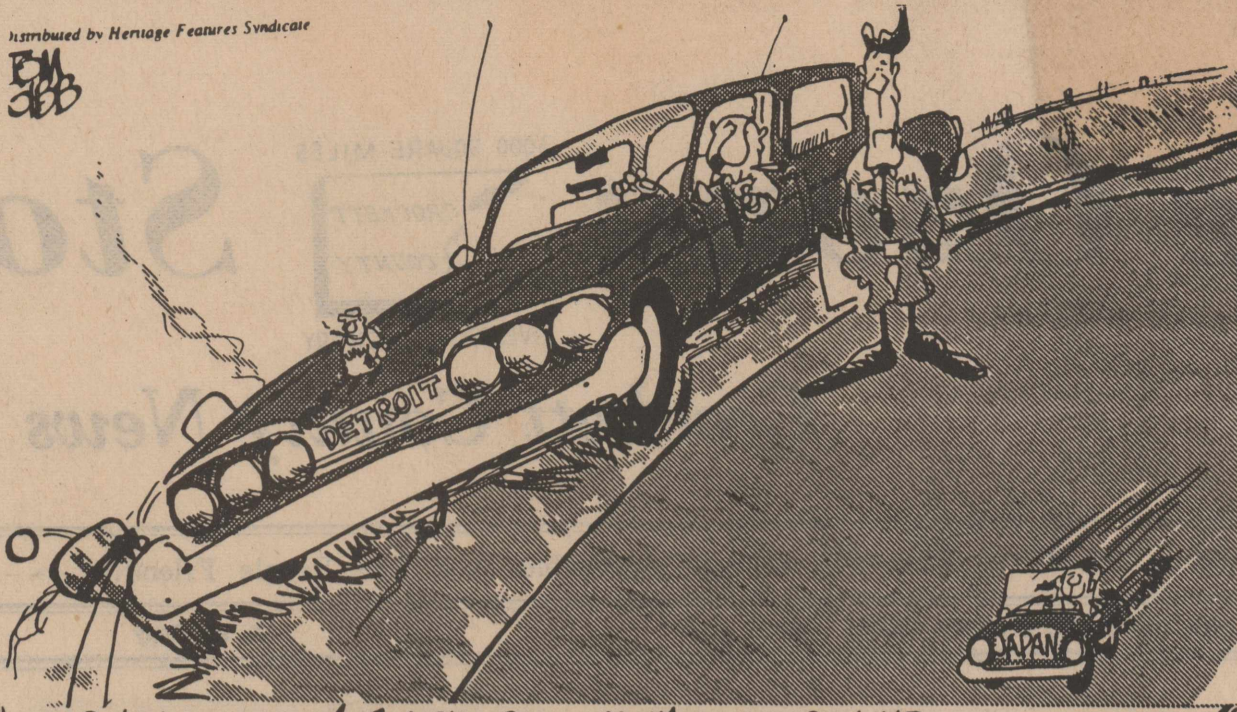

Moreover, a recent examination of "peace studies" in the United Kingdom by the Institute for European Defence and Strategic Studies, London, indicated that, rather than promoting peace, they often lead to widespread misconceptions about the Soviet Union and East-West relations. Authors Caroline Cox and Roger Scruton found that the U.K.'s peace studies programs are based on a naive innocence of sorts, not unlike Britain's appeasement policy of the 1930s, which led to World War II.

If the MacArthur Foundation wants to fund such wish fulfillment, that's a legitimate decision by their trustees. It obviously has the cash to throw around.

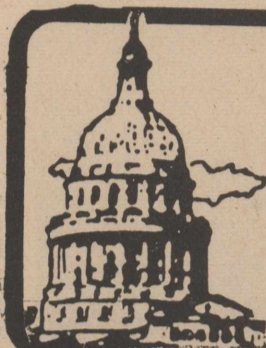

The federal government doesn't. It should abolish the costly "Peace Institute" post-haste.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—State lawmakers advanced the controversial water plan and parimutuel betting bill before winding up last week with a joint session address by Vice President George Bush.

Bush lambasted Congress for extending additional farm credit, and said President Reagan has threatened to veto the bill.

He also preached an anti-Communist line and said the public should be educated about the red-backed Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

Not surprisingly, he also praised the administration's role in increasing federal revenues and bolstering the economy, but legislators sitting in joint session did not interrupt the Vice President's speech with applause, and, in fact, remained very quiet during his address. The silence puzzled many onlookers.

Bush's hard-line on farm credit surely put many rural lawmakers on the defensive, and his news about prosperity may have felled on skeptical ears of legislators from Houston, the southeast Texas refinery area, the Rio Grande Valley, as well as farm and ranch counties.

Senate Water Plan

The Senate voted overwhelmingly to approve a comprehensive, $1.2 billion statewide water plan which was radically different from the House version passed two weeks ago.

The differences will be worked out in conference committee. The House rejected the Senate plan as expected.

The Senate plan, authored by John Montford, D-Lubbock, directs $400 million for water conservation projects and $200 million for agricultural water, compared with roughly half that amount in the House plan for water development.

As approved, the Senate bill authorizes the state to create underground water districts if voters, on a local basis, fail to do so.

House Parimutuel Bill

The horserace betting bill is expected to make it to floor debate in the next two weeks after a lopsided victory in a House committee last week.

The bill's sponsor, Speaker Pro Tem Hugo Berlanga of Corpus Christi, made concessions to minority and law enforcement groups in forging the 10-1 panel approval.

Minority groups, it was reported, were granted assurances they would get at least 15 percent of racetrack construction contracts, the first right to purchase 15 percent of race track stock, and affirmative action in racetrack hiring.

Five percent of track proceeds will go to the State, five percent to winners' purses and seven percent to track owners.

Surprisingly, black lawmakers could not make stick their original demand that part of the State's share would be dedicated to welfare, the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program.

If the bill passes the House this month, it is expected to sail through the Senate, which approved the issue last session.

Mattox Trial

Opposing attorneys in the felony commercial bribery trial of Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox tried to prove or disprove whether he actually tried to delay the progress of a Houston law firm's bonds.

A former aide to Mattox, now his chief of the bond division, described a conversation she had with Mattox on June 10, 1983, in which she, in answer to his inquiries, informed him how to slow down the pace of bond approval. She testified that a week later the bonds division chief told her to hold the firm's bonds until it could be determined that unethical violations by some members of the firm were not spilling over into their bond business.

Five days later, she testified, the bonds were sent on to the Comptroller's Office with Mattox's approval.

Credit Rate Drops

Texas consumers got a shot in the arm last week when the state's consumer credit agency lowered bank card rates to 16.4 percent, effective April 1, the lowest in four years.

The current ceiling is 19.6 percent. Rates on charge cards by individual retailers are not affected.

Short Takes

—Dallas blacks have been sending signals they will seek to replace white liberal state Sen. Oscar Mauzy in 1986 with one from their ranks, perhaps State Rep. Paul Ragsdale.

—The Goddess of Liberty on top of the State Capitol will need arm surgery soon or she will drop her torch, according to the state architect in charge of restoring the building.

He released photographs which show a 20-inch crack in the left shoulder of the zinc statue, and said he is still mystified "how a hundred years ago we could put that thing up there, and now in 1985 we can't figure how to get it back down."

—A bill prohibiting state officials from having live-in companions on their payroll is viewed by some as a direct attack on Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower by the Amarillo state senator who may run against him next year. State Sen. Bill Sarpalus said Hightower has had a live-in relationship for several years with one of his assistant commissioners.

—When educators fighting mandatory teacher competency tests hotly suggested that legislators ought to take similar exams, Port Arthur Senator Carl Parker cut the tension by joking "If we were to take ignorance out of the Legislature, we wouldn't have representative government."

"Good Match!" TIPS TO CLIP

March has the honor to be named both National Nutrition Month and Frozen Food Month. What an appropriate combination! Quick frozen close to their source, fruits and vegetables from your grocery freezer case retain their nutrients well. Consider, too, the large number of new convenient frozen entrees geared toward "lite" and "lean." Keep them on hand for quick, nutritious, economical meals right at home.

Take some time this month to examine your eating habits. Do you get adequate servings each day from the four major food groups: meat, bread, cereal, milk, fruit, vegetable? Do you keep a wary eye out for too much sugar, sodium and fat? Eating a variety of good foods and maintaining ideal weight are two steps toward fitness. You might want to make the third step on into an exercise class or gym. Sensible exercise is important to a total sense of well-being.

Tips For Gardeners

From the Ozona Garden Club
by Mrs. Bailey Post

Though the past weeks have been dreary and unpleasant for normal out-door activities, everyone should be grateful for the moisture we received and hoping for more.

Pruning should be finished before new buds are too far advanced on evergreens especially. Roses not before March 15, if no freeze is in the forecast.

If you have never planted the old-fashioned bluebells, watch for them in some of the gardens this spring. In the fall, plant single bulbs 5 inches deep and 6 to 8 inches apart in well-prepared garden soil. Each season they will multiply, so in only three years, each bulb will yield a generous clump bearing many stalks of flowers. They will reach a height of 12 to 18 inches and will thrive in sun or partial shade. They make a showy display when planted in masses of a single color in delicate shades of blue, pink or white. The foliage grows with the flowers, so the spikes always have a base of green, like a bed of irope.

If you want color in your garden and have plenty of shade try the beautiful coleus plants in an array of colors. To avoid a mix of colors that clash, plant a large mass in a single shade. They make a popular plant for containers and are available for small pots, as they grow only 8 to 12 inches, so ask for Carefree Series. There are other types with large leaves that are long and tapered or broad and frilly, and other types perfect for hanging baskets. No matter which type you choose, you'll find coleus easy to grow. Coleus will brighten a wooded area with foliage that lasts until the first frost. They do well on the north side of the house where there is very little direct sunlight.

If you want chives this summer plant them in a sunny well-drained spot. They make an attractive border for an herb garden, while producing flavorful foliage and attractive flowers. You can grow them from seed or buy transplants from nurseries.

Hyperactivity in children should not be treated lightly

Hyperactivity in children is a serious problem and should not be treated lightly, a Baylor College of Medicine child psychologist said.

Problems with school, family and friends can occur when a child is overactive, fidgety, impulsive and

Fad diets discussed

Dr. Paul Lachance, the first nutritionist for the U.S. space program and now professor of food science and nutrition at Rutgers University, set out to answer these vitally important questions. He and associate Michelle C. Fisher found the high-fat Stillman and Atkins plans provide up to five times the recommended maximum 300-milligram daily intake of cholesterol; many experts believe that excessive amounts of cholesterol in the diet contribute to heart disease and stroke. The Pritikin diet is quite high in fiber, which promotes good digestion and bowel function: 15 grams compared with the suggested 6 to 12 grams daily. Low-fiber programs include the Stillman and Richard Simmons diets, while high-fiber plans include the I Love New York regimen.

At the opposite extreme are the Stillman and Atkins diets, which are both high-fat, low-carbohydrate diets that contain far too much saturated fat and cholesterol to be at all healthy, while the Pritikin plan contains so little fat (10 percent) that it is low in palatability and therefore difficult to follow for long.

In addition to exercise, Dr. Lachance feels that breakfast is also a very important part of a thin and healthy lifestyle. "You're better off eating a solid (chiefly cereal) breakfast than either a big dinner or lunch," he says.

Dr. Lachance's suggested diet program may be only one of many, but it appears to represent the healthiest approach. It is also a diet plan which can be followed for the rest of one's life, unlike fad diets which work temporarily by imbalance: high-protein, high-fat, high-carbohydrate, or fasting--but are bearable only for a limited time.

If you can strike a balance involving reasonable amounts of satisfying, nutritious food, exercise, and treating yourself to a fun food occasionally, you just might never need to go on a diet again.

easily distracted, said Ben Williams, M.D., director of the hyperactivity program at Baylor and Texas Children's Hospital.

"But this excess physical activity probably results from the hyperactive child's inability to concentrate for any length of time," Williams said.

Although hyperactivity is a problem, it can be controlled to some extent. It is not a condition that is caused by bad parenting. But good parenting skills, such as teaching the child how to concentrate, can help the child perform better while at home and in school.

Five to eight percent of all children, or about one child per classroom, will be hyperactive or have attention problems. Boys are more likely to be affected than girls, and the problem can be spotted as early as two and one-half years of age. Peer difficulties and disruptive, inattentive behavior are common classroom problems for hyperactive children.

Williams advises parents to seek treatment for a hyperactive child before he reaches school age to reduce the problems the child will face.

Williams recommends that parents teach a hyperactive child how to organize his time and structure his activities to help him concentrate on one project at a time.

He also advises parents to use non-physical discipline. Denying a child television time or forcing him to sit for ten minutes in a special "time-out" chair may be more effective in controlling outbursts than spanking, yelling or scolding.

He warns parents not to flood a hyperactive child with an angry string of commands.

"Hyperactive children typically have problems listening and following directions and many parents will start saying, 'Sit still. Be quiet. Do this. Don't do that,' without giving the child time to respond," Williams said. "The parent becomes angry because the child isn't minding and the child is frustrated because he is overloaded with commands."

Because the child has problems paying attention, Williams said, parents should get the child's attention by using "good parenting" techniques: Speak directly to a child's face, rather than to the back of the head or in his general direction.

Praise a child's completion of specific tasks to bolster his self-esteem and increase his desire to follow directions and complete tasks.

Set aside time to spend with child each day.

New EMS policies discussed at meeting

Crockett County EMS met on Monday, February 26, 1985 in the dining room of the Crockett County Care Center. This special meeting was held to discuss the newly approved EMS policies. Those present were Dr. and Mrs. Don Carlisle, Dub and T.K. O'Bryant, Joe and Tina Moran, Bob Falkner, Doug Meador, Dee Keilers, Marilyn Armentrout, Billy Kiser, Ben Ross, David Cooke, John L. Henderson, Robbie Aiguier, Zoe Green and Dorothy Lane.

The first and most important thing discussed was the importance of the patient. Our job is not only caring for his needs but also for his comfort and well being. Our very rigid code of ethics that we must all follow as all businesses do, was extensively discussed. Our strict ambulance service code being that all patient information is strictly confidential and not to be discussed in or out of the hospital or in the presence of patients or anyone not connected with the health care field. Doing so could result in immediate dismissal from the service.

Disciplinary actions, salaries, leaves, equipment, and supplies were discussed so that EMS members will know what is expected to maintain the standards of service performance set forth by the administration, medical director and co-ordinators of Crockett County Ambulance Service.

Crockett County Ambulance Standard procedures as previously made available to the public were again discussed. These procedures include primary and secondary crews, month-

THE OVERLAP DOES IT

You can build a fine roof with shingles—but not by putting them end to end. That way you'll live in the rain.

Shingles do a terrific job as long as they overlap—each one clinging to, but reaching beyond, the other. It's a combination of co-operation and individual responsibility.

The same principle applies with people. Each may be a "solid citizen" but the gaps between them cause constant problems. Bring them together for a common purpose, each covering his own area of responsibility but supported by all the rest—then you have a fine community.

That's why our churches are so important. They bring us together for the supreme purpose in life, instilling reverent responsibility in our relationship with others.

Letters to the Editor

February 25, 1985

To the Editor:

The All American Pipeline Company of Bakersfield, California is seeking right of way from McCamey to Freeport, Texas for a heated, 30", buried, high sulphur, crude oil pipeline. This pipeline will cross Crockett County.

The Railroad Commission of Texas has the authority to grant permits for crude pipelines. When the Railroad Commission sets a hearing date for the McCamey to Freeport route, they will not accept letters, phone calls or personal interviews concerning environmental questions. Citizens who have environmental concerns over the construction and operation of this pipeline should immediately write Mr. Mack Wallace, Commissioner, Railroad Commission of Texas, P.O. Drawer 12967, Austin, Texas, 78711. Mr. Dick Whittington, P.E., Regional Administrator, United States Environmental Protection Agency, Region VI, 1201 Elm Street, Dallas, Texas, 75270 and local legislators.

The members of our property owners association consider this matter to be in the public interest and worthy of your attention. We believe it is extremely important that the facts concerning the pipeline and the potential air, water, and other environmental impacts be fully investigated. Your efforts to publish information on this issue would be greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours,

Dear Friends:

Nearly anything you can imagine—cosmetics, jewelry, toys, household cleaners, X-Rated lingerie, etc.—can and is sold through a method called Party Plans. Undoubtedly, several readers of this newspaper have worked or are working as a dealer.

I am a several-times-published freelance writer working on a book about Party Plans and as research, would like to hear from any reader(s) working or who have ever worked at this type of sales.

In some cases, I'll want to interview individuals and will include photographs in the book. However, at this time, I'm asking only that those who write give me her/his name, address, telephone number, the name of the sponsoring company and what product is sold. Of course, other information is welcomed but that is what is required.

Please also indicate in your letter if you would be willing to be interviewed and photographed at some time in the future, and if you would consent to answering a questionnaire at this time.

I deeply appreciate all the assistance with my research provided by the newspaper in publishing this letter and by the readers who respond to it. Thank you all!

Yours truly,
Ethel Jackson Price

Dear Editor:

Recently, I spent two weeks in Ethiopia, mainly in a camp named Bati, where a feeding center and hospital have been set up for the sick and hungry. In three weeks, Bati's population grew from zero to over 28,000 people, with 600-800 new people arriving every day. But the death rate is just as astounding. Every day, 70-80 people are dying from starvation. I had never seen so much death and suffering. My feelings had never been so shattered, my emotions so paralyzed.

But, now that I'm back and as I try to assess this human dilemma, one thought keeps running through my mind: "No one should die from starvation when America has 2 1/2 billion bushels of surplus corn and wheat."

I have a plan which, I believe, can alleviate the starvation in Ethiopia; it can help the American farmer; it will lighten the load of the American taxpayer.

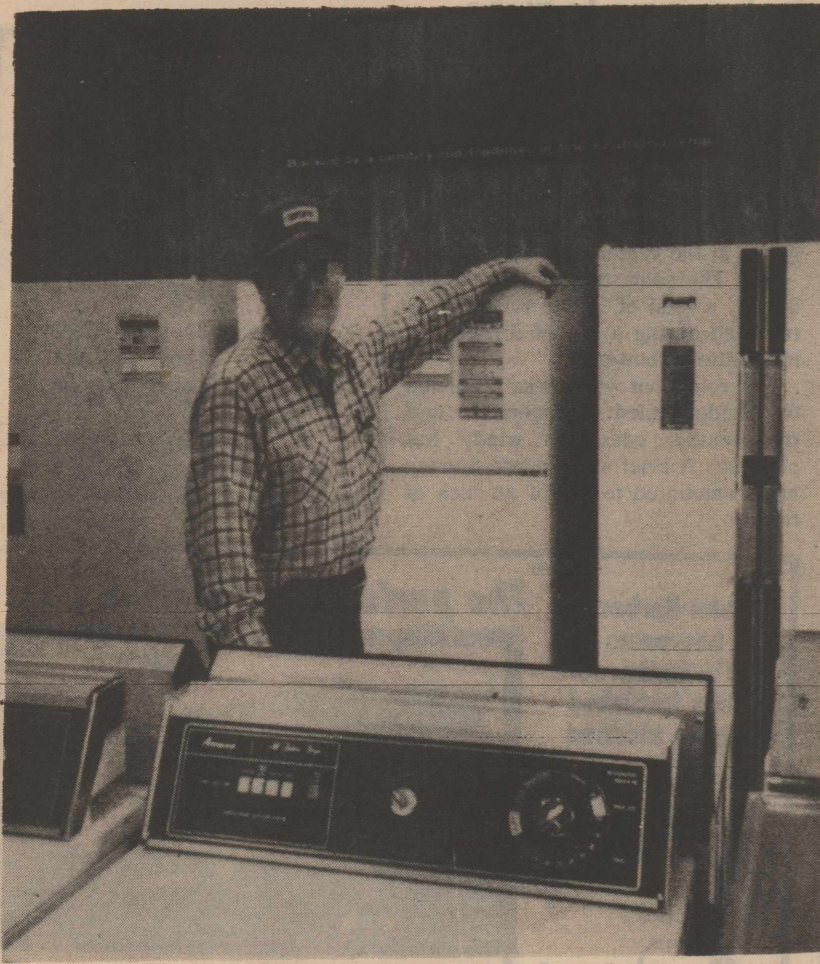

First, I recommend that the 339,000 churches, synagogues and temples in our country start purchasing America's surplus grain and begin sending it to starving people all around the world. Churches have enjoyed tax-exempt status since America was founded. It's our turn to render the public a service by buying this surplus grain at fair market price. Not only would we fulfill our mandate to help the poor and needy, but we would also support a government that has allowed churches to grow and flourish for the past 200 years.

Secondly, through government programs, the American farmer is being paid to allow some land to lie idle. I recommend that the government give farmers permission to grow crops on this dormant land and be allowed to give that grain to the 40,000 hungry people who are dying every day for lack of food. This would take the government out of the business of feeding hungry people without touching the grain the farmer grows for profit, and the world's hungry would be fed.

I know every church in America will not buy surplus grain. I know every farmer in America will not grow grain to give away to hungry people. But many will...if they're given permission to do so by our government. Our present plan has not worked and is not working. It's time for a new plan. I encourage churches and farmers--and our government--to give this plan a chance.

Fruit and nut trees should be treated with dormant oil

Have you given your fruit and nut trees their annual "lube" job? This refers, of course, to an application of dormant oil to control scale insects, points out Billy Reagor, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Why control scale insects? The answer is simply to save the tree. If a scale insect such as the San Jose scale or white peach gets started, it could kill your tree.

Dormant oil can be purchased at many different stores where garden supplies are sold. Be sure to follow all label directions and apply the mixture when the temperature is 40-70 degrees F. Do not apply if a freeze is likely within 48 hours after application, and do not apply after the tree has budded out, cautions the Agent. Dormant oil is applied when the tree is dormant. Spraying flowers and leaves could cause leaf burn and flower drop.

Scale insects are difficult for most people to detect, so dormant oil should be applied once each year. Sooner or later your tree will probably be attacked by scale insects.

Dry Cleaning Complaints-- A "Sticky" Situation

Buying something new is often an exciting event, related to happy times, holidays and great expectations. But don't get so absorbed in selecting just the right fashion or in meeting your budget that you forget about cleaning and laundering--the time to begin thinking about drycleaning a garment is at the time of purchase.

Good care practice begins with the inspection of the labels and tags attached to your garment at time of purchase. A Federal Trade Commission Trade Regulation rules now requires a permanent label be attached to the garment. The label must supply information on care needed to keep the garment looking attractive. Dry cleaning is suitable for all garments unless labeled, "Do not dryclean." Labels on garments giving fiber content are also important at time of cleaning because of the endless variety of fabrics and finishes available to consumers today. Acrylic knits, for example are difficult to identify and are inclined to stretch with heat in cleaning and finishing.

Be sure to tell your drycleaner what was spilled on your garment, whether visible or not. Stains caused by beverages containing sugar may not show up until the sugar is caramelized or turns brownish. Home efforts at cleaning may be more damaging than the original problem. With today's natural fibers, such as silk and wool, it is even more difficult for the consumer to remove spots. This is especially true of silk. Under no circumstance should the consumer rub a wet silk fabric. This causes the fibers to break and will result in a permanent light area.

The drycleaner must follow label instructions or the information you provide. If care instructions are missing you should be cautioned of some risk. Of course, some stains cannot be removed by any known method and while no one is to blame, there is no remedy.

Occasionally damage may occur that was not foreseen by the drycleaner, but the cleaner will usually make an adjustment probably based on the life expectancy, age, and condition of the item.

Last Thursday, the final day of the month, a total of .10 of rainfall was recorded during a day of drizzle and intermittent showers.

Kristi Kirby involved in student riot in Spain

Kristi Kirby, who is studying in Spain for several weeks was involved in her first student riot recently and writes a highly descriptive account of the event to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Kirby.

An account of the events follow: "That riot I was telling you about really did scare me. It reminded me of the riots you see on the news. The national police were the ones trying to break it up. They had machine guns and rifles with scopes (sharpshooters I suppose). They had these things that look like rocket launchers to me but I found out those were smoke bombs and tear gas. The way we got involved is we were on a bus and the students had a human barricade across the road and no one could get through. The bus driver made everyone get off and once we did there we were. They were throwing oranges and broken bottles and lord knows what else. We tried so hard to get away but we just couldn't. We could hear the guns and smoke bombs being fired but when we tried to run away we heard them from the other direction. We took out our passports and tried to show them to the cops but it didn't seem to matter. They had these huge shields and bullet proof vests and helmets and gas masks. I really thought I might die--panic is hardly the word. Finally as the crowd was running we spotted a phone booth and hid behind it until they had finally passed us. Some little boy that was beside one of the guys that got separated from us got shot in the arm with some kind of rubber bullet. That guy, Ken, was right in the middle of it all. I heard they sent six people to the hospital. All of this because the university students think one of the tests they have to take is unfair. They want to take it to city hall to try to get it changed--I guess the universities are run by the city."

and appointed two observers, one for each party, be present.

At eleven o'clock the box of ballots, the clerk and observers retired to the back room of the court for the recount. Judge Spencer called the court to order at 2:40 p.m. when Mrs. Puckett announced the recount had been completed.

Mrs. Puckett took the stand again and accounted for the 225 ballots, proving a miscount on the part of the election judge in the original count. The box did not contain 241 ballots as originally turned in. The recount showed Marley with 103 ballots, DeHoyos with 93, two write-in votes, 13 unused ballots 6 mutilated, and 8 not returned. Both observers concurred.

The recount did not change the election results.

Wallace addressed the judge, saying he and his client had come there for the purpose of clearing up the irregularity and found out what they had intended to discover and would take no further action to contest the election.

The judge commended the plaintiff's attorney saying that was one of the most gracious statements he had ever heard in a court of law, he then dismissed the court.

The Way We Live Makes Our Electric Meters Run Faster!

In The Winter

Because the sun works less in the winter and we need artificial light, we use our electric lights more. And, since it's cold outside, we tend to go indoors and turn our thermostats up, so we can enjoy the comfort of generated heat. We also use electric blankets in the winter. Electricity can help make winter more comfortable in many ways.

In The Summer

Because the sun works more during the summer months and it's hot outside, we go indoors and turn our thermostats down to make our homes cool. Electric fans that help to cool our homes and electric gardening tools for grooming our yards, among other things, also help make our summers more pleasant.

All Year Long

Because we enjoy the convenience and comfort of: electric blenders, can openers, clocks, clothes dryers, clothes washers, dishwashers, door bells, drills, fans, freezers, hair dryers, heating pads, hedge trimmers, irons, lawn mowers, lights, saws, sewing machines, shavers, stereos, televisions, toasters, vacuum cleaners, waffle irons, waste disposals, water heaters and other benefits too numerous to mention, we use more electricity.

Because we're human, we forget about these things until an electric bill reminds us.

WTU is proud to be able to supply all the electric energy you need, and we encourage you to use it wisely.

Texas farm receipts up $1 billion in '84

Texas farmers and ranchers sold about $1 billion more of their commodities in 1984 than in the previous year, but only about $100 million of that was an increase in net income. Estimated net farm income, adjusted for inflation, remained near the lowest level since the Great Depression for the third straight year.

The increase in estimated cash receipts from farm and ranch marketings is due largely to increased crop acreage in 1984 and heavy livestock sales forced by the extensive drought. However, the adverse weather also added to the costs of crop and livestock production.

Cash receipts for 1984 agricultural marketings were estimated by Texas Agricultural Extension Service staff and County Program Building Committees.

"Crop acreage was up sharply in 1984 following reduced plantings in 1983 due to the government's PIK program," says Dr. Carl Anderson, Extension Service economist.

"However, the prolonged dry weather cut crop yields, and large world crop supplies and limited exports drove prices down at harvest."

Limited forage production and lack of stock water triggered heavy livestock marketings during the summer months. This along with stronger poultry and egg sales pushed receipts from livestock and livestock products to more than $6.4 billion for the year, Anderson points out.

Crop receipts totaled more than $3.8 billion, boosted by a large increase in cotton acreage.

Cash receipts from cotton rose sharply over 1983 to more than $1 billion, notes the economist. Other crops leading the way in cash receipts were wheat, $498 million; corn, $391 million; nursery plants, $358 million; vegetables, $333 million; grain sorghum, $304 million; rice, $168 million; peanuts, $78 million; soybeans, $68 million; and fruits and nuts, $64 million.

On the livestock side of the ledger, cattle receipts totaled about $5 billion-47 percent of the state's total agricultural sales. Poultry and egg marketings brought in $590 million; dairy products, $554 million; hogs, $90 million; wool and mohair, $61 million; sheep, $50 million; and goats, $18 million.

Timber sales totaled $283 million while cash receipts from hunting leases, fish farming, horses and outdoor recreation remained strong at almost $400 million.

Looking at estimated cash receipts from farm products for 1984, Texas is challenging Iowa for second place behind California, says Anderson. The outcome will be uncertain until more data become available. Texas ranks first in sales of cattle, sheep and wool, goats and mohair, cotton, cabbage, spinach and the value of farm real estate.

Texas farm assets--land, buildings, machinery, crops and livestock on hand, and financial assets--total about $90 billion. Texas boasts some 187,000 farms averaging 732 acres. Value of land and buildings averages $646 per acre.

What does all this mean to the Texas economy?

"Agriculture is a vital industry in Texas," emphasizes Anderson. "The economic impact of 1984 agricultural production in Texas is estimated at $33 billion. The agribusiness sector employs more than 20 percent of the state's work force, with many businesses and individuals providing supplies, credit and services to farmers and ranchers and processing and marketing agricultural commodities."

Overcrowded prisons causing early release of prisoners

The practice of releasing dangerous convicted criminals from prison early in order to keep our prisons from being overcrowded must stop, according to State Senator J.E. "Buster" Brown, Chairman of ATAC (Associated Texans Against Crime). "It is time that Texas act to keep these criminals from being put back on the streets," Brown said.

ATAC noted that the parole statistics are appalling and called in their list of final recommendations, which will be published in January for the curtailment of the early release of prisoners in Texas.

"At our regional ATAC hearings we learned that 198 life offenders were paroled in 1983, and that the average inmate in TDC only serves 24 months," Brown said.

Brown noted that the Parole Board's policy of releasing prisoners early to make more room for incoming prisoners is "more than a statistical problem, it can be a human nightmare."

"In West Texas, we heard about a brutal murderer who received a life sentence and therefore was not supposed to be up for parole until he had served one-third of his sentence. But the district attorney received a letter saying the convicted murderer was up for parole after only six years," Brown said.

The problems caused by the early release of convicted prisoners is illustrated by a recent study conducted by the Dallas Police Department. The study examined all subjects arrested for various crimes and found that over half of the individuals arrested for murder and robbery had previous convictions.

Brown noted that stories like these are not uncommon. "Throughout the year, ATAC has traveled across Texas and held public hearings on the criminal justice system. At all our meetings, we have heard of the problems with the early parole program at TDC.

"The conclusion we have reached is that the 'revolving door' policy at our prisons must stop. We have got to keep dangerous criminals behind bars.

BOY TO NORTHS

CROCKETT COUNTY CARE CENTER NEWS

By Ann McCartney
Director Of Activities & Social Care

February is gone and March has arrived, along with some of its usual wind and abit of dust. Trees are beginning to bloom out and our tulip bulbs have really begun to grow. Alice Ross has been helping keep our plants and bulbs, both inside and out, watered. She also feeds the birds since Maude Pettit moved to Big Lake, and the cats too.

Glenda Henderson found a barrel and painted it red so our cats now have a home, their own "Cat House."

Special thanks this week goes to Sara Hignight. Since school was out she came by with a "What Can I do?" greeting. (Music to the ears, I might add!) She repaired our piano bench, helped make throw pillows for the living room, and helped fix hair in the beauty shop on Thursday included Vivian Hughes and a newcomer, Dee McDonnell. Dee was sent to us by Ann Shaw and her stay in Ozona is limited, but we really appreciate her help. She assisted with ceramics on Wednesday also.

In addition to Dee on Wednesday, we were glad to have Ruth Hester back and well as Lynette Davidson. Residents participating with these ceramics included: Juana Hernandez, Tomasa Ramoz, Moriama Perez, Hilda Dysart, Nina Mayfield, and Ola Mills. Special thanks goes to Ann Shaw and to Nancy Vannoy for cleaning pieces.

We had a good residents council meeting this week. Final plans were made for our field trip to Big Lake, it was decided what gifts we would take (we took throw pillows and fresh fruit to the Care Center), what other field trips we would make this month, and also made some plans for Easter.

Following this meeting volunteers Marie Pierson, Sara Hignight, Jo Davidson, Maudie Couch, and Mattie Cooper all helped our residents make those pillows to take to Big Lake. On Friday Jo and Lola Rios helped our residents make some for our living room. Residents participating in this project included: Bertha Miller, Moriama Perez, Juana Hernandez, Ola Mills and Billie Whatley. Now we have some new "Shining faces" in the living room.

Edith Owens dropped by and played the piano on Tuesday afternoon. She makes such pretty music! Further thanks this week goes to South Texas Lumber for donating some craft supplies, to Mattie Cooper for donating a memorial in memory of Max Schneemann, and to the Schneemann family for sharing some of their flowers.

We were saddened by the loss of Max Schneemann this week. Reports are that he lived an active, life with varied activities until his final days.

Our big event this week had to be our trip to Big Lake. Everyone wanted to see their new Care Center and to visit "our" Paul, Maude, Nila, and Nautie. We had decided that Pauls 97th birthday was the ideal time to go. Eight residents made the trip. They included: Juana Hernandez, Tomasa Ramoz, Hilda Dysart, Nina Mayfield, Ola Mills, Alice Ross, Inez Biggs, and Billie Whatley. Others making the trip included: Elvira Caldwell, Ann McCartney, Bel Martinez, Betty Huffman, Earline Jones, Mattie Cooper, Jo Davidson, and Billy Mills. Special thanks goes to Billy, Bel, Betty and Jo for furnishing cars.

Bingo winners this week included Ola Mills, winner of the first place certificate from Clayton Village Drug and winner of the El Chato dinner for two certificate. Billie Whatley, won the Baker's Jewelry certificate and the second place prize. Volunteers included: Bonnie Warth, Mary Lee Jones, Anna Bell Patrick and Mattie Cooper along with our sitters and resident volunteer Alice Ross.

Bible study this week was brought by Ted Turnley. Glenda Henderson played the piano.

Six members of the United Methodist Church brought the Sunday afternoon church services. Grace Dorsey brought the communion services, Lucile Harrell played the piano, and Rev. Ken Harrison conducted the services.

Jo Davidson has been helping me this week find some new volunteers. We both want to say a big "thank you!" to all of you who have responded with a "yes." Keep volunteering!

Museum to receive THC first place

Biological response modifiers, gene-splicing, lasers, monoclonal antibodies, magnetic resonance imaging, oncogenes, tumor markers...

Cancer: The Good News

These terms represent some of the most stunning recent achievements in the scientific pursuit of controlling cancer, a group of more than 100 malignant diseases that will be diagnosed in almost 1 million Americans this year.

"Never before has humankind had so many exciting opportunities to do so much against cancer," states Dr. Isaiah J. Fidler, chairman of cell biology at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute at Houston.

But Dr. Fidler, the 1984-85 president of the American Association for Cancer Research, cautions that "no scientist should try to predict when all or even most cancers will be cured."

The ultimate goal of eliminating cancer as a human health threat will take more multidisciplinary research at the molecular level. When scientists understand exactly how and why genes are activated to start the cancerous process inside single living cells, then lasting cancer control can occur.

"The more we learn about the basic biology of cancer, the more complex the problems are and the more we need to know. Secondly, from a therapy standpoint, we're doing pretty well at wiping out the original or primary cancers in many cases, but we haven't yet figured out effective ways to prevent or treat metastasis," Dr. Fidler explains.

Cancer is defined as the uncontrolled growth and spread of abnormal cells. It's the metastasis, or spread of cancer cells to distant body sites, that causes some therapies to fail after the primary tumors are eliminated by surgery, radiation, drugs or a combination of approaches.

From a fundamental standpoint of better understanding the workings of the cancer cell, probably the most recent dramatic development has been the discovery of about 25 different oncogenes.

Simply stated, oncogenes are essentially normal genes which have important roles during very early human growth and then lie dormant among an estimated 50,000 genes in each of the 46 human chromosomes, waiting for something—perhaps a carcinogen like cigarette smoke or a virus—to switch them on.

For some patients, this "turning on" process that leads normal cells to become cancerous occurs in childhood, but the majority of malignancies are not detected until the middle and later years. There is increasing speculation that once researchers know how the oncogenes are switched on, then procedures for turning them off can be devised.

"The key is understanding why these genes go out of control. We have lots of good clues. In fact, the whole field of genetics is just exploding before our eyes," notes Dr. Louise C. Strong, director of the Medical Genetics Clinic at M.D. Anderson.

Some cancers are known to be inherited, such as retinoblastoma and Wilm's tumor, malignancies of the eye and kidney, respectively. For these, Dr. Strong expects "real breakthroughs" in being able to spot the cancerous genes before some babies are born in much the same way numerous other genetic abnormalities are detected.

"We still have a way to go in figuring out all the elements of normal gene function, but I think it's just a matter of time before we can block the abnormal processes and control cancers at the cellular level," Dr. Strong says.

Knowing about oncogenes gives clinical researchers new options for both earlier detection and better treatments. One possibility centers on developing a blood test for recognizing proteins made by the oncogenes as a way of finding people at increased risk or with very small numbers of cancer cells. From a treatment standpoint, some scientists suggest there will be substances ranging from vitamins to drugs that can be used to turn off the oncogenes.

Monoclonal antibodies are identical proteins made by white blood cells fused with a type of cancerous cell to produce hybridomas. The monoclonal antibodies can be targeted to attack selected cancers through recently developed laboratory procedures. Radioactive agents hooked to these single-minded antibodies help hunt for cancerous cells throughout the body. This approach is being widely touted as a type of "magic bullet" because of the monoclonal antibodies' potential for finding both very small primary cancers and the beginning of metastasis as well as the promise for improving therapy.

Dr. Christopher L. Reading, assistant professor of tumor biology at M.D. Anderson, says there are several technical obstacles to overcome before monoclonal antibodies can live up to some of the advance billing.

"Most techniques for making and using the monoclonal antibodies are just not as efficient yet as we'd like, but remember this field is less than 10 years old. In time, I believe monoclonal antibodies will be applicable to virtually all cancers and be used routinely in combination with radiotherapy and chemotherapy," Dr.

Reading explains. Cancer patients undergoing bone marrow transplants have benefited the most from monoclonal antibody technology so far.

Tumor markers represent another approach to identifying cancers much sooner, especially the presence of tiny metastatic cancer colonies. Tumor markers are chemical substances produced by tumors and secreted into the blood stream. Recent advances in diagnostic techniques mean tumor markers should be more accurate in screening people considered at high risk for certain cancers.

One of the most promising new areas of therapy involves using biological response modifiers to manipulate patients' normal immunological defenses against diseases. Interferons, which are body proteins occurring naturally in all species to regulate cell growth, are the modifiers most widely studied. Many scientists expect biologic therapy to become an important complement for more conventional forms of treatments.

Magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) is providing powerful new ways for cancer clinicians to "see" inside the human body without operating or using other invasive instruments or potentially harmful dyes. Because MRI is more sensitive than other scanning techniques, it adds a much-needed dimension for understanding abnormal changes in the brain such as those associated with multiple sclerosis and some degenerative disorders as well as brain tumors.

Other space-age diagnostic tools include specialized cameras for photographing physiologic functions. Several kinds of lasers also are available to help physicians find and remove cancerous lesions in difficult body sites. New anti-cancer drugs—and better ways to give them—also are on the horizon.

In spite of such accomplishments, all specialists agree the chief weapon against cancer today is an informed public that takes steps to prevent developing malignant diseases. There's no scientific substitute for practicing healthy habits that protect against cancer.
